FOURTH EDITION.

THIS Volume was in the Third Edition made uniform with the rest of the work as regards the revision and augmentation of the references, and the re-writing of the critical digest and consequent occasional changes in the text. The notes were also in parts considerably modified and augmented.

In this Fourth Edition, the readings of the Codex Sinaiticus have been incorporated in the Digest, and some consequent alterations have been made in the text.

Some changes, but not many, have been made in the notes.

PROLEGOMENA.

THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

ITS AUTHORSHIP.

1. OF all the Epistles which bear the characteristic marks of St. Paul's style, this one stands the foremost. See below, on its style, § 4. So that, as Windischmann observes, whoever is prepared to deny the genuineness of this Epistle, would pronounce on himself the sentence of incapacity to distinguish true from false. Accordingly, its authorship has never been doubted.

2. But that authorship is also upheld by external testimony :

(a) Irenæus, adv. Hær. iii. 7. 2, p. 182, quotes the Epistle by name: "Sed in ea quæ est ad Galatas, sie ait: Quid ergo lex factorum? posita est usque quo veniat semen, cui promissum est &c." (Gal. iii. 19.)

Many allusions to it are found.

(β) Polycarp, ad Phil. cap. iii. : p. 1008.

Παύλου . . . δς καὶ ἀπῶν ὑμῖν ἐγραψεν ἐπιστολάς, εἰς ἂς ἐὰν ἐγκύπτητε, δυνηθήσεσθε οἰκοδομεῖσθαι εἰς τὴν δοθεῖσαν ὑμῖν πίστιν, ἤτις ἐστὶ μήτηρ πάντων ἡμῶν (Gal. iv. 26). And again, cap. v., p. 1009: εἰδότες οὖν, ὅτι θεὸς οὐ μυκτηρίζεται (Gal. vi. 7.)

(γ) Justin Martyr, or whoever was the author of the Oratio ad Græcos, printed among his works, seems to allude to Gal. iv. 12, in the words $\gamma'_{i\nu\epsilon\sigma\theta\epsilon}$ is $\epsilon\gamma'_{\omega}$, $\sigma_{\tau\iota}$ $\kappa\dot{a}\gamma\dot{\omega}$, $\eta_{\mu\eta\nu}$ is $\psi_{\mu\epsilon\hat{i}s}$: and to Gal. v. 20, in these, $\epsilon\chi_{\theta\rhoai}$, $\epsilon_{\rho\epsilon\epsilons}$, $\zeta\eta\lambda_{os}$, $\epsilon_{\rho\iota\theta\epsilon\hat{i}a\iota}$, $\theta\nu_{\muoi}$, κ . $\tau\dot{a}$ $\delta\mu_{0ia}$ $\tau_{0i}\tau_{rois}$, c. v., p. 5.

(δ) Besides these, there are many more distant allusions in the works of Ignatius, Polycarp, and Justin, which may be seen cited in Lardner and Windischmann, and Davidson, Introd. to N. T. vol. ii. pp. 318-19.

Vol. III.---1]

SECTION II.

FOR WHAT READERS IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. This Epistle was written ταις ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Γαλατίας (ch. i. 2). GALATIA (Γαλλογραικία Strabo xii. 566, Gallogræcia Liv. xxxvii. 8, xxxviii. 12) was a district of Asia Minor (once part of Phrygia, Strabo xii. 571, ii. 130), bounded N. by Paphlagonia and Bithynia, E. by Pontus and Cappadocia (divided from both by the Halys), S. by Cappadocia and Phrygia, W. by Phrygia and Bithynia. Notwithstanding its mountainous character, it was fruitful, especially near the river Halys (Strabo xii. 567). The principal cities were Ancyra, Pessinus, and Tavium. Ancyra was declared the capital by Augustus. The inhabitants (Γαλάται, only a later form of Κέλται, Pausan. i. 3. 5,-also Gallogracei) were Gauls in origin. The Gallie tribes of the Trochmi and Tolistoboii, with the German tribe of Tectosagi (or Toctosages), crossed over from Thrace into Asia Minor, having formed part of the Gallic expedition which pillaged Delphi, in the third century B.C. (cir. 280.) In Asia they at first became mercenary troops under Nicomedes, king of Bithynia, but soon overran nearly the whole of Asia Minor, till Antiochus Soter and Eumenes drove them into its central portion, afterwards ealled Galatia. There they were at first ruled by tetrarchs, and afterwards (when their real independence had been taken from them by the Consul Manlius Vulso, B.C. 189,-see Livy xxxviii. 16-27) by kings; of whom the two Deiotari, father and son, are known to us, the former as having been defended by Cieero in a speech still extant, the latter as also a friend of the great orator's (Epp. ad Attic. v. 17). Amyntas, the successor of this latter, was their last king: at his death (B.C. 26) Galatia was reduced to a Roman province. See for full accounts, Strabo, book xiii. ch. 5: Livy, as above: the Introductions to this Epistle in Meyer, De Wette, and Windischmann : Winer's Realwörterbuch, art. Galatia: Conybeare and Howson, vol. i. p. 284 ff., edn. 2: and the learned dissertation on the question whether the Galatians were Teutons or Celts, appended to Prof. Lightfoot's edition of this Epistle.

2. The character of the people, as shewn in this Epistle, agrees remarkably with that ascribed to the Gallie race by all writers¹. They received the Apostle at his first visit with extreme joy, and shewed him every kindness: but were soon shaken in their fidelity to him and the Gospel, and were transferring their allegiance to false teachers.

3. The Galatian churches were founded by St. Paul at his first visit, ¹ So Cæsar, B. G. iv. 5: "infirmitatem Gallorum veritus, quod sunt in consiliis capiundis mobiles, et novis plerumque rebus student, nihil his committendum existimavit." And Thierry, Hist. des Gaulois, Introd.: "un esprit franc, impétueux, ouvert à toutes les impressions, éminemment intelligent: mais à côté de cela, une mobilité extrême, point de constance, beaucoup d'ostentation, enfin une désunion perpétuelle, fruit d'execssive vanité." C. & H. i. 285, note. when he was detained among them by sickness (ch. iv. 13: see note and compare Acts xvi. 6), during his second missionary journey, about A.D. 51 (see chronol. table in Prolegg. to Acts, Vol. II.). Though doubtless he began his preaching as usual among the Jews (cf. Jos. Antt. xvi. 6. 2, for the fact of many Jews being resident in Ancyra), yet this Epistle testifies to the majority of his readers being Gentiles, not yet circumcised, though nearly persuaded to it by Judaizing teachers. At the same time we see by the frequent references to the O. T. and the adoption of the rabbinical method of interpretation by allegory (ch. iv. 21-31), that he had to do with churches which had been accustomed to Judaizing teaching, and familiarized with the O. T. See Meyer, Einl. p. 3. In the manifold preparations for the Gospel which must have taken place wherever Jews were numerous, through the agency of those who had at Jerusalem heard and believed on Jesus, we need not wonder at any amount of judaistic influence apparent even in churches founded by St. Paul himself: nor need any hypotheses respecting his preaching be invented to account for such a phænomenon.

SECTION 111.

WITH WHAT OBJECT IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. Judaizing teachers had followed, as well as preceded, the Apostle in Galatia, and had treated slightingly his apostolic office and authority (ch. i. 1, 11), giving out that circumcision was necessary (ch. v. 2; vi. 12). Their influence was increasing, and the churches were being drawn away by it (i. 6; iii. 1, 3; iv. 9-11; v. 7-12). Against these teachers he had already testified in person (i. 9; iv. 16, where see notes, and cf. Acts xviii. 23),—and now that the evil was so rapidly and seriously gaining ground, he writes this Epistle expressly to counteract it.

2. The object then of the Epistle was (1) to defend his own apostolic authority; and (2) to expose the judaistic error by which they were being deceived. Accordingly, it contains two parts, the apologetic (ch. i. ii.) and the polemic (ch. iii.—v. 12). These are naturally followed by a hortatory conclusion (ch. v. 13—end). See these parts subdivided into their minor sections in the notes.

SECTION IV.

ITS MATTER, AND STYLE.

1. The matter of the Epistle has been partly spoken of in the last section. In the first, or apologctic portion, it contains a most valuable historical résumé of St. Paul's apostolic career, proving his independence of human authority, and confirming as well as illustrating the narrative in the Acts, by mentioning the principal occasions when he held intercourse with the other Apostles : relating also that remarkable interview with St. Peter, so important for its own sake, and giving rise to his own precious testimony to Christian truth in ch. ii. 14-21.

2. The polemical portion has much in common with the Epistle to the Romans. But this difference is observable; that whereas in that Epistle, the whole subject is treated, as belonging to the great argument there handled, logically, and without reference to any special circumstances,—here all is strictly controversial, with immediate reference to the judaizing teachers.

3. In style, this Epistle takes a place of its own among those of St. Paul. It unites the two extreme affections of his remarkable character: severity, and tenderness: both, the attributes of a man of strong and deep emotions. Nothing can be more solemnly severe than its opening, and ch. iii. 1-5; nothing more touchingly affectionate than some of its appeals, e.g. ch. iv. 18-20. It is therefore quite a mistake to characterize its tone as altogether overpowering and intimidating². A half-barbarous people like the Galatians, known for their simplicity and impressibility, would be likely to listen to both of these methods of address: to be won by his fatherly pleading, as well as overawed by his apostolic rebukes and denunciations.

4. There are several points of similarity in this Epistle to the peculiar diction of the Pastoral Epistles. The student will find them pointed out in the reff., and for the most part remarked on in the notes. They seem to indicate, in accordance with our interpretation of ch. vi. 11, that he wrote this Epistle, as those, with his own hand, without the intervention of an amanuensis. This matter will be found more fully treated below, ch. vii. on the Pastoral Epistles, § i. 32.

SECTION V.

TIME AND PLACE OF WRITING.

1. We have no date in the Epistle itself, which may enable us to determine the time when it was written. This can only be gathered from indirect sources. And consequently, the most various dates have been assigned to it: some, as Marcion in old times, and Michaelis, al., in modern, placing it first among St. Paul's Epistles: and others, as Schrader and Köhler, last. The following considerations will narrow our field of uncertainty on the point:

2. If the reasoning in the note on the chronological table, Vol. II. Prolegg. pp. 26, 27, bc correct,—the visit to Jerusalem mentioned Gal. ii. 1 ff. is identical with that in Acts xv. 1 ff. It will thence follow that the Epistle cannot have been written before that visit: i.e. (see Chron. Table as above) not before A.D. 50.

3. I have maintained, in the note on Gal. iv. 16, that the words

 $^{^2}$ See Jowett, Epistles to the Romans, Thessalonians, and Galatians, vol. i. p. 191. 4]

there used most naturally refer to the Apostle's second visit to the churches of Galatia, when Acts xviii. 23, he went through $\tau \eta \nu \Gamma a \lambda a \tau i \kappa \eta \nu \chi \omega \rho a \nu \ldots \sigma \tau \eta \rho i \zeta \omega \nu \pi a \nu \tau a \tau \sigma \tau \delta \mu a \theta \eta \tau a s$. If so, this Epistle cannot date before that visit: i. e. (Chron. Table as above) not before the autumn of the year 54.

4. The first period then which seems probable, is the Apostle's stay at Ephesus in Acts xix., from autumn 54, till Pentecost 57. And this period is so considerable, that, having regard to the $o\ddot{v}\tau\omega s \tau a\chi\dot{\omega}s$ of ch. i. 6, it must be regarded as quite possible that our Epistle may have been written during it. The above is the view of Hug, De Wette, Olsh., Usteri, Winer, Neander, Greswell, Anger, Meyer, Wieseler, and many others.

5. The next period during which it might have been written is, his stay at Corinth, Acts xx. 2, 3, where he spent the winter of the year 57-8, and whence he wrote the Epistle to the Romans. This is the opinion of Conybeare and Howson (vol. ii. p. 162, edn. 2). They support their view entirely by the similarity of this Epistle and that to the Romans. "It is," they say (p. 165, note), "exactly that resemblance which would exist between two Epistles written nearly at the same time, while the same line of argument was occupying the writer's mind, and the same phrases and illustrations were on his tongue." It has also been maintained with much skill and learning, since the first edition of this volume appeared, by Prof. Lightfoot, in an article in the Journal of Sacred and Classical Philology for Jan. 1857 : which article is reproduced in the Introduction to his edition of the Epistle, 1865. He traces the sequence of the lines of thought in the greater Epistles, and finds internal evidence enough to make him decide strongly that it is very improbable, that the two Epistles to the Corinthians intervened between those to the Galatians and Romans, or that to the Galatians between the second to the Thessalonians and the first to the Corinthians.

6. I own that these considerations seem to me weighty ones, and have caused me to modify the decided preference which I gave in my first edition to the earlier date. Still, I do not feel Prof. Lightfoot's argument to have settled the question. It might be that the elementary truths brought out amidst deep emotion, sketched, so to speak, in great rough lines in the fervent Epistle to the Galatians, dwelt long on St. Paul's mind (even though other subjects of interest regarding other churches intervened), and at length worked themselves out, under the teaching and leading of the Spirit, into that grand theological argument which he afterwards addressed, without any special moving occasion, but as his master-exposition of Christian doctrine, to the church of the metropolis of the world,

7. I think then that it must always remain a question between these two periods. In favour of the former of them it may be said that, considering the ovrws $\tau \alpha \chi \epsilon \omega s^3$, we can hardly let so long a time elapse as the second would pass over,—and that probability is in favour of strong emotion having, in the prompting of God's Spirit, first brought out that statement of Christian truth and freedom, which after-deliberation expanded, and polished, and systematized, in the Epistle to the Romans : and in favour of the latter may be alleged the interesting considerations respecting the grouping of St. Paul's Epistles, and the parallels between 2 Corinthians, Galatians, and Romans, which Prof. Lightfoot has adduced.

8. Of course my objection to the date implied in the common subscription, $\epsilon_{\gamma\rho}\dot{a}\phi\eta \ \dot{a}\pi\dot{o}$ 'P $\omega\mu\eta$ s, adopted by Theodoret, Calov., Hammond, al., is even stronger than that stated above. Those who wish to see the matter discussed at more length, may refer to Davidson, Introd. ii. p. 292 ff., and to Prof. Lightfoot's edition of the Epistle, pp. 35-55.

CHAPTER II.

ITS AUTHORSHIP.

1. THE ancient testimonies to the Apostle Paul having been the author of this Epistle, are the following :

(a) Irenæus adv. Hær. v. 2. 36, p. 294:

- καθώς δ μακάμιος Παῦλός φησιν ἐν τῆ προς Ἐφεσίους ἐπιστολῆ ὅτι μέλη ἐσμὲν τοῦ σώματος, ἐκ τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ὀστέων αὐτοῦ (Eph. v. 30). Again i. 8. 5, p. 42, τοῦτο δὲ καὶ ὁ Παῦλος λέγει[·] πῶν γὰρ τὸ φανερούμενον, φῶς ἐστίν (Eph. v. 13).
- (β) Clem. Alex. Stroin. iv. § 65, p. 592 P.: διὸ καὶ ἐν τŷ πρὸς Ἐφεσίους γράφει (cf. supra, § 61, φησὶν ὁ ἀπόστολος, where 1 Cor. xi. 3, &c. is quoted, § 62, ἐπιφέρει γοῦν, eiting Gal. v. 16 ff.: and infra, § 66, κἀν τŷ πρὸς Κολοσσαεῖς . . . from which it is evident that the subject of γράφει is 'St. Paul') ὑποτασσόμενοι ἀλλήλοις ἐν φόβω θεοῦ κ.τ.λ. Eph. v. 21-25.

(γ) ib. Pæd. i. § 18, p. 108 P.:

ό ἀπόστολος ἐπιστέλλων πρὸς Κορινθίους φησίν, 2 Cor. xi. 2. . . . σαφέστατα δὲ Ἐφεσίοις γράφων ἀπεκάλυψε τὸ ζητούμενον ὥδέ πως λέγων μέχρι καταντήσωμεν οἱ πάντες κ.τ.λ. Eph. iv. 13-15.

2. Further we have testimonies to the Epistle being received as canonical Scripture, and therefore, by implication, of its being regarded as written by him whose name it bears : as e.g.:

(8) Polycarp, ad Philippenses, c. xii., p. 1013 ff. :

"Ut his scripturis dictum est, 'Irascimini et nolite peccare,' et 'Sol non occidat super iracundiam vestram.'" Eph. iv. 26³.

- (c) Tertullian adv. Marcion. v. 17, p. 512 (see below, § ii. 17 c).
- (ζ) Irenaus several times mentions passages of this Epistle as perverted by the Valentinians : e. g. ch. i. 10 (Iren. i. 3. 4, p. 16) : iii. 21 (Iren. i. 3. 1, p. 14) : v. 32 (Iren. i. 8. 4, p. 40) : and in many other places (see the Index in Stieren's edn.) cites the Epistle directly.

3. I have not hitherto adduced the testimony ordinarily cited from Ignatius, Eph. 12, p. 656, on account of the doubt which hangs over the interpretation of the words ':

πάροδός έστε τών εἰς θεὸν ἀναιρουμένων, Παύλου συμμύσται τοῦ ἡγιασμένου, τοῦ μεμαρτυρημένου, ἀξιομακαρίστου, οῦ γένοιτό μοι ὑπὸ τὰ ἶχνη εὑρεθῆναι ὅταν θεοῦ ἐπιτύχω, ὑς ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ μνημονεύει ὑμῶν ἐν χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ.

I conceive however that there can be little doubt that these expressions are to be interpreted of the Epistle to the Ephesians. First, the expression $\sigma\nu\mu\mu\dot{\nu}\sigma\tau a\iota$ seems to point to Eph. i. 9, as compared with the rest of the chapter,—to ch. iii. 3—6, 9. And it would be the very perversity of philological strictness, to maintain, in the face of later and more anarthrous Greek usage, that $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \pi a \sigma \eta \ \epsilon \pi a \sigma \tau \lambda \eta$ must mean, 'in every Epistle,' and not 'in all his Epistle.' Assuming this latter meaning (see note on Eph. ii. 21), the expression finds ample justification in the very express and affectionate dwelling on the Christian state and privileges of those to whom he is writing—making mention of them throughout all his Epistle ⁵.

δι' ούς άγαλλιώμενος ήξιώθην δι' ών γράφω προςομιλήσαι τοις άγίοις τοις ούσιν έν Ἐφέσψ, τοις πιστοις έν χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ.

5. As we advance to the following centuries, the reception of the authorship of St. Paul is universal⁶. In fact, we may safely say that this authorship was never called in question till very recent times.

6. Among those critics who have repudiated our Epistle as not written by the Apostle, the principal have been De Wette and Baur. The ground on which they build their reasoning is, for the most part, the same. De Wette holds the Epistle to be a verbose expansion of that to the Colossians. He describes it as entirely dependent on that Epistle, and as such, unworthy of a writer who always wrote in freshness and fulness of spirit, as did St. Paul. He believes he finds in it every where expressions and doctrines foreign to his diction and teaching. This being so, he classes it with the Pastoral Epistles and the first Epistle of Peter, and ascribes it to some scholar of the Apostles, writing in their name. He is not prepared to go so far as Baur, who finds in it the ideas and diction of Gnostic and Montanistic times. On this latter notion, I will treat below : I now proceed to deal with De Wette's objections.

7. First of all, I would take a general view of their character, and say that, on such a general view, they, as a whole, make for, rather than against, the genuineness of the Epistle. According to De Wette, a gifted scholar of the Apostles, in the apostolic age itself, writes an Epistle in imitation, and under the name, of St. Paul. Were the imitation close, and the imitator detected only by some minute features of inadvertent inconsistency, such a phænomenon might be understood, as that the Epistle found universal acceptance as the work of the Apostle : but according to our objector, the discrepancies are wide, the inconsistencies every where abundant. He is found, in his commentary, detecting and exposing them at every turn. Such reasoning may prove a passage objectively (as in the case of Mark xvi, 9-20, or John vii. 53-viii. 11) to be out of place among the writings of a particular author, all subjective considerations apart: but it is wholly inapplicable when used to account for the success of a forger among his contemporaries, and indeed acts the other way,

8. Let us view the matter in this light. Here is an Epistle bearing the name of St. Paul. Obviously then, it is no mere accidental insertion among his writings of an Epistle written by some other man, and on purely objective grounds requiring us to ascribe it to that other unknown author; but it is either a genuine production of the Apostle, or a forgery. Subjective grounds cannot be kept out of the question: it is a successful forgery: one which imposed on the post-apostolic age, and has continued to impose on the Church in every age. We have then a right to expect in it the phænomena of successful forgery: close imitation, skilful avoidance of aught which might seem unlike him whose name it bears;—construction, if you will, out of acknowledged pauline materials, but so as to shun every thing unpauline.

9. Now, as has been seen above, the whole of De Wette's reasoning goes upon the exact opposite of all these phænomena. The Epistle is unpauline: strange and surprising in diction, and ideas. Granting this, it might be a cogent reason for believing an anonymous writing not to be St. Paul's : but it is no reason why a forgery bearing his name should have been successful,-on the contrary, is a very sufficient reason why it should have been immediately detected, and universally unsuccessful. Let every one of De Wette's positions be granted, and carried to its utmost; and the more in number and the stronger they are, the more reason there will be to infer, that the only account to be given of a writing, so unlike St. Paul's, obtaining universal contemporary acceptance as his, is, that it was his own genuine composition. Then we should have remaining the problem, to account for the Apostle having so far departed from himself: a problem for the solution of which much acquaintance with himself and the eircumstances under which he wrote would be required,-and, let me add, a treatment very far deeper and more thorough than De Wette has given to any part of this Epistle.

10. But I am by no means disposed to grant any of De Wette's positions as they stand, nor to recognize the problem as I have put it in the above hypothetical form. The relation between our Epistle and that to the Colossians, I have endeavoured to elucidate below (\S vi. and Prolegg. to the Col., \S iv.). The reasonings and connexions which he pronounces unworthy of the Apostle, I hold him, in almost every ease, not to have appreciated : and where he has appreciated them, to have hastily condemned. Here, as in the instance of 1 Tim., his unfortunate prejudgment of the spuriousness of the Epistle has tinged his view of every portion of it: and his commentary, generally so thorough and able, so fearless and fair, is worth hardly more than those of very inferior men, not reaching below the surface, and unable to recognize the most obvious tendencies and connexions.

11. The reader will find De Wette's arguments met in detail by Rückert (Comm. p. 289 ff.), Hemsen (der Apostel Paulus, pp. 629— 38); and touched upon by Harless (Comm. Einleit. p. lxvi ff.), Neander (in a note to his Pfl. u. Leit. edn. 4, p. 521 ff.), and Meyer (Einl. p. 20 ff.). Davidson also treats of them in full (Introd. to N. T. vol. ii. pp. 352-60), and Eadie very slightly (Introd. p. xxx f.)⁷.

12. Baur's argument will be found in his 'Paulus, der Apostel Jesu Christi &c.' pp. 417-57. It consists, as far as it is peculiar to him, mainly in an attempt to trace in our Epistle, and that to the Colossians (for he holds both to be spurious), expressions and sentiments known to be those of Gnosticism and Montanism : and in some few instances to shew that it is not probable that these heresies took their terms from the Epistles, but rather the Epistles from them. This latter part, on which indeed the conclusiveness of the whole depends, is very slightly, and to me most inconclusively done. And nothing is said in Baur of the real account of the occurrence of such terms in the Epistle, and subsequently in the vocabulary of these heretics : viz. that the sacred writer laid hold of them and employed them, so to speak, high up the stream of their usage, before they became polluted by heretical additions and misconceptions,-the heretics, lower down the same stream, when now the waters were turbid and noxious : his use of them having tended to impress them on men's minds, so that they were ready for the purpose of the heretics when they wanted them. That those heretics used many other terms not known to these Epistles, is no proof that their account was the original one, and this of our Epistles borrowed from it, but simply proves nothing. Some of these terms were suited to the Apostle's purpose in teaching or warning: these he was led to adopt : others were not so suitable,-those he left alone. Or it may be that between his writing and their development, the vocabulary had received additions, which consequently were never brought under his notice. Eadie refers, for an answer to Baur, to Leehler, das apostolische u. nachapostolische Zeitalter, u. s. w. Haarlem, 1852, a work which I have not seen.

13. Taking then the failure of the above objections into account, and strengthening it by anticipation with other considerations which will come before the reader as we advance, we see no reason whatever against following the universal view of the Church, and pronouncing St. Paul to be, as he is stated to be (ch. i. 1), the author of our Epistle.

SECTION II.

FOR WHAT READERS IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. In treating of this part of our subject, that city and church seem first to deserve notice, to which the Epistle, according to our present text, is addressed. We will first assume, that it was an Epistle to the EPHESIANS.

2. EFHESUS, in Lydia, was situated in an alluvial plain (Herod. ii. 10) on the south side of and near the mouth of the Caÿstrus. "The city stood on the S. of a plain about five miles long from E. to W., and three miles broad, the N. boundary being Mount Gallesius, the E. Mount Pactyas, the S. Mount Coressus, and on the W. it was washed by the sea. The sides of the mountains were very precipitous, and shut up the plain like a stadium, or race-course." Lewin, i. p. 344. See his plan, p. 362 : and the view of the site of Ephesus in C. and H. vol. ii. p. 83, edn. 2. For its ancient history, see Lewin, and C. and H. ib., and the art. 'Ephesus,' in Smith's Dict. of Geography. It was a place of great commerce (Strabo xiv. 641), but was principally noted for its beautiful temple of Artemis (Herod. i. 26; ii. 148. Strabo, l. c. Plin. v. 37. Pausan, vii. 2.4; iv. 31. 6, &c.), which was at the head of its harbour Panormus, and was from very ancient times the centre of the worship of that goddess. This temple was burnt down by Herostratus, in the night of the birth of Alexander the Great (B.C. 355; see Plut. Alex. e. 3; Cicero de Nat. Deor. ii. 27), but rebuilt at immense cost (Strabo, 1. c.), and was one of the wonders of the ancient world. On the worship of Artemis there, &c., see Acts xix. 24 ff. and notes, and Winer RWB. The present state of the site of the city, the stadium, 'Ephesus.' theatre, supposed basement of the temple, &c., are described in Smith's Dict. of Geogr., his Bible Dict., and in C. and H., as above.

3. St. Paul's first visit to Ephesus is related Acts xviii. 19–21. It was very short, as he was hastening to reach Jerusalem by the next Pentecost. The work begun by him in disputations with the Jews, was carried on by Apollos (ib. 24–26), and by Aquila and Priseilla (ib. 27). After visiting Jerusalem, and making a journey in the Eastern parts of Asia Minor, he returned thither (ib. xix. 1) and remained there $\tau_{\mu e \tau i a \nu}$ (ib. xix.; xx. 31): during which period the founding of the Ephesian church must be dated. From what is implied in Acts xix. and xx., that church was considerable in numbers: and it had enjoyed a more than usual portion of the Apostle's own personal nursing and teaching. It will be important to bear this in mind when we come to consider the question of this section.

4. On his last recorded journey to Jerusalem he sailed by Ephesus, and summoned the elders of the Ephesian church to meet him at Miletus, where he took what he believed to be his last farewell of them, in that most characteristic and wonderful speech, Acts xx. 18–35.

5. At some subsequent time (see Prolegg. to the Pastoral Epistles), he left Timotheus behind in Ephesus, at which place the first Epistle was addressed to him (1 Tim. i. 3), and perhaps (?) the second. The state of the Ephesian church at the time of these Epistles being written, will be found discussed in the Prolegomena to them.

6. Ecclesiastical tradition has connected the Apostle John with 11]

Ephesus: see Vol. I. Prolegg. ch. v. § i. 9 ff.: and his long residence and death there may with safety be assumed.

7. To this church our Epistle is addressed, according to our present text. And there is nothing in its contents inconsistent with such an address. We find in it clear indications that its readers were mixed Jews and Gentiles⁸,—that they were in an especial manner united to the Apostle in spiritual privilege and heavenly hope⁸:—that they resided in the midst of an unusually corrupt and profligate people¹.

8. Nor are minor indications wanting, which possess interest as connecting our Epistle with the narrative in the Acts. He had preached to them το εύαγγέλιον της χάριτος τοῦ θεοῦ, Acts xx. 24; and he commits them τῷ λόγω τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, ib. ver. 32. In this Epistle alone, not in the contemporary and in some respects similar one to the Colossians, do we find such expressions as δόξης της χάριτος αύτοῦ, ch. i. 6,-τὸ πλούτος της χάριτος αύτοῦ, ib. 7, and ii. 7, — and an unusual recurrence of xápis in all its forms and energies. If he preached among them 'the good tidings of the grace of God,' this may well be called 'the Epistle of the grace of God.' In no other of his writings, not even in the Epistle to the Romans, is grace so magnified and glorified. Again in Acts xx. 22 f. we read δεδεμένος έγω τώ πνεύματι πορεύομαι είς Ίερουσαλήμ, τα έν αὐτῆ συναντήσοντά μοι μη εἰδώς, πλην ὅτι τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον κατὰ πόλιν διαμαρτύρεταί μοι λέγων ὅτι δεσμὰ καὶ θλίψεις με μένουσιν. And accordingly, here only in his Epistles addressed to churches², and not in that to the Colossians, do we find him calling himself ὁ δέσμως (ch. iii. 1; iv. 1).

He had not shrunk from declaring to them $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \nu \tau \eta \nu \beta \sigma \nu \lambda \eta \nu \tau \sigma \tilde{v} \theta \epsilon \sigma \tilde{v}$ (Aets xx. 27): and accordingly, in this Epistle alone is $\beta \sigma \nu \lambda \eta$ used by St. Paul of the divine purpose,— $\kappa a \tau \hat{a} \tau \eta \nu \beta \sigma \nu \lambda \eta \nu \tau \sigma \tilde{v} \theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \mu a \tau \sigma s a \tilde{v} \tau \sigma \tilde{v}$, ch. i. 11.

In Acts xx. 28 it is said of God and the church, $\eta \nu \pi \epsilon \rho \iota \epsilon \pi o \iota \eta \sigma \sigma a \sigma \delta \iota a$ τοῦ aιματος τοῦ ίδίου: and in Eph. i. 14, we have the singular expression εἰς ἀπολύτρωσιν τῆς περιποιήσεως, i. e. of that which He περιεποιήσατο (see note there).

In Acts xx. 32, hc commits them to God and the word of His grace, τῷ δυναμένῳ οἰκοδομῆσαι καὶ δοῦναι τὴν κληρονομίαν ἐν τοῖs ἡγιασμένοις πâσιν. Not to lay any stress on the frequent recurrence of the image of οἰκοδομή, as being common in other Epistles,—the concluding words can hardly fail to recall Eph. i. 18, τίς ὁ πλοῦτος τῆς δόξης τῆς κληρονομίας αὐτοῦ ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις,—Eph. i. 14, ὅ ἐστιν ἀβῥαβὼν τῆς κληρονομίας ἡμῶν,—and v. 5, οἰκ ἔχει κληρονομίαν ἐν τῆ βασιλεία (see Acts xix. 8) τοῦ χριστοῦ καὶ θεοῦ.

9. I would not lay the stress which some have laid on the prevalence of the figure of 'the spiritual building' in this Epistle, as having any connexion with the famous temple of Diana. We should, I think, be suspicious of such supposed local and temporal references (see on 1 Cor. v. 7), unless the context (as e.g. in 1 Cor. ix. 24, 25) plainly points them out.

10. But various objections have been brought against the view that this Epistle was really addressed to the Ephesians. I will take these as recently summed up by Conybeare and Howson, Life and Epistles of St. Paul, vol. ii. pp. 486 ff.

11. " First, it would be inexplicable that St. Paul, when he wrote to the Ephesians, amongst whom he had spent so long a time, and to whom he was bound by ties of such close affection (Acts xx. 17, &c.), should not have a single message of personal greeting to send. Yet none such are found in this Epistle." It may be well, in dealing with this, to examine our Apostle's practice in sending these greetings. They are found in greatest abundance in the Epistle to the Romans, written to a church which, as a church, he had never seen, but which, owing to its situation in the great metropolis, contained many of his own friends and fellowlabourers, and many friends also of those who were with him at Corinth. In 1 Cor., written to a church which he had founded, and among whom he had long resided (Acts xviii. 11), there is not one person saluted by name³;—and one salutation only sent, from Aquila and Priscilla. In 2 Cor., not one personal salutation of either kind. In Gal., not one : a circumstance commonly accounted for by the subject and tone of the Epistle: and if there, why not here also? In Phil., not one: though an approach may be said to be made to a personal greeting in μάλιστα oi ik Tŷs Kaisapos oikias. In Col., the Epistle sent at the same time as this, and by the same messengers, several of both kinds. In 1 Thess. and 2 Thess., none of either kind. In 1 Tim., sent to Ephesus (see Prolegg. to Pastoral Epistles), none: in 2 Tim., several of both kinds; in Philemon, salutations from brethren, but not to any.

The result at which we thus arrive, without establishing any fixed law as to the Apostle's practice, shews us how little weight such an objection as this can have. The Philippians were his dearly beloved, his joy and his crown : yet not one of them is saluted. The Galatians were his little children, of whom he was in labour till Christ should be formed in them : yet not one is saluted. The Thessalonians were imitators of him and of the Lord, patterns to all that believed in Macedonia and Achaia: yet not one of them is selected for salutation. The general salutations found in several of these cases, the total omission of all salutation in others, seem to follow no rule but the fervour of his own mind, and the free play of his feeling as he writes. The more general and solemn the subject, the less he seems to give of these individual notices: the better he knows those to whom he is writing, as a whole, the less he seems disposed to select particular persons for his affectionate remembrance. May we not then conceive it to be natural, that in writing to a church with which he had been so long and intimately acquainted, in writing too on so grand and solemn a subject as the constitution and prospects of Christ's universal church, he should pass over all personal notices, referring them as he does to Tychicus, the bearer of the Epistle? I own I am unable to see any thing improbable in this :--but it seems to me, as far as we can trace his practice, to be in accordance with it.

³ It is plain that the salutations sent from persons who were with the Apostle, would depend on his circumstances at the time, and on the counexion between those with him and the church to which he was writing. When he wrote from Corinth to Rome they were abundant.

12. "Secondly, he could not have described the Ephesians as a church whose conversion he knew only by report" (ch. i. 15).

The answer to this is very simple. First, he nowhere says that he knew their conversion only by report, but what he does say is, akovoas την καθ' ύμας πίστιν έν τῷ κυρίω Ιησοῦ, καὶ την [ἀγάπην την] εἰς πάντας rous aylous: an expression having no reference whatever to their conversion, but pointing to the report which he had received of their abounding in Christian graces ;- and perfectly consistent with, nay, explained as it seems to me most simply on, the hypothesis of his having known their previous circumstances well. Any supposition of allusion to their conversion robs the $\kappa a \theta'$ $\delta \mu \hat{a}_s$ of its fine distributive force, and misses the point of the sentence. But, secondly, if there were any doubt on this point,-if any were disposed to eharge us with thus understanding the words merely as a help out of the difficulty,-their meaning is decided for us by the Apostle himself. Philemon was his $dya\pi\eta\tau\delta s$ and ouvepyo's (Philem. 1). He was his son in the faith (ib. ver. 19). Yet he addresses him in almost the same words, and in the same connexion with εύχαριστών κ.τ.λ. He says, ακούων σου την αγάπην και την πίστιν ήν έχεις είς τον κύριον Ίησοῦν καὶ εἰς πάντας τοὺς ἁγίους. It is strange that after this had been pointed out, the objection should ever have been again raised.

13. "Thirdly, he could not speak to them as only knowing himself (the founder of their church) to be an Apostle by hearsay (ch. iii. 2), so as to need credentials to accredit him with them" (iii. 4).

This objection, as will be seen by the notes on iii. 2, is founded on inattention to the force of $\epsilon i \gamma \epsilon^4$, and of the aorist $\eta \kappa o i \sigma a \tau \epsilon$. The meaning is not, as E. V., 'If ye have heard,' implying a doubt whether they ever had heard, but as given in my note in loc., 'If, that is, ye heard,'—i.e. 'assuming that, when I was with you, ye heard;' and the words convey a reminiscence of that which they did hear. The ore-

dential view of ver. 4 falls with this mistaken rendering of ver. 2: not to mention that it could not for a moment stand, even were that other possible, the reference being to what was before written in ch. i. 5

14. "Fourthly, he could not describe the Ephesians as so exclusively Gentiles (ch. ii. 11; iv. 17), and so recently converted" (v. 8; i. 13; ii. 13).

To the former objection I reply, 1) that the Ephesian church, as other churches out of Judaa, would naturally be composed for the most part of Gentiles, and as such would be addressed in the main as Gentiles: so we have him writing to the Romans, xi. 13, univ de leyo rois Edveouv. And if exception be taken to this reference, and it be understood as rather marking off the Gentile portion of those to whom he was then writing, the same exception cannot be taken to 1 Cor. xii. 2, where, in writing to a mixed church (Acts xviii. 4, 8), he says, almost in the same words as in Eph. ii. 11, οίδατε ότι ότε έθνη ητε, κ.τ.λ. : 2) that in this Epistle, of all others, we might expect to find the distinction between Jew and Gentile pass into the background, the subject being, the constitution and glories of the universal Church: 3) that, as before remarked (under 7), indications are not wanting of the mixed composition of the Ephesian Church. Surely the iva rows buo krion ev avre eis ένα καινὸν ἄνθρωπον (ii. 15) would not have been written to a Church exclusively Gentile.

To the latter objection I answer, that in no one of the passages cited is there the slightest intimation of their having been recently converted; —but, if any temporal conclusion can be drawn from them, all three testify rather to a considerable period having elapsed since that event. In ch. v. 8 we have, $\tilde{\eta}\tau\epsilon \gamma a\rho$ more $\sigma\kappa \delta\tau \sigma s$, $\nu v \delta \delta \phi \omega s \epsilon \nu \kappa \nu \rho i \omega$: in i. 13, $\epsilon v \tilde{\omega} \kappa a \lambda \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \dot{\sigma} \sigma \sigma \rho a \gamma i \sigma \theta \eta \tau \epsilon \dots$: in ii. 13, $\dot{\nu} \mu \epsilon \tilde{s} s \delta \dot{\tau} \pi \sigma \tau \delta \dot{\sigma} \delta \tau \epsilon s$ $\mu a \kappa \rho a \dot{\nu} \epsilon \dot{\gamma} \gamma \dot{\nu} s$.

Of the first and third of these, we may observe that the same $\pi \sigma \tau \epsilon$ designates their unconverted state, by which he designates his own in Gal. i. 13, 23 bis, Tit. iii. 3: yet his conversion was by many years antecedent to that of the Ephesians. Of the second and third, that the aorists serve to remove both the things spoken out of the category of recent events. Had their conversion been recent, and its presence, as an act, still abiding, we should have read perfects here and not aorists⁶.

15. Having endeavoured to give a reply to these internal objections to the Ephesian view of the Epistle, I go on to notice the external difficulties besetting the view which I have taken.

17. "This assertion of Basil's is confirmed by Jerome, Epiphanius, and Tertullian." C. and H. vol. ii. p. 487.

(a) Jerome: "Quidam . . putant . . . eos qui Ephesi sunt sancti et fideles essentiæ vocabulo nuneupatos, ut . . . ab eo qui EST, hi qui SUNT appellentur. . . Alii vero simpliciter non ad eos qui sint (al. sunt), sed qui Ephesi sancti et fideles sint, scriptum arbitrantur." Ad Eph. i. 1, vol. vii. p. 545.

Doubtless this may point to the various reading, and I have allowed it in the Digest as a testimony that way: but it is by no means a decisive one. It may be fairly interpreted on the contrary hypothesis, as indeed Meyer takes it. "Eos qui Ephesi sunt sancti et fideles" represents $\tau \sigma \tilde{s} s \dot{\tau} \dot{s} \sigma \tau \sigma \tilde{s} \sigma \dot{\sigma} \sigma \nu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ 'E $\phi \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \omega \kappa a \dot{\pi} \iota \sigma \tau \sigma \tilde{s}$. This he may be assumed to have read without dispute. Then he proceeds to say, that $\tau \sigma \tilde{s} \sigma \dot{\sigma} \sigma \nu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ 'E $\phi \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \omega$. His whole sentence need not point to any omission of the words $\dot{\epsilon} \nu$ 'E $\phi \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \omega$.

(b) "Epiphanius quotes Eph. iv. 5, 6, from Marcion's πρòs Λαοδικέας."
C. and H. ib., note.

But to this I must demur, for Epiphanius in reality does no such thing. Having cited the words, $\epsilon i_s \kappa i \rho \iota o_s$, $\mu i a \pi i \sigma \tau \iota s \kappa . \tau . \lambda$, he proceeds, $o v \gamma a \rho$ $\epsilon \delta o \xi \epsilon \tau \hat{\varphi} \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \epsilon \iota v \sigma \tau a \tau \psi$ Mapkíwu $a \pi \delta \tau \eta s \pi \rho \delta s$ 'E $\phi \epsilon \sigma (o v s \tau a \psi \tau \eta v \tau \eta v \mu a \rho \tau v \rho (a v \lambda \epsilon' \gamma \epsilon \iota v, a \lambda \lambda' a \pi \delta \tau \eta s \pi \rho \delta s$ Aao $\delta \iota \kappa \epsilon a s$ (i. 3. 12, vol. i. p. 375). Therefore his testimony shews merely what we knew before, that Marcion, among his recognized Epistles of St. Paul, had $\kappa a \iota \pi \rho \delta s$ Aao $\delta \iota \kappa \epsilon a s \lambda \epsilon \gamma o - \mu \epsilon \nu \eta s$;—that this passage was one of such $\mu \epsilon \rho \eta$;—and that Epiphanius blames him for not quoting it from the Epistle to the Ephesians, where accordingly we infer that he himself read it.

polare gestiit, quasi et in isto diligentissimus explorator : nihil autem de titulis interest, eum ad omnes apostolus scripserit, dum ad quosdam."

Hence it is commonly argued, and conceded even by Meyer (Einl. p. 4), that Tertullian did not read the words $i\nu E\phi i\sigma \psi$, or he would have charged Marcion with endeavouring to falsify the text as well as to supply a new title. Certainly, it might be so: but it might also be, that he used the word titulum in a wide sense, including the title and the corresponding portion of the text. It might be again, since, as Epiphanius tells us (see above), Marcion acknowledged only fragments of an Epistle to the Laodiceans, that the beginning of our Epistle was not among them.

18. If it be thought necessary to deal with the fact of the omission of $\mathbf{\dot{e}r}$ 'E $\phi \mathbf{\acute{e}\sigma}\psi$ in B and other ancient MSS., we may find at least an illustration of it in the words $\mathbf{\dot{e}r}$ 'P $\phi\mu\eta$ (Rom. i. 7) being omitted in G al. It seems to have been done with reference to the eatholic subject of the Epistle, very possibly by churches among whom it was read, and with a view to generalize the reference of its contents ⁷.

19. It is necessary now to deal with two hypotheses respecting the readers to whom our Epistle was addressed; both obviously falling to the ground with the genuineness of the words $\epsilon \nu$ 'E $\phi \epsilon \sigma \omega$, but requiring also separate treatment. The first of these is, that it was to the Laodiceans. So (see above) Marcion : so Grot., Hammond, Mill, Pierce, Wetst., Paley, and many more. But this idea has not even tradition to stand on. All the consensus of the ancient Church is against it. It has nothing to rest on but conjecture, arising out of the mention of an Epistle in Aaodineias, in Col. iv. 16, which seems to have induced Marcion to alter the title. No single MS. fills in the gap produced by omitting $\ell \nu$ 'Εφέσφ with the words έν Λαοδικεία. Again, if this had been really so, is it conceivable that the Laodicean church would without protest and without any remaining sign of their right to the Epistle, have allowed that right to be usurped by the Ephesians and universally acknowledged by the church as theirs? See other minor difficulties of the hypothesis alleged by Meyer, Einl. pp. 9, 10, 19, and Harless, Einl. p. xxxix. This failing, another way has been struck out, possessing much more plausibility, and gaining many more adherents '. It has been supposed that the Epistle was encyclical, addressed to more churches than Ephesus only. But I cannot help regarding this hypothesis as even less worthy of our acceptance than the other. It has against it, 1) and chiefly, its total discrepancy with the spirit of the Epistle, which, to whomsoever sent, is clearly addressed to one set of persons throughout, coexisting in one place, and as one body, and under the same eircumstances : 2) the improbability that the Apostle, who in two of his Epistles (2 Cor., Gal.) has so plainly specified their encyclical character, should have here omitted all such specification: 3) the even greater improbability that he should have, as on this hypothesis must be assumed, written a circular Epistle to a district of which Ephesus was the commercial capital², addressed to various churches within that district, yet from its very contents (as by the opponents' hypothesis) not admitting of application to the church of that metropolis, in which he had spent so long a time, and to which he was so affectionately bound: 4) the inconsistency of this hypothesis with the address of the Epistle, and the universal consensus of the ancient church, who, however they read that address, had no doubt of its being properly entitled. Nor is this objection removed by the form of the hypothesis suggested by C. and H., that copies were sent, differently superscribed, which superscriptions, perplexing the copyists, were left out, and then, as copies of the Epistle became spread over the world,-all imported from Ephesus, it was called 'the Epistle from Ephesus,' and so the name of Ephesus eame into the text :- for this would, besides being very far-fetched and improbable, not account for the consensus throughout the church, in the Asiatic portion of which, at least, traces of the accurate addresses would be preserved. 5) Another objection, running counter to 1) but not therefore inconsistent with it, is that if it had been encyclical, some notice at least would have been found of special local (or rather regional) circumstances, as in those to the Corinthians and Galatians. The absence of such notice might easily be accounted for, if it were indeed written to the Ephesians alone: but not, if to various Asiatic churches, some of which were so far from having the Ephesians' intimacy with the Apostle, that they had never even seen him. There could be no reason for his addressing in common the churches of Laodicea, Hierapolis, Philadelphia, and others (I take the names from C. and H. ii. 489), except the existence of some common special dangers, and need of some common special exhortation, of neither of which do we find any hint. See various ramifications of this hypothesis dealt with and refuted in Meyer, Einl. pp. 11-13.

20. I infer then, in accordance with the prevalent belief of the Church in all ages, that this Epistle was VERITABLY ADDRESSED TO THE SAINTS IN EPHESUS, and TO NO OTHER CHURCH.

² See C. and H, ii. 489.

ITS OCCASION, OBJECT, AND CONTENTS.

1. The contents of the Epistle afford no indication of its having sprung out of any special eircumstances of the Ephesian church. Tychicus and Onesimus were being sent to Colossæ. The former was charged with a weighty Epistle to the church there, arising out of peculiar dangers which beset them ; the latter, with a private apostolic letter of recommendation to his former master, also a resident at Colossæ. Under these circumstances, the yearning heart of St. Paul went forth to his Ephesians. He thought of them as a church in Christ of his own planting—as the mystic Body of Christ, growing onwards for an habitation of God through the Spirit. And, full of such thoughts, he wrote this Epistle to them at the same time with, or immediately subsequent to, his penning of that to the Colossians (on their relation, see below, \S vi., and principally, Prolegg. to Col. \S iv. 4 ff.).

2. This being so, the object of the Epistle is a general one—to set forth the ground, the course, the aim and end, of the CHURCH OF THE FAITHFUL IN CHRIST. He speaks to the Ephesians as a type or sample of the Church universal. He writes to them not as an ecclesiastical father, united with others, Timotheus or the like, directing and cautioning them,—but as their Apostle and prisoner in the Lord, bound for them, and set to reveal God's mysteries to them.

3. To this intent and this spirit the contents admirably correspond. Through the whole Epistle, without one exception, we read of $\dot{\eta} \, \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma i a$ in the singular, never of ekklyoíai in the plural. Of this Church, through the whole, he describes the origin and foundation, the work and course, the scope and end. Every where, both in its larger and smaller portions, this threefold division is found. I have endeavoured, in the notes, to point it out, as far as my space would enable me : and those who wish to see it traced yet further, will find this done even with more minuteness than I should be disposed in every particular to subscribe, in Stier's very elaborate and diffuse commentary. But in fact, the trichotomy respecting the Church rests upon another, and sublimer yct. Every where with him the origin and foundation of the Church is in the WILL OF THE FATHER, τοῦ τὰ πάντα ἐνεργοῦντος κατὰ τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ, —the work and course of the Church is by the SATISFACTION OF THE SON, by our νίοθεσίαν δια Ίησοῦ χριστοῦ,-the scope and end of the Church is the LIFE IN THE HOLY SPIRIT,-δυνάμει κραταιωθήναι δια του πνεύματος αύτου είς τον έσω άνθρωπον.

4. The various sections will be found indicated in the notes. I will here give only a general summary of the Epistle.—In ch. i., after the introduction of the subject by an ascription of praise to the Father, who chose us to be holy to Himself in Christ by the Spirit', he opens the counsel of the Father', whose will it was to sum up all things in Christ', and above all His Church', composed of Jews and Gentiles, believers in Christ, and scaled with His Spirit. Then with a sublime prayer, that the eyes of their hearts might be enlightened to see the magnitude of the matter 7, he brings in the PERSON OF CHRIST 8, exalted above all for His Church's sake, to which God hath given Him as Head over all things. Thence " he passes to the fact of their own vivification in and with Christ, and the fellowship of the mystery which he, the Apostle of the Gentiles, was set to proclaim to the world, viz. that spiritual life, by which, rooted and grounded in love, they might come to know the knowledge-passing love of Christ, that they might be filled up to all the fulness of God. Thus having laid forth the ground, course, and scope of the Church, he ends this first part of his Epistle with a sublime doxology ¹.

The rest from ch. iv. 1, is principally hortatory: but here also we have the same tripartite division. For he begins by explaining² the constitution of the Church, in unity and charity and spiritual gifts, by Christ: then³ he exhorts to all these graces which illustrate the Christian life,—laying the foundation of each in the counsel of God towards us,—and proposing to us their end, our salvation and God's glory. And this he carries⁴ into the common duties of ordinary life—into wedlock, and filial and servile relations. After this, in a magnificent peroration⁵, he exhorts to the putting on of the Christian armour, by which the great end of the militant Church may be attained, to withstand in the evil day, and having accomplished all things, to stand firm. And most aptly, when this is concluded, he sums up all with the Catholic benediction and prayer of ch. vi. 23, 24.

SECTION IV.

AT WHAT TIME AND PLACE IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. When St. Paul wrote our Epistle, he was a PRISONER; ch. iii. 1; iv. 1; vi. 20. This narrows our choice of time to two occasions, supposing it to have been written before the period when the history in the Acts terminates:

A) his imprisonment at Jerusalem and Cæsarea (Acts xxi. 27—xxvi. 32), from Pentecost 58, to the autumn of 60 (see Chronological Table in Vol. II. Prolegg. pp. 23—25):

B) his imprisonment at Rome, commencing in February 61, and lasting to the end of the history in the Acts, and probably longer.

2. Further, the three Epistles, to the Colossians, Ephesians, and Philemon, it can hardly be questioned, were sent at one and the same time. The two former are connected as well by their great similarity of contents, as by the fact that Tychieus was the common bearer of both: the two latter, by the common mention of Onesimus as sent to Colossæ, and the common mention of Epaphras, Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, as sending salutations. In speaking therefore of the time and place of writing this Epistle, we are dealing with those others likewise.

3. The view (A) has been taken by some distinguished scholars of modern times in Germany; Schulz (Stud. u. Krit. 1829, p. 612 f.), Schneckenburger (Beitr. p. 144 f.), Schott, Böttger, Wiggers (Stud. u. Krit. 1811, p. 436 ff.), Thiersch (die Kirche im apostol. Zeitalter, 1852, p. 176), and Meyer (Einl. p. 15 ff.).

4. The arguments by which it is supported are best and most compendiously stated by Meyer, and are as follows:

a) Because it is more natural and probable that the slave Onesimus fled from Colossæ to Cæsarea, than that he undertook a long sca-voyage to Rome.

b) If our Epistle and that to the Colossians were sent from Rome, Tychicus and his fellow-traveller Onesimus would arrive first at Ephesus and then at Colossæ: in which case we might expect that St. Paul would, in his notice of Tychicus to the Ephesians (ch. vi. 21, 22), have named Onesimus also, as he has done in Col. iv. 8, 9, to gain for his beloved Onesimus a good reception in Ephesus also. Whereas, if Tychicus and Onesimus travelled from Cæsarca, they would come first, according to the purpose of Onesimus's journey, to Colossæ, where the slave would be left with his master,—and thence to Ephesus: in which case Onesimus would naturally be named in the Epistle to the Colossians, and not in that to the Ephesians.

c) In Eph. vi. 21, iva $\delta \epsilon \epsilon i \delta \eta \tau \epsilon \kappa a i i \mu \epsilon i s - \kappa a i$ shews that, when Tychicus should arrive at Ephesus, he would already have reported the affairs of the Apostle to some others. These others are the Colossians, whom Paul knew that he would visit first: which again speaks for Cæsarea, and not for Rome, as the place of writing. Had it been the latter, the $\kappa a i$ would have appeared in Col. iv. 8, not in Eph. vi. 21.

d) In Philem. 22, the Apostle begs Philemon to prepare him a lodging, and seems to anticipate occupying it soon; which assumes a direct journey to Phrygia after his liberation, which he would reach almost contemporaneously with the arrival of Onesimus. Now it appears from Phil. ii. 24, that on his liberation from his Roman imprisonment, he intended to go to Macedonia, which is inconsistent with visiting Philemon.

5. The view (B) has been the general belief from ancient times down-21] wards. Its upholders urge that every circumstance of the Epistle fits it; and reply to the considerations urged above,

a) That there is no weight in this: a fugitive slave would be in fact more likely than otherwise to get on board ship and take refuge in the great metropolis. And there, notwithstanding what Meyer says to the contrary, he would be more likely to escape the search of the 'fugitivarii,' whose knowledge and occupation, we may presume, were principally local, hardly in strict organization over the whole empire.

b) This evidently requires, to be good for any thing, the assumption, that it fell in with the Apostle's plan, to recommend Onesimus to the Ephesians. But in the absence of any allusion to personal matters in this Epistle,—in the reference of all such things to Tychicus,—accordant with the very general purpose and subject of the Epistle itself, this assumption cannot be received. Meyer argues that the general character of our Epistle cannot be pleaded with regard to the one passage in it which is individual and personal. But surely, it is perfectly legitimate to say, even with regard to such a passage, that the same plan, which induced the Apostle to insert only one such passage in the Epistle, would also induce him to insert one personal notice only in such passage. To found an argument on any such omission in our Epistle, would be unsafe.

c) This, it is maintained, falls entirely to the ground on the different rendering of $\kappa a i$, adopted in the following commentary (see note in loc.), viz. referring it, not to another party who were to receive notices of the Apostle, besides those to whom he was writing, but to the reciprocal introduction of $\delta \mu \epsilon i s$, 'you also concerning me, as I have been long treating concerning you.'

d) No argument can be raised on ground so entirely uncertain as this. It is very possible that altered eircumstances may from time to time have changed the Apostle's plans; and that, as we have some reason to believe his projected journey to Spain (Rom. xv. 22-24) to have been relinquished, or at all events postponed,—so also other projected journeys may have been, according as different churches seemed to require his presence, or new fields of missionary work to open before him. Besides which, it may be fairly said, that there is nothing inconsistent in the two expressions, of Phil. ii. 23 and Philem. 22, with the idea of the Apostle projecting a land journey through Greece to Asia Minor: or at all events a general visitation, by what route he may not as yet have determined, which should embrace both Philippi and Colossæ.

6. On the positive side of this view (B), it is alleged, that the circumstances of the Roman imprisonment suit those of these Epistles better than those of the Cæsarean. From Eph. vi. 19, 20, we gather that he had a certain amount of freedom in preaching the Gospel, which is hardly consistent with what we read in Acts xxiv. 23 of his imprisonment at Cæsarea, where, from the necessity of the case, a stricter watch was requisite (cf. Acts xxiii. 21), and none but those ascertained to be his friends (oi tôtou aðroî) were permitted to see him. Among any such multitude of Jews as came to his lodgings on the other occasion, Acts xxviii. 23 ff., might easily be introduced some of the conspirators, against whom he was being guarded.

Besides, we may draw some inference from his companions, as mentioned in these Epistles. Tychicus, Onesimus, Aristarchus, Marcus, Jesus Justus, Epaphras, Lucas, Demas, were all with him. Of these it is very possible that Lucas and Aristarchus may have been at Cæsarea during his imprisonment, for we find them both accompanying him to Rome, Acts xxvii. 1, 2. But it certainly is not so probable that all these were with him at one time in Cæsarea. The two, Lucas and Aristarchus, are confessedly common to both hypotheses. Then we may safely ask, In which of the two places is it more probable that six other of his companions were found gathered round him? In the great metropolis, where we already know, from Rom. xvi., that so many of the brethren were sojourning,—or at Cæsarea, which, though the most important place in Palestine, would have no attraction to gather so many of his friends, except the prospect of sailing thence with him, which we know none of them did?

Perhaps this is a question which never can be definitely settled, so as absolutely to preclude the Cæsarean hypothesis: but I own it appears to me that the whole weight of probability is on the Roman side. Those who firmly believe in the genuineness of this Epistle, will find another reason why it should be placed at Rome, at an interval of from three to five years after the Apostle's parting with the Ephesians in Acts xx, rather than at Cæsarea, so close upon that event. In this latter case, the absence of all special notices would be far more surprising than it is at present.

7. We may then, I believe, safely assume that our Epistle was written FROM ROME,—and that probably during the period comprised in Acts xxviii. 30, before St. Paul's imprisonment assumed that harsher character which seems to come before us in the Epistle to the Philippians (see Prolegg. to that Epistle, § iii.).

8. This would bring the time of writing it within the limits A.D. 61-63: and we should not perhaps be far wrong in dating it A.D. 62.

SECTION V.

ITS LANGUAGE AND STYLE.

1. As might be expected from the account given of the object of our 23]

Epistle in § iii., the thoughts and language are elevated and sublime; and that to such a degree, that it takes, in this respect, a place of its own among the writings of St. Paul: υψηλών σφόδρα γέμει τών νοημάτων και υπερόγκων α γαρ μηδαμού σχεδον εφθεγζατο, ταυτα ενταυθα δηλοί, Chrys., who subjoins examples of this from ch. iii. 10; ii. 6; iii. 5. Theophylact says, έπει ουν δεισιδαίμων τε ην ουτως ή πόλις, και ουτω σοφοίς έκόμα, πολλή σπουδή κέχρηται Παύλος πρός τούς τοιούτους γράφων, και τα βαθύτερα δε τών νοημάτων και ύψηλότερα αυτοίς επίστευσεν, υτε κατηχημένοις ήδη. So also Grotius, in his preface: "Paulus jam vetus in apostolico munere, et ob Evangelium Romæ vinctus, ostendit illis quanta sit vis Evangelii præ doctrinis omnibus: quomodo omnia Dei consilia ab omni ævo eo tetenderint, quam admiranda sit in eo Dei efficacia, reruni sublimitatem adæquans verbis sublimioribus quam ulla unquam habuit lingua humana." Witsius, in his Meletemata Leidensia (p. 192; cited by Dr. Eadie, Commentary on the Ephesians, Introd. p. xxxi) thus characterizes it : "Ita vero universam religionis Christianæ summan divina hac epistola exponit, ut exuberantem quandam non sermonis tantum evangelici παρρησίαν, sed et Spiritus Sancti vim et sensum, et charitatis Christianæ flammam quandam ex electo illo pectore emicantem, et lucis divinæ fulgorem quendam admirabilem inde clucentem, et fontem aquæ vivæ inde scaturientem, aut ebullientem potius, animadvertere liceat : idque tanta copia, ut superabundans illa cordis plenitudo, ipsa animi sensa intimosque conceptus, conceptus autem verba prolata, verba denique priora quæque subsequentia, premant, urgcant, obruant."

2. These characteristics contribute to make our Epistle by far the most difficult of all the writings of St. Paul. Elsewhere, as in the Epistles to the Romans, Galatians, and Colossians, the difficulties lie for the most part at or near the surface : a certain degree of study will master, not indeed the mysteries of redemption which are treated of, but the contextual coherence, and the course of the argument : or if not so, will at least serve to point out to every reader where the hard texts lie, and to bring out into relief each point with which he has to deal : whereas here the difficulties lie altogether beneath the surface; are not discernible by the cursory reader, who finds all very straightforward and simple. We may deduce an illustration from secular literature. Every moderately advanced schoolboy believes he can construe Sophocles; he does not see the difficulties which await him, when he becomes a mature scholar, in that style apparently so simple. So here also, but for a different reason. All on the surface is smooth, and flows on unquestioned by the unthcological reader : but when we begin to enquire, why thought succeeds to thought, and one cumbrous parenthesis to another,-depths under depths disclose themselves, wonderful systems of parallel allusion, frequent and complicated underplots; every word, the more we search, approves itself as set in its exact logical place; we see every phrase contributing, by its own similar organization and articulation, to the carrying out of the organic whole. But this result is not won without much labour of thought, --without repeated and minute laying together of portions and expressions,--without bestowing on single words and phrases, and their succession and arrangement, as much study as would suffice for whole sections of the more exoteric Epistles.

3. The student of the Epistle to the Ephesians must not expect to go over his ground rapidly; must not be disappointed, if the week's end find him still on the same paragraph, or even on the same verse, weighing and judging,—penetrating gradually, by the power of the mind of the Spirit, through one outer surface after another,—gathering in his hand one and another ramifying thread, till at last he grasps the main cord whence they all diverged, and where they all unite,—and stands rejoicing in his prize, deeper rooted in the faith, and with a firmer hold on the truth as it is in Christ.

4. And as the wonderful effect of the Spirit of inspiration on the mind of man is nowhere in Scripture more evident than in this Epistle, so, to discern those things of the Spirit, is the spiritual mind here more than any where required. We may shew this by reference to De Wette, one of the ablest of Commentators. I have mentioned above, § i. 6, that he approaches this Epistle with an unfortunate and unworthy prejudgment of its spuriousness. He never thinks of applying to it that humble and laborious endeavour which rendered his commentary on the Romans among the most valuable in existence. It is not too much to say, that on this account he has missed almost every point in the Epistle: that his Handbuch, in this part of it, is hardly better than works of third-rate or fourth-rate men: and just for this reason-that he has never come to it with any view of learning from it, but with the averted eyes of a prejudiced man. Take, as a contrast, the two laborious volumes of Stier. Here, I would not deny, we have the opposite course carried into extreme : but with all Stier's faults of too minute classification,-of wearisome length in excgesis,-of unwillingness to lose, and attempts to combine, every divergent sense of the same passage,-we have the precious and most necessary endowment of spiritual discernment,-acquaintance with the analogy of the faith. And in consequence, the acquisition to the Church of Christ from his minute dissection of this Epistle has been most valuable; and sets future students, with regard to it, on higher spiritual ground than they ever occupied before.

5. It is not to be wondered at, where the subject is sui generis, and treated of in a method and style unusually sublime, that the $\tilde{a}\pi a\xi$ $\lambda\epsilon\gamma\phi\mu\epsilon\nu a$ should be in this Epistle more in number than common, as well as the ideas and images peculiar to it. The student will find both these pointed out and treated of in the references and the notes. I would again impress on him, as against De Wette and others, that all such phænomena, instead of telling against its genuineness, are in its favour, and that strongly. Any skilful forger would not perhaps make his work a mere cento from existing undoubted expressions of St. Paul, but at all events would write on new matter in the Apostle's well-known phraseology, avoiding all words and ideas which were in his writings entirely without example.

SECTION VI.

ITS RELATION TO THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

1. I reserve the full discussion of this subject to the chapter on the Epistle to the Colossians. It would be premature, until the student is in full possession of the object and occasion of that Epistle, to institute our comparison between the two.

2. It may suffice at present to say what may be just enough, as regards the distinctive character of the Epistle to the Ephesians. And this may be done by remarking, that we have here, in the midst of words and images common to the two, an entire absence of all controversial allusion, and of all assertion as against maintainers of doctrinal error. The Christian state, and its realization in the Church, is the one subject, and is not disturbed by any looking to the deviations from that state on either hand, nor guarded, except from that fundamental and directly subversive error of impure and unholy practice.

CHAPTER III.

THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

ITS AUTHORSHIP AND INTEGRITY.

1. It has been all but universally believed that this Epistle was written by St. Paul. Indeed, considering its peculiarly Pauline psychological character, the total absence from it of all assignable motive for falsification, the spontaneity and fervour of its effusions of feeling, he must be a bold man who would call its authorship in question ¹.

2. Yet this has been done, partially by Schrader (der Apost. Paulus, vol. v.: see especially p. 233, line 14 from bottom, and following), who supposed ch. iii. 1-iv. 9 interpolated, as well as shorter passages elsewhere, conceding however the Pauline authorship in the main : and entirely by Baur (Paulus Ap. Jesu Christi u.s.w., pp. 458-475), on his usual ground of later Gnostic ideas being found in the Epistle. To those who would see an instance of the very insanity of hypereritieism, I recommend the study of these pages of Baur. They are almost as good by way of burlesque, as the "Historic Doubts respecting Napoleon Buonaparte" of Abp. Whately. According to him, all usual expressions prove its spuriousness, as being taken from other Epistles: all unusual expressions prove the same, as being from another than St. Paul. Poverty of thought, and want of point, are charged against it in one page : in another, excess of point, and undue vigour of expression. Certainly the genuineness of the Epistle will never suffer in the great common-sense verdict of mankind, from Baur's attack. There is hardly an argument used by him, that may not more naturally be reversed and turned against himself.

3. In external testimonics, our Epistle is rich.

(a) Polycarp, ad Philipp. iii., p. 1008, testifies to the fact of St. Paul having written to them,

.... Παύλου δς καὶ ἀπὼν ὑμῖν ἔγραψεν ² ἐπιστολάς, εἰς ಏς ἐὰν ἐγκύπτητε, δυνηθήσεσθε οἰκοδομεῖσθαι εἰς τὴν δοθεῖσαν ὑμῖν πίστιν.

- (γ) Irenæus, iv. 18. 4, p. 251:

 - "Item Paulus ad Philippenses: Qui in figura Dei constitutus," &c. ch. ii. 6--11.

4. It has been hinted above, that Schrader doubted the integrity of our Epistle. This has also been done in another form by Heinrichs, who fancied it made up of two letters,—one to the Church, containing chaps. i. ii., to $\epsilon v \kappa v \rho i \varphi$ iii. 1, and iv. 21—23: the other to private friends, beginning at $\tau a a v \tau a \gamma \rho a \phi \epsilon v$, iii. 1, and containing the rest with the above exception. Paulus also adopted a modification of this view. But it is hardly necessary to say, that it is altogether without foundation. The remarks below (§ iv.) on its style will serve to account for any seeming want of exact juncture between one part and another.

SECTION II.

FOR WHAT READERS AND WITH WHAT OBJECT IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. The city of PHILIPPI has been described, and the $\pi\rho\omega\tau\eta$ $\tau\eta\mathfrak{s}$ $\mu\epsilon\rho\delta\mathfrak{os}$ $\tau\eta\mathfrak{s}$ Makedovias $\pi\delta\lambda\mathfrak{s}$, $\kappa\delta\lambda\omega\mathfrak{v}\mathfrak{i}a$ discussed, in the notes on Acts xvi. 12 ff., to which the student is referred. I shall now notice only the foundation and condition of the Philippian Church.

2. The Gospel was first planted there by Paul, Silas, and Timotheus (Acts xvi. 12 ff.), in the second missionary journey of the Apostle, in A.D. 51. (See Chron. Table in Prolegg. to Acts.) There we read of only a few conversions, which however became a rich and prolific seed of future fruit. He must have visited it again on his journey from Ephesus into Macedonia, Acts xx. 1; and he is recorded to have done so (a third time), when, owing to a change of plan to avoid the machinations of his enemies, the Jews at Corinth, he returned to Asia through Macedonia; see Acts xx. 6. But we have no particulars of either of these visits.

3. The cruel treatment of the Apostle at Philippi (Acts xvi. l. e. 1 Thess. ii. 2) seems to have combined with the charm of his personal fervour of affection to knit up a bond of more than ordinary love between him and the Philippian Church. They, alone of all churches, sent subsidies to relieve his temporal necessities, on two several occasions, immediately after his departure from them (Phil. iv. 15, 16; 1 Thess. ii. 2): and they revived the same good office to him shortly before the writing of this Epistle (Phil. iv. 10, 18; 2 Cor. xi. 9).

4. This affectionate disposition may perhaps be partly accounted for by the fact of Jews being so few at Philippi. There was no synagogue there, only a $\pi posev\chi \eta$ by the river side: and the opposition to the Apostle arose not from Jews, but from the masters of the dispossessed maiden, whose hope of gain was gone. Thus the element which resisted St. Paul in every Church, was wanting, or nearly so, in the Philippian. His fervent affection met there, and almost there only, with a worthy and entire return. And all who know what the love of a warm-hearted people to a devoted minister is, may imagine what it would be between such a flock and such a shepherd. (See below, on the style of the Epistle.)

5. But while this can hardly be doubted, it is equally certain that the Church at Philippi was in danger from Jewish influence: not indeed among themselves⁵, but operating on them from without (ch. iii. 2), through that class of persons whom we already trace in the Epistle to the Galatians, and see ripened in the Pastoral Epistles, who insisted on the Mosaic law as matter of external observance, while in practice they gave themselves up to a life of lust and self-indulgence in depraved conscience.

6. The slight trace which is to be found in ch. iv. 2, 3, of the fact related Acts xvi. 13, that the Gospel at Philippi was first received by female converts, has been pointed out in the notes there.

7. The general state of the Church may be gathered from several hints in this Epistle and others. They were poor. In 2 Cor. viii. 1, 2, we read that $\dot{\eta}$ karà $\beta \acute{a} \theta ors \pi \tau \omega \chi \acute{e} \acute{a} a \acute{v} \tau \widetilde{\omega} r \acute{e} \epsilon \rho \acute{o} \sigma \epsilon \upsilon \sigma \epsilon \upsilon \dot{e} \acute{e} \tau \acute{o} \pi \lambda o \acute{v} \tau \sigma \tau \eta \dot{s}$ $\dot{a} \pi \lambda \acute{o} \tau \eta \sigma s a \acute{v} \tau \widetilde{\omega} v$. They were in trouble, and probably from persecution : compare 2 Cor. viii. 2 with Phil. i. 28—30. They were in danger of, if not already in, quarrel and dissension (cf. ch. ii. 1-4; and i. 27; ii. 12, 14; iv. 2); on what account, we cannot say; it may be, as has been supposed by De W., that they were peculiarly given to spiritual pride and mutual religious rivalry and jealousy. This may have arisen out of their very progress and flourishing state as a Church engendering pride. Creducr supposes (Davidson, p. 381), that it may have been a spiritual form of the characteristic local infirmity, which led them to claim the title $\pi\rho\omega\tau\eta \pi\delta\lambda$ s for their city; but this falls to the ground, if $\pi\rho\omega\tau\eta$ be geographically explained: see note Acts xvi. 12.

8. The object of the Epistle seems to have been no marked and definite one, but rather the expression of the deepest Christian love, and the exhortation, generally, to a life in accordance with the Spirit of Christ. Epaphroditus had brought to the Apostle the contribution from his beloved Philippians; and on occasion of his return, he takes the opportunity of pouring out his heart to them in the fulness of the Spirit, refreshing himself and them alike by his expressions of affection, and thus led on by the inspiring Spirit of God to set forth truths, and dilate upon motives, which are alike precious for all ages, and for every Church on earth.

SECTION III.

AT WHAT PLACE AND TIME IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. It has been believed, universally in ancient times (Chrys., Euthal., Athanas., Thdrt., &c.), and almost without exception (see below) in modern, that our Epistle was written from Rome, during the imprisonment whose beginning is related in Acts xxviii. 30, 31.

2. There have been some faint attempts to fix it at Corinth (Acts xviii. 11, so Oeder, in Meyer), or at Cæsarea (so Paulus and Böttger, and Rilliet hesitatingly; see Meyer). Neither of these places will suit the indications furnished by the Epistle. The former view surely needs no refuting. And as regards the latter it may be remarked, that the strait between life and death, expressed in ch. i. 21–23, would not fit the Apostle's state in Cæsarea, where he had the appeal to Cæsar in his power, putting off at all events such a decision for some time. Besides which, the Kaíσapos οἰκίa, spoken of ch. iv. 22, cannot well be the πραιτώριον τοῦ 'Hρώδου at Cæsarea of Acts xxiii. 35, and therefore it is by that elearer notice that the πραιτώριον of ch. i. 13 must be interpreted (see note there), not vice versâ. It was probably the barrack of the prætorian guards, attached to the palatium of Nero.

3. Assuming then that the Epistle was written from Rome, and during the imprisonment of Acts xxviii. ultt., it becomes an interesting question, to which part of that imprisonment it is to be assigned.

4. On comparing it with the three contemporaneous Epistles, to the Colossians, to the Ephesians, and to Philemon, we shall find a marked difference. In them we have (Eph. vi. 19, 20) freedom of preaching the Gospel implied: here (ch. i. 13—18) much more stress is laid upon his bondage, and it appears that others, not he himself, preached the Gospel, and made the fact of his imprisonment known. Again, from this same passage it would seem that a considerable time had elapsed since his imprisonment: enough for "his bonds" to have had the general effects there mentioned. This may be inferred also from another fact: the Philippians had heard of his imprisonment,—had raised and sent their contribution to him by Epaphroditus,—had heard of Epaphroditus's sickness,—of the effect of which news on them he (Epaphroditus) had had time to hear, ch. ii. 26, and was now recovered, and on his way back to them. These occurrences would imply four casual journeys from Rome to Philippi. Again (ch. ii. 19, 23) he is expecting a speedy decision of his cause, which would hardly be while he was dwelling as in Acts xxviii. ultt.

