CHANGE OF NAME

Beginning in 1990 with its ninth year of publication, this journal – until now known as the East Africa Journal of Evangelical Theology (EAJET) – will from now onward appear under the new name: the AFRICA JOURNAL OF EVANGELICAL THEOLOGY (AJET). AJET will continue to be published by Scott Theological College, Kenya, but now as a continental journal under the sponsorship of the ACTEA Consortium of Theological Colleges, an association which links 42 theological colleges and graduate schools throughout Africa.

CONTRIBUTORS

Dr Isaac Zokoué is dean of the Faculté de Théologie Evangélique de Bangui (BEST) in Bangui, Central African Republic, and executive secretary of the Theological and Christian Education Commission of the Association of Evangelicals of Africa and Madagascar (AEAM). Dr Zokoué is from Central African Republic. He has a masters from the Faculté de Théologie Evangélique de Vaux-sur-Seine in Paris, a doctorate from the Faculté de Théologie Protestante de Montpellier, and is currently a candidate for the Doctorat d'Etat from the Université de Strasbourg.

Dr John Anonby is academic dean at Pan Africa Christian College, Nairobi, Kenya, on leave from Trinity Western University in Canada, where he is professor of English. Dr Anonby is also a visiting professor in English literature at the University of British Columbia. He holds a PhD degree from the University of Alberta, and has published in a variety of areas, with special interest in the relationship between literature and the Christian faith. An earlier article by Dr Anonby on the novels of Ngugi wa Thiong'o of Kenya appeared in EAJET 5:2 (1986) 16-21.

Dr Tite Tiéno is currently associate professor of Theology and Missiology at Alliance Theological Seminary, Nyack NY, having just completed a sabbatical as Research Fellow at Yale Divinity School. Dr Tiéno was executive secretary of the Theological Commission of the Association of Evangelicals of Africa and Madagascar (AEAM) from 1977 to 1987, and has been chairman of the Accrediting Council for Theological Education in Africa (ACTEA) since 1981. From Burkina Faso, Dr Tiéno has a masters from the Faculté de Théologie Evangélique de Vaux-sur-Seine in Paris, and his PhD from Fuller Theological Seminary USA. He has authored numerous articles on African theology and contextualization, and is perhaps best known for his book, The Theological Task of the Church in Africa (a revised edition is now in press).

Dr Roberta King is senior consultant in communications and music at the Institute of Christian Ministries and Training, Daystar University College, Nairobi, Kenya. She is also adjunct assistant professor of communication at Fuller Theological Seminary, USA, and a guest lecturer at the Centre Evangélique de Formation en Communication pour l'Afrique, Abidjan. Dr King holds a Master of Music from the University of Oregon, and an MA in missiology and a PhD in intercultural studies from Fuller Theological Seminary USA. She has studied Christian ethnomusicology in Senegal, Côte d'Ivoire, Zaire, and Kenya, and is a member of the International Society for Ethnomusicology.

CORRECTION

Recent issues of this journal have incorrectly listed the position of the AJET consulting editor Dr Josephat Yego. Dr Yego was previously University Secretary at Kenyatta University. He is now Deputy Principal (Administration), Jomo Kenyatta University College of Agriculture and Technology. AJET apologizes for any inconvenience the earlier error may have caused.