5. And besides all this, there is a spirit of anxiety and sadness throughout this Epistle, which hardly agrees with the two years of the imprisonment in the Acts, nor with the character of those other Epistles. His sufferings are evidently not the chain and the soldier only. Epaphroditus's death would have brought on him $\lambda i \pi \eta \nu \epsilon \pi i \lambda i \pi \eta \nu$ (ch. ii. 27): there was then a $\lambda i \pi \eta$ before. He is now in an $\delta \gamma \omega \nu$ —in one not, as usual, between the flesh and the spirit, not concerning the long-looked for trial of his case, but one of which the Philippians had heard (ch. i. 29, 30), and in which they shared by being persecuted too: some change in his eircumstances, some intensification of his imprisonment, which had taken place before this time.

6. And if we examine history, we can hardly fail to discover what this was, and whence arising. In February, 61, St. Paul arrived in Rome (see Chron. Table in Prolegg. to Acts, Vol. II.). In 624, Burrus, the prætorian præfect, died, and a very different spirit came over Nero's government : who in the same year divorced Octavia, married Poppæa 5, a Jewish proselytess ', and exalted Tigellinus, the principal promoter of that marriage, to the joint prætorian præfecture. From that time, Nero began 'ad deteriores inclinare':' Seneca lost his power: 'validior in dies Tigellinus ":' a state of things which would manifestly deteriorate the condition of the Apostle, and have the effect of hastening on his trial. It will not be unreasonable to suppose that, some little time after the death of Burrus (Feb., 63, would complete the $\delta_{i\epsilon\tau ia}$ $\delta_{\lambda\eta}$ of Acts xxviii. 30), he was removed from his own house into the πραιτώριον, or barrack of the prætorian guards attached to the palace, and put into stricter custody, with threatening of immediate peril of his life. Here it would be very natural that some of those among the prætorians who had had the custody of him before, should become agents in giving the publicity to "his bonds," which he mentions ch. i. 13. And such a hypothesis suits eminently well all the circumstances of our Epistle.

7. According to this, we must date it shortly after Feb., 63: when now the change was fresh, and the danger imminent. Say for its date then, the summer of 63.

SECTION IV.

LANGUAGE AND STYLE.

1. The language of this Epistle is thoroughly Pauline. Baur has indeed selected some phrases which he conceives to savour of the vocabulary of the later Gnosticism, but entirely without ground. All those which he brings forward, $o\dot{v}\chi \ \dot{a}\rho\pi a\gamma\mu \partial\nu \ \dot{\eta}\gamma\dot{\eta}\sigma a\tau o, -\dot{\epsilon}av\tau\partial\nu \ \dot{\epsilon}\kappa\dot{\epsilon}\nu\omega\sigma\epsilon\nu, \mu o\rho\phi\dot{\eta} \ \theta\epsilon v v, -\sigma\chi\dot{\eta}\mu a, -\kappa a\tau a\chi\theta \delta\nu v v, -may$ easily be accounted for without any such hypothesis: and, as has been already observed in Prolegg. to Ephesians, peculiar expressions may just as well be held to have descended from our Epistle to the Gnostics, as vice versâ.

2. The mention of $\epsilon \pi i \sigma \kappa o \pi o \iota \kappa a \delta i \delta \kappa o \nu o \iota$ in ch. i. 1, has surprised some. I have explained in the note there, that it belongs probably to the late date of our Epistle. But it need surprise no one, however that may be: for the terms are found in an official scuse, though not in formal conjunction, in speeches made, and Epistles written long before this: e. g. in Acts xx. 28; Rom. xvi. 1.

3. In style, this Epistle, like all those where St. Paul writes with fervour, is discontinuous and abrupt, passing rapidly from one theme to another¹; full of earnest exhortations², affectionate warnings³, deep and wonderful settings-forth of his individual spiritual condition and feelings⁴, of the state of Christians⁵ and of the sinful world⁶,—of the loving counsels of our Father respecting us⁷, and the self-sacrifice and triumph of our Redeemer⁸.

4. No epistle is so warm in its expressions of affection⁹. Again and again we have $\dot{a}\gamma a \pi \eta \tau o i$ and $\dot{a}\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi o i$ recurring: and in one place, ch. iv. 1, he seems as if he hardly could find words to pour out the fulness of his love— $\ddot{\omega}_{s\tau\epsilon}$, $\dot{a}\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi o i$ µov $\dot{a}\gamma a \pi \eta \tau o i$ kai $\dot{\epsilon}\pi i \pi o \theta \eta \tau o i$, $\chi a \rho a$ kai $\sigma \tau \epsilon \phi a \nu o s$ μου, οὕτως στήκετε ἐν κυρίω, ἀγαπητοί. We see how such a heart, penetrated to its depths by the Spirit of God, could love. We can see how that feeble frame, crushed to the very verge of death itself, shaken with fightings and fears, burning at every man's offence, and weak with every man's infirmity, had yet its sweet refreshments and calm resting-places of affection. We can form some estimate,—if the bliss of reposing on human spirits who loved him was so great,—how deep must have been his tranquillity, how ample and how clear his fresh springs of life and joy, in HIM, of whom he could write, ζῶ δὲ οὐκ ἕτι ἐγὼ, ζῆ δὲ ἐν ἐμοὰ χριστόs (Gal. ii. 20): and of whose abiding power within him he felt, as he tells his Philippians (ch. iv. 13), πάντα ἰσχύω ἐν τῷ ἐνδυναμοῦντί με.

CHAPTER IV.

THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

AUTHORSHIP.

1. THAT this Epistle is a genuine work of St. Paul, was never doubted in ancient times : nor did any modern critic question the fact, until Schrader¹, in his commentary, pronounced some passages suspicious, and led the way in which Baur² and Meyerhoff³ followed. In his later work, Baur entirely rejects it⁴. The grounds on which these writers rest, are partly the same as those already met in the Prolegomena to the Ephesians. The Epistle is charged with containing phrases and ideas derived from the later heretical philosophies,—an assertion, the untenableness of which I have there shewn as regards that Epistle, and almost the same words would suffice for this. Even De Wette disclaims and refutes their views, maintaining its genuineness: though as Dr. Davidson remarks, "it is strange that, in replying to them so well, he was not led to question his own rejection of the authenticity of the Ephesian Epistle."

2. The arguments drawn from considerations peculiar to this Epistle, its diction and style, will be found answered under \S iv.

3. Among many external testimonies to its genuineness and authenticity are the following:

(a) Justin Martyr, contra Tryph. 85, p. 182, calls our Lord $\pi \rho \omega \tau \acute{\sigma} \tau \kappa \kappa \sigma \kappa$ $\pi \acute{a} \sigma \eta \kappa \kappa \tau \acute{\sigma} \epsilon \omega s$ (Col. i. 15), and similarly § 84, p. 181; 100, p. 195.

4. I am not aware that the integrity of the Epistle has ever been called in question. Even those who are so fond of splitting and portioning out other Epistles, do not seem to have tried to subject this to that process, πέντε ἀναφαινόμενος, ἐκδιδοῖ καὶ οἶτος ἐς τὸν Μαίανδρον. Herod. ibid.). In Strabo's time it had lost much of its importance, for he describes Apamea and Laodicea as the principal eities in Phrygia, and then says, περίκειται δὲ ταύταις καὶ πολίσματα, among which he numbers Colossæ. For a minute and interesting description of the remains and neighbourhood, see Smith's Dict. of Ancient Geography, sub voce. From what is there said it would appear, that Chonse (Khonos), which has, since the assertion of Nicetas, the Byzantine historian who was born there ⁶, been taken for Colossæ, is in reality about three miles S. from the ruins of the eity.

2. The Church at Colossæ consisted principally of Gentiles, ch. ii. 13. To whom it owed its origin, is uncertain. From our interpretation of ch. ii. 1 (see note there), which we have held to be logically and contextually necessary, the Colossians are included among those who had not seen St. Paul in the flesh. In ch. i. 7, 8, Epaphras is described as πιστός ύπερ ήμων διάκονος του χριστου, and as ό και δηλώσας ήμιν την ύμων ἀγάπην ἐν πνεύματι: and in speaking of their first hearing and accurate knowledge of the grace of God in truth, the Apostle adds καθώς εμάθετε από Έπαφρα του αγαπητού συνδούλου ήμων. As this is not ' καθώς και εμάθετε, we may safely conclude that the εμάθετε refers to that first hearing, and by consequence that Epaphras was the founder of the Colossian Church. The time of this founding must have been subsequent to Acts xviii. 23, where St. Paul went $\kappa \alpha \theta \epsilon \xi \hat{\eta} s$ through Galatia and Phrygia, στηρίζων πάντας τοὺς μαθητάς: in which journey he could not have omitted the Colossians, had there been a Church there.

3. In opposition to the above conclusion, there has been a strong current of opinion that the Church at Colossæ was founded by St. Paul. Theodoret seems to be the first who took this view (Introd. to his Commentary). His argument is founded mainly on what I believe to be a misapprehension of ch. ii. 1⁸, and also on a partial quotation of

Acts xviii. 23, from which he infers that the Apostle must have visited Colossæ in that journey, adducing the words $\delta_i \hat{\eta} \lambda \theta \epsilon \tau \eta \nu \Phi \rho \nu \gamma (a\nu \kappa a \iota \tau \eta \nu \Gamma a \lambda a \tau \iota \kappa \eta \nu \chi \omega \rho a \nu$, but without the additional clause $\sigma \tau \eta \rho i \zeta \omega \nu \pi a \nu \tau a s$ $\tau \sigma \nu s \mu a \theta \eta \tau a s$.

4. The same position was taken up and very claborately defended by Lardner, ch. xiv. vol. ii. p. 472. His arguments are chiefly these:

1) The improbability that the Apostle should have been twice in Phrygia and not have visited its principal cities.

2) The Apostle's assurance of the fruitful state of the Colossian Church, ch. i. 6, 23; ii. 6, 7.

3) The kind of mention which is made of Epaphras, shewing him not to have been their first instructor: laying stress on the $\kappa a\theta \omega s \kappa ai$ in ch. i. 7 (rec. reading, but see above, par. 2), and imagining that the recommendations of him at ch. i. 7, 8, iv. 12, 13, were sent to prevent his being in ill odour with them for having brought a report of their state to St. Paul,—and that they are inconsistent with the idea of his having founded their Church.

4) He contends that the Apostle does in effect say that he had himself dispensed the Gospel to them, ch. i. 21-25.

5) He dwells on the difference (as noted by Chrysostom in his Pref. to Romans, but not with this view) between St. Paul's way of addressing the Romans and Colossians on the same subject, Rom. xiv. 1, 2, Col. ii. 20-23; and infers that as the Romans were not his own converts, the Colossians must have been.

6) From ch. ii. 6, 7, and similar passages as presupposing his own foundership of their Church.

7) "If Epaphras was sent to Rome by the Colossians to enquire after Paul's welfare, as may be concluded from ch. iv. 7, 8, that token of respect for the Apostle is a good argument of personal acquaintance. And it is allowed, that he had brought St. Paul a particular account of the state of affairs in this Church. Which is another argument that they were his converts."

8) Ch. i. 8, "who deelared unto us your love in the Spirit," is "another good proof of personal acquaintance."

9) Ch. iii. 16, as shewing that the Colossians were endowed with spiritual gifts, which they could have received only from an Apostle.

10) From eh. ii. 1, 2, interpreting it as Theodoret above.

11) From the $a\pi\epsilon\iota\mu\iota$ of ch. ii. 5, as implying previous presence.

12) From ch. iv. 7-9, as "full proof that Paul was acquainted with them, and they with him."

13) From the salutations in ch. iv. 10, 11, 14, and the appearance of Timotheus in the address of the Epistle, as implying that the Colossians were acquainted with St. Paul's fellow-labourers, and consequently with himself.

14) From the counter salutations in ch. iv. 15.

15) From ch. iv. 3, 4, and 18, as "demands which may be made of strangers, but are most properly made of friends and acquaintance."

16) From the Apostle's intimacy with Philemon, an inhabitant of Colossæ, and his family; and the fact of his having converted him. "Again, ver. 22, St. Paul desires Philemon to prepare him a lodging. Whence I conclude that Paul had been at Colossæ before."

5. To all the above arguments it may at once be replied, that based as they are upon mere verisimilitude, they must give way before the fact of the Apostle never having once directly alluded to his being their father in the faith, as he does so pointedly in 1 Cor. iii. 6, 10; in Gal. i. 11; iv. 13: Phil. ii. 16; iii. 17; iv. 9: 1 Thess. i. 5; ii. 1, &c. Only in the Epistles to the Romans and Ephesians, besides here, do we find such notice wanting: in that to the Romans, from the fact being otherwise: in that to the Ephesians, it may be from the general nature of the Epistle, but it may also be because he was not entirely or exclusively their founder: see Acts xviii. 19-28.

6. Nor would such arguments from verisimilitude stand against the logical requirements of ch. ii. 1. In fact, all the inferences on which they are founded will, as may be seen, full as well bear turning the other way, and ranging naturally and consistently enough under the other hypothesis. The student will find them all treated in detail in Dr. Davidson's Introduction, vol. ii. pp. 402-406.

7. It may be interesting to enquire, if the Church at Colossæ owed its origin not to St. Paul, but to Epaphras, why it was so, and at what period we may conceive it to have been founded. Both these questions, I conceive, will be answered by examining that which is related in Acts xix., of the Apostle's long sojourn at Ephesus. During that time, we are told, ver. 10,-τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ ἔτη δύο, ὥςτε πάντας τοὺς κατοικούντας την 'Ασίαν ακούσαι τον λόγον του κυρίου, 'Ιουδαίους τε καί "EXXnvas: - and this is confirmed by Demetrius, in his complaint ver. 26, -θεωρείτε και ακούετε ότι ου μώνον Ἐφέσου, άλλα σχεδον πάσης της λσίας ό Παῦλος οῦτος πείσας μετέστησεν ἰκανὸν ὄχλον. So that we may well conceive, that during this time Epaphras, a native of Colossæ, and Philemon and his family, also natives of Colossæ, and others, may have fallen in with the Apostle at Ephesus, and become the seeds of the Colossian Church. Thus they would be dependent on and attached to the Apostle, many of them personally acquainted with him and with his colleagues in the ministry. This may also have been the case with them at Laodicea and them at Hierapolis, and thus Pauline Churches sprung up here and there in Asia, while the Apostle confined himself to his central post at Ephesus, where, owing to the concourse to the temple, and the communication with Europe, he found so much and worthy occupation.

8. I believe that this hypothesis will account for the otherwise strange phænomena of our Epistle, on which Lardner and others have laid stress, as implying that St. Paul had been among them: for their personal regard for him, and his expressions of love to them: for his using, respecting Epaphras, language hardly seeming to fit the proximate founder of their Church:—for the salutations and counter salutations.

9. The enquiry into the occasion and object of this Epistle will be very nearly connected with that respecting the state of the Colossian Church, as disclosed in it.

10. It will be evident to the most cursory reader that there had sprung up in that Church a system of erroneous teaching, whose tendency it was to disturb the spiritual freedom and peace of the Colossians by ascetic regulations: to divide their worship by inculcating reverence to angels, and thus to detract from the supreme honour of Christ.

11. We are not left to infer respecting the class of religionists to which these teachers belonged: for the mention of $vou\mu\eta via$ and $\sigma a\beta$. $\beta a\tau a$ in ch. ii. 16, at once characterizes them as Judaizers, and leads us to the then prevalent forms of Jewish philosophy, to trace them. Not that these teachers were merely Jews; they were Christians: but their fault was, the attempt to mix with the free and spiritual Gospel of Christ the theosophy and angelology of the Jews of their time, in which they had probably been brought up. Of such theosophy and angelology we find ample traces in the writings of Philo, and in the notices of the Jewish sect of the Essenes given us by Josephus⁹.

12. It does not seem necessary to mark out very strictly the position of these persons as included within the limits of this or that sect known among the Jews: they were infected with the ascetic and theosophic notions of the Jews of their day, who were abundant in Phrygia¹⁰: and they were attempting to mix up these notions with the external holding of Christianity.

13. There must have been also mingled in with this erroneous Judaistic teaching, a portion of the superstitious tendencies of the Phrygian character, and, as belonging to the Jewish philosophy, much of that incipient Gnosticism which afterwards ripened out into so many strange forms of heresy.

14. It may be noticed that the Apostle does not any where in this Epistle charge the false teachers with immorality of life, as he does the very similar ones in the Pastoral Epistles most frequently. The inference from this is plain. The false teaching was yet in its bud. Later down, the bitter fruit began to be borne; and the mischief required severer treatment. Here, the false teacher is $\epsilon i \kappa \eta$ φυσιούμενος ὑπὸ τοῦ νοὸς τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ (ch. ii. 18): in 1 Tim. iv. 2, he is κεκαυτηριασμένος τὴν ἰδίαν συνείδησιν: ib. vi. 5, διεφθαρμένος τὸν νοῦν, ἀπεστηρημένος τῆς ἀληθείας, νομίζων πορισμὸν εἶναι τὴν εὐσέβειαν. Between these two phases of heresy, a considerable time must have elapsed, and a considerable development of practical tendencies must have taken place.

15. Those who would see this subject pursued further, may consult Meyer and De Wette's Einleitungen : Davidson's Introduction, vol. ii. pp. 407—424, where the various theories respecting the Colossian false teachers are mentioned and discussed : and Professor Eadle's Literature of the Epistle, in the Introduction to his Commentary.

16. The occasion then of our Epistle being the existence and influence of these false teachers in the Colossian Church, the object of the Apostle was, to set before them their real standing in Christ: the majesty of His Person, and the completeness of His Redemption: and to exhort them to conformity with their risen Lord: following this out into all the subordinate duties and occasions of common life.

SECTION III.

TIME AND PLACE OF WRITING.

1. I have already shewn in the Prolegg. to the Ephesians that that Epistle, together with this, and that to Philemon, were written and sent at the same time: and have endeavoured to establish, as against those who would date the three from the imprisonment at Cæsarea, that it is much more natural to follow the common view, and refer them to that imprisonment at Rome, which is related in Aets xxviii. ultt.

2. We found reason there to fix the date of the three Epistles in A.D. 61 or 62, during that freer portion of the imprisonment which preceded the death of Burrus: such freedom being implied in the notices found both in Eph. vi. 19, 20, and Col. iv. 3, 4, and in the whole tone and spirit of the three Epistles as distinguished from that to the Philippians.

SECTION IV.

LANGUAGE AND STYLE: CONNEXION WITH THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

1. In both language and style, the Epistle to the Colossians is peculiar. But the peculiarities are not greater than might well arise from the fact, that the subject on which the Apostle was mainly writing was 39] one requiring new thoughts and words. Had not the Epistle to the Romans ever been written, that to the Galatians would have presented as peculiar words and phrases as this Epistle now does.

2. It may be well to subjoin a list of the $\delta \pi a \xi \lambda \epsilon \gamma \delta \mu \epsilon \nu a$ in our Epistle:

δειγματίζω, ib. 15. (?) (see Matt. i. 19.)	• -

3. A very slight analysis of the above will shew us to what they are chiefly owing. In ch. i. we have seven : in ch. ii., nineteen or twenty : in ch. iii., seven : in ch. iv., two. It is evident then that the nature of the subject in ch. ii. has introduced the greater number. At the same time it cannot be denied that St. Paul does here express some things differently from his usual practice: for instance, $d\rho \epsilon \sigma \kappa \epsilon i a$, $\delta \nu \kappa a \mu \delta \omega$, $\pi \rho \omega \tau \epsilon \nu \omega$, $\epsilon i \rho n \nu o$ ποιέω, μετακινέω, πιθανολογία, έμβατεύω, μομφή, βραβεύω, all are peculiarities, owing not to the necessities of the subject, but to style: to the peculiar frame and feeling with which the writer was expressing himself, which led to his using these unusual expressions rather than other and more customary ones. And we may fairly say, that there is visible throughout the controversial part of our Epistle, a loftiness and artificial elaboration of style, which would induce precisely the use of such expressions. It is not uncommon with St. Paul, when strongly moved or sharply designating opponents, or rising into majestic subjects and thoughts, to rise also into unusual, or long and compounded words : see for examples, Rom. i. 24-32; viii. 35-39; ix. 1-5; xi. 33-36; xvi. 25-27, &c., and many instances in the Pastoral Epistles. It is this $\sigma \epsilon \mu \nu \delta \tau \eta s$ of controversial tone, even more than the necessity of the subject handled, which causes our Epistle so much to abound with peculiar words and phrases.

4. And this will be seen even more strongly, when we turn to the Epistle to the Ephesians, sent at the same time with the present letter. In writing both, the Apostle's mind was in the same general framefull of the glories of the Person of Christ, and the consequent glorious privileges of His Church, which is built on Him, and vitally knit to This mighty subject, as he looked with indignation on the beg-Him. garly system of meats and drinks and hallowed days and angelic mediations to which his Colossians were being drawn down, rose before him in all its length and breadth and height; but as writing to them, he was confined to one portion of it, and to setting forth that one portion pointedly and controversially. He could not, consistently with the effect which he would produce on them, dive into the depths of the divine counsels in Christ with regard to them. At every turn, we may well conceive, he would fain have gone out into those wonderful prayers and revelations which would have been so abundant if he had had free scope : but at every turn, our élaser autor to πνεύμα Ίησου: the Spirit bound him to a lower region, and would not let him lose sight of the $\beta\lambda \epsilon \pi \epsilon \tau \epsilon \mu \eta \tau \iota_s$. which forms the ground-tone of this Colossian Epistle. Only in the setting forth of the majesty of Christ's Person, so essential to his present aim, does he know no limits to the sublimity of his flight. When he approaches those who are Christ's, the urgency of their conservation, and the duty of marking the contrast to their deceivers, cramps and confines him for the time.

5. But the Spirit which thus bound him to his special work while writing to the Colossians, would not let His divine promptings be in vain. While he is labouring with the great subject, and unable to the Colossians to express all he would, his thoughts are turned to another Church, lying also in the line which Tychicus and Onesimus would take: a Church which he had himself built up stone by stone; to which his affection went largely forth : where if the same baneful influences were making themselves felt, it was but slightly, or not so as to call for special and exclusive treatment. He might pour forth to his Ephesians all the fulness of the Spirit's revelations and promptings, on the great subject of the Spouse and Body of Christ. To them, without being bound to narrow his energies evermore into one line of controversial direction, he might lay forth, as he should be empowered, their foundation in the counsel of the Father, their course in the satisfaction of the Son, their perfection in the work of the Spirit.

6. And thus,—as a mere human writer, toiling earnestly and conscientiously towards his point, pares rigidly off the thoughts and words, however deep and beautiful, which spring out of and group around his subject, putting them by and storing them up for more leisure another day: and then on reviewing them, and again awakening the spirit which prompted them, playfully unfolds their germs, and amplifies their suggestions largely, till a work grows beneath his hands more stately and more beautiful than ever that other was, and carrying deeper conviction than it ever wrought :--- so, in the higher realms of the fulness of Inspiration, may we conceive it to have been with our Apostle. His Epistle to the Colossians is his caution, his argument, his protest : is, so to speak, his working-day toil, his direct pastoral labour : and the other is the flower and bloom of his moments, during those same days, of devotion and rest, when he wrought not so much in the Spirit, as the Spirit wrought in him. So that while we have in the Colossians, system defined, language elaborated, antithesis, and logical power, on the surface-we have in the Ephesians the free outflowing of the carnest spirit, -to the mere surface-reader, without system, but to him that delves down into it, in system far deeper, and more recondite, and more exquisite: the greatest and most heavenly work of one, whose very imagination was peopled with the things in the heavens, and even his fancy rapt into the visions of God.

7. Thus both Epistles sprung out of one Inspiration, one frame of mind: that to the Colossians first, as the task to be done, the protest delivered, the caution given: that to the Ephesians, begotten by the other, but surpassing it: carried on perhaps in some parts simultaneously, or immediately consequent. So that we have in both, many of the same thoughts uttered in the same words¹¹; many terms and phrases peculiar to the two Epistles; many instances of the same term or phrase, still sounding in the writer's ear, but used in the two in a different connexion. All these are taken by the impugners of the Ephesian Epistle as tokens of its spuriousness: I should rather regard them as psychological phænomena strictly and beautifully corresponding to the circumstances under which we have reason to believe the two Epistles to have been written: and as fresh elucidations of the mental and spiritual character of the great Apostle.

¹¹ See reff.: tables of these have been given by the Commentators. I will not repeat them here, simply because to complete such a comparison would require far more room and labour than I could give to it, and I should not wish to do it as imperfectly as those more formal tables have done it. The student may refer to Davidson, vol. ii. p. 391.

CHAPTER V.

THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

ITS AUTHORSHIP.

1. THIS Epistle has been all but universally recognized as the undoubted work of St. Paul. It is true (see below) that no reliable citations from it appear in the Apostolic Fathers : but the external evidence from early times is still far too weighty to be set aside.

2. Its authorship has in modern times been called in question (1) by Schrader, and (2) by Baur, on internal grounds. Their objections, which are entirely of a subjective and most arbitrary kind, are reviewed and answered by De Wette, Meyer, and Dr. Davidson (Introd. to N. T. vol. ii. pp. 454 ff.)¹: and have never found any acceptance, even in Germany.

3. The external testimonies of antiquity are the following :

Irenzus adv. Hær. v. 6. 1, p. 299 f.: "Et propter hoc apostolus seipsum exponens, explanavit perfectum et spiritualem salutis hominem, in prima epistola ad Thessalonicenses dicens sic: Deus autem pacis sanctificet vos perfectos," &c. (1 Thess. v. 23.)

¹ I must, in referring to Dr. Davidson, not be supposed to concur in his view of the Apostle's expectation in the words $\hat{\eta}\mu\epsilon\hat{\imath}s$ of $\hat{\zeta}\hat{\omega}\nu\tau\epsilon s$ of $\pi\epsilon\rho\lambda\epsilon\epsilon\pi\delta\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\iota$ (1 Thess. iv. 15, 17). See my note there.

There is a very good statement of Baur's adverse arguments, and refutation of them, in Jowett's work on the Thessalonians, Galatians, and Romans, "Genuineness of the first Epistle," vol. i. 15-26. In referring to it, I must enter my protest against the views of Professor Jowett on points which lie at the very root of the Christian life : views as unwarranted by any data furnished in the Scriptures of which he treats, as his reckless and crude statement of them is pregnant with mischief to minds unaccustomed to biblical research. Among the various phænomena of our awakened state of apprehension of the characteristics and the difficulties of the New Testament, there is none more suggestive of saddened thought and dark foreboding, than the appearance of such a book as Professor Jowett's. Our most serious fears for the Christian future of England, point, it seems to me, just in this direction : to persons who allow fine æsthetical and psychological appreciation, and the results of minute examination of spiritual feeling and mental progress in the Epistles, to keep out of view that other line of testimony to the fixity and consistency of great doctrines, which is equally discoverable in them. I have endcavoured below, in speaking of the matter and style of our Epistle, to meet some of Professor Jowett's assertions and inferences of this kind.

Clem. Alex. Pædag. i. 5 [19], p. 109 P.: τοῦτό τοι σαφέστατα ὁ μακάριος Παῦλος ὑπεσημήνατο, εἰπών· δυνάμενοι ἐν βάρει εἶναι κ.τ.λ. to ἑαυτῆς τέκνα (1 Thess. ii. 6).

Tertullian de resurr. carnis, § 24, vol. ii. p. 828: "Et ideo majestas Spiritus sancti perspicax ejusmodi sensuum et in ipsa ad Thessalonicenses epistola suggerit: De temporibus autem quasi fur nocte, ita adveniet." (1 Thess. v. 1 f.)

SECTION II.

FOR WHAT READERS AND WITH WHAT OBJECT IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. THESSALONICA was a city of Macedonia, and in Roman times, capital of the second district of the province of Macedonia (Liv. xlv. 29 f.), and the seat of a Roman prætor (Cic. Plane. 41). It lay on the Sinus Thermaicus, and is represented to have been built on the site of the ancient Therme (Θέρμη ή έν τῷ Θερμαίψ κόλπψ οἰκημένη, ἀπ' ής καὶ ὑ κόλπος οῦτος την ἐπωνυμίην ἔχει, Herod. vii. 121), or peopled from this city (Pliny seems to distinguish the two: 'medioque flexu littoris Thessalonica, liberæ conditionis. Ad hane, a Dyrrhachio exv mil. pas., Therme.' iv. 10) by Cassander, son of Antipater, and named after his wife Thessalonice, sister of Alexander the Great (so called from a victory obtained by his father Philip on the day when he heard of her birth)². Under the Romans it became rich and populous (η νῦν μάλιστα των άλλων εὐανδρεῖ, Strab. vii. 7: see also Lucian, Asin. c. 46, and Appian, Bell. Civ. iv. 118), was an 'urbs libera' (see Pliny, above), and in later writers bore the name of "metropolis." "Before the founding of Constantinople it was virtually the capital of Greece and Illyricum, as well as of Macedonia: and shared the trade of the Ægean with Ephesus and Corinth" (C. and H. edn. 2, vol. i. p. 380). Its importance continued through the middle ages, and it is now the second city in European Turkey, with 70,000 inhabitants, under the slightly corrupted name of Saloniki. For further notices of its history and condition at various times, see C. and H. i. pp. 378-83: Winer, RWB. sub voce (from which mainly the above notice is taken) : Dr. Holland's Travels : Lewin, vol. i. p. 252.

2. The church at Thessalonica was founded by St. Paul, in company with Silas and Timotheus³, as we learn in Acts xvii. 1—9. Very little

³ That this latter was with Paul and Silas, though not expressly mentioned in the 447 is there said which can throw light on the origin or composition of the Thessalonian church. The main burden of that narrative is the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews there. It is however stated (ver. 4) that some of the Jews believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few. 3. But some account of the Apostle's employment and teaching at Thessalonica may be gathered from this narrative, connected with hints dropped in the two Epistles. He came to them, yet suffering from his persecution at Philippi (1 Thess. ii. 2). But they received the word joyfully, amidst trials and persecutions (ib. i. 6; ii. 13), and notwithstanding the ennity of their own countrymen and of the Jews (ii. 14 ff.). He maintained himself by his labour (ib. ii. 9), although his stay was so short', in the same spirit of independence which characterized all his apostolic course. He declared to them boldly and clearly the Gospel of God (ii. 2). The great burden of his message to them was the approaching coming and kingdom of the Lord Jesus (i. 10; ii. 12, 19; iii. 13; iv. 13—18; v. 1—11, 23, 24. Acts xvii. 7: see also § iv. below), and his chief exhortation, that they would walk worthily of this their calling to that kingdom and glory (ii. 12; iv. 1; v. 23).

4. He left them, as we know from Acts xvii. 5-10, on account of a tumult raised by the unbelieving Jews; and was sent away by night by the brethren to Berœa, together with Silas and Timotheus (Acts xvii. 10). From that place he wished to have revisited Thessalonica: but was prevented (1 Thess. ii. 18), by the arrival, with hostile purposes, of his enemics the Thessalonian Jews (Acts xvii. 13), in consequence of which the brethren sent him away by sea to Athens.

5. Their state after his departure is closely allied with the enquiry as to the object of the Epistle. The Apostle appears to have felt much anxiety about them: and in consequence of his being unable to visit them in person, seems to have determined, during the hasty consultation previous to his departure from Beræa, to be left at Athens, which was the destination fixed for him by the brethren, alone, and to send Timotheus back to Thessalonica to ascertain the state of their faith⁵.

Acts, is inferred by comparing Acts xvi. 3, xvii. 14, with 1 Thess. i. 1, 2 Thess. i. 1, 1 Thess. iii. 1-6.

⁴ We are hardly justified in assuming, with Jowett, that it was only three weeks. For "three Sabbaths," even if they mark the whole stay, may designate four weeks : and we are not compelled to infer that a Sabbath may not have passed at the beginning, or the end, or both, on which he did not preach in the synagogue. Indeed the latter hypothesis is very probable, if he was following the same course as afterwards at Corinth and Ephesus, and on the Jews proving rebellious and unbelieving, separated himself from them: at which, or something approaching to it, the $\pi\rho\sigmase\kappa\lambda\eta\rho\omega\theta\eta\sigma\sigmaa\nu$ $\tau\hat{\varphi}$ $\Pi\alpha\lambda\lambda\varphi$ κ , $\tau\hat{\varphi}$ $\Sigma(\lambda q)$ of Acts xvii. 4 may perhaps be taken as pointing.

6. The nature of the message brought to the Apostle at Corinth (Acts xviii. 5) by Timotheus on his arrival there with Silas, must be inferred from what we find in the Epistle itself. It was, in the main, favourable and consolatory (1 Thess. iii. 6-10). They were firm in faith and love, as indeed they were reputed to be by others who had brought to him news of them (i. 7-10), full of affectionate remembrance of the Apostle, and longing to see him (iii. 6). Still, however, he earnestly desired to come to them, not only from the yearnings of love, but because he wanted to fill up rà borephuara the mioreus abrur (iii. 10). Their attention had been so much drawn to one subject-his preaching had been so full of one great matter, and from the necessity of the case, so scanty on many others which he desired to lay forth to them, that he already feared lest their Christian faith should be a distorted and unhealthy faith. And in some measure, Timotheus had found They were beginning to be restless in expectation of the day of it so. the Lord (iv. 11 ff.),-neglectful of that pure, and sober, and temperate walk, which is alone the fit preparation for that day (iv. 3 ff.; v. 1-9), -distressed about the state of the dead in Christ, who they supposed had lost the precious opportunity of standing before Him at His coming (iv. 13 ff.).

7. This being so, he writes to them to build up their faith and love, and to correct these defects and misapprehensions. I reserve further consideration of the contents of the Epistle for § iv., 'On its matter and style.'

SECTION III.

PLACE AND TIME OF WRITING.

1. From what has been said above respecting the state of the Thessalonian Church as the occasion for writing the Epistle, it may readily be inferred that no considerable time had elapsed since the intelligence of that state had reached the Apostle. Silas and Timotheus were with him (i. 1): the latter had been the bearer of the tidings from Thessaloniea.

2. Now we know (Acts xviii. 5) that they rejoined him at Corinth, apparently not long after his arrival there. That rejoining then forms lies open to the charge of "diving beneath the surface to pick up what is really on the surface," and thus of "introducing into Scripture a hypercritical and unreal method of interpretation, which may be any where made the instrument of perverting the meaning of the text." (Jowett, i. p. 120.) Supposing that at Berca it was fixed that Timotheus should not accompany St. Paul to Athens, but go to Thessalonica, and that the Apostle should be deposited at Athens and left there alone, the brethren returning, what words could have more naturally expressed this than $\delta i \delta \mu \eta \kappa \epsilon \tau i$ or $\epsilon \gamma o \nu \tau \epsilon s \epsilon \delta \delta \kappa f \sigma \mu \epsilon \nu$ our terminus a quo. And it would be in the highest degree unnatural to suppose that the whole time of his stay at Corinth (a year and six months, Aets xviii. 11) clapsed before he wrote the Epistle,—founded as it is on the intelligence which he had heard, and written with a view to meet present circumstances. CORINTIL therefore may safely be assumed as the place of writing.

3. His stay at Corinth ended with his setting sail for the Pentecost at Jerusalem in the spring of 54 (see chron. table in Prolegg. to Acts, Vol. II.). It would begin then with the autumn of 52. And in the winter of that year, I should be disposed to place the writing of our Epistle.

4. It will be hardly necessary to remind the student, that this date places the Epistle first, in chronological order, of all the writings of St. Paul that remain to us.

SECTION IV.

MATTER AND STYLE.

1. It will be interesting to observe, wherein the first-written Epistle of St. Paul differs from his later writings. Some difference we should certainly expect to find, considering that we have to deal with a temperament so fervid, a spirit so rapidly catching the impress of circumstances, so penetrated by and resigned up to the promptings of that indwelling Spirit of God, who was ever more notably and thoroughly fitting His instrument for the expansion and advance of His work of leavening the world with the truth of Christ.

2. Nor will such observation and enquiry be spent in vain, especially if we couple it with corresponding observation of the sayings of our Lord, and the thoughts and words of his Apostles, on the various great departments of Christian belief and hope.

3. The faith, in all its main features, was delivered once for all. The facts of Redemption,—the Incarnation, and the Atonement, and the glorification of Christ,—were patent and undeniable from the first. Our Lord's own words had asserted them: the earliest discourses of the Apostles after the day of Pentecost bore witness to them. It is true that, in God's Providence, the whole glorious system of salvation by grace was the gradual imparting of the Spirit to the Church : by occasion here and there, various points of it were insisted on and made prominent. Even here, the freest and fullest statement did not come first. "Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" was ever the order which the apostolic proclamation took. The earliest of the Epistles are ever moral and practical, the advanced ones more doctrinal and spiritual. It was not till it appeared, in the unfolding of God's Providence, that the bulwark of salvation by grace must be strengthened, that the building on the one foundation must be raised thus impregnable to the rightcousness of works and the law, that the Epistles to the Galatians and Romans were given through the great Apostle, reaching to the full breadth and height of the great argument. Then followed the Epistles of the imprisonment, building up higher and higher the edifice thus consolidated: and the Pastoral Epistles, suited to a more developed ecclesiastical condition, and aimed at the correction of abuses, which sprung up later, or were the ripened fruit of former doctrinal errors.

4. In all these however, we trace the same great elementary truths of the faith. Witness to them is never wanting: nor can it be said that any change of ground respecting them ever took place. The work of the Spirit as regarded them, was one of expanding and deepening, of freeing from narrow views, and setting in clearer and fuller light: of ranging and grouping collateral and local circumstances, so that the great doctrines of grace became ever more and more prominent and paramount.

5. But while this was so with these 'first principles,' the very view which we have taken will shew, that as regarded other things which lay at a greater distance from central truths, it was otherwise. In such matters, the Apostle was taught by experience; Christ's work brought its lessons with it: and it would be not only unnatural, but would remove from his writings the living freshness of personal reality, if we found him the same in all points of this kind, at the beginning, and at the end of his epistolary labours: if there were no characteristic differences of mode of thought and expression in 1 Thessalonians and in 2 Timotheus: if advance of years had brought with it no corresponding advance of standing-point, change of circumstances no change of counsel, trial of God's ways no further insight into God's designs.

6. Nor are we left to conjecture as to those subjects on which especially such change, and ripening of view and conviction, might be expected to take place. There was one most important point on which our Lord Himself spoke with marked and solemn uncertainty. The TIME OF HIS OWN COMING was hidden from all created beings,—nay, in the mystery of his mediatorial office, from the Son Himself (Mark xiii. 32). Even after his Resurrection, when questioned by the Apostles as to the time of his restoring the Kingdom to Israel, his reply is still, that "it is not for them to know the times and the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power" (Acts i. 7).

7. Here then is a plain indication, which has not, I think, been sufficiently made use of in judging of the Epistles. The Spirit was to testify of Christ: to take of the things of Christ, and shew them unto them. So that however much that Spirit, in His infinite wisdom, might be pleased to impart to them of the details and accompanying eircumstances of the Lord's appearing, we may be sure, that the truth spoken by our Lord, "Of that day and hour knoweth no man," would hold good with regard to them, and be traced in their writings. If they were true men, and their words and Epistles the genuine production of inspiration of them by that Spirit of Truth, we may expect to find in such speeches and writings tokens of this appointed uncertainty of the day and hour : expectations, true in expression and fully justified by appearances, yet corrected, as God's purposes were manifested, by advancing experience, and larger effusions of the Spirit of prophecy.

8. If then I find in the course of St. Paul's Epistles, that expressions which occur in the earlier ones, and seem to indicate expectation of His almost immediate coming, are gradually modified,—disappear altogether from the Epistles of the imprisonment,—and instead of them are found others speaking in a very different strain, of dissolving, and being with Christ, and passing through death and the resurrection, in the latest Epistles,—I regard it, not as a strange thing, not as a circumstance which I must explain away for fear of weakening the authority of his Epistles, but as exactly that which I should expect to find; as the very strongest testimony that these Epistles were written by one who was left in this uncertainty,—not by one who wished to make it appear that Inspiration had rendered him omniscient.

9. And in this, the earliest of those Epistles, I do find exactly that which I might expect on this head. While every word and every detail respecting the Lord's coming is a perpetual inheritance for the Church, —while we continue to comfort one another with the glorious and heart-stirring sentences which he utters to us in the word of the Lord, —no candid eye can help seeing in the Epistle, how the uncertainty of "the day and hour" has tinged all these passages with a hue of near anticipation : how natural it was, that the Thessalonians receiving this Epistle, should have allowed that anticipation to be brought even yet closer, and have imagined the day to be actually already present.

10. It will be seen by the above remarks, how very far I am from conceding their point to those who hold that the belief, of which this Epistle is the strongest expression, was an idle fancy, or does not befit the present age as well as it did that one. It is God's purpose respecting us, that we should ever be left in this uncertainty, looking for and hasting unto the day of the Lord, which may be upon us at any time before we are aware of it. Every expression of the ages before us, betokening close anticipation, coupled with the fact that the day has not yet arrived, teaches us much, but unteaches us nothing: does not deprive that glorious hope of its applicability to our times, nor the

Christian of his power of living as in the light of his Lord's approach and the daily realization of the day of Christ⁶.

11. In style, this Epistle is thoroughly Pauline,—abounding with phrases, and lines of thought, which may be parallelled with similar ones in his other Epistles⁷: not wanting also in insulated words and sentiments, such as we find in all the writings of one who was so fresh in thought and full in feeling; such also as are in no way inconsistent with St. Paul's known character, but in every case finding analogical justification in Epistles of which no one has ever thought of disputing the genuineness.

12. As compared with other Epistles, this is written in a quiet and unimpassioned style, not being occasioned by any grievous errors of doctrine or defects in practice, but written to encourage and gently to admonish those who were, on the whole, proceeding favourably in the Christian life. To this may be attributed also the fact, that it does not deal expressly with any of the great verities of the faith, rather taking them for granted, and building on them the fabrie of a holy and pure life. That this should have been done until they were disputed, was but natural: and in consequence not with these Epistles, but with that to the Galatians, among whom the whole Christian life was imperilled by Judaistic teaching, begins that great series of unfoldings of the mystery of salvation by grace, of which St. Paul was so eminently the minister.

⁶ It is strange that such words as the following could be written by Mr. Jowett, without bringing, as he wrote them, the condemnation of his theory and its expression home to his mind: "In the words which are attributed in the Epistle of St. Peter to the unbelievers of that day (? surely it is to the unbelievers of days to come,—a fact which the writer, by altering the reference of the words, seems to be endeavouring to dissimulate), we might truly say that, since the fathers fell asleep, all things remain the same from the beginning. Not only do 'all things remain the same,' but the very belief (in the sense in which it was held by the first Christians) has been ready to vanish away." Vol. i. p. 97.

⁷ Baur has most perversely adduced both these as evidences of spuriousness: among the former he cites ch. i. 5, as compared with 1 Cor. ii. 4: i. 6, with 1 Cor. xi. 1: i. 8, with Rom. i. 8: ii. 4–10, with 1 Cor. ii. 4, iv. 3, 4, ix. 15, 2 Cor. ii. 17, v. 11, xi. 9: for his discussion of the latter, see his "Paulus Apostel, u.s.w.," pp. 489, 490.

CHAPTER VI.

THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

ITS AUTHORSHIP.

1. The recognition of this Epistle has been as general,---and the exceptions to it for the most part the same,—as in the case of the last.

2. The principal testimonies of early Christian writers are the following:

(a) Irenæus, adv. Hær. iii. 7. 2, p. 182:

"Quoniam autem hyperbatis frequenter utitur Apostolus (Paulus, from what precedes) propter velocitatem sermonum suorum, et propter impetum qui in ipso est Spiritus, ex multis quidem aliis est invenire. Et iterum in secunda ad Thessalonicenses de Antichristo dicens, ait: Et tunc revelabitur," &c. ch. ii. 8, 9.

(β) Clement of Alexandria, Strom. v. 3 [17], p. 655 P.:

ούκ ἐν πασι, φησὶν ὁ ἀπόστολος, ἡ γνῶσις, προςεύχεσθε δὲ ἶνα ῥυσθώμεν από τών ατόπων και πονηρών ανθρώπων ού γαρ πάντων ή πίστις (2 Thess. iii. 1, 2).

 (γ) Tertullian, de resurr. carnis c. 24, vol. ii. p. 828: following on the citation from the first Epistle given above, ch. v. § i. 3, "et in seeunda, pleniore sollicitudine ad cosdem : obseero autem vos, fratres, per adventum Domini nostri Jesu Christi," &c. (ch. ii. 1, 2.)

3. The objections brought by Schmidt (Einl. ii. p. 256 ff.), Kern (Tübing. Zeitschrift für 1839, 2 heft.), and Baur (Paulus u.s.w. p. 488 ff.) against the genuineness of the Epistle, in as far as they rest on the old story of similarities and differences as compared with St. Paul's acknowledged Epistles, have been already more than once dealt with. I shall now only notice those which regard points peculiar to our Epistle itself.

4. It is said that this second Epistle is not consistent with the first: that directed their attention to the Lord's coming as almost immediate : this interposes delay,—the apostasy,—the man of sin, &c. It really seems as if no propriety nor exact fitting of circumstances would ever satisfy such critics. It might be imagined that this very discrepancy, even if allowed, would tell most strongly in favour of the genuineness.

5. It is alleged by Kern, that the whole prophetic passage, ch. ii. 1 ff., 51] d 2 does not correspond with the date claimed for the Epistle. It is assumed, that the man of sin is Nero, who was again to return, Rev. xvii. $10, -\delta \kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \chi \omega \nu$, Vespasian, — the $\dot{\alpha} \pi \sigma \sigma \tau a \sigma \epsilon a$, the falling away of Jews and Christians alike. This view, it is urged, fits a writer in A.D. 68—70, between Nero's death and the destruction of Jerusalem. But than this nothing can be more inconclusive. Why have we not as good a right to say, that this interpretation is wrong, because it does not correspond to the received date of the Epistle, as vice versâ? To us (see below, § v.) the interpretation is full of absurdity, and therefore the argument carries no conviction.

6. It is maintained again, that ch. iii. 17 is strongly against the genuineness of our Epistle: for that there was no reason for guarding against forgeries; and as for $\pi \alpha \sigma \eta \,\epsilon \pi (\sigma \tau \alpha \lambda \eta)$, the Apostle had written but one. For an answer to this, see note in loc., where both the reason for inserting this is adduced, and it is shewn, that almost all of his Epistles either are expressly, or may be understood as having been, thus authenticated.

7. See the objections of Schmidt, Schrader, Kern, and Baur, treated at length in Lünemann's Einleitung to his Commentary, pp. 161-167: and in Davidson, Introd. vol. ii. pp. 484, end.

SECTION II.

FOR WHAT READERS, AND WITH WHAT OBJECT IT WAS WRITTEN.

1. The former particular has been already sufficiently explained in the corresponding section of the Prolegomena to the first Epistle. But inasmuch as the condition of the Thessalonian Church in the mean time bears closely upon the object of the Epistle, I resume here the consideration of their circumstances and state of mind.

2. We have seen that there were those among them, who were too ready to take up and exaggerate the prevalence of the subject of Christ's coming among the topics of the Apostle's teaching. These persons, whether encouraged by the tone of the first Epistle or not, we cannot tell (for we cannot see any reference to the first Epistle in ch. ii. 2, see note there), were evidently teaching, as an expansion of St. Paul's doetrine, or as under his authority, or even as enjoined in a letter from him (ib. note), the actual presence of the day of the Lord. In consequence of this, their minds had become unsettled: they wanted directing into the love of God and the imitation of Christ's patience (ch. iii. 5). Some appear to have left off their daily employments, and to have been taking advantage of the supposed reign of Christ to be walking disorderly. 3. It was this state of things, which furnished the occasion for our Epistle being written. Its object is to make it clear to them that the day of Christ, though a legitimate matter of expectation for every Christian, and a constant stimulus for watchfulness, was not yet come: that a course and development of events must first happen, which he lays forth to them in the spirit of prophecy: shewing them that this development has already begun, and that not until it has ripened will the coming of the Lord take place.

4. This being the occasion of writing the Epistle, there are grouped round the central subject two other general topics of solace and confirmation: comfort under their present troubles (ch. i.): exhortation to honesty and diligence, and avoidance of the idle and disorderly (ch. iii.).

SECTION III.

PLACE AND TIME OF WRITING.

1. In the address of the Epistle, we find the same three, Paul, Silvanus, and Timotheus, associated together, as in the first Epistle. This circumstance would at once direct us to Corinth, where Silas and Timotheus rejoined St. Paul (Acts xviii. 5), and whence we do not read that they accompanied him on his departure for Asia (ib. xviii. 18). And as we believe the first Epistle to have been written from that city, it will be most natural, considering the close sequence of this upon that first, to place the writing of it at Corinth, somewhat later in this same visit of a year and a half (Acts xviii. 11).

2. How long after the writing of the first Epistle in the winter of \triangle .D. 52 (see above, ch. v. § iii. 3) we are to fix the date of our present one, must be settled inerely by calculations of probability, and by the indications furnished in the Epistle itself.

3. The former of these do not afford us much help. For we can hardly assume with safety that the Apostle had received intelligence of the effects of his first Epistle, seeing that we have found cause to interpret ch. ii. 2 not of that Epistle, but of false ones, circulated under the Apostle's name. All that we can assume is, that more intelligence had arrived from Thessalonica: how soon after his writing to them, we eannot say. Their present state, as we have seen above, was but a carrying forward and exaggerating of that already begun when the former letter was sent: so that a very short time would suffice to have advanced them from the one grade of undue excitement to the other.

4. Nor do any hints furnished by our Epistle give us much more assistance. They are principally these. (a) In ch. i. 4, the Apostle speaks of his $i\gamma\kappa au\chi a\sigma\theta a\iota$ is $i\kappa\kappa\lambda\eta\sigma iai$; $\tau\sigma\vartheta$ $\theta\epsilon\vartheta$ concerning the endurance and faith of the Thessalonians under persecutions. It would seem from this, that the Achaean Churches (see 1 Cor. i. 2; 2 Cor. i. 1; Rom. xvi. 1) had by this time acquired number and consistence. This however would furnish but a vague indication: it might point to any date after the first six months of his stay at Corinth. (b) In ch. iii. 2, he desires their prayers $iva \ \rho v \sigma \theta \omega \mu cv \ \delta \pi \delta \tau \omega v \ \delta \tau \delta \pi \omega v \kappa a \ \pi \sigma v \eta \rho \tilde{\omega} v \ \delta v \theta \rho \omega \pi \omega v$. It has been inferred from this, that the tumult which occasioned his departure from Corinth was not far off: that the designs of the unbelieving Jews were drawing to a head: and that consequently our date must be fixed just before his departure. But this inference is not a safe one: for we find that his open breach with the Jews took place close upon the arrival of Silas and Timotheus (Acts xviii. 5—7), and that his situation immediately after this was one of peril: for in the vision which he had, the Lord said to him, $ov\delta \delta cis \ \epsilon \pi u \theta \eta \sigma c \tau a \delta v$ $\kappa a \kappa \omega \sigma a i \sigma c.$

5. So that we really have very little help in determining our date, from either of these sources. All we can say is, that it must be fixed, in all likelihood, between the winter of 52 and the spring of 54: and taking the medium, we may venture to place it somewhere about the middle of the year 53.

SECTION IV.

STYLE.

1. The style of our Epistle, like that of the first, is eminently Pauline. Certain dissimilarities have been pointed out by Baur, &c. (see above, § i. 3): but they are no more than might be found in any one undoubted writing of our Apostle. In a fresh and vigorous style, there will ever be, so to speak, librations over any rigid limits of habitude which can be assigned : and such are to be judged of, not by their mere occurrence and number, but by their subjective character being or not being in accordance with the writer's well-known characteristics. Professor Jowett has treated one by one the supposed inconsistencies with Pauline usage (vol. i. p. 139 f.), and shewn that there is no real difficulty in supposing any of the expressions to have been used by St. Paul. He has also collected a very much larger number of resemblances in manner and phraseology to the Apostle's other writings. The student who makes use of the references in this edition will be able to mark out these for himself, and to convince himself that the style of our Epistle is so closely related to that of the rest, as to shew that the same mind was employed in the choice of the words and the construction of the sentences.

2. One portion of this Epistle, viz. the prophetic section, ch. ii. 1-12, 54] as it is distinguished from the rest in subject, so differs in style, being, as is usual with the more solemn and declaratory paragraphs of St. Paul, loftier in diction and more abrupt and elliptical in construction. The passage in question will be found on comparison to bear, in style and flow of sentences, a close resemblance to the denunciatory and prophetic portions of the other Epistles: compare for instance ver. 3 with Col. ii. 8, 16; vv. 8, 9 with 1 Cor. xv. 24–28; ver. 10 with Rom. i. 18, 1 Cor. i. 18, 2 Cor. ii. 15; ver. 11 with Rom. i. 24, 26; ver. 12 with Rom. ii. 5, 9, and Rom. i. 32.

SECTION V.

ON THE PROPHETIC IMPORT OF CH. II. 1-12.

1. It may be well, before entering on this, to give the passage, as it stands in our rendering in the notes '.

"(1) But we entreat you, brethren, in regard of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together to Him,-(2) in order that ye should not be lightly shaken from your mind nor troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by epistle as from us, to the effect that the day of the Lord is present. (3) Let no man deceive you in any manner: for [that day shall not come] unless there have come the apostasy first, and there have been revealed the man of sin, the son of perdition, (4) he that withstands and exalts himself above every one that is called God or an object of adoration, so that he sits in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. (5) (6) And now ye know that which hinders, in order that he may be revealed in his own time. (7) For the MYSTERY ALREADY is working of lawlessness, only until he that now hinders be removed : (8) and then shall be REVEALED the LAWLESS ONE, whom the Lord Jesus will destroy by the breath of His mouth, and annihilate by the appearance of His coming: (9) whose coming is according to the working of Satan in all power and signs and wonders of falsehood, (10) and in all deceit of unrighteousness for those who are perishing, because they did not receive the love of the truth in order to their being saved. (11) And on this account God is sending to them the working of error, in order that they should believe the falsehood, (12) that all might be judged who did not believe the truth, but found pleasure in iniquity."

3. The first particulars in the history must be gleaned from the early Fathers. And their interpretation is for the most part well marked and consistent. They all regard it as a prophecy of the future, as yet unfulfilled when they wrote. They all regard the $\pi a \rho o \nu \sigma i a$ as the personal return of our Lord to judgment and to bring in His Kingdom. They all regard the adversary here described as an individual person, the incarnation and concentration of sin².

IRENÆUS, adv. hær. v. 25. 1, p. 322: "Ille enim (Antichristus) ownen suscipiens diaboli virtutem, veniet non quasi rex justus nec quasi in subjectione Dei legitimus: sed impius et injustus et sine lege, quasi apostata, et iniquus et homieida, quasi latro, diabolicam apostasiam in se recapitulans: et idola quidem seponens, ad suadendum quod ipse sit Deus: se autem extollens unum idolum, habens in semetipso reliquorum idolorum varium errorem: ut hi qui per multas abominationes adorant diabolum, hi per hoc unum idolum serviant ipsi, de quo apostolus in Epistola quæ est ad Thessalonicenses seeunda, sic ait" (vv. 3, 4).

Again, ib. 3, p. 323 : "'Usque ad tempos temporum et dimidium temporis' (Dan. vii. 25), hoc est, per triennium et sex menses, in quibus veniens regnabit super terram. De quo iterum et apostolus Paulus in secunda ad Thess., simul et causam adventus ejus annuntians, sic ait" (vv. 8 fl.).

Again, ib. 30. 4, p. 330: "Cum autem devastaverit Antichristus hic omnia in hoc mundo, regnabit annis tribus et mensibus sex, et sedebit in templo Hierosolymis: tum veniet Dominus de cœlis in nubibus, in gloria Patris, illum quidem et obedientes ei in stagnum ignis mittens: adducens autem justis regni tempora, boc est requietionem, septimam diem sanctificatam; et restituens Abrahæ promissionem hæreditatis: in quo regno ait Dominus, multos ab Oriente et Occidente venientes, recumbere cum Abraham, Isaac et Jacob."

TERTULLIAN, de Resurr. c. 24, vol. ii. p. 829, quoting the passage, inserts after $\delta \kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \chi \omega \nu$, "quis, nisi Romanus status \hat{r} cujus abscessio in decem reges dispersa Antichristum superducet, et tum revelabitur iniquus." See also his Apol. c. 32, vol. i. p. 447.

JUSTIN MARTYR, dial. cum Tryph. c. 110, p. 203 : δύο παρουσίαι αὐτοῦ κατηγγελμέναι εἰσί, μία μὲν ἐν ἦ παθητός καὶ ἄδοξος καὶ ἄτιμος καὶ σταυρούμενος κεκήρυκται, ἡ δὲ δευτέρα ἐν ἦ μετὰ δόξης ἀπό τῶν οὐρανῶν πάρεσται, ὅταν καὶ ὁ τῆς ἀποστασίας ἄνθρωπος, ὁ καὶ εἰς τὸν ὕψιστον ἔξαλλα λαλῶν, ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἄνομα τολμήσῃ εἰς ἡμᾶς τοὺς Χριστιανούς.

ORIGEN, contra Cels. vi. 45 f. vol. i. p. 667 f.: ἔχρην δὲ τὸν μὲν ἕτερον τῶν Ἐκρων, κal βέλτιστον, νίδν ἀναγορεύεσθαι τοῦ θεοῦ, διὰ τὴν ὑπεροχήν· τον δὲ τούτῷ κατὰ διάμετρον ἐναντίον, νίδν τοῦ πονηροῦ δαίμονος, κal Σατανἂ, κal διαβόλου . . . λέγει δὲ δ Παῦλος, περί τούτου τοῦ καλουμένου ἀντιχρίστου διδάσκων, κal παριστὰς μετά τινος ἐπικρύψεως τίνα τρόπον ἐπιδημήσει, κal πότε τῷ γένει τῶν ἀνθρώπων, κal διὰ τί. He then quotes this whole passage.

§ v.] PROPHETIC IMPORT OF CHAP. II. 1-12. [FROLEGOMENA.

4. Respecting, however, the minor particulars of the prophecy, they are not so entirely at agreement. Augustine says (de civ. Dei, xx. 19. 2, p. 685: cf. also Jerome in the note),—' in quo templo Dei sit sessurus, incertum est: utrum in illa ruina templi quod a Salomone rege constructum est, an vero in Ecclesia. Non enim templum alicujus idoli aut dæmonis templum Dei Apostolus diceret ⁴.' And from this doubt about his 'session,' a doubt about his person also had begun to spring up; for he continues, ' unde nonnulli non ipsum principem scd universum quodammodo corpus ejus, id est, ad eum pertinentem hominum multitudinem simul cum ipso suo principe hoc loco intelligi Antichristum volunt.'

5. The meaning of το κατέχον, though, as will be seen from the note, generally agreed to be the Roman empire, was not by any means universally acquiesced in. Theodoret says, τινές το κατέχον την 'Ρωμαϊκην ένόησαν βασιλείαν, τινές δε την χάριν τοῦ πνείματος. κατεχούσης γάρ, φησί, της τοῦ πνεύματος χάριτος ἐκείνος οὐ παραγίνεται, άλλ' οὐχ οἶόν τε παύσασθαι παντελῶς την χάριν τοῦ πνεύματος ... ἀλλ' οὐδε την 'Ρωμαϊκην βασιλείαν έτέρα διαδέξεται βασιλεία· διὰ γὰρ τοῦ τετάρτου θηρίου καὶ ὁ θειότατος Δανιηλ

CHRYSOSTOM in loc.: τίς δὲ οῦτός ἐστιν; ἄρα ὁ Σατανᾶς; οὐδαμῶς· ἀλλ' ἄνθρωπός τις πῶσαν αὐτοῦ δεχόμενος τὴν ἐνέργειαν. καὶ ἀποκαλυφθῆ ὁ ἄνθρωπός, φησιν, ὁ ὑπεραιρόμενος ἐπὶ πάντα λεγόμενον θεόν ἢ σέβασμα. οὐ γὰρ εἰδωλολατμείαν ἄξει ἐκεῖνος, ἀλλ' ἀντίθεός τις ἔσται, καὶ πάντας καταλύσει τοὺς θεοῦς, καὶ κελεύσει προςκυνεῖν αὐτὸν ὰντὶ τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ καθεσθήσεται εἰς τὸν ναὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, οὐ τὸν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἰς τὰς πανταχοῦ ἐκκλησίας.

CTBIL OF JERUS., Catech. xv. 12, p. 229: ἔρχεται δὲ ὁ προειρημένος ἀντίχριστος οδτος, ὕταν πληρωθώσιν οἱ καιροὶ τῆς Ῥωμαίων βασιλείας, καὶ πλησιάζει λοιπὸν τὰ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου συντελείας. δέκα μὲν ὁμοῦ Ῥωμαίων ἐγείρονται βασιλεῖς, ἐν διαφόροις μὲν ἴσως τόποις, κατὰ δὲ τὸν αὐτὸν βασιλεύοντες καιρόν. μετὰ δὲ τούτους ἐνδέκατος ὁ ᾿Αντίχριστος ἐκ τῆς μαγικῆς κακοτεχνίας τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν ἐξουσίαν ἁρπάσας.

Theodoret's interpretation agrees with the above as to the personality of Antichrist and as to our Lord's coming. I shall quote some portion of it below, on $\delta \kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \chi \omega \nu$, and $\tau \delta \mu \nu \sigma \tau \hbar \rho \iota \nu \sigma$.

AUGUSTINE, de civ. Dei, xx. 19. 4, vol. vii. p. 687 : "Non veniet ad vivos et mortuos judicandos Christus, nisi prius venerit ad seducendos in anima mortuos adversarius ejus Antichristus."

JEROME, Epist. exxi., ad Algasiam, qu. 11, vol. i. p. 887 f. : "Nisi, inquit, venerit discessio primum ut omnes gentes que Romano imperio subjacent, recedant ab his, et revelatus fuerit, id est, ostensus, quem omnia prophetarum verba prænunciant, homo peecati, in quo fons omnium peccatorum est, et filius perditionis, id est diaboli : ipse est enim universorum perditio, qui adversatur Christo, et ideo vocatur Antichristus ; et extollitur supra omne quod dicitur Deus, ut cunctarum gentium deos, sive probatam omnem et veram religionem suo calcet pede : et in templo Dei, vel Hierosolymis (ut quidam putant), vel in ceclesia, ut verius arbitramur, sederit, ostendens se, tanquam ipse sit Christus et filius Dei : nisi, inquit, fuerit Romanum imperium ante desolatum, et Antichristus præcesserit, Christus non veniet : qui ideo ita venturus est, ut Antichristum destruat."

³ Theodoret also: ναόν δε θεοῦ τὰς εκκλησίας ἐκάλεσεν, ἐν αἶς ἁρπάσει τὴν προεδρείαν, θεόν ἑαυτόν ἀποδεικνῦναι πειρώμενος. την Ρωμαϊκήν ηνίξατο βασιλείαν. έν δε τούτω το μικρον κέρας εβλάστησε το ποιοῦν πόλεμον μετά των άγίων. αὐτὸς δὲ οῦτός ἐστι περὶ οῦ τὰ προβρηθέντα είπεν δ θείος απόστολος. οὐδέτερον τούτων οἶμαι φάναι τον θείον απόστολον, άλλὰ τὸ παρ' ἐτέρων εἰρημένον εἶναι ἀληθὲς ὑπολαμβάνω. ἐδοκίμασε γὰρ ὁ των όλων θεός παρά τον της συντελείας αυτόν όφθηναι καιρόν. ό του θεου τοίνυν όρος νῦν ἐπέχει φανήναι. And so also Theodor.-Mops. Another meaning yet is mentioned by Chrysostom, or rather another form of that repudiated above by Theodoret, viz., that the continuance of $\dot{\eta}$ $\tau o \hat{v}$ πνεύματος χάρις, τουτέστι χαρίσματα, hindered his appearing. And remarkably enough, he rejects this from a reason the very opposite of that which weighed with Theodoret,-viz., from the fact that spiritual gifts had ceased : άλλως δε έδει ήδη παραγίνεσθαι, ει γε εμελλε των χαρισμάτων ἐκλειπόντων παραγίνεσθαι· και γαρ πάλαι ἐκλέλοιπεν⁵. Augustine's remarks (ubi supra) are curious : "Quod autem ait, et nune quid detineat scitis, quoniam scire illos dixit, aperte hoe dicere noluit. \mathbf{Et} ideo nos, qui nescimus quod illi sciebant, pervenire cum labore ad id quod sensit Apostolus, cupimus, nec valemus : præsertim quia et illa quæ addidit, hunc sensum faciunt obscuriorem. Nam quid est, 'Jam enim,' &c. (ver. 7)? Ego prorsus quid dixerit, fateor me ignorare." Then he mentions the various opinions on $\tau \delta$ $\kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon_{\chi 0 \nu}$, giving this as the view of some, that it was said "de malis et fietis qui sunt in ecclesia, donec perveniant ad tantum numerum qui Antichristo magnum populum faciat : et hoc esse mysterium iniquitatis quia videtur occultum . ." then again quoting ver. 7, adds, "hoc est, donec exeat de medio ecclesiæ mysterium iniquitatis, quod nunc occultum est."

6. This μυστήριον της ἀνομίας was also variously understood. Chrysostom says, Νέρωνα ἐνταῦθα φησίν, ὡςανεὶ τύπον ὄντα τοῦ Ἀντιχρίστου καὶ γὰρ οὖτος ἐβούλετο νομίζεσθαι θεός. καὶ καλῶς εἶπε τὸ μυστήριον οὐ γὰρ φανερῶς ὡς ἐκεῖνος, οὐδ' ἀπηρυθριασμένως. εἰ γὰρ πρὸ χρόνου ἐκείνου ἀνευρέθη, φησίν, ὃς οὐ πολὺ τοῦ Ἀντιχρίστου ἐλείπετο κατὰ τὴν κακίαν, τί θαυμαστὸν εἰ ἤδη ἔσται; οὖτω δὴ συνεσκιασμένως εἶπε, καὶ φανερὸν αὐτὸν οὐκ ἡθέλησε ποιῆσαι, οὐ διὰ δειλίαν, ἀλλὰ παιδεύων ἡμᾶς μὴ περιττὰς ἔχθρας ἀναδέχεσθαι ὅταν μηδὲν ἦ τὸ κατεπεῖγον. This opinion is also mentioned by Augustine, al., but involves of course an anachronism. Theodoret, also mentioning it, adds : ἐγῶ δὲ οἶμαι τὰς ἀναφυείσας αἰρέσεις δηλοῦν τὸν ἀπόστολον· δι' ἐκείνων γὰρ ὁ διάβολος πολλοὺς ἀποστήσας τῆς ἀληθείας, προκατασκευάζει τῆς ἀπάτης τὸν ὅλεθρον. μυστήριον δὲ αὐτρὺς ἀνομίας ἐκάλεσεν, ὡς κεκρυμμένην ἔχοντας τῆς ἀνομίας τὴν πάγην ὅ κρύβδην ἀεὶ κατεσκεύαζε, τότε προφανῶς καὶ διαβộἦην κηρύξει.

§ v.] PROPHETIC IMPORT OF CHAP. II. 1-12. [PROLEGOMENA.

7.6 The view of the fathers remained for ages the prevalent one in Modifications were introduced into it, as her relation to the Church. the state gradually altered; and the Church at last, instead of being exposed to further hostilities from the secular power, rose to the head of that power; and, penetrating larger and larger portions of the world, became a representation of the kingdom of God on earth, with an imposing hierarchy at her head. Then followed, in the Church in general, and among the hierarchy in particular, a neglect of the subject of Christ's coming. But meanwhile, those who from time to time stood in opposition to the hierarchy, understood the Apostle's description here, as they did also the figures in the Apocalypse, of that hierarchy itself. And thus arose,—the $\pi a \rho o v \sigma i a$ being regarded much as before, only as an event far off instead of near,-first in the eleventh century the idea, that the Antichrist foretold by St. Paul is the establishment and growing power of the Popedom.

8. This view first appears in the conflict between the Emperors and the Popes, as held by the partisans of the imperial power: but soon becomes that of all those who were opponents of the hierarchy, as wishing for a freer spirit in Christendom than the ceclesiastical power allowed. It was held by the Waldenses, the Albigenses, the followers of Wiekliffe and Huss. The $\kappa a \tau \epsilon \chi_{OV}$, which retarded the destruction of the papacy, was held by them to be the Imperial power, which they regarded as simply a revival of the old Roman Empire.

9. Thus towards the time of the Reformation, this reference of Antichrist to the papal hierarchy became very prevalent: and after that event it assumed almost the position of a dogma in the Protestant Churches. It is found in Bugenhagen, Zwingle, Calvin, &c., Osiander, Baldwin, Arctius, Erasm.-Schmid, Beza, Calixtus, Calovius, Newton, Wolf, Joachim-Lange, Turretin, Benson, Bengel, Macknight, Zaehariæ, Michaelis, &c.: in the symbolical books of the Lutheran Church, and in Luther's own writings: and runs through the works of our English Reformers'.

10. The upholders of this view generally conceive that the Papacy will go on bringing out more and more its antichristian character, till at last the $\pi a \rho o \sigma a$ will overtake and destroy it. The $a \pi o \sigma \tau a \sigma a$ is the fall from pure evangelical doctrine to the traditions of men. The singular, $\delta \ a \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi o s \ \tau \eta s \ a \mu a \rho \tau a s$, is taken collectively, to signify a 'series et successio hominum,' inasmuch as it is a monarchical empire which is in question, which remains one and the same, though its individual head may change. The godlessness of Antichrist, described in ver. 4, is justified historically by the Pope setting himself above all authority divine and human, the words πάντα λεγόμενον θεόν, &c. being, in accordance with Scriptural usage, taken to mean the princes and governments of the world, and an allusion being found in $\sigma \epsilon \beta a \sigma \mu a$ to $\sigma \epsilon \beta a \sigma \tau \delta s$, the title of the Roman Emperors. The vads $\tau o \hat{v} \theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ is held to be the Christian Church, and the Katioas to point to the tyrannical power which the Pope usurps over it. By to katéxov is understood the Roman Empire, and by & Katexwv the Roman Emperor, - and history is appealed to, to shew that out of the ruins of that empire the papacy has grown up. The declaration, $\tau \delta$ μυστήριον ήδη ένεργείται της άνομίας, is justified by the fact, that the "semina erroris et ambitionis," which prepared the way for the papacy, were already present in the Apostle's time. For a catalogue of the τέρατα ψεύδουs, ver. 9, rich material was found in relies, transubstantiation, purgatory, &c. The annihilation of Antichrist by the $\pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu a \tau o \tilde{\nu} \sigma \tau \delta \mu a \tau o s$ of the Lord, has been understood of the breaking down of his power in the spirits of men by the opening and dispersion of the word of God in its purity by means of the Reformation ; and the καταργήσει τη επιφανεία της παρουσίας αὐτοῦ, of the final and material annihilation of Antichrist by the coming of the Lord Himself.

11. In the presence of such a polemical interpretation directed against them, it could hardly be expected that the Roman Catholics on their side would abstain from retaliation on their opponents. Accordingly we find that such writers as Estius, al., interpret the $\dot{a}\pi\sigma\sigma\tau a\sigma i a$ of the defection from the Romish Church and the Pope, and understand by Antichrist the heretics, especially Luther and the Protestant Church.

12. Even before the reference to the papaey, the interpreters of the Greek Church took Mohammed to be the Antichrist intended by St. Paul, and the $d\pi\sigma\sigma\tau\sigma\sigma'a$ to represent the falling off of many Oriental and Greek Churches to Islamism. And this view so far influenced the Protestant Church, that some of its writers have held a double Antichrist,—au Eastern one, viz. Mohammed and the Turkish power,—and a Western, viz. the Pope and his power. So Melanethon, Bucer, Bullinger, Piscator, &c.

13. Akin to this method of interpretation is that which in our own century has found the apostasy in the enormities of the French Revolution, Antichrist in Napoleon, and $\tau \partial \kappa a \tau \epsilon \chi o \nu$ in the continuance of the German Empire: an idea, remarks Lünemann, convicted of error by the termination of that empire in 1806.

14. One opinion of modern days has been, that it is objectionable to endeavour to assign closely a meaning to the single details of the imagery used by St. Paul. This has led to giving the whole description a general, ideal, or symbolic sense. So Koppe, who thinks that the Apostle is only following the general import of the Jewish expectations, resting on the prophecy of Daniel, that there should be a season of godlessness before the time of the end, the full eruption of which he expects after his own death : he himself being & Katéxwv. Similarly Storr,-who sees in ανθρωπος της άμαρτίας 'potestas aliqua, Deo omnique religioni adversaria, quæ penitus incognita et futuro demum tempore se proditura sit,' and in to katexov, the 'copia hominum, verissimo amore inflammatorum in Christianam religionem.' Nitzsch again believes the 'man of sin to be the power of godlessness' come to have open authority, or the general contempt of all religion. Pelt, comm. in Thess. p. 201, sums up his view thus: "Mihi igitur cum Koppio adversarius ille principium esse videtur, sive vis spiritualis evangelio contraria, quæ huc usque tamen in Pontificiorum Romanorum operibus ac serie luculentissime sese prodiit, ita tamen, ut omnia etiam mala, quæ in ecelesiam compareant, ad eandem Antichristi ένέργειαν sint referenda. Ejus vero παρουσία, i. e. summum fastigium, quod Christi reditum, qui nihil aliud est nisi regni divini vietoria⁸, antecedet, futurum adhue esse videtur, quum illud tempus procul etiam nunc abesse putemus, ubi omnes terræ incolæ in co crunt ut ad Christi sacra transcant. κατέχον vero cum Theodoreto putarim esse Dei voluntatem illud Satanæ regnum cohibentem, ne erumpat, et si mediæ spectantur causæ, apostolorum tempore maxime imperii Romani vis, et quovis ævo illa resistentia, quam malis artibus, quæ religionem subvertere student, privati commodi et honoris augendorum eupiditas opponere solet." And Pelt thinks that the symptoms of the future corruption of the Christian Church were already discernible in the apostolie times, in the danger of falling back from Christian freedom into Jewish legality, in the mingling of heathenism with Christianity, in false yrwois and aoknois, in angelolatry, in the "fastus a religione Christiana omnino alienus."

15. Olshausen's view is, that inasmuch as the personal coming of Christ is immediately to follow this revelation of Antichrist, such revelation eannot have yet taken place: and consequently, though we need not stigmatize any of the various interpretations as false, none of them has exhausted the import of the prophecy. 'The various untoward events and ungodly persons which have been mentioned, including the unbelief and godlessness of the present time, are all prefigurations of Antichrist, but contain only some of his characteristics, not all: it is the union of all in some one personal appearance, that shall make the full Antichrist, as the union in one Person, Jesus of Nazareth, of all the types and prophecies, constituted the full Christ. And the $\kappa a \tau \epsilon \chi o \nu$ is the moral and conservative influence of political states, restraining this great final outbreak. See more on this below.

16. On the other hand, some have regarded the prophecy as one already fulfilled. So Grotius, Wetstein, Le Clerc, Whitby, Schöttgen, Nösselt, Krause, and Harduin. All these concur in referring the $\pi a \rho ov \sigma' i a \tau o \hat{v} \kappa v \rho i ov$ to the coming of Christ in the destruction of Jerusalem.

17. Grotius holds Antichrist to be the godless Caligula, who (Suet. Calig. 22, 33) ordered universal supplication to himself as the High God, and (Jos. Antt. xviii. 8. 2. Philo, Leg. ad Cai. § 31, vol. ii. p. 576) would have set up a colossal image of himself in the temple at Jerusalem: and in $\delta \kappa a \tau \epsilon \chi \omega v$ he sees L. Vitellius, the proconsul of Syria and Judzea, whose term of office delayed the putting up of the statue,—and in δ $a vo\mu os$, Simon Magus. This theory is liable to the two very serious objections, 1) that it makes $\delta a v \rho_{P}$. $\tau \hat{\eta} s \, \delta \mu a \rho \tau$. and $\delta a vo\mu os$ into two separate persons: 2) that it involves an anachronism, our Epistle having been written after Caligula's time.

18. According to Wetstein, the $\delta v \theta \rho$. $\tau \eta s$ $\delta \mu a \rho \tau i as$ is Titus, whose army (Jos. B. J. vi. 6. 1), καιομένου αὐτοῦ τοῦ ναοῦ, καὶ τῶν πέριξ ἁπάντων, κομίσαντες τὰς σημαίας εἰς τὸ ἰερόν, καὶ θέμεναι τῆς ἀνατολικῆς πύλης ἄντικρυς, ἔθυσάν τε αὐταῖς αὐτόθι, καὶ τὸν Τίτον μετὰ μεγίστων εὐφημιῶν ἀπέφηναν αὐτοκράτορα. His κατέχων is Nero, whose death was necessary for the reign of Titus,—and his ἀποστασία, the rebellion and slaughter of three princes, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, which brought in the Flavian family. But this is the very height of absurdity, and surely needs no serious refutation.

19. Hammond⁹ makes the man of sin to be Simon Magus, and the Gnostics, whose head he was. The $\epsilon \pi i \sigma \nu \nu \alpha \gamma \omega \gamma \dot{\eta} \dot{\epsilon} \pi^{*} a \dot{\nu} \tau \dot{\rho} \nu$, ver. 1, he interprets as the "major libertas coëundi in ecclesiasticos cœtus ad colendum Christum:" the $a\pi o \sigma \tau a \sigma (a, the falling off of Christians to$ Gnosticism (1 Tim. iv. 1): $a\pi \sigma \kappa a \lambda \upsilon \phi \theta \eta \nu a \iota$, the Gnostics "putting off their disguise, and revealing themselves in their colours, i. e. crucl, professed enemics to Christ and Christians:" ver. 4 refers to Simon "making himself the supreme Father of all, who had created the God of the Jews" (Iren. i. 24. 1, 2, p. 100 f.). By τὸ κατέχον, he understands the union yet subsisting more or less between the Christians and the Jews in the Apostle's estimation, which was removed when the Apostles entirely separated from the Jews: and & κατέχων he maintains to be virtually the same with ro karéxor, but if any masculine subject must be supplied, would make it & vouos. The unother the analytics he refers to the wicked lives of these Gnostics, but mostly to their persecution of the Christians. Ver. 8 he explains of the conflict at Rome between Simon and the Apostles Peter and Paul, which ended in the death of the former. Lünemann adds, "The exceptical and historical monstrosity of this interpretation is at present universally acknowledged."

9 On the New Test. in loc.

20. Le Clerc holds the anoragía to be the rebellion of the Jewish people against the voke of Rome : the man of sin, the rebel Jews, and especially their leader Simon, son of Giora, whose atrocities are related in Josephus: — $\pi \hat{a}_s \lambda_{\epsilon\gamma \delta\mu}$. $\theta_{\epsilon \delta s} \kappa.\tau.\lambda.$, denotes the government: — $\tau \delta$ κατέχον is whatever hindered the open breaking out of the rebellion,partly the influence of those Jews in office who dissuaded the war,partly fear of the Roman armies: and & Katexwv, on one side, the "præses Romanus,"-on the other, the "gentis proceres, rex Agrippa et pontifices plurimi." The μυστήριον της avonías is the rebellious ambition, which under the cloke of Jewish independence and zeal for the law of Moses, was even then at work, and at length broke openly forth.

21. Whitby takes the Jewish people for Antichrist, and finds in the apostasy the fulling away of the Jewish converts to their old Judaism, alluded to in the Epistle to the Hebrews (iii. 12-14; iv. 11; vi. 4-6; x. 26, 27 al. fr.). His Katéxwv is "the Emperor Claudius, who will let till he be taken away, i. e. he will hinder the Jews from breaking out into an open rebellion in his time, they being so signally and particularly obliged by him, that they cannot for shame think of revolting from his government."

22. Schöttgen (vol. i. p. 861 ff.) takes Antichrist to be the Pharisees, Rabbis, and doctors of the law, who set up themselves above God, and had impious stories tending to bring Him into contempt: the $d\pi o \sigma \tau a \sigma i a$, the rebellion against Rome : the Karéxov, " Christiani, qui precibus suis rem aliquando distulerunt, donce oraculo divino admoniti Hierosolymis abierunt, et Pellam secesserunt :" the μυστήριον της avouias, " ipsa doctrina perversa," referring to 1 Tim. iii. 16.

23. Nösselt and Krause understand by Antichrist the Jewish zealots, and by the Katéxov, Claudius, as Whitby. Lastly, Harduin makes the anooragia the falling off of the Jews to paganism,-the man of sin, the High Priest Ananias (Acts xxiii. 2), - the Katéxwv, his predecessor, whose term of office must come to an end before he could be elected. From the beginning of his term, the $d\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\sigma\sigma\sigma$ $\tau\eta\sigma\sigma$ $d\mu\alpha\rho\tau$ was working as a prophet of lies, and was destroyed at the taking of Jerusalem by Titus.

24. All these præterist interpretations have against them one fatal objection :---that it is impossible to conceive of the destruction of Jerusalem as in any sense corresponding to the $\pi a \rho o \nu \sigma i a$ in St. Paul's sense of the term: see especially, as bearing immediately on this passage, 1 Thess. ii. 19; iii. 13; iv. 15; v. 23.

25. A third class of interpretations is that adopted by many of the modern German expositors, and their followers in England. It is best described perhaps in the words of De Wette (Einl. Handb. ii. 132):

"He goes altogether wrong, who finds here any more than the Apostle's subjective anticipation from his own historical position, of the future of the Christian Church;" and expanded by Mr. Jowett (vol. ii. p. 178), "Such passages (Eph. vi. 12) are a much safer guide to the interpretation of the one we are considering, than the meaning of similar passages in the Old Testament. For they indicate to us the habitual thought of the Apostle's mind: 'a falling away first,' suggested probably by the wavering which he saw around him among his own converts, the grievous wolves that were entering into the Church of Ephesus (Acts xx. 29): the turning away of all them of Asia (2 Tim. i. 15). When we consider that his own converts, and his Jewish opponents, were all the world to him,-that through them, as it were in a glass, he appeared to himself to see the workings of human nature generally, we understand how this double image of good and evil should have presented itself to him, and the kind of necessity which he felt, that Christ and Antichrist should alternate with each other. It was not that he foresaw some great conflict, decisive of the destinies of mankind. What he anticipated far more nearly resembled the spiritual combat in the seventh chapter of the Romans. It was the same struggle, written in large letters, as Plato might have said, not on the tables of the heart, but on the scene around: the world turned inside out, as it might be described: evil as it is in the sight of God, and as it realizes itself to the conscience, putting on an external shape, transforming itself into a person."

26. This hypothesis is so entirely separate from all others, that there seems no reason why we should not deal with it at once and on its own ground, before proceeding further. It will be manifest to any one who exercises a moment's thought, that the question moved by it simply resolves itself into this: Was the Apostle, or was he not, writing in the power of a spirit higher than his own? In other words, we are here at the very central question of Inspiration or no Inspiration : not disputing about any of its details, which have ever been matters of doubt among Christians : but just asking, for the Church and for the world, Have we, in any sense, God speaking in the Bible, or have we not? If we have,then of all passages, it is in these which treat so confidently of futurity, that we must recognize His voice : if we have it not in these passages, then where are we to listen for it at all? Does not this hypothesis, do not they who embrace it, at once reduce the Scriptures to books written by men,-their declarations to the assertions of dogmatizing teachers,their warnings to the apprehensions of excited minds,--their promises to the visions of enthusiasts,-their prophecies, to anticipations which may be accounted for by the circumstances of the writers, but have in them no objective permanent truth whatever?

27. On such terms, I fairly confess I am not prepared to deal with a question like that before us. I believe that our Lord uttered the words ascribed to Him by St. John (ch. xvi. 12, 13); I believe the apostolic Epistles to be the written proof of the fulfilment of that promise, as the apostolic preaching and labours were the spoken and acted proof: and in writing such passages as this, and 1 Thess. iv. 13-17, and 1 Cor. xv., I believe St. Paul to have been giving utterance, not to his own subjective human opinions, but to truths which the Spirit of God had revealed to him : which he put forth indeed in writing and in speaking, as God had placed him, in a Church which does not know of the time of her Lord's coming,-as God had constituted his own mind, the vessel and organ of these truths, and gifted him with power of words,-but still, as being the truth for the Church to be guided by, not his own forebodings, for her to be misled by. What he may have meant by his expressions, is a question open to the widest and freest discussion : but that what he did mean, always under the above necessary conditions, is truth for us to receive, not opinion for us to canvass, is a position, the holding or rejecting of which might be very simply and strictly shewn to constitute the difference between one who receives, and one who repudiates, Christian revelation itself.

28. I now proceed to enquire, which, or whether any of all the above hypotheses, with the exception of the last, seems worthy of our acceptance. For the reason given above (24), I pass over those which regard the prophecy as fulfilled. The destruction of Jerusalem is inadequate as an interpretation of the coming of the Lord here: He has not yet come in any sense adequate to such interpretation: therefore the prophecy has yet to be fulfilled.

29. The interpretations of the ancient Fathers deserve all respect, short of absolute adoption because they were their interpretations. We must always in such cases strike a balance. In living near to the time when the speaking voice yet lingered in the Church, they had an advantage over us: in living far down in the unfolding of God's purposes, we have an advantage over them. They may possibly have heard things which we have never heard: we certainly have seen things which they never saw. In each case, we are bound to enquire, which of these two is likely to preponderate?

30. Their consensus in expecting a personal Antichrist, is, I own, a weighty point. There was nothing in their peculiar eircumstances or temperament, which prevented them from interpreting all that is here said as a personification, or from allegorizing it, as others have done since. This fact gives that interpretation a historical weight, the inference from which it is difficult to escape. The subject of the coming of Antichrist must have been no uncommon one in preaching and in converse, during the latter part of the first, and the second century. That no cchoes of the apostolic sayings on the matter should have reached thus far, no savour of the first outpouring of interpretation by the Spirit penetrated through the next generation, can hardly be conceived. So far, I feel, the patristic view carries with it some claim to our acceptance.

31. The next important point, the interpretation of $\tau \delta$ κατέχον and δ κατέχων, rests, I would submit, on different grounds. Let us for a moment grant, that by the former of these words was imported the temporal political power, and by the latter, he who wielded it. Such being the case, the concrete interpretation most likely to be adopted by the Fathers would be, the Roman Empire, which existed before their eyes as that political power. But we have seen that particular power pass away, and be broken up: and that very passing away has furnished us with a key to the prophecy, which they did not possess.

32. On the $\mu\nu\sigma\tau\eta\rho\iota\sigma\tau\eta\varsigma$ around $\eta\varsigma$, as has been seen, they are divided: but even were it otherwise, their concrete interpretations are just those things in which we are not inferior to them, but rather superior. The prophecy has since their time expanded its action over a wide and continually increasing historie field: it is for us to observe what they could not, and to say what it is which could be thus described,—then at work, ever since at work, and now at work; and likely to issue in that concentration and revelation of evil which shall finally take place.

33. On looking onward to the next great class of interpretations, that which makes the man of sin to be the Papal power, it cannot be doubted, that there are many and striking points of correspondence with the language of the prophecy in the acts and professions of those who have successively held that power. But on the other hand it cannot be disguised that, in several important particulars, the prophetic requirements are very far from being fulfilled. I will only mention two, one subjective, the other objective. In the characteristic of ver. 4, the Pope does not and never did fulfil the prophecy. Allowing all the striking coincidences with the latter part of the verse which have been so abundantly adduced, it never can be shewn that he fulfils the former part, nay so far is he from it, that the abject adoration of and submission to $\lambda_{\epsilon\gamma\delta\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\iota}$ $\theta_{\epsilon\sigma\ell}$ and $\sigma_{\epsilon\beta\delta\sigma\mu}$ are has ever been one of his most notable peculiarities¹. The second objection, of an external and historical character, is even more decisive. If the Papacy be Antichrist, then has the manifestation been made, and endured now for nearly 1500 years,

34. The same remarks will apply even more forcibly to all those minor interpretations which I have enumerated above. None of them exhausts the sense of the prophecy: and the taking any one of them to be that which is here designated, would shew the failure of the prophecy, not its fulfilment: for they have been and have passed away, and the Lord is not yet come.

35. We are thus directed to a point of view with regard to the prophecy, of the following kind. The aropos, in the full prophetic sense, is not yet come. Though 1800 years later, we stand, with regard to him, where the Apostle stood: the day of the Lord not present, and not to arrive until this man of sin be manifested: the $\mu\nu\sigma\tau\eta\rho\iota\sigma\nu$ $\tau\eta$ s arouas still working, and much advanced in its working : the Katéyov still hindering. And let us ask ourselves, what does this represent to us? Is it not indicative of a state in which the avoua is working on, so to speak, underground, under the surface of things,-gaining, throughout these many ages, more expansive force, more accumulated power, but still hidden and unconcentrated? And might we not look, in the progress of such a state of things, for repeated minor embodiments of this avoμía, -- avoμοι, and artíχριστοι πολλοί (1 John ii. 18) springing up here and there in different ages and countries, - the amooraoía going onward and growing,-just as there were of Christ Himself frequent types and minor embodiments before He came in the flesh? Thus in the Papacy, where so many of the prophetic features are combined, we see as it were a standing embodiment and type of the final Antichrist-in the remarkable words of Gregory the Great, the 'præcursor Antichristi:' and in Nero, and every persecutor as he arose, and Mohammed, and Napoleon, and many other forms and agencies of evil, other more transient types and examples of him. We may, following out the parallelism, contrast the Papacy, as a type of Antichrist, having its false priesthood, its pretended sacrifices, its 'Lord God' the Pope, with that standing Jewish hierarchy of God's own appointing, and its High Priesthood by which our Lord was prefigured : and the other and personal types, with those typical persons, who appeared under the old covenant, and set forth so plainly the character and sufferings and triumphs of the Christ of God.

36. According then to this view, we still look for the man of sin, in the fulness of the prophetic sense, to appear, and that immediately before the coming of the Lord. We look for him as the final and central embodiment of that $dvo\mu ia$, that resistance to God and God's law, which has been for these many centuries fermenting under the crust of human society, and of which we have already witnessed so many partial and tentative cruptions. Whether he is to be expected personally, as one individual embodiment of evil, we would not dogmatically pronounce : still we would not forget, that both ancient interpretation, and the world's history, point this way. Almost all great movements for good or for ill have been gathered to a head by one central personal agency. Nor is there any reason to suppose that this will be otherwise in the coming ages. In proportion as the general standard of mental cultivation is raised, and man made equal with man, the ordinary power of genius is diminished, but its extraordinary power is increased; its reach deepened, its hold rendered more firm. As men become familiar with the achievements and the exercise of talent, they learn to despise and disregard its daily examples, and to be more independent of mere men of ability; but they only become more completely in the power of gigantic intellect, and the slaves of pre-eminent and unapproachable talent. So that there seems nothing improbable, judging from these considerations, and from the analogy of the partial manifestations which we have already seen, that the centralization of the antichristian power, in the sense of this prophecy, may ultimately take place in the person of some one of the sons of men.

37. The great $\dot{a}\pi\sigma\sigma\tau\alpha\sigma'a$ again will receive a similar interpretation. Many signal apostasies the world and the Church have seen. Continually, those are going out from us, who were not of us. Unquestionably the greatest of these has been the Papacy, that counterfeit of Christianity, with its whole system of falsehood and idolatry. But both it, and Mohammedanism, and Mormonism, and the rest, are but tentamina and foreshadowings of that great final apostasy ($\dot{\eta} \ \dot{a}\pi\sigma\sigma\tau\alpha\sigma'a$), which shall deceive, if it were possible, even the very elect.

38. The particulars of ver. 4 we regard variously, according as the äroµos is a person or a set of persons, with however every inclination to take them literally of a person, giving out these things respecting himself, and sitting as described in the temple of God, whether that temple is to be taken in the strictly literal signification of the Jerusalem-temple (to which we do not incline), or as signifying a Christian place of assembly, the gathering-point of those who have sought the fulfilment of the divine promise of God's presence,—and so called the temple of God.

39. The $\kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon' \chi \omega r$ and $\kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon' \chi \omega r$, the one the general hindrance, the other the person in whom that hindrance is summed up, are, in this view, very plain. As the Fathers took them of the Roman Empire and Emperor, standing and ruling in their time, repressing the outbreak of sin and enormity,—so have we been taught by history to widen this view, and understand them of the fabric of human polity, and those who rule that polity, by which the great up-bursting of godlessness is kept down and hindered. I say, we have been taught this by history : seeing that as often as these outbursts have taken place, their course and devastations have been checked by the knitting up again of this fabric of temporal power: seeing that this power, wherever the seeds of evil are most plentiful, is strictly a coercive power, and that there only is its restraining hand able to be relaxed, where the light and liberty of the Gospel are shed abroad: seeing that especially has this temporal power ever been in conflict with the Papacy, restraining its pretensions, modifying its course of action, witnessing more or less against its tyranny and its lies.

40. The explanation of the $\mu\nu\sigma\tau\eta\rho\iota\sigma\tau$ $\tau\eta\varsigma$ $d\nu\rho\mu\iota\sigma\varsigma$ has been already anticipated. It, the $d\nu\rho\mu\iota\sigma$, in the hearts and lives, in the speeches and writings of men, is and ever has been working in hidden places, and only awaits the removal of the hindering power to issue in that concentrated manifestation of δ $d\nu\rho\mu\sigma\varsigma$, which shall usher in the times of the end.

41. When this shall be, is as much hidden from us, as it was from the Apostles themselves. This may be set, on the one hand, as a motive to caution and sobriety; while on the other let us not forget, that every century, every year, brings us nearer to the fulfilment,—and let this serve to keep us awake and watchful, as servants that wait for the coming of their Lord. We are not to tremble at every alarm; to imagine that every embodiment of sin is the final one, or every falling away the great apostasy: but to weigh, and to discern, in the power of Him, by whom the prince of this world is judged: that whenever the Lord comes He may find us ready,—ready to stand on His side against any, even the final concentration of His adversaries; ready, in daily intercourse with and obedience to Him, to hail His appearance with joy.

42. If it be said, that this is somewhat a dark view to take of the prospects of mankind, we may answer, first, that we are not speculating on the phænomena of the world, but we are interpreting God's word: secondly, that we believe in One in whose hands all evil is working for good,—with whom there are no accidents nor failures,—who is bringing out of all this struggle, which shall mould and measure the history of the world, the ultimate good of man and the glorification of His boundless love in Christ: and thirdly, that no prospect is dark for those who believe in Him. For them all things are working together for good; and in the midst of the struggle itself, they know that every event is their gain; every apparent defeat, real success; and even the last dread conflict, the herald of that victory, in which all who have striven on God's part shall have a glorious and everlasting share.

CHAPTER VII.

ON THE PASTORAL EPISTLES.

THEIR AUTHORSHIP.

1. THERE never was the slightest doubt in the ancient Church, that the Epistles to Timothy and Titus were canonical, and written by St. Paul.

(a) They are contained in the Peschito Syriac version, which was made in the second century.

 (β) In the fragment on the Canon of Scripture first edited by Muratori and thence known by his name, generally ascribed to the end of the second century or the beginning of the third (see Routh, Reliq. Sacr. i. pp. 397 ff.), we read, among the Epistles of St. Paul "verum ad Philemonem una, et ad Timotheum duas (duæ?) pro affectu et dilectione, in honore tamen Ecclesiæ catholicæ, in ordinatione ecclesiasticæ disciplinæ, sanctificatæ sunt."

(γ) Irenzus begins his preface, p. 1, with a citation of 1 Tim. i. 4, adding $\kappa a \theta \omega_s \delta d\pi \delta \sigma \tau \sigma \lambda \delta s \phi \eta \sigma \omega$: in iv. 16. 3, p. 246, cites 1 Tim. i. 9: in ii. 14. 7, p. 135, 1 Tim. vi. 20: in iii. 14. 1, p. 201, quotes 2 Tim. iv. 9–11:

"Lucas . . . quoniam non solum prosecutor, sed ct co-operarius fuerit apostolorum, maxime autem Pauli, et ipse autem Paulus manifestavit in epistolis, dicens: Demas me dereliquit et abiit Thessalonicam, Crescens in Galatiam, Titus in Dalmatiam: Lucas est mecum solus:"

In i. 16. 3, p. 83, quotes Titus iii. 10:

ούς ὁ Παῦλος ἐγκελεύεται ἡμῖν μετὰ μίαν καὶ δευτέραν νουθεσίαν παραιτεῖσθαι.

And again, with ώς καὶ Παῦλος ἔφησεν, iii. 3. 4, p. 177. In iii. 2. 3, p. 176, he says, τούτου τοῦ Λίνου Παῦλος ἐν ταῖς πρὸς Τιμόθεον ἐπιστολαῖς μέμνηται.

(\delta) Clement of Alexandria, Strom. ii. 11 [52], p. 457 P.:

These are only a few of the direct quotations in Clement.

(c) TERTULLIAN:

De præscript. hæret. c. 25, vol. ii. p. 37: "Et hoc verbo usus est Paulus ad Timotheum: O Timothee, depositum custodi (1 Tim. vi. 20). Et rursum: Bonum depositum serva" (2 Tim. i. 14). And he further proceeds to quote 1 Tim. i. 18, vi. 13 ff.; 2 Tim. ii. 2 (twice).

Ib. c. 6, p. 18: "Nec diutius de isto, si idem est Paulus, qui ct alibi hæreses inter carnalia crimina enumerat scribens ad Galatas, et qui Tito³ suggerit, hominem hæreticum post primam correptionem recusandum, quod perversus sit ejusmodi et delinquat, ut a semetipso damnatus." (Tit. iii. 10, 11.)

Adv. Marcion. v. 21, p. 524, speaking of the Epistle to Philemon : "Soli huic epistolæ brevitas sua profuit, ut falsarias manus Marcionis evaderet. Miror tamen, cum ad unum hominem literas factas receperit, quod ad Timotheum duas et unam ad Titum de ecclesiastico statu compositas recusaverit."

(ζ) Eusebius includes all three Epistles among the universally confessed canonical writings (όμολογούμενα), H. E. iii. 25.

It is useless to cite further testimonies, for they are found every where, and in abundance.

2. But we must notice various allusions, more or less clear, to these Epistles, which occur in the earlier Fathers.

³ Dr. Davidson, Introd. iii. 109, omits the word 'Tito,' as it would appear, from inadvertency.

Ib. ch. 9, p. 1013: où yàp tàv vũv ηγάπησαν alῶva. See 2 Tim. iv. 10⁵. (κ) HEGESIPPUS (end of Cent. II.), as cited by Eusebius (H. E. iii. 32), says that, while the iερòs τῶν ἀποστόλων χορόs remained, the Church πορθένος καθαρὰ καὶ ἀδιάφθορος ἔμεινεν: but that, after their withdrawal, and that of those who had been ear-witnesses of inspired wisdom, ή σύστασις τῆς ἀθέου πλάνης began, διὰ τῆς τῶν ἐτεροδιδασκάλων ἀπάτης: who, as no apostle was left, γυμνῆ λοιπὸν ῆδη τῆ κεφαλῆ τῷ τῆς ἀληθείας κηρύγματι τὴν ψευδώνυμον γνῶσιν ἀντικηρύττειν ἐπεχείρουν. See 1 Tim. vi. 3, 20⁶.

- (λ) ΑΤΗΕΝΛGORAS (end of Cent. II.): Legat. pro Christianis 16, p. 291: πάντα γὰρ ὁ θεός ἐστιν αὐτὸς αὐτῷ, φῶς ἀπρόςιτον: 1 Tim. vi. 16.
- (μ) ΤΗΕΟΡΗΙΙΟΝ ΟΓ ΑΝΤΙΟCΗ (end of Cent. II.): ad Autolyc. iii. 14, p. 389: έτι μην και περί του ύποτάσσεσθαι άρχαις και έξουσίαις, και εύχεσθαι περί αυτών, κελεύει ήμας θείος λόγος όπως ήρεμον και ήσύχιον βίον διάγωμεν. 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2. Tit. iii. 1⁷.
 - ii. p. 95 (Lardner): διὰ ύδατος καὶ λουτροῦ παλιγγενεσίας πάντας τοὺς προςιόντας τῆ ἀληθεία.
- (ν) To these may be added Justin Martyr (middle of Cent. II.), Dial. c. Tryph. c. 47, p. 143: ή χρηστότης καὶ ή φιλανθρωπία τοῦ θεοῦ. Tit. iii. 4.

3. Thus the Pastoral Epistles seem to have been from the earliest times known, and continuously quoted, in the Church. It is hardly possible to suppose that the above coincidences are all fortuitous. The only other hypothesis on which they can be accounted for, will be treated further on.

4. Among the Gnostic heretics, however, they did not meet with such universal acceptance. Clement of Alexandria, Strom. ii. 11 (p. 457 P.), after having quoted 1 Tim. vi. 20 ff., adds: $i\pi \partial \tau a i \tau \eta s \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \gamma \chi \delta \mu \epsilon v o t \eta s$ $\phi \omega v \eta s$, of $d\pi \partial \tau \omega v a i \rho \epsilon \sigma \epsilon \omega v \tau d s$ $\pi \rho \partial s$ $T_{\mu} \delta \ell \epsilon o v d \theta \epsilon \tau o \delta \sigma \omega v \epsilon d \epsilon \sigma \sigma \delta d s$. Tertullian (see above, under ϵ) states that Marcion rejected from his eanon (recusaverit) the Epistles to Timothy and Titus. And Jerome, Prol. ad Titum, vol. vii. p. 685, says: "Licet non sint digni fide qui fidem primam irritam fecerunt, Marcionem loquor et Basilidem et omnes hærcticos qui vetus laniant testamentum: tamen eos aliqua ex parte ferremus, si saltem in novo continerent manus suas, et non auderent Christi (ut ipsi jactitant) boni Dei Filii, vel Evangelistas violare, vel Apostolos ut enim de cæteris Epistolis taceam, de quibus quicquid contrarium suo dogmati viderant, eraserunt, nonnullas integras repudiandas crediderunt, ad Timotheum videlicet utramque, ad Hebræos, et ad Titum, quam nunc conamur exponere . . . Sed Tatianus, Encratitarum patriarches, qui et ipse nonnullas Pauli Epistolas repudiavit, hanc vel maxime, id est, ad Titum, Apostoli pronunciandam eredidit, parvipendens Marcionis et aliorum, qui cum eo in hac parte consentiunt, assertionem." This last fact, Tatian's acceptance of the Epistle to Titus, Huther thinks may be accounted for by the false teachers in that Epistle being more expressly designated as Jews, ch. i. 10, 14; iii. 9.

5. From their time to the beginning of the present century, the authenticity of the Pastoral Epistles remained unquestioned. At that time, Schmidt (J. E. C.) first, and afterwards Schleiermacher (in his Letters to Gass, 1807) attacked the genuineness of the first Epistle to Timothy: which on the other hand, was defended by Planck, Wegscheider, and Beckhaus. It soon began however to be seen, that from the elose relation of the three Epistles, the arguments which Schleiermacher had used against one, would apply to all: and accordingly first Eichhorn, and then not so decidedly De Wette, denied the genuineness of all three.

6. The latter Commentator, in his Introduction (1826), combined the view of Schleiermacher, that 1 Tim. was a compilation from the other two, with that of Eichhorn, that all three were not the genuine productions of St. Paul: but at the same time allowed to the consent of the Church in all ages so much weight, that his view influenced only the historical origin of the Epistles, not their credit and authority.

7. This mere negative ground was felt to be unsatisfactory: and Eichhorn soon put forth a positive hypothesis, that the Epistles were written by some disciple of St. Paul, with a view of collecting together his oral injunctions respecting the constitution of the Church. This was adopted by Schott, with the further conjecture that St. Luke was the author.

8. The defenders of the Epistles ⁶ found it not difficult to attack such a position as this, which was raised on mere conjecture after all : and Baur, on the other hand, remarked ⁹, "We have no sufficient restingplace for our critical judgment, as long as we only lay down that the Epistles are not Pauline : we must have established some positive data which transfer them from the Apostle's time into another age." Accordingly, he himself has laboured to prove them to have been written in the time of the Marcionite heresy; and their author to have been one who, not having the ability himself to attack the Gnostic positions, thought to uphold the Pauline party by putting his denunciations of it into the mouth of the Apostle.

⁹ Die sogenn. Pastoralbriefe des Apostel Paulus aufs neue Kritisch untersucht, 1835. 73]

9. This view of Baur's has been, however, very far from meeting with general adoption, even among the impugners of the genuineness of our The new school of Tübingen have alonc accepted it with Epistles. favour. De Wette himself, in the later editions of his Handbuch (I quote from that of 1847), though he is stronger than ever against the three Epistles, docs not feel satisfied with the supposed settling of the question by Baur. He remarks, "According to Baur, the Epistles were written after the middle of the second century, subsequently to the appearance of Marcion and other Gnostics. But, inasmuch as the allusions to Marcion, on which he builds this hypothesis, are by no means certain, and the testimonies of the existence of the Pastoral Epistles stand in the way (for it is hardly probable that the passage in Polycarp, c. 4 [see above, par. 2], can have been the original of 1 Tim. vi. 7, 10): it seems that we must assume an earlier date for the Epistles,---somewhere about the end of the first century 1.""

10. With this last dictum of De Wette's, adverse criticism has resumed its former uncertain footing, and is reduced to the mere negative complexion which distinguished it before the appearance of Baur's first work. We have then merely to consider it as a negation of the Pauline origin of the Epistles, and to examine the grounds on which that negation rests. These may be generally stated under the three following heads:

- I. The historical difficulty of finding a place for the writing of the three Epistles during the lifetime of St. Paul:
- II. The apparent contact with various matters and persons who belong to a later age than that of the Apostles : and
- III. The peculiarity of expressions and modes of thought, both of which diverge from those in St. Paul's recognized Epistles.

11. Of the first of these I shall treat below, in the section "On the times and places of writing." It may suffice here to anticipate merely the general conclusion to which I have there come, viz. that they belong to the latest period of our Apostle's life, after his liberation from the imprisonment of Acts xxviii. Thus much was necessary in order to our discussion of the two remaining grounds of objection.

12. As regards objection II., three subordinate points require notice :

(a) The heretics, whose views and conduct are opposed in all three Epistles.

It is urged that these belonged to later times, and their tenets to systems undeveloped in the apostolic age. In treating of the various places where they are mentioned, I have endeavoured to shew that the tenets and practices predicated of them will best find their explanation by regarding them as the marks of a state of transition between Judaism,

13. The traces of Judaism in the heretics of the Pastoral Epistles are numerous and unmistakcable. They professed to be $\nu \rho \mu o \delta i \delta \delta \sigma \kappa a \lambda o i$ (1 Tim. i. 7): commanded $\delta \pi \epsilon \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta a i \beta \rho \omega \mu \delta \tau \omega \nu$ (ib. iv. 3): are expressly stated to consist of $\mu \delta \lambda i \sigma \tau a$ oi $\epsilon \kappa \pi \epsilon \rho i \tau o \mu \eta \delta s$ (Tit. i. 10): caused men $\pi \rho o \delta \epsilon \chi \epsilon \iota \nu$ Iov $\delta a \kappa \epsilon o \delta s$ (ib. 14): brought in $\mu \delta \chi a \delta s$ volukás (ib. iii. 9).

14. At the same time, the traces of incipient Gnostieism are equally apparent. It has been thought best, in the notes on 1 Tim. i. 4, to take that acceptation of $\gamma \epsilon \nu \epsilon a \lambda o \gamma' a \iota$, which makes it point to those lists of Gnostie emanations, so familiar to us in their riper forms in after history: in ch. iv. 3 ff., we find the seeds of Gnostic dualism; and though that passage is prophetic, we may fairly conceive that it points to the future development of symptoms already present. In ib. vi. 20, we read of $\psi \epsilon v \delta \omega \nu \mu o s \gamma \nu \omega \sigma i s$, an expression which has furnished Baur with one of his strongest objections, as betraying a post-apostolie origin³. But, granted the reference to gnosis, Gnostically so called, neither Baur nor any one else has presumed to say, when the term began to be so used. For our present purpose, the reference is clear. Again in 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18, we read of some of them explaining away the resurrection of the body, saying that it has passed already,—a well-known error of the Gnostics (see note in loc.).

15. It remains that we should shew two important facts, which may influence the reader's mind concerning both the nature of these hereties, and date of our Epistles. First, they are not the Judaizers of the Apostle's earlier Epistles. These his former opponents were strong upholders of the law and its requirements : identify themselves plainly with the 'certain men from Judæa' of Acts xv. 1, in spirit and tenets : uphold circumeision, and would join it with the faith in Christ. Then as we proceed, we find them retaining indeed some of their former features, but having passed into a new phase, in the Epistle to the Colossians. There, they have added to their Judaizing tenets, various excressences of will-worship and superstition : are described no longer as persons who would be under the law and Christ together, but as vain,

² See 1 Tim. i. 3, 4, 6, 7, 19; iv. 1-7; vi. 3 ff.; 2 Tim. ii. 16-23; iii. 6-9, 13; iv. 4; Titus i. 10, 11, 14, 16; iii. 9, 10, - and notes.

³ Baur makes much of the passage of Hegesippus quoted above, par. 2, κ , in which he says that this $\psi \epsilon \upsilon \delta \omega \nu$. $\gamma \nu \omega \sigma \iota s$ first became prevalent after the Apostles were removed from the Church. On this he founds an argument that our Epistle could not have appeared till that time. But the passage as compared with the Epistle proves the very reverse. The $\psi \epsilon \upsilon \delta \omega \nu$. $\gamma \nu$. was secretly working in the Apostles' time, and for that reason this caution was given : but after their time it began to be openly professed, and came forth, as Hegesippus says, with uncovered head. puffed up in their carnal mind, not holding the Head (see Prolegg. to Col., § ii. 10 ff.).

16. The same character, or even a further step in their course, seems pointed out in the Epistle to the Philippians. There, they are not only Judaizers, not only that which we have already seen them, but $\kappa \acute{\nu} \epsilon \epsilon$, $\kappa \kappa \kappa \acute{o} \epsilon \rho \gamma \acute{a} \pi a$, $\mathring{\eta} \kappa \kappa \pi \pi \tau \sigma \mu \acute{\eta}$: and those who serve God in the power of His Spirit are contrasted with them. And here (Phil. iii. 13), we seem to find the first traces becoming perceptible of the heresy respecting the resurrection in 2 Tim. ii. 18, just as the preliminary symptoms of unsoundness on this vital point were evident in 1 Cor. xv.

17. If now we pass on to our Epistles, we shall find the same progress from legality to superstition, from superstition to godlessness, in a further and riper stage. Here we have more decided prominence given to the abandonment of the foundations of life and manners displayed by these false teachers. They had lost all true understanding of the law itself (1 Tim. i. 7): had repudiated a good conscience (ib. 19): are hypocrites and liars (ib. iv. 2), branded with the foul marks of moral crime (ib.): are of corrupt minds, using religion as a means of bettering themselves in this world (ib. vi. 5. Tit. i. 11): insidious and deadly in their advances, and overturning the faith (2 Tim. ii. 17): proselytizing and victimizing foolish persons to their ruin (ib. iii. 6 ff.): polluted and unbelieving, with their very mind and conscience defiled (Tit. i. 15): confessing God with their mouths, but denying Him in their works, abominable and disobedient, and for every good work worthless (ib. i. 16).

18. I may point out to the reader, how well such advanced description of these persons suits the character which we find drawn of those who are so held up to abhorrence in the later of the Catholic Epistles, and in the Epistle to the Hebrews: how we become convinced, as we pass down the apostolic age, that all its heresies and false teachings must be thought of as gradually converging to one point,—and that point, godlessness of life and morals. Into this, Judaism, once so rigid, legality, once so apparently conscientious, broke and erumbled down. I may state my own conviction, from this phænomenon in our Pastoral Epistles, corroborated indeed by all their other phænomena, that we are, in reading them, necessarily placed at a point of later and further development thau in reading any other of the works of St. Paul.

19. The second important point as regards these heretics is this: as they are not the Judaizers of former days, so neither are they the Gnostics of later days. Many minor points of difference might be insisted on, which will be easily traced out by any student of church history: I will only lay stress on one, which is in my mind fundamental and decisive.

20. The Gnosticism of later days was eminently anti-judaistic. The Jewish Creator, the Jewish law and system, were studiously held in contempt and abhorrence. The whole system had migrated, so to speak, from its Jewish standing-point, and stood now entirely over against it. And there can be little doubt, whatever other causes may have cooperated to bring about this change, that the great cause of it was the break-up of the Jewish hierarchy and national system with the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple. The heretical speculations had, so to speak, no longer any mooring-place in the permanence of the old law, and thus, rapidly drifting away from it, soon lost sight of it altogether, and learned to despise it as a thing gone by. Then the oriental and Grecian elements, which had before been in a state of forced and unnatural fusion with Judaism, cast it out altogether, retaining only those traces of it which involved no recognition of its peculiar tenets.

21. The false teachers then of our Epistles seem to hold a position intermediate to the Apostle's former Judaizing adversaries and the subsequent Gnostic hereties, distinct from both, and just at that point in the progress from the one form of error to the other, which would suit the period subsequent to the Epistle to the Philippians, and prior to the destruction of Jerusalem. There is therefore nothing in them and their characteristics, which can east a doubt upon the genuineness of the Epistles.

22. (b) [See above, par. 12], the ecclesiastical order subsisting when they Baur and De Wette charge the author of these Epistles were written. with hierarchical tendencies. They hold that the strengthening and developing of the hierarchy, as we find it aimed at in the directions here given, could not have been an object with St. Paul. De Wette confines himself to this general remark: Baur goes further into detail. In his earlier work, on the Pastoral Epistles, he asserts, that in the genuine Pauline Epistles there is found no trace of any official leaders of the Churches (it must be remembered that with Baur, the genuine Epistles are only those to the Galatians, Corinthians, and Romans): whereas here those Churches are found in such a state of organization, that επίσκοποι, πρεσβύτεροι, and διάκονοι are significantly put forward : πρεσ-Búrepol according to him being the name for the collective body of church-rulers, and inioxonos for that one of them who was singly entrusted with the government. In his later work (' Paulus u.s.w.'), he maintains that the Gnosties, as the first heretics proper, gave the first occasion for the foundation of the episcopal government of the Churches. But even granting this, the very assumption would prove the earlier origin of our Epistles: for in them there is not the slightest trace of episcopal government, in the later sense. Baur's own explanation of enioxonos differs entirely from that later sense.

23. The fact is, that the form of Church government disclosed in our Epistles is of the simplest kind possible. The diaconate was certainly, in some shape or other, coæval with the very infancy of the Church: and the presbyterate was almost a necessity for every congregation. No Church could subsist without a government of some kind: and it would be natural that such an one as that implied in the presbyterate should arise out of the circumstances in every case.

24. The directions also which are here given, are altogether of an ethical, not of an hierarchical kind. They refer to the selection of men, whose previous lives and relations in society afford good promise that they will discharge faithfully the trust committed to them, and work faithfully and successfully in their office. The fact that no such directions are found in the other Epistles, is easily accounted for: partly from the nature of the case, seeing that he is here addressing persons who were entrusted with this selection, whereas in those others no such matter is in question: partly also from the late date of these letters, the Apostle being now at the end of his own course,—seeing dangerous heresies growing up around the Church, and therefore anxious to give those who were to succeed him in its management, direction how to consolidate and secure it.

25. Besides which, it is a pure assumption that St. Paul could not, from his known character, have been anxious in this matter. In the Acts, we find him ever most careful respecting the consolidation and security of the churches which he had founded: witness his journeys to inspect and confirm his converts (Acts xv. 36; xviii. 23), and that speech uttered from the very depth of his personal feeling and desire, to the presbytery of the Ephesian Church (ib. xx. 18-38).

26. We must infer then, that there is nothing in the hints respecting Church-government which these Epistles contain, to make it improbable that they were written by St. Paul towards the close of his life.

27 (c) [See above, par. 12.] The institution of widows, referred to 1 Tim. v. 9 ff., is supposed to be an indication of a later date. I have discussed, in the note there, the description and standing of these widows: holding them to be not, as Schleiermacher and Baur, deaconesses, among whom in later times were virgins also, known by the name of $\chi \eta \rho ai$ ($\tau \dot{\alpha} s \pi a \rho \theta \dot{\epsilon} v o s \tau \dot{\alpha} s \lambda \epsilon \gamma o \mu \dot{\epsilon} v a s \chi \eta \rho a s$, Ign. ad Smyrn. e. 13, p. 717), but as De W., al., an especial band of real widows, set apart, but not yet formally and finally, for the service of God and the Church. In conceiving such a class to have existed thus early, there is no difficulty: indeed nothing could be more natural: we already find traces of such a class in Acts ix. 41; and it would grow up and require regulating in every portion of the Church. On the $\dot{\epsilon} v \dot{\delta} s \dot{\epsilon} v \rho v \eta \dot{\epsilon}$, which is supposed to make another difficulty, see note, 1 Tim. iii. 2.

28. Other details belonging to this objection II. are noticed and replied to in treating of the passages to which they refer. They are founded for the most part in unwarranted assumptions regarding the apostolic age and that which followed it: in forgetting that there must have been a blending of the one age into the other during that later section of the former and earlier section of the latter, of both of which we know so little from primitive history: that the forms of error which we find prevalent in the second century, must have had their origin and their infancy in an age previous: and that here as elsewhere, 'the child is father of the man:' the same characteristics, which we meet full-grown both in the heretics and in the Church of the second century, must be expected to occur in their initiative and less consolidated form in the latter days of the Apostles and their Church '.

29. We come now to treat of objection III., -- the peculiarity of expressions and modes of thought, both of which diverge from those in St. Paul's recognized Epistles. There is no denying that the Pastoral Epistles do contain very many peculiar words and phrases, and that the process of thought is not that which the earlier Epistles present. Still, our experience of men in general, and of St. Paul himself, should make us cautious how we pronounce hastily on a phænomenon of this kind. Men's method of expression changes with the circumstances among which they are writing, and the persons whom they are addressing. Assuming the late date for our Epistles which we have already mentioned, the circumstances both of believers and false teachers had materially changed since most of those other Epistles were written. And if it be said that on any hypothesis it cannot have been many years since the Epistles of the imprisonment, we may allege on the other hand the very great difference in subject, the fact that these three are addressed to his companions in the ministry, and contain directions for Church management, whereas none of the others contain any passages so addressed or of such character.

30. Another circumstance here comes to our notice, which may have modified the diction and style at least of these Epistles. Most of those others were written by the hand of an amanuensis; and not only so, but probably with the co-operation, as to form of expression and putting out of the material, of either that amanuensis or some other of his fellow-helpers. The peculiar character of these Pastoral Epistles forbids us from imagining that they were so written. Addressed to dear friends and valued colleagues in the ministry, it was not probable that he should have written them by the agency of others. Have we then, assuming that he wrote them with his own hand, any points of comparison in the other Epistles? Can we trace any resemblance to their peculiar diction in portions of those other Epistles which were undoubtedly or probably also autographic?

31. The first unquestionably autographic Epistle which occurs to us is that to Philemon: which has also this advantage for comparison, that it is written to an individual, and in the later portion of St. Paul's life. And it must be confessed, that we do not find here the resemblance of which we are in search. The single word $\epsilon \check{u}_{\chi\rho\eta\sigma\tau\sigma\sigma}$ is the only point of contact between the unusual expressions of the two. It is true that the occasion and subject of the Epistle to Philemon were totally distinct from those of any of the Pastoral Epistles: almost all their $\check{a}\pi a\xi \lambda_{e\gamma} \acute{o}\mu \epsilon v a$ are from the very nature of things excluded from it. Still I must admit that the dissimilarity is striking and not easily accounted for. I would not disguise the difficulty which besets this portion of our subject: I would only endeavour to point out in what direction it ought to guide our inference from the phænomena.

32. We have found reason to believe (see note on Gal. vi. 11) that the Epistle to the Galatians was of this same autographic character. Allowing for the difference of date and eircumstances, we may expect to find here some points of peculiarity in common. In both, false teachers are impugned: in both, the Apostle is eager and fervent, abrupt in expression, and giving vent to his own individual feelings. And here we do not seek in vain⁵. We find several unusual words and phrases common only to the two or principally occurring in them. Here again, however, the total difference of subject throughout a great portion of the Epistle to the Galatians prevents any very great community of expression.

33. We have a very remarkable addition to the Epistle to the Romans in the doxology, ch. xvi. 25, 26; appended to it, as we have there in-

⁵ I set down a list of the principal similarities which I have observed between the diction of the Gal. and the Pastoral Epp.:

- 1. τοῦ δόντος ἑαυτὸν περὶ κ.τ.λ., Gal. i. 4: compare ὁ δοὺς ἑαυτὸν ἀντίλυτρον ὑπὲρ κ.τ.λ., 1 Tim. ii. 6; ὑς ἑδωκεν ἑαυτὸν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, Tit. ii. 14. These are the only places where this expression is used of our Lord.
- εἰs τοὺs aἰῶνas τῶν aἰ∡νων, Gal. i. 5: compare the same expression in 1 Tim. i.
 17, 2 Tim. iv. 18. The only other places where it occurs is in the last Epistle of the imprisonment, Phil. iv. 20.
- 3. προέκοπτον, Gal. i. 14, found in 2 Tim. ii. 16, iii. 9, 13, and Rom. xiii. 12 only in St. Paul.
- ἰδοὺ ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ, Gal. i. 20: the expression ἐν τ. θ. occurs elsewhere frequently in St. Paul, but in this asseverative sense is found only in the Past. Epp.: 1 Tim. v. 21, vi. 13, 2 Tim. ii. 14 (κυρίου), iv. 1.
- 5. στύλος, Gal. ii. 9 : in St. Paul, 1 Tim. iii. 15 only.
- 6. ἀνόητοι, Gal. iii. 1 : in St. Paul (Rom. i. 14), 1 Tim. vi. 9, Tit. iii. 3 only.
- 7. μεσίτης, Gal. iii. 20: in St. Paul (three times in Hebrews), 1 Tim. ii. 5 only.
- S. έλπίs, objective, Gal. v. 5 : compare Tit. ii. 13.
- 9. πνεύματι άγεσθε, Gal. v. 18: construction, with άγομαι (Rom. viii. 14), 2 Tim. iii. 6 only.
- 10. καιρφ ίδίφ, Gal. vi. 9 : found 1 Tim. ii. 6, vi. 15, Tit. i. 3 only. 80]

ferred, in later times by the Apostle himself, as a thankful effusion of his fervent mind. That addition is in singular accordance with the general style of these Epistles. We may almost conceive him to have taken his pen off from writing one of them, and to have written it under the same impulse $^{\circ}$.

34. There remain, however, many expressions and ideas not elsewhere found. Such are πιστός ό λόγος, 1 Tim. i. 15; iii. 1; iv. 9: 2 Tim. ii. 11: Tit. iii. 8,-a phrase dwelling much at this time on the mind of the writer, but finding its parallel at other times in his favourite $\pi \iota \sigma \tau \delta s$ ό θεός, and the like: cf. 1 Cor. i. 9; x. 13: 2 Cor. i. 18: 1 Thess. v. 24: 2 Thess. iii. 3:-εὐσέβεια, εὐσεβῶς, 1 Tim. ii. 2; iii. 16; iv. 7; vi. 11: 2 Tim. iii. 5, 12: Tit. i. 1; ii. 12,-of which we can only say that occurring as it does in this peculiar sense only here and in 2 Peter, we should be disposed to ascribe its use to the fact of the word having at the time become prevalent in the Church as a compendious term for the religion of Christians :--σώφρων and its derivatives, 1 Tim. ii. 9, 15; iii. 2: 2 Tim. i. 7: Tit. i. 8; ii. 2, 4 ff., 12,-a term by no means strange to the Apostle's other writings, cf. Rom. xii. 3: 2 Cor. v. 13, but probably coming into more frequent use as the necessity for the quality itself became more and more apparent in the settlement of the Church (cf. also 1 Pet. iv. 7) :- byins, byiaireir, of right doctrine, 1 Tim. i. 10; vi. 3: 2 Tim. i. 13; iv. 3: Tit. i. 9, 13; ii. 1 f., 8,-one of the most curious peculiarities of our Epistles, and only to be ascribed to the prevalence of the image in the writer's mind at the time, arising probably from the now apparent tendency of the growing heresics to corrupt the springs of moral action :--μῦθοι, 1 Tim. i. 4; iv. 7: 2 Tim. iv. 4: Tit. i. 14,-to be accounted for by the fact of the heretical legends having now assumed such definite shape as to deserve this name, cf. also 2 Pet. i.

ver. 25. εὐαγγέλιόν μου : (Rom. ii. 16) 2 Tim. ii. 8 only.

κήρυγμα (1 Cor. i. 21, ii. 4, xv. 14): 2 Tim. iv. 17, Tit. i. 3 only.

xpovois alwelois : 2 Tim. i. 9, Tit. i. 2 only.

ver. 26. $\phi a \nu \epsilon \rho \omega \theta \dot{\epsilon} \tau \tau \sigma s$ in this sense, St. Paul elsewhere, but also 1 Tim. iii. 16, 2 Tim. i. 10, Tit. i. 3.

κατ' ἐπιταγήν . . . θεοῦ, (1 Cor. vii. 6, 2 Cor. viii. 8,) 1 Tim. i. 1, Tit. i. 3 only.

μόνφ σοφφ θεφ : 1 Tim. i. 17, var. readd.

I may add to these instances, those of accordance between the Pastoral Epistles and the speech of St. Paul in Acts xx.: viz.

δρόμος, found only Acts xiii. 25, xx. 24, 2 Tim. iv. 7. περιποιείσθαι, Paul, only Acts xx. 28, 1 Tim. iii. 13. iματισμός, Paul, only Acts xx. 33, 1 Tim. ii. 9. iπιθυμέω, with a gen., only Acts xx. 33, 1 Tim. iii. 1. λόγοι τοῦ κυρίου, Acts xx. 35, 1 Tim. vi. 3. αντιλαμβάνεσθαι, Paul, only Acts xx. 35, 1 Tim. vi. 2. for προςέχειν, with a dative, see next paragraph.

16 :- ζητήσεις, 1 Tim. i. 4; vi. 4: 2 Tim. ii. 23: Tit. iii. 9,-which expression, if not exactly applied to erroncous speculations, is yet used elsewhere of disputes about theological questions; cf. Acts xv. 2; xxv. 20 (John iii. 25); the difference of usage is easily accounted for by the circumstances :— $i\pi_i\phi_{a'}$ instead of $\pi_{a\rho}$ ovoria, 1 Tim. vi. 14 : 2 Tim. iv. 1, 8: Tit. ii. 13,-which has a link uniting it to 2 Thess. ii. 8, and may have been, as indeed many others in this list, a word in familiar use among the Apostle and his companions, and so used in writing to them : -δεσπότης, for κύριος, in the secular sense of master, 1 Tim. vi. 1, 2: 2 Tim. ii. 21: Tit. ii. 9,-which is certainly remarkable, St. Paul's word being rupus, Eph. vi. 5, 9: Col. iii. 22; iv. 1,-and of which I know no explanation but this possible one, that the Eph. and Col. being written simultaneously, and these three also near together, there would be no reason why he might not use one expression at one time and the other at another, seeing that the idea never occurs again in his writings :- dereisolai, 1 Tim. v. 8: 2 Tim. ii. 12 f.; iii. 5: Tit. i. 16; ii. 12.-common to our Epistles with 2 Pet., 1 John, and Jude, but never found in the other Pauline writings; and of which the only account that can be given is, that it must have been a word which came into use late as expressing apostasy, when the fact itself became usual, being taken from our Lord's own declarations, Matt. x. 33, &c. :-παραιτείσθαι, 1 Tim. iv. 7; v. 11: 2 Tim. ii. 23: Tit. iii. 10,-a word the links of whose usage are eurious. It is confined to St. Luke and St. Paul and the Epistle to the Hebrews. We have it thrice in the parable of the great supper, Luke xiv. 18, 19: then in the answer of Paul to Festus, in all probability made by himself in Greck, Acts xxv. 11: and Heb. xii. 19, 25 bis. We may well say of it, that the thing introduced the word: had the Apostle had occasion for it in other Epistles, he would have used it: but he has not (the same may be said of yerealoyia, 1 Tim. i. 4: Tit. iii. 9;- ματαιόλογος, -yia, 1 Tim. i. 6: Tit. i. 10;-κενοφωνίαι, 1 Tim. vi. 20: 2 Tim. ii. 16;-λογομαχίαι, -είν, 1 Tim. vi. 4: 2 Tim. ii. 14;-παραθήκη, 1 Tim. vi. 20: 2 Tim. i. 12, 14) :-σώτηρ, spoken of God,-1 Tim. i. 1; ii. 3; iv. 10: Tit. i. 3; ii. 10, common also to Luke (i. 47) and Jude (25): the account of which seems to be, that it was a purely Jewish devotional expression, as we have it in the Magnificat, -- and not thus absolutely used by the Apostles, in their special proclamation of the Son of God in this character ;- we may observe that St. Jude introduces it with the limitation δια Ίησοῦ χρ. τοῦ κυρίου ήμῶν;-but in familiar writing one to another, when there was no danger of the mediatorship of Jesus being forgotten, this true and noble expression seems still to have been usual: $-\beta \epsilon \beta \eta \lambda_{0S}$, 1 Tim. i. 9; iv. 7; vi. 20: 2 Tim. ii. 16,-common only to Heb. (xii. 16),—an epithet interesting, as bringing with it the fact of the progress of heresy from doctrine to practice, as also does avooios, 1 Tim. i. 9; 82]

2 Tim. iii. 2:-διαβεβαιοῦσθαι, 1 Tim. i. 7: Tit. iii. 8, a word but slightly differing in meaning, and in its composition with diá (a natural addition in later times), from $\beta \epsilon \beta \alpha \iota o \vartheta \nu$, which is a common expression with our Apostle, Rom. xv. 8: 1 Cor. i. 6, 8: 2 Cor. i. 21: Col. ii. 7 (Heb. ii. 3; xiii. 9) :- προςέχειν, with a dat., 1 Tim. i. 4; iii. 8; iv. 1, 13: Tit. i. 14,-found also frequently in St. Luke, Luke xii. 1; xvii. 3; xxi. 34: Acts v. 35; viii. 6, 10, 11; xvi. 14: xx. 28 (Paul), and Heb. ii. 1; vii. 13: 2 Pet. i. 19:-a word testifying perhaps to the influence on the Apostle's style of the expressions of one who was so constantly and faithfully his companion :--ύπομιμνήσκειν, 2 Tim. ii. 14: Tit. iii. 1 (2 Pet. i. 12: 3 John 10: Jude 5) :- a word naturally coming into use rather as time drew on, than "in the beginning of the Gospel ." -- άποτρέπεσθαι, έκτρ., 2 Tim. iii. 5: 1 Tim. i. 6; v. 15; vi. 20: 2 Tim. iv. 4 (Heb. xii. 13),-words owing their use to the progress of heresy; which may be said also of doroxeiv, 1 Tim. i. 6; vi. 21: 2 Tim. ii. 18,and of Tupouofai, 1 Tim. iii. 6; vi. 4: 2 Tim. iii. 4:-&c. &c.

35. There seems no reason why any of the above peculiarities of diction should be considered as imperilling the authenticity of our Epistles. The preceding paragraph will have shewn, that of many of them, some account at least may be given: and when we reflect how very little we know of the circumstances under which they were used, it appears far more the part of sound criticism to let such difficulties stand unsolved, under a sense that we have not the clue to them, than at once and rashly to pronounce on them, as indicative of a spurious origin.

36. Another objection brought by De Wette against our Epistles seems to me to make so strikingly and decisively for them, that I cannot forbear giving it in his own words before commenting upon it: "In the composition of all three Epistles we have this common peculiarity,that from that which belongs to the object of the Epistle, and is besides for the most part of general import, the writer is ever given to digress to general truths, or so-called common-places (1 Tim. i. 15; ii. 4-6; iii. 16; iv. 8-10: 2 Tim. i. 9 f.; ii. 11-13, 19-21; iii. 12, 16: Tit. ii. 11-14; iii. 3-7), and that even that which is said by way of contradiction or enforcing attention, appears in this form (1 Tim. i. 8-10; iv. 4 f.; vi. 6-10: 2 Tim. ii. 4-6: Tit. i. 15). With this is combined another peculiarity common to them, that after such digressions or general instructions, the writer's practice is to recur, or finally to appeal to and fall back on previous exhortations or instructions given to his correspondent (1 Tim. iii. 14 f.; iv. 6, 11; vi. 2, 5 [ree.]: 2 Tim. ii. 7, 14; iii. 5: Tit. ii. 15; iii. 8)." In commenting on this, I would ask, what could be more natural than both these phænomena, under the circumstances, supposing St. Paul their author? Is it not the tendency of an instructor writing to his pupil to make these compendious references to truths well known and established between them? Would not this especially be the case, as age drew on, and affectionate remembrance took the place of present and watchful instruction? We have hardly a stronger evidence for the authenticity of our Epistles, than our finding them so exactly corresponding with what we might expect from Paul the aged towards his own sons in the faith. His restless energies are still at work : we see that the erouvanwous will keep him toiling to the end in his oikovouía: but those energies have changed their complexion: they have passed from the dialectic character of his former Epistles, from the wonderful capacity of intricate combined ratiocination of his subsequent Epistles, to the urging, and repeating, and dilating upon truths which have been the food of his life: there is a resting on former conclusions, a stating of great truths in concentrated and almost rhythmical antithesis, a constant citation of the 'temporis acti,' which lets us into a most interesting phase of the character of the great Apostle. We see here rather the succession of brilliant sparks, than the steady flame: burning words indeed and deep pathos, but not the flower of his firmness, as in his discipline of the Galatians, not the noon of his bright warm eloquence, as in the inimitable Psalm of Love (1 Cor. xiii.).

37. We may also notice, as I have pointed out in the notes on 1 Tim. i. 11 ff., a habit of going off, not only at a word, or into some collateral subject, as we find him doing in all his writings, but on the mention of any thing which reminds him of God's mercies to himself, or of his own sufferings on behalf of the Gospel, into a digression on his own history, or feelings, or hopes. See 1 Tim. i. 11 ff.; ii. 7: 2 Tim. i. 11 ff.; iii 9, 10; iii. 10 f.; iv. 6 ff. These digressions do not occur in the Epistle to Titus, perhaps on account of the less intimate relation which subsisted between him and the Apostle. I cannot help considering them also as deeply interesting, betokening, as I have there expressed it in the note, advancing age, and that faster hold of individual habits of thought, and mannerisms, which characterizes the decline of life.

38. De Wette brings another objection against our Epistles, which seems to me just as easily to bear urging on the other side as the last. It is, the constant moral reference of all that is here said respecting the faith: the idea that error is ever combined with evil conscience, the true faith with good conscience. From what has been already said, it will be seen how naturally such a treatment of the subject sprung out of the progress of heresy into ethical corruption which we have traced through the later part of the apostolic age: how true all this was, and how necessary it was thus to mark broadly the line between that faith, which was the only guarantee for purity of life, and those perversions of it, which led downwards to destruction of the moral sense and of practical virtue. 39. When however in his same paragraph (Allgem. Bemerkungen üb. die Pastoralbriefe, p. 117 c) he assumes that the writer gives a validity to moral desert, which stands almost in contradiction to the Pauline doctrines of grace, and eites 1 Tim. ii. 15; iii. 13; iv. 8; vi. 18 ff.: 2 Tim. iv. 8, to confirm this,—I own I am quite unable to see any inconsistency in these passages with the doctrine of grace as laid down, or assumed, in the other Epistles. See Rom. ii. 6-10: 1 Cor. iii. 14; ix. 17, 25; xv. 58: Phil. i. 19, and many other places, in which the foundation being already laid of union with Christ by faith, and salvation by His grace, the carrying on and building up of the man of God in good works, and reward according to the measure of the fruits of the Spirit, are quite as plainly insisted on as any where in these Epistles.

40. De Wette also finds what he calls, 'an apology for the law, and an admission of its possessing an ethical use,' in 1 Tim. i. 8. In my notes on that passage, I have seen reason to give it altogether a different bearing: but even admitting the fact, I do not see how it should be any more inconsistent with St. Paul's measure of the law, than that which he says of it in Rom. vii. And when he objects that the universalism of these Epistles (1 Tim. ii. 4; iv. 10; Tit. ii. 11), although in itself Pauline, does not appear in the same polemical contrast, as e. g. in Rom. iii. 29,—this seems very trifling in fault-finding: nothing on the contrary can be more finely and delicately in accordance with his former maintenance against all impugners of God's universal purpose of salvation to all mankind, than that he should, even while writing to one who did not doubt of that great truth, be constant to his own habit of asserting it.

41. There are many considerations pressed by the opponents of the Pauline authorship, which we can only mention and pass by. Some of them will be found incidentally dealt with in the notes : with others the student, who has hitherto followed the course of these remarks, will know how himself to deal. As usual, the similarities to, as well as discrepancies from, the other Epistles, are adduced as signs of spuriousness⁷. The three Epistles, and especially the first to Timothy, are charged with poverty of sentiment, with want of connexion, with unworthiness of the Apostle as author. On this point no champion of the Epistles could so effectually defeat the opponents, as they have defeated themselves. Schleiermacher, holding 1 Tim. to be compiled out of the other two, finds it in all these respects objectionable and below the mark : Baur will not concede this latter estimate, and De Wette charges Schleiermacher with having failed to penetrate the sense of the writer, and found faults, where a more thorough exposition must pronounce a more favourable judgment. These differences may well serve to strike out the argument, and indeed all such purely subjective estimates, from the realms of biblical criticism.

⁷ Huther gives a list of parallels against which this objection has been brought, and I transcribe it, that the reader may judge and refute for binself: 1 Tim. i. 12—14, as compared with 1 Cor. xv. 9, 10: 1 Tim. ii. 11, 12, with 1 Cor. xiv. 34, 35: 2 Tim. i. 3—5, with Rom. i. 8 ff.: ii. 5, with 1 Cor. ix. 24: ii. 6, with 1 Cor. ix. 7 ff.: ii. 8, with Rom. i. 3: ii. 11, with Rom. vi. 8: ii. 20, with Rom. ix. 21: iii. 2 ff., with Rom. i. 29 ff.: iv. 6, with Phil. ii. 17: Tit. i. 1—4, with Rom. i. 1 ff.

42. A word should be said on the smaller, but not less striking indications of genuineness, which we here find. Such small, and even trifling individual notices, as we here meet with, can hardly have proceeded from a forger. Of course a careful falsarius may have taken care to insert such, as would fall in with the known or supposed state of the Apostle himself and his companions at the time: a shrewd and skilful one would invent such, as might further any views of his own, or of the Churches with which he was connected: but I must say I do not eovet the judgment of that critic, who can ascribe such a notice as that of 2 Tim. iv. 13, $\tau \delta \nu \phi \epsilon \lambda \delta \nu \eta \nu \delta \nu d\pi \epsilon \lambda i \pi \sigma \nu \delta \nu \pi a \rho \lambda \delta \mu \epsilon \mu \beta \rho \delta \nu a$, to either the caution or the skill of a forger. What possible motive there could be for inserting such minute particulars, unexampled in the Apostle's other letters, founded on no incident in history, tending to no result,—might well baffle the acutest observer of the phænomena of falsification to declare.

43. A concession by Baur himself should not be altogether passed over. St. Paul in his farewell discourse, Acts xx. 29, 30, speaks thus: $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{\omega}$ olda dri $\epsilon\dot{i}s\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\dot{v}\sigma\sigma\tauai$ $\mu\epsilon\dot{r}\dot{a}$ $\tau\dot{\eta}\nu$ dat $\dot{\xi}\nu$ $\mu\sigma\nu$ $\lambda\dot{\nu}\kappa\sigmai$ $\beta a\rho\epsilon\hat{i}s$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{s}$ $\dot{\nu}\mu\hat{a}s$ $\mu\dot{\eta}$ $\phi\epsilon\iota\dot{\delta}\phi\mu\epsilon\nu\sigmai$ roû $\pi\sigma\mu\mu\nu\dot{\epsilon}\sigma$, $\kappa\dot{a}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\xi}$ $\dot{\nu}\mu\dot{\omega}\nu$ abr $\omega\nu$ dvart $\eta\sigma\sigma\tauai$ $a\nu\delta\rho\epsilon s$, $\lambda a\lambda\sigma\dot{\nu}\tau\epsilon s$ $\delta\iota\epsilon\sigma\tau\rho a\mu\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu a$ roû $\dot{a}\pi\sigma\sigma\pi\hat{a}\nu$ roùs $\mu a\theta\eta\tau\dot{a}s$ $\dot{\sigma}\pi\dot{c}\omega$ $\dot{\epsilon}a\nu\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$. Baur confesses that here the defenders of the Epistles have firm ground to stand on. "Here we see," he continues, "the Apostle anticipating just what we find more in detail in the Pastoral Epistles." But then he proceeds to set aside the validity of the inference, by quietly disposing of the farewell discourse, as written "post eventum." For those who look on that discourse very differently, his concession has considerable value.

44. I would state then the general result to which I have come from all these considerations :

- 1. External testimony in favour of the genuineness of our Epistles is so satisfactory, as to suggest no doubt on the point of their universal reception in the earliest times.
- 2. The objections brought against the genuineness by its opponents, on internal grounds, are not adequate to set it aside, or even to raise a doubt on the subject in a fair-judging mind.

45. I therefore rest in the profession of the Epistles themselves, and the universal belief of Christians, that they were VERITABLY WRITTEN BY ST. PAUL⁸.

^{*} I have preferred in this section giving those considerations which influence most 86]

SECTION II.

TIME AND PLACE OF WRITING.

1. A difficult problem yet remains: to assign, during the life of the Apostle, a time for the writing, which will suit the phænomena of these Epistles.

2. It will have been abundantly seen by what has preceded, that I cannot consent to place them in any portion of St. Paul's apostolic labours recorded in the Acts. All the data with which they themselves furnish us, are against such a supposition. And most of all is the state of heresy and false teaching, as indicated by their common evidence. No amount of ingenuity will suffice to persuade us, that there could have been during the long sojourn of the Apostle at Ephesus in Acts xix., such false teachers as those whose characters have been examined in the last section. No amount of ingenuity again will enable us to conceive a state of the Church like that which these Epistles disclose to us, at any time of that period, extending from the year 54 to 63, during which the other Epistles were written. Those who have attempted to place the Pastoral Epistles, or any of them, in that period, have been obliged to overlook all internal evidence, and satisfy themselves with fulfilling the requirements of external circumstances.

3. It will also be seen, that I eannot consent to separate these Epistles widely from one another, so as to set one in the earlier, and the others in the later years of the Apostle's ministry. On every account, they must stand together. Their style and diction, the motives which they furnish, the state of the Church and of heresy which they describe, are the same in all three: and to one and the same period must we assign them.

4. This being so, they necessarily belong to the latest period of the Apostle's life. The concluding notices of the Second Epistle to Timotheus forbid us from giving an earlier date to that, and consequently to the rest. And no writer, as far as I know, has attempted to place that Epistle, supposing it St. Paul's, at any date except the end of his life⁹.

my own mind, to entering at full length on all the bearings of the subject. The reader will find a very good and terse compendium of the objections and their answers in Conybcare and Howson, vol. ii. pp. 657-660, edn. 2: and a full and elaborate discussion of both in Dr. Davidson's Introduction to the N. T. vol. iii. pp. 100-153. That portion of Dr. Davidson's work is very well and thoroughly done, in which he shews the insuperable difficulties which beset the hypothesis of a scholar of St. Paul having forged the Epistles at the end of the first century, as De Wette supposes. Huther's and Wiesinger's Einleitungen also contain full and able discussions of the whole question; especially the latter.

5. The question then for us is, What was that latest period of his life? Is it to be placed at the end of the first Roman imprisonment, or are we to conceive of him as liberated from that, and resuming his apostolic labours?

6. Let us first try the former of these hypotheses. It has been adopted by chronologers of considerable note: lately, by Wieseler and Dr. Davidson. We approach it, laden as it is with the weight of (to us) the insuperable objection on internal grounds, stated above. We feel that no amount of chronological suitableness will induce us complacently to put these Epistles in the same age of the Church with those to the Ephesians, Colossians, and Philippians. But we would judge the hypothesis here on its own mercly external grounds.

7. In order for it to stand, we must find some occasion, previous to the imprisonment, when St. Paul may have left Timotheus at Ephesus, himself proceeding to Macedonia. And this time must of course be subsequent to St. Paul's first visit to Ephesus, Acts xviii. 20, 21, when the Church there was founded, if indeed it can be said to have been then founded. On his departure then, he did not go into Macedonia, but to Jerusalem; which alone, independently of all other considerations, excludes that occasion ¹.

8. His second visit to Ephesus was that long one related in Acts xix., the reveria of Acts xx. 31, the ern Suo of xix. 10, which latter, however, need not include the whole time. When he left Ephesus at the end of this time, after the tumult, $\epsilon \xi \eta \lambda \theta \epsilon \pi o \rho \epsilon \upsilon \theta \eta \nu a \iota \epsilon is \tau \eta \nu Ma \kappa \epsilon \delta o \nu (a \nu, which$ seems at first sight to have a certain relation to πορευόμενος είς Μακε-Soviar of 1 Tim. i. 3. But on examination, this relation vanishes: for in Acts xix. 22, we read that, intending to go to Jerusalem by way of Macedonia and Achaia, he sent off from Ephesus, before his own departure, Timotheus and Erastus: so that he could not have left Timotheus behind in Ephesus. Again, in 1 Tim. iii. 14, he hopes to return to Ephcsus shortly. But we find no trace of such an intention, and no attempt to put it in force, in the history. And besides, even if Timotheus, as has sometimes been thought from 1 Cor. xvi. 11, did return to Ephesus before the Apostle left it, and in this sense might have been left there on his departure, we must then suppose him to have almost immediately deserted the charge entrusted to him; for he is again, in the autumn of nzeus, who is mentioned with reprobation, apparently for the first time, in 2 Tim. ii. 17 f., — in a further stage of reprobation, judged and condemned, in 1 Tim. i. 20. He forgets that, the two Epistles being according to him forgeries, with no real circumstances whatever as their basis, such reasoning is good for nothing. He is in fact arguing from their genuineness to their spuriousness.

¹ This was however supposed by Calvin to have been the time of writing 1 Tim.: on ch. iii. 14,—"omnino enim sperabat se venturum: ut venisse probabile est, si hanc epistolam scripsit quo tempore Phrygiam peragrabat: sicuti refert Lucas Act. xviii. 23." 57, with St. Paul in Macedonia in 2 Cor. i. 1, and in Corinth in the winter (Rom. xvi. 21), and returned to Asia thence with him, Acts xx. 4: and thus, as Wieseler remarks, the whole scope of our Epistle, the ruling and ordering of the Ephesian Church during the Apostle's absence, would be defeated. Grotius suggested, and Bertholdt adopted, a theory that the Epistle might have been sent on St. Paul's return from Achaia to Asia, Acts xx. 4, and that Timotheus may, instead of remaining in Troas on that occasion, as related Acts xx. 5, have gone direct to Ephesus, and there received the Epistle. But, apart from all other difficulties², how exceedingly improbable, that such an Epistle should have preceded only by a few weeks the farewell discourse of Acts xx. 18—35, and that he should have sent for the clders to Miletus, though he himself had expressed, and continually alluded to in the Epistle, an intention of visiting Ephesus shortly!

9. These difficulties have led to a hypothesis that the journey from Ephesus is one unrecorded in the Acts, occurring during the long visit of Acts xix. That during that time a journey to Corinth did take place, we have inferred from the data furnished in the Epistles to the Corinthians: see Prolegg. to Vol. II. ch. iii. \S v. During that journey, Timotheus may have been left there. This conjecture is at least worthy of full discussion: for it seems to fulfil most of the external requirements of the first Epistle.

10. Mosheim, who was its originator, held the journey to Greece to have taken place very early in the three years' visit to Ephesus, and to have lasted nine months,—thus accounting for the difference between the two years and three months of Acts xix. 8, 10, and the three years of Acts xx. 31. Wieseler³, however, has so far regarded the phænomena of the Epistle itself, as to shew that it would be very unlikely that the false teachers had early in that visit assumed such consistency and acquired such influence: and besides, we must assume, from the intimation in 1 Tim. i. 3 ff., that the false teachers had already gained some notoriety, and were busy in mischief, before the Apostle's departure.

11. Schrader⁴, the next upholder of the hypothesis, makes the Apostle remain in Ephesus up to Acts xix. 21, and then undertake the journey there hinted at, through Macedonia to Corinth, thence to Crete (where he founded the Cretan Churches and left Titus), to Nicopolis in Cilicia (see below, in the Prolegg. to Titus: sending from thence the first Epistle to Timotheus and that to Titus), Antioch, and so through Galatia back to Ephesus. The great and fatal objection to this hypothesis is, the insertion in Acts xix. 21–23 of so long a journey, lasting, according to

³ Ib. p. 296 f.

Schrader himself³, two years (from Easter 54 to Easter 56), not only without any intimation from St. Luke, but certainly against any reasonable view of his text, in which it is implied, that the intention of ver. 21 was not then carried out, but afterwards, as related in ch. xx. 1 ff.

12. Wieseler himself has adopted, and supported with considerable ingenuity, a modified form of Schrader's hypothesis. After two years' teaching at Ephesus, the Apostle, he thinks, went, leaving Timotheus there, on a visitation tour to Macedonia, thence to Corinth, returning by Crete, where he left Titus, to Ephesus. During this journey, either in Macedonia or Achaia, he wrote 1 Tim.,—and after his return to Ephesus, the Epistle to Titus: 2 Tim. falling towards the end of his Roman imprisonment, with which, according to Wieseler, his life terminated. This same hypothesis Dr. Davidson adopts, rejecting however the unrecorded visit to Corinth, which Wieseler inweaves into it: and placing the voyage to Crete during the same Ephesian visit, but separate from this to Macedonia.

13. It may perhaps be thought that some form of this hypothesis would be unobjectionable, if we had only the first Epistle to Timotheus to deal with. But even thus, it will not bear the test of thorough examination. In the first place, as held by Davidson, in its simplest form, it inserts into the Apostle's visit to Ephesus, a journey to Macedonia and back entirely for the sake of this Epistle . Wieseler's form of the hypothesis avoids, it is true, this gratuitous supposition, by connecting the journey with the unrecorded visit to Corinth : but is itself liable to these serious objections (mentioned by Huther, p. 17), that 1) it makes St. Paul write the first Epistle to the Corinthians a very short time after the unrecorded visit to Corinth, which is on all accounts improbable. And this is necessary to his plan, in order to give time for the false teachers to have grown up at Ephesus:-2) that we find the Apostle, in his farewell discourse, prophetically anticipating the arising of evil men and seducers among the Ephesians: whereas by any placing of this Epistle during the three years' visit, such must have already arisen, and drawn away many 7. 3) The whole character of the first Epistle shews that it belongs, not to a very brief and casual absence of this kind, but to one originally intended to last some time, and not unlikely to be prolonged beyond expectation. The hope of returning very soon (iii. 14)

14. Thus we see that, independently of graver objections, independently also of the connexion of the three Epistles, the hypothesis of Wieseler and Davidson does not suit the requirements of this first Epistle to Timotheus. When those other eonsiderations come to be brought again into view,—the necessarily later age of all three Epistles, from the heresies of which they treat, from the Church development implied by them, from the very diction and form of thought apparent in them,—the impossibility, on any probable psychological view of St. Paul's character, of placing writings, so altogether diverse from the Epistles to the Corinthians, in the same period of his life with them,—I am persuaded that very few students of Scripture will be found, whose mature view will approve any form of the above hypothesis.

15. It will not be necessary to enter on the various other subhypotheses which have been made, such as that of Paulus, that the first Epistle was written from Cæsarea; &c. &e. They will be found dealt with in Wieseler and Davidson, and in other introductions.

16. Further details must be sought in the following Prolegomena to each individual Epistle. I will mention however two decisive notices in 2 Tim., which no advocate of the above theory, or of any of its modifications, has been able to reconcile with his view. According to that view, the Epistle was written at the end of the first (and only) Roman imprisonment. In ch. iv. 13, we have directions to Timotheus to bring a cloak and books which the Apostle left at Troas. In ib. ver. 20 we read "Erastus remained in Corinth, but Trophimus left I in Miletus sick." To what these notices point, I shall consider further on: I would now only call the reader's attention to the following facts. Assuming as above, and allowing only the two years for the Roman imprisonment, -the last time he was at Troas and Miletus was six years before (Acts xx. 6, 17); on that occasion Timotheus was with him: and he had repeatedly seen Timotheus since: and, what is insuperable, even supposing these difficulties overcome, Trophimus did not remain there, for he was at Jerusalem with St. Paul at the time of his apprehension, Acts xxi. 29. It will be easily seen by reference to any of the supporters of the one imprisonment, how this point presses them. Dr. Davidson tries to account for it by supposing Trophimus to have sailed with St. Paul from Cæsarea in Acts xxvii., and to have been left at Myra, with the understanding that he should go forward to Miletus, and that under this impression, the Apostle could say Trophimus I left at Miletus $(a\pi\epsilon\lambda\iota\pi\sigma\nu$ $i\nu$ M $\iota\lambda\eta\tau\omega$) sick. Any thing lamer, or more self-refuting, can hardly be conceived: not to mention, that thus also some years had since elapsed, and that the above insuperable objection, that Timotheus had been with him since, and that Trophimus the Ephesian must have been talked of by them, remains in full force.

17. The whole force then of the above considerations, as well of the internal character of the Epistles, as of their external notices and requirements, compels us to look, for the time of their writing, to a period subsequent to the conclusion of the history in the Acts, and consequently, since we find in them the Apostle at liberty, subsequent to his liberation from the imprisonment with which that history concludes. If there were no other reason for believing that he was thus liberated, and undertook further apostolic journeyings, the existence and phænomena of these Epistles would enforce such a conclusion upon us. I had myself, some years since, on a superficial view of the Pauline ehronology, adopted and vindicated the one-imprisonment theory ": but the further study of these Epistles has altogether broken down my former fabric. We have in them, as I feel satisfied any student who undertakes the comparison will not fail to discover, a link uniting St. Paul's writings with the Second Epistle of Peter and with that of Jude, and the Epistles of St. John: in other words, with the later apostolic age. There are two ways only of solving the problem which they present: one of these is, by believing them to be spurious; the other, by ascribing them to a period of St. Paul's apostolic agency subsequent to his liberation from the Roman imprisonment of Acts xxviii. ultt.

18. The whole discussion and literature of this view, of a liberation and second imprisonment of our Apostle, would exceed both the scope and the limits of these Prolegomena. It may suffice to remind the reader, that it is supported by an ancient tradition by no means to be lightly set aside: and to put before him the principal passages of early ecclesiastical writers in which that tradition is mentioned.

19. Eusebius, H. E. ii. 22, relates thus :

καὶ Λουκῶς δὲ ὁ τὰς πράξεις τῶν ἀποστόλων γραφη παραδούς, ἐν τούτοις κατέλυσε τὴν ἱστορίαν, διετίαν ὅλην ἐπὶ τῆς Ῥώμης τὸν Παῦλον ἄνετον διατρίψαι, καὶ τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγον ἀκωλύτως κηρύξαι ἐπισημηνάμενος. τότε μὲν οἶν ἀπολογησάμενον, αἶθις ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ κηρύγματος διακονίαν λόγος ἔχει στείλασθαι τὸν ἀπόστολον, δεύτερον δ' ἐπιβάντα τῆ αὐτῆ πόλει, τῷ κατ' αὐτὸν τελειωθήναι μαρτυρίω. ἐν ῷ δεσμοῖς ἐχόμενος τὴν πρὸς Τιμόθεον δευτέραν ἐπιστολὴν συντάττει κ.τ.λ.

21. The fragment of Muratori on the canon contains the following passage ²:

"Lucas optime Theophile comprehendit quia sub præsentia ejus singula gerebantur, sicuti et semote passionem Petri evidenter declarat, sed profectionem Pauli ab urbe ad Spaniam proficiscentis . ."

This passage is enigmatical, and far from easy to interpret. But all that we need dwell on is, that the journey of St. Paul into Spain is taken as a fact; and in all probability, the word 'omittit' being supplied, the writer means to say, that St. Luke in the Acts does not relate that journey.

22. This liberation and second imprisonment being assumed, it will naturally follow that the First Epistle to Timotheus and that to Titus were written during the interval between the two imprisonments;—the second to Timotheus during the second imprisonment. We shall now proceed to enquire into the probable assignment and date of each of the three Epistles.

23. The last notice which we possess of the first Roman imprisonment, is the Epistle to the Philippians. There (i. 26) the Apostle evidently intends to come and see them, and (ii. 24) is confident that it will be before long. The same anticipation occurred before in his Epistle to Philemon (ver. 22). We may safely then ascribe to him the intention, in case he should be liberated, of visiting the Asiatic and the Macedonian Churches.

24. We suppose him then, on his hearing and liberation, which cannot have taken place before the spring of A.D. 63 (see chronological table in Prolegg. to Acts), to have journeyed Eastward: visiting perhaps Philippi, which lay on the great Egnatian road to the East, and passing into Asia. There, in accordance with his former desires and intentions, he would give Colossæ, and Laodicea, and Hierapolis, the benefit of his apostolic counsel, and confirm the brethren in the faith. And there perhaps, as before, he would fix his head-quarters at Ephesus. I would not however lay much stress on this, considering that there might well have been a reason for his not spending much time there, considering the cause which had driven him thence before (Acts xix.). But that he did visit Ephesus, must on our present hypothesis be assumed as a certain fact, notwithstanding his confident anticipation expressed in Acts xx. 25 that he should never see it again. It was not the first time that such anticipations had been modified by the event³.

25. It would be unprofitable further to assign, except by the most distant indications, his course during this journey, or his employment between this time and that of the writing of our present Epistles. One important consideration, coming in aid of ancient testimony, may serve as our guide in the uncertainty. The contents of our Epistles absolutely require as late a date as possible to be assigned them. The same internal evidence forbids us from separating them by any considerable interval, either from one another, or from the event which furnished their occasion.

26. Now we have traditional evidence well worthy of note, that our Apostle suffered martyrdom in the last year, or the last but one, of Nero. Euseb., Chron. anno 2083 (commencing October A.D. 67) says, "Neronis 13°. Nero ad cætera scelera persecutionem Christianorum primus adjunxit: sub quo Petrus et Paulus apostoli martyrium Romæ consummaverunt."

And Jerome, Catalog. Scriptorum Eeclesiasticorum (c. 5, vol. ii. p. 838), under Paulus, "Hic ergo, decimo quarto Neronis anno, eodem die quo Petrus, Romæ pro Christo eapite truncatus, sepultusque est in via Ostiensi, anno post passionem Domini tricesimo septimo."

27. I should be disposed then to agree with Conybeare and Howson in postponing both the occasions and the writing of the Pastoral Epistles to very near this date. The interval may possibly have been filled up, agreeably to the promise of Rom. xv. 24, 28, and the tradition of Clement of Rome (quoted above, par. 20), by a journey to Spain, the $\tau \epsilon \rho \mu a \tau \eta s \delta \dot{v} \sigma \epsilon \omega s$: or it may have been spent in Greece and Asia and the interjacent islands.

As we approach the confines of the known ground again furnished by our Epistles, we find our Apostle again at Ephesus. However the ³ Compare 2 Cor. v. 4, 5, with Phil. i. 23. Dr. Davidson (iii. pp. 16 ff.) lays great stress on the olda of Acts xx. 25, as implying certain apostolic foresight in the power of the Spirit, and argues thence that a subsequent visit to Ephesus cannot have taken place. For argument's sake, let it be so, and let us turn to Phil. i. 25, written, according to Dr. Davidson, at the close of the Roman imprisonment, from which he was not liberated but by death. There we read, olda or μevo wal $\pi a \rho a \mu evo$ $\pi \delta a i \tau \eta v \dot{\mu} u \dot{\nu}$ $\epsilon i \tau \tau \eta v \dot{\mu} u \dot{\nu}$ $\pi \rho o \kappa \sigma \eta v \kappa a \chi a \rho a v \tau \eta s \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$, ive $\tau \delta$ $\kappa a \delta \chi \eta \mu a \dot{\nu} \omega v \pi \epsilon \rho i \sigma \epsilon \dot{\omega} \eta \dot{\nu}$ $\epsilon i \sigma \tau \eta v \dot{\nu} \dot{\mu} \sigma v \dot{\nu}$ $\epsilon \mu o l dia \tau \eta s \dot{\mu} \eta s \pi a \rho o u \sigma i s a i A constant of the other is on one side is$ good on the other : and I do not see how Dr. Davidson can escape the force of his ownargument. He must take his choice, and give up one oida or the other. He hassurrendered the latter : why may not we the former ? intervening years had been spent, much had happened which had wrought changes on the Church, and on himself, since his last visit. Those heresies which were then in the bud, had borne bitter fruit. He had, in his own weak and shattered frame, borne about, for four or five more years of declining age, the dying of the Lord Jesus. Alienation from himself had been spreading wider among the Churches, and was embittering his life. Supposing this to have been in A.D. 66 or 67, and the 'young man Saul' to have been 34 or 35 at his conversion, he would not now be more than 64 or 65 : but a premature old age would be every way consistent with what we know of his physical and mental constitution. Four years before this he had affectionately pleaded his advancing years in urging a request on his friend Philemon (Philem. 9).

28. From Ephesus, leaving Timotheus there, he went into Macedonia (1 Tim. i. 3). It has been generally assumed, that the first Epistle was written from that country. It may have been so; but the words $\pi a \rho \epsilon \alpha \rho \sigma \rho \epsilon \rho \epsilon \alpha \rho$

29. Agreeably with the necessity of bringing the three Epistles as near as may be together, we must here place a visit to Crete in company with Titus, whom he left there to complete the organization of the Cretan Churches. From the indications furnished by that Epistle, it is hardly probable that those Churches were now founded for the first time. We find in them the same development of heresy as at Ephesus, though not the same ecclesiastical organization (cf. Tit. i. 10, 11; 15, 16; iii. 9, 11, with i. 5). Nor is the former circumstance at all unaccountable, even as combined with the latter. The heresy, being a noxious exerescence on Judaism, was flourishing independently of Christianity,-or at least required not a Christian Church for its place of sustenance. When such Church began, it was at once infected by the error. So that the Cretan Churches need not have been long in existence. From Tit. i. 5, they seem to have sprung up $\sigma \pi o \rho a \delta \eta v$, and to have been on this occasion included by the Apostle in his tour of visitation: who seeing how much needed supplying and arranging, left Titus there for that purpose (see further in Prolegg. to Titus, § ii.).

30. The Epistle to Titus, evidently written very soon after St. Paul left Crete, will most naturally be dated from Asia Minor. Its own 957 notices agree with this, for we find that he was on his way to winter at Nicopolis (ch. iii. 12), by which it is most natural to understand the well-known city of that name in Epirus⁴. And the notices of 2 Tim. equally well agree with such an hypothesis: for there we find that the Apostle had, since he last communicated with Timotheus, been at Milctus and at Troas, probably also at Corinth (2 Tim. iv. 13, 20). That he again visited Ephesus, is on every account likely: indeed, the natural inference from 2 Tim. i. 18 is, that he had spent some time (possibly of weakness or sickness—from the expression $\delta\sigma a \, \delta i\eta\kappa \delta r\eta\sigma\epsilon v$: but this inference is not necessary, see note there) at that city in the companionship of Timotheus, to whom he appeals to confirm what he there says of Onesiphorus.

31. We may venture then to trace out this his last journey as having been from Crete by Miletus, Ephesus, Troas, to Corinth (?): and thence (or perhaps direct by Philippi without passing up through Greece: or he may have gone to Corinth from Crete, and thence to Asia) to Nicopolis, where he had determined to winter (Tit. iii. 12). Nicopolis was a Roman colony (Plin. iv. 1 or 2: Tacit. Ann. v. 10), where he would be more sure against tumultuary violence, but at the same time more open to direct hostile action from parties plotting against him in the metropolis. The supposition of Mr. Conybeare (C. and H. ii. 573, edn. 2), that being known in Rome as the leader of the Christians, he would be likely, at any time after the fire in 64, to be arrested as implicated in causing it, is not at all improbable. In this case, as the crime was alleged to have been committed at Rome, he would be sent thither for trial (C. and H. ib. note) by the duumviri of Nicopolis.

32. Arrived at the metropolis, he is thrown into prison, and treated no longer as a person charged with matters of the Jewish law, but as a common criminal: $\kappa \alpha \kappa \sigma \pi a \theta \hat{\omega} \mu \epsilon \chi \rho \iota \delta \epsilon \sigma \mu \hat{\omega} \nu \hat{\omega} s \kappa \alpha \kappa \sigma \hat{\upsilon} \rho \gamma \sigma s$, 2 Tim. ii. 9. All his Asiatic friends avoided him, except Onesiphorus, who sought him out, and was not ashamed of his chain (2 Tim. i. 16). Demas,

It is very improbable that any of the comparatively insignificant places elsewhere called by this name is here intended. An enumeration of them will be found in Smith's Dict. of Geogr. as above. The only two which require mention are, 1) Nicopolis in Thrace, on the Nessus (Nukámalus $\dot{\eta}$ mepl Néσσυν, Ptol. iii. 11, 13), supposed by Chrysostom and Theodoret ($\dot{\eta}$ $\delta i N$. $\tau \hat{\eta} s \Theta \rho \dot{\mu} \kappa \eta s \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau l$, Chrys. : $\tau \hat{\eta} s \Theta \rho \dot{\mu} \kappa \eta s \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau l \nu \dot{\eta} N., \tau \hat{\eta} \delta \dot{\epsilon}$ Makedoría $\pi \epsilon \lambda \dot{a} (\epsilon_i, \text{Thdt.})$ to be here intended. This certainly may have been, for this Nicopolis is not, as some have objected, the one founded by Trajan, see Schrader, vol. i. p. 117: but it is hardly likely to have been indicated by the word thus absolutely put: 2) Nicopolis in Cilicia, which Schrader holds to be the place, to suit his theory of the Apostle having been (at a totally different time, see above, par. 11) on his way to Jerusalem.

I may mention that both Winer (RWB.) and Dr. Smith (Dict. of Geogr. as above : not in Bibl. Dict.) fall into the mistake of saying that St. Paul dates the Epis(le from Nicopolis. No such inference can fairly be drawn from ch. iii. 12. Crescens, and Titus had, for various reasons, left him. Tychicus he had sent to Ephesus. Of his usual companions, only the faithful Luke remained with him. Under these circumstances he writes to Timotheus a second Epistle, most likely to Ephesus (ii. 17; iv. 13), and perhaps by Tychicus, carnestly begging him to come to him before winter (iv. 21). If this be the winter of the same year as that current in Tit. iii. 12, he must have been arrested immediately on, or perhaps even before, his arrival at Nicopolis. And he writes from this his prison, expecting his execution ($i\gamma \omega \gamma \lambda \rho \eta \delta \eta \sigma \pi i \nu \delta \rho \mu a \lambda i \sigma \epsilon \omega s i \rho \delta s \tau \eta s i \mu \eta s i \nu \delta \rho$.

33. We hear, 2 Tim. iv. 16, 17, of his being brought up before the authorities, and making his defence. If in the last year of Nero, the Emperor was absent in Greece, and did not try him in person. To this may perhaps point the $\mu a \rho \tau \nu \rho \eta \sigma a s \epsilon \pi i \tau \omega \nu \eta \gamma \sigma \nu \mu \epsilon \nu \omega \nu$ of Clement of Rome (see above, par. 20): but it would be manifestly unwise to press an expression in so rhetorical a passage. At this his hearing, none of his friends was bold enough to appear with or for him: but his Christian boldness was sustained by Him in whom he trusted.

34. The second Epistle to Timotheus dates after this his first apology. How long after, we cannot say: probably some little time, for the expression does not seem to allude to a very recent occurrence.

35. After this, all is obscurity. That he underwent execution by the sword, is the constant tradition of antiquity, and would agree with the fact of his Roman citizenship, which would exempt him from death by torture. We have seen reason (above, par. 26) to place his death in the last year of Nero, i. e. late in A.D. 67, or A.D. 68. And we may well place the Second Epistle to Timotheus a few months at most before his death⁶.

CHAPTER VIII.

ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHEUS.

THE AUTHORSHIP, and TIME AND PLACE OF WRITING, have been already discussed: and much has been said on the style and diction of this in common with the other Pastoral Epistles. It only remains to consider, 1. The person to whom the Epistle was written: 2. Its especial occasion and object.

SECTION I.

TO WHOM WRITTEN.

1. TIMOTHEUS is first mentioned Acts xvi. 1 ff. as dwelling either in Derbe or Lystra ($\epsilon\kappa\epsilon$, after both places have been mentioned), but probably in the latter (see on Acts xx. 4, where $\Delta\epsilon\rho\betaa$ cos cannot be applied to Timotheus): at St. Paul's second visit to those parts (Acts ib. cf. xiv. 6 ff.). He was of a Jewish mother (Euniké, 2 Tim. i. 5) and a Gentile father (Acts xvi. 1, 3): and had probably been converted by the Apostle on his former visit, for he calls him his $\gamma\nu\eta\sigma$ iov $\tau\epsilon\kappa\nu$ iv π i $\sigma\tau\epsilon\iota$ (1 Tim. i. 2). His mother, and his grandmother (Lois, 2 Tim. i. 5), were both Christians,—probably also converts, from having been pious Jewesses (2 Tim. iii. 14, 15), during that former visit.

2. Though as yet young, Timotheus was well reported of by the brethren in Lystra and Iconium (Acts xvi. 2), and hence, forming as he did by his birth a link between Jcws and Greeks, and thus especially fitted for the exigencies of the time (Acts ib. ver. 4), St. Paul took him with him as a helper in the missionary work. He first circumcised him (ib. 3), to remove the obstacle to his access to the Jews.

3. The next time we hear of him is in Acts xvii. 14 ff., where he with Silas remained behind in Berœa on occasion of the Apostle being sent away to Athens by sca. From this we infer that he had accompanied him in the progress through Macedonia. His youth would furnish quite a sufficient reason why he should not be mentioned throughout the occurrences at Philippi and Thessalonica. That he had been at this latter place, is almost certain: for he was sent back by St. Paul (from Berœa, see Prolegg. to 1 Thess. § ii. 5 f.) to ascertain the state of the Thessalonian Church (1 Thess. iii. 2), and we find him rejoining the Apostle, with Silas, at Corinth, having brought intelligence from Thessalonica (1 Thess. iii. 6).

4. Hc remained with the Apostle at Corinth, and his name, together with that of Silas (Silvanus), appears in the addresses of both the Epistles to the Thessalonians, written (see Prolegg. to 1 Thess. § iii.) at Corinth. We have no express mention of him from this time till we find him "ministering" to St. Paul during the long stay at Ephesus (Acts xix. 22) : but we may fairly presume that he travelled with him from Corinth to Ephesus (Acts xviii. 18, 19), either remaining there with Priscilla and Aquila, or (which is hardly so probable) going with the Apostle to Jerusalem, and by Antioch through Galatia and Phrygia. From Ephesus (Acts xix. 22) we find him sent forward with Erastus to Macedonia and Corinth (1 Cor. iv. 17; xvi. 10: see on this whole visit, Vol. II. Prolegg. to 2 Cor. § ii. 4). He was again with St. Paul in Macedonia when he wrote the Second Epistle to the Corinthians (2 Cor. i. 1: Vol. II. Prolegg. ibid.). Again, in the winter following we find him in his company in Corinth, where he wrote the Epistle to the Romans (Rom. xvi. 21) : and among the number of those who, on his return to Asia through Macedonia (Acts xx. 3, 4), went forward and waited for the Apostle and St. Luke at Troas.

5. The next notice of him occurs in three of the Epistles of the first Roman imprisonment. He was with St. Paul when he wrote to the Colossians (Col. i. 1), to Philemon (Philem. 1), and to the Philippians (Phil. i. 1). How he came to Rome, whether with the Apostle or after him, we cannot say. If the former, we can only account for no mention of him being made in the narrative of the voyage (Acts xxvii., xxviii.) by remembering similar omissions elsewhere when we know him to have been in company, and supposing that his companionship was almost a matter of course.

6. From this time we know no more, till we come to the Pastoral Epistles¹. There we find him left by the Apostle at Ephesus to take care of the Church during his absence: and the last notice which we have in 2 Tim. makes it probable that he would set out (in the autumn of \triangle .D. 67?), shortly after receiving the Epistle, to visit St. Paul at Rome.

7. Henceforward, we are dependent on tradition for further notices. In Eus. H. E. iii. 42, we read $T_{\mu}\delta\theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma \gamma\epsilon \mu\eta\nu \tau\eta\varsigma \epsilon\nu$ 'E $\phi\epsilon\delta\sigma\psi \pi a\rho\sigma\kappa\delta\alpha$'s i $\sigma\tau\sigma\rho\epsilon\delta\tau a\iota \pi\rho\omega\tau\sigma\varsigma \tau\eta\nu \epsilon\pi\sigma\kappa\sigma\eta\nu \epsilon\delta\eta\chi\epsilon\nu\alpha\iota$: an idea which may well have originated with the Pastoral Epistles, and seems inconsistent with the very general tradition, hardly to be set aside (see Prolegg. Vol. I. ch. v. § i. 9 ff.), of the residence and death of St. John in that city. Nicephorus (H. E. iii. 11) and the ancient martyrologies make him die by martyrdom under Domitian. See Winer, sub voce: Butler's Lives of the Saints, Jan. 24.

8. We learn that he was set apart for the ministry in a solemn manner by St. Paul, with laying on of his own hands and those of the presbytery (1 Tim. iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6), in accordance with prophetic utterances of the Spirit (1 Tim. ib. and i. 18): but at what time this took place, we are not informed : whether early in his course, or in Ephesus itself, as a consecration for his particular office there. This latter seems to me far the more probable view.

9. The character of Timotheus appears to have been earnest and selfdenying. We may infer this from his leaving his home to accompany the Apostle, and submitting to the rite of circumcision at his hands (Acts xvi. 1 ff.),—and from the notice in 1 Tim. v. 23, that he usually drank only water. At the same time it is impossible not to perceive in the notices of him, signs of backwardness and timidity in dealing with the difficulties of his ministerial work. In 1 Cor. xvi. 10 f., the Corinthians are charged, $\dot{\epsilon}a\nu$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\theta\eta$ $T\mu\dot{\epsilon}\theta\epsilon\sigma$, $\beta\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\tau\epsilon$ $\dot{\epsilon}\nu a$ $\dot{a}\phi\dot{\sigma}\beta\omega$ s $\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\nu\eta\tau a\iota$ $\pi\rho\dot{\sigma}s$ $\dot{\nu}\mu\dot{a}s$ $\tau\dot{\sigma}\gamma\dot{a}\rho$ $\ddot{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\sigma\nu$ $\kappa\nu\rho\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\dot{\eta}\nu\eta$. And in the notes to the two Epistles the student will find several cases, in which the same traits seem to be referred to². They appear to have increased, in the second Epistle³, where the Apostle speaks carnestly, and even severely, on the necessity of Christian boldness in dealing with the difficulties and the errors of the day.

10. I subjoin a chronological table of the above notices in the course of Timotheus, arranging them according to that already given in the Prolegg. to Acts, and to the positions taken in the preceding chapter:

A.D. 45.	Converted by St. Paul, during the first missionary journey, at Lystra.
51.	Taken to be St. Paul's companion and circumcised (Acts xvi.
Autumn.	1 ff.).
	Sent from Beræa to Thessalonica (Acts xvii. 14; 1 Thess. iii. 2).
52.	With Silas, joins St. Paul at Corinth (Acts xviii. 5; 1 Thess. iii. 6).
Winter,	With St. Paul (1 Thess. i. 1; 2 Thess. i. 1).
§ iii.
57.	With St. Paul at Ephesus (Acts xix. 22): sent thence into Mace-
Spring.	donia and to Corinth (Acts ib.; 1 Cor. iv. 17, xvi. 10).
Winter.	With St. Paul (2 Cor. i. 1).
58,	With St. Paul (Rom. xvi. 21).
beginning.
Spring.	Journeying with St. Paul from Corinth to Asia (Acts xx. 4).
62 or 63.	With St. Paul in Rome (Col. i. 1; Philem. 1; Phil. i. 1).
63-66.	Uncertain.
66 or 67.	Left by St. Paul in charge of the Church at Ephcsus. (First Epistle.)
67 or 68.	(Second Epistle.) Sets out to join St. Paul at Rome.
Afterwards.	Uncertain.

² See notes on 1 Tim. v. 23; 2 Tim. i. 5, 7; iii. 10; and cf. besides 1 Tim. iv. 12.

³ It is possible that there may have been a connexion between these indications and the tone of the message in Rev. ii. 1-6: see note there.

OCCASION AND OBJECT.

1. The Epistle declares its own occasion. The Apostle had left the Ephesian Church in charge to Timotheus: and though he hoped soon to return, was apprehensive that he might be detained longer than he expected (1 Tim. iii. 14, 15). He therefore despatched to him these written instructions.

2. The main object must be described as personal: to encourage and inform Timotheus in his superintendence at Ephcsus. But this information and precept regarded two very different branches of his ecclesiastical duty.

3. The first was, the making head against and keeping down the growing heresies of the day. These are continually referred to: again and again the Apostle recurs to their mention: they evidently dwelt much on his mind, and caused him, in reference to Timotheus, the most lively anxiety. On their nature and characteristics I have treated in the preceding chapter.

4. The other object was, the giving directions respecting the government of the Church itself: as regarded the appointing to sacred offices, the selection of widows to receive the charity of the Church, and do service for it,—and the punishment of offenders.

5. For a compendium of the Epistle, and other details connected with it, see Davidson, vol. iii.

CHAPTER IX.

THE SECOND EPISTLE TO TIMOTHEUS.

SECTION I.

TO WHAT PLACE WRITTEN.

1. IT has been very generally supposed, that this Epistle was written to Timotheus while the latter was still at Ephesus.

2. The notices contained in it seem partially to uphold the idea. In ch. i. 16—18, Onesiphorus is mentioned as having sought out the Apostle 1017 at Rome, and also having ministered to him at Ephesus: and in ch. iv. 19, the household of Onesiphorus is saluted. Such a notice, it is true, decides nothing: but comes in aid of the supposition that St. Paul was writing to Ephesus. Our impression certainly is, from ch. i. 18, that Onesiphorus resided, when living, at Ephesus.

3. Again, in ch. ii. 17, we find Hymenzus stigmatized as a teacher of error, who can hardly be other than the Hymenzus of 1 Tim. i. 20 (see notes there). Joined with this latter in 1 Tim. appears an Alexander: and we again have an Alexander $\delta \chi a \lambda \kappa \epsilon \psi s$ mentioned as having done the Apostle much mischief in our ch. iv. 14: and there may be a further coincidence in the fact that an Alexander is mentioned as being put forward by the Jews during the tumult at Ephesus, Acts xix. 33¹.

4. Besides, the whole circumstances, and especially the character of the false teachers, exactly agree. It would be very difficult to point out any features of difference, such as change of place would be almost sure to bring out, between the heretical persons spoken of here, and those in the first Epistle.

5. The local notices come in aid, but not with much force. Timotheus is instructed to bring with him matters which the Apostle had left at Troas (ch. iv. 13), which he would pass in his journey from Ephesus to Rome. Two other passages (ch. iv. 12, 20) present a difficulty: and Michaelis, who opposes this view, urges them strongly. St. Paul writes, Τυχικόν δε απέστειλα είς "Εφεσον. This could hardly have been so written, as a simple announcement of a fact, if the person to whom he was writing was himself in that city. This was also felt by Theodoret,-δήλον έντεῦθεν ώς οὐκ ἐν Ἐφέσω διήγεν ἀλλ' ἑτέρωθί που κατά τουτονὶ τον καιρον ό μακάριος Τιμόθεος. The only answer that I can give, may be derived from the form and arrangement of the sentence. Several had been mentioned, who had left him of their own accord: then, with $\delta \epsilon$, introducing a contrast, he states that he had sent Tychicus to Ephesus. If any stress is meant to be laid on this circumstance, the notice might still consist with Timotheus himself being there: "but do not wonder at Tychicus being at Ephesus, for I sent him thither." This however is not satisfactory: nor again is it, to suppose with Dr. Davidson (iii. 63) that for some reason Tychicus would not arrive in Ephesus so soon as the Epistle. He also writes, Τρόφιμον δε απέλιπον εν Μιλήτω ασθεvoivra. This would be a strange thing to write from Rome to Timotheus in Ephesus, within a few miles of Miletus itself, and respecting Trophimus, who was an Ephesian (Acts xxi. 29). It certainly may be said that there might be reasons why the notice should be sent. It might be intended to clear Trophimus from the charge which appears to be laid against Erastus, that he had remained behind of his own accord in his native land. With the Apostle's delicate feeling for all who were connected with him, he might well state this (again with a $\delta \epsilon$) respecting Trophimus, though the fact of his remaining at Miletus might be well known to Timotheus, and his own profession of sickness as the reason.

6. There is a very slight hint indeed given in ch. iv. 11, which may point the same way. Timotheus was to take up Mark and bring him to Rome. The last notice we have had of Mark, was a recommendation of him to the Colossian Church (Col. iv. 10), and that in a strain, which may import that he was to be a resident labourer in the Gospel among them. If Mark was at Colossæ, he might be easily sent for from Ephesus to accompany Timotheus.

OCCASION AND OBJECT.

1. It only remains to enquire respecting this Epistle, what special circumstances occasioned it, and what objects are discernible in it.

2. The immediately moving occasion seems to have been one personal to the Apostle himself. He was anxious that Timotheus should come to him at Rome, bringing with him Mark, as soon as possible (ch. i. 4; iv. 9, 11, 21).

3. But he was uncertain how it might be with himself: whether he should live to see his son in the faith, or be 'offered up' before his arrival. He sends to him therefore, not merely a message to come, but a letter full of fatherly exhortations and instructions, applicable to his present circumstances. And these seem not to have been unneeded. Many of his former friends had forsaken him (ch. i. 15; iv. 10), and the courage and perseverance of Timotheus himself appeared to be giving way (see above, Prolegg. to 1 Tim. § i. 9). The letter therefore is calculated in some measure to supply what his own mouth would, if he were permitted to speak to him face to face, still more fervently urge on him. And thus we possess an Epistle calculated for all ages of the Church: in which while the maxims cited and encouragements given apply to all Christians, and especially ministers of Christ, in their duties and difficultics,-the affecting circumstances, in which the writer himself is placed, carry home to every heart his earnest and impassioned eloquenee.

4. For further notices, I again refer to Dr. Davidson, vol. iii. pp. 48 -75.

EXCURSUS ON PUDENS AND CLAUDIA.

1. In 2 Tim. iv. 21, we read as follows :

ἀσπάζεταί σε Εὕβουλος καὶ Πούδης καὶ Λῖνος καὶ Κλαυδία καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ πάντες.

2. Martial, lib. iv. Epigr. 13, is inscribed 'ad Rufum, de nuptiis Pudentis et Claudiæ peregrinæ :' and the first lines run thus :

"Claudia, Rufe, meo nubit peregrina Pudenti : Macte esto tædis, o Hymenæe, tuis."

3. An inscription was found at Chichester in the early part of the last century, and is now in a summer-house in the gardens at Goodwood, running thus, the lacunæ being conjecturally filled in :—

> [N]eptuni et Minervæ templum [pr]o salute d[omu]s divinæ [ex] auctoritat[e Tib.] Claud. [Co]gidubni r. leg. aug. in Brit. [colle]gium fabror. et qui in eo [a sacris] sunt d. s. d. donante aream [Pud]ente Pudentini fil.

4. Now in Tacitus, Agricol. 14, we read, "quædam civitates (in Britain) Cogidubno regi donatæ (is ad nostram usque memoriam fidissinus mansit) vetere ac jampridem recepta populi R. consuctudine, ut haberet instrumenta servitutis et reges." From this inscription these 'civitates' appear to have constituted the kingdom of Sussex. We also gather from the inscription that Cogidubnus had taken the name of his imperial patron, [Tiberius] Claudius: and we find him in close connexion with a Pudens.

5. It was quite natural that this discovery should open afresh a point which the conjectures of British antiquarians appeared before to have provisionally closed. It had been imagined that Claudia, who was identified with the Claudia Rufina of Martial, xi. 53 ('Claudia cæruleis quum sit Rufina Britannis Edita, quam Latiæ pectora plebis habet!'), was a native of Colchester, and a daughter of Caractacus, whom they supposed to have been admitted into the Claudian gens.

6. A new fabric of conjecture has been now raised, more ingenious and more probable². The Pudens of Martial is (i. 32) a centurion, aspiring to the "meriti præmia pili," i. e. to be made a primipilus: which ambition we find accomplished in lib. v. 48 : and his return to Rome from the North to receive the honour of equestrian rank is anticipated in lib. vi. 58. He may at some time have been stationed in Britain—possibly attached in capacity of adjutant to King Cogidubnus. His presentation of an area for a temple to Neptune and Minerva may have been occasioned by escape from shipwreck, the college of carpenters (shipbuilders) being commissioned to build it to their patrons, Neptune and Minerva; or, as Archdu. Williams (p. 24) seems to tbink, by a desire to introduce Roman arts among the subjects of the client king. If the British maiden Claudia was a daughter of King Tiberius Claudius Cogidubnus, there would be no great wonder in her thus being found mentioned with Pudens.

7. But conjecture is led on a step further by the other notices referred to above. Claudia is called Rufina. Now Pomponia, the wife of the late commander in Britain, ² In Archdeacon Williams's pamphlet on Pudens and Claudia. I have also consulted an article in the Quarterly Review for July, 1855, entitled "the Romans at Colchester," in which Archdeacon Williams's view is noticed.

Aulus Plautius, belonged to a house of which the Rufi were one of the chief branches. If she were a Rufa, and Claudia were her protégée at Rome (as would be very natural, seeing that her father was received into alliance under Aulus Plautius), the latter would naturally add to her very undistinguishing appellation of Claudia the cognomen of Rufina. Nor is the hypothesis of such a connexion purely arbitrary. A very powerful link appears to unite the two ladies—viz. that of Christianity. Pom onia, we learn from Tacitus (Ann. xii. 32), was (in the year 57) 'superstitionis externa rea,' and being 'mariti judicio permissa,' was by him tried, 'prisco instituto, propinquis coram,' and pronounced innocent. Tacitus adds, that after many family sorrows, 'per XL annos non cultu nisi lugubri, non animo nisi mæsto, egit. Idque illi imperitante Chaudio, impune, mox ad gloriam vertit.' Now it is not at all an improbable explanation of this, that Pomponia may have been a Christian : and the remarkable notice with which our citation from Tacitus concludes may point to the retirement of a Christian life, for which the garb of sorrow would furnish an excuse and protection 3.

8. If then such a connexion as this subsisted, it would account for the conversion of the British maiden to Christianity: and the coincidences are too striking to allow us to pass over the junction of Pudens with her in this salutation. They apparently were not married at this time, or the Apostle would hardly have inserted a third name, that of Linus, between theirs. And this is what we might expect: for the last year of Nero, which is the date we have assigned to the Epistle, is the earliest that can be assigned to any of Martial's pieces, being the year in which he came to Rome.

9. Two of the Epigrams of Martial, i. 32 and v. 48, mention facts which involve Pudens in the revolting moral licence of his day. But there is no reason for supposing them to refer to dates subsequent to his conversion and marriage. Martial's Epigrams are by no means in chronological order, and we cannot gather any indications of this fact with certainty from them.

10. Again, a difficulty has been found in the heathen invocation in the marriage epigram. But, as remarked in the article referred to in the note, we have no allusion to Christian marriage rites during the first three or four centuries, and it is not at all improbable that the heathen rites of the confarreatio may, at this early period at least, have been sought by Christians to legalize their unions. When we do find a Christian ceremonial, it is full of the symbolism of the confarreatio. And it seems to be shewn that this was so in the case before us, by the epithet of sancto, (in the line 'Di bene, quod sancto peperit focunda marito,' Mart. xi. 53,) implying that all rites had been duly observed ⁴.

11. If the above conjectural but not purely arbitrary fabric of hypothesis is allowed to stand, we have the satisfaction of knowing that Claudia was a woman not only of high character, but of mental acquirement ('Romanam credere matres Italides possint, Atthides esse suam,' Mart. ib.), and the mother of a family of three sons, and possibly daughters as well (Mart. ib.).

CHAPTER X.

THE EPISTLE TO TITUS.

SECTION I.

TO WHOM WRITTEN.

1. The time and place of writing this Epistle have been before discussed (see above, ch. vii. § ii. 29 f.). It appears to have been sent from Ephesus, or perhaps from Macedonia, during the last year of the Apostle's life (Λ .D. 67), to Titus, who was left in charge with the Churches in the island of Crete. We shall now gather up the notices which remain to us respecting Titus himself.

2. It is by no means easy to construct an account of Titus. At first sight, a strange phænomenon presents itself. The narrative in the Acts never once mentions him. And this is the more remarkable, because of all the companions of St. Paul he seems to have been the most valued and trusted. No adequate reason has ever been given for this omission. There must be some, it is thought, which we cannot penetrate. Was he identical with some one or other of St. Paul's companions, known to us in the Acts under another name? None seems to satisfy the conditions. Or are we to regard the notice in 2 Tim. iv. 10 as indicative of his ultimate desertion of the Apostle, and thus to seek for a solution of the problem? But even with such a supposition, we shall not touch the narrative of the Acts, which we believe to have been published some years previous to the writing of that Epistle. So that we must be content to leave the problem unsolved, and to put together the few notices which we possess, as given of a person distinct from any mentioned in the Acts.

3. The first notice of Titus, in respect of time, occurs in Gal. ii. 1, 3. We there learn that he was of Gentile origin; and that he was taken by Paul and Barnabas to the council of the Apostles and elders which was eonvened at Jerusalem to consider of the question of the obligation of the Mosaic law. The narrative in the Acts speaks merely of $\tau t \nu \dot{s}$ s $\ddot{a} \lambda o_i$ being sent with the two Apostles. But we see clearly the reason why Titus should be marked out in Gal. ii. for separate mention. He was an uncircumeised Gentile, and the independence of action of St. Paul is shown by his refusing to listen for a moment to the proposal, which appears to have been urged, for his circumcision. In the Acts, no such reason for special mention of him existed. And this consideration will shew, that we are perhaps not justified in assuming from this incident that Titus held any position of high confidence or trust at this time. We find him in close companionship with the Apostles, but that is all we can say. He was certainly converted by means of St. Paul himself, from the $\gamma\nu\eta\sigma$ i ϕ $\tau\epsilon\kappa\nu\phi$ of Tit. i. 4.

4. Our next notice of him is found in 2 Cor., where it appears (ch. xii. 18) that he, with two other brethren, whose names are not mentioned, was sent forward by St. Paul from Ephesus, during his long visit there, to Corinth, to set on foot a collection (ch. viii. 6) for the poor saints at Jerusalem, and also to ascertain the effect of the first Epistle on the Corinthians. St. Paul, on his departure from Ephesus, waited at Troas, where great opportunities of usefulness were opening before him (ch. ii. 12): but so anxious was he for the return of Titus (Τίτον τον άδελφόν μου), that he "left them and passed into Maccdonia" (ib. 13). There he met with Titus, who brought him a satisfactory account of the effect of the first Epistle (ch. vii. 6-15): and from that which St. Paul there says of him, his effective zeal and carnestness in the work of the Gospel is sufficiently shewn. Further proof of these is given in his undertaking of his own accord the delicate task of completing the collection (ch. viii. 6, 16, 17 ff.): and proof also of the Apostle's confidence in him, in the terms in which he commends him to the Corinthians. He calls him his own KOLVWVÓS (ch. viii. 23): appeals to his integrity, and entire unity of action with himself (ch. xii, 18).

5. From this time (A.D. 57: see Vol. II. Prolegg. to 2 Cor. § ii. 3), to the notices furnished by our Epistle (A.D. 67), we know nothing of Titus. At this latter date we find him left in Crete by St. Paul, obviously for a temporary purpose: viz. to "carry forward the correction of those things which are defective" (ch. i. 5), and among these principally, to establish presbyteries for the government of the various Churches, consisting of $i\pi i \sigma \kappa \sigma \sigma \iota$ (ib. ver. 7). His stay there was to be very short (ch. iii. 12), and he was, on the arrival of Tychicus or Artemas, to join the Apostle at Nicopolis. Not the slightest trace is found in the Epistle, of any intention on the part of St. Paul to place Titus permanently over the Cretan Churches: indeed, such a view is inconsistent with the date furnished us in it.

6. Titus appears to have accordingly rejoined the Apostle, and afterwards to have left him for Dalmatia (2 Tim. iv. 10). Whether from this notice we are to infer that he had been with him in Rome, is quite uncertain. It would seem more probable that he had gone from Nicopolis, or at all events from some point on the journey. We can hardly, on mature consideration of the expressions in 2 Tim. iv. 10, entirely get rid of the impression, that Titus had left the Apostle of his own accord. There is, as has been above observed, an apparent contrast intended between those who are classed with Demas,—they being even included under his $\epsilon \pi o \rho \epsilon i \theta \eta$, without another verb expressed—and Tychicus, who had been sent on a mission by the Apostle. Still, it would be unfair to lay any stress on this, in a matter so well admitting of charitable doubt : and we may be well permitted, with Mr. Conybeare, to "hope that his journey to the neighbouring Dalmatia was undertaken by desire of St. Paul."

7. The traditionary notices of the after life of Titus are too evidently grounded on a misunderstanding of our Epistle, to be worth much. Eus. H. E. iii. 4, says, $T_{i\mu}\delta\theta\epsilon\delta$ s $\gamma\epsilon$ $\mu\eta\nu$ $\tau\eta$ s $\epsilon\nu$ 'E $\phi\epsilon\sigma\psi$ mapouncias isotopeirau mpioros $\tau\eta\nu$ $\epsilon\pi$ isotom $\eta\nu$ $\epsiloni\lambda\eta\chi\epsilon\nu$ ai (see on this above, Prolegg. to 1 Tim. § i. 7), is kai Tíros τ iov $\epsilon\pi$ i K $\rho\eta\tau\eta$ s $\epsilon\kappa\kappa\lambda\eta\sigma$ iov. And so Theodoret assumes, on 1 Tim. iii. 1.

8. Butler informs us (Lives of the Saints, Jan. 4) that Titus is honoured in Dalmatia as its principal Apostle: that he again returned from Dalmatia to Crete, and finished a laborious and holy life by a happy death in Crete, in a very advanced old age, some say in his 94th year: that he is looked on in Crete as the first archbishop of Gortyna, which metropolitical see is now fixed at Candia, the new capital, built by the Saracens after the destruction of Gortyna. But all this fabric too manifestly bears the appearance of having been raised on the above misapprehension, to possess any traditional worth.

SECTION II.

THE CHURCHES OF CRETE.

1. When, and by whom, these Churches were founded, is quite uncertain. Crete abounded with Jews of wealth and influence. We find proof of this in Jos. Antt. xvii. 12. 1, $K\rho\dot{\eta}\tau\eta$ προsενεχθείs (the Pseudo-Alexander) Ιουδαίων δπόσοις εἰς δμιλίαν ἀφίκετο, ἐπήγαγεν εἰς πίστιν, καὶ χρημάτων εὐπορηθεὶς δόσει τῆ ἐκείνων ἐπὶ Μήλου διῆρεν: and again B. J. ii. 7. 1, τοὺς ἐν Κρήτῃ Ἰουδαίους ἐξαπατήσας καὶ λαμπρῶς ἐφοδισθείς, διέπλευσεν εἰς Μῆλον: Philo, leg. ad Caium, § 36, vol. ii. p. 587,—οὐ μόνον ai ἦπειροι μεσταὶ τῶν Ἰουδαϊκῶν ἀποικιῶν εἰσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ νήσων ai δοκιμώταται Εὖβοια, Κύπρος, Κρήτῃ. In Acts ii. 11 Cretans are named among those who heard the utterance of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost. It is probable therefore, that these Churches owed their origin to the return of individuals from contact with the preaching of the Gospel, and had therefore as yet been unvisited by an Apostle, when they first come before us towards the end of St. Paul's ministry.

2. It is plain that no certain evidence can be deduced, as to the existence of these Churches, from no mention being made of them when St. Paul passed by Crete on his voyage to Malta in Acts xxvii. We have no reason to suppose that he was at liberty to go where he pleased while remaining in port, nor can we reason, from the analogy of Julius's permission at Sidon, that similar leave would be given him where perhaps no personal relation subsisted between him and the inhabitants. Besides which, the ship was detained by a contrary wind, and probably expecting, during a good part of the time, to sail every day.

3. The next point requiring our attention is, the state of those Churches at the date of our Epistle. If it appear, on comparison, that the false teachers in them were more exclusively Jewish than those at Ephesus, it must be remembered, that this would be a natural consequence, the origin of the Churches being that which we have supposed. And in that ease the Apostle's visit, acting as a critical test, would separate out and bring into hostility this Judaistic element, and thus lead to the state of things which we find in this Epistle.

4. Various objections are brought by De Wette against the Epistle, as not corresponding with the facts, in its assumptions and expressions. The first of them, that "it professes to have been written shortly after the founding of the Churches, but sets forth a ripeness and abundance of heretical teaching quite inconsistent with such recent foundation," falls to the ground on our hypothesis of their origin. They were old in actual date of existence, but quite in their infancy of arrangement and formal constitution.

5. With our hypothesis also falls his second objection: viz. that "the great recent success of the Apostle there makes the severity of his characterization of the inhabitants, and that upon another's testimony (ch. i. 12), quite inexplicable. We should rather have looked for thankful recognition, as in other Epistles." But, supposing Christianity to have grown up there in combination with the national vices, and a thorough work of purification to be wanted, then we need not be surprised at the Apostle reminding Titus of the character of those with whom he had to deal, appealing to the testimony of their own writers to confirm the fact.

6. His third objection, that "the heretical teachers must have grown up under the eyes of Titus since the Apostle's absence, and thus must have been better known to him than to St. Paul, whereas here we have St. Paul informing him about them,"—is grounded on pure assumption, arising from mistake. The false teachers had been there throughout, and, as we have said, had been awaked into activity by the Apostle's presence and teaching. He knew, from long and bitter experience, far more of them than Titus could do: and his notices and warnings are founded on this longer experience and more thorough apostolic insight.

7. His fourth, that "in relation to the moral and ecclesiastical state of the Cretan Christians, as disclosed in the Epistle, a duration of the Gospel among them of some length must be assumed,—from the stress laid on previous purity of character in those to be chosen to church-offices,"—also falls to the ground on our hypothesis of the origin and previous duration of the Churches.

8. The fifth is,—that "it is most unnatural and startling to find not one reference to what the Apostle had taught and preached in Crete, when in 1 Thess., an Epistle written under similar circumstances, we find so many." But we entirely deny the parallelism. The Thessalonian Church had been founded by himself; he was torn away from it in the midst of his teaching: every reason existed for constantly recalling what he had said to them, either to enforce it, or to guard it from misunderstanding. Such was not the case here. He was writing of a Church which he had not himself founded: whose whole situation was different: and writing not to the Church itself, but to one whom he had commissioned to set it in order, and who knew, and needed not reminding of, what he had preached there.

9. It only remains under this head, that we should say something of the character of the Cretans which St. Paul has quoted from Epimenides, ch. i. $12, - K\rho\eta\tau\epsilon_s$ dei $\psi\epsilon\bar{\nu}\sigma\tau\alpha\iota$, $\kappa\alpha\kappa\dot{\alpha}$ $\theta\eta\rho\dot{\alpha}$, $\gamma\alpha\sigma\tau\dot{\epsilon}\rho\epsilon_s$ devaí.

10. Meursius, in his very complete and elaborate treatise on Crete, has accumulated nearly all the testimonies of the ancients respecting them. From his pages I take a few, that the student may be able to illustrate the character by them.

11. On their avarice, we have the testimony of Livy, xliv. 45, "Cretenses spem pecuniæ sccuti: et quoniam in dividendo plus offensionum quam gratiæ crat, quinquaginta talenta iis posita sunt in ripa diripienda:"—of Plutarch, Paul. Æmil. c. 23, των δὲ στρατιωτῶν, ἐπηκολούθησαν οἱ Κρῆτες, οὐ δι εῦνοιαν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς χρήμασιν, ῶςπερ κηρίοις μέλιτται, προςλιπαροῦντες:—of Polybius, vi. 46. 3, ὁ περὶ τὴν αἰσχροκέρδειαν καὶ πλεονεξίαν τρόπος οὕτως ἐπιχωριάζει παρ' αὐτοῖς, ὥςτε παρὰ μόνοις Κρηταιεῦσι τῶν ἑπάντων ἀνθρώπων μηδὲν αἰσχρὸν νομίζεσθαι κέρδος.

12. On their ferocity and fraud, Polybius vi. 46. 9, Κρηταιεῖς ἐν πλείσταις ἰδία τε καὶ κατὰ κοινὸν στάσεσι καὶ φόνοις καὶ πολέμοις ἐμφυλίοις ἀναστρεφομένους: and iv. 8. 11, Κρῆτες δὲ καὶ κατὰ γῆν καὶ κατὰ θάλατταν πρὸς μὲν ἐνέδρας καὶ λῃστείας καὶ κλοπὰς πολεμίων, καὶ νυκτερινὰς ἐπιθέσεις καὶ πάσας τὰς μετὰ δόλου καὶ κατὰ μέρος χρείας ἀνυπόστατοι, πρὸς δὲ τὴν ἐξ ὁμολόγου καὶ κατὰ πρόςωπον φαλαγγηδὸν ἔφοδον, ἀγεννεῖς καὶ πλάγιοι ταῖς ψυχαῖς:--Strabo, x. e. 4, περὶ δὲ τῆς Κρήτης ὁμολογεῖται διότι . . ῦστερον πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον μετέβαλεν ἐπὶ πλεῖστον. μετὰ γὰρ τοὺς Τυμρηνούς, οῦ μάλιστα ἐδήωσαν τὴν καθ' ἡμᾶς θάλατταν, οῦτοι εἰσὶν οἱ διαδεξάμενοι τὰ ληστήρια:--an Epigram of Leonides, Anthol. iii. 22,--aiεὶ ληϊσταὶ καὶ ἀλιφθόροι οὖτε δίκαιοι Κρῆτες· τίς Κρητῶν οἶδε δικαιοσύνην; explained by Diogenianus, Cent. v. prov. 92,— ἐπὶ τῶν πανούργοις χρωμένων πρὸς ἀλλήλους λέγεται:—Psellus, de operat. Dæm., πλην ἴσθι μηδ' αὐτὸν ἐβἑρψωδηκέναι με ταῦτα τερατευόμενον, κατὰ τοὺς Κρῆτας καὶ Φοίνικας. And the word κρητίζειν was an expression for 'to lie.' Suidas has κρητίζειν πρὸς Κρῆτας, ἐπειδη ψεῦσται καὶ ἀπατεῶνές εἰσι: see also Polyb. viii. 21. 5. And their general depravity was summed up in the proverb, quoted by Constant. Porphyrogen. de them. lib. i., τρία κάππα κάκιστα· Καππαδοκία, Κρήτη, Κιλικία.

13. On their mendacity, Polybius vi. 47. 5, καὶ μὴν οὖτε κατ ἰδίαν ἤθη δολιώτερα Κρηταιέων εὖροι τις ἄν, πλὴν τελείως ὀλίγων, οὖτε καθόλου ἐπιβουλὰς ἀδικώτερας:—again, the proverb, Κρὴς πρὸς Αἰγινήτην, is thus CH. XI.] THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON. [PROLEGOMENA.

CHAPTER XI.

THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.

ITS AUTHORSHIP.

1. THE testimonies to the Pauline authorship of this Epistle are abundant.

(a) Tertullian, in cnumerating the Epistles of St. Paul with which Marcion had tampered, concludes his list thus (adv. Marc. v. 21, vol. ii. p. 524):

"Soli huic epistolæ brevitas sua profuit ut falsarias manus Marcionis evaderet. Miror tamen, cum ad unum hominem litteras factas recepcrit, quod &c." (see the whole passage cited above, ch. vii. § i. 1. ϵ .)

(β) Origen, Hom. xix. in Jer. 2 : vol. iii. p. 263 :

όπερ καὶ ὁ Παῦλος ἐπιστάμενος ἔλεγεν ἐν τῆ πρὸς Φιλήμονα ἐπιστολῆ τῷ Φιλήμονι περὶ Ἐνησίμου· ἕνα μὴ κατ' ἀνάγκην τὸ ἀγαθὸν ἦ, ἀλλὰ καθ' ἑκούσιον (Philem. ver. 14).

And again in Matth. Comm. series, § 72, p. 889:

"Sicut Paulus ad Philemonem dicit: Gaudium enim magnum habuimus et consolationem in caritate tua, quia viscera sanctorum requieverunt per te, frater." (Philem. ver. 7.)

And again in id. § 66, p. 884:

"A Paulo autem dictum est ad Philemonem : hunc autem ut Paulus senex, &c." (ver. 9.)

(γ) Eusebius, H. E. iii. 25, reckons this Epistle among the δμολογούμενα.

(8) Jerome, proæm. in Philem. vol. vii. pp. 743, 4, argues at some 111] length against those who refuse to acknowledge this Epistle for St. Paul's because it was simply on personal matters and contained nothing for edification.

2. That neither Irenœus nor Clement of Alexandria cites our Epistle, is easily accounted for, both by its shortness, and by the fact of its containing nothing which could illustrate or affirm doctrinal positions. Ignatius seems several times to allude to it:

Eph. c. ii., p. 645; δναίμην ὑμῶν διὰ παντός, ἐάνπερ ἄξιος ὦ (Philem. ver. 20).

Magnes. c. xii., p. 672; the same expression; which also occurs in the Ep. to Polycarp, c. i., p. 720, and c. vi., p. 725.

3. The internal evidence of the Epistle itself is so decisive for its Pauline origin,—the occasion and object of it (see below, § ii.) so simple, and unassignable to any fraudulent intent, that one would imagine the impugner of so many of the Epistles would at least have spared this one, and that in modern times, as in ancient, according to Tertullian and Jerome, "sua illam brevitas defendisset." But Baur has rejected it, or, which with him is the same thing practically, has placed it in his second class, of antilegomena, in common with the other Epistles of the imprisonment.

4. In doing so, he confesses ("Paulus, u.s.w." pp. 475 ff.) to a feeling of subjecting himself to the imputation of hypercritical scepticism as to authenticity: but maintains that the Epistle must stand or fall with those others: and that its very insignificance, which is pleaded in its defence, all the more involves it in their fate. Still, he professes to argue the question on the ground of the Epistle itself.

5. He finds in its diction several things which strike him as unpauline¹: several which establish a link between it and those other Epistles. The latter position we should willingly grant him, and use against him. But the former is here, as so often, taken up by him in the mercst disregard to common sense and probability. Such expressions, occurring in a familiar letter, such as we do not elsewhere possess, are no more than are perfectly natural, and only serve to enlarge for us the Apostle's vocabulary, instead of inducing doubt, where all else is so thoroughly characteristic of him.

6. The contents also of the Epistle seem to him objectionable. The incident on which it is founded, he says, of itself raises suspicion. He then takes to pieces the whole history of Onesimus's flight and conversion, and the feeling shewn to him by the Apostle, in a way which, as I observed before (ch. iii. § i. 2) respecting his argument against the Epistle to the Philippians, only finds a parallel in the pages of burlesque: so that, I am persuaded, if the section on the Epistle to Philemon had been first published separately and without the author's name, the world might well have supposed it written by some defender of the authenticity of the Epistle, as a caricature on Baur's general line of argument.

7. On both his grounds of objection—the close connexion of this with the other Epistles of the imprisonment, and its own internal evidence,—fortified as these are by the consensus of the ancient Church, we may venture to assume it as certain that this Epistle was written by St. Paul.

SECTION II.

THE PLACE, TIME, OCCASION, AND OBJECT OF WRITING.

1. The Epistle is connected by the closest links with that to the Colossians. It is borne by Onesimus, one of the persons mentioned as sent with that Epistle (Col. iv. 9). The persons sending salutation are the same, with the one exception of Jesus Justus. In Col. iv. 17, a message is sent to Archippus, who is one of those addressed in this Epistle. Both Epistles are sent from Paul and Timotheus; and in both the Apostle is a prisoner (Col. iv. 18; Philem. vv. 1, 9).

2. This being so, we are justified in assuming that it was written at the same place and time as the Epistles to the Colossians and Ephesians, viz. at Rome, and in the year 61 or 62.

3. Its occasion and object are plainly indicated in the Epistle itself. Onesimus, a native of Colossæ², the slave of Philemon, had absconded, after having, as it appears, defrauded his master (ver. 18). He fled to Rome, and there was converted to Christianity by St. Paul. Being persuaded by him to return to his master, he was furnished with this letter to recommend him, now no longer merely a servant, but a brother also, to favourable reception by Philemon. This alone, and no didactic or general object, is discernible in the Epistle.

SECTION III.

TO WHAT PLACE ADDRESSED, &c.

1. From comparing Col. iv. 9, with ib. 17 and Philem. 2, we infer that Philemon was a resident at Colossæ. The impression on the reader from Philem. 1, 2, is that Apphia was his wife, and Archippus (a minister of the church there, Col. iv. 17), their son, or some near relative dwelling with them under the same roof. A letter on a matter so strictly domestic would hardly include strangers to the family in its address.

Vol. III.—113]

² $\xi \delta \mu \omega \nu$ can hardly in Col. iv. 9 bear any other meaning: he could surely not be described, under the circumstances, as "belonging to the Colossian Church," as supposed by Dr. Davidson, Introd. ii. p. 138. The case of Epaphras in Col. iv. 12 is not strictly parallel; but even there, there is no reason why the words should not bear their proper sense.

2. An hypothesis has been advanced, recently by Wieseler, that our present Epistle is alluded to in Col. iv. 16, as $\dot{\eta} \, \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \, \Lambda ao \delta \iota \kappa \epsilon \dot{\iota} as$, and that the message to Archippus in the next verse favours the view that he, and consequently Philemon, dwelt at Laodicea. And this is corroborated, by Archippus being called bishop of Laodicea in the Apostolic Constitutions (vii. 46, p. 1056, Migne).

3. The objection to this hypothesis is not so much from any evidently false assumption or inference in the chain of facts, all of which may have been as represented, but from the improbability, to my view, that by the latter limb of the parallelism—"this Epistle," "that from Laodicea,"—can be meant a private letter, even though it may have regarded a member of the Colossian church. We seem to want some Epistle corresponding in weight with that to the Colossians, for such an order, in such a form, to receive its natural interpretation³.

4. Of Onesimus we know nothing for certain, except from the notices here and in Col. iv. 9. Tradition reports variously respecting him. In the Apostolical Canons (73) he is said to have been emancipated by his master, and in the Apostolical Constitutions (vii. 46, p. 1056) to have been ordained by St. Paul himself bishop of Bercca in Macedonia, and to have suffered martyrdom in Rome, Niceph. H. E. iii. 11. In the Epistle of Ignatius to the Ephesians, we read, cap. i., p. 645, $\epsilon \pi \epsilon i$ our $\tau \eta \nu$ πολυπληθίαν ύμων έν ἀνόματι θεοῦ ἀπείληφα ἐν Ἐνησίμω, τῷ ἐν ἀγάπη ἀδιηγήτω, ύμων δε έν σαρκί έπισκόπω ΰν εύχομαι κατά Ίησουν χριστόν ύμας άγαπάν, και πάντας ύμας έν όμοιότητι είναι. εύλογητος γαρ ό χαρισάμενος ύμιν άξίοις ούσι τοιούτον έπίσκοπον κεκτήσθαι*. It is just possible that this may be our Onesimus. The earliest date which can be assigned to the martyrdom of Ignatius is A.D. 107, i. e. thirty-five years after the date of this Epistle. Supposing Onesimus to have been thirty at this time, he would then have been only sixty-five. And even setting Ignatius's death at the latest date, A.D. 116, we should still be far within the limits of possibility. It is at least singular that in ch. ii., p. 645 immediately after naming Onesimus, Ignatius proceeds ἀναίμην ὑμῶν διὰ $\pi a \nu \tau \delta s$ (ef. Philem. ver. 20; and above, § i. 2).

³ In the Prælectio above referred to, Prolegg. to Eph., § i. 11, note, I had adopted Wieseler's hypothesis. Maturer consideration led me to abandon it, solely on the ground of the improbability stated in the text. We must regard the Epistle to the Laodiceaus as one now lost to us (see Prolegg. to Vol. II. ch. iii. § iv. 3).

⁴ See also id. chapters ii., vi., pp. 645, 649.

CHARACTER AND STYLE.

1. This Epistle is a remarkable illustration of St. Paul's tenderness and delicacy of character. Dr. Davidson well remarks, "Dignity, generosity, prudence, friendship, affection, politeness, skilful address, purity, are apparent. Hence it has been termed with great propriety, the polite Epistle. The delicacy, fine address, consummate courtesy, nice strokes of rhetoric, render the letter an unique specimen of the epistolary style." Introd. vol. iii. p. 160.

2. Doddridge (Expositor, introd. to Philem.) compares it to an Epistle of Pliny to Sabinianus, ix. 21, written as an acknowledgment on a similar occasion of the reception of a libertus by his master⁵: and justly gives the preference in delicacy and power to our Epistle. The comparison is an interesting one, for Pliny's letter is eminently beautiful, and in terseness, and completeness, not easy to surpass.

3. Luther's description of the Epistle is striking, and may well serve to close our notice of it, and this portion of our prolegomena to the Epistles.

"This Epistle sheweth a right noble lovely example of Christian love. Here we see how St. Paul layeth himself out for the poor Onesimus, and with all his means pleadeth his cause with his master; and so setteth himself, as if he were Onesimus, and had himself done wrong to Philemon. Yet all this doeth he not with power or force, as if he had right thereto; but he strippeth himself of his right, and thus enforceth Philemon to forego his right also. Even as Christ did for us with God the Father, thus also doth St. Paul for Onesimus with Philemon : for Christ also stripped Himself of His right, and by love and humility enforced the Father to lay aside His wrath and power, and to take us to His grace for the sake of Christ, who lovingly pleadeth our cause, and with all His heart layeth Himself out for us. For we are all His Onesimi, to my thinking."

5 The Epistle runs thus :

"C. Plinius Sabiniano suo S.

"Bene fecisti quod libertum aliquando tibi charum, reducentibus epistolis meis, in domum, in animum recepisti. Juvabit hoc te: me certe juvat: primum quod te talem video, ut in ira regi possis: deinde, quod tantum mihi tribuis, ut vel autoritati meæ parcas, vel precibus indulgeas. Igitur et laudo et gratias ago: simul in posterum moneo, ut te erroribus tuorum, etsi non fuerit qui deprecetur, placabilem præstes. Vale."

^a Jacobus Faber Stapulensis, i. e. Jacques le Fevre d'Estaples, a native of Etaples in Picardy, collated five Greek MSS. of St. Paul's Epistles which he sometimes appeals to in his Commentary (Paris, 1512). These citations, whenever it is necessary to refer to them, should not be quoted as if they came from some one MS. distinct from the others in the list, but as "var. read. in comm. Fab. Stap." or the like.

^b A ms. which once belonged to J. C. Wolf of Hamburg. It was procured by Wetstein from Wolf's library, and collated by him. It consists of two square paper volumes, containing the whole N. T. exc. Apoc., copied by Jas. Faber, of Daventer (a brother scholar of Erasmus), from a ms. written A.D. 1293 on Mt. Athos, by the scribe Theodore, who wrote also Gosp. 74, and Scrivener's Gosp. q Epp. f. The Epistle of St. Jude occurs twice, the 2nd copy is entered as Cath. 55.

^c "We know nothing more of it than that Amandus, who lived at Louvain, had it in his possession, that Zeger appealed to it," on Rom. i. 32 (as reading ov $\sigma v \sigma v \sigma v \pi a v$), "and that Erasmus supposed it to be a latinizing manuscript. How many books of the N. T. it contains, where it is at present preserved, whether it has been used in modern times under another name, are questions which I am unable to answer." (Michaelis.)

d These numbers are bracketed because it is perfectly possible that the MSS. denoted by them may be entered in the list under other numbers.

e Under this number Wetstein and succeeding editors have entered " Codices Laur. Valla." "Laurentius Valla, a learned Roman, who was born in 1417, and died in 1467, published in 1440, Annotationes in N. T., in which he collected the readings of three Greek and three Latin MSS., and took particular pains to amend the Latin version. The book was published at Paris in 1505, and gave occasion to the Complutensian Polyglott." (Michaelis' Introductory Lectures, 4to, London, 1761, p. 66.)

f Under this number Wetstein and succeeding editors have entered a Zürich MS., k Scholz has run into great confusion with the manuscripts in the Cambridge University Library from not understanding the signs in his memoranda respecting them. The following explanation may be sufficient to clear up the matter. All the MSS. in the Library have since 1753 been denoted by a double-letter class mark, a number for the shelf, and a number for the volume. Nasmith, in writing out a list of the MSS. as thus arranged, added numbers on the margin to indicate merely the position which each MS. held in his eatalogue. Nasmith's classified index contains references to this catalogue by these marginal numbers, ψ being prefixed if the reference is to a printed book with MS. notes, an asterisk if to a Greek MS. Similar marginal numbers have been inserted in the printed eatalogue now in course of publication; they are not the same as Nasmith's, and it is as misleading to refer to MSS. by these numbers without stating what catalogue is meant, as to the pages of a book more than once edited, with-out stating the edition used. This may be seen in the following examples :---

- MS. Ff. 1. 30, is 1152 on Nasmith's margin, and 1163 on that of the new Printed Catalogue.
- MS. Kk. 6. 4, is 2068 on Nasmith's margin, and 2084 on that of the new Printed Catalogue.
- MS. Mm. 6. 9, is 2423 on Nasmith's margin, and 2168 on that of the new Printed Catalogue.
- MS. Nn. 3. 20, is \ 2537 in Nasmith's index.

MS. Nn. 5. 27, is \ 2622 in Nasmith's index.

It is right to prefix MS. to the double letter to indicate that the volumes meant belong to the Cases so marked in the Library, and to prevent any confusion with the classes of Printed Books alone known by the same letters.

scholarlike volumes. They have set the first example in this country of a thorough and fearless examination of the grammatical and philological requirements of every word in the sacred text. I do not know any thing superior to them, in their own particular line, in Germany: and they add what, also, is so seldom found in that country, profound reverence for the matter and subjects on which the author is labouring. Nor is their value lessened by Bishop Ellicott having confined himself for the most part to one department of a Commentator's work—the grammatical and philological. No student ought to be without these books, nor ought he to spare himself in making them his own by continual study.

² This Lexicon (which has now all appeared) is as superior to all other editions of Passow, German and English, as Passow was to all that went before. A comparison of any important words will shew the difference at once. The immense labour requisite will, it is to be feared, deter our lexicographers from giving the English public a translation: but it would be a great boon to the scholarship of our country. [It is understood that a new edition of Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, now long promised, will contain all the valuable improvements and additions from Rost and Palm. A translation was in progress, but was broken off by the lamented death of Dr. Donaldson in the spring of 1861.]

CHAP. I. 1-5.] ADDRESS AND GREET-ING. πολλού τδ προσίμιον γέμει θυμού κ. μεγάλου φρονήματος ού το προοίμιον δε μόνον, αλλά και πασα, ως είπειν, ή επιστολή. Chrys. In the very opening sentence of the Epistle, we see the fervour of the Apostle's mind and the weightiness of his subject betraying themselves. The vindication of his own apostolic calling,and the description of the work and purpose of Christ towards us, shew him to be writing to those who had disparaged that apostleship, and were falling from their 1. It is better not to join Saviour. ἀπόστολος (here of course used in its strict and highest sense : see Ellicott, and an interesting note in Jowett) with $d\pi'$, but to let it stand by itself, and take the two prepositions as indicating, $d\pi o$ the remote originating cause, Siá the nearer instrumental one. In St. Paul's case, neither of these was merely human; the Lord Jesus was both the original Sender, and Hunself the Announcer of the mission. Perhaps however the prepositions must not be so strictly pressed, -- see ref. 1 Cor., -and observe that the following $\delta_{i\dot{a}}$ belongs to θεοῦ πατρόs as well as to Ἱησοῦ χριστοῦ.-ἀνθοώπου is perhaps (as Mey., De W., Ellic., al.) singular, for the sake of contrast to $^{\prime}I\eta\sigma$. $\chi\rho$. following ; but more probably for solemnity's sake, the singular making even Vol. III.

a more marked exclusion of human agency than the plural. Luther's view of the sentence is: "The Judaizing teachers could shew their credentials as disciples of Apostles or messengers of churches and despised Paul as having none such. To this he answers that he had not indeed any commission from men, but derived his authority from a higher source." But (1) this was not the fact, for he had a regular mission from the church at Antioch: (2) the words do not express it.

κ. θεοῦ πατρός] If by Jesus Christ, then also by God the Father, in and by whose appointment all the mediatorial acts of Christ in the Headship of His Church are done. The inferences of Chrys. al. as to the equality of the Father and the Son from this juxtaposition, appear far-fetched, and according to "the mind, not of the apostolic, but of the Nicene age," as Jowett: but we may say at least this, that the strongest possible contrast is here drawn between man, in the ordinary sense, on the one side, and Jesus Christ, and God the Father, on the Had not the Apostle regarded other. Jesus Christ as one with the Father in the Godhead, he never could have written thus. On the use of $\delta_{i\alpha}$ here where $\dot{\alpha}\pi \delta$ might be expected, see Ellicott's note. He refers it to the brevity with which St. Paul expresses himself: I should rather say that he states our Lord Jesus and God the Father to have been the causa medians, in bringing down divine agency even to the actual fact of his mission-and leaving it therefore to be inferred à fortiori that the causa principalis was the will of God.

It is important to remember that the mission of Paul to the actual work of the ministry was by the command of the Holy Spirit, Acts xiii. 2,-proceeding from, and expressing the will of, the Father and the Son. $\pi a \tau \rho \delta s$ is better taken generally, as in reff., the Father, than supplied with ήμῶν (as De W. al.) or αὐτοῦ (as Meyer al.). τοῦ ἐγ. αὐτ.] Why specified here? Not, I think, because (Meyer) Paul was called to be an Apostle by the risen Saviour,-nor merely (De W.) to identify the Father as the Originator of the Son's work of Redemption (which is so in Rom. iv. 24,-but here would not immediately concern Paul's calling to be an Apostle),nor (Calvin, al.) to meet the objection that he had never seen Christ, and turn it into an advantage, in that (Aug. [but ef. his Retractations], Erasm., Bcza, al.) he alone was commissioned by the already risen and ascended Jesus,—for in this case we should not find too eyelpartos K.T.A. stated as a predicate of the Father, but τοῦ ἐγερθέντος κ.τ.λ. as one of the Son, -nor as asserting the Resurrection against the Jews and Judaizing Galatians (Chrys., Luther), which is far-fetched, -nor again (Jowett) as expressing an attribute of the Father, without which He can hardly be thought of by the believer, -for this is too loose a relevancy for a sentence so pointed as the present: but because the Resurrection, including and implying the Ascension, was the Father's bestowal on Christ of gifts for men, by virtue of which (έδωκεν τούς μέν αποστόλους, κ.τ.λ. Eph. iv. 11) Paul's Apostleship had been received. Cf. a similar sentiment in Rom. i. 4, 5. έκ νεκρών 😑 έκ τῶν ν.,-see note on Rom. iv. 24. In Matt. xiv. 2; xxvii. 64; xxviii. 7; Eph. v. 14; Col. i. 18 (ii. 12?); 1 Thess. i. 10, the article is expressed : otherwise it is always omitted. 2. άδελφοί Who these were, may best be inferred by the Apostle's usage in the addresses of other Epistles, where we have $\Sigma \omega \sigma \theta \epsilon \nu \eta s \delta \delta \epsilon \lambda$ φός (1 Cor. i. 1), Τιμόθεος δ άδ. (2 Cor. i. 1. Col. i. 1. Philem. 1). They were his colleagues in the work of the Gospel, his companions in travel, and the like (not all the members of the church where he was, as Erasm., Grot., Jowett, al., who would hardly be specified as being $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu a \dot{\nu} \tau \hat{\varphi}$, besides that such an address would be unprecedented): and their unanimity ($\pi d\nu$ - $\tau \epsilon s$) is here stated, as Chrys., Luther, al., to shew that he was not alone in his doctrine, but joined by all the brethren who were present. At the same time $\pi \dot{a} \nu \tau \epsilon s$ would seem to imply that just now he had many of these άδελφοί with him. But we cannot draw any inference from this as to the date of our Epistle : for we do not know who were his companions on many occasions. At Ephesus, where probably it was written, we hear only of Gaius and Aristarchus (Acts xix. 29), but we cannot say that there were not others : in all likelihood, several more of those mentioned Acts xx. 4, were with him.

ταίς έκκλ.] πανταχού γάρ εξρψεν $\dot{\eta}$ roos. Thart. The principal cities of Galatia were Pessinus and Ancyra : but this plural scems to imply more than two such churches. See 1 Cor. xvi. 1, and Acts xvi. 6; xviii. 23. περi, in this connexion, has much the same sense as iπερ: see reff., and note on Eph. vi. 19; also Ellic.'s note here. iπ. iξiλητai] iξaiρεiσθai is the very word used by the Lord of St. Paul's own great deliverance, see reff.

τ. alwvos τ. ένεστ. πονηρού] the present (not, as Mey., 'coming.' The word will not bear this meaning in 1 Cor. vii. 26, nor apparently [see note] in 2 Thess. ii. 2, much less in Rom. viii. 38) evil age (state of things; i.e. the course of this present evil world ;- and, as understood, make us citizens and inheritors of a better alwros, τοῦ μέλλοντος. So Luther : "vocat hunc totum mundum, qui fuit, est et erit, præsens seculum, ad differentiam futuri ct æterni sæculi." The allusion (Jowett) to the Jewish expressions, "the present age," "the age to come," as applying to the periods before and after the Messiah's coming, is very faint,—indeed hardly traceable, in the change which the terms had undergone as used in a spiritual sense by Christians. See however the rest of his note, which is full of interest).

Ratà $\tau \delta$ $\theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \mu a$...] And this, (1) not according to our own plan, in proportion to our legal obedience or any quality in us, but according to the Father's sovereign will, the prime standard of all the process of redemption: and (2) not so that we may trifle with such rescuing purpose of Christ by mixing it with other schemes and fancies, seeing that it is according to a procedure preseribed by Him, who doeth all things after the counsel of His own will. And this, not as the lord merely of His works, but as $\pi a \tau \rho \delta s \ \eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$, bound to us in the ties of closest love-for our good, as well as to fulfil His own eternal purpose. On the question, whether the genitive $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ depends on both, or only on the latter of the two nouns $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v} \kappa$. $\pi a \tau \rho \delta s$, I agree iu Ellicott's conclusion, that as $\pi a \tau \rho \delta s$ is regularly anarthrous, and thus purely grammatical considerations are confounded, — as $\theta \epsilon \delta s$ conveys one absolute idea, while $\pi a \tau h \rho$ might convey many relative ones, it is natural to believe that the Apostle may have added a defining genitive to $\pi a \tau \eta \rho$, which he did not intend to be referred to $\theta\epsilon\delta s$. Render there-fore, God and our Father, not 'our God and Father.' 5. ψ ή δόξ.] So (reff.) on other occasions, when speaking of the wonderful things of God, St. Paul adds a doxology. " In politeia, quando regum aut principum nomina appellamus, id honesto quodam gestu, reverentia, et genuflexione facere solemus. Multo magis cum de Deo loquimur, genu cordis flectere debemus." Luther. In $\dot{\eta} \, \delta \xi a, -$ the glory $\kappa a \tau' \dot{\epsilon} \xi - \delta \chi \dot{\eta} \nu$, or 'the glory which is His,'- the article is probably inserted for solemnity. " In this and similar forms of doxology,excepting the angelic doxology, Luke ii. 14, and that of the multitude, Luke xix. 38, $-\delta\delta\xi a$ regularly takes the article when used alone : see Rom. xi. 36; xvi. 27; Eph. iii. 21; Phil. iv. 20; 2 Tim. iv. 18; Heb. xiii. 21; 2 Pet. iii. 18. When joined with one or more substantives, it appears sometimes with the article (1 Pet. iv, 11; Rev. i. 6; vii. 12): sometimes without it (Rom. ii. 10; 1 'Tim. i. 17; Jude 25)." CHRIST, AND NOT POPULARITY AMONG MEN. We have none of the usual expressions of thankfulness for their faith, &c.; but he hurries vehemently into his subjeet, and, as Chrys. says, σφυδρότερον τώ μετά ταῦτα κέχρηται λόγω, καθάπερ πυρωθels σφοδρώς ύπο της έννοίας τών εύερ-γεσιών τοῦ θεοῦ. 6.] θαυμάζω in this sense (see reff.) is a word of mildness, inasmuch as it imports that better things were expected of them,-and of condescension, as letting down the writer to the level of his readers and even challenging explanation from them. Still, like many other such mild words, it earries to the guilty conscience even sharper rebuke than a harsher one would. ούτως ταχέως] either (1) 'so soon after your conversion' (Calv., Olsh., Meyer, &c.), or (2) 'so quickly,'-' after so little persuasion,' when the false teachers once came among you (Chr., De W., &c.), or (3) 'so soon after my recent visit among you' (Bengel, &c.). Of these I prefer (1), as more suiting the dignity of the passage, and as the more general and comprehen-sive reason. But it does not exclude (2) and (3): 'so soon,' might be, and might be intended to be, variously supplied. Sce Prolegomena, on the time and place of writing this Epistle. μετατίθ.] are passing over, pres.: not as E. V. It is interesting to notice, in connexion with ούτως ταχέως μετατίθεσθε, the character given by Casar of the Gauls : "ut ad bella suscipienda Gallorum alacer ac promtus est animus : sic mollis ac minime resistens ad calamitates mens ipsorum est." In the secondary transferred sense of local prepositions, so often found in later Greek, it is extremely difficult to assign the precise shade of meaning : see Jowett's and Ellic.'s notes here. But we may safely lay down two strongly marked regions of prepositional force, which must never be confounded, that of motion, and that of rest. ϵv , for example, can never be strictly rendered 'into,' nor els, 'in.' Where such appears to be the case, some logical consideration has been overlooked, which if introduced would right the meaning) the grace of Christ. is : 'This etepov evayy. is only in so far another, that there are certain, who &c.' Notice that the stress is on ouk; so that Paul, though he had before said els erepor evayy., yet guards the unity of the Gospel, and explains what he meant by $\epsilon \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu$ evaryéhiov to be nothing but a corruption and perversion of the one Gospel of Christ. Others, as Chrys., (Ec., Thdrt., Luther, De Wette, &c., take δ οὐκ ἔστιν άλλο as all referring to εὐαγγέλιον, "which is (admits of being) no other" (= μη öντos $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda o v$): and then $\epsilon i \mu \eta$ is merely adversative, 'but,' or 'only,' a meaning which it will hardly bear, but which, as De W. remarks, is not necessarily involved in his interpretation : 'except that' answering for it quite as well. The objection to his view is (1) that the meaning assigned to 8 our έστιν άλλο is very harsh, taking the relative from its applieation to the concrete ($\epsilon \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu \epsilon \nu a \gamma \gamma$.), and enlarging it to the abstract ($\tau \delta \epsilon \partial a \gamma \gamma$. in general) (2) that the juxtaposition of $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\rho\sigma\nu$ and $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\sigma$ in one sentence seems to require, as in 1 Cor. xv. 40, 41, that the strict meaning of each should be observed. Others again (Winer, Olsh., &c.) refer the 8 to the whole sentence from $\delta \tau i$ &c. to eda $\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda$ iov — 'which (viz. your falling away) is nothing else but (has no other cause, but that) f.c.' To this the objeetion (2) above applies, and it is besides very unlikely that St. Paul would thus have shifted all blame from the Galatians to their false teachers (' hanc culpam non tam vobis imputo quam perturbatoribus illis,' &c. Luther), and, as it were, wiped out the effect of his rebuke just after uttering it. Lastly, Schött., and Cornel. a Lapide, take & our for. and as a parenthesis, and refer $\epsilon i \mu \eta$ to $\theta a \nu \mu \dot{a} \zeta \omega$, which should thus have been $\epsilon \theta a \dot{\nu} \mu a \zeta o \nu$ (av). This would besides make the sentence a very harsh and unnatural one. The nature of this 'different Gospel,' as gathered from the data in our Epistle, was (1), though recognizing Jesus as the Christ, it insisted on circumeision and the observance of the Mosaic ordinances as to times, &c.: (2) it professed to rest on the authority of some of the other Apostles : see Chrys. quoted below. υί ταρ.] The article points out in a more marked manner the (notorious) occupation of these men, q. d. We may add Heb. ii. 16]. eis 'Aρaβ.] On the place which this journey holds in the narrative of Acts ix., sco notes on vv. 19, 22 there. Into what part of Arabia he went, we have no means of determining. The name was a very vague one, sometimes including Damascus ('Damascus Arabiæ retro deputabatur, antequam transcripta erat in Syrophœnicem ex distine-tione Syriarum.' Tert. adv. It was however more usually restricted to that peninsula now thus called, between the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. Here we must apparently take it in the wider sense, and understand that part of the Arabian desert which nearly bordered on Damascus. (From C. and H. edn. 2, i. p. 117, f.) How long he remained there we are equally at a loss to say. Hardly for any considerable portion of the three years : Acts ix. 23 will scarcely admit of this: for those nuépai inaval were manifestly passed at Damascus. James, the Lord's brother, was one of the Twelve, and the only one besides Peter whom Paul saw at this visit: (2) that he was one $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ anos $\tau \delta \lambda \omega \nu$, but not necessarily of the Twelve. Of these, (1) apparently cannot be : for after the choosing of the Twelve (John vi. 70), the $a\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi ol$ of our Lord did not believe on Him (John vii. 5): an expression (see note there) which will not admit of any of His brethren having then been His disciples. We must then adopt (2): which is besides in consonance with other notices respecting the term $d\pi \delta \sigma \tau o \lambda \sigma s$, and the person here mentioned. I reserve the subject for full discussion in the prolegomena to the Ep. of James. See also notes, Matt. x. 3; xiii. 55; John vii. 5. 20.] This asseveration (cf. 2 Cor. xi. 31) applies most naturally to the important fact just asserted -his short visit to Jerusalem, and his having seen only Peter and James, rather thau to the whole subject of the chapter. If a report had been spread in Galatia that after his conversion he spent years at Jerusalem and received regular institution in Christianity at the hands of the Apostles, this last fact would naturally cause amazement, and need a strong confirmatory asse-As regards the construction, veration. δ ὑμῖν stands alone, (with regard to) the things which I am writing to you, and the word necessary to be supplied to carry on the sense from ίδου ενώπ. τ. θεού to $5\tau_i$, lies under the $i\delta_0 i$, which here answers to such words as Siapaprúpopai, 1 Tim. v. 21; 2 Tim. ii. 14; iv. 1,-παραγγέλλω, 1 Tim. vi. 13. Meyer would supply $\gamma \rho \dot{a} \phi \omega$, which seems harsh : others take ότι as 'for,' which is worse still (ef. 2 Cor. xi. 21, δ θεδs οίδεν ότι οὐ ψεύδομαι),-and this too, understanding έστίν after θεοῦ (Bengel). 21. The beginning only of this journey is related iu Acts ix. 30, where see note. Mr. Howson suggests (edn. 2, i. p. 129, f.) that he may have gone at once from Cæsarea to Tarsus by sea, and Syria and Cilicia may afterwards have been the field of his activity, -these provinces being very generally mentioned together, from their geographical affinity, Cilicia being separated from Asia Minor by Mount Taurus. (See also note on Luke ii. 1, 2.) Winer, al. have understood by Syria here, Phonicia: but as Meyer has shewn, inconsistently with usage. In Acts xv. 23, 41, we find churches in Syria and Cilicia, which may have been founded by Paul on this journey. The supposition is confirmed by our ver. 23 : see below. 22, 23.] 'So far was I from being a disciple of the Apostles, or tarrying in their company, that the churches of Judza, where they principally laboured, did not even know me by sight.' τώ προςώπω, the referential, or adverbial dative : Donalds., Gramm. § 457. της 'Iovδaías excludes Jerusalem, where he was known. By thus shewing the spirit with which the churches of Judza were actuated towards him, he marks more strongly the contrast between them and the Galatian Judaizers. Thdrt. says strikingly : μανθάνοντες γάρ την αθρόαν μεταβολήν, κ. ότι ό λύκος τα ποιμένων ἐργάζεται, της εἰς τον θεόν ύμνωδίας τὰ κατ' ἐμὲ πρόφασιν ἐλάμβα-II. 1-10.] On his subsequent vov. visit to Jerusalem, he maintained equal independence, was received by the Apostles as of co-ordinate authority with themselves, and was recognized as the Apostle of the uncircumcision. 1. διά δεκατ. έτῶν] First, what does this διά imply? According to well-known usage, Siá with a genitive of time or space signifies 'through and beyond :' thus, & µèv xpovos & bià χρόνου προύβαινέ μοι, Soph. (The instrumental usage, διά δακρύων, διά νυκτός, &c. is derived from this, the instrument being regarded as the means, passed through before the end is attained : but obviously has no place here, where a definite time is mentioned.) See more in Ellic. Sià Ser. er. then is after fourteen years, δεκατεσσάρων παρελθόντων ετών, Chrys. Next, from what time are we to reekon? Certainly at first sight it would appear, - from the journey last men-tioned. And Meyer maintains that we are bound to accept this first impression without enquiring any further. But why? Is the prima facie view of a construction always right? Did we, or did he, judge thus in ch. i. 18? Are we not bound, in all such cases, should any reason ab extra exist for doing so, to reexamine the passage, and ascertain whether our prima facie impression may not have arisen from neglecting some indication furnished by the context? That this is the case here, I am persuaded. The ways of speaking, in ch. i. 18, and here, are very similar. The $\epsilon \pi \epsilon_{i\tau a}$ in both cases may be well taken as referring back to the same terminus a quo, did being used in this verse as applying to the larger interval, or even perhaps to prevent the fourteen years being counted from the event last mentioned, as they would more naturally be, had a second µετά been used. What would there be forced or unnatural in a statement of the following kind? " After my conversion (ὅτε δέ, &c. ch. i. 15) my occasions of communicating with the other Apostles were these : (1) after three years I went up, &c. (2) after fourteen years had elapsed, I again went up, &c.?" This view is much favoured, if not rendered decisive, by the change in position of $\epsilon \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ and the numeral, in this second instance. In ch. i. 18, it is μετὰ έτη τρία: $\epsilon \tau \eta$, in the first mention of the interval, having the emphatic place. But now, it is not δι' έτων δεκατεσσάρων, but διά δεκατεσσάρων ετών-ετών now passing into the shade, and the numeral having the emphasis-a clear indication to me that the $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\eta$ have the same reference as before, viz. to the time of his conversion. A list, and ample discussion, of the opinions on both sides, will be found in Anger, de ra-This (cf. Chrotione temporum, ch. iv. nol. Table in Prolegg. Vol. II.) would bring the visit here related to the year 50: sec πάλιν ανέβην] I again below. went up: but nothing is said, and there was no need to say any thing, of another visit during the interval. It was the object of the Apostle to specify, not all his visits to Jerusalem, but all his occasions of intercourse with the other Apostles: and it is mere trifling, when Meyer, in his love of creating discrepancies, maintains that in such a narration as this, St. Paul would be putting a weapon into the hands of his opponents by omitting his second journey. That journey was undertaken (Acts xi. 30) in pursuance of a mission from the church at Antioch, to convey alms to the elders of the suffering church at Jerusalem. It was at a period of persecution, when James the son of Zebedee and Peter were under the power of Herod, -and in all probability the other Apos-tles were scattered. Probably Barnabas and Saul did not see any of them. They merely (Acts xii. 25) fulfilled their errand, and brought back John Mark. If in that visit he had no intercourse with the Apostles, as his business was not with them, the mention of it here would be irrelevant : and to attempt, as Mey., to prove the Acts inaccurate, because that journey is not mentioned here, is simply absurd. That the visit here described is in all probability the THIRD related in the Acts (A.D. 50) on occasion of the council of Apostles and elders (Acts xv.), I have shewn in a note to the chronological table, Prolegomena to Acts, Vol. II. The various separate circumstances of the visit will be noticed as we proceed.

συνπ. καί Τίτον] In Acts xv. 2, έταξαν άναβαίνειν Π. κ. Βαρν. καί τινας άλλους έξ αὐτῶν. Titus is here particularized by name, on account of the notice which follows, ver. 3: and the kai serves to take him out from among the others. On Titus, see Prolegg. to Ep. to Titus. 2.] δé not only carries on the narrative, emphatically releating the verb (Mey.), but carries on the refutation also-but I went up (not for any purpose of learning from or consulting others, but) &c. :- So Il. w. 484, ώς 'Αχιλεύς θάμβησεν ίδών Πρίαμον θεοειδέα· θάμβησαν δε καλ άλλοι,-and other examples in Hartung, i. p. 168. Of his undertaking the journey κατ' ἀποκάλυψιν, nothing is said in the Acts, all that is related there being, the appointment by the church of Paul and Barnabas and What divine intimation others to go. Paul may have received, inducing him to offer himself for the deputation, we cannot say: that some such occurred, he here assures us, and it was important for him to assert it, as shewing his dependence only on divine leading, and independence of any behests from the Jeru-salem church. Meyer well remarks that the history itself of the Acts furnishes an instance of such a double prompting: Peter was induced by a vision, and at the same time by the messengers of Cornelius, to go to Cæsarca. Schrader would give a singular meaning to Kat' anoká- $\lambda v \psi v$; that his visit was for the purpose of making known the Gospel which he preached, &c. Hermann (dc ep. ad Gal. trib. prim. capp., cited by Meyer) agrees; "explicationis causa, i.e. ut patefieret inter ipsos quæ vera esset Jesu doctrina." But it is against this sense, that (1) the N. T. usage of αποκάλυψιs always has respect to revelation from above, and (2) this very phrase, κατ' ἀποκάλυψιν, is found in ref. Eph. used absolutely as here, undoubtedly there signifying by revelation. Hermann's objection that for this meaning, ката́ τ ила anok. would be required, is nugatory : not the particular revelation (concrete) which occasioned the journey, but merely the fact that it was by (abstract) revelation, is specified.

Ellic. ed. 2, questions this, and understands & to introduce another conference, more private than that just mentioned) in private (in a private conference : not to be conceived as separate from, but as specifying, the former $d\nu\epsilon\theta\epsilon\mu\eta\nu$) to those that were eminent (more at length ver. 6, of δοκοῦντεs εlval τι. These were James, Cephas, and John, ver. 9,-who appear to have been the only Apostles then at Jerusalem. Olsh. supposes the words to imply blame, not in the mind of the Apostle himself, but as reflecting on the unworthy exaltation of these Apostles by the Judaizing teachers. He illustrates this by οί ύπερλίαν απόστολοι, 2 Cor. xi. 5; but an expression of such feeling here seems out of place, and it is better to understand of δοκούντεs as describing mere matter of fact ; see examples in Kypke and Elsner), lest by any means I should (seem to) be running, or (to) have run, in vain. ού περί έαυτοῦ τέθεικεν, άλλά περί των άλλων τουτέστιν, Ίνα μάθωσιν άπαντες την του κηρύγματος συμφωνίαν, κ. ότι κ. τοις άλλοις αρέσκει τα ύπ' έμου κηρυττόμενα, Thdrt. : so also Chrys., Thl., Calv., al. The construction of two moods after the same conjunction is found elsewhere in Paul : cf. 1 Thess. iii. 5. The present subjunctive $\tau \rho \epsilon \chi \omega$ implies continuance in the course; the 2 aorist indicative ἔδραμον, the course already run. It is quite out of the question, that this last clause should express a bonâ fide fear, lest his ministry should really be, or have been, in vain, without the recognition of the church at Jerusalem (De W., al.): such a sentiment would be unworthy of him, and, besides, at variance with the whole course of his argument here. The reference must be (as Thdrt. above) to the estimation in which his preaching would be held by those to whom he imparted it. When we consider the very strong prejudices of the Jerusalem church, this feeling of anxiety, leading him to take measures to prevent his work from being tumultuously disowned by them, is surely but natural. On $\epsilon is \kappa \epsilon \nu \delta \nu$ and $\tau \rho \epsilon \chi \omega$, see reff. (The grammatical difficulty is well discussed in Ellicott's note.)

3.7 But (so far were they from regarding my course to have been in vain, that) neither (άλλ' οὐδέ intro-duces a climax, see reff.) was Titus, who was with me, being a Greek (i. e. though he was a Gentile, and therefore liable to the demand that he should be circumcised), compelled to be circumcised (i. e. we did not allow him to be thus compelled : the facts being, as here implied, that the church at Jerusalem [and the Apostles? apparently not, from Acts xv. 5] demanded his circumcision. but on account of the reason following, the demand was not complied with, but resisted by Paul and Barnabas. So Meyer, with Piscator and Bengel, and I am persuaded, rightly, from what follows. But usually it is understood, that the circumeision of Titus was not even demanded, and that Paul alleged this as shewing his agreement with the other Apostles. So Chrys. : ἀκρόβυστον ὕντα οὐκ ἡνάγκασαν περιτμηθήναι οἱ ἀπόστολοι, ὅπερ ἀπόδειξις ήν μεγίστη τοῦ μή καταγινώσκειν τών ύπό τοῦ Παύλου λεγομένων ή πραττομένων : so also Thdrt., Thl., (Ec., &c., and Winer and De W. Had this been so, besides that the following could not have stood as it does, not the strong word $\eta \nu a \gamma \kappa a \sigma \theta \eta$, but the weakest possible word would have been used-' the circumcision of Titus was not even mentioned'):

4.] but (i. e. 'and this :'--the construction of the sentence is [against Ellic.] precisely as ver. 2: this $\delta \epsilon'$ restricts and qualifies the broader assertion which went before. 'Titus was not compelled...: and that,' &c. 'To connect this with ver. 2, supposing ver. 3 to be parenthetical, as Mr. Bagge, seens harsh, and unnecessary. A second $\delta \epsilon'$ would hardly be found in the same sentence in this restrictive sense) on account of the false brethren who had been foisted in among us (the Judaizers in the church at Jerusalem, see Acts xv. 1. The verb $\pi a \rho \epsilon_{is} a' \gamma \epsilon_{i\nu}$ is common in Polybius, without any idea of surreptitious introduction : see Schweigh.'s Index : but such an idea certainly seems here to be attached to it, by the repetition of παρειs-, in παρειsήλθον immediately after), men who (ottives classifies) crept in to spy out (in a hostile sense: so Chrys.,δρ?ς πως και τη των κατασκόπων προςηγορία εδήλωσε τον πόλεμον εκείνων, - reff., and Eur. I should rather say that it signifies the certain sequence, in the view of the agent, of that which follows, not merely that it is his intent,-and that it arises from the mingling of two constructions, beginning as if Iva with the subjunctive were about to be used, and then passing off to the direct indicative); to whom not even for one hour (reff.) did we (Barnabas, Titus, and myself) yield with the subjection required of us (dative of the manner : the article giving the sense, 'with the subjection claimed.' Fritzsche takes it, ' yield by complying with the wish of the Apostles .' but this is manifestly against the context : Hermann, and similarly Bretschneider, ' quibus ne horæ quidem spalium Jesu obsequio segnior fui,'absurdly enough, against the whole drift of the passage, and the Apostle's usage of υποταγή abstractedly), that the truth of the Gospel (as contrasted with the perverted view which they would have introduced : but not to be confounded with $\tau \delta$ άληθès εὐαγγέλιον. Had they been overborne in this point, the verity of the Gospel would have been endangered among them,-i. c. that doctrine of justification, on which the Gospel turns as the truth of God) might abide (rcff. : and note on ch. i. 18) with you ('you Galatians:' not, 'you Gentiles in general :' the fact was so,-the Galatians, specially, not being in his mind at the time : it is only one of those cases where, especially if a rhetorical purpose is to be served, we apply home to the particular what, as matter of fact, it only shares as included in the general).

The omission of ols oude in this sentence (see var. readd.) has been an attempt to simplify the construction, and at the same time to reconcile Paul's conduct with that in Acts xvi. 3, where he circumcised Timothy on account of the Jews. But the circumstances were then widely different: and the whole narrative in Acts xv. makes it extremely improbable that the Apostle should have pursued such a course on this occasion. 6.] He returns to his sojourn in Jerusalem, and his intercourse with the δοκούντες. The construction is difficult, and has been very variously given. It seems best (aud so most Commentators) to regard it as an anacoluthon. The Apostle begins with $d\pi \partial \delta \hat{\epsilon}$ των δοκούντων elval τι, having it in his mind to add oùdev $\pi pose\lambda a\beta \delta \mu \eta \nu$ or the like : but then, going off into the parenthesis δποῖοί ποτε ἦσαν &c., he entirely loses sight of the original construction, and proceeds with euol yap &c., which follows on the parenthesis, the $\gamma d\rho$ rendering a reason [this is still my view, against Ellic. whose note see] for the obdev por diapeper &c. De Wette and others think that the parenthesis ends at AaµBávei, and the construction is resumed from $d\pi \delta$ $\delta \epsilon$ &c. in an active instead of in a passive form : but it seems better, with Meyer, to regard the parenthesis as never formally closed, and the original construction not resumed. Other ways are; (1) most of the Greek Fathers (Chrys. hardly says enough for this to be inferred as his opinion), and others (e. g. Olsh., Rückert) take $a\pi \delta$ as belonging to $\delta \iota a \phi \epsilon \rho \epsilon \iota$, as if it were περί: so Thl., οὐδεμία μοι φροντίς περί τών δοκούντων, &c. The preposition seems capable, if not exactly of this interpretation, of one very nearly akin to it, as in $\beta\lambda\epsilon\pi\epsilon\tau\epsilon$ and the like expressions : but the objection is, that it is unnatural to join $\delta_{ia}\phi\epsilon_{\rho\epsilon_i}$ with $a\pi\delta$ which lies so far from it, when $\delta \pi o loi \pi o \tau \epsilon \tilde{\eta} \sigma$. (2) Homberg (Pareng, p. 275: Meyer) renders, —'ab illis vero, qui videntur esse aliquid, non differo.' But as Meyer remarks, though $\delta_{ia}\phi\epsilon_{\rho\omega}$ and $\tau_{i\nu}$ os may bear this meaning, certainly διαφέρει μοι από τινοs cannot. (3) Hermann assumes an aposiopesis, and understands 'what should I fear?' but an aposiopesis seems out of place in a passage which does not rise above the fervour of narrative. See other interpretations in Meyer and De οί δοκούντ. είναί τι may be Wette. either subjective ('those who believe themselves to be something'), or objective ('those who have the estimation of being something'). One of the most curious instances of ecclesiastical ingenuity on record has been afforded in the interpretation of this passage by the fathers. They try to make it appear that the reproof was only an apparent one-that & beios Hérpos was entirely in the right, and Paul withstood him, Harà $\pi \rho \delta s \omega \pi o \nu$, 'in appearance merely,' be-eause he had been blamed by others. So Chrys.: so Thdrt. also: and Jerome,-" Paulus . . . nova usus est arte pugnandi, ut dispensationem Petri, qua Judæos salvari cupiebat, nova ipse contradictionis dispensatione corrigeret, et resisteret ci in facie, non arguens propositum, sed quasi in publico contradicens, ut ex co quod Paulus cum arguens resistebat, hi qui crediderant e gentibus servarentur." In Ep. ad Gal. ad loc. This view of his met with strong opposition from Augustine, who writes to him, nobly and worthily, Ep. 40. 3, vol. ii. p. 155, ed. Migne : "In expositione quoque Ep. Pauli ad Gal., invenimus aliquid, quod nos multum moveat. Si enim ad Scripturas sanctas admissa fuerint velut officiosa mendacia, quid in cis remanchit auctoritatis? I therefore prefer the former : he was [self] convicted : convicted of inconsistency by his conduct). 12. These τινες από 'Ιακώβου have been softened by some Commentators into persons who merely gave themselves out as from James (Winer, &c. and even Ellicott, edn. 2), or who inercly came from Jerusalein where James presided (Beza, Grot., Olsh., &c.). But the candid reader will I think at once recognize in the words a mission from James (so Thl., Ec., Estius [doubtfully], Rückert, Meyer, De W.) : and will find no difficulty in believing that that Apostle, even after the decision of the council regarding the Gentile converts, may have retained (characteristically, see his recommendation to St. Panl, in Acts xxi. 18 ff.)

his strict view of the duties of Jewish converts,-for that is perbaps all that the present passage requires. And this mission may have been for the very purpose of admonishing the Jewish converts of their obligations, from which the Gentiles were free. Thus we have no occasion to assume (with Dc W.) that James had in the council been over-persuaded by the earnestness and eloquence of Paul, and had afterwards undergone a reaction: for his course will be consistent throughout. And my view seems to me to be confirmed by his own words, Acts xv. 19, where the emphatic τοις από των έθνων έπιστρέφου- $\sigma_{i\nu}$ tacitly implies, that the Jews would be bound as before. συνήσθιεν] Αs he had done, Acts x., on the prompting of a heavenly vision ; and himself defended it, Acts xi. but very little likeness to that discussed in 1 Cor. viii.-x.; Rom. xiv. There, it was a mere matter of licence which was in question : here, the very foundation itself. It was not now a question of using a liberty, but of asserting a truth, that of justification by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law. ώςτε συναπήχθη] The indicative usually follows $\omega_{s\tau\epsilon}$, when the result is matter of fact: the infinitive usually, when it is matter of course as well. 14.] δρθοποδειν apparently not occurring elsewhere, its meaning must be got from cognate words. We have arpandy όρθοβατεΐν, Anthol. ix. 11, όρθοπραγεΐν, Arist. Eth. Eud. iii. 2, and όρθυτομέω, όρθοδρομέω, &c.: to walk straight is therefore undoubtedly its import, and metaphorically (cf. περιπατείν, στοιχείν frequently in Paul), to behave uprightly.

πρόs] It is best, with Meyer, to take αλήθεια as in ver. 5, and render, connecting $\pi \rho \delta s$ with $\delta \rho \theta \sigma \pi \delta \delta \delta \sigma \nu$, towards (with a view to) maintaining and propagating the truth (objectively, the unadulterated character) of the Gospel. Others (De W., al.) render $\pi\rho\delta s$ 'with reference to,' ('according to,' E.V.,) and take T. ahno. T. ev. to mean ' the truth (.fulness of character) required by the Gospel.' Mey. remarks, that St. Paul does not express nouns after verbs of motion by πρόs, but by κατά, cf. Rom. viii. 4; xiv. 15; 1 Cor. iii. 3. Ellic. however answers, that in all these instances, $\pi \epsilon \rho i \pi a \tau \epsilon \omega$, St. Paul's favourite verb of moral motion, is used, and that opportode does not so plainly express motion as $\pi\epsilon_{\rho i\pi}a\tau\epsilon\omega$. Still, I prefer the former meaning, as better suiting the expression $\dot{\eta} \ \dot{a}\lambda\dot{\eta}\theta\epsilon_{ia}$ τ. εὐαγγ.: ef. ver. 5. έμπρ. πάντ.] ' before the church assembled.' The words require this, and the reproof would otherwise have fallen short of its desired effect on the Jewish converts. The speech which follows, and which I believe to extend to the end of the chapter, must be regarded as a compendium of what was said, and a free report of it, as we find in the narratives by St. Paul himself of his conversion. See below. If thou, being (by birth, originally, cf. Acts xvi. 20 and note) a Jew, livest (as thy usual habit. As Neander [Pfl. u. above) and not as a Jew, how (is it that [reff.]) thou art compelling the Gentiles (i. c. virtually and ultimately; for the high authority of Peter and Barnabas would make the Gentile converts view their course as necessary to all Christians. There is no need, with De W. and Wieseler, to suppose that the $\tau i\nu \epsilon s$ and 'lak. actually compelled the Gentile converts to Judaize, as necessary to salvation, and Peter upheld them: nor is there any difficulty in the expression : the present may mean, as it often does, 'art compelling to the best of thy power,' 'doing thy part to compel,'-for such certainly would be the ultimate result, if Jews and Gentiles might not company together in social life-" his principle logically involved this, or his influence and example would be likely to effect it." Jowett) to Judaize (observe the ceremonial law)? 15.] Some (Calv., Beza, Grot., Her-mann, al.) think that the speech ends with ver. 14: Calov., al., with ver. 15: Luther, al., with ver. 16 : Flatt, Neander, al., with ver. 18: Jowett, that the conversation gradually passes off into the general subject of the Epistle. "Ver. 14," he says, "is the answer of St. Paul to St. Peter: what follows, is more like the Apostle musing or arguing with himself, with an indirect reference to the Galatians." But it seems very unnatural to place any break before the end of the chapter. The Apostle recurs to the Galatians again with & ανόητοι Γαλάται, ch. iii. 1: and it is harsh in the extreme to suppose him to pass from his speech to Peter into an address to them with so little indication of the transition. I therefore regard the speech (which doubtless is freely reported, and gives rather the bearing of what was said, than the words themselves, as in Acts xxii. and xxvi.) as continuing to the end of the chapter, as do Chr., Thdrt., Jer., Est., Beng., Rosenm., Winer, Rückert, Usteri, Olsh., B.-Crus., Meyer, De W. We (thou and I) by nature (birth) Jews and not sinners from among the Gentiles (he is speaking to Peter from the common ground of their Judaism, and using [ironically ?] Judaistic language, in which the Gentiles were άθεοι, άνομοι, άδικυι, άμαρτωλοί [reff.]. hypothesis, which arises in the mind, of the two being united) the faith of (see above) Jesus Christ,-we also (as well as the Gentile sinners, q. d., casting aside our legal trust) believed (reff.) on Christ Jesus (notice 'Ιησ. χρ. above, χρ. In the general proposition above, $1\eta\sigma$. $\chi\rho$., as the name of Him on whom faith is to be exercised : here, when Jews receive Him as their Messiah, $\chi \rho$. It may be remarked, that the Codex Sinaiticus agrees throughout with our text) that we might be justified by (this time, faith is the ground) the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: because (it is an axiom in our theology that) by the works of the law shall all flesh find no justification (Angl. : 'shall no flesh be justified :' our language not admitting of the logical form of the Greek : but by this transposition of the negative, the sense is not accurately rendered). There is a difference between Commentators in the arrangement of the foregoing sentence. Meyer follows Lachmann in placing a period after xpiorov, and understanding έσμέν at 'Ιουδ. or άμαρτωλοί. Βεza, Hermann, Rückert, Usteri, Ellicott, al., begin a new sentence at eisóres Sé, also understanding $\epsilon \sigma \mu \epsilon \nu$. But it seems much better, as above (with De W., al.), to carry on the sentence throughout. Meyer's objection, that thus it would not represent the matter of fact, for Peter and Paul were not converted as $\epsilon i\delta \delta \tau \epsilon s \kappa . \tau . \lambda$., would apply equally to his own arrangement, for they were not converted Iva δικαιωθώσιν κ.τ.λ. 17.] Continues the argument. But if, seeking (put first for emphasis-in the course of our earnest endeavour) to be justified in Christ (as the element-the Body, comprehending us the members. This is lost sight of by rendering 'through Christ'), we ourselves also (you and I, addressed to Peter) were found to be sinners (as we should be, if we regarded the keeping of the law as necessary; for we should be just in the situation of those Gentiles who in the Judaistic view are aµaptwhol, fuith having failed in obtaining rightcousness for us, and we having cast aside the law which we were bound to keep), is therefore Christ the minister of sin (i. e. are we to admit the consequence which would in that case be inevitable, that Christ, having failed to obtain for his own the righteousness which is by faith, has left them sinners, and so has done all His work only to minister to a state of sin)? Whether we read apa or apa matters little; either will express the meaning, but the latter more pungently than the former. The clause must be interrogative, as $\mu\eta$ yévoiro always follows a question in St. Paul; see reff. Those who would take âρa for âρ' οὐ [qu. can it ever be so taken, in spite of Matthiæ (Gr. Gr. § 641), Winer (comm. h. l., but not in Gr. ed. 6, § 57. 2, where he allows the translation given above), Monk (on Eur. Alcest. 353), and Porson (pref. to Hec. p. x)?] seem to me to miss altogether the fine irony of the question, which, as it stands, presupposes the ap' ov question already asked, the inevitable answer given, and now puts the result, 'Can we believe, are we to hold henceforth, such a consequence?' The same might be said of all the passages alleged by the above scholars in support of their view. Theodoret expresses well the argument : εί δε δτι τον νόμον καταλιπόντες τῷ χριστῷ προςεληλύθαμεν, διὰ τῆς ἐπ' αὐτὸν πίστεως τῆς δικαιοσύνης απολαύσασθαι προςδοκήσαντες, παράβασις τοῦτο νενόμισται, εἰς αὐτὸν ἡ αἰτία χωρήσει τον δεσπότην χριστόν αυτός γαρ ήμιν την properly apprehended by me, was my $\pi a_i \delta a_j \omega_j \delta s$ to Christ : and in Christ, who fulfilled the law, I died to the law : i. e. satisfied the law's requirements, and passed out of its pale : the dative, as Ellic. remarks, is a sort of dativus commodi, as also in $(\tilde{\eta}\nu \ \theta \epsilon \tilde{\psi})$ that I should live to God (the end of Christ's work, LIFE unto God. ζήσω is 1 aor. subj. in subordination to the aor. preceding: not fut., as stated in former edd. See Ellic.). Many of the Fathers (some as an alternative), Luther, Bengel, al., take the first vous here to mean the Gospel (the νόμος τοῦ πνεύματος τῆς ζωῆς of Rom. viii. 2); but it will be manifest to any who follow the argument, that this cannot be so. This $\delta i \dot{a} \nu \delta \mu \omega \nu \delta \mu \omega \dot{a} \pi \epsilon \theta a - \nu \sigma \nu$ is in fact a compendium of his expanded experience in Rom. vii. : and also of his argument in ch. iii. iv. below.

18.] For (substantiates the $\mu\eta$ yévoiro, and otherwise deduces the evpé- $\dot{\theta}_{\eta\mu\epsilon\nu}$ $\dot{a}_{\mu a \rho \tau \omega \lambda o i}$ if the things which I pulled down, those very things (and no others) I again build up (which thou art doing, who in Cæsarea didst so plainly announce freedom from the law, and again here in Antioch didst practise it thyself. The first person is chosen clementiæ causa; the second would have placed Peter, where the first means that he should place himself), I am proving (reff.) myself a transgressor (παραβάτηs is the species, bringing me under the genus ἁμαρτωλός. So that $\pi a \rho a \beta$. $\epsilon \mu$. $\sigma \nu \nu i \sigma \tau$. is the explanation of αμαρτωλοl ευρέθημεν). The force of. the verse is,- 'You, by now reasserting the obligation of the law, are proving (quoad te) that your former step of setting aside the law was in fact a transgression of it :' viz. in that you neglected and set it aside,-not, as Chrys., Thl., and Meyer (from ver. 19), because the law itself was leading you on to faith in Christ: for (1) that point is not yet raised, not belonging to this portion of the argument, and (2) by the hypothesis of this verse the eyé has given up the faith in Christ, and so cannot be regarded as acknowledging it as the end of the law. See against this view, but to me not convincingly, Ellicott, ed. 2.

19.] For (the yap [agst Ellic.] retains, on our view of παραβάτης, its full exemplifying force) I (έγώ, for the first time expressed, is marked and emphatic. The first person of the last verse, serves as the transition point to treating, as he now does, of his own state and course. And this eyé, as that in Rom. vii., is purely and bona fide 'I Paul;' not 'I and all believers') by means of the law died to the law (Christ was the end of the law for righteousness: the law itself.

I am ('and have been,' perf.) crucified with Christ (specification of the foregoing $a\pi\epsilon\theta a \nu o \nu$: the way in which I died to the law was, by being united to, and involved in the death of, that Body of Christ which was crucified): but it is no longer I that live, but (it is) Christ that liveth in me (the punctuation—χρ. συνεσταύρω-μαι, ζω δέ οὐκέτι ἐγώ, ζη δὲ ἐν ἐμ. χρ., as in E. V., &c.-is altogether wrong, and would require and before ounéri. The construction is one not without example, where the cmphatic word is repeated in two parallel clauses, each time with $\delta \epsilon$. Thus Eur. Iph. Taur. 1367, φιλεΐs δε καl σύ τόν κασίγνητον, θεά φιλειν δε κάμε τούς δμαίμονας δόκει: Xen. Cyr. vi. 2. 22, ένθα πολύς μέν οίνος, πολλά δέ σῦκα, πολύ δὲ ἕλαιον, θάλαττα δὲ προςκλύζει. So that our second de is not fondern,- ' not I, but,'-but aber, as the first-q. d. 'but the life is not mine, — but the life is Christ's within me.' Notice, not $\delta \epsilon \nu$ έμοι χρ. : Christ is the vine, we the branches: He lives, He, the same Christ, through and in every one of His believing ύμâs has the emphasis-' rov, to whom,' '&e. ¿βάσκανεν] Not with Chr. al., 'envied,' in which sense the verb usually takes a dative : so Thom. Mag., βασκαίνω, οὐ μόνον ἀντὶ τοῦ φθονῶ, ὅπερ πρός δοτικήν συντάσσεται, άλλά και άντι τοῦ μέμφομαι κ. διαβάλλω παρά τοις παλαιοίς εύρηται, κ. συντάσσεται πρός αίτιατικήν (not always, cf. Sir. xiv. 6); but, as E. V. bewitched, -fascinated: so Aristot. Probl. xx. 34, διà τί τὸ πήγανον βασκανίας φασὶ φάρμακον εἶναι; ἡ διότι βασκαίνεσθαι δοκοῦσι λάβρως ἐσθίοντες;... έπιλέγουσι γοῦν, ὅταν τῆς αὐτῆς τραπέζης ίδία τι προςφέρωνται, μεταδιδόντες, "ίνα μη βασκάνης με." кат' оф9.] openly, — before your eyes : so ίνα σοι κατ' δφθαλμούς λέγη, Aristoph. προεγράφη] was described before, as in reff. It has been variously explained, (1) 'depicted before you.' So (Ec., Thl. (Chrys. ?), Erasm., Luth., Calv., Winer, Rückert, Jowett, &c. But προγράφειν cannot be shewn to have any such meaning; nor [see below] is it required [as Jow.] by the context. (2) ' palam scriptus est ?' so Estius, Elsner, Bengel, al. But this, although an allowable meaning $(\tau \hat{\eta} s)$ δίκης προγεγραμμένης αυτά, δια πένθος ^k - Acts xxili. ^k - Acts siκούρει, Plut. Camill. 11), would not suit έν ύμιν (see below). (3) ' proscriptus est.' So Vulg., Ambr., Aug., Lyra. (προύγραφεν aυτούs φυγάδαs, Polyb. xxxii. 21. 12; οί προγεγραμμένοι, ib. 22. 1.) But this is quite irrelevant to the context. It is best therefore to keep to St. Paul's own meaning of $\pi \rho \sigma \gamma \rho \dot{\alpha} \phi \dot{\epsilon} i \nu$, and understand it to refer to the time when he preached Christ among them, which he represents as a previous description in writing of Christ, in their hearts and before their eyes. Jerome, Hermann, al., understand it as above, 'olim scriptus est,' interpreting it, however, of the prophecies of the O. T. But not to mention that no pro-phecy sets Him forth as eσταυρωμένος, the whole passage (cf. vv. 2-5) evidently refers to the time when the Apostle preached among them. (See more in De W. and Meyer, from whom the above is mainly taken.) [The iv ipiv of the rec. could hardly belong to eσταυρωμένοs; for if so, it would more naturally be έσταυρ. έν ύμῖν, the emphasis, as it now stands, being on ev buiv: but it must belong to mpoεγράφη, as above, and as in 2 Cor. iii. 2,--'in animis vestris.' So Mey. Among the various meanings proposed,- 'among you' (E. V., &c., De W., Rück.), 'on account of you' (Koppe, hut wrongly, see ch. i. 24, note),-Luther's is the most remarkable : "jam non solum abjecistis gratiam Dci, non solum Christus frustra vobis mortuus est, sed turpissime in vobis crucifixus est. Ad enm modum loquitur et Epistola ad Ebr. vi. 6 : denno crucifigentes sibimetipsis filium Dei, &c." This again is condemned by the context, and indeed by the αοτ. προεγράφη.] έσταυρωμένος, as expressing the whole mystery of redemption by grace, and of freedom from legal obligation. ' It has an echo of συνεσταύρωμαι in ch. ii. 20.' Jowett. 2.] τ. µóvov, - not to mention all the other grounds on which I might rest my argu-ment, 'this only,' &c. δια συντόμου λό-γου κ. ταχίστης αποδείζεως ύμας πείσαι Baύλομαι. Chr. μαθείν, be informed: not to he pressed, as Luther, al. ("Agite nune, respondete mihi discipulo vestro, tam subito enim facti estis docti, ut mei jam sitis præceptores et doctores"), but taken in its ordinary sense, see reff. Did ye from (as its ground, see ch. ii. 16) the works of the Law (not a Law) receive the Spirit (evidently here to be taken as including all His gifts, spiritual and external : not as Chr., Thl., Jer., χαρίσματα only: for the two are distinguished in ver. 5), or from the hearing of faith (meaning either, 'that preaching which proclaimed faith,' or 'that hearing, which received (the) faith.' The first is preferable, because (1) where their first receiving the Gospel is in question, the preaching of it would probably be hinted at, as it is indeed taken up by the ovv below, ver. 5: (2) where the question is concerning the power of faith as contrasted with the works of the law, faith would most likely be subjective. But certainly we must not understand it 'obedience [understand it 'obedience [understand it 'obedience [understand it is not in the second secon 5; xvi. 26. See 1 Kings xv. 22] to the faith,' as Wahl, al., which would spoil the contrast here)? 3.] Are ye so (to such an extent, emph.) foolish (as viz. the following fact would prove) ? Having begun (see Phil. i. 6, where the same two verbs occur together, and 2 Cor. viii. 6, where $\pi \rho o \epsilon \nu \eta \rho \xi a \tau o$ is followed by eπιτελέση. Understand, 'the Christian life') in the Spirit (dative of the manner in which, reff. The Spirit, i. c. the Holy (Spirit, guiding and ruling the spiritual life, as the 'essence and active principle' [Ellic.] of Christianity,-contrasted with the flesh,-the element in which the law worked), are ye now being completed (passive here, not mid., cf. Phil. i. 6, where the active is used: and for the passive, Luke xiii. 32. The middle does not appear to occur in the N. T., though it does in classical Greek, e. g. Polyb. ii. 58. 10, μηθέν ασεβέs έπιτελεσαμένοις. Diod. Sic. xii. 54, μεγάλας πράξεις επιτελεσάμενοι) in (dative, as above) the flesh? 4.] Did ye suffer (not, 'have ye suffered,' as almost all Commentators, E. V., &e.,i. e. $\pi \epsilon \pi \delta \nu \theta a \tau \epsilon$, Heb. ii. 18; Luke xiii. 2) so many things in vain? There is much controversy about the meaning. (1) Chrys.,

CH. III. 1-V. 12.] SECOND, or PO-1.7 LEMICAL PART OF THE EPISTLE. The Apostle exclaims indignantly, moved by the fervour and truth of his rebuke of Peter, against the folly of the Galatians, for suffering themselves to be bewitched out of their former vivid apprehension of Christ's work and Person. άνόητοι must not, with Jer., be taken as an allusion to any supposed national stupidity of the Galatians (Wetst. on ch. i. 6, cites from Themistius a very different description : οί άνδρες . . . ὀξεῖς κ. ἀγχίνοι κ. εὐμα-θέστεροι τῶν ἀγαν Ἐλλήνων): it mercly springs out of the occasion : see ref. Luke.

Ang., and the ancients, Grot., Wolf, Rück., Olsh., &c., understand it of the sufferings which the Galatians underwent at the time of their reception of the Gospel. And, I believe, rightly. For (a) $\pi \alpha \sigma \chi \omega$ occurs (see reff.) seven times in St. Paul, and always in the strict sense of ' suffering,' by persecution, or hardship (similarly in Heb., 1 Pet., &c.): (b) the historic aorist here marks the reference to be to some definite time. Now the time referred to by the context is that of their conversion to the Gospel, cf. $\tau \delta \pi \nu$. $\epsilon \lambda \dot{\alpha} \beta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$, έναρξάμενοι πνεύματι above. Therefore the meaning is, Did ye undergo all those sufferings (not specially mentioned in this Epistle, but which every convert to Christ must have undergone as a matter of course) in vain (Schomer first, and after him many, and Winer, B.-Crus., De Wette, understand $\pi a \theta \epsilon i \nu$ here in a good sense, in reference to divine grace bestowed on them. But $\pi d\sigma \chi \omega$ seems never to be thus used in Greek without an indication in the context of such a meaning, e.g. $\epsilon \delta$ $\pi \dot{a}\sigma \chi \epsilon i\nu$, or as in Jos. Antt. iii. 15. 1, $\delta \sigma \dot{a}$ παθόντες έξ αὐτοῦ κ. πηλικῶν εὐεργεσιῶν μεταλαβόντεs, where the added clause defines the $\pi a \theta \delta \nu \tau \epsilon s$; and never in N. T., LXX nor Apoerypha at all. (3) Bengel refers it to their patience with Paul $\lceil pa$. tientissime sustinuistis pertulistisque me]; but this, as Meyer remarks, would be expressed by avéxeuv, hardly by máoxeuv. (4) Meyer, to the troubles of their bondage introduced by the false and judaizing teachers. But not to dwell on other objections, it is decisive against this, (a) that it would thus be present, $\pi \dot{a}\sigma \chi \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ [see ch. iv. 10], not past at all, and (b) that even if it might be past, it must be the perfect and not the aorist. I therefore hold to (1); οὐ γὰρ ὑπέρ τοῦ νόμου ἀλλ' ὑπέρ τοῦ χριστοῦ τὰ παθήματα, Tlidrt. : πάντα γὰρ ἐκεῖνα, φησίν, ἅπερ ὑπεμείνατε, ζημιώσαι ύμας ούτοι βούλονται, κ. τον στέφανον ύμων άρπάσαι. Chrys. [So Ellic. ed. 2.] When Meyer says that this meaning is ganz isolirt vom Contert, he is surely speaking at random : see above. [Ellic. ed. 1 took $\epsilon \pi \dot{a} \theta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ in a neutral sense, as applying to both persecutions and blessings, and nearly so Jowett : 'Had ye all these experiences in vain ?' objecting to (1) that it is unlike the whole spirit of the Apostle. But we find surely a trace of the same spirit in Phil. i. 29, 30; as there suffering is represented as a special grace from Christ, so here it might well be said, 'let not such grace have been received in vain'])? if it be really in vain (on ϵ ? $\gamma \epsilon$ kal, see note on 2 Cor. v. 3: the construction is, 'if, as it must be, what I have said, εἰκῆ, is really the fact.' The Commentators all take it as a supposition,-some, as Chr., &c., E. V., ' if it be yet in vain,' as a softening of $\epsilon i\kappa \hat{\eta}$, others, as Meyer, De W., al., as an intensification of it, 'if it be only in vain [and not something worse]'). 5.] ouv takes up again the question of ver. 2, and asks it in another form. There is a question whether the participles inixopy w and ένεργών are present, referring to things done among them while the Apostle was writing, or imperfect, still spoken of the time when he was with them? Chrys., Thdrt., &c., and Bengel, al., maintain the latter : Luth., Calv., Rück., Meyer, De W., &c., the former. It seems to me, that this question must be settled by first determining who is the agent here spoken of. Is it the Apostle? or is it not rather GOD, and is not this indicated by the reference to Abraham's faith in the next verse, and the taking up the passive $\epsilon \lambda o$. γίσθη by δικαιοι ό θεός in ver. 8? If it be so, then the participles here must be taken as present, but indefinite, in a substantive sense (Winer), as δ διώκων ήμαs $\pi o \tau \epsilon$, ch. i. 23. And certainly God alone can be said (and so in ref. 2 Cor.) $\epsilon \pi i \chi o \rho$ ηγείν το πνεύμα, and ένεργείν (ch. ii. 8) δυνάμεις ϵv ύμiv (see below). ἐπιχορ.] The $\epsilon \pi i$ does not imply addition, but as so often with prepositions of motion in composition, the direction of the supply: see notes on Acts xxvii. 7 ; Rom. viii. 16.

The reply to the foregoing question is understood : it is is is a cons miorews. And then enters the thought of God's everyeiv as following upon Abraham's faith. The fact of justification being now introduced, whereas before the $\epsilon \pi i \chi o \rho \eta \gamma \epsilon i \nu \tau \delta \pi \nu \epsilon \hat{\nu} \mu a$ was the matter enquired of, is no real departure from the subject, for both these belong to the eváptaobas of ver. 3,-are concomitant, and inseparable. On the verse, see note, Rom. iv. 3. 7.] ywóork. is better taken indicatively, with Jer., Ambr., Beza, Rück., al., than imperatively, with most Commentators (and Mey., De W., Olsh., Ellic.). It is no objection to the indicative that such knowledge could not well be predicated of the Galatians: it is not so predicated, but is here set before them as a thing which they ought to be acquainted with-from this then you know (q. d. 'omnibus patet.' The imperative seems to me to lose the fine edge of the Apostle's argumentative irony : besides that the usage of that mood with Epa is not frequent: indeed apparently only to be found in Homer; cf. But (= moreover) that in (not merely the elemental in, but the conditional as well: 'in and by:' not 'through') the law no man is justified (the normal present: is, in God's order of things) with God (not emphatic as Bengel, 'quicquid sit apud homines :' this would require οὐδείς παρὰ τῷ θεῷ δικαιοῦται: but δικαιοῦται-παρὰ-τῷ-θεῷ is simply predicated of $ov\delta\epsilon(s)$ is evident, for (it is written, that) the just by faith shall live (not 'the just shall live by his faith,' as Winer, De W., al. The order of the words would indeed suggest this rendering, seeing that $\delta \ \epsilon \kappa \ \pi$. δ . ζ . would properly represent the other: but we must regard St. Paul's logical use of the citation : and I think, with Meyer, that he has ab-stained from altering the order of the words as being well known. He is not seeking to shew by what the righteous shall live, but the ground itself of that righteousness which shall issue in life; and the contrast is between b binaios en πίστεωs and ό ποιήσαs αὐτά. [It is right to say that Ellic. (both cdd.) prefers the other rendering, and supports it by the fact that the original Hebrew will not bear this one, and that St. Paul adopts the words of the LXX as they stand; and by the contrast between Shoeral en miorews, and (notrai iv autois. The joyful contrast is introduced abruptly, without any connecting particle: see an asyndeton in a similar case in Col. iii. 4. The $\eta\mu\hat{a}s$ is emphatic, and applies solely to the JEWS. They only were under the curse of ver. 10,—and they being by Christ redeemed from that curse, the blessing of Abraham (justification by faith), which was always destined by God to flow through the Jews to the Gentiles, was set at liberty thus to flow out to the Gentiles. This, which is Meyer's view, is certainly the only one which suits the context. To make $\eta\mu\bar{a}s$ refer to Jews and Gentiles, and refer h Kat. to vou vou. to the law of conscience, is to break up the context altogether. ἐξηγόρ.] See, besides refl., 1 Cor. vi. 20; vii. 23; 2 Pet. ii. 1; Rev. v. 9. Ellicott remarks, 'the ξ - need not he very strongly pressed, see Polyb. iii. 42. 2, εξηγόρασε παρ' αυτών τά τε μονόξυλα πλοΐα κ.τ.λ. The tendency,' he continues, 'to use verbs compounded with prepositions without any obvious increase of meaning, is one of the characteristics of later Greek : so Thiersch, de Pentat. vers. alex. ii. 1, p. 83.' The form of the idea is,—the Law (personified) held us (Jews) under its curse; (out of this) Christ bought us, BECOMING (emphatic, standing first) a curse (not επικατάρατος, concrete, but karápa, abstract, to express that he became not only accursed, but the curse, coextensive with the disability which affected us) for us (the JEWS again. Not, as many older Commentators, and Rück., Olsh., Peile, &c., 'instead of us,' but 'on our behalf.' It was in our stead; but that circumstance is not expressed by breo used of Christ's death for us-see reff. and Ellic.'s note; and Usteri, Paulin. Lehrbegriff, p. 115 ff.). δτι γέγρ. $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. is a parenthesis, justifying the formal expression $\gamma \epsilon \nu \delta \mu$. $\delta \pi$. $\delta \mu$. $\kappa a \tau \delta \rho a$. The citation omits the words $\delta \pi \delta$ $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ of the LXX. They were not to the point here, being understood as matter of course, the law being God's law. The article δ is not in the LXX. The words are spoken of hanging after death by stoning; and are given in l. c. as a reason why the body should not remain on the tree all night, because one hanging on a tree is accursed of God. Such formal curse then extended to Christ, who died by hanging on a tree.

See Acts ii. 17, 33; Luke xxiv. 49,-THE PROMISE of the new covenant). The genitive $\tau o \hat{v} \pi v$. is objective, -the Spirit being the thing promised. But let me guard tiros against the old absurdity, " έπαγγελία τοῦ πνεύματος pro τό πνεῦμα τὸ ἐπηγγελμένον," which would destroy, here and every where else, the logical form of the sentence. This 'receiving the promise of the Spirit' distinetly refers back to ver. 2, where he asked them whether they received the 15-18.] But what if the law, coming after the Abrahamic promise, abropated that promise? These verses contain the refutation of such an objection: the promise was not abrogated by the law.

15.] τί έστι κατ' άνθρ. λέγω; έξ ανθρω-πίνων παραδειγμάτων. Chr. But (see 1 Cor. xv. 32) the expression refers not only to the character of the example chosen, but to the temporary standingpoint of him who speaks : I put myself for the time on a level with ordinary men in the world. öμωs is out of its logical place, which would be after οὐδείs; To make it 'even' see on ref. 1 Cor. and take it with $d\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\sigma\sigma$, is contrary to its usage. A (mere) man's covenant (not 'testament,' as Olsh., after Aug., al.; for there is here no introduction of that idea: the promise spoken to Abraham was strictly a covenant, and designated Siabhkn in the passages which were now in the Apostle's mind, see Gen. xv. 18; xvii. 7. On the general meaning, see Mr. Bagge's note) when ratified (reff.), no one notwithstanding (that it is merely a human covenant) sets aside or supplements (with new conditions, Jos. Antt. xvii. 9. 4 describes Archelaus as δ έν ταῖς ἐπιδιαθήκαις ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρός έγγεγραμμένος βασιλεύς,- 'in his father's subsequent testament :' and again says of Antipas, B. J. ii. 2. 3, ἀξιῶν τῆs έπιδιαθήκης την διαθήκην είναι κυριωτέpav, έν ή βασιλεύς αυτός εγέγραπτο. This minor proposition does not follow till ver. 17. What is now said, in a parenthetical and subsidiary manner, is this: The covenant was not merely nor principally made with Abraham, but with Abraham and nis SEED, and that seed referred, not to the Jewish people, but to CHRIST. The covenant then was not fulfilled, but awaiting its fulfilment, and He to whom it was made was yet to appear, when the law ai $\epsilon \pi$.] because the prowas given. mise was many times repeated : e.g. Gen. xii. 7; xv. 5, 18; xvii. 7, 8; xxii. 18. κ. τῷ σπ. αὐ.] These words, on

To confirm this position,—see Gen. xxii. 17, 18, where the collective $\sigma\pi\epsilon\mu\alpha$ of ver. 17 is summed up in the individual $\sigma \pi \epsilon \rho \mu a$ of ver. 18, he alleges a philological distinction, recognized by the Rabbinical schools (see Wetst. and Schöttgen ad loc.). This has created considerable difficulty: and all sorts of attempts have been made to evade the argument, or to escape standing committed to the distinction. Jerome (ad loc.), curiously and characteristically, applies the $\kappa\alpha\tau\dot{\alpha}\,\dot{\alpha}\nu\theta\rho\omega$ - πον λέγω to this distinction especially, and thinks that the Apostle used it as adapted to the calibre of those to whom he was writing : "Galatis, quos paulo ante stultos dixerat, factus est stultus." The Roman-Catholic Windischmann, one of the ablest and most sensible of modern expositors, says, "Our recent masters of theology have taken up the objection, which is as old as Jerome, and forgetting that Paul knew Hebrew better than themselves, have severely blauned him for urging the singular $\sigma \pi \tilde{\ell} \rho \mu \alpha \tau i$ here, and thus justifying the application to Christ, seeing that the word γ_{γ} , which occurs here in the Hebrew text, has no plural (Wind. is not accurate here: the plur. וְרָעִים is found 1 Sam. viii. 15, in the sense of 'grains of wheat'), and so could not be used. Yet they are good enough to assume, that Paul had no fraudulent intent, and only followed the arbitrary exegesis of the Jews of his time (Rückert). The argument of the Apostle does not depend on the grammatical form, by which Paul here only puts forth his meaning in Greek,-but on this, that the Spirit of God in the promise to Abrabau and the passage of Scripture relating that promise, has chosen a word which implies a collective unity, and that the promise was not given to Abraham and his children. Against the prejudice of the carnal Jews, who held that the promise applied to the plurality of them, the individual descend-ants of the Patriarch, as such,-the Apostle maintains the truth, that only the Unity, Christ, with those who are incorporated in Him, has part in the iu-heritance." On these remarks I would observe, (1) that the Apostle's argument is independent of his philology : (2) that his philological distinction must not be pressed to mean more than he himself intended by it: (3) that the collective and individual meanings of $\sigma \pi i \rho \mu a$ are both undoubted, and must have been evident to the Apostle himself, from what follows, ver. 29. We are now in a position to interpret the words ös coriv xpioros. Meyer says ' xpioto's is the personal Christ Jesus, not, as has been held (after Aug.), Christ and His Church.' This remark is true, and untrue. $\chi \rho$. certainly does not mean 'Christ and His Church :' but if it imports only the personal Christ Jesus, why is it not so expressed, xpists 'Insois? For the word does not here occur in passing, but is the predicate of a very definite and important proposition. The fact is, that we must place ourselves in St. Paul's position with regard to the idea of Christ, before we can appreciate all he meant by this word here. Christians are, not by a figure, but really, the BODY OF CHRIST: Christ contains His people, and the mention even of the personal Christ would bring with it, in the Apostle's mind, the inelusion of His believing people. This seed is, CURIST: not mercly in the narrower sense, the man Christ Jesus, but Christ the Seed, Christ the Second Adam, Christ the Head of the Body. And that this is so, is plain from vv. 28, 29, which are the key to ös έστιν χριστός: where he says, πάντες γαρ ύμεις ΕΙΣ έστε έν χριστώ Ίησοῦ (notice 'Ιησοῦ here carefully inserted, where the Person is indicated). εί δὲ ὑμεῖς χριστοῦ, ἄρα τοῦ ᾿Αβραὰμ ΣΠΕ'ΡΜΑ 'ΕΣΤΕ', κατ' ἐπαγγελίαν κληpovoµoi. So that while it is necessary for the form of the argument here, to express Him to whom the promises were made, and not the aggregate of his people, afterwards to be identified with Him (but not here in view), yet the Apostle has introduced His name in a form not circumscribing His Personality, but leaving room for the inclusion of His mystical Body.

17.] Enthymematical inference from vv. 15, 16, put in the form of a restatement of the argument, as applying to the matters in hand. This however I say (this is my meaning, the drift of my previous statement) : the covenant (better than a covenant, as most Commentators; even Meyer and De W.: the emphatic substantive is often anarthrous: cf. the different arrangement in ver. 15) which was previously ratified by God (els $\chi \rho$. being inserted by some to complete the correspondence with ver. 16: the fact was so, it was 'to Christ,' as its second party, that the covenant was ratified by God), the Law, which took place (was constituted) four hundred and thirty years after, does not abrogate, so as to do away the promise. As regards the interval of 430 years, we may remark, that in Exod. xii. 40, it is stated, "The sojourning of the children of Israel who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years." (In Gen. xv. 13, Acts vii. 6, the period of the oppression of Israel in Egypt is roundly stated at 400 years.) But to this, in order to obtain the entire interval between the covenant with Abraham and the law, must be added the sojourning of the patriarchs in Canaan,-i.e. to the birth of Isaac, 25 years (Gen. xii. 4; xxi. 5),-to that of Jacob, 60 more (Gen. xxv. 26),-to his going down into Egypt, 130 more (Gen. xlvii. 9); in all = 215 years. So that the time really was 615 years, not 430. But in the LXX (and Samaritan Pentateuch) we read, Exod. xii. 40, ή δè κατοίκησις (παροίκ., F.) των υίων 'Ισραήλ, ήν κατώκησαν (παρώκ., F.) έν γη Αιγύπτω κal έν γη Xavaaν (F. adding, from the Cod. Alex., αὐτοὶ καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν) έτη τετρακόσια τριάκοντα: - and this reckoning St. Paul has followed. We have instances of a similar adoption of the LXX text, in the apology of Stephen : see Acts vii. 14, and note. After all, however, the difficulty lies in the 400 years of Gen. xv. 13 and Acts vii. 6. For we may ascertain thus the period of the sejourn of 1srael in Egypt: Joseph was 39 years old when Jacob came into Egypt (Gen. xli. 46, 47; xlv. 6): therefore he was born when Jacob was 91 (91 + 39 = 130); see Gen. xlvii. 9). But he was born 6 years before Jacob left Laban (compare ib. xxx. 25 with xxi. 41), having been with him 20 years (ib. xxi. 38, 41), and served him 14 of them for his two daughters (xxxi. 41). Hence, seeing that his marriage with Rachel took place when he was 78 [91-20-7; the marriages with Leah and Rachel being contemporaneous, and the second seven years of service occurring after, not, as I assumed in the first edition, before, the marriage with Rachel]; Levi, the third son of Leah, whose first son was born after Rachel's marriage [xxix. 30-32], must have been born not earlier than Jacob's 81st year,—and consequently was about 49 [130—81] when he went down into Egypt. Now (Exod. vi. 16) Levi lived in all 137 years: i.e., about 88 [137-49] years in Egypt. But (Exod. vi. 16, 18, 20) Amram, father of Moses and Aaron, married his father Kohath's sister, Jochebed, who was therefore, as expressly stated Num. xxvi. 59, 'the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt.' Therefore Joehebed must have been born within 88 years after the going down into Egypt. And seeing that Moses was 80 years old at the Exodus (Exod. vii. 7),if we call x his mother's age when he was born, we have 88 + 80 + x as a maximum for the sojourn in Egypt, which elearly therefore cannot be 430 years, or even 400; as in the former case x would = 262, -in the latter 232. If we take x = cir. 47 (to which might be added in the hypothesis any time which 88 and xmight have had in common) we shall have the sojourn in Egypt = 215 years, which added to the previous 215, will make the required 430. Thus it will appear that the LXX, Samaritan Pent., and St. Paul, have the right chronology,- and as stated above, the difficulty lies in Gen. xv. 13 and Acts vii. 6,—and in the Hebrew text of Exod. xii. 40. 18.] See Rom. iv. 14. For if the inheritance (the general term for all the blessings promised to Abraham, as summed up in his Seed who was to inherit the land,-in other words, for the Kingdom of Christ: see 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10) is of the law (i. c. by virtue of the law, having as its ground the covenant of the law) it is no more (our Eri, as vuv in argumentative passages, not of time, but logical-the obx follows on the hypothesis) of (by virtue of) promise: but (the 'but' of a demonstration, appealing to a wellknown fact) to Abraham by promise hath God granted [it] (and therefore it is not of 19-24. Chrys. (3) Luth., Est., Bengel, al., combine (1) and (2). But it is hardly possible that either of these should be the true explanation. For the Apostle is not now treating of the detection of sin, or of the repression of sin [which latter was besides not the office of the Law, see Rom. v. 20], but of the Law as a preparation for Christ, vv. 23, 21: and therefore it must be regarded in its propædcutic office, not in its detective or (?) repressive. Now this propædentic office was, to make sin into TRANSGRESSION,so that what was before not a transgression might now become one. The law then was added [to the promise, which had no such power], for the sake of [in order to bring about as transgressions] the transgressions [of it] which should be, and thus [ver. 23] to shut us up under sin, viz. the transgression of the law. This is nearly Meyer's view, except that he makes this the exclusive meaning of χάριν, which usage will not sustain, cf. 1 John iii. 12. Ellic.'s view is very close to mine, which he has mistaken) it was superadded (" $\pi \rho os \epsilon \tau \epsilon \theta \eta$ does not contradict the assertion of ver. 15, obdels ἐπιδιατάσσεται. For the Law was not given as an επιδιαθήκη, but came in as another institution, additional to that already existing." Meyer) until the seed shall have come (he places himself at the giving of the law and looks on into the future : hence the subjunctive, not the optative : and without $\delta \nu$, because the time is a certain and definite one), to whom (ver. 16) the promise has been (see above) made (the vulgate renders $\epsilon \pi \eta \gamma$ - γελται promiserat, sc. Deus : and so Bengel prefers, from reff. active. But the passive suits ver. 16 [$i \partial p \delta \theta \eta \sigma a \nu$] better, and is justified by reff. Maee. Bretschneider understands it cui demandatum est. viz. to put an end to the law : but this is against N. T. usage of $\epsilon \pi \alpha \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \lambda \omega$, and absurd, where $\epsilon \pi a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda i a is so often used$ in the context. This Seed is of course Christ), being enjoined (the aorist participle does not here denote previous occurrence, but is merely part of an aorist sentence : so Herod. i. 14, Γύγης δε τυραννεύσας ανέπεμψεν αναθήματα . . .: Diod. Sic. xi. 31, γενναίως άγωνισάμενος πολλούς ἀνεῖλε τῶν Ἐλλήνων. See Hermann on Viger, pp. 772-3. For διατάσσω, cf. note on Acts vii. 53, and Hesiod, Op. 274, τόνδε γάρ άνθρώποισι νόμον διέταξε Κρονίων: it is not promulgate, as Winer) by means of (not, under the attestation of, as Peile, nor in the presence of, as Calov., al.) angels (angels were, according to the Rabbinical view, the enactors and enjoiners of the Law: so Jos. Of course no explaining away of άγγελοι into men [Moses, Aaron, &c.] as Chrys. [altern. : ή τουs ίερέας ἀγγέλους λέγει, ή καl αὐτοὺς τοὺς ἀγγέλους ὑπηρετήσασθαί φησι τῆ νομο- $\theta \epsilon \sigma [a]$, al., can be allowed. Observe, the angels are not the givers of the Law, but its ministers, and instrumental enactors : the Law, with St. Paul, is always God's Law; see especially Rom. vii. 22) in the hand of a mediator (viz. the name Mediator is given to Moses .--But most of the Fathers (not Thdrt.), Bede, Lyra, Calvin, Calov., al., understand Christ to be meant : Schmidder and Schneckenburger, the Angel of the Covenant,-the Metatron. Neither of these interpretations however will hold against Why does the the above evidence). Apostle add this last clause? I am inclined to think with Meyer that it is,-not to disparage the Law in comparison with the Gospel (as Luth., Elsu., Flatt, Rück., Jowett, &c. &c.) or with the promise (Estius, Schneckenb., De Wette), but to enhance the solemnity of the giving of the law as a preparation for Christ, in answer to the somewhat disparaging question τi obv δ vóµos; If the δi $\dot{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\omega\nu$ had been here disparaging, as in Heb. ii. 2, διà τοῦ κυρίου or the like must have been expressed, as there, on the other side. And ev xeipl perirov is certainly no disparagement of the old covenant in comparison with the new, for this it has in common with the other. The fact is (see below on ver. 20), that no such comparison is in question here. 20.] "The explanations of this verse, so obscure from its brevity, are so numerous (Winer counted 250: Jowett mentions 430) that they require a bibliography of their own." De Wette. I believe we shall best disentangle the sense as follows. (1) Clearly, ó μεσίτηs and δ θεόs are opposed. (2) As clearly, Evos our Eoriv and els eoriv are opposed. (3) From this contrast arises an apparent opposition between the law and the promises of God, which (not alone, but as the conclusion of the whole $\tau i o \vartheta \nu$ to $\epsilon is \epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu$) gives oceasion to the question of ver. 21. Taking up therefore again (1),-- $\delta \mu \epsilon \sigma i \tau \eta s$, by whose hand the law was enacted, stands opposed to δ beds, the giver of the promises. And that, in this respect (2); -(a) $\delta \mu \epsilon \sigma i \tau \eta s$ is not $\epsilon \nu \delta s$, but (b) $\delta \theta \epsilon \delta s$ is $\epsilon \tilde{l} s$. And herein lies the knot of the verse; that is, in (b), - for the meaning of (a) is pretty clear on all hands; viz. that & µεσίτης (generic, so ref. Job; 'quæ multa sunt cunctis in unum colligendis,' Hermann ad Iph. in Aul. p. 15, præf. cited by Meyer) does not belong to one party (masculine) (but to two, as going between one party and another). Then to guide us to the meaning of (b), we must remember, that the numerical contrast is the primary idea : δ μεσίτης belongs not to one, but & beds is one. Shall we then say, that all reference of els (as Vol. III.

applied to $\delta \ \theta \epsilon \delta s$) beyond this numerical one is to be repudiated ? I cannot think so. The proposition & Beds els eour would carry to the mind of every reader much more than the mere numerical unity of God-viz. His Unity as an essential attribute, extending through the whole divine Character. And thus, though the proposition & μεσίτης ένδς ούκ έστιν would not, by itself, convey any meaning but that a mediator belongs to more than one, it would, when combined with & Beds els $\delta \sigma \tau i \nu$, receive a shade of meaning which it did not bear before,-of a state of things involved in the fact of a $\mu\epsilon\sigma i\tau\eta s$ being employed, which was not according to the $\epsilon\nu\sigma\tau\eta s$ of God, or, so to speak, in the main track of His unchanging purpose. And thus (3), the law, administered by the $\mu\epsilon\sigma(\pi\eta;$ belonging to a state of oux ϵ is, two at variance, is apparently opposed to the $\epsilon\pi\alpha\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda(\alpha)$, belonging entirely to & els, the one (faithful) God. And observe, that the above explanation is deduced entirely from the form of the sentence itself, and from the idea which the expression & Beds els estur must necessarily raise in the mind of its reader, accustomed to the proposition as the foundation of the faith ;--not from any preconceived view, to suit which the words, or emphatic arrangement, must be forced. Notice by the way, that the objection, that the Gospel too is $\epsilon \nu \chi \epsilon_{i\rho}$ $\mu \epsilon_{\sigma} \ell_{\tau \sigma \nu}$, does not apply here : for (α) there is no question here of the Gospel, but only of the promises, as direct from God : (B) the $\mu\epsilon\sigma i\tau\eta s$ of the Gospel is altogether different, and His work different : He has absolutely reconciled the parties at variance, and MADE THEM ONE in Hunself. Remember St. Paul's habit of insulating the matter in hand, and dealing with it irrespective of all such possible objections. To give even an analysis of the various opinions on this verse would far exceed the limits of this commentary : I will only take advantage of Meyer's long note, and of other sources, to indicate the main branches of the exegesis. (1) The Fathers, for the most part, pass lightly over it, as easy in itself,-and do not notice its pragmatic difficulty. Most of them understand by the $\mu\epsilon\sigma i\tau\eta s$, Christ, the mediator between God and man. In interpreting Evds ούκ έστιν and είs έστιν, they go in omnia alia. It may suffice to quote one or two samples. Chrys. says, TI av evravea etποιεν αίρετικοί; εί γάρ το "μόνος άληm-Matt. xil. 30. And Jerome, 'manu mediatoris potentiam et virtutem ejus debemus accipere, qui cum secundum Deum unum sit ipse cum patre, secundum mediatoris officium alius ab co intelligitur.' Theodoret, having explained the µeoings of Moses, proceeds, on & δε θεός είς εστιν,-- & και την επαγγελίαν τῷ 'Αβραὰμ δεδωκώς, καὶ τὸν νόμον τεθεικώς, και ουν της επαγγελίας ήμιν επιδείξας το πέρας. ού γαρ άλλος μέν έκεινα θεός φκονόμησεν, άλλος δέ (II) The older of the modern ταῦτα. Commentators are generally quite at fault : I give a few of them : Grotius says, ' Etsi Christus mediator Legem Judzis tulcrit, ut ad agnitionem transgressionum adduceret, eoque ad fœdus gratiæ præpararet, non tamen unius est gentis Judaicæ mediator, sed omnium hominum : quemadmodum Deus unus est omnium.' Luther (1519), 'Ex nomine mediatoris concludit, nos adeo esse peccatores, ut legis opera satis esse nequeant. Si, inquit, lege justi estis, jam mediatore non egetis, sed neque Deus, cum sit ipse unus, secum optime Inter duos ergo quæritur conveniens. mediator, inter Deum et hominein; ac si dicet, impiissima est ingratitudo, si mediatorem rejicitis, et Deo, qui unus est, remittitis, &c.' Erasmus, in his paraphrase : 'Atqui conciliator, qui intercedit, inter plures intercedat oportet, nemo enim secum ipse dissidet. Deus autem unus est, quocum dissidium erat humano generi. Proinde tertio quopiam erat opus, qui naturæ utriusque particeps utramque inter sese reconciliaret, &c.' Calvin, as the preferable view, 'diversitatem hic notari arbitror inter Judæos et Gentilcs. Non unius ergo mediator est Christus, quia diversa est conditio eorum quibuscum Deus, ipsius auspiciis, paciscitur, quod ad externam personam. Verum Paulus inde æstimandum Dei fædus negat, quasi se-cum pugnet, aut varium sit pro hominum diversitate.' (III) The later moderns begin to approach nearer to the philological and contextual requirements of the passage, but still with considerable errors and divergences. Bengel, on the first clause, ' Medius terminus est in syllogismo, cujus major propositio et minor exprimitur, conclusio subauditur. Unus non utitur mediatore illo : atqui Deus est unus. Ergo Deus non prius sine mediatore, deinde per mediatorem egit. Ergo is cujus erat mediator non est unus idemque cum Deo sed diversus a Deo, nempe δ νόμος, Lex. ergo mediator Sinaiticus non est Dei scd legis : Dei autem, promissio.' Locke (so also Michaelis): "God is but one of the parties concerned in the promise : the Gentiles and Israelites together made up the other, ver. 14. But Moses, at the giving of the law, was a mediator only between the Israclites and God : and therefore could not transact any thing to the disannulling the promise, which was between God and the Israelites and Gentiles together, because God was but one of the parties to that covenant : the other, which was the Gentiles as well as Israelites, Moses appeared or transacted not for." (IV) Of the recent Commentators, Keil (Opusc. 1809-12) says : 'Mediatorem quidem non unius sed duarum certe partium esse, Deum autem qui Abrahamo beneficii aliquid promiserit, unum modo fuisse : hincque apostolum id a lectoribus suis colligi voluisse, in lege ista Mosaica pactum mutuum Deum inter atque populum Israeliticum mediatoris opera intercedente initum fuisse, contra vero in promissione rem ab unius tantum (Dei sc. qui solus cam dederit) voluntate pendentem transactam,hincque legi isti nihit plane cum hac rei fuisse, adeoque nec potuisse ea novam illius promissionis implendæ conditionem constitui, coque ipso promissionem omnino tolli.' And similarly Schleiermacher (in And similarly Schleiermacher (in Usteri's Lehrbegriff, p. 186 ff.), but giving to els the sense of freedom and independence ;---and Meyer, only repudiating the second part of Kcil's explanation from 'hineque,' as not belonging to an abstract sentence like this, but being historical, as if it had been $\eta \nu$, and besides contrary to the Apostle's meaning, who deduces from our verse a consequence the contrary to this ('hincque fuisse'). and obviates it by the question in ver. 21. For the numerous other recent interpretations and their refutations I must refer the reader to Meyer's note [as also to Ellicott's (in his ed. 1 : see his present view in his ed. 2), who preferred Windischmann's interpretation of els, 'One, because He was both giver and receiver united : giver, as the Father ;

But this seems going too deepalmost, we may say, arriving at the conelusion by a coup de main, which would not have borne any meaning to the readers]: see also Jowett's note, which seems to me further to complicate the matter by introducing into it God's unity of dealing with man, and man's unity with God in Christ. (V) We may pro-fitably lay down one or two canons of interpretation of the verse. (a) Every interpretation is wrong, which understands Christ by & µegings. The context determines it to be abstract, and its reference to be to Moses, the mediator of the Law. (β) Every interpretation is wrong, which makes els mean 'one party' in the covenant. & Beds els estur itself confutes any such view, being a well-known general proposition, not admitting of a concrete interpretation. (γ) Every interpretation is wrong, which confines cls (as Meyer) to its mere numerical meaning, and does not take into account the ideas which the general proposition would raise. (δ) Every interpretation is wrong, which deduces from the verse the agreement of the law with the promises: because the Apostle himself, in the next verse, draws the very opposite inference from it, and refutes it on other grounds. (*) Every attempt to set aside the verse as a gloss is utterly futile. 21.] The Law being thus set over against the promises,-being given through a mediator between two,-the promises by the one God,-it might seem as if there were an inconsistency between The nature of the contrariety them. must not (as De W.) be deduced from the following disproof of it : this disproof proceeds on των παραβάπεων χάριν προs- $\epsilon \tau \epsilon \theta \eta$, which is not the ground of the apparent contrariety, but its explanation. The appearance of inconsistency lay in the whole paragraph preceding-the our akuροί of ver. 17, the εἰ ἐκ νόμου, οὐκέτι ἐξ ἐπαγγελίαs of ver. 18,—and the contrast between the giving of the two in ver. 20.

"τοῦ θεοῦ is not without emphasis: the promises which rest immediately on God, and were attested (? sie still in ed. 2) by no mediator." Ellic. cl yáp] Notwithstanding all the above features of contrast hetween the Law and the prophets, it is not against them, for it does not pretend to perform the same office; if it did, then there would be this rivalry, which now does not νόμος δ δυν. is best expressed exist. in English, as in E. V., a law which could for the article eircumscribes the vous to some particular quality indicated in the defining participle which follows : see reff. Peile's rendering, "if that which (δ δυνάμενος !) should have power to give life had been given in the form of law," is in the highest degree ungrammatical. ζωοποιήσαι takes for granted that we by nature are dead in trespasses and sins. öντωs has the emphasis : in very truth, and not only in the fancy of some, by the law (as its ground) would have been righteousness (which is the condition of life eternal,ό δίκαιος ζήσεται. If life, the result, had been given by the law, then righteousness, the condition of life, must have been by it also: reasoning from the whole to its part). 22.] But on the contrary ($d\lambda\lambda \dot{a}$, not $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$: comp. Ellic. This not being the ease,-no law being given out of which could come righteousness) the Scripture (not the Law, as Chrys. and most of the Fathers, also Calv., Beza, al.; but as in ver. 8, the Author of Scripture, speaking by that His witness) shut up (not subjective, as Chrys., ἤλεγξεν κ. έλέγξας κατείχεν έν φό $\beta \varphi$,—for it is their objective state of incapacity to attain righteousness which is here brought out : -nor ' conclusit omnes simul,' as Bengel, al.: the preposition enhances the force of κλείειν, as in ' contraho,' συμπνίγειν, &c. : see note Rom. xi. 32, where the same expression occurs. For ye all (Jews and Gentiles alike) are sons (no longer maides, requiring a maidaywyos) of God by means of the (or, but not so well, your) faith in Christ Jesus (some [Usteri, Windisch., al.] would join $\epsilon \nu \chi \rho$. 'In σ . with viol 6000 eore, but most unnaturally,-and unmeaningly, for the idea of $\epsilon \nu \chi \rho$. In σ . in that case has been already given by $\delta i \dot{a} \tau \eta s \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$. The omission of $\tau \eta s$ before $\epsilon \nu$ will stagger no one : see Col. i. 4, where 27.] For the same expression occurs). (substantiates and explains the assertion of ver. 26: see below) as many of you as were baptized into (see Rom. vi. 3 and notes) Christ, put on Christ (at that time, compare the aorists in Acts xix. 2: not "have been baptized," and "have put on," as E. V., which leaves the two actions only concomitant : the aorists make them identical : as many as were baptized into Christ, did, in that very act, put on, clothe yourselves with, Christ : see Ellicott's note). The force of the argument is well given by Chrys. : Tivos Evekev ouk elmev, Observe here how boldly and broadly St. Paul asserts the effect of Baptism on all $[\pi \acute{a}\nu\tau\epsilon s \gamma \grave{a}\rho \dots and \acute{o}\sigma \iota \acute{\beta} a\pi\tau.]$ the baptized. Luther remarks : " Hie locus diligenter observandus est contra fanaticos spiritus, qui majestatem baptismi extenuant, et sceleste et impie de co loquuntur. Paulus contra magnificis titulis baptismum ornat, appellans lavacrum regenerationis ac renovationis Sp. saneti (Tit. iii. 5), et hic dicit omnes baptisatos Christum induisse, quasi dicat : non accepistis per baptismum tesseram, per quam adscripti estis in numerum christianorum, ut nostro tempore multi fanatici homines senserunt, qui ex baptismo tantum tesseram feeerunt, hoc est, breve et inane quoddam signum, sed 'quotquot' inquit etc. : id est, estis extra legem rapti in novam nativitatem, quæ facta est in baptismo." But we may notice too, as Meyer remarks, that the very putting on of Christ, which as matter of standing and profession is done in baptism, forms a subject of exhortation to those already baptized, in its ethical sense, Rom. xiii. 14.

IV. 1-7.] The Apostle shews the correspondence between our treatment under the law and that of heirs in general: and thus, by God's dealing with us, in sending forth His Son, whose Spirit of Sonship we have received, confirms (ver. 7) the conclusion that WE ARE NEIRS. 1.] $\lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \omega$ $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$ refers to what follows (reff.), and does not imply, 'What I mean, is.'

ό κληρ., generic, as δ μεσίτης, ch. iii. 20. The question, whether the father of the $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho o \nu \delta \mu o s$ here is to be thought of as dead, or absent, or living and present, is in fact one of no importance : nor does it belong properly to the consideration of the passage. The fact is, the antitype breaks through the type, and disturbs it : as is the case, wherever the idea of inheritance is spiritualized. The supposition in our text is, that a father (from what reason or under what circumstances matters not. Mr. Bagge quotes from Ulpian, speaking of the right of a testator appointing guardians, "Tutorem autem et a certo tempore dare et usque ad certum tempus licet." Digest. xxvi. 2. 8) has preordained a time for his son and heir to come of age, and till that time, has subjected him to guardians and stewards. In the type, the reason might be absence, or decease, or even high office or intense occupation, of the father: in the antitype, it is the Father's sovereign will: but the circumstances equally exist.

The word (an adjective used substantively : seil. $\dot{\eta}\mu\epsilon\rho a$ or $\&\rho a$. See for the classical meaning, 'the time allowed to elapse before bringing an action,' Smith's Diet, of Antt. sub vocc) is a common one : Wetst. gives many examples. The following clearly explain it : δρίσαι προθεσμίαν, έν ή τδ ίερον συντελεσθήσεται, Polyæn. p. 597 :--εί δε ό της ζωής των ανθρώπων χρόνος εἰκοσαετής ήν . . . την δε των κ. ετων προθεσμίαν εκπληρώσαντα, Plut. ad Apollon. p. 113 c. It is no objection to the view that the father is dead, that the time was fixed by law (Hebrew as well as Greek and Roman): nor on the other hand any proof of it, that $\pi po\theta \epsilon \sigma \mu l \alpha$ will hardly apply to a living man's arrangement: see on the whole, above.

3.] $\eta\mu\epsilon\hat{s}$ —are Jews only here included, or Jews and Gentiles? Clearly, both: for $lva \tau$. $vlo\theta\epsilon\sigma$. $\lambda\pi\lambda\lambda\delta\beta\omega\mu\epsilon\nu$ is spoken of all believers in Christ. He regards the Jews as, for this purpose, including all mankind (see note on ch. iii. 23), God's only positive dealings by revelation being with them—and the Gentiles as partakers both in their infant-discipline, and in their emancipation in Christ. $\delta\tau\epsilon$ $\eta\mu\epsilon\nu\nu\eta\pi\omega$ refers, not to any immaturity of capacity in us, but to the lifetime of the church, as regarded in the $\pi\rho\sigma\theta\epsilon\sigma\mu(a$ $\tau\delta\sigma$ $\pi\sigma\rho\delta\sigma$: see below on ver. 4.

 $\tau \lambda$ στοιχεία τοῦ κόσμου] Aug. interprets this physically, of the worship of the elements of nature by the Gentiles: Chrys., Thdrt., al., of the Jewish new moons and sabbaths: Neander (Pfl. u. Leit. p. 370), of a religion of sense as opposed to that of the spirit. But it is more natural to take στοιχεία in its simpler meaning, that of letters or symbols of the alphabet, and $\tau v \bar{v} \, \kappa d\sigma \mu ov$ not in its worst sense, but as in Heb. ix. 1, $\ddot{\alpha} \gamma v \sigma \kappa \sigma \mu \kappa \delta \sigma_{\nu}$ —'belonging to the unspiritual outer world.' Thus (as in refl. Col.) the words will mean, the elementary lessons of outward things (as Conybeare has rendered it in his note: 'outward ordinances,' in his text, is not so good). Of this kind were all the enactments peculiar to the Law; some of which are expressly named, ver. 10. See $\sigma \tau o_{1-}$ $\chi \epsilon i a$ well discussed in Ellicott's note; and some useful remarks in Jowett, in loc.

Meyer prefers taking $\hat{\eta}_{\mu\epsilon\nu}$ and $\delta\epsilon$ δουλωμένοι separate : 'we were under the elements of the world, enslaved :' as answering better to ύπδ ἐπιτρόπους ἐστίν above. 4.] τὸ πλήρωμα τ. χρόνου ('that whereby the time was filled up:' see note on Eph. i. 23, -Fritzsche's note on Rom. xi. 12, and Stier's, Eph. i. p. 199 ff. for a discussion of the meanings of $\pi\lambda\eta\mu\mu\mu$ answers to the $\pi\rho\sigma\theta\epsilon\sigma\mu$ a τ . $\pi\alpha\tau\rho\delta$, ver. 2 : see reft. The Apostle uses this term with regard not only to the absolute will of God, but to the preparations which were made for the Redeemer on this earth : partly as Thl., $\delta \tau \epsilon$ παν είδος κακίας διεξελθούσα ή φύσις ή άνθρωπίνη έδειτο θεραπείας, partly as Bengel, 'suas ctiam ecclesia ætates habet.' Calv.): it is Christ's HUMANITY which is the point insisted on, not His being born of a virgin. On the other hand, the words cannot for an instant be adduced as inconsistent with such birth : they state generically, what all Christians are able, from the Gospel record, to fill up specifically.

γενόμ. ὑπὸ νόμον] ' born of a woman,' identified Him with all mankind : born under (the idea of motion conveyed by the accusative after $i\pi \delta$ is accounted for by the transition implied in yevóµevos) the law, introduces another condition, in virtue of which He became the Redeemer of those who were under a special revelation and covenant. A Gentile could not (humanly speaking, as far as God has conditioned His own proceedings) have saved the world: for the Jews were the representative nation, to which the representative man must belong. γενόμ. is both times emphatic, and therefore not to be here rendered ' legi subjectum,' as Luther, 5.] See 'unter bas Gefes gethan.' above. Christ, being born under the law, a Jewish child, subject to its ordinances, by His perfect fulfilment of it, and by enduring, as the Head and in the root of our nature, its curse on the tree, bought off (from its curse and power, but see on ch. iii. 13) those who were under the law: and if them, then the rest of mankind, whose nature He had upon Him. Thus in buying off τουs ύπο νόμον, He effected that ήμεις, all men, την υίοθεσίαν απολά- $\beta \omega \mu \epsilon \nu$ —should receive (not 'recover,' as Aug., al., and Jowett ['receive back']: there is no allusion to the innocence which we lost in Adam, nor was redemption by Christ in any sense a recovery of the state before the fall, but a far more glorious thing, the bestowal of an adoption which Adam never had. Nor is it, as Chrys., καλώς είπεν, απολάβωμεν, δεικνύς όφει- $\lambda o \mu \epsilon v \eta v$: it is true, it was the subject of promise, but it is the more act of reception, not how or why it was received, which is here put forward. Nor again, with Rückert and Schött , must we render $\dot{a}\pi o$ —" therefrom," as a fruit of the re-demption. This again it is, but it is not expressed in the word) the adoption (the place, and privileges) of sons. The word vio $\theta \in \sigma$ is occurs only in the N. T.  $\epsilon\sigma\theta a_i$, and the same expression in Diod. Sic. iv. 39. 6.] Meyer interprets this verse with Chrys.: και πόθεν δηλον ότι γεγόναμεν υίοί, φησίν; είπε τρόπου ένα, ότι του χριστου ένεδυσάμεθα του ένα υίδν λέγει κ. δεύτερον, ότι το πνεῦμα τῆς υίοθεσίας ἐλάβομεν οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἐδυ-νήθημεν καλέσαι πατέρα, εἰ μὴ πρότερον viol κατέστημεν. And so Thdrt., Thl., Ambr., Pel., al., Koppe, Flatt, Rückert, Schött., and Ellicott. [Jowett combines both interpretations: but this can hardly be.] If so, we must assume a very unusual ellipsis after $\delta \tau_i \ \delta \epsilon \ \epsilon \sigma \tau \epsilon \ vivi, - one hardly$ justified by such precedents as Rom. xi. 18,-εί δε κατακαυχάσαι, ού σύ τ. βίζαν βαστάζεις, κ.τ.λ., Rom. xi. 15, and supply, God hath given you this proof, that Meyer urges in defence of his view the emphatic position of $\epsilon\sigma\tau\epsilon$, on which see below. I prefer the ordinary rendering because it suits best (1) the simplicity of construction,-the causal or: thus beginning a sentence followed by an apodosis, as in ref.,-whereas we have no example of the demonstrative $\delta \tau_i$ followed by the ellipsis here supposed : cf. ch. iii. 11, where $\delta \hat{\eta} \lambda o \nu$ follows :- (2) the context ;- it is not in corroboration of the fact that we are sons, hut as a consequence of that fact, that the Apostle states what follows : to shew the completeness of the state of sonship. In Rom. viii. 16, the order of these is inverted, and the witness of the Spirit proves our sonship: but that does not affect the present passage, which must stand on its own ground. (3) The aorist ¿ξαπέστειλεν is against Meyer's view—it would be in that case έξαπέσταλκεν. It is now used of the time of the gift of the Spirit. Render then : Because moreover ye are sons (the stress on $\epsilon \sigma \tau \epsilon$ is hardly to be urged : viol eore would certainly give a very strong emphasis on the noun : all we can say of eote vioi, where so insignificant a word as a verb substantive is concerned, is that there is now no such strong stress on vioi, but that the whole fact, of the state of sonship having been brought in, and actually existing, is alleged) God sent forth (not, 'hath sent forth'-see above) the Spirit of His Son (you being now fellows with that Son in the communion of the Spirit, won for you as a consequence of His atonement : called,

The days would be sabbaths, new moons, and feast days : see Col. ii. 16, where these are παρατηρ.] There does specified. not seem to be any meaning of superstitious or inordinate observance (as Olsh., Winer, &c.), but merely a statement of the fact : see ref. Joseph., where, remarkably enough, the word is applied to the very commandment [the fourth] here in question. "When $\pi a \rho a$ is ethical, i. e. when the verb is used in a bad sense, e.g. evεδρεύειν κ. παρατηρείν, Polyb. xvii. 3. 2, the idea conveyed is that of hostile obµĥvas] hardly servation." But this is not likely (see above on $\mu \hat{\eta} \nu \alpha s$): and I should much rather suppose, that each of these words is not ininutely to be pressed, but all taken together as a rhetorical description of those who observed times and seasons. Notice how utterly such a verse is at variance with any and every theory of a Christian sabbath, cutting at the root, as it does, of ALL obligatory observance of times as such: see notes on Rom. xiv. 5, 6; Col. ii. 16. "These periodical solemnities of the law shewed, by the fact of their periodical repetition, the imperfection of the dispensation to which they belonged : typifying each feature of Christ's work, which, as one great and perfect whole, has been performed once for all and for ever,-and were material representations of those spiritual truths which the spiritual Israel learn in union with Christ as a risen Lord. To observe periods then, now in the fulness of time, is to deny the perfection of the Christian dispensation, the complete and finished nature of Christ's work : to forsake Him as the great spiritual teacher of His brethren, and to return to earnal pædagogues: to throw aside sonship in all its fulness, and the spirit of adoption : and to return to childhood and the rule of tutors and governors." Bagge : who however elsewhere maintains the perpetual obligation of the Sabbath. 11.] There is no attraction in the construction (¢oß. $b\mu \hat{a}s$, $\mu \hat{\eta} \pi \omega s$ ), as Winer (comm. in loc.) holds : in that case $i\mu\epsilon$ must be the subject of the next clause (so in Diod. Sic. iv. 40 [Meyer], τον άδελφον εύλαβείσθαι, μή ποτε επίθηται τη βασιλεία): but $\phi o \beta$. $v \mu \hat{a}s$ stands alone, and the following clause explains it. So Soph. (Ed. Tyr. 760, δέδοικ' έμαυτόν . . . μη πόλλ' άγαν $\epsilon i \rho \eta \mu \epsilon r' \hat{\eta} \mu o i$. The indicative assumes the fact which $\mu \eta \pi \omega s$ deprecates :—see 12-16. Appeal to them to imirefl'. tate him, on the ground of their former love and veneration for him. 12.] This has been variously understood. But the only rendering which seems to answer the requirements of the construction and the context, is that which understands eim or yéyova after éyú, and refers it to the Apostle having in his own practice cast off Jewish habits and become as the Galatians : i. e. a Gentile : sce 1 Cor. ix. 20, 21. And so Winer, Neander, Fritz., De W., Meyer, Jowett (alt.), &c. (2) Chrys., Thdrt., Thl., Erasm.-par., al., regard it as said to Jewish believers, and explain,--τοῦτον εἶχον πάλαι τὸν ζηλον σφόδρα τον νύμον επόθουν άλλ' δράτε πώς μεταβέβλημαι. ταύτην τοίνυν και ύμεις ζηλώσατε την μεταβολήν (Thdrt.). But to this Meyer rightly objects, that $\eta \mu \eta \nu$, which would in this case have to be supplied, must have been expressed, as being emphatic, and cites from Justin ad Gracos, c. 2, where however I cannot find it, γίνεσθε ώs έγώ, ὕτικάγὼ ήμην ώς ύμεῖς. (3) Jerome, Erasm.-not., Corn.-a-lap., Estius, Michaelis, Rückert, Olsh., '.... as also I have accommodated myself to you.' But thus the second member of the sentence will not answer to the first. (4) Luther, Bcza, Calvin, Grot., Bengel, Morus, Peilc, al., would understand it, ' love me, as I love you' ("accipite hanc meani objurgationein eo animo quo vos objurgavi : . . . sit in nobis is affectus erga me, qui est in me erga vos," Luth.). But nothing has been said of a want of love : and certainly had this been meant, it would have been more plainly expressed. The words ἀδελφοί, δέομαι ύμῶν are by Chrys., Thdrt., al., Luther, Koppe, al., joined to the following : but wrongly, for there is no $\delta \epsilon \eta \sigma is$ in what follows. ούδέν με ήδικήσατε] The key to rightly understanding these words is, their apposition with έξουθενήσατε, ... έξεπτύσατε ... έδέξασθε below. To that period they refer : viz. to the time when he first preached the Gospel among them, and the first introduction of this period seems to be in the words, ut kaya as $i\mu\epsilon is$. Then I became as you : and at that time you did me no wrong, but on the contrary shewed me all sympathy and reve-Then comes in the inference, put rence. in the form of a question, at ver. 16,-1 must then have since become your enemy by telling you the truth. The other explanations seem all more or less beside the purpose : δηλών ότι οὐ μίσους, οὐδὲ ἔχθρας ην τα εἰρημένα . . Chrys., and similarly Thl., Aug., Pel., Luth., Calv. (' non excandesco mea causa, nec quod vobis sim infensus'), Estius, Winer, al., which would be irrelevant, and indeed preposterous without some introduction after the affection of the foregoing words : 'ye have done me no wrong,' i. c. ' ex animo omnia condonabat si resipiscerentur,' Beza : so Bengel, Rückert, al., —which is refuted by the aorist $\eta \delta_{i-1}$ $\kappa \eta \sigma \alpha \tau \epsilon$, of some definite time. The same is true of 'ye have wronged not me but yourselves ' (Ambr., Corn.-a-lap., Schött.), al.). can surely bear but one rendering,-on account of bodily weakness: all others (c.g. 'in weakness,' as E. V., μετà àσθεvelas, as (Ec., Thl., 'per infirmitatem,' as vulg., Luth., Beza, Grot., Estius, Jowett [comparing Phil. i. 15, where see note], 'during a period of sickness,' as Mr. Bagge) are ungrammatical, or irrelevant, as 'on account of the infirmity of (your) flesh' (Jer., Estius, Hig., Rettig), which would require some qualifying adverb such as ούτωs with εψηγγελισάμην, and would besides be wholly out of place in an Epistle in which he is recalling them to the substauce of his first preaching. The meaning then will be, that it was on account of an illness that he first preached in Galatia : i.e. that he was for that reason detained there, and preached, which otherwise he would not have done. On this, see Prolegomena, § ii. 3: the fact itself, I cannot help thinking, is plainly asserted here. The whole tenor of the passage seeming to shew that the Apostle's weakness was spoken of as a trial to the Galatians, µov appeared to have been altered to $i\mu\omega\nu$, -or to have been omitted by some who could not see its relevance, or its needfulness. But the principles of sounder criticism have taught me how unsafe is such ground of arguing, and have compelled me to adopt the text of the most ancient MSS. The temptation seems to have been the 'thorn in the flesh' of 2 Cor. xii. 1 ff., whatever that was: perhaps something connected with his sight, or some nervous infirmity: see below, and notes on Acts xiii. 9; xxiii. 1. έξεπτύσατε] "cxpresses figuratively and in a climax the sense of ¿ξουθ. Even in the passage cited by Kypke from Plut., Alex. i. p. 328, it is in its literal sense, as $\omega_{s\pi\epsilon\rho}$ $\chi a \lambda i \nu \delta \nu$ follows. We must treat this then as a departure from Greek usage, and regard it as occasioned by ¿¿out, as Paul loves to repeat the same prepositions in composition (Rom. ii. 17; xi. 7 al.), not without emphasis." έξορ. έδώκ. μοι, the right course will be, not at once to adopt the conclusion, that they point to ocular weakness on the part of the Apostle, nor because they form a trite proverb in many languages, there-fore to set down (as Meyer, De W., Windischmann, al., have done) at once that no such allusion can have been intended, but to judge from the words themselves and our information from other sources whether such an allusion is likely. And in doing so, I may observe that a proverbial expression so harsh in its nature, and so little prepared by the context, would perhaps hardly have been introduced without some particle of climax. Would not the Apostle have more naturally written, ότι εί δυνατόν, και τούς όφθ. ύμ....? Had the kai been inserted, it would have deprived the words of all reference to a matter of fact, and made them purely proverbial. At the same time it is fair to say that the order $\tau o \dot{v} s \dot{o} \phi \theta$. $\dot{v} \mu \hat{\omega} v$ rather favours the purely proverbial reference. Had the Apostle's eyes been affected, and had he wished to express "You would, if possible, have pulled out your own eyes, and have given them to me," he would certainly have written ὑμῶν τοὺs ὀφθ., not τοὺς ởφθ. ὑμῶν. In other words, the more emphatic τοὺς ởφθαλμούς is, the more likely is the expression to be proverbial merely: the less emphatic τ . $\delta\phi\theta$. is, the more likely to refer to some fact, in which the eyes were as matter of notoriety concerned. The inference then of any ocular disease from these words themselves seems to me precarious. Certainly Acts xxiii. 1 ff. receives light from such a supposition; but with our very small knowledge on the subject, many conjectures may be hazarded with some shew of support from Scripture, while none of them has enough foundation to make it probable on the whole. The proverb is abundantly illustrated by Wetst. ¿ξορύσσω is the regular classic word : cf. Herod. viii. 116: this however is doubted by Ellic. See on the whole passage, Jowett's most interesting "fragment on the character of St. Paul," Epp. &c. vol. i. up. 290-303. 16.] So that (as things now stand; an inference derived from the contrast between their former love and their present dislike of him. See Klotz, Devar. ii. 776) have I become your enemy ('hated by you ;' $-\epsilon_{\chi}\theta\rho$. in passive sense: or perhaps it may be active, as Ellic.) by speaking the truth (see Eph. iv. 15 note) to you ? When did he thus incur their ennity by speaking the truth ? Not at his first visit, from the whole tenor of this passage: nor in this letter, as some think (Jer., Luther, al.), which they had not yet read; but at his second visit, see Acts xviii. 23, when he probably found the mischief beginning, and spoke plainly against it. Cf. similar expressions in Wetst. : especially 'obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit,' Ter. Andr. i. 1. 40 : δργίζονται άπαντες τοῖς μετὰ παρβησίας τ' άληθη λέγουσι, Lucian, Abdic. 7. 17.] 'My telling you the truth may have made me seem your enemy : but I warn you that these men who court you so zealously (see ref. 2 Cor., and ef. Plut. vii. 762, cited by Fritz. ὑπό χρείας τὸ πρῶτον έπονται κ. ζηλοῦσιν, ὕστερον δὲ καὶ φιλοῦ- σ_{IV}) have no honourable purpose in so doing : it is only in order to get you away from the community as a separate clique, that you may court them.' Thus the verse seems to fit best into the context. As regards particular words, έκκλείω must bear the meaning of exclusion from a larger and attraction to a smaller, viz. their own, party. (Our very word 'exclusive' conveys the same idea.) I have therefore not adopted Mey.'s rendering, 'from all other teachers,'-nor that of Luther (1538), Calv., Grot., Beng., Rück., Olsh., Winer, al., 'from me and my communion,'-nor that of Chrys., Ec., Thl., $\tau \eta s \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \epsilon a s$ $\gamma \nu \omega \sigma \epsilon \omega s \epsilon \kappa \beta a \lambda \epsilon \delta \nu$,--nor that of Erusm., Corn.-a-lap., 'from Christian freedom.'

there Meyer would give Iva the meaning of 'in which case :' but it is surely far better where the sentence so plainly requires Iva of the purpose, to suppose some peculiar usage or solucism in formation of the subjunctive on the part of the Apostle.

18.] Two meanings are open to us: (1) as E. V. (apparently: but perhaps 'zealously affected' may be meant for the passive—for 'earnestly courted') and many Commentators taking (ηλοῦσθαι as middle-or passive with a signification nearly the same, 'it is good to be zealously affected in a good cause, and not only during my presence with you :' in which case the sense must be referred back to vv. 13-15, and the allusion must be to their zeal while he was with them. But, considering that this context is broken at ver. 17,-that the words ζηλοῦσθαι ἐν καλῷ are an evident reference to (ηλοῦσιν ύμ. οὐ καλῶς, and that the wider context of the whole passage adduces a contrast between their conduct when he was with them and now, I think it much better (2) to explain thus: 'I do not mean to blame them in the abstract for $\tau \delta$ $\langle \eta \lambda o \hat{v} v \ \hat{v} \mu \hat{a} s$: any teacher who did this $\kappa \alpha \lambda \hat{\omega} s$, preaching Christ, would be a cause of joy to me (Phil. i. 15-18): and it is an honourable thing (for you) to be the objects of this zeal ('ambiri') $\ell \nu \kappa \alpha \lambda \hat{\varphi}$, in a good cause (I still cannot see how this rendering of έν καλφ ' alters the meaning of the verb' [Ellic.]: it rather seems to me that the non-use of καλώs, while the paronomasia is retained, leads to this meaning), at all times and by every body, not only when I am (or was) present with you :' q. d. 'I have no wish, in thus writing, to set up an exclusive claim to ζηλούν ύμαs-whoever will really teach you good, at any time, let him do it and welcome.' Then the next verse follows naturally also, in which he narrows the relation between himself and them, from the wide one of a mere $(\eta \lambda \omega \tau h s, to the$ closer one of their parent in Christ, much as in 1 Cor. iv. 14 f.,—ώs τέκνα μου άγαπητὰ νουθετώ· ἐὰν γὰρ μυρίους παιδαγωγούς έχητε ἐν χριστῷ, ἀλλ' οὐ πολλούς πατέρας: ἐν γὰρ χρ. Ἰησοῦ διὰ τ. εὐαγ-γελίου ἐγὼ ὑμᾶς ἐγέννησα. On other interpretations, I may remark, (a) that after (nhovow, the strict passive meaning is the only suitable one for (ηλοῦσθαι, as it is indeed the only one justified by usage: (β) that ζηλόω must keep its meaning throughout, which will exclude all such renderings as 'invidiose tractari' here (Koppc): (γ) that all applications of the sentence to the Apostle himself as its object ($\epsilon \nu \kappa \alpha \lambda \hat{\psi}$, in the matter of a good teacher, as Estius, Corn.-a-lap., al.) are beside the purpose. 19. belongs to what follows, not to the preceding. Lachmann, (I suppose on account of the Sé following, but see below,) with that want of feeling for the characteristic style of St. Paul which he so constantly shews in punctuating, has attached this as a flat and irrelevant appendage to the last verse (so also Bengel, Knapp, Rückert, al.): and has besides tamed down TERVía into $\tau \epsilon \kappa r a$, thus falling into the trap laid by some worthless corrector. My little chil. dren (the diminutive occurs only here in St. Paul, but is manifestly purposely, and most suitably chosen for the propriety of the metaphor. It is found [see reff.] often iu St. John, while our Apostle has τέκνον, 1 Tim. i. 18; 2 Tim. ii. 1), whom (the change of gender is common enough. Meyer quotes an apposite example from Eur. λέγον το γράμμα, κ. άλλο το νόημα: Hesych., άλληγορία, άλλο τι παρά τό ακουόμενον υποδεικνύουσα : and gloss. Ν. Τ., αλληγορούμενα, ετέρως κατα μετά-φρασιν νοούμενα, και ου κατα την ανάyrwour. The word is often used, as the thing signified by it is exemplified, by Philo. It was the practice of the Rabbinical Jews to allegorize the O.T. history. "Singula fere gesta quæ narrantur, allegorice quoque et mystice interpretantur. Neque hac in parte labores ipsorum plane possumus contemnere. Nam eadem Paulus habet, qualia sunt de Adamo primo et secundo, de cibo et potu spirituali, de Hagare, ctc. Sic Joannes memorat Sodomum et Ægyptum mysticam, plagas item Ægyptias per revelationem hostibus Ecclesiæ immittendas prædicit," Schöttgen. How various persons take this allegorical comment of the Apostle, depends very much on their views of his authority as a Scripture interpreter. To those who receive the law as a great system of prophetic figures, there can be no difficulty in believing the events by which the giving of the law was prepared to have been prophetic figures also : not losing thereby any of their historic reality, but bearing to those who were able to see it aright, this deeper meaning. And to such persons, the fact of St. Paul and other sacred writers adducing such allegorical interpretatious brings no surprise and no difficulty, but only strong confirmation of their belief that there are such deeper meanings lying hid under the O. T. history. That the Rabbis and the Fathers, holding such deeper senses, should have often missed them, and allegorized fancifully and absurdly, is nothing to the purpose: it is surely most illogical to argue that because they were wrong, St. Paul cannot be right. The only thing which really does create any difficulty in my mind, is, that Commentators with spiritual discernment, and appreciation of such a man as our Apostle, should content themselves with quietly casting aside his Scripture interpretation wherever, as here, it passes their comprehension. On their own view of him, it would be at least worth while to consider whether his knowledge of his own Scriptures may not have surpassed ours. But to those who believe that he had the Spirit of God, this passage speaks very solemnly; and I quite agree with Mr. Convbeare in his note, edn. 2, vol. ii. p. 178, "The lesson to be drawn from this whole passage, as regards the Christian use of the O.T., is of an importance which can scarcely be overrated." Of course no one, who reads, marks, learns, and inwardly digests the Scriptures, can subscribe to the shallow and indolent dictum of Macknight, 'This is to be laid down as a fixed rule, that no. ancient history is to be considered as allegorical, but that which inspired persons have interpreted allegorically : but at the same time, in allegorizing Scripture, he will take care to follow the analogy of the faith, and proceed soberly, and in dependence on that Holy Spirit, who alone can put us in possession of His own mind in His word.' Calvin's remarks here are good : "Quemadmodum Abrahæ domus tunc fuit vera Ecclesia : ita minime dubium est quin præcipui et præ aliis memorabiles eventus qui in ea contigerunt, nobis totidem sint typi. Sicut ergo in circumcisione, in sacrificiis, in toto sacerdotio levitico allegoria fuit: sicuti hodic est in nostris sacramentis, ita etiam in domo Abrahæ fuisse dico. Sed id non facit ut a literali sensu recedatur. Sunma perinde est ac si diceret Paulus, figuram duorum testamentorum in duabus Abrahæ uxoribus, et duplicis populi in duobus filiis, veluti in tabula, nobis depictam." As to the objection of Luther, repeated by De Wette, that this allegory shews misapprehension of the history (bie Allegorie von Sara und hagar, welche ... zum Stich zu schwach ift, denn sie weichet ab vom historischen Verstand. Luth., eited by De W.), because Ishmael had nothing to do with the law of Moses, the misapprehension is entirely on the side of the objectors. Not the bare literal historical fact is in question here, but the inner character of God's dealings with men, of which type, and prophecy, and the historical fact itself, are only so many exemplifications. The difference between the children of the bond and the free, of the law and the promise, has been shewn out to the world before, by, and since the covenant of the law. See an excellent note of Wiudischmann's ad loc., exposing the shallow modern critical school. See also Jowett's note, on the other side: and while reading it, and tracing the consequences which will follow from adopting his view, bear in mind that the question between him and us is not affected by any thing there said on the similarity between St. Paul and the Alexandrians as interpreters of Scripture,--- but remains as it was before,-was the O. T. dispensation a system of typical events and ordinances, or is all such typical reference fanciful and delusive ? For these (women [aðraı], not as Jowett, Ishmael and Isaac, which would confuse the whole : the mothers are the covenants ; - the sons, the children of the covenants) are (import in the allegory, see reff.) two covenants (not 'revelations,' but literally covenants between God and men): one (covenant) indeed from Mount Sina (taking its origin from,—or having Mount Sina as its centre, as ό έκ Πελοποννήσου πόλεμος) gendering (bringing forth children : De W. compares viol τη̂s διαθήκης, Acts iii. 25) unto (with a view to) bondage, which one is (identical in the allegory with) Agar.

25.] (No parenthesis : συστοιχεί δέ begins a new clause.) For the word Agar (when the neuter article precedes a noun of another gender, not the import of that noun, but the noun itself, is designated,-so Demosth. p 255. 4, τό δ' ύμεῖς ὅταν είπω, την πόλιν λέγω. Kühner ii. 137) is (imports) Mount Sina, in Arabia (i.e. among the Arabians. This rendering, which is Chrysostom's, - τδ δε Σινά όρος ούτω μεθ. ερμηνεύεται τη επιχωρίω αὐτῶν γλώττη [so also Thl., Luther], is I conceive necessitated by the arrangement of the sentence, as well as by To Ayap. Had the Apostle intended merely to localize Zivâ *μ*ρos by the words $\epsilon \nu \tau \hat{\eta}$ 'Ap., he could hardly but have written τδ έν τη 'Ap., or have placed iv T. 'Ap. before istiv. Had he again, adopting the reading $\tau \delta \gamma \dot{a} \rho$ Σινα upos εστίν εν τη 'Apaβia, intended to say [as Windischmann], 'for Mount Sina is in Arabia, where Hagar's descendants likewise are,' the sentence would more naturally have stood τό γάρ Σινα ύρ. έν τη 'Αρ. έστίν, οτ καλ γάρ Σινά όρ. έν τ. Certainly we have Hagar as a geographical proper name in Arabia Petræa : the Chaldee paraphrast always calls the wilderness of Shur, הכרא.' So that Jowett certainly speaks too strongly when he says, "the old explanations, that Hagar is the Arabic word for a rock or the Arabie noun for Mount Sinai, are destitute of foundation." As to the improbability at which he hints, of St. Paul quoting Arabic words in writing to the Galatians, I cannot see how it is greater than that of his making the covert allusion contained in his own interpretation. We may well suppose St. Paul to have become familiarized, during his sojourn there, with this name for the granite peaks of Sinai), but (δέ marks the latent contrast that the addition of a new fact brings with it: so Ellic.) corresponds (viz. Probably the rule of supplying ellipses from the context (following which Kypke and Schott. here supply euopoouvyv, from εὐφράνθητι, and Isa. xlix. 13; lii. 9; cf. also 'erumpere gaudium,' Ter. Eun. iii. 5. 2 [Ellic.]) need hardly be applied here ; the phrase with $\phi \omega \nu \eta \nu$ was so common, as to lead at last to the omission of the substantive. The Hebrew רְנֵה, 'into joyful shouting,' seems not to have been read by the LXX. St. Paul here interprets the barren of Sara, who bore not according to the flesh (= the promise), and the fruitful of Agar (= the law). Clem. Rom., Ep. ii. ad Cor. 2, p. 333, takes the στείρα of the Gentile Church, έπει έρημος έδόκει είναι από τοῦ θεοῦ, ὁ λαὸς ἡμῶν, νυνί δε πιστεύσαντες πλείονες εγενόμεθα τών δοκούντων έχειν θεόν (the Jewish church), and similarly Origen (in Rom., lib. vi. 7, vol. iv. p. 578), . . . quod multo plures ex gentibus quam ex cir-cumcisione crediderint.' And this has been the usual interpretation. It only shews how manifold is the 'perspective of prophecy :' this sense neither is incompatible with St. Paul's, nor surely would it have been denied by him. (So Chrys., al., in this passage, which is clearly wrong: for $\eta \mu \omega \nu$, even without $\pi d \nu \tau \omega \nu$, must apply to all Christians for the argument to hold.) δτι πολ.] not, as E. 29.] ό κατ. σάρ. γεν., see ver. 23. It has been thought that there is nothing in the Hebrew text to justify so strong a word as ¿δίωκεν. It runs, 'and Sarah saw the son of Hagar στεπό ' (παίζοντα μετά 'Ισαάκ τοῦ υίοῦ αὐτῆs, LXX); and some deny that guy ever means 'he mocked.' But certainly it does : see Gen. xix. 14. And this would be quite ground enough for the εδίωκεν, for the spirit of persecution was begun. So that we need not refer to tradition, as many have done (even Ellic., whom see; Jowett, as unfortunately usual with him when impugning the accuracy of St. Paul, asserts rashly and confidently, that the sense in which the Apostle takes the Hebrew is inadmissible), to account for St. Paul's expression.

30.] άλλά, as iu E. V., 'nevertheless :' notwithstanding the fact of the persecution, just mentioned. The quotation is adapted from the LXX, where μου Ίσαάκ stands for της ελευθέρας. We need hardly have recourse (with Ellie.) to the fact that God confirmed Sarah's words, in order to prove this to be Scripture : the Apostle is allegorizing the whole history, and thus every part of it assumes a significance in the allegory. κληρονομήση] See Judg. xi. 2 (LXX), κ. έξέβαλον τον Ίεφθάε, κ. εἶπον αὐτῷ, οὐ κληρονομήσεις ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ τοῦ πατρός ἡμῶν, ὅτι υίδς γυναικός ἑταίρας σύ. T. and 'fatiscens Græcitas:' see Lobeck, Phryn. p. 722." Ellicott.

31.] I am inclined to think, against Meyer, De W., Ellic., &c., that this verse is, as commonly taken, the conclusion from what has gone before: and that the δd is bound on to the $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho or \phi \mu \eta \eta$ preceding. And if we are, we are not the children of the handmaid, of whom it was said où $\mu \eta \kappa \lambda \eta \rho or \phi \mu$, but of the freewoman, of whose son the same words asserted that he should inherit. 1.] It is almost impossible to determine satisfactorily the reading (see var. readd.). I have in this Edition adopted that in the text, as being best attested by the With liberty most ancient authorities. did Christ make you free (i. c. exevbepoi is your rightful name and ought to be your estimation of yourselves, seeing that έλευθερία is your inheritance by virtue of Christ's redemption of you). Stand fast, therefore (reff. $\sigma \tau \eta \kappa \omega$ is unknown in classical Greek), and be not again (see note on ch. iv. 9: in fact, the whole world was under the law in the sense of its being God's only revelation to them) involved (reff.) in the yoke of bondage (better than 'a yoke;' an anarthrous noun or personal pronoun following another noun in the genitive often deprives that other noun of its article: c. g., τ is έγνω νοῦν κυρίου; 1 Cor. ii. 16: see numerous instances in Cant. v. 1. Cf. Winer, § 19. 2, most of whose examples however are after propositions. Wetst. quotes from Soph. Aj. 914, πρός οία δουλείας (υγά

2. 1 ile, not ilé, in later χωροῦμεν). Greek : see Winer, § 6. 1. a :- it draws attention to what follows, as a strong έγώ Παύλος άντικρυς statement. ύμιν λέγω κ. διαρβήδην, κ. το εμαυτού προςτίθημι υνομα, Thdrt. την του oiκείου προςώπου άξιοπιστίαν άντι πάσης ἀποδείξεως τίθησι, Theophyl., and so Chrys. There bardly seems to be a reference (as Wetst. "ego quem dieunt cir-cumcisionem prædicare") to his having circumcised Timothy. Calvin says well: "Ista locutio non parvam emphasin habet; coram enim se opponit, et nomen dat, ne videatur causam dubiam habere. Et quanquam vilescere apud Galatas cœperat ejus auctoritas, tamen ad refellendos omnes adversarios sufficere asserit."

The present, έαν περιτέμνησθε, implies the continuance of a habit, q. d. if you will go on being circumcised. He does not say, 'if you shall have been circumcised :' so that Calv.'s question, 'quid hoc vult? Christum non profuturum omnibus circumeisis?' does not come in. On xp. ύμ. ούδ. ώφελήσει, Chrys. remarks : δ περιτεμνόμενος ώς νόμον δεδοικώς περίτεμ-νεται, ό δε δεδοικώς απιστεί τη δυνάμει τῆς χάριτος, ὁ δὲ ἀπιστῶν οὐδὲν κερδαίνει $\pi a \rho a$ $\tau \eta s$ $a \pi i \sigma \tau o \nu \mu \epsilon \nu \eta s$. Nothing can be more directly opposed than this verse to the saying of the Judaizers, Acts xv. 1. The exception to the rule in Paul's own conduct, Acts xvi. 3, is sufficiently provided for by the present tense here: see 3.] $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$, moreover, introduces above. an addition, and a slight contrast-'not only will Christ not profit but

ii. 13 al., ut h. l. Passivo (cf. evepyeiral πόλεμος, Polyb. i. 13. 5; Jos. Antt. xv. 5. 3) nunquam Paulus usus est." The older Romanist Commentators (Bellarm., Est.) iusisted on the passive sense as favouring the dogma of fides formata, for which it is eited by the Council of Trent, sess. vi. cap. 7, de justific. And the modern Romanist Commentators, though abandoning the passive sense, still claim the passage on their side (e.g. Windischmann); but without reason; love is the modus operandi of faith, that which justifies, however, is not love, but faith ; nor can a passage be produced, where St. Paul says we are justified by 'faith working by love,' but it is ever by faith only. One is astonished at the boldness of such a generally calm and fair writer as Windischmann, in claiming the passage for the Tridentine doctrine, even when the passive interpretation, which was all it had to lay hold on, is given up. As parallels to our passage, see Rom. xiv. 17; 1 Cor. vii. 19.

7-12.] He laments their deflexion from their once promising course, and denounces severely their perverters. Ye were running well ('hoc est, omnia apud vos erant in felici statu et successu, vivebatis optime, contendebatis recta ad vitam æternam quam vobis pollicebatur verbuin,' &c. Luther) : who (see ch. iii. 1, the question expresses astonishment) hindered you (Polyb. xxiv. 1. 12, uses έγκόπ- $\tau \epsilon \nu$ with a dative, $\delta i \dot{a} \tau \dot{o} \tau \delta \nu \Phi (\lambda) \pi \pi o \nu$ έγκόπτειν τη δικαιοδοσία: Ellic. quotes, in connexion with the view of the primary notion being that of hindering by breaking up a road,-Greg. See Bernhardy, Syntax, ix. 6 b, who quotes one example very apposite to this, - έμποδών ήμιν γένηται την θεόν μη ξελκύσαι, Aristoph. Pae. 315) obey the truth (i. e. submit yourselves to the true Gospel of These words, which Chrys. Christ. omits here, have been transferred hence to ch. iii. 1. See var. readd. there. On that account they are certainly genuine here)?

8.] The persuasion (to which you are yielding-active ; not your persuasion, passive. meiorpovn may mean either. Ellic. says : "As the similar form πλησμονή means both satietas (the state) and also expletio (the act), Col. ii. 23; Plato, Sympos. 186 c. πλ. καl κένωσις, - so πεισ- $\mu ov \dot{\eta}$ may mean the state of being per-suaded, i. e. conviction, or the act of persuading, 'persuadendi sollertia' (Schött.): cf. Chrys. on 1 Thess. i. 3, ου πεισμονή ανθρωπίνη ... ην ή πείθουσα." But here, ή πεισμ. being connected with ό καλών $\delta\mu\hat{a}s$, and answering to the act of $\epsilon\gamma\kappa\delta\pi$ - $\tau \epsilon v$ in the last verse, is better taken actively) is not from (does not come from, is not originated by) Him who calleth you (i. c. 9.] įvµn may allude either to men (Jer., Aug., Grot., Est., Beng., De W., al.), or to doctrine. In the parallel place in 1 Cor. v. 6, it is moral influence; so also where our Lord uses the same figure, Matt. xvi. 12, where $\zeta \dot{\nu} \mu \eta = \delta i \delta a \chi \eta$. Nor can there be any objection to taking it as abstract, and φύραμα concrete :- a little false doctrine corrupts the whole mass (of Christians). So Chrys. (ούτω καl ύμαs ίσχύει τό μικρόν τοῦτο κακόν, μη διορθω. θέν, καί els τέλειον ἰουδαϊσμόν ἀγαγεῖν), Thl., Luth., Calv., all. 10.] "After the warning of vv. 8, 9, Paul assures his readers that he has confidence in them, άλλο ⁸ φρονήσετε ό δε ^h ταράσσων ύμας ¹ βαστάσει το ⁸ Acts ^κκρίμα, ὅςτις ἐὰν ή. ¹¹ ἐγὼ δέ, ἀδελφοί, εἰ ^ρ περιτομην ^{ετι ¹} κηρύσσω, ^m τί ἕτι ⁿ διώκομαι; ἄρα [°]κατήργηται το ^h, ² ch. i. ⁷ ^γ σκάνδαλον τοῦ ⁹ σταυροῦ. ¹² ^r ὄφελον καὶ ^s ἀποκόψον ¹⁴ ch. ¹⁷ ται οἱ ¹ ἀναστατοῦντες ὑμας.

έγώ, emphatic, I, for my part; 'quod ad me attinct, . . . ' els, with regard to, see reff., and Bernhardy, p. 220. On iv κυρίω, see 2 Thess. iii. 4 :- it is the element or sphere in which his confidence is ούδεν άλλο φρον.] See conditioned. έτέρως, Phil. iii. 15 : of which this $\vec{a}\lambda \lambda o$ is a kind of softening. We take the meaning here to be, ye will be of no other mind than this, viz. which I enjoin on you,-not in vv. 8, 9 only, but in this Epistle, and in his preaching generally. $\delta \delta \epsilon \tau a p \dot{a} \sigma$ - $\sigma \omega v$ need not be interpreted as referring necessarily to any one $\epsilon \pi i \sigma \eta \mu \sigma s$ among the Judaizers (as Olsh., al.), but simply as individualizing the warning, and carrying home the denunciation to each one's heart among the perverters. Cf. of avaoraτοῦντεs below, and ch. i. 7; iv. 17.

τὸ κρĩμα, the sentence, understood to be unfavourable, is a burden laid on the judged person, which he $β_{αστάζει}$, bears. The $\delta s \tau s ε \delta v$ $\frac{1}{2}$ generalizes the declaration to the fullest extent: see ch. i. 8, 9.

11.] The connexion appears to be this: the Apostle had apparently been charged with being a favourer of circumcision in other churches; as shewn e. g. by his having circumcised Timothy. After the preceding sharp denunciation of $\delta \tau a\rho d\sigma$ - $\sigma \omega r \delta \mu \tilde{a}$, and $\delta \sigma \tau s \ d\nu \ \tilde{f}$, it is open to the adversaries to say, that Paul hinself was one of their $\tau a\rho d\sigma \sigma \sigma \tau \epsilon$, by his inconsistency. In the abruptness then of his ferrid thoughts he breaks out in this self-defence. $\epsilon \gamma \omega$, emphatic as before.

περιτομήν has the chief emphasis, as the new element in the sentence, and not κηρύσσω, as Chrys. (οὐ γὰρ εἶπεν ὅτι περιτομήν οὐκ ἐργάζομαι, ἀλλά, οὐ κηρύσ σω, τουτέστιν, οὐχ ὅὕτω κελείω πιστεύεν), al.,—its position not allowing this. The first eri is best understood, as referring, not to any change in his preaching as an Apostle (for he appears always to have been of the same mind, and certainly was from the first persecuted by the Jews), but to the change since his conversion, before which he was a strenuous fautor of Judaism. Olsh. objects to this, that $\kappa n \rho i \sigma \sigma \omega$ could not be used of that period. But this (even if it be necessary to press $\kappa n \rho i \sigma$, so far into matter of fact) cannot be said with any certainty :- the course of Saul as a zcalot may have often led him even to preach, if not circumcision in its present debated position, yet that strict Judaism of which it formed a part. τί ἕτι διώκ.] έτι is logical, as in reff. (De W.): i. c., what further excuse is there for my being (as I am) persecuted (by the Jews)? For, if this is so, if I still preach circumcision, apa, then is brought to nought, is done away, the OFFENCE (refl. stumbling-block, σκάνδ. has the emphasis) of the cross - because, if circumcision, and not faith in Christ crucified, is the condition of salvation, then the Cross has lost its offensive character to the Jew : οὐδέ γάρ ούτως ό σταυρός ήν ό σκανδαλίζων τούς 'Ιουδαίους, ώς το μή δείν πείθεσθαι τοις πατρώοις νόμοις. και γαρ τον Στέφανον προςενέγκοντες, ούκ είπον ότι ούτος τον έσταυρωμένον προςκυνεί, άλλ' ύτι κατὰ τοῦ νόμου κ. τοῦ τόπου λέγει τοῦ 12. the Greek, the stress would be, $\delta \phi \epsilon \lambda$. κ : άποκόψονται οί αν. ύμ. But (4) this allusion is one only of sound, and on account of the nai, all the more likely to be to some well-known and harsh meaning of the word, even as far as to which the Apostle's wish extends. And (5) such a meaning of the word is that in which (agreeably to its primitive classical sense, of hewing off limbs, see Lidd. and Scott) it is used by the LXX, ref. Deut., by Arrian, Epict. ii. 20, by Hesych., δ ἀπόκοπος, ήτοι δ εὐνοῦχος-by Philo, de legg. special. ad vi. vii. dec. cap. § 7, vol. ii. p. 306, τὰ γεννητικὰ προsaπέκοψαν, --de vict. offerent. § 13, p. 261, $\theta\lambda$ adías κ. ἀποκεκομμένος τὰ γεννητικά (Wetst.). It seems to me that this sense must be adopted, in spite of the protests raised against it; e. g. that of Mr. Bagge recently, who thinks it "involves a positive insult to St. Paul" (?). And so Chrys., and the great consensus of ancient and modern Commentators: and, as Jowett very properly observes, "the common interpretation of the Fathers, confirmed by the use of language in the LXX, is not to be rejected only because it is displeasing to the delicacy of modern times.

όφελον is used in the N. T. as a mere particle : see reff. : also Hermann on Viger, p. 756-7, who says : "omnino observandum est, ὤφελον nonnisi tunc adhiberi, quum quis optat ut fuerit aliquid, vel sit, vel futurum sit, quod non fuit aut est aut futurum est." The construction with a future is very unusual; in Lucian, Solec. 1, ύφελον και νῦν ἀκολουθησαι δυνήση is given as an example of a soloccism. I need hardly enter a caution against the punctuation of a few mss. and editions, by which Exercise taken alone, and the following future supposed to be assertive, as Baoráoei above, ver. 10. The reff. will shew, how alien such an usage is from the usage of the N. T. avao Taτοῦντες, ἀνατρέποντες, Hesych. It belongs to later Greek : the classical expression is ἀνάστατον ποιεῦν, Polyb. iii. 81. 6 al.: or τιθένει, Soph. Antig. 670 : and it is said to belong to the Maccdonian dialect. Ellic., referring to Tittmann, p. 266: where however I can find no such assertion.

The rec. reading $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{\sigma} \tau a_1$ would mean merely 'is in course of being fulfilled,' whereas now it is, 'is fulfilled.' not 'comprehended' (Luth., Calv., Olsh., Winer, al). The history of the verbal usage is, that $\pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu a$, as $\chi \rho i \sigma \tau \delta s$ and $\theta \epsilon \delta s$, canne to be used as a proper name : so that the supposed distinction between $\tau \delta \pi \nu$. as the objective (the Holy Ghost), and $\pi \nu$. as the subjective (mau's spirit), does not hold.

σαρκός] the natural man :-- that whole state of being in the flesh, out of which spring the practices and thoughts of ver. 19. ου μη τελέσητε] Is this (1) merely future in meaning, and a sequence on πνεύματι περιπ., 'and ye shall not fulfil,'-or is it (2) imperative, 'and fulfil not ?' Ellic. in his note has shewn that this latter meaning is allowable, it being doubtful even in classical Greek whether there are not some instances of où $\mu\eta$ with the second person subjunctive imperatively used, and the tendency of later Greek being rather to use the subjunctive aorist for the future. And Meyer defends it on exegetical grounds. But surely (1) is much to be preferred on these same grounds. For the next and following verses go to shew just what this verse will then assert, viz., that the Spirit and 17.] the flesh exclude one another. Substantiation of the preceding,—that if ye walk by the Spirit, ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh. The second yap (see var. readd.) gives a reason for the continual $i\pi_i\theta\nu\mu\epsilon_i\nu$ of these two against one another : viz., that they are opposites.

The necessity of supposing an cebatic meaning for "wa in theology is obviated by remembering, that with God, results are all purposed. See this verse expanded in Rom. vii. viii. as above : in vii. 20 we have nearly the same words, and the same construction. It is true that $\theta \in \lambda \in \nu$ there applies only to one side, the better will, striving after good : whereas here it must be taken 'sensu communi, for 'will' in general, to whichever way inclined. So that our verse requires expansion, both in the direction of Rom. vii. 15-20,-and in the other direction, ov γὰρ δ θέλω (after the natural man) ποιῶ κακόν ἀλλ' δ οὐ θέλω ἀγαθόν, τοῦτο ποιῶ, -to make it logically complete. 18.] By this verse, the locus respecting the flesh and the Spirit is interwoven into the general argument, thus (cf. ver. 23) : the law is made for the flesh, and the works of the flesh : the Spirit and flesh avtikeivtai : if $(\delta \epsilon$ bringing out the contrast between the treatment of both in ver. 17, and the selection of one side in this verse) then ye ara led by (see Rom. ref., $\delta \sigma o \dots \pi \nu \varepsilon \dot{\nu} \alpha \tau_i$ $\theta \epsilon o \ddot{\nu}$ $\ddot{\nu} \gamma \sigma \tau \alpha_i$, $\sigma \dot{\nu} \sigma \sigma \sigma$ $\cdots \sigma \sigma \sigma$ $\theta \epsilon o \ddot{\nu}$) the Spirit, ye are not under the law. This he proceeds to substantiate, by specifying the works of the flesh and of the Spirit. This interpretation is better than the merely practical one of Chrys., al., $\delta \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho \pi \nu \varepsilon \ddot{\nu} \mu a \xi_{\mu\nu} \omega s_{\lambda} \gamma \dot{\eta}, \sigma \beta \epsilon \nu \nu \sigma_i$ $\delta \dot{\alpha} \tau \sigma \dot{\nu} \tau \rho \omega \pi \rho \dot{\alpha} \nu \epsilon \dot{m} \theta \mu (a \pi \sigma \alpha \pi')$ $\delta \dot{\delta} \dot{\epsilon} \tau \sigma \dot{\nu} \tau \omega \nu \dot{\alpha} \alpha \lambda \lambda \alpha \gamma \epsilon ls o \dot{\delta} \epsilon \dot{\tau} \sigma \alpha \pi \lambda \dot{\alpha} \gamma \epsilon ls o \dot{\delta} \epsilon \dot{\tau} \sigma \alpha \tau \dot{\eta} s$ $\dot{\alpha} \eta \delta \tau \sigma \dot{\nu} \nu \phi \mu \omega \eta \partial \theta e las, \dot{\nu} \eta \lambda \delta \tau \epsilon \rho s \pi \sigma \lambda \lambda \phi$ $\tau \eta s \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \epsilon (\nu \sigma u \pi \rho \alpha \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda (a s \gamma \epsilon \nu \rho \omega \rho s, - for$ $it is a very dillerent thing où <math>\delta \epsilon \tilde{\epsilon} \sigma \sigma a$ $\nu \phi \mu \omega \rho$, from où $\epsilon \bar{\epsilon} \nu a \dot{\nu} \pi \delta \nu \phi \mu \omega \rho$.

'overlaken,' and De Wette, al., which could not be emphatic, but would be palliative : Grotius, - 'si quis antea [h. c. antequam have cp. ad vos veniat] deprehensus fuerit :' Winer,- etiam si [si vel] quis antea deprehensus fuerit in peccato, eum tamen [iterum peccantem] corrigite :' Olsh., who regards the $\pi \rho o$ almost as expletive, betokening merely that the $\lambda a \mu \beta a \nu \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$ comes in time bcfore the katapti(kiv. The only meaning which satisfies the emphasis is that of being caught in the fact, 'flagrante delicto,' before he can escape : which, though unusual, seems justified by ref. Wisd. : and so Meyer, Ellic., al.) in any transgression (with the meaning 'overtaken' for $\pi \rho o \lambda \eta \mu \phi \theta \hat{\eta}$, falls also that of 'inadvertence' for $\pi a p a \pi \tau \omega \mu a$. The stronger meaning of 'sin,' is far commoner in St. Paul: see ref. Rom. and ib. v. 15, 16, 20; 2 Cor. v. 19; Eph. i. 7, ii. 1, 5; Col. ii. 13 bis), do ye, the spiritual ones (said not in irony, but bona fide: referring not to the elergy only, but to every believer), restore (Beza, Hammond, Bengel, al., have imagined an allusion to a dislocated limb being reduced into place: but the simple cthieal sense is abundantly justified by ex-amples: see Herodot., cited on 1 Cor. i. 10; Stob. i. 85, καταρτίζειν φίλους διαφερομένους [Ellic.]) such a person (see especially 1 Cor. v. 5, 11) in the spirit of meekness (beware of the silly hendiadys: Chrys. gives the right allusion, —ούκ είπεν "έν πραότητι," άλλ' "έν πνεύματι πραότητος" δηλων ότι και τφ πνεύματι ταῦτα δοκεῖ, καὶ τὸ δύνασθαι μετ' επιεικείας διορθούν τούς άμαρτάνοντας, χαρίσματός έστι πνευματικού : and Ellie., " $\pi \nu$. here seems immediately to refer to the state of the inward Spirit as wrought upon by the Holy Spirit, and ultimately to the Holy Spirit, as the inworking power. Cf. Rom. i. 4, viii. 15; 2 Cor. iv. 13; Eph. i. 17: in all of which cases $\pi \nu$, seems to indicate the Holy Spirit, and the abstract genitive the specific $\chi \acute{a} \mu \sigma \mu a$ "),—looking to thyself (we have the same singling out of individuals from a multitude previously addressed in Thucyd. i. 42, ῶν ἐνθυμηθέντες, καὶ νεώτερός τις παρὰ πρεσβυτέρου μαθών, ἀξιούτω . . . ήμῶς ἀμύνεσθαι. See more examples in Bernhardy, p. 421), lest thou also be tempted (on a similar occasion : notice the 2.] άλλήλων, prefixed and aorist). emphatic, has not been enough attended to. You want to become disciples of that Law which imposes heavy burdens on men : if you will bear burdens, bear ONE ANOTHER'S burdens, and thus fulfil (see var. readd. : notice aorist: by this act fulfil) the law of Christ, - a far higher and better law, whose only burden is love. The position of άλλήλων 1 conceive fixes this meaning, by throwing $\tau \dot{a} \beta \dot{a} \rho \eta$ into the shade, as a term common to the two laws. As to the $\beta \alpha \rho \eta$, the more general the meaning we give to it, the better it will accord with the sense of the command. 3.] The chief hindrance to sympathy with the burdens of others, is self-conceit : that must be got rid of. είναι τί, see reff.

μηδέν ών] there is (perhaps: but this must not be over-pressed, see Ellic.) a fine irony in the subjective $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon\nu$ -' being, if he would come to himself, and look on the real fact, nothing : -whereas ouder we expresses more the objective fact,-his real absolute worthlessness. See examples of both expressions in Wetst. h. l. φρεναπατά] not found elsewhere : see ref. and James i. 26. The word seems to mean just as άπατων καρδίαν αὐτοῦ there : l should hardly hold Ellic.'s distinction : both are subjective deceits, and only to be got rid of by testing them with plain matter of fact. 4.] The test applied : emphasis on τὸ ἔργον, which (as Mey.) is the complex, the whole practical result of his life, see reff. δoκ.] put to the trial (reff.): not 'render δόκιμον,' which the word will к. тоте And then (after not bear. he has done this) he will have his matter of boasting (the article makes it subjective: the καύχημα, that whereof to boast, not without a slight irony, -whatever matter of boasting he finds, after such a testing, will be) in reference to himself alone (els éau. µou. emphatie-corresponds to eis τον έτ. below), and not (as matter of $fact: not \mu \eta$) in reference to the other, (or, his neighbour-the man with whom he was comparing himself: general in its incaning, but particular in each case of comparison). 5.] And this is the more advisable, because in the nature of things, each man's own load (of infirmities and imperfections and sins: not of 'responsibility,' which is alien from the context) will (in ordinary life: not 'at the last day,' which is here irrelevant, and would surely have been otherwise expressed : the Bastáse must correspond with the Basta (ere above, and be a taking up and carrying, not an ultimate bearing the consequences of) come upon himself φορτίον here, hardly with to bear. any allusion to Æsop's well-known fable (C. and H. ii. 182, edn. 2),-but,-as distinguished from Bápos, in which there is an idea of grievance conveyed,-the load imposed on each by his own fault. The future, in this sense of that which must be in the nature of things, is discussed by Bern-6-10.] Exhortahardy, pp. 377-8. tion (in pursuance of the command in ver. 2, see below), to liberality towards their teachers, and to beneficence in general.

6.] κοινωνείτω most likely intransitive, as there does not appear to be an instance of its transitive use in the N. T. (certainly not Rom. xii. 13). But the two senses come nearly to the same : he who shares in the necessities of the saints, can only do so by making that necessity partly his own, i.e., by depriving himself to that extent, and communicating to them. On κατηχούμ. and κατηχῶν, see Suicer, Thes. sub voce. Not the Israel after the flesh, among whom these teachers wish to enrol you, are blessed : but the ISRAEL OF GOD, described ch. iii. ult., εἰ δὲ ὑμεῖς χριστοῦ, ἄρα τοῦ ᾿Αβραὰμ σπέρμα ἐστέ. Cyr. viii. 5. 24; τοῦ λοιποῦ autem repetitionem ejusdem facti reliquo tempore indicat, ut apud Aristoph. in Pace, v. 1684 [1050 Bekk.]." Hermann ad Viger., p. 706. But the above example from Herod. hardly scems to bear this out. Rather is a thing happening in time regarded as belonging to the period including it, and the genitive is one of possession. Against this Ellic., viewing the gen. as simply partitive, refers to Donalds. Gram. § 451 : who however defines his meaning by saying "partitive, or, what is the same thing, possessive." This indeed must be the clear and only account of a partitive κόπ. παρεχ.] How ? genitive. Thdrt. But it seems much more natural to take it of giving him trouble by rebellious conduct and denying his apostolic authority, seeing that it was stamped with so powerful a seal as he proceeds to έγω γάρ] for it is I (not the state. Judaizing teachers) who carry (perhaps as in ver. 5, aud ch. v. 10,-bear, as a burden : but Chrys.'s idea seems more adapted to the 'feierlich' character of the sentence : ούκ είπεν, έχω, άλλά, βαστάζω, ὥςπερ τις έπι τροπαίοις μέγα φρονών ή σημείοις βασιλικοΐς: see reff. [2]) in (on) my body τὰ στίγματα, the marks of Jesus. -the marks branded on slaves to indicate their owners. So Herod. vii. 233, robs πλεύνας αὐτέων, κελεύσαντος Ξέρξεω, έστιζον στίγματα βασιλήϊα: and in another place (ii. 113) is a passage singularly in point : ότεω άνθρώπων επιβάληται στίγματα ίρά, έωϋτον διδούς τῷ θεῷ, οὐκ έξεστι τούτου άψασθαι. See many more examples in Wetst. These marks, in St. Paul's case, were of course the scars of his wounds received in the service of his Master-cf. 2 Cor. xi. 23 ff. ໄມຂະບູ is the genitive of possession,-auswcring to the possessive Baoin hia in the extract above. There is no allusion whatever to any similarity between himself and our Lord, 'the marks which Jesus bore ;' such an allusion would be quite irrelevant: and with its irrelevancy falls a whole fabric of Romanist superstition which has been raised on this verse, and which the fair and learned Windischman, giving as he does the honest interpretation here, yet attempts to defend in a supplemental note. Neither can we naturally suppose any comparison intended between these his $\sigma\tau i\gamma\mu a\tau a$ as Christ's servant, and circumcision: for he is not now on that subject, but on his authority as sealed by Christ : and such a comparison is alien from the majesty of the sentence. 18.] THE APOSTOLIC DLESS-ING. No special intention need be suspected in $\pi\nu\epsilon\dot{\nu}\mu\alpha\tau\sigma s$ ($\dot{\alpha}\pi\dot{\alpha}\gamma\omega\nu$ a $\dot{\nu}\tau\dot{\alpha}\dot{\nu}$, Chrys.), as the same expression occurs at the end of other Epistles (refl.). I should rather regard it as a deep expression of his Christian love, which is further carried on by $\dot{\alpha}\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi ol$, the last word,— parting from them, after an Epistle of such rebuke and warning, in the fulness of brotherhood in Christ.

See John xx. 17, from which saying of our Lord it is not improbable that the expression took its rise. Meyer maintains, God who is also the Father of? on the ground that only $\pi a \tau \eta \rho$, not $\theta \epsilon \delta s$, requires a genitive supplied. But we may fairly reply that, if we come to strictness of construction, his meaning would require ό θεός, ό καί πατήρ. Harless's objection, that on our rendering it must be $\delta \theta \epsilon \delta s \tau \epsilon$ $\kappa \alpha l \pi$., is well answered by Meyer from 1 Pet. ii. 25, τον ποιμένα κ. επίσκοπον τῶν ψυχῶν ἡμῶν. Ellicott prefers Meyer's view, but pronounces the other both grammatically and doctrinally tenable), who blessed (aor.: not 'hath blessed:' the historical fact in the eounsels of the Father being thought of throughout the sentence. εὐλογητός—εὐλογήσας —— εὐλογία — such was the ground-tone of the new covenant. which, and means by which, the blessing is imparted) all (i. c. all possible-all, exhaustive, in all richness and fulness of blessing: cf. vcr. 23 note) blessing of the Spirit (not merely, 'spiritual [inward] blessing :' πνευματικόs in the N.T. always implies the working of the Holy Spirit, never bearing merely our modern inaccurate sense of spiritual as opposed to bodily. See 1 Cor. ix. 11, which has been thus misunderstood) in the heavenly places (so the expression, which occurs five times in this Epistle [see reff.], and nowhere else, can only mean : cf. ver. 20. It is not probable that St. Paul should have chosen an unusual expression for the purposes of this Epistle, and then used it in several different senses. Besides, as Harless remarks, the preposition $\epsilon \pi i$ in composition with adjectives gives usually a local sense : c. g. in επίγειος, επιχθόνιος, επουράνιος, as compared with γήϊνος, χθόνιος, οὐρά-νιος. Chrys., al., would understand it 'heavenly blessings,' in which case the Apostle would hardly have failed to add χαρίσμασιν, or ἀγαθοΐs, or the like. But, with the above rendering, what is

But, with the above rendering, what is the sense? Our country, $\pi o\lambda i \tau \epsilon v \mu a$, is in heaven, Phil. iii. 20: there our High Priest stands, blessing us. There are our treasures, Matt. vi. 20, 21, and our affections to be, Col. iii. 1 ff.: there our hope is laid up, Col. i. 5: our inheritance is reserved for us, 1 Pet. i. 4. And there, in that place, and belonging to that state, is the $\epsilon v \lambda \sigma \gamma i a$, the gift of the Spirit, Heb. vi. 4, poured out on those who τa $a \nu \omega$ $\phi \rho o v \sigma i \sigma u$. Materially, we are yet in the body : but in the Spirit, we are in heaven - only waiting for the redemption of the body to be entirely and literally there.

I may once for all premise, that it will be impossible, in the limits of these notes, to give even a synopsis of the various opinions on the rich fulness of doctrinal expressions in this Epistle. I must state in each case that which appears to me best to suit the context, and those variations which must necessarily be mentioned, referring to such copious commentaries as Harless or Stier for further statement) in Christ ("the threefold $e\nu$ after $e\lambda a\gamma f \sigma s$, has a meaning ever deeper and more precise: and should therefore be kept in translating. The blessing with which God has blessed us, consists and expands itself in all blessing of the Spirit-then brings in Heaven, the heavenly state in us, and us in itthen finally, CURIST, personally, He Himself, who is set and exalted into Heaven, comes by the Spirit down into us, so that He is in us and we in Him of a truth, and thereby, and in so far, we are with Him in heaven." Stier). 4.] According as (kalus explains and expands the foregoing - shewing wherein the εὐλογία consists as regards us, and God's working towards us. Notice, that whereas ver. 3 has summarily included in the work of blessing the Three Persons, the FATHER bestowing the SPIRIT in CHRIST,-now the threefold cord, so to speak, is un-wrapped, and the part of each divine Person separately described : cf. argument above) He selected us (reff. I render selected, in preference to elected, as better giving the middle sense,--- ' chose for himself, - and the $\epsilon\xi$, that it is a choosing out of the world. The word [ref. Deut.] is an O. T. word, and refers to the spiritual Israel, as it did to God's elect Israel of old. But there is no contrast between their election and ours: it has been but one election throughout-an election in Christ, and to holiness on God's side - and involving accession to God's people [cf. πιστεύσαντες, ver. 13, and είγε επιμένετε τη πίστει, Col. i. 23] on ours. See Ellicott's note on the word, and some excellent remarks in Stier, p. 62, on the divine and human sides of the doctrine of election as put forward in this Epistle) in Him (i.e. in Christ, as the second Adam [1 Cor. xv. 22], the righteous Head of our race. In Him, in one wide sense, were all mankind elected, inasmuch as He took their flesh and blood, and redeemed them, and represents them before the Father: but in the proper and final sense, this can be said only of His faithful ones, His Church, who are incorporated in Him by the Spirit. Stier remarks on the necessary connexion of the true doctrines of creation and redemption : how utterly irreconcileable pantheism is with this, God's election before laying the foundation of the world, of His people in His Son), that we should be (infinitive of the purpose, see Winer, edn. 3, p. 267, § 45. 3. So Plut. Pericl., р. 173 [Mey.], Blos каваров к. анlartos. This holiness and unblameableness must not be understood of that justification by faith by which the sinner stands accepted before God : it is distinctly put forth here [see also ch. v. 27] as an ultimate result as regards us, and refers to that sanctification which follows on justification by faith, and which is the will of God respecting us, 1 Thess. iv. 7. See Stier's remarks against Harless, p. 71) before Him (i. e. in the deepest verity of our being-throughly penetrated by the Spirit of holiness, bearing His searching eye, ch. v. 27: but at the same time implying an especial nearness to His presence and dearness to Him-and bearing a foretaste of the time when the elect shall be $\epsilon \nu \omega \pi i \rho \nu$ τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ θεοῦ, Rev. vii. 15. Cf. Col. i. 22, note) in love. There is considerable dispute as to the position and reference of these words. Three different ways are taken. (1) Ecum., &c., join them with ¿ξελέξατο. I do not see, with most Commentators, the extreme improbability of the qualifying clause following the verb after so long an interval, when we take into account the studied solemnity of the passage, and remember that $\epsilon \nu \chi \rho i \sigma \tau \hat{\omega}$ in the last verse was separated nearly as far from its verb $\epsilon \partial \lambda a \gamma \hbar \sigma a s$. My objection to this view is of a deeper kind : see below. (2) The Syr., Chrys., Thdrt., Thl., Bengel, Lachm., Harless, Olsh., Mey., De W., Stier, Ellic., all., join them with $\pi \rho o$ oploas in the following verse. To this, in spite of all that has been so well said in its behalf, there is an objection which seems to me insuperable. It is, that in the whole construction of this long sentence, the verbs and participles, as natural in a solemn emphatic enumeration of God's dealings with His people, precede their qualifying clauses : e. g. εὐλογήσαs ver. 3, έξελέξατο ver. 4, έχαρίτωσεν ver. 6, έπερίσσευσεν ver. 8, γνωρίσας ver. 9, προέθετο ib., ανακεφαλαιώσασθαι ver. 10. In no one case, except the necessary one of a relative qualification ($\hat{\eta}$ s ver. 6, and again ver. 8), does the verb follow its qualifying clause : and for this reason, that the verbs themselves are emphatic, and not the conditions under which they subsist. "Blessed be God who DID all this, &c." He may have fore-ordained, and did fore-ordain, in love : and this is implied in what follows, from κατά τ. εὐδ. to ηγαπημένω: but the point brought out, as that for which we are to bless Him, is not that in love He fore-ordained us, but the fact of that fore-ordination itself: not His attribute, but His act. It is evidently no answer to this, to bring forward sentences elsewhere in which $\overline{\epsilon \nu}$ ἀγάπη stands first, such as ch. iii. 18, where the spirit of the passage is different. (3) The vulg., Ambrst., Erasm., Luth., Castal., Beza, Calvin, Grot., all., join them, as in the text, with elval àuúµous κατ. αὐτοῦ. This has been strongly impugned by the last-mentioned set of Commentators : mainly on the ground that the addition of $\epsilon \nu$ àyá $\pi \eta$ to ày. κ . àµώµ. Rat. abrow, is ungrammatical, - is flat and superfluous,-and that in neither ch. v. 27, nor Col. i. 22, have these adjectives any such qualification. But in answer, I would submit, that in the first place, as against the construction of ev ay. with ἀμώμ., the objection is quite futile, for our arrangement does not thus construct it, but adds it as a qualifying clause to the whole elvai . . . abrov. Next, I hold the qualification to be in the highest degree solemu and appropriate. $\dot{a}\gamma\dot{a}\pi\eta$, that which man lost at the Fall, but which God is, and to which God restores man by redemption, is the great element in which, as in their abode and breathingplace, all Christian graces subsist, and in which, emphatically, all perfection before God must be found. And so, when the Apostle, ch. iv. 16, is describing the glorious building up of the body, the Church, he speaks of its increasing eis οἰκοδομήν έαυτοῦ ἐν ἀγάπη. And it his practice, in this and the parallel Epistle, to add $\epsilon \nu \, d\gamma d\pi \eta$ as the completion of the idea of Christian holiness--ef. ch. iii. 18; Col. ii. 2, also ch. iv. 2; v. 2. With regard to the last objection,-in both the places cited, the adjectives are connected with the verb $\pi a \rho a \sigma \tau \hat{\eta} \sigma a i$, expressed therefore in the abstract as the ultimate result of sanctification in the sight of the Father, not, as here, referring to the state of sanctification, as consisting and subsisting in love. 5.] Having predestined us (subordinate to the elentetaro : see Rom. viii. 29, 30, where the steps are thus laid down in succession ; - οῦς προέγνω, καλ προώρισεν — οῦς προώρισεν, τούτους καὶ ἐκάλεσεν. Now the ἐκλογή must answer in this rank to the $\pi po \epsilon \gamma \nu \omega$, and precede the $\pi \rho o \omega \rho i \sigma \epsilon \nu$. Stier remarks well, " In God, indeed, all is one; but for our anthropomorphic way of speaking and treating, which is necessary to us, there follows on His first decree to adopt and to sanctify, the nearer decision, how and by what this shall be brought about, because it could only thus be brought about." προ,—as Pelagius [in Harless],—"ad eos refertur qui antea non fuerunt, et priusquam fierent, de his cogitatum est et postca substiterunt") unto adoption (so that we should become His sons, in the blessed sense of being reconciled to Him and having a place in His spiritual family,-should have the remission of our sins, the pledge of the Spirit, the assurance of the inheritance) through Jesus Christ (THE SON of God, in and by whom, elementally and instrumentally, our adoption consists, cf. Rom. viii. 29, προώρισεν συμμόρφους της είκόνος τ. υίοῦ αὐτοῦ, εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸν πρωτότοκον έν πολλοιs άδελφοιs) to Him (the Father : see Col. i. 20, δι' αὐτοῦ [Christ] ἀποκαταλλάξαι τὰ πάντα εἰς αὐτόν [the Father]. So Thdrt., all., Harl., Olsh., Meyer, Stier: and rightly, for the Son could not be in this sentence the terminus ultimus [the whole reference being to the work and purpose of the Father]; and had this been intended, as Harl. rcmarks, we must have had kal els abrov. De W., who, after Ansehn, Tho.-Aq., Castal., all., refers it to the Son, fails to answer this objection of Harl.'s. But now arise two questions : (1) the meaning.

Does it merely represent $\delta a \nu \tau \hat{\varphi}$, a dativus commodi? So Grot., al., but it cannot be, after the insertion of the special dià 'I. χ ., that the sentence should again return to the general purpose. It seems much better, to join it with δ_{ia} 'I. χ . as in Col. i. 20, above : and so Harl., but too indefinitely, taking it only as a phrase common with the Apostle and not giving its full import. As in Col. i. 20, the eis airdy, though thus intimately connected with $\delta i'$ advou, depends on $d\pi o \kappa a \tau a \lambda$ λάξαι, so here it must depend on vioθε- $\sigma(a\nu)$, and its import must be 'to [into] Himself,'-i. e. so that we should be partakers of the divine nature : cf. 2 Pet. i. (2) Should we read aὐτόν or aὐτόν? It will depend on whether we refer this clause, from $\delta_{i\dot{a}}$ to $\kappa a \tau \dot{a}$, to the Father as its subject, or consider it as a continuation of the Apostle's thanksgiving. And the latter is much the most likely; for had the former been the case, we should probably have had, instead of Sia 'Ing. Xpiστοῦ, διὰ τοῦ υίοῦ αὐτοῦ 'Ι. χρ., so that reference to the Father might still be kept up. I decide therefore for avtor, as Thdrt. certainly read, or his remark, 70 be els avτόν, τόν πατέρα λέγει, would have been needless. And so Erasm., Wetst., Lachin., Harl., Olsh., Meyer. Then advou in ver. 6 naturally takes it up again) according to (in pursuance of) the good pleasure (it is disputed whether eudokia has here merely this general meaning of beneplacitum, or that of benevolentia. Harl. [see also Ellicott] examines thoroughly the use of the word by the LXX, and decides in favour of the latter, alleging especially, that a mere assertion of doctrine would be out of place in an ascription of thanksgiving. But surely this is a most unfortunate position. The facts on which doctrines rost are here the very subjects of the Apostle's thanks giving : and the strict parallels of Matt. xi. 26, Luke x. 21, should have kept him from adducing it. Granting, as we must, both senses to evdoreiv and evolation, the context must in each case determine which is meant. And its testimony here is clear. It is, as De W. remarks, not in $\pi \rho o \omega \rho i \sigma \mu \epsilon \nu o i$, but in $\pi \rho o$ oploas, that the object, to which evdoxla refers, is to be sought : and the subsequent recurrences to the same idea in ver. 9 and ver. 11 point out that it is not the Father's benevolentia, but His beneplacitum, which is in the Apostle's mind. And so Meyer, De W., Stier, and Ellic. This beneplacitum WAS benevolentia, ver. 6; but that does not affect the question. See, besides Harl., a long note in Fritz. on Romans ii. p. 369) of His will, 6.] to (with a view to, as the purpose of the predestination) the praise (by men and angels-all that can praise) of the glory of His grace (beware of the miserable hendiadys, ' His glorious grace,' by which all the richness and depth of meaning are lost. The end, God's end, in our predestination to adoption, is, that the glory,-glorious nature, brightness and majesty, and kindliness and beauty,-of His grace might be an object of men and angels' praise : both as it is in HIM, ineffable and infinite,-and exemplified in us, its objects ; see below, ver. 12. "Owing to the defining genitive, the article (before $\delta \delta \xi \eta s$) is not indispensable : See Winer, edn. 6, § 10. 2, b: compare Madvig, Synt. § 10. 2." Ellie.) which (there is some difficulty in deciding between the readings, $\epsilon \nu \tilde{j}$, and $\tilde{\eta}s$. The former would be the most naturally substituted for an attraction found difficult : and the existence of \hat{p} , as a reading, seems to point this way. The latter, on the other hand, might perhaps be written by a transcriber carelessly, xápitos having just preceded. But I own this does not scem to me very probable. A relative following a substantive, is as often in a different case, as in the same : and there could be no temptation to a transcriber to write $\hat{\eta}_s$ here, which could hardly occur at all unless by attraction, a construction to which transcribers certainly were not prone. I therefore, with Lachin., Mey., Rück, al., adopt $\hat{\eta}s$. Considerations of the exigencies of the sense, alleged by Harl., al., do not come into play unless where external authorities are balanced [which is the ease here], and probabilities of alteration also [which is not]) He bestowed upon us (the meaning of xaritow is disputed. The double meaning of Xápis, -favour, grace bestowed, and that which ensures favour, viz. grace inherent, beauty. -has been supposed to give a double meaning to the verb also,-to confer grace, and to render gracious, or beautiful, or acceptable. And this latter sense is adopted, here and in Luke i. 28 [where see note], by many,-e. g. by Chrys., τουτέστιν, ου μόνον άμαρτημάτων ἀπήλλαξεν, ἀλλὰ καί έπεράστους έποίησε,-Erasm., Luth., all. But the meaning of Xápis, on which this is founded, does not seem to occur in the N. T., certainly not in St. Paul. And χαριτόω, both here and in 1. c., according to the analogy of such verbs, will be ' to bestow grace.' Another reason for this sense is the indefinite aorist, referring to an act of God once past in Christ, not to an abiding state which He has brought about in us. This, as usual, has been almost universally overlooked, and the perfect sense given. Another still is, the requirement of the context. Harl. well remarks, that, according to the sense 'bestowed grace,' ver. 7 is the natural answer to the question, 'How hath He bestowed grace?' whereas, on the other rendering, it has only a mediate connexion with this verse. Stier would unite both meanings; but surely this is impossible. The becoming xapievtes may be a consequence of being κεχαριτωμένοι, but must be quite independent of its verbal meaning. Conyb. remarks that it may be literally rendered ' His favour, wherewith He favoured us :' but 'favour' would not reach deep enough for the sense) in (see above on $\epsilon \nu \chi \rho \iota \sigma \tau \hat{\varphi}$, ver. 3. It is a noteworthy observation of Harless here, that the choice of the word, the BLOOD of Christ, is of itself a testimony to the idea of expiation having been in the writer's mind. Not the death of the victim, but its BLOOD, was the typical instrument of expiation. And I may notice that in Phil. ii. 8, where Christ's obedience, not His atonement, is spoken of, there is no inention of His shedding His Blood, only of the act of His Death), the remission (not "overlooking" [πάρεσιν]; see note on Rom. iii. 25) of (our) transgressions (explanation of τ . $\dot{a}\pi o\lambda \dot{v}\tau \rho \omega \sigma i\nu$: not to be limited, but extending to all riddance from the practice and consequences of our transgressions : at least equipollent with anoλύτρωσις :- so Thdrt., δι' εκείνου γάρ τάς τών άμαρτημάτων ἀποθέμενοι κηλίδας, κ. της του τυράννου δουλείας απαλλαγέντες, τούς της εικόνος της θείας απελάβομεν χαρακτήρας. This against Harless), according to the riches (Ellic. compares Plato, Euthyphr. 12 A, τρυφάς ύπο πλούτου της σοφίας) of His grace (this alone would prevent apers applying to merely the forgiveness of sins. As Passavant [in Stier], "We have in this grace not only redemption from misery and wrath, not only forgiveness,-but we find in it the liberty, the glory, the inheritance of the children of God,-the crown of eternal life : cf. 2 Cor. viii. 9 "), 8.] which he shed abundantly ('caused to abound :'

άφθόνωs έξέχεε, Thl. : Thdrt. has the same idea, αναβλύζει γαρ τας τοῦ ελέους πηγάς. κ. τούτοις ήμας περικλύζει τοις βεύμασιν. The E. V. is wrong, 'wherein He hath abounded :' no such construction of attraction of a dative being found in the N. T. Calvin and Beza would take hs not as an attraction, but us the genitive after enepio. as in Luke xv. 17, ' of which He was full, &c.' But this does not agree well with the $\gamma \nu \omega \rho l \sigma as$, &c. below. As little can the 'quæ superabundavit' of the Vulg. [and Syr.] stand: the attraction of the nominative being scarcely possible, and this being still more inconsistent with yrwploas) forth to us in all (possible) wisdom and prudence (with E. V., De Wette, &c., I would refer these words to God. On the other hand, Harless [with whom are Olsh., Stier, Ellic., al.] maintains, that neither ndon nor powhoel will allow this. " $\pi \hat{a}s$," he says, "never = summus,-never betokens the intension, but only the extension, never the power, but the frequency,-and answers to our 'every,' i. e. all possible ;- so that, when joined to abstracts, it presents them to us as concrete: πασα δύναμις, 'every power that we know of,' 'that exists ;'-πασα ύπομονή, every kind of endurance that we know of ;- maga edocksia, &c. Now it is allowable enough, to put together all excellences of one species, and allege them as the motive of a human act, hecause we can conceive of men as wanting in any or all of them : but not so with God, of whom the Apostle, and all of us. conceive as the Essence of all perfection. We may say of God, 'in Him is all wisdom,' but not, ' He did this or that in all wisdom.'' "Again," he continues, " $\phi p \phi - \nu \eta \sigma_{15}$ cannot be ascribed to God." And this he maintains,---not by adopting the view of Wolf, al., that it is practical knowledge, which suits neither the context nor usage,-nor that of Anselm, Bengel, al., that oop. is 'de præsentibus,' ppov. 'de futuris,'-but by understanding $\sigma o \phi a$ of the normal collective state of the spirit, with reference especially to the intelligence, which last is expressed according to its various sides, by the words so often found conjoined with σοφία,-σύνεσις, φρόνησις, γνωσις. So that φρόνησις, as a one-sided result of σοφία, cannot be predicated of God, but only of men. According to this then, έν πάσ. σ. κ. φρ. must refer to that in the bestowal of which on us He hath made His grace to abound, so that we should thereby become σοφοί κ. φρόνιμοι :- as Olsh., Ίνα έν πάση σοφία κ. φρονήσει περιπατῶμεν. Chrys. joins the words with yrwpisas, understanding them, however, of us, not of God : έν π. σοφ. κ. φρ., φησί, γνωρίσας ήμ. τό μ. τ. θ. αύτ. τουτέστι, σοφούς κ. φρονίμους ποιήσας την όντως σοφίαν, την όντως φρόνησιν. But see, on such arrangement, the note on $\ell \nu$ $d\gamma d\pi \eta$ ver. 4.

Stier quotes from Passavant : " In the living knowledge of the thoughts and ways of God we first get a sure and clear light upon ourselves and our ways, a light cast from above upon the import and aim of this our earthly life in the sight of God and His eternity. Here is the true wisdom of the heart, the true prudence of life." But against this view, De W. alleges, (1) that poornois can be as well predicated of God as yvwors, Rom. xi. 33, and is actually thus predicated, Prov. iii. 19; Jer. x. 12 LXX, of His creative wisdom, which is analogous to His redemptive wisdom. (2) that God's absolute wisdom is not here treated of, but His relative wisdom, as apparent in the use of means subservient to its end: so that $\epsilon \nu \pi \alpha \sigma \eta$ would mean 'in all wisdom thereto belonging,' as Jer.: 'Deus in omni sapientia sua atque prudentia, juxta quod eonsequi poterant, invsterium revelavit.' And he compares ή πολυποίκιλος σοφία τ. θ. ch. iii. 10.

These last arguments are weighty, as shewing the legitimacy of the application to God: but even beyond them is that which construction and usage furnish. It would be hardly possible, did no other consideration intervene, to refer this $\epsilon \nu \pi$. σ . κ . $\phi \rho$. to other than the subject of the sentence,—cf. $\hat{\eta}s \hat{\epsilon}\chi a\rho$. $\hat{\eta}\mu\hat{a}s \hat{\epsilon}\nu \tau\hat{\rho} \hat{\eta}\gamma a\pi$. above. I therefore decide [still; after reconsideration of Ellicott's note] for the application to God, not to us. It was in

His manifold wisdom and prudence, manifested in all ways possible for us, that He poured out His grace upon us: and this wisdom and prudence was especially exemplified in that which follows, the notification to us of His hidden will, &c. In Col. i. 9, the reference is clearly different : see note there), having made known (yvwpi- $\sigma \alpha s$ is explicative of $\epsilon \pi \epsilon \rho (\sigma \sigma \epsilon \nu \sigma \epsilon \nu$, just as προορίσαs is of έξελέξατο above:—' in that He made known.' This 'making known' is not merely the information of the understanding, but the revolation, in its fulness, to the heart) to us (not, the Apostles, but Christians in general, as throughout the passage) the mystery (reff. and Rom. xvi. 25. So that his use of $\mu\nu\sigma\tau\eta\rho$. has nothing in common, except the facts of concealment and revelation, with the mysteries of the heathen world, nor with any secret tradition over and above the gospel as revealed in the Scriptures. All who vitally know that, i.e. all the Christian church are the initiated : and all who have the word, read or preached, may vitally know it. intermediate idea supervening, as in κατà την εύδοκίαν αὐτοῦ. Had this been κατὰ τ. πρόθεσιν αὐτοῦ, the reference would have been legitimate. But when, as here, no such idea intervenes, $-\eta \nu \pi \rho o \epsilon \theta \epsilon \tau o$ $\vec{\epsilon}\nu \quad \alpha \dot{\nu} \tau \hat{\varphi}$ —the subject is directly before the mind, and $\alpha \dot{\nu} \tau \delta s$, not being reflective but demonstrative, must point to some other person : who in this case can only be Christ. Our only resource then is to read $a\dot{v}\tau\hat{\varphi}$) in order to (belongs to $\pi\rho o\dot{\epsilon}\theta\epsilon\tau o$, not to $\gamma \nu \omega \rho l \sigma \alpha s$. Very many ancient Commentators and the Vulg. and E. V., take ϵis wrongly as $\equiv \epsilon \nu$, by which the whole sense is confused. Hardly less confusing is the rendering of Erasm., Calv., Est., al., usque ad tempus dispensationis, thereby introducing into $\pi \rho o \epsilon \theta \epsilon \tau o$ the complex idea of decreed and laid up, instead of the simple one which the context requires) the aconomy of the fulfilment of the seasons (after long and careful search, I am unable to find a word which will express the full meaning of oikovoµía. The difficulty of doing so will be better seen below, after $\tau \partial \pi \lambda \eta \rho$. $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ kaip. has been dealt with. This expression is by no means = $\tau \partial \pi \lambda$. $\tau o \hat{\nu} \chi \rho \delta \nu o \nu$ in Gal. iv. 4, nor to be equalized with it, as Harl. attempts to do, by saying that many kalpol make up a xpovos. So that our best rendering will be, cconomy, leaving the word to be explained in teaching. The genitive kaipŵr is one of belonging or appurtenance as in κρίσις μεγάλης ήμέρας, Jude 6), to sum up (the infinitive belongs to and specifies $\epsilon v \delta o \kappa (a \nu; -h \nu \dots \kappa a)$ $\rho \hat{\omega} \nu$ having been logically parenthetical, and explains what that evoor a was. The verb, here as in the only other place in the N. T. where it occurs [ref.], signifies to comprehend, gather together, sum up. As there the whole law is comprehended in one saying, so here all creation is comprehended, summed up, in Christ. But it can hardly be supposed that the *ava*κεφαλαιώσασθαι has express reference here to Him as the $\kappa \in \phi a \lambda \eta$: for 1) this is not predicated of Him till below, ver. 22 ;-2) the verb is from $\kappa \in \phi \neq \lambda a \circ \nu$, not from $\kappa\epsilon\phi a\lambda \eta$; so that such reference would be only a play on the word :-3) the compound verb, as here, is used in Rom. l. c. in the simple ordinary sense. The åvaapplies to the gathering of all individuals, not to any restoration [Syr., vulg., Olsh. (Ellic. in part), al.], in which τà έπὶ τοῖs ovpavois would have no share. See more below : and cf. the ||, Col. i. 19, 20, and note there) all things (neuter, and to be literally so taken : not as a masculine, which, when a neuter is so understood, must be implied in the context, as in Gal. iii. 22 :- the whole creation, see Col. i. 20) in the Christ (q. d., His Christ. The article is not expressed with $\chi \rho_{1}\sigma \tau \delta s$ after a preposition, unless with some such special meaning: see below ver. 12), the things in (lit. on; see below) the heavens (universal-not to be limited to the angels [Chrys., &c.], nor spirits of the just [Beza, al.], still less to be understood of the Jews, $\tau \dot{a} \in \pi i \tau$. $\gamma \eta s$ being the Gentiles [Locke, &c.]. Chrys.'s words are so far true, μίαν κεφαλήν απασιν επέθηκε τὸ κατὰ σάρκα χριστόν, κ. ἀγγέλοις κ. άνθρώποις τοις μέν το κατά σάρκα, τοιs δε τον θεόν λόγον-but the Apostle's meaning extends much further. The ree. $iv \tau$. oup. seems to have been adopted from Col. i. 20. There also επί is read, but by L and a few mss. only, and evidently from our passage. The construction is a common one : cf. $\epsilon \pi \lambda \chi \theta o \nu i$ Il. γ . 195, ϵπὶ πύλησι, ib. 149. It is strange to find in Ellicott a defence of the rec. ϵv , grounded on the fact that " $\epsilon \pi i$ is never joined in the N. T. with obpavos or obpavol, and that ϵv obpave and $\epsilon \pi i \gamma \eta s$ are invariably found in antithesis." Such an argument would sweep away all $a\pi a\xi$ λεγόμενα of construction, and break down the significance of all exceptional usage) and the things on the earth (general, as before $\tau \dot{a} \pi \dot{a} \nu \tau a$. All creation is summed up in Christ : it was all the result of the Love of the Father for the Son [see my Doctrine of Divine Love, Serm. i.], and in the Son it is all regarded by the Father. The vastly different relation to Christ of the different parts of creation, is no objection to this union in Him : it affects, as Beng. on Rom. viii. 19, " pro suo quodque genus captu." The Church, of which the Apostle here mainly treats, is subordinated to Him in the highest degree of conscious and joyful union: those who are not His spiritually, in mere subjugation, yet consciously; the inferior tribes of creation, nnconsciously: but objectively, all are summed up in Him); 11.] in Him (emphatic repetition, to connect more closely with Him the following relative clause), in whom we (Christians, all, both Jews and Gentiles ; who are resolved below into $\eta \mu \epsilon \hat{\epsilon} \hat{s}$ and $\dot{\nu} \mu \epsilon \hat{\epsilon} \hat{s}$: see on ver. 12) were also (besides having, by His purpose, the revelation of His will, ver. 9.

Not 'we also,' kai $\eta \mu \epsilon \tilde{i}_{k}$, as vulg. "in quo etiam nos . . .," nor as E. V. 'in whom also') taken for His inheritance $(\kappa \lambda \eta \rho \delta \omega, in its ordinary meaning, 'to ap$ point by lot,'—then 'to appoint' generally: $<math>\kappa \lambda \eta \rho \delta \mu \delta \mu \delta \mu$, 'to get, or possess any thing by such appointment.' The aorist passive, if ever taken in a middle sense, cannot be thus understood here, on account of eis $\tau \delta$ elvas following. Confining ourselves therefore to the strict passive sense, we have three meanings apparently open to us: (1) 'we were appointed by lot.' So Chrys., Thl., vulg. [sorte vocati sumus], Erasm. [sorte electi sumus]. Chrys. supposes this apparently fortuitous choice to be corrected by $\pi poop$. $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. following : 'we were allotted, yet not by chance :' others justify it, as Estius, 'quia in ipsis electis nulla est causa cur eligantur præ aliis.' But to this Meyer properly opposes the fact, that we are never by St. Paul said to be chosen by any such $\theta \epsilon i \alpha \tau i \chi \eta$, but only by the gracious purpose of God : cf. Plato, Legg. vi. p. 759 C: κληροῦν οὕτω τῆ θεία τύχη anolisovra. (2) 'we were made par-takers of the inheritance,' i. c. of the Kingdom of God, as Israel of Canaan,— Acts xxvi. 18 : Col. i. 12. This is adopted by Harl., and Mey., and many others. But it seems without authority from usage: the instance which Mey. quotes from Pind., Ol. viii. 19, KAnpour Tivi, not bearing this rendering. And besides, the context is against it : ἐκληρώθημεν being followed, as Stier observes, not by eis rd έχειν ήμ., but by eis το είναι ήμ., and thus pointing at something which 'we' are to become, not to possess. Another reason, see below. (3) ⁴ we were made an (God's) inheritance.³ This (Grot., Beng., Olsh., De W., Stier, Ellic., al.) seems to me the only rendering by which philology and the context are alike satisfied. We thus take the ordinary meaning of $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho \delta \omega$, to assign as a κλήρος: and the prevalent idea of Israel in the O. T. is as a people whom the Lord chose for His inheritance; cf. Deut. iv. 20, ύμας έλαβεν ό θεός . . . είναι αὐτῷ λαόν ἔγκληρον: ib. ix. 29; xxxii. 9; 3 Kings viii. 51, al. Flatt cites from Philo (qu. ref. ?), ώ προςκεκλήρωνται, διότι τοῦ σύμπαντος ἀνθρώπων γένους ἀπενεμήθη οία τις ἀπαρχή τῷ ποιητή κ. $\pi a \tau \rho i$. Olsh. calls this ' the realization in time of the $\epsilon \kappa \lambda \sigma \gamma \eta$ $\epsilon \nu \chi \rho \sigma \tau \tilde{\varphi}$ spoken of before, viz. by God taking to Himself a people out of all nations for an inheritance --first in type and germ in the O. T., then fully and spiritually in the N. T. This interpretation will be further substantiated by the note on ver. 12 below), having been predestined (why mention this again? Harl, maintains that it here applies to the Jews only, and refers to their selection [according to him to possess the inheritance] by God : but this cannot be, because as remarked above, $\eta\mu$ as, which first brings up the difference, does not occur yet. The true answer to the question lies in this,-that here first the Apostle comes to the idea of the universal Church, the wbolc Israel of God, and therefore here brings forward again that fore-ordination which he had indeed hinted at generally in ver. 5, but which properly belonged to Israel, and is accordingly predicated of the Israel of the Church) according to (in pursuance of) the purpose (repeated again [see above] from ver. 9: cf. also ch. iii. 11) of Him who works (energizes; but especially in and among material previously given, as here, in His material creation, and in the spirits of all flesh, also His creation) all things (not to be restricted, as Grot., to the matter here in hand, but universally predicated) according to the counsel of His will (the Bount here answers to the eddoria ver. 5, --- the definite shape which the will assumes when decided to action-implying in this case the uniou of sovereign will with infinite wisdom), 12. in order that we (here first expressed, as distinguished from busis, ver. 13: see below) should be to the praise of His glory (see on ver. 6 and ver. 14 below), namely, we who have before hoped in the Christ (we Jewish-Christians, who, before the Christ came, looked forward to His coming, waiting for the consolation of Israel : cf. especially Acts xxviii. 20, ένεκεν γαρ της έλπίδος τοῦ Ἰσραήλ την άλυσιν ταύτην περίκειμαι-and xxvi. 6, 7. The objection, that so few thus looked, is fully met by the largeness of St. Paul's own expression in this last passage. But this whole interpretation requires de-First, the verse is variously punctuated. Harl, and Olsh. even more decidedly, read it els τδ είραι μμῶς cit. fending against opponents. είναι ημῶς, εἰς ἔπαινον δόξ. αὐ., τοὺς προηλπ. ἐν τ. χρ. But to this it may be objected, (1) that εἰς ἔπ. δόξης αὐ., oc-curring as it does again at the end of the whole passage as the final aim of all, cannot with any probability be here merely parenthetical: (2) that above, ver. 6, and below, ver. 14, it, as well as the predestination, has reference to the fulness of the Gospel, not to incomplete prefatory hope in Christ [this would be no objection to De W.'s view : see below] : (3) that thus we should require some demonstrative expression preceding, to mark out these hµas, such as έν φ καί έκληρώθημεν ήμεις οί προορισθέντες. The objections which Harl. brings against the ordinary construction are implicitly answered in this exposition. They rest mainly on the mistake of referring έκληρώθ. προορισθέντες to the Jewish Christians : see above. De W. denies all reference to Jews and Gentiles,-(1) from the analogy of words compounded with προ- [προ-ακούειν Col. i. 5, προλέγειν Gal. v. 21; 1 Thess. iii. 4, προγράφειν Rom. xv. 4, προεπαγγέλλεσθαι Rom. i. 2], which he says indicate always priority as to the thing spoken of [in his idea here merely, 'hope previous to the fulfilment of that hope,' i. e. npo- has no meaning, for all hope must be this], not in comparison with other persons : but (a) this is not true—ef. προελθόντες Acts xx. 13, προέχεσθαι, προηγείσθαι, προτιθέναι, προάγειν, προπορεύεσθαι,—and (b) if it were, it does not touch our interpretation-hoped before [Christ's coming] :-- (2) from ver. 13 saying nothing peculiar to Gentile Christians [hut see there]: (3) from kal vµas, in ch. ii. 1, and Col. i. 21, not meaning Gentile Christians, but being merely addressed to the readers generally. But in both these places it is so, mercly because other things or persons have just been treated of: whereas here he would understand this $\eta \mu \hat{a}_s$ as including the $\delta \mu \epsilon \hat{c}_s$, thus depriving it of the force which it has there).

13.] What is the construction ? Have we but one sentence, $\partial \nu \phi \ldots \partial \sigma \phi \rho a \gamma (a \theta \eta \tau \epsilon, the two participial clauses being parallel, and both belonging to the verb ? so the f., Beng., De W., Ellic., [by whon the view is well defended and explained,] &c. But this seems to me inpossible, from the arrangement. It would require the onission of the second <math>\partial \nu \phi$, or the placing of the kal $\partial \mu \epsilon \hat{s}$ after $\dot{a} \kappa o \dot{\sigma} \sigma a \tau \epsilon s$ the sentence now stands, the second $\partial \nu \phi \kappa a f$ must begin a new sentence, and surely cannot be the mere rhetorical repetition of the first. Nothing can be more usual or inore simple than to supply eore: nothing commoner than ev xpiot & elvai : nothing better suited to the context than, after putting forward the Jewish believers, to turn to the Gentiles, 'Ye also have your part in Christ-our prominence does not cxclude you.' Some supply ηλπίκατε (Erasm.-ver., Calv., Est., al.), some έκληρώθητε (Erasm.-par., Harl., Olsh., al.); but the other is far simpler; and I cannot see how it deserves the charge which Ellicott brings against it, of being "a statement singularly frigid and out of harmony with the linked and ever-rising character of the context." It is quite accounted for as above, as forming a link in the context, whose character is well thus described. In whom are ye also (ye Gentile believers) since ye heard (from the time when . . . See Ellie.'s note. The figure of sealing is so simple and obvious, that it is perhaps mere antiquarian pedantry, with Schöttgen, Grot., and Wetst., to seek for an explanation of it in Gentile practices of branding with the names of their deities, or even in circumcision itself. The scaling was objective, making manifest to others STE «Ιναι δήλον, ὅτι θεοῦ ἐστε λάχος κ. κλήρος, Thl. ; so Chr., al.] : see John iii. 33 ; Rev. vii. 3,-but also subjective, an approval and substantiation of their faith $[\tau \eta \nu]$ βεβαίωσιν έδέξασθε, Theod. readers, from their familiarity with O. T. expressions, or with the Apostle's own use of it. This view is taken by the Syr., (Ec., Erasm., Calv., Grot., and most Com-mentators, also by De Wette, Harless, Olsh., Meyer, Stier, Ellic. Stier endcavours, as so often, to unite the meanings regarding God, and ourselves,-for that we in being God's possession, reserved for survivorship to others, do, in the root of the word, thus survive, are thus saved: and undoubtedly this is so, but is not the leading idea) for the praise of His glory (as before, ver. 6: but as Stier well remarks, xápiros does not appear here, grace having done its work. autou is the Father: cf. ver. 17, $\delta \pi a \tau \eta \rho \tau \eta s \delta \delta \xi \eta s$. This, the thorough and final redemption of the Church which He hath acquired to Himself, is the greatest triumph of His glory : as Grot. well says, 'Plus aliquanto est in voce περιποιήσεως quam in voce κλήρου quam antea habuimus. κλήρος, sors, jus proprium perpetuumque significat : $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota$ - $\pi o i \eta \sigma i s$, acquisitio, et hoc, et modum acquirendi gravem et laboriosum. Solemus autem plurimi ea facere quæ magno nobis constant'). See the typico-historical connexion of this wonderful passage with the patriarchal, legal, and prophetie periods, unfolded in Stier, i. pp. 129-136. I would not be understood to subscribe to all there advanced : but though his parallelism sometimes borders on the fanciful, the connexion is too striking to be altogether set aside by the real student of Scripture.

(B) vv. 15-23.] The IDEA OF THE CHURCH carried forward, in the form of a prayer for the Ephesians, in which the fulfilment of the Father's counsel through the Son and by the Spirit, in His people, is set forth, as consisting in the KNOW-VOL. The appellation is here solemnly and most appropriately given, as leading on to what is about to be said in vv. 20 ff. of God's exaltation of Christ to be Head over all things to His Church. To His God, Christ also in the days of His Flesh prayed, $\pi \dot{a} \tau \epsilon \rho$, $\delta \dot{\delta} \xi a \sigma \delta \nu$ $\sigma o \nu$ $\tau \partial \nu$ $\nu i \delta \nu$: and even more markedly in that last cry, $\theta \epsilon \epsilon \mu o v$, $\theta \epsilon \epsilon \mu o v$), the Father of glory (not merely the auctor, fons, of glory, Grot., Olsh.: still less = $\pi \alpha \tau \eta \rho$ Evoofus : nor with Chrys. to be explained ό μεγάλα ήμιν δεδωκώς ἀγαθά ἀπὸ γὰρ τών ύποκειμένων άει αύτον καλεί, ώς, δταν λέγη ό πατήρ των οἰκτιρμών: nor is $\delta\delta\xi\eta s$ to be understood of the divine nature of Christ, as Thdrt.: Bedv µev ws άνθρώπου, πατέρα δὲ ὡς θεοῦ, δόξαν γὰρ την θείαν φύσιν ώνόμασεν : for this would require 7. Sogns autov: but God is the Father,-by being the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,-of that glory, the true and all-including glory, and only glory, of the Godhead, which shone forth in the manhood of the only-begotten Son [John i. 14],-the true Shechinah, which His saints beheld in the face of Christ, 2 Cor. iv. 4, 6, and into which they are changed by the Lord the Spirit, ib. iii. 18. In fact, 2 Cor. iii. 7-iv. 6, is the key to this sublime expression), would give (the account of the optative after iva, when a present $[\pi a i o \mu a i]$ has preceded, is very simple. It is used when the purpose is not that of the writer as he is writing, but is described as that of himself or some one else at another time. Thus Herod. ii. 93, καταπλώουσι ές ξάλασσαν, κ. ἀναπλώ-οντες όπίσω της αύτης άντέχοντοι, ΐνα δη μη άμάρτοιεν της όδου διà τdv pdov. See Klotz, Devar. p. 622) to you the Spirit (certainly it would not be right to take $\pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu a$ here as solely the Holy Spirit, nor as solely the spirit of man: rather is it the complex idea, of the spirit of man indwelt by the Spirit of God, so that as such, it is His special gift, see below) of wisdom (not, which gives wisdom, but which possesses it as its character—q. d. to which appertains wisdom) and of revelation (i. c. that revelation which belongs to all Christians : see 1 Cor. ii. 10 ff.: not the χαρίσματα of the early Church, as Olsh.,-nor could the Apostle be alluding to any thing so trivial and fleeting, see 1 Cor. xiii. xiv. To those who are taught of God's Spirit, ever more and more of His glories in Christ are revealed, see John xvi. 14, 15) in (belongs to $\delta \phi \eta$: as the element and sphere of the working of this gift of the Spirit) the full knowledge (for the distinction between yragis and enivrous, see 1 Cor. xiii. 12) of Him (Chr., Thl., Olsh., al., strangely connect ev έπιγνώσει αὐτοῦ with the following sentence, $\pi\epsilon\phi\omega\tau\iota\sigma\mu$. $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. The whole parallelism is against this, in which $\pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu$. σοφ. κ. άποκ. is || πε¢ωτ. τ. ὀφθ. τ. κ. ὑμ. and έν έπιγνώσ. αύτοῦ is || eis το eiδέναι $\kappa.\tau.\lambda.$;—and the object being to exalt the gifts of the Spirit, $\epsilon \nu \epsilon \pi$. adv. would hardly come first in the sentence, and thus monopolize the emphasis. See also on a similar proposal, ver. 4, end. αύτοῦ [not abrou] refers to the Father, - not to Christ, as Beza, Calv., al.; cf. autou four times in vv. 18, 19: Christ first becomes thus designated in ver. 20), having the eyes of your heart enlightened (the construction is as in Soph. Stier, all., take $\pi\epsilon\phi$. τ . $\partial\phi\theta$. together, and govern it by $\delta \phi \eta$, to which the article before $\partial \phi \theta$. is no objection [as Beng.], but the logic of the passage is. The enlightening as regards [or of] the eyes of the heart, is a condition, subordinate to the πνεῦμα σοφ. κ. ἀποκ., not another gift, correlative with it. Besides which, the sentence, even after all the grammatical vindications of Harl., al., -δώη ύμιν.... πεφωτισμένους τούς όφθ. της καρδίας $i\mu\hat{\omega}\nu$, is clumsy and unpauline in the last degree. On $\pi\epsilon\phi\omega\tau_1\sigma\mu$., cf. Matt. iv. 16: ch. iii. 9 [v. 14]: Harl. gives an elaborate analysis, as usual, of the meaning, and remarks well that $\varphi \omega \tau i \zeta \omega$ has the double meaning of 'belehren und beleben '- ' enlightening and enlivening.' He cites from Greg. Naz. : φώς ώς λαμπρότης ψυχών κ. λόγψ κ. βίψ καθαιρομένων. εἰ γὰρ σκότος ή άγνοια κ. ή άμαρτία, φως αν είη ή γνω-σις κ. δ βίος δ ένθεος. The expression τ. όφ. της καρδίας is somewhat unusual. The kaobla of Scripture is, as Harl., the Mittelpuntt des Lebens, the very core and centre of life, where the intelligence has its post of observation, where the stores of experience are laid up, and the thoughts have their fountain. Similarly the Homerie κραδίη, see Dainm. Lex.: the Latin 'cor' -cf. Cie. Tusc. i. 9,-'aliis cor ipsum animus videtur, ex quo excordes, vecordes, concordesque dicuntur.' Thus the ἀφθ. $\tau \hat{\eta}s \kappa \alpha p \delta(\alpha s would be those pointed at in$ Matt. vi. 22, 23,-that inner eye of the heart, through which light is poured in on its own purposes and motives, and it looks out on, and perceives, and judges things spiritual: the eye, as in nature, being both receptive and contemplative of the light), that you may know (purpose of the $\pi\epsilon$ φωτισμ., not of the πνεῦμ. σοφ. κ. ἀποκ. This which is now to be described, to the end of the chapter, is involved in the $\pi \nu$. $\sigma o \phi$. κ . $d \pi o \kappa$., not its object : but it is the object of the enlightening, which will endue us with the knowledge) what (the dispute among the Commentators, whether τ is implies quality or quantity, seems hardly worth entering into. The fulness of the simple meaning, 'what,' embraces all categories under which the things mentioned can be contemplated. In the passage to which both sides appeal, ch. iii. 18, 71 7d πλάτος κ.τ.λ. of course implies, ' how great is the breadth, &c. :' but it implies this by the simple meaning 'what is the breadth, &c.,' not by making $\tau i =$ quantum, quantity being already involved in the substantivcs) is the hope (again, it is mere trifling to enquire whether $\epsilon \lambda \pi is$ is the hope [subjective] or the thing hoped for [objective], in this case. For the τ is involves in itself both these. If I know WHAT the hope is, I know both its essence and its accidents. Undoubtedly such an objective sense of $\epsilon \lambda \pi is$ does occur, - see on Col. i. 5; but certainly the meaning here is far wider than in that passage. As well might the subjective sense of Col. i. 23, be alleged on that side) of (belonging to, see on ch. iv. 4) His calling (i. e. the calling wherewith He called us. All the matters mentioned, κλήσις, κληρονομία, δύναμις, are aυτοῦ, His,-but not all in the same sense: see below. On $\kappa \lambda \bar{\eta} \sigma \iota s$, see notes, Rom. viii. 28-30), what the riches of the glory of His inheritance ("what a rich, sublime cumulation, setting forth in like terms the weightiness of the matters described ;-and not to be weakened [verwäßert] by any resolution of the genitives into adjectives." Mey. See Col. i. 27) in (in the case of, as exemplified in; not so weak as 'among,'-nor merely 'in,' so as to refer to its subjective realization in them) the saints (much dispute has arisen on the construction of ev T. ày. Koppe and Winer [Gram. § 19.2. L, edn. 3: not appy in edn. 6], with whom Meyer and De Wette agree, connect it with $\epsilon \sigma \tau / \nu$ understood, so as to mean. ' what the richness of, &c. is among the saints.' To mention no other objection to this awkward construction, the context and sense are decisive against it. As Stier well says, 'Paul does not pray for their eyes to be enlightened, to see what great and rich things are already among Christians.' No: nor is it easy to conceive how any intelligent reader of the Epistle could ever maintain such a rendering. The other construction is, to take $\epsilon \nu \tau$. $\dot{a}\gamma$. as belonging either to πλοῦτος, or to δόξης, or to κληρονομίαs, as if it had been δ (or $\tau \hat{\eta} s$) έν Tois ay. And this is the only one allowed by the context : cf. vv. 19, 20, where eis ήμας, iν χριστώ, form objects of reference precisely similar. Again there is manifestly a distinction between of ayior here, and $\eta \mu \epsilon i s$ of $\pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon v \delta v \tau \epsilon s$ in the next verse: the former being the perfected, the latter the militant saints. And this deeides for the joining έν τ. άγ. to κληρονομlas autou, - ' His inheritance in, whose example and fulness, and embodying is in the saints.' The objection to this is supposed to be the want of the article before ¿v, which is urged by Meyer [see also Ellicott's note here], because avrou has intervened, thereby preventing κληρ. έν τ. άγ. being considered as one idea. But surely this is not so. If, before abrow was inserted, ή κληρ. έν τ. άγίοιs was sufficiently one to prevent the necessity of a specification of the genus κληρονομία that it was the $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho$, which was $\epsilon \nu \tau$. $\dot{a} \gamma$. [for such is the force of the inserted article], how can this logical fact be altered by the insertion of Him, whose κληρ. it is,-who originated and bestowed it,-and who is therefore necessarily prior to the $\kappa\lambda\eta\rho\sigma$ vouía, not intervening between it and its example ? I therefore join it to $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho$., and so Rück., Harless, Olsh., Stier, al. This latter, as usual, combines the senses of κληρ. avτov, including the inheritance which God has in His people, and that which they have in Him. His whole note is well worth attentiou), 19.] and what the surpassing (a word only pauline in N. (as yrwpioas above, ver. 9) Him from the dead (the resurrection of Christ was not a mere bodily act, an earnest of our bodily resurrection, but was a spiritual act, the raising of His humanity [which is ours], consisting of body and soul, from infirmity to glory, from the curse to the final triumph. In that He died, HE DIED UNTO SIN once; but in that He liveth, HE LIVETH UNTO GOD. And so $\eta\mu\epsilon$ is of $\pi\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon$ vouces, knit to Him, have died unto sin and live unto God. It is necessary to the understanding of the following, thoroughly to appreciate this -or we shall be in danger of regarding, with the shallower expositors, Christ's resurrection as merely a pledge of our bodily resurrection, or as a mere figure representing our spiritual resurrection,-not as involving the resurrection of the Church in both senses); and setting Him at His right hand (see especially Mark xvi. 19) in the heavenly places (see on ver. 3 : and Matt. vi. 9, note. But the fact of the universal idea, of God's dwelling heing in heaven, being only a symbolism common to all men, must not for a moment induce us to let go the verity of Christ's bodily existence, or to explain away the glories of His resurrection into mere spiritualities. As Stephen saw Him, so He veritably is : in human form, locally existent) over above (not, as in my former editions, 'far above.' Ellicott says, "The intensive force which Chrys. and Thl. find in this word, Ίνα τὸ ἀκρότατον ὕψος δηλώση, and which has recently been adopted by Stier and Eadie, is very doubtful: as is also the assertion [Eadie] that this prevails in the majority of passages in the LXX: ef. Ezek. i. 26; viii. 2; x. 19; xi. 22; xliii. 15; and even Deut. xxvi. 19; xxviii. 1. Such distinct instances as Ezek. xliii. 15, and in the N. T., Heb. ix. 5, the similarly unemphatic use of the antitheton ύποκάτω, John i. 51, Luke viii. 16, and the tendencies of Alexandrian and later Greek to form duplicated compounds, make it highly probable that $i\pi\epsilon\rho d\nu\omega$, both here and ch. iv. 10, implies little more than simple local elevation. So too Syr. and apparently all the ancient versions") all government (cf. Matt. xxviii, 18) and power and might and lordship (see similar combinations in reff. The most reasonable account of the four words seems to be this: $i\pi$. $\pi \dot{a}\sigma$. $\dot{a}\rho\chi\eta$ s gives the highest aud fullest expression of exaltation : κ. έξουσίαs is added as filling out $d\rho\chi\eta s$ in detail : ¿ jouría being not only government, but every kind of official power, primary and delegated : cf. Matt. viii. 9; x. 1 ; xxi. 23 ff. ; Luke xx. 20 ; xxiii. 7. Then in the second pair, δύναμις is mere might, the raw material, so to speak, of power : κυριότηs is that pre-eminence or lordship, which δύναμις establishes for itself. So that in the first pair we descend from the higher and concentrated to the lower and diffused : in the second we ascend from the lower and diffused to the higher and concentrated. The following shows that in this enumeration not only carthly, nor only heavenly authorities are meant to be included, but both together,—so as to make it perfectly general. That the evil spirits arc included, is therefore manifest : see also ch. vi. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 24-26) and every name that is named (further generalization : indicating not merely titles of bonour [cf. ovoua(ou.], nor persons, but, as Stier, a transition from the $d\rho\chi al$, &c. to $\pi d\nu \tau a$ below : answering to ούτε τις κτίσις έτέρα, cf. Christus est, potest dicere, Christus est caput meum : ego sum corpus ejus,'- for this sense cannot possibly be extracted out of the words themselves $\delta \pi \epsilon \rho \pi d \nu \tau a$: nor as Baum. garten, $\delta \pi \hat{\epsilon} \rho \pi d \nu \tau a = \mu d \lambda_1 \sigma \tau a \pi d \nu \tau \omega \nu$, præcipue, polius quam cæleris,-for, not to mention other objections, $\pi d\nu \tau a$ must surely be the same in meaning as $\pi d\nu \tau a$ before : nor can $\pi dv \tau a$ be masculine, as Jer., Anselm, al., and Wahl: nor, as Calv., 'quia simul plena rerum omnium potestas et administratio illi sit commissa:' nor, with Harl., does $\pi d\nu \tau a$ find its limitation within the Church, so as not to apply to other things without it : nor is $i\pi \epsilon \rho \pi a \nu \tau a$ to be taken with κεφ., summum caput, as Olsh., all. : nor as Meyer, Stier, and Ellicott [cdn. 1: in edn. 2, he interprets nearly as below], is another $\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\mu\nu$ to be supplied before $\tau \hat{\eta}$ ékka., 'gave Him, as Head over all things, as Head to the Church:' nor is the dative a dat. commodi, as De W. : but the meaning is thus to be gained, from what follows: CHRIST is Head over all things : the Church is the BODY of Christ, and as such is the fulness of Him who fills all with all: the Head of such a Body, is Head over all things; therefore when God gives Christ as Head to the church, He gives Him as Head over all things to the church, from the necessity of the case. Thus what follows is epexegetical of this), which same (Church, 'quæ qui-dem;' hardly 'ut quæ,' "in virtue of her being," as Meyer) is His BODY (not in a figure merely: it is veritably His Body: not that which in our glorified humanity He personally bears, but that in which He, as the Christ of God, is manifested and glorified by spiritual organization. He is its Head; from Him comes its life; in Him, it is exalted : in it, He is lived forth and witnessed to; He possesses no-thing for Himself,-neither His communion with the Father, nor His fulness of the Spirit, nor His glorified humanity,--but all for His Church, which is in the innermost reality, HIMSELF; His flesh and His bones-and therefore) the fulness $(\pi \lambda \eta \rho.$ is in apposition with $\tau \delta \sigma \bar{\omega} \mu a a \vartheta \tau.$, and is a fresh description of $\dot{\eta} \, \epsilon \kappa \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma la$. It would pass my limits, even to notice summarily what has been written on πλήρωμα. I will endeavour to give an account of the word itself. Like other derivatives in -µa from the perfect passive, it would appear primarily to designate either (1) concrete, that thing on which the action denoted by the verb has passed : e. g. $\pi o(\eta \mu a)$, the thing made, $\pi p \hat{a} \gamma \mu a$, the thing done, $\sigma \pi \epsilon \rho \mu a$, the thing sown, $\pi \lambda \eta$ - $\rho\omega\mu\alpha$, the thing filled: or (2) abstract, that occurrence whereby the action denoted has been exemplified : e. g. $\tau \rho \tilde{\omega} \mu a$, the effect of TITPWOKEIV, not the thing wounded, but the wound inflicted : so κλάσμα, ἀρίθμημα, and the like; πλήρωμα, the fulness. From this latter, the transition is very easy to the meaning the thing whereby the effect is produced, as where $\boldsymbol{z} \wedge \boldsymbol{\eta} \boldsymbol{\rho} \boldsymbol{\omega} \boldsymbol{\mu} \boldsymbol{\alpha}$ is used for the crew of a ship see also Matt. ix. 16 ||; Mark vi. 43; Î Cor. x. 26; Gal. iv. 4; ver. 10], ζεῦγμα for a bridge or yoke, &c. Hence arises the so-called active sense of such nouns, which is not in fact an active sense at all, but a logical transference from the effect to that which exemplifies the effect. Here, the simple and primary meaning is by far the best, - ' the thing filled,' - " the filled up receptacle" [cf. κατοικητήριον, ch. ii. 22], as Eadie expresses it [see also Ellicott], the meaning being, that the church, being the Body of Christ, is dwelt in and filled by God: it is His $\pi\lambda\eta\rho\omega\mu a$ in an especial manner-His fulness abides in it, and is exemplified by it. The nearest approach to any one word in English which may express it, is made by fulness, though it, as well as $\pi\lambda$., requires explaining, as importing not the inherent plenitude of God Himself, but that communicated plenitude of gifts and graces wherein He infuses Himself into His Church. I would refer those who wish to enter more fully into this matter, to the long and laboured notes of Harless, and Stier: and to Fritzsche on Rom. vol. ii. pp. 469 ff.) of Him who filleth (it is doubted whether $\pi\lambda\eta\rho\sigma\nu$ µévou is passive, or middle in an active sense. Those who take $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu a$ above, actively, "the filling up," generally [Har-less is an exception] defend the passive sense here, "of Him who is [being] filled, &c." So Cbrys.: πλήρωμα, φησίν οίον κεφαλή πληρούται παρά του σώματοςδιά πάντων οδν πληροθται το σώμα αύτοῦ. τότε πληροῦται ἡ κεφαλή, τότε τέλειον σώμα γίνεται, δταν δμού πάντες δμεν συνημμένοι κ. συγκεκολλημένοι. Jer. : " Sicut adimpletur imperator, si quotidie cjus augeatur exercitus, et fant novæ provinciæ, et populorum multitudo succrescat, ita et Christus, in co, quod sibi credunt omnia, ipse adimpletur in omnibus ;" and Estius : "Qui secundum omnia, sive quoad omnia in omnibus sui corporis membris adimpletur. Nisi enim essent hie quidem pes ejus, ille vero manus, alius autem aliud membrum non perficerctur Christus secundum rationem capitis." But to this it is difficult to assign any satisfactory sense, especially on account of τα πάντα έν πασιν. It certainly cannot be said that Christ awaits His completion, in any such meaning as this, by the completion of his Church. And it is not probable that if such had been the meaning, τὰ πάντα ἐν πῶσιν would have thus barely and emphatically preceded the participle which itself conveyed so new and startling an idea. We should have had some such arrangement as this—τό πλήρωμα τοῦ καὶ αὐτοῦ τὰ πάντα [κ.] έν πασιν πληρουμένου. If now we take πληρουμένου in an active reflective sense, both meaning and arrangement will be satisfactory-' the fulness [receptacle, filled and possessed] of Him who filleth' τὰ πάντα έν πασιν. But are we justified in thus taking it? It seems so, from Xen. Hell. vi. 2. 14, & στρατηγός μάλα όξέως τὰς ναῦς ἐπληρούτο κ. τούς τριηράρχους ήνάγκαζε. See likewise Plato, Gorg. § 106 ; Xen. Hell. v. 4. 56; vi. 2. 35: Demosth. p. 1208. 14: Plut. Alcib. 35: Pollux i. 99: in all of which the 1 aor. middle is thus used. Having then this authority as far as grammatical usage is concerned, we are further inclined to this rendering by ch. iv. 10, where it is said of Christ, $\delta d\nu a \beta a \delta \delta \delta \delta \pi s \rho$ άνω πάντων τῶν οὐρανῶν, ἴνα πληρώση τὰ πάντα, and the Apostle proceeds to enumerate the various gifts bestowed by Him on His Church. See further in note there) all things (the whole universe: not to be restricted in meaning. The Church is the special receptacle and abiding-place -- the πλήρωμα κατ' έξοχήν, of Him who fills all things) with all things (i. e. who is the bestower of all, wherever found. $\epsilon v \pi \hat{a} \sigma i v$ has been rendered 'every where' [B.-Crus.]: 'in every way' [De W.] : 'in every case' [Harl.]: and al. : but the Apostle's own usage is our best guide, $-\pi\lambda\eta\rho o\hat{v}\sigma\theta\epsilon \ \epsilon \nu \ \pi\nu\epsilon\dot{v}\mu a\tau\iota$, ch. v. 18, and other refl., and directs us to the instrumental or clemental meaning-the thing with, or by, or in which as an element, the filling takes place. So that the expression will mean, with all, not only gifts, not only blessings, but things : who fills all creation with whatever it possesses-who is the Author and Giver of all things. The reference is, I think, to the Father, not to Christ. The latter has been imagined [see especially Ellicott], principally from strictly parallelizing the two elauses, το σώμα | αυτού ||, το πλήρωμα | τοῦ τ. π. ἐν π. πληρουμένου ||. But this is by no means conclusive : the second definitive clause may assert more than the first ;---may be, not subordinate to the first, but inclusive of it. In ch. iv. 10, where Christ's filling all things is spoken of, we have the active voice, denoting the bare objective fact: whereas here the reciprocal middle implies a filling for Hunself, which can hardly be predicated of any but the Father, for whom are all things, even the Son himself). IJ. 1-22.] (See on ch. i. 3.) COURSE

AND PROGRESS OF THE CHURCH THROUGH THE SON; consisting mainly in the receiving of believers in the new man Christ Jesus-setting forth on one side the death and ruin in which they were; - on the other, the way to life opened to them by the finished work of Christ. This throughout the chapter, which is composed (as ch. i.) of two parts-the first, more doctrinal and assertive (vv. 1-10), the second more hortative and reminiscent (vv. 11-22). In both, the separate cases of Gentiles and Jews, and the present union in Christ, are treated of. And herein

1, 2.] Actual state of the Gentiles -dead in trespasses and sins, living under 1. You also the power of the devil. ($\kappa \alpha f$ is much more than merely copulative. It selects and puts into prominence buas, from among the recipients of God's grace implied in vv. 19-23 of the former chapter. See below), who were (" övtas clearly marks the state in which they were at the time when God quickcned them : this in

ver. 5 is brought prominently forward by the kal: here however kal is joined with and gives prominence to buas. A simple indication, then, of their state, without any temporal or causal adjunct, 'when,' ' whereas,' &c., seems in the present case most satisfactory, as less calling away the attention from the more emphatic buas." Ellicott, edn. 1) dead (certainly not, as Meyer, 'subject to [physical] death :' the whole of the subsequent mercy of God in His quickening them is spiritual, and therefore of necessity the death also. That it involves physical death, is most true; but as I have often had occasion to remark [see e. g. on John xi. 25, 26], this latter is so subordinate to spiritual death, as often hardly to come into account in Scripture) in (not exactly as in Col. ii. 13, νεκρούς ύντας έν τοις παραπτώμασιν, where the element is more in view, whereas here it is the causal dative-we might render, were the expression good in serious writing, 'dead of your trespasses,' as we say 'he lies dead of cholera.' I use 'in' as giving nearly the same causal sense : we say, indiscriminately, 'sick of a fever,' and 'sick in a fever') [your] trespasses and sins (it seems difficult to establish universally any distinction such as has been attempted, e. g. by Tittm. Synon. p. 47,--"licet non satis vera Hieronymi distinctio videatur, qui παράπτωμα primum ad peccatum lapsum esse dicit, auap- τlav , quum ad ipsum facinus perventum est; tamen in v. $\pi a \rho a \pi \tau \omega \mu a$ proprie inest notio peccati quod temere commissum est. i. e. a nolcute facere injuriam; sed in άμαρτία et άμάρτημα cogitatur facinus quod, qui fecit, facere voluit, sive imprudens erraverit, recte se facere existimans, sive impetu animi et libidine obreptus fecerit. . . Levius est παράπτωμα guam άμαρ- τ ía, si àµap τ ía de singulo peccato dicitur." Where however, as here, the two occur together, it may be accepted as correct. If we take mcrely that of Ellicott, al., that "παραπτώματα are the particular, special acts of sin, - aµaptias the more general and abstract, viz. all forms, phases, and movements of sin, whether entertained in thought or consummated in act," we shall not provide for the whole case : for άμαρτίαι are unquestionably used for special acts [= άμαρτήματα]: and we want a distinction which shall embrace Another question concerns this case. the construction of this accusative clause. Some [Beng., Lachm., Harl.] consider it as a continuation of ch. i. 23, and place a comma only at $\pi\lambda\eta\rho\sigma\nu\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\nu$. But [see our division of the sense] the sentence evidently finishes with $\pi \lambda \eta \rho ov \mu \epsilon' v ov$, and a new subject is here taken up. The simplest view seems to be the usual one, that the Apostle began with the accusative, intending to govern it by συνεζωοποίησεν τ $\tilde{\varphi}$ χριστ $\hat{\varphi}$, but was led away by the relative clauses, iv als more, έν ols κal ήμεις , and himself takes up the dropped thread of the construction by & de deds , ver. 4. So Erasm. : "hyperbati longioris ambitum ipse correxit Apostolus dicens 'Deus autem qui dives est'..." At all events, the clause should be left, in translation, pendent, as it stands, and not filled in conjecturally),

2.] in which (auapriais, the last substantive, but applying in fact to both) ye once walked (we hardly need, as Eadie, al., go back every time to the figure in $\pi \epsilon \rho_i \pi \alpha \tau \epsilon i \nu$ — the word has become with the Apostlo so common in its figurative sense. See Fritzsche's note, Rom. vol. iii. p. 140) according to (after the leading of, conformably to) the course (so E. V.: the very best word, as so often. The meaning of alw here is compounded of its temporal and its ethical sense: it is not exactly 'lifetime,' 'duration,' nor again 'fashion,' 'spirit,' but some common term which will admit of being both temporally and ethically characterized,- ' earcer ' or 'course.' Beware 1) of taking alava and κόσμου as synonymous, and the expression as a pleonasm [" utrumque nominat, seculum et mundum, cum sufficeret alterum dixisse," Estius], 2) of imagining, as Michaelis and Baur, that the expression is a gnostie one, the won being the devil: for, as Meyer remarks, the ordinary sense of aiw gives a good meaning, and one characteristic of St. Paul. See Gal. i. 4, for a use of alw-somewhat similar, but more confined to the temporal meaning) of this world (St. Paul generally uses δ κόσμος, but has δ κ. ούτοs in 1 Cor. iii. 19; v. 10; vii. 31. It designates the present system of things, as alien from God, and lying in the evil one), according to the ruler of the power of the air (the devil-the Beds του aiwvos τούτου, 2 Cor. iv. 4, is elearly meant : but it is difficult exactly to dissect the phrase, and give each word its proper meaning. ¿ξουσία appears to be used here as $\delta \mu \eta \lambda i \kappa l \eta$ in Homer, ήλικία, έταιρία, δουλεία, ὑπηρεσία, $\sigma \nu \mu \mu \alpha \chi l \alpha$, and the like, to represent the aggregate of those in power: as we say, 'the government.' So that all such renderings as 'princeps potentissimus' are to be at once dismissed. So also is every explanation which would ascribe to the Apostle a polemical, or distantly allusive tendency, in an expression which he manifestly uses as one of passage merely, and carrying its own familiar sense to his readers. This against Michaelis, and all who have imagined an allusion to the gnostic ideas - and Wetst., who says, " Paulus ita loquitur ex principiis philosophiæ Pythagoreæ, quibus illi ad quos scribit imbuti erant." Not much better are those who refer the expression to Rabbinical ideas for its source. The different opinions and authorities [which would far exceed the limits of a general commentary] may be seen cited and treated in Harless, Stier, and Eadie. I am disposed to seek my interpretation from a much more obvious source : viz. the persuasion and common parlance of mankind, founded on analogy with well-known facts. Ellic., edn. 2, disapproves this, but without sufficiently attending to my explanation which follows, which, as in so many cases where he imagines a difference between our interpretations, is practically the same as his own.] We are tempted by evil spirits, who have access to us, and suggest thoughts and desires to our minds. We are surrounded by the air, which is the vehicle of speech and of all sugges-tions to our senses. Tried continually as we are by these temptations, what so natural, as to assign to their ministers a dwelling in, and power over that element which is the vehicle of them to us? And thus our Lord, in the parable of the sower, when He would represent the devil coming and taking away the seed out of the heart, figures him by tà neteivà tou oupavov. The Apostle then, in using this expression, would be appealing to the common feeling of his readers, not to any recondite or questionable system of dæmonology. That traces are found in such systems, of a belief agreeing with this, is merely a proof that they have embodied the same general feeling, and may be used 90 in illustration, not as the ground, of the All attempts to re-Apostle's saying. present anp as meaning 'darkness,' or ' spirit,' are futile, and beside the purpose. The word occurs (see reff.) six more times in the N. T. and nowhere in any but its ordinary meaning), of the spirit ($\tau \hat{\eta} s \ \dot{\epsilon} \xi$ ovolas being used as designating [see above] the personal aggregate of those evil oncs who have this power, τοῦ πνεύµatos, in apposition with it, represents their aggregate character, as an influence on the human mind, a spirit of ungodliness and disobedience,—the $\pi\nu\epsilon\bar{\nu}\mu a$ $\tau\sigma\bar{\nu}$ κόσμου of 1 Cor. ii. 12,—the aggregate of the πνεύματα πλάνα of 1 Tim. iv. 1. So that [against Harless] the meaning of $\pi\nu\epsilon\dot{\nu}\mu\alpha\tau\sigma\sigma$, though properly and strictly objective, almost passes into the subjective, when it is spoken of as evepyovvros $\epsilon \nu \kappa.\tau.\lambda$. And this will account for the otherwise harsh conjunction of apxovra τοῦ πνεύματος. As he (the devil) is the ruler of $\tau \dot{a}$ πνεύματα, whose aggregate $\tau \dot{b}$ πνεῦμα is,—so be is the ἄρχων of the thoughts and ways of the ungodly,—of that $\pi\nu\epsilon\hat{\nu}\mu\alpha$ which works in them. The genitive, πνεύματος, must not be taken, as by many Commentators and by Rückert, as in apposition with $\Delta \rho \chi o \nu \tau \alpha$, by the Apostle's negligence of construction. No such assumption should ever be made without necessity; and there is surely none here) which is now (i. e. 'still :' contrast to noté,-to you, who have escaped from his government : no allusion need be thought of to the interval before the $\pi a \rho o \nu \sigma i a$ being that of the hottest conflict between the principles [2 Thess. ii. 7. Doubtless unbelief is the root of disobedience: but it is not here expressed, only implied. In Deut. ix. 23, ήπειθήσατε τφ ρήματι κυρίου τ. θεοῦ ύμῶν, and the allusion to it in Heb. iv. 6, of πρότερον εδαγγελισθέντες ούκ είςηλθον δι' απείθειαν, we have the disobedience in its roothere, in its fruits-cf. ver. 3, molouvres τὰ θελήματα κ.τ.λ.): 3.] among whom (the viol τ . $d\pi \epsilon i \theta \epsilon las$: not merely local, but 'numbered among whom,'--- wv kal aùrol övres, as Rückert: not 'in which,' viz. παραπτώμασιν, as Syr., Jer., Grot., Bengel, al., and Stier, who would divide off aµaptlas, allotting them to the Gentiles, and to ver. 2,-and παραπτώ- $\mu a \tau a$, assigning them to the Jews, and to ver. 3. See further on this below: but incantiine, besides its very clumsy treatment of the $\dot{a}\mu a\rho\tau$. and $\pi a\rho a\pi\tau$. which both belong to bueis in ver. 1, it ascribes to the Apostle an unusual and unnatural precision in distinguishing the two words which he had used without any such note of distinction, such as $\tau \epsilon - \kappa a i$) we also all (WHO? Ellicott. And Eadie remarks : " Had he written kal övres, as following out the idea of $\pi o_{10} \hat{v} v \tau \epsilon s$, there might have been a plea against the view of innate depravity [see below]-- fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and being,' or ' so being, children of wrath.' Some of the ancients [Cyr., Œc., Thl], and Grot. took it as = $\delta\nu\tau\omega s$, $\lambda\lambda\eta\theta\omega s$, which meaning it never bears; see on Gal. iv. 8. Others [Holzhausen, Hoffm.] would join it with opyns, -- 'anger, which arises from the ungodly natural life:' but as Mey. remarks, even granting this use of $\phi i \sigma i s$, this would require της τη φύσει όργης or της έκ της φύσ. όργης. It can then only mean, 'by nature.' And what does this imply ? Harl., in loc., seems to have given the distinctive sense well : " $\phi i\sigma_{is}$, in its fundamental idea, is that which has grown as distinguished from that which has been effected [bas Bewordene in Gegensat zum Bemachten], i. e. it is that which according to our judgment has the ground of its existence in individual development, not in accessory influence of another. Accordingly, ovou, in its concrete idea, as the sum total of all growth, is 'rerum natura:' and in its abstract philosophical idea, $\phi \dot{\upsilon} \sigma s$ is the contrast to $\theta \dot{\epsilon} \sigma s$. The $\phi \dot{\upsilon} \sigma s$ of an individual thing denotes the peculiarity of its being, which is the result of its being, as opposed to every accessory quality: hence ovore elvas or moreir to means, ' sua sponte facere, esse aliquid' and 'natura esse aliquid:' to be and do any thing by virtue of a state [elval] or an inclination [noiciv], not acquired, but inherent : itοιδα καί φύσει σε μή πεφυκότα τοιαθτα φωνείν, μηδέ τεχνασθαι κακά, Soph. Philoet. 80." If this be correct, the expression will amount to an assertion on the part of the Apostle of the doctrine of original sin. There is from its secondary position [cf. Plutarch de frat. am. p. 37, in Harl., όργάνων φύσει τοιούτων έτυχεν] no em-as referring to a fundamental truth otherwise known, is not thereby lessened. And it is not for Meyer to argue against this by assuming original sin not to be a pauline doctrine. If the Apostle asserts it here, this place must stand on its own merits, not be wrested to suit an apparent preconceived meaning of other passages. But the truth is, he cites those other passages in a sense quite alien from their real one. It would be easy to shew that every one of them [Rom. i. 18; ii. 8, 9; v. 12; vii. 9; xi. 21. Gal. ii. 15] is consistent with the doctrine here implied. The student will do well to read the long notes in Harl., De W., Stier, and Eadie) of wrath (WHOSE wrath, is evident : the meaning being, we were all concluded under and born in sin, and so actual objects of that wrath of God which is His mind against sin. $\delta \rho \gamma \eta$ must not be taken as $= \tau i \mu \omega$. ρία, κόλασιs, as Chrys., Thdrt., Basil, Thl., al.: this would in fact make the expression mean, actually punished : see above on $\tau \epsilon \kappa r \alpha$;—just as it now means, the

But (contrast to the preceding verse,-the Excos and $\dot{a}\gamma \dot{a}\pi\eta$, to the $\dot{\delta\rho}\gamma\eta$ just mentioned. δέ is, however, often used after a parenthesis, where no such logical contrast is intended, the very resumption of the general subject being a contrast to its interruption by the particular clauses : see examples in Klotz, Devarius, II. 376, 7) God, being rich (the participial clause states the general ground, and the following $\delta_{i\dot{a}} \tau$. $\pi_{0\lambda\lambda}$. $\dot{a}\gamma$., the special or peculiar motive, of συνεζωοπ., De W.) in compassion (for $\epsilon \nu$, see reff. ούχ απλῶς ἐλεήμων, ἀλλὰ πλούσιος· καθάπερ καὶ ἐν ἐτέρφ [Ps. v. 7; lxviii. 13] φησίν Ἐν τῷ πλήθει τοῦ ἐλέους σου· κ. πάλιν [Ps. l. 1] Ἐλέησόν με κατὰ τὸ μέγα έλεός σου, Chrys. έλεος, properly, as applying to our wretchedness before : cf. Ezek. xvi. 6),-on account of His great love wherewith (the construction may be attractive : but it would appear from ref. 2 Kings, to be rather a Hellenistic idiom) He loved us (the clause belongs, not to πλού. ών έν έλ., as Calv., al., and E. It is not to be taken as a mere resumption of ver. 1 [Rück., al.], nor as the copula only [Meyer]. His objection to the above rendering, that a quickening to life can happen only in and from a state of death, and therefore no emphasis on such a state is required, is entirely removed by noticing that the emphasis is not on the mere fact έζωοποίησεν,-but on συνεζ. τῷ χριστῷ, with all its glorious consequences) in our

(tois, the π , which we committed) trespasses (see on ver. 1), vivified (not ' hath vivified'-a definite act in time, not an abiding consequence is spoken of) us together with Christ (the reading $\partial v \tau$. $\chi \rho$. [see var. readd.] seems to have arisen either from repetition of the $\epsilon \nu$ in $\sigma \nu \nu$ - $\epsilon(\omega \sigma \pi o i \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu)$, or from conformation to ver. 6. It is clearly not allowable to render $\chi \rho_i \sigma \tau \hat{\varphi}$, in Christ, as Beza,—without the preposition. It is governed by the our, and implies not exactly as Chrys., $\partial \zeta \omega$ οποίησε κάκεινον και ήμας,-but that Christ was THE RESURRECTION and the Life, and we follow in and because of Him. The disputes about the meaning of $\tilde{\epsilon} \zeta \omega$ $o \pi o (\eta \sigma \epsilon \nu)$ have arisen from not bearing in mind the relation in N. T. language between natural and spiritual death. We have often had occasion to observe that spiritual death in the N. T. includes in it and bears with it natural death as a consequence, to such an extent that this latter is often not thought of as worth mentioning : see especially John xi. 25, 26, which is the key-text for all passages regarding life in Christ. So here-God vivified us together with Christ : in the one act and fact of His resurrection He raised all His people-to spiritual life, and in that to victory over death, both spiritual, and therefore necessarily physical also. To dispute therefore whether such an expression as this is past [spiritual], or future [physical], is to forget that the whole includes its parts. Our spiritual life is the primary subject of the Apostle's thought : but this includes in itself our share in the resurrection and exaltation [ver. 6] of Christ. The three aorists, συνεζωοποίησεν, συνήγειρεν, συνεκάθατεν, are all proleptical as regards the actuation in each man, but equally describe a past and accomplished act on God's part when He raised up Christ)-by grace ye are saved (this insertion in the midst of the mention of such great unmerited mercies to us sinners, is meant emphatically to call the reader's attention to so cogent a proof of that which the Apostle ever preached as the great foundation truth of the Notice the perf. ' are saved,' Gospel. not σώζεσθε, 'are being saved,' because we have passed from death unto life : salvation is to the Christian not a future but a past thing, realized in the present by faith)—and raised us together with Him (the Resurrection of Christ being the next event consequent on His vivification in the tomb) and seated us together with Him (the Ascension being the completion of the Resurrection. So that all three verbs refer strictly to the same work wrought on Christ, and in Christ on all His mystical Body, the Church) in the heavenly places (see on ch. i. 3, 20. "Obiter observa, non dixisse Apostolum : 'et consedere fecit ad dexteram suam,' sicut superiori capite de Christo dixerat : sedere enim ad dexteram Patris Christo proprium est ; nec cuiquam alteri communicatur : tametsi in throno Christi dicantur sessuri qui vicerint, Apoe. iii. in fine." All these we have, in fact and reality [see Phil. iii. 20], in their highest, and therefore in all lower senses, in Him : they were ours, when they were His : but for their fulness in possession we are waiting till He come, when we shall be like and with Him), Beware of the rendering 'might give a specimen of' [Rückert, Eadie], which the word will not bcar either here or in reff.) in the ages which are hereafter to come (what are they? the future periods of the Church's carthly career,-or the ages of the glorified Church hereafter ? The answer must be given by comparing this with the very similar expression in Col. i. 26, 27, τό μυστήριον τό αποκεκρυμμένον από των αἰώνων κ. άπό τῶν γενεῶν, νυνὶ δὲ ἐφανερώθη τοις άγίοις αύτου, οις ήθέλησεν ό θεδς γνωρίσαι τίς ό πλοῦτος τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ. Here it is manifest (1) that the alwres from which the mystery was hidden are the past ages of this world; (2) that those to whom, as here, God will make known the riches of His glory, are His saints, i. e. His church on carth. Therefore I conceive we are compelled to interpret analogously : viz. to understand the alŵves έπερχόμενοι of the coming ages of the church, and the persons involved in them to be the future members of the church. Thus the meaning will be nearly as in eh. i. 12. The supposed reference to the future state of glory scems not to agree with alwes, nor with energouevou :- nor with the fact that the second coming and future kingdom of Christ are hardly ever alluded to in this Epistle) the exceeding riches of His grace in (of the material of which this display of His grace will consist, the department in which it will find its exercise) goodness (see especially Rom. ii. 4) towards us in (not 'through,' as E. The sentiment is the same as that in John v. 36, $\tau \dot{a} \epsilon \rho \gamma a$ δι ξδωκέν μοι ό πατήρ Ίνα τελειώσω αὐτά. To recur to the similitude used above, we might say of the trees,—they were created for fruits which God before prepared that they should bear them : i.e. defined and assigned to each tree its own, in form, and flavour, and time of bearing. So in the course of God's providence, our good works are marked out for and assigned to each one of us. See the doctrine of præ-existence in God explained in Delitzsch's biblische Psychologie, p. 23 ff. Stier's view, after Bengel, is that the verb προητ. is neuter, having no accusative after it, - 'for which God made preparation, &c. .' but this usage of the compound verb wants example) that we should walk in them. Thus the truth of the maxim "bona opera non præccdunt justificandum, sed sequuntur justificatum" (see Harl.) is shewn. The sentiment is strictly pauline (against De W. and Baur), -in the spirit of Rom. xii., Gal. v. 22, 25, &c.

He did not make our peace and then retire, leaving us to enjoy that peace,-but is Himself its medium and its substance; His making both one was no external reconciliation, but the taking both, their common nature, on and into Himself,-see ver. 15. Bear in mind the multitude of prophetic passages which connect peace with Him, Isa. ix. 5, 6; hi. 7; hii. 5; lvii. 19; Micah v. 5; Hag. ii. 9; Zech. ix. 10: also Luke ii. 14; John xiv. 27; xx. 19, 21, 26. And notice that already the complex idea of the whole verse, that of uniting both Jews and Gentiles in one reconciliation to God, begins to appear : for He is our Peace, not only as reconciling Jew to Gentile, not as bringing the far-off Gentile near to the Jew, but as reconciling both, united, to God; as bringing the far-off Gentile, and the near Jew, both into peace with God. For want of observing this the sense has been much obscured : see below) who made (specification, how He is our peace. Better 'made,' than 'hath made :' the latter is true, but it is the historie fact which is here brought out) both (Jews and Gentiles; not 'man and God,' as Stier : cf. vv. 15, 16. Neuter, as abstract,-both things, both clements) one, and (epexegetic-'namely, in that he') threw down the middle wall of the fence (i. e. the middle wall which belonged to—was a necessary part of the carrying out of-the opayuds. The primary allusion seems to be, to the rending of the veil at the crucifixion : not that that veil separated Jew and Gentile, but that it, the chief symbol of separation from God, included in its removal the admission to Him of that one body into which Christ made Jew and Gentile. This complex idea is before the Apostle throughout the sentence : and necessarily ; for the reconciliation which Christ effected between Jew and Gentile was in fact only a subordinate step of the great reconciliation of both to God, which He effected by His sacrifice in the flesh, — and in speaking of one he VOL. speaks of the other also. The *φραγμό*s, from what has been said above, is more general in sense than the µεσότοιχον; is in fact the whole arrangement, of which that was but an instrument-the separation itself, consequent on a system of separation: it = therefore the whole legal system, ceremonial and moral, which made the whole separation,-of Jew from Gentile, - and in the background, of both from God), the enmity (not, of Jew and Gentile : so strong a term is not justified as applying to their separation, nor does such a reference satisfy vcr. 16,—see there ; but, the enmity in which both were in-volved against God, see Rom. viii. 7. την έχθ. is in apposition with τὸ μεσ ότ. This enmity was the real cause of separation from God, and in being so, was the inclusive, mediate cause of the separation between Jew and Gentile. Christ, by abolishing the first, abolished the other also : see below) in His flesh (to be joined not with Karapyjoas, as most Commentators, which is very harsh, breaking the parallelism, and making the instrumental predication precede the verb, which is not the character of this passage ;- but with \lambda \hat{\upsilon \sigma as.} Christ destroyed the $\mu \epsilon \sigma$., i. e. the $\xi \chi \theta \rho a$, in, or by, His flesh; see on ver. 16, where the same idea is nearly repeated. It was in His crucified flesh, which was έν όμοιώματι σαρκός άμαρτίας, that He slew this enmity. The rendering, 'the enmity which was in His flesh,' would certainly in this case require the specifying article $\tau \eta \nu$, besides being very questionable in sense), - having done away the law of decretory commandments (this law was the ppayuos,-the great exponent of the $\xi_{\chi}\theta_{\rho a}$. Observe, too, ONE new man : we are all in God's sight but one in Christ, as we are but one in Adam), making peace (not, between Jew and Gentile : He is ή εἰρήνη $\eta\mu\omega\nu$, of us all : see below on ver. 17), and (parallel with the former purpose: not 'scond purpose' [Ellic., De W.], which yet must thus be the first. enmity (ἔχθρα has been taken here to mean the ennity between Jew and Gentile. But see on ver. 15: and let us ask here, was this the enmity which Christ slew at His death? Was this the $\epsilon_{\chi}\theta_{\rho\alpha}$, the slaying of which brought in the $\dot{a}\pi o$ κατάλλαξις, as this verse implies? Does such a meaning of $\xi \chi \theta \rho a$ at all satisfy the solemnity of the sentence, or of the next two verses? I cannot think so : and must maintain $\xi \chi \theta \rho \alpha$ here [and if here, then in ver. 15 also] to be that between man and God, which Christ did slay on the cross, and which being brought to an end, the separation between Jew and Gentile, which was a result of it, was done away. Ellicott, who maintained the above opinion in his 1st edn., now agrees with that here insisted on) on it (on the cross : compare Col. ii. 15, notes: not in His body: see above): and having come, He preached (how ? when ? Obviously after his death, because by that death the peace was wrought. We seek in vain for any such announcement made by Him in person after his resurrection. But we find a key to the expression in John xiv. 18, our ἀφήσω ύμᾶς ὀρφανούς ἕρχομαι πρός buas : see also ver. 28. And this coming was, by his Spirit poured out on the Church. There is an expression of St. Paul's, singularly parallel with this, and of itself strongly corroborative of the genuineness of our Epistle, in Acts xxvi. 23, ei παθητός ό χριστός, εί πρώτος έξ άναστάσεως νεκρών φώς μέλλει καταγγέλλειν τφ τε λαώ κ. τοις έθνεσιν. far greater peace which was effected by Christ's death, peace with God, which necessitated the union of the far off and the near in one body in Him. This is shewn especially by the repetition of $\epsilon i \rho \eta \nu \eta \nu$. See Isa. lvii. 19. Then follows the empowering reason, why He should preach peace to us both : and it is this ver. 18 especially which I maintain cannot be satisfied on the ordinary hypothesis of mere reconciliation between Jew and Gentile being the subject in the former verses. Here clearly the union [not reconciliation, nor is cumity predicated of them] of Jew and Gentile is subordinated to the blessed fact of an access TO GOD having been provided for both through Christ by the Spirit); for (not epexegetic of $\epsilon i \rho \eta \nu \eta \nu$, 'viz. that, as Baumg.-Crus.) through Him we have our access (I prefer this intransitive meaning to that maintained by Ellic., al., 'introduction,'-some [Mey.] say, by Christ [1 Pet. iii. 18] as our προsaywyeus [admissionalis, a word of Oriental courts], -not as differing much from it in meaning, but as better representing, both here and in Rom. v. 2, and ch. iii. 12, the repetition, the present liberty of approach, which exomer implies, but which 'introduction' does not give), both of us, in (united in, 1 Cor. xii. 13) one Spirit (not 'one frame of mind' [Anselm, Koppe, al.]: the whole structure of the sentence, as compared with any similar one, such as 2 Cor. xiii. 13, will shew what spirit is meant, viz. the Holy Spirit of God, already alluded to in ver. 17; see above. As a parallel, cf. 1 Cor. xii. 13) to the Father. 19.] So then (ἄρα οὖν is said by Hermann [Viger, art. 292] not to be classical Greek. It is frequent in St. Paul, but confined to him : see reff. So in Xen. we have, $\epsilon \pi i \tau \eta s \kappa \epsilon$. φαλής τὰ ὅπλα ἔφερον, partial, 'over,'οί Θράκες άλωπεκίδας έπι ταις κεφαλαις φορούσι, close, 'on ' sec Donaldson's Greek Gr. § 483) of the Apostles and Prophets (how is this genitive to be nnderstood? Is it a genitive of apposition, so that the Apostles and Prophets themselves are the foundation? This has been supposed by numerous Commentators, from Chrys. to De Wette. But, not to mention the very many other objections which have been well and often urged against this view, this one is to my mind decisive, -that it entirely destroys the imagery of the passage. The temple, into which these Gentiles were built, is the mystical body of the Son, in which the Father dwells by the Spirit, ver. 22. The Apostles and Prophets [see below], yea, Jesus Christ Himself, as the great inclusive Head Corner Stone [see again below], are also built into this temple. [That He includes likewise the foundation, and IS the foundation, is true, and must be remembered, but is not prominent here. Clearly then the Apostles and Prophets cannot be the foundation, being here spoken of as parts of the building, together with these Gentiles, and with Jesus Christ Himself. But again, does the genitive mean, the foundation which the Apostles and Prophets have laid? So also very many, from Ambrst., to Rück., Harl., Mey., Stier, Ellic., both edd. As clearly,-not thus. To introduce them here as agents, is as inconsistent as the other. No agents are here spoken of, but merely the fact of the great building in its several parts being built up together. The only remaining interpretation then is, to regard the genitive as simply possessive : 'the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets,' = ' the Apostles' and Prophets' foundation'that upon which they as well as yourselves are built. This exegesis, which I find ascribed to Bucer only (in De W.), scems to me beyond question the right one. See more below. But (2) who are προφήται? They have commonly been taken, without enquiry, as the O. T.

Prophets. And certainly, the sense, with some little straining, would admit of this view. They may be said to be built upon Christ, as belonging to that widest acceptation of His inystical body, in which it includes all the saints, O. T. as well as N. T. But there are several objections: first, formal: the order of the words has been urged against this view, in that προφ. should have come first. I should not be inclined to lay much weight on this; the Apostles might naturally be spoken of first, as nearest, and the Prophets second—'the Apostles, yea and of the Prophets also.' A more serious formal objection is, the omission of the article before $\pi\rho\sigma\phi$, thereby casting $\tau\omega\nu$ άποστόλων κ. προφητών together as belonging to the same class. But weightier objections are behind. In ch. iii. 5, we have δ έτέραις γενεαίς ούκ έγνωρίσθη τοίς υίοις των άνθρώπων, ώς νυν άπεκαλύφθη τοις άγίοις αποστόλοις αὐτοῦ κ. προφήταις έν πνεύματι, where unques-tionably the προφήται are N. T. Prophets; and again ch. iv. 11, Rai avrbs έδωκεν τοὺς μὲν ἀποστόλους, τοὺς δὲ $\pi \rho o \phi \eta \tau a s$. And it is difficult to conceive that the Apostle should have used the two words conjoined here, in a different sense. Even stronger is the consideration arising from the whole sense of the passage. All here is strictly Christian,-post-Judaic,consequent on Christ's death, and triumph, and His coming preaching peace by the Spirit to the united family of man. So that we must decide for $\pi\rho\sigma\phi$. being N. T. Prophets : those who ranked next to the Apostles in the government of the church : see Acts xi. 27, note. They were not in every case distinct from the Apostles: the apostleship probably always including the gift of prophecy: so that all the Apostles themselves might likewise have been προφήται), Christ Jesus Himself (the autou exalts the dignity of the temple, in that not only it has among its stones Apostles and prophets, but the Lord Himself is built into it. Builders set up such a stone, or build such a pillar of brick, before getting up their walls, to rule and square them by. But 'every building' here is quite out of place, inasmuch as the Apostle is clearly speaking of but one vast building, the mystical Body of Christ : and $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a$ oik. cannot have Meyer's sense 'every congregation thus built in :' nor would it be much better to take refuge in the proper sense of olkobouh, and render 'all building,' i. c. 'every process of building,' for then we should be at a loss when we come to $am{v}\xi\epsilon\iota$ below. Are we then to render ungraminatically, and force words to that which they cannot mean? Certainly not: but we seem to have some light cast here by such an expression as πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως, Col. i. 15, which though it may be evaded by rendering 'of every creature,' yet is not denied by most Commentators to be intended to bear this sense 'of all creation:' cf. also ib. ver. 23, $\ell\nu \ \pi d\sigma \eta \ \kappa \tau (\sigma \epsilon \iota \ \tau \eta) \ \delta \pi' \ o \dot{\nu} \rho a \nu \delta \nu$. The account to be given of such later usages is, that gradually other words besides proper names became regarded as able to dispense with the article after $\pi \tilde{a}s$, so that as they said first $\pi \tilde{a}\sigma a$ 'Iepo $\delta \lambda \nu \mu a$ [Matt. ii. 3], and then $\pi \tilde{a}s$ olkos 'Iopa $\dot{\eta}\lambda$ [Acts ii. 36], so they came at length to say $\pi \tilde{a}\sigma a \ \kappa \tau fors$ [as we ourselves 'all creation,' for 'all the creation '] and $\pi \tilde{a}\sigma a \ o ho \delta \phi \mu \dot{\eta}$, when speaking of one universal and notorious building. Ellic. adds to the examples, $\pi \tilde{a}\sigma a \ \gamma \tilde{\eta}$, Thucyd. ii. 43, $\pi \tilde{a}\sigma a \dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \lambda \dot{\eta}$, Ignat. Eph. § 12, p. 656.

Both participle and verb imply that the fitting together and the growing are still going on : and the only way which we in English have to mark this so as to avoid the chance of mistake, is by the auxiliary verb sub-stantive, and the participle. The bare present, 'groweth,' is in danger of being mistaken for the abstract quality, and the temporal development is thus lost sight of: whereas the other, in giving prominence to that temporal development, also necessarily implies the 'normal, perpctual, unconditioned nature of the organic increase' [Ellic.]) to (so 'crescere in cumulum,' Claudian in Piseator) an holy temple in the Lord (i. e. according to apostolie usage, and the sense of the whole passage, 'in Christ.' The iv w-iv Kupiw, - iv $\tilde{\omega}$, - like the frequent repetitions of the name xpioros in vv. 12, 13, are used by the Apostle to lay all stress on the fact that Christ is the inclusive Head of all the building, the element in which it has its being and its growth. The increase spoken of will issue in its being a holy temple in Christ), 22. in whom (not 'in which,' viz. the temple-it is characteristic [see above] of this part of the epistle to string together these relative expressions, all referring to the same) ye also (not, as Eadie, 'even you :' there is no depreciation here, but an exaltation, of the Gentiles, as living stones of the great building) are being built in together (with one another, or with those before mentioned. An imperative sense ['Ephesios hortatur ut crescant in fide Christi magis et magis postquain in ca seinel fuerunt fundati," Calv. is not for a moment to be thought of: the whole passage is descriptive, not hortatory) for (Griesb. parenthesizes with two commas, έν φ συνοικοδομείσθε, and takes this els as parallel with the former els. But this unnecessarily involves the sentence, which is simple enough as it stands) an habitation of God (the only true temple of God, in which He dwells, being the Body of Christ, in all the glorious acceptation of that term) in the Spirit (it is even now, in the state of imperfection, hy the Spirit, dwelling in the hearts of believers, that God has His habitation in the Church : and then, when the growth and increase of that Church shall be completed, it will be still in and by the Holy Spirit fully penetrating and possessing the whole glorified Church, that the Father will dwell in it for ever. Thus we have the true temple of the Father, built in the Son, inhabited in the Spirit : the offices of the Three blessed Persons being distinctly pointed out: God, THE FATHER, in all His fulness, dwells in, fills the Church : that Church is constituted au holy Temple to Him in THE SON,—is inhabited by Him in the ever-present indwelling of the HOLY SFIRIT. The attempt to soften away èv πνεύματι into πνευματικώς [vads πνευ-ματικός, Chrys., and so Thl., Ec., al., and even Olsh.] is against the whole sense of the passage, in which not the present spiritual state of believers, but their ultimate glorious completion [cis] is spoken of. See reff.).

III. 1-21. AIM AND END OF THE CHURCH IN THE SPIRIT. And herein, the revelation to it of the mystery of Christ, through those ministers who wrought in the Spirit : primarily, as regarded the Ephesians, through himself. Thus first, of HIS OFFICE AS APOSTLE OF THE GENTILES (1-13): secondly, under the form of a prayer for them, THE AIM AND END OF THAT OFFICE AS RESPECTED THE CHURCH: its becoming strong in the power of the Spirit (14-19). Then (20, 21) doxology, concluding this first division of the Epistle. 1-13.] (See above.) On this account (in order to explain this, something must be said on the construction. (a) Chrys. says :- είπε τοῦ χριστοῦ τὴν κηδεμονίαν τὴν πολλήν ἐκβαίνει λοιπόν κ. έπι την έαυτου, μικράν μέν ούσαν κ. σφόδρα ούδέν πρός έκείνην, ίκανην δε και ταύτην επισπάσασθαι. δια τοῦτο καὶ ἐγὼ δέδεμαι, φησίν. This supplying of eiul after & Seoulos, and making the latter the predicate, is the rendering of Syr., and adopted by very many. It has against it, 1) that thus TouTov Xápiv and $\delta \pi \epsilon \rho = \delta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ become tautological : 2) that thus ver. 2 and the following are unconnected with the preceding, . serving for no explanation of it ['legationis, non vinculorum rationcun explicat, Castalio in Harl.]: 3) that the article of with the predicate $\delta \epsilon \sigma \mu \omega s$ gives it undue prominence, and exalts the Apostle in a way which would be very unnatural to him,—'sum captivus ille Christi,' as Glass.,-and inconsistent with εί γε ήκούσατε, &c. following. (b) Erasm.-Schmidt, Hammond, Michael., Winer [and so E.V.] regard the sentence, broken at έθνῶν, as resumed at ch. iv. 1. Against this is the decisive consideration, that ch. iii. is no. parenthesis, but an integral and complete portion of the Epistle, finished moreover with the doxology vv. 20, 21, and altogether distinct in subject and character from ch. iv. (c) Ec. says [and so Estius and Grot.]: ανταπόδοσίς έστι τούτου χάριν, οໂον. τούτου χ. έμοι τῷ έλ. π. ϫΎ. έδόθ. κ.τ.λ. (νετ. 8) σκόπει δὲ ὅτι ἀρξά· μενος της περιόδου κατά το όρθον σχήμα έν τη αποδύσει έπλαγίωσε, σχηματίσας τ. ανταπόδοσιν πρός τόν περιβολών τύπον. But as Harl. remarks, this deprives τούτου χάριν of meaning : for it was not because they were built in, &c., that this grace was given to him: and, besides, thus the leading thought of the antapodosis in ver. 8 is clumsily forestalled in vv. 6,7. (d) The idea that ver. 13 resumes the sentence [Camerar., Cramer, al.] is refuted by the insufficiency of such a secondary sentiment as that in ver. 13 to justify the long parenthesis full of such solemn matter, as that vv. 2—12; and by the improbability that the Apostle would resume Toutou χάριν by διό, with τούτου χάριν occurring again in the next verse, and not rather have expressed this latter in that case by Raf. · being a word found only here [Harl., Stier], occurs in Eur., Iph. Taur. 1149, πολυποίκιλα φάρεα: in a fragment of Eubulus, Ath. xv. 7, p. 679, στέφανον πολυποίκιλον ανθέων, and twice in the Orbhie hymns, in this figurative sense: πολυποίκιλος τελετή, ν. 11; π. λόγος, lx. 4) wisdom of God (how is the wisdom of God πολυποίκιλος? It is all one in sublime unity of truth and purpose : but cannot be apprehended by finite minds in this its unity, and therefore is by Him variously portioned out to each finite race and finite capacity of individuals-so that the Church is a mirror of God's wisdom, -chromatic, so to speak, with the rainbow colours of that light which in itself is one and undivided. Perhaps there was in the Apostle's mind, when he chose this word, an allusion to the $\pi \tau \epsilon \rho v \gamma \epsilon s \pi \epsilon \rho t$ στερας περιηργυρωμέναι καί τα μετάφρενα αὐτῆς ἐν χλωρότητι χρυσίου, the adornment of the ransomed ehurch, in Ps. lxvii. 13. See Heb. i. 1; 1 Pet. iv. 10), 11.] according to (depends on γνωρισθήthis imparting of the knowledge of God's manifold wisdom was in accordance with, &c.) the (not, 'a:' after a preposition, especially when a limiting genitive, as here, follows, the omission of the article can hardly be regarded as affecting the sense) purpose of (the) ages (the genitive is apparently one of time, as when we say, 'it has been an opinion of years :' the duration all that time giving the alaves a kind of possession. If so, the sense is best given in English by 'eternal' as in E. V.), which $(\pi\rho\delta\theta\epsilon\sigma\iota\nu)$ He made (constituted, ordained. So Calv., Beza, Harl., Rück. On the other hand, Thdrt., Grot., Koppe, Olsh., Mey., Dc W., Stier, Ellic., would apply it to the carrying out, executing, in its historical realization. I can hardly think that so indefinite a word as $\pi o i \epsilon \omega$ would have been used to express so very definite an idea, now introduced for the first time, but believe the Apostle would have used some word like έπετέλεσεν. Further, we should thus rather expect the perfect; whereas the norist seems to refer back the act spoken of to the origination of the design. Both senses of $\pi \sigma i \epsilon \omega$ are abundantly justified : see, for our sense, Mark xv. 1; Isa. xxix. 15: for the other, ch. ii. 3; Matt. xxi. 31; John vi. 38; 1 Thess. v. 24 al.) in Jesus our Lord the Christ (or, 'in the Christ, [namely] Jesus our Lord.' The former is official, the latter personal. It was in his Christ that He made the purpose: and that Christ is Jesus our Lord. The words do not necessarily refer emoin- σev to the carrying out of the design. They bind together God's eternal purpose and our present state of access to Him by redemption in Christ, and so close the train of thought of the last eleven verses. by bringing us again home to the sense of our own blessedness in Christ. That he says, έν τ. χριστῷ 'Ιησ., does not, as Olsh. and Stier, imply that the act spoken of must necessarily be subsequent to the Incarnation : see ch. i. 3, 4 : it is the complex personal appellation of the Son of God, taken from, and familiar to us by His incarnation, but applied to Him in His præexistence also), 12.] in whom (for the connexion, see note on last verse : in whom, as their element and condition) we have our boldness (not 'freedom of speech' merely, nor boldness in prayer : παρρησία is used in a far wider sense than these, as will appear by the reff. : viz., that of the state of mind which gives liberty of speech, cheerful boldness, 'freimuthigfeit,' Palm and Rost.'s lex.) and [our] access (see note on ch. ii. 18 : here the intransitive sense is even more necessary, from the union with $\pi a \rho \delta \eta \sigma i a \nu$. We may confidently say, that so important an objective truth as our introduction to God by Christ would never have been thus coupled to a mere subjective quality in ourselves. Both must be subjective if one is: the second less purely so than the first-but both referring to our own feelings and privileges) in confidence (τουτέστι, μετά του θαρβείν, Chrys. connexion of πατήρ and πατριά here expressed. Had the sentence been 'the Creator, after whom every creature in heaven and earth is named,' all would be plain to the English reader. But we must not thus render; for it is not in virtue of God's creative power that the Apostle here prays to IIim, but in virtue of His adoptive love in Christ. It is best therefore to keep the simple sense of the words, and leave it to exegesis to convey the idea. $\pi \alpha \tau \rho_1 \dot{\alpha}$ is the family, or in a wider sense the gens, named so from its all having one $\pi a \tau \eta p$. Some [Est., Grot., Wetst., al.] have supposed St. Paul to allude to the rabbinical expression, 'the family of earth and the family of heaven :' but as Harl. observes, in this case he would but as frain observes, in this case he would have said π . $\dot{\eta} \pi a \tau \rho$. $\dot{\eta} \dot{\epsilon} \nu o \dot{\rho}$. κ . $\dot{\eta} \dot{\epsilon} \pi l \gamma$. Others [Vulg., Jer., Thdrt.,— δs $\dot{a}\lambda \eta \partial \omega s$ $\dot{\nu} \pi a \dot{\rho} \chi \epsilon$. $\pi a \tau \dot{\eta} \rho$, δs où $\pi a \rho'$ $\ddot{a}\lambda \lambda ou \tau o \dot{\nu} \tau o$ $\lambda a \beta \dot{\omega} \nu \quad \ddot{\epsilon} \chi \epsilon_1$, $\dot{a}\lambda \lambda' \ a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \delta s$ $\tau o \hat{c} s$ $\ddot{a}\lambda \lambda ois$ $\mu \epsilon \tau a \delta \dot{\epsilon} \delta \omega \kappa \epsilon \ \tau o \hat{\nu} \tau o$, — Corn.-a-lap.] have attempted to give $\pi a \tau \rho \mu \dot{\epsilon}$ the sense of $\alpha \epsilon \sigma \mu \dot{\epsilon} \sigma$, which it can containly work paternitas, which it can certainly never have. But it is not so easy to say, to what the reference is, or why the idea is here introduced. The former of these will be found very fully discussed in Stier, pp. 487-99: and the latter more shortly treated. The Apostle seems, regarding God as the Father of us His adopted children in Christ, to go forth into the fact, that He, in this His relation to us, is in reality the great original and prototype of the paternal relation, wherever found. And this he does, by observing that every πατριά, compaternity, body of persons, having a common father, is thus named [in Greek], from that father, -and so every earthly [and heavenly] family reflects in its name | and constitution] the being and sourceship of the great Father Himself. But then, what are marpial in heaven ? Some have treated the idea of paternity there as absurd: but is it not necessarily involved in any explanation of this passage? He Himself is the Father of spirits, Heb. xii. 9, the Father of lights, James i. 17 :-may there not be fathers in the heavenly Israel, as in the earthly? May not the holy Angels be bound up in spiritual $\pi a \tau \rho a i$, though they marry not nor are given in marriage ? Observe, we must not miss the sense of dromagerai, nor render, nor understand it, as meaning 'is constituted.' This is the fact, but not brought out here), 16.] that (see on iva after words of beseeching, &c., note, 1 Cor. xiv. 13. The purpose and purport of the prayer are blended in it) He may give you, according to the riches of His glory (specifies δώ, not what follows : give you, in full proportion to the abundance of His own glory-His own infinite perfections), to be strengthened with might (the dative has been taken in several ways: 1) adverbially, 'mightily,' as $\beta(a \in is oin(av \pi apiéran, Xen. Cyr. i. 2, 2, -to which Meyer ob$ jects, that thus δύναμις would be strength on the side of the bestower rather than of the receiver, whereas the contrast with έγκακείν (?) requires the converse. This hardly seems sufficient to disprove the sense: 2) dative of the form or shape in which the Kpat. was to take place (Harl., al.), as in χρήμασι δυνατοί είναι, Xen. Mem. ii. 7. 7,-to which Meyer replies that thus the $\kappa \rho a \tau a i \omega \vartheta \hat{\eta} \nu a i$ would only apply to one department of the spiritual life, instead of to all. But this again seems to me not valid : for ' might,' 'power,' is not one faculty, but a qualification of all faculties. Rather I should say that such a meaning would involve a tautology - 'strengthened in strength.' 3) the instrumental dative is maintained by Mey., De W., al., and this view seems the best : ' with [His] might,' imparted to you) by His Spirit (as the instiller and imparter of that might) into (not merely 'in,' but 'to and into,' as Ellie. : importing "the direction and destination of the prayed for gift of infused strength." But those cases are not parallel, as in every one of them the prefixed words earry especial emphasis, which here they cannot do. We must therefore regard the clause as an instance of the irregular nominative [see ch. iv. 2; Col. ii. 2, and reff. there] adopted to form an easy transition to that which follows. Meyer strongly objects to this, that the participles are perfect, not present, which would be thus logically required. But surely this last is a mistake. ('longitudo temporum est, latitudo locorum, altitudo gloriæ, profunditas discretionis'). Numerous other explanations, geometrical, architectural, and spiritual, may be seen in Corn.-a-lap., Pole's Synops., and Eadie. The latter, as also Bengel and Stier, see an allusion to the Church as the temple of God-Chandler and Macknight to the temple of Diana at Ephesus. Both are in the highest degree improbable. Nor can we quite say that the object of the sentence is the love of Christ [Calv., Mey., Ellicott, al.]: for that is introduced in a subordinate clause by and by [see on $\tau\epsilon$ below]: rather, with De W., that the genitive after these nouns is left indefinitethat you may be fully able to comprehend every dimension-scil., of all that God has revealed or done in and for us $[= \tau \delta \mu v \sigma$ τήριον τ. θεοῦ, Col. ii. 2]-though this is not a genitive to be supplied, but lying in the background entirely) and (re introduces not a parallel, but a subordinate elause. Of this Hartung, i. p. 105, gives many examples. Eur. Sce Kühner, ii. § 540. γνώναι ... yvώσεωs are chosen as a paradox, Yvworws being taken in the sense of 'mere,' 'bare' knowledge [ref.], and Yvwvai in the pregnant sense of that knowledge which is rooted and grounded in love, Phil. i. 9) Love of Christ (subjective genitive; Christ's Lore to us-see Rom. v. 5 note, and viii.

35-39-not 'our love to Christ.' Nor must we interpret with Harl. [and Olsh.], "io know the Love of Christ more and more as an unsearchable love." It is not this attribute of Christ's Love, but the Love itself, which he prays that they may know), that ye may be filled even to all the fulness of God $(\pi \hat{a}\nu \ \tau \delta \ \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu a \ \tau \eta s$ θεότητοs abides in Christ, Col. ii. 9. Christ then abiding in your hearts, ye, being raised up to the comprehension of the vastness of God's mercy in Him and of His Love, will be filled, even as God is full -each in your degree, but all to your utmost capacity, with divine wisdom and might and love. Such seems much the best rendering : and so Chrys. The other interpretation taking $\bar{\theta}$ εοῦ as a genitive of origin, and πλήρωμα for $\pi \lambda \hat{\eta} \theta os$, 'ut omnibus Dei donis abundetis,' Est., is not consistent with els [see above], nor with the force of the passage, which having risen in sublimity with every clause, would hardly end so tamely).

If the kai be omitted, beware of rendering 'in the Church which is in Christ Jesus, which would not only require the article [cf. As the text stands, we need not say that ev xp. 'Ing. is a second independent clause : it belongs to έν τη έκκ. as inclusive of it, though not as descriptive of ERRA.: 'in the Church and [thus] in Christ Jesus ') to all the generations of the age of the ages (probably as Grot., 'augendi causa duas locutiones Hebraicas miseuit Apostolus, quarum prior est ἀπὸ γενεῶς εἰς γενεάν, ζτιτίτ, Ps. x. 6, altera ἕως τοῦ αἰωνος עוֹלְמֵי עָר, Isa. xlv. 17.' Probably the account of the meaning is, that the age of ages [eternity] is conceived as containing ages, just as our 'age' coutains years : and then those ages are thought of as made up, like ours, of generations. Like the similar expression, alwves Twv alwvwv, it is used, by a transfer of what we know in time, to express, imperfectly, and indeed improperly, the idea of Eternity).

the $\epsilon \nu$ which follows) all (see on ch. i. 8) lowliness (read by all means Trench's essay on ταπεινοφροσύνη and πραότης, in his N. T. Synonymes [xlii.]. I can only extract one sentence here, to put the reader on his guard : "Chrys. is in fact bringing in pride again under the disguise of humility, when he characterizes it as a making of ourselves small when we are great [ταπεινοφροσύνη τοῦτό ἐστιν, όταν τις μέγας ών, έαυτον ταπεινοί: and he repeats this often : see Suicer, Thes. s. v.]: it is rather the esteeming ourselves small, inasmuch as we are so : the thinking truly, and because truly, lowlily of ourselves") and meekness (before God, accepting His dealings in humility, and before men, as God's instruments, 2 Sam. xvi. 11: resting therefore on $\tau a \pi \epsilon i \nu o \phi \rho$. as its foundation. See Trench, as above), with long-suffering (μακροθυμία consists in not taking swift vengeance, but leaving to an offender a place for repentance. From this, its proper meaning, it is easily further generalized to forbearance under all circumstances of provocation. Some, as Est., Harl., Olsh., al., join these words with areyoucros. But thus (1) we should have an emphatic tautology - for how could the avereofar be otherwise than μετά μακροθυμίας? and (2) the parallelism, μετά πάσης ταπ. κ. πραύτ., μετ. $\mu \alpha \kappa \rho$, - would be destroyed. Still less should we, with Thdrt., Ec., and Bengel, make all one sentence from $\mu\epsilon\tau a \pi a\sigma$. to $\dot{\alpha}\gamma\dot{\alpha}\pi$.: for thus [Mey.] we should lose the gradual transition from the general άξίως περιπ. τ. κλ. to the special \dot{a} νεχ. άλλ.),-forbearing (see reff. and Rom. ii. 4; on the nom. part., see ch. iii. 18) one another in love (it is very unnatural, as Lachm. and Olsh. have done, to join έν άγ. with σπουδάζοντες, making thereby an exceedingly cluinsy clause of the following), earnestly striving (reff.) to maintain the unity of the Spirit (that unity, in which God's Holy Spirit in the Church τούς γένει κ. τρόποις διαφόροις διεστηκότας évoî, as Chr.: not animorum inter vos conjunctionem, as Est., and so Ambr., Anselm, Erasm., Calv., al. The genitive is VOL. III.

in fact a possessive-the Spirit's unity, that unity which the Spirit brings about, ήν το πν. έδωκεν ήμιν, Thl.) in (united together by: within) the bond of peace (again Lachm. joins the qualifying clause to the following sentence : here again most unnaturally, both as regards what has preceded, and the general truths which are afterwards enounced : see below. The σύνδ. is εἰρήνη, not that which brings about cionun, 'vinculum quo pax retinetur, id est, amor. Beng. So Thl., Rück., Harl., Stier. Col. iii. 14, which is quoted to support this meaning, is not applicable, because love there is expressly named, whereas here it certainly would not occur to any reader, especially after $\epsilon \nu \, \dot{a} \gamma \dot{a} \pi \eta$ has just occurred. The genitive of apposition is the simplest - peace binds together the Church as a condition and symbol of that inner unity which is only wrought by the indwelling Spirit of 4.] Lachin., joining &v orôµa God). κ.τ.λ. as far as $\epsilon v \pi \hat{a} \sigma i v$, with what has gone before, makes these words hortatory: 'as one Body and one Spirit, even as, &c.' Certainly the reference to $\dot{\eta}$ κλήσιs ύμών seems to tell for this. But, on the other hand, it is very unlikely that the Apostle should thus use $\hat{\epsilon}\nu$ σωμα and έν πνεύμα, and then go on in the same strain, but with a different reference. I therefore prefer the common punctuation and rendering. (There is) (better than 'ye are,' which will not apply to the following parallel clauses. The assertion of the unity of the Church, and of our Lord in all His operations and ordinances, springs immediately out of the last exhortation, as following it up to its great primal ground in the verities of God. To suppose it conneeted by a $\gamma d\rho$ understood [Eadie] is to destroy the force and vividness with which the great central truth is at once introduced without preface) one Body (reff. : viz. 6. one God (the unity is here consummated in its central Object : 'hoe est præcipuum, quia inde manant reliqua omnia,' Calv. But it can hardly be doubted, that there is a further reference—to the universal Fathership of all men-which indeed the Church only inherits in its fulness, others having fallen out of it by sin,-but which nevertheless is just as absolutely true), who is over all (men, primarily; and from the following, - men only, in this place. He is over all, in his sovereignty as the FATHER), and through all (men: in the co-extensiveness of Redemption by the Son with the whole nature of man: sec on ver. 10 below, and ch. ii. 20, 21) and in all (men: by the indwelling of the Spirit, see ch. ii. 22. So that I cannot but recognize, in these three carefully chosen expressions, a distinct allusion again to the Three Persons of the blessed Trinity. -He who is glorified in the filling of all things by the Son :- He who is revealed by the witness of the indwelling Spirit. Many Commentators deny such a reference. Almost all agree in iv maouv representing the indwelling of the Spirit : the Sia marrow has been the principal stumbling-block: and is variously interpreted :- by some, of God's Providence, -τουτέστιν, δ προνοών nal διοικών, Chrys., al. : by others, of His pervading presence by the Spirit,- Spiritu sanctificationis diffusus est per omnia ccclesiæ membra,' Calv .: by others, to the creation by the Son, ' per quem omnia facta sunt ' [Aquin. in Ellic.] : but this seems to be a conversion of $\delta_{12} \pi \dot{a} \nu \tau \omega \nu$ into $\delta_{1}^{2} \sigma_{0}^{2}$ $\pi \acute{a}\nu \tau \epsilon s$, as indeed Olsh. expressly does, 'als Wertzeug, burch bas bie finb.' Irenæus, v. 18. 2, p. 315, gives the meaning thus, adopting the Trinitarian reference, but taking the $\pi \dot{a} \nu \tau \omega \nu$ both times as neuter, and reading ev maoiv huiv : 'super omnia quidem Pater, et ipse est caput Christi: per omnia autem verbum, et ipse est caput ecclesiæ : in omnibus autem nobis Spiritus, et ipse est aqua viva,' &c.). 7.] But (the contrast is between $iv \pi \hat{a} \sigma iv$ and iviέκάστ φ – the general, and the particular. And the connexion is-as a motive to keep the unity of the Spirit-'none is overlooked :-each has his part in the distribution of the gifts of the One Spirit, which part he is bound to use for the well-being of the whole') to each one of us was given (by Christ, at the time of His exaltation-when He bestowed gifts on men) [the] grace (which was then bestowed : the unspeakable gift,-or, if the art. be omitted, grace, absolutely, -- was distributed to each kara &c.) according to the measure of (subjective genitive : the amount of: cf. With the question as to the occasion and intent of that Psalm, we are not here concerned. It is a song of triumph, as ver. 1 [cf. Num. x. 35] shews, at some bringing up of the ark to the hill of Zion. It is therefore a Messianic Psalm. Every part of that ark, every stone of that hill, was full of spiritual meaning. Every note struck on the lyres of the sweet singers of Israel, is but part of a chord, deep and world-wide, sounding from the golden harps of redemption. The partial triumphs of David and Solomon only prefigured as in a prophetic mirror the universal and eternal triumph of the In-carnate Son of God. Those who do not understand this, have yet their first lesson in the O. T. to learn. With this caution let us approach the difficulties of the citation in detail) He ascended up on high (viz. Christ, at His Ascension : not ' having ascended :' the aorist participle denotes an action not preceding, but parallel to, that expressed in the finite verb which it accompanies : see Bernhardy, Synt. p. 383. The ascending in the Psalm is that of God, whose presence was symbolized by the ark, The Apostle changes the words to Zion. from the 2nd person to the 3rd; the address asserting a fact, which fact he cites), he led captive a captivity (i. e. ever it was: in the interpretation, they were God's enemies, Satan and his hosts, as Chr., ποίαν αἰχμαλωσίαν φησί; την τοῦ διαβόλου, αἰχμάλωτον τὸν τύραννον έλαβε, τόν διάβολον και τόν θάνατον και την άραν και την άμαρτίαν), he gave gifts to mankind (Heb.: לַקַחָּת מַהַנוֹת בַּאַדָם, - LXX, έλαβες δόματα έν ανθρώπψ [-ποις F]. The original meaning is obscure. There seems to be no necessity to argue for a sense of člaßes—' thou receivedst in order to give ;' as the qualifying έν άνθρώποις will shew for what purpose, in what capacity, the receipt took place. But certainly such a sense of ng? seems to be substantiated ; see Eadie's note here, and his examples, viz. Gen. xv. 9; xviii. 5 [where the sense is very marked, E. V. 'I will fetch '],-xxvii. 13 [ib. fetch me them '], xlii. 16,-Exod. xxvii. 20 ['that they bring thee'],-1 Kings xvii. 10 ['fetch me,' λαβè δή μοι], al. Then, what is בָּאָרָם ? First, בָאָרָם is clearly used in a collective sense: we have Jer. xxxii. 20, שִׁרָאָל וְאָרָם, ' Israel and the rest of mankind,' see also Isa. xliii. 4 al. In Prov. xxiii. 28, we have נאָרָם used for 'inter homines,' which is evidently its simplest meaning. If then we render here, 'hast taken gifts among men,' hast, as a victor, surrounded by thy victorious hosts, brought gifts home, spoils of the enemy,the result of such reception of gifts would be naturally stated as the distribution of them among such hosts, and the people, as indeed ver. 12 of the Psalm has already stated. And so the Chaldee paraphrast [and Syr. and Arabic vss. : but their testimony, as Christian, is little worth] understood the words, interpreting the passage of Moses [which does not invalidate his testimony: against Harl.]: 'thou hast given gifts to the sons of men.' The literature of the passage may be seen in De W. and Meyer : and more at length in Stier, Eadie, and Harless. To give even a synopsis of it here would far exceed our limits). 9.] Further explanation of this text. But that He ascended (to dv. does not here mean, 'the word' avisn.

which does not occur in the text cited), what is it (does it imply) except that he also (as well) descended to the lower parts of the earth (the argument seems to be this : the Ascension here spoken of was not a first exaltation, but a return to heaven of one who dwelt in heaven-oὐδεls άναβέβηκεν είς τόν ούρανόν, εί μή ό έκ τοῦ ούρανοῦ καταβάς, δ υίδς τ. ἀνθρώπου δ ών έν τ $\hat{\varphi}$ οὐραν $\hat{\varphi}$, John iii. 13, which is in fact the key to these verses. The ascent implied a previous descent. This is the leading thought. But it is doubted how far the words κατώτερα μέρη της γης carry that descent, whether to earth merely, so that $\tau \hat{\eta} s \gamma \hat{\eta} s$ is the genitive of apposition,—or to Hades, so that it is genitive of possession. Usage will not determine-for 1) it is uncertain whether the Apostle meant any allusion to the corresponding Hebrew expression: 2) that expression is used both for Hades, Ps. lxiii. 9, and for earth [θεμέλια, LXX], Isa. xliv. 23 [and for the womb, Ps. exxxix. 15]. Nor can it be said [as Harl., Mey.] that the descent into hell would be irrelevant here-or that our Lord ascended not from Hades but from the earth : for, the fact of descent being the primary thought, we have only to ask as above, how far that descent is carried in the Apostle's mind. The greater the descent, the greater the ascent: and if the $ai\chi\mu a\lambda\omega\sigma ia$ consisted of Satan and his powers, the warfare in which they were taken captive would most naturally be contemplated in all its extent, as reaching to their habitation itself: -- 'this ascent, what does it imply but a desceut, and that even to the lower parts of the earth from which the spoils of victory were fetched ?' And this meaning seems to be upheld by the "va πληρώτη τα πάντα which follows, as well as by the contrast furnished by unepávo This interpretaπάντων των ούρανών. tion is upheld by most of the ancients, Iren., Tert., Jer., Pelag., Ambrst. ; also by Erasm., Est., Calov., Bengel, Rück., Olsh., Stier, Baur [uses it as a proof of the gnostic origin of the Epistle], Ellicott, al. : that of the Incarnation mercly, descent on earth, Heb. vii. 26, ύψηλότερος των ουρανών γενόμενος: and ib. iv. 14, διεληλυθότα τούς ούρανούς. It is natural that one who, like St. Paul, had been brought up in the Jewish habits of thought, should still use their methods of speaking, according to which the heaven is expressed in the plural, 'the heavens.' And from such an usage, $\pi d\nu \tau \epsilon s$ of obpavol would naturally flow. See, on the idea of a threefold, or sevenfold division of the heavens, the note on 2 Cor. xii. 2. Ellicott quotes from Bishop Pearson,--- 'whatsoever heaven is higher than all the rest which are called heavens, into that place did he ascend.' Notice the subjunctive after the aorist participle, giving the present and enduring sense to the verb : used, when "res ita comparata est, ut actione præterita tamen eventus nondum expletus sit, sed etiam nunc durct : Eur. Med. 215, Κορίνθιαι γυναίκες, έξηλθον δόμων. μή μοί τι μέμφησθ." Klotz, Devar. ii. 618), that He may fill (not as Anselm, al., 'fulfil') all things (the whole universe : see ch. i. 23, note : with His presence, His sovereignty, His working by the Spirit : not, with His glorified Body, as some have thought. "Christ is perfect God, and perfeet and glorified man : as the former lle is present every where, as the latter He can be present any where." Ellicott).

11.] Resumption of the subject—the diversity of gifts, all bestowed by Him, as a motive to unity. And HE (emphatic; 'it is He, that') gave (not for $\ell\theta\epsilon\tau\sigma$, any more than in ch. i. 22:—the gifts which He gave to His Church are now enumerated. "The idea is, that the men who filled the office, no less than the office itself, were a divine gift." Eadie) some as Apostles (see 1 Cor. xii. 28, and note; and a good enumeration of the essentials of an Apostle, in Eadic's note here), some as prophets (see on 1 Cor. sii. 10: and ef. eh. ii. 20; iii. 5, notes), some as evangelists (not in the narrower sense of the word, writers of gospels, but in the wider sense, of itinerant preachers, usually sent on a special mission : of μη περιϊόντες πανταχοῦ, ἀλλ' εὐαγγελιζόμενοι μόνον, ὡς Πρίσκιλλα κ. ᾿Ακύλας. Chr. See note on Acts xxi. 8), some as pastors and teachers (from these latter not being distinguished from the pastors by the $\tau o \delta s \delta \epsilon$, it would seem that the two offices were held by the same persons. The figure in $\pi_{01\mu}$ is the same persons, would imply that they were entrusted with some special flock, which they tended, καθήμενοι και περί ένα τόπον ήσχολημένοι, as Chr.; and then the διδασκαλία would necessarily form a chief part of their work. If this view be correct, this last class includes all the stationary officers of particular Churches), in order to (ultimate aim of these offices, see below) the perfecting of the saints,-for (immediate object, see below) (the) work of (the) ministry (of διάκονοι in God's Church. The articles give completeness in English, but do not affect the sense),-for building up of the body of Christ (the relation of these three clauses has been disputed. Chr., al., regard them as parallel : ἕκαστος οἰκοδομεῖ, ἕκαστος καταρτίζει, εκαστος διακονεί: but this is to confound the distinct prepositions, $\pi \rho \delta s$ and $\epsilon i s$, after the unsupported notion that St. Paul uses prepositions almost indifferently. Others, as De W., regard $\epsilon i \dots \epsilon i \dots \pi \rho \delta \dots$ and thus are obliged to give to Siakovía a wider sense [genus omnium functionum in ecclesia] than it will bear. The best way certainly seems to be, with Mey. and Ellic., to regard $\pi p \delta s$ as the ultimate end, cis as the immediate use, as in Rom. xv. 2, ἕκαστος ήμῶν τῷ πλησίον ἀρεσκέτω εis τό άγαθον προς οίκαδομήν), until (marks the duration of the offices of the ministry) we (being thus κατηρτισμένοι by virtue of the Epyov Siakovias and the oikoboury) arrive (see reff.: no sense of 'meeting,' but simply of 'attaining.' Ellicott well remarks, that we must be careful of applying to later Greck the canons of the grammarians respecting the omission of av, as giving an air of less uncertainty to subjunctives in such constructions as this; and he adds, "the use of the subjunctive [the mood of conditioned but objective possibility], not future [as Chrys.], shews that the Karavrav is represented, not only as the eventual, but as the expected and contemplated result of the ¿δωκεν"), all of us (Christians, Jews as well as Gentiles : first person, because he himself was among the number. The article brings out the $\pi d\nu \tau \epsilon s$, as belonging to one class), at the unity of the faith (" How so? have not all Christians the same faith ? No doubt they have, as regards its substance, but not as regards clearness and purity; because the object of faith may be diversely known, and knowledge has ever such a powerful influence on faith. Therefore he adds to this unity of faith $\kappa \alpha 1 \tau \eta s \epsilon \pi i$ γνώσεωs κ.τ.λ. : true and full unity of faith is then found, when all thoroughly know Christ, the object of faith, alike, and that in His highest dignity as the Son of God." De Wette) and of the knowledge (further result of the faith, eh. iii. 17, 19; 2 Pet. i. 5) of the Son of God (this objective genitive belongs to both της πίστεως and $\tau \hat{\eta} s \ \epsilon \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma \epsilon \omega s$), at a perfect man (an awkwardness is given by the coupling of an abstract [els évornra] to a concrete [eis avona $\tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \iota o \nu$]. The singular not only denotes unity [Beza], but refers to the summation of us all in the one perfect Man Christ Jesus. The maturity of the arho rédeios is contrasted with the vn- $\pi i \delta \tau \eta s$ which follows. Among curiositics of exegesis may be adduced that which Aug. mentions, de Civ. Dei xxii. 17, vol. vii. p. 778 : "Nonnulli, propter hoc quod dictum est, Eph. iv. 13, nec in sexu fæminco resurrecturas forminas credunt, sed in virili onnes aiunt ") to the measure of the stature (or, ' age !' this is doubtful. The similitude in avopa téleiov seems to be derived from age: that in ver. 16, from stature. The fact seems to be, that hakin is a comprehensive word, including both ideas-answering to the German 'Erwachsenheit,' but having no corresponding word in our language. We have μέτρον ήβηs in Hom. Il. λ. 225. Od. λ. 317, σ. 217. The expression itself occurs in Lucian, Imag. 7 [Wetst.], τῆς ἡλικίας δὲ τὸ μέτρον, ἡλίκον άν γένοιτο: κατά την έν Κνίδω έκείνην μάλιστα . . . μεμετρήσθω,-and Philostratus, vit. Sophist. p. 543, τδ δὲ μέτρον τηs ήλικίας ταις μέν άλλαις επιστήμαις γήρως ἀρχή. Clearly, none of these passages settles the question. In Homer, the meaning is 'the measure of youth,'-the size and ripeness of youth : in Lucian, as decidedly 'the measure of the stature,' as in Philostr., 'the ripeness of manly age.' The balance must here be inclined by the prevalence of the image of growth and extension, which can hardly be denied as pervading the passage) of the fulness of Christ (see note on ch. i. 23; iii. 19. χρ. is a genitive subjective :- the fulness which Christ has : 'Christ's fulness.' Cf. Gal. iv. 19), - that (apparently another, and subordinate, aim of the bestowal of gifts on the church is here adduced. For we cannot go forward from the finished growth of ver.13, and say that its object is Iva µnk. @µev $\nu\eta\pi_{i0i}$, but must go back again to the growth itself and its purpose; that purpose being mainly the terminal one of ver. 13, and subordinately the intermediate one of our ver. 14. The verb has the widest mean-ing of being $\lambda \lambda \eta \theta \eta s$ —and [as Stier remarks] not without a certain sense of effort, 'sectari veritatem.' The Vulg. gives it well, but perhaps with too ex-clusively practical a bearing, 'veritatem facientes :' Bengel, 'verantes :' the old English versions, 'folowe the truth,' which gives too much the objective sense to truth. It is almost impossible to express it satisfactorily in Englisb. I have somewhat modified this last rendering, re-storing the general sense of 'truth.' The objection to 'followers of truth' is that. it may be mistaken for 'searchers after truth⁷—but I can find no expression which does not lic open to equal objection) in love (must be joined with αληθεύοντες, not with αυξήσωμεν. The genitive, as $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ τῆς ἁμαρτίας, σκεύη τῆς λειτουργίας: "a kind of genitive definitivus, by which the predominant use, purpose, or destination of the $\dot{a}\phi\eta$ is specified and characterized." Ellic.),-according to vital working in the measure of each individual part,-carries on (remark the intensive middle $\pi oicitai$, denoting that the autors is not carried on ab extra, but by funetional energy within the body itself) the growth of the body (I thus render, preferring to join as well διà π. άφ. τ. έπιχ. as κατ' έν. κ.τ.λ. with τ. αύξ. ποιείται rather than with the preceding participles, 1) to avoid the very long awkward elause encumbered with qualifications, $\pi \tilde{a} \nu$ τό σώμα σ. κ. σ. διά πασ. άφ. της έπιχ. κατ' ἐνέργ. ἐν μέτρ. ἐν. ἐκ. μέρους : 2) because the repetition of τοῦ σώματοs is much more natural in a cumbrous apodosis, than in a simple apodosis after a cumbrous protasis : 3) for perspicuity : the whole instrumentality and modality here described belonging to the growth [in xop., ένέργ., ἐν μέτρφ], and not merely to the compaction of the hody. τοῦ σώματος is repeated, rather than έαυτοῦ used, perhaps for solemnity, perhaps [which is more likely] to call back the attention to the subject $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu \alpha$ after so long a description of its means and measure of growth) for the building up of itself in love (Meyer would join έν άγ. with τ. αύξ. τ . $\sigma \omega \mu$. πo_i . as suiting better ver. 15. The fervid style of St. Paul will never divide sharply into separate logical portions-cach runs into and overlaps the other) I say (see Rom. xii. 3. There is no need to understand $\delta \epsilon i \nu$ before the infinitive which follows. The μηκ. ύμ. περιπα- $\tau\epsilon\hat{\imath}\nu$ is the object of $\lambda\epsilon\gamma\omega$ expressed in the infinitive, just as regularly as in βούλομαί σε λέγειν. Perhaps from this not being seen, $\lambda o_i \pi a$ was inserted) walk in (element) vanity (see Rom. i. 21: they ἐματαιώθησαν in their downward course from God. But we must not restrict the word to idolatry: it betokens the waste of the whole rational powers on worthless objects. See also on Rom. viii. 20) of their mind (their rational part), being (beware of referring örtes to $\dot{a}\pi\eta\lambda\lambda$. with Eadie. Besides its breaking the force of the sentence, I doubt if such an arrangement is ever found) darkened (see again Rom. i. 21, and the contrast brought out 1 Thess. v. 4, 5, and ch. v. 8) in (the dative gives the sphere or element in which. The difference between it and the accusative of reference [την διάνοιαν ἐσκοτισμένους, Jos. T. never has this meaning [see the two clearly distinguished in Gal. v. 25], but always life, as opposed to death. Thus 'the life of God' will mean, as Beza beautifully says, 'vita illa qua Deus vivit in suis :' for, as Beng., vita spiritalis accenditur in credentibus ex ipsa Dei vita.' Stier makes an important remark : "The Apostle is here treating, not so much of the life of God in Christ which is regenerated in believers, as of the original state of man, when God was his Life and Light, before the irruption of darkness into human nature") on account of the ignorance (of God: see ref. 1 Pet.) which is in them (not, by nature : ef. Rom. i. 21-28 : they did not choose to retain God in their knowledge, and this loss of the knowledge of Him alienated them from the divine Life), on account of (second clause, subordinate to $\dot{a}\pi\eta\lambda\lambda$: not subordinate to and rendering a reason for $\tau \eta \nu$ $\delta \gamma \nu$. τ . obsar, as Meyer, which would be awkward, and less like St. Paul) the hardening (' $\pi \omega \rho \omega \sigma \iota s$ est obduratio, callus. Him that ye heard (if ye really heard at your conversion the voice of the Shepherd Himself calling you as his sheep - τὰ πρόβατα τὰ έμὰ τῆς φωνῆς μου ακούει, John x. 27, see also John v. 25) and in Him that ye were taught (if it was in vital union with Him, as members of Him, that ye after your conversion received my teaching. Both these clauses are contained in εμάθετε τον χρ.,-the first hearing of the voice of the Son of God, and growing in the knowledge of Him when awakened from spiritual death), as is truth in Jesus (the rendering and connexion of this clause have been much disputed. I will remark, 1) that it seems by its form to be subordinate to iv avro έδιδάχθητε, and the καθώs to express the quality of the $\delta_i \delta_{\alpha \chi} \dot{\eta} : 2$) that in this case we have $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau i \nu \dot{\alpha} \dot{\lambda} \dot{\eta} \theta \epsilon_i a \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \ddot{\psi}$ in σ . answering to $\dot{\epsilon} \nu a \dot{\nu} \tau \ddot{\psi} \dot{\epsilon} \delta_i \delta \dot{\alpha} \chi \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$. 3) to take the casier members first, $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \dot{\psi}$ 'ingoou is a closer personal specification of έν αύτω-in Jesus-that one name recalling their union in both in His Person, and, which is important here, in His example also: 4) καθώς έστιν άλήθεια expands ¿διδάχθητε-if the nature of the teaching which you received was according to that which is truth [in Him]. So that the meaning will amount to thisif ye were taught in Him according to that which is truth in Jesus ;- if you received into yourselves, when you listened to the teaching of the Gospel, that which is true [respecting you-and Him] in your union with and life in Jesus, the Son of God manifest in the flesh. See Ellicott's note), 22.] namely (the infinitive depends on έδιδάχθητε [not on λέγω, ver. 17, as Bengel and Stier], and carries therefore [not in itself, but as thus dependent] an imperative force-see on ver. 17) that ye put off (cf. ενδύσασθαι ver. 24: aorist, because the act of putting off is one and decisive, so also of evourandas below: but avareovorbai, because the renewal is a gradual process. Beware of rendering, with Eadie and Peile, 'that ye have put off; which is inconsistent with the context [cf. ver. 25], and not justified by buas being expressed. This latter is done merely to resume the subject after the parenthetical ver. 21), as regards your former conversation (explains the reference of aπoθéσθai: q. d. Beware of the unsatisfactory hendiadys, 'deceitful lusts,' E. V., which destroys the whole force and beauty of the contrast below to δσιότητι της αληθείas), 23.] and undergo renewal (both should be marked,-the gradual process implied in the present, and the passive character of the verb. Of this latter there can be no doubt : the middle avaveovorear having always an active force : so we have άνανεοῦσθαι τ. συμμαχίαν, Polyb. xxiii. 1. 5: see many more examples in the Lex. Polybianum, and in Harl.'s note here : and we have even, in Antonin. iv. 3 [Harl.], avavéou σεαυτόν. Stier's arguments in favour of the middle sense seem to me to be misplaced. ¿vôúgageat is middle, but that refers to a direct definite reflexive act; whereas the process here insisted on is one carried on by the Spirit of God, not by themselves. And it is not to the purpose to ask, as Stier does, 'How can the Apostle say and testify by way of exhortation, that they should be renewed as they ought to walk?' for we have perpetually this seeming paradox, of God's work encouraged or checked by man's cooperation or counteraction. The distinction between avakaivoois and avavéoois is not [as Olsh.] beside the purpose here, but important. The reference in kaivós [novus] to the objective is prominent, in véos [recens] to the subjective. The kaivós is used as opposed to the former self; the véos, as regards the new nature and growth in it : cf. Col. iii. 10, The véor, τον ανακαινούμενον. Thus in Rom. xii. 2 it would not be said μεταμορφ. τη άναveworet r. voos, because it is not by nor in the avavéwois, but by or in the ava*kaívwois*, that the $\mu\epsilon\tau a\mu op\phi$. takes place. Whereas here, where a process of grow-ing up in the state of àvakaívwous is in question, avaveovotal is properly used. άνακαινοῦσθαι is more ' renewal from the age of the old man;' avaveourfal, 're-newal in the youth of the new man.' See Tittmann, Syn. p. 60 ff.) by (though [see more below] the expression To Tro voos bu. stands contrasted with ev uaταιότητι τοῦ vods αὐτῶν, ver. 17, yet the omission of ev here serves to mark that not merely the sphere in which, but the agency by which, is now adduced) the Spirit of your (emphatic) mind (the expression is unusual, and can only be understood by reference to the N.T. meaning of *πνε*υμα, as applied to men. First, it is clearly here not exclusively nor properly 'the Holy Spirit of God,' because it is called $\tau \delta \pi \nu$. $\tau o \hat{\nu} v o \hat{\delta} \hat{\nu} \hat{\mu} \hat{\omega} \nu$. It is a πνεύμα, in some sense belonging to, not merely indwelling in, upcis. The fact is, that in the N. T. the $\pi \nu \in \partial \mu a$ of man is only then used 'sensu proprio,' as worthy of its place and governing functions, when it is one Spirit with the Lord. We read of no πνεύμα παλαιόν: the πνευματικός is necessarily a man dwelt in by the Spirit of God : the $\psi v \chi i \kappa \delta s$ is the 'animal' man led by the $\psi v \chi \eta$, and $\pi v \epsilon \hat{v} \mu a \mu \eta \xi \chi \omega v$, Jude 19. Thus then the disciples of Christ are avaveoúµevoi, undergoing a process of renewal in the life of God, by the agency of the wrevua of their minds, the restored and divinely-informed leading principle of their vous, just as the children of the world are walking in the µaraiorns of their minds. vous, see above, ver. 17), 24.] and put on (see on amodéodas above) the new man (as opposed to $\pi a \lambda a i \delta \nu$; not meaning Christ, any further than as He is its great Head and prototype, see on κτισθ.), which was created (mark the aorist, as historical fact, once for all, in Christ. In each individual case, it is not created again, but put on : cf. Rom. xiii. 14) after God (= κατ' εἰκόνα τοῦ κτίσαντος αὐτόν, Col. iii. 10: also κατ' εἰκόνα θεοῦ ἐποίησεν αὐτόν, Gen. i. 27 : so 1 Pet. i. 15, κατά τόν καλέσαντα ύμας άγιον καί aυτοι άγιοι κ.τ.λ. The doctrine of the restoration to us of the divine image in Christ, as here implied, is not to be overlooked. Müller, 'Lehre von der Sünde,' ii. p. 485 ff., denies any allusion to it here, but on insufficient grounds, as indeed he himself virtually allows. Not the bare fact of Gen. i. 27, but the great truth which that fact represents, is alluded to. The image of God in Christ is a far more glorious thing than Adam ever had, or could have had : but still the Kar' eikova $\theta \epsilon o \hat{\nu}$, = $\kappa a \tau \dot{a} \ \theta \epsilon \delta \nu$, is true of both : and, as Müller himself says, 'jenes ift crft die wahrhafte Erfullung von diefem') in (element, or sphere, of the character of the new man) righteousness and holiness of truth (again, beware of 'true holiness,' E. V.-as destroying the whole antithesis and force of the words. The genitive, too, belongs to both substantives. ή άλήθεια, God's essence, John iii. 33; Rom. i. 25; iii. 7; xv. 8, opposed to $\dot{\eta}$ απάτη above. "δικαιοσύνη and δσιότης occur together, but in contrary order, in ref. Luke, and Wisd. ix. 3. The adjeetives and adverbs are connected, 1 Thess. ii. 10 : Tit. i. 8. δικαιοσύνη betokens a just relation among the powers of the soul within, and towards men and duties without. But δσιότηs, as the Heb. הַמִים [Prov. ii. 21. Amos v. 10], betokens the integrity of the spiritual life, and the piety towards God of which that is the condition. Hence both expressions together complete the idea of moral perfection [Matt. v. 48]. As here the ethical side of the divine image is brought out, Col. iii. 10 brings out the intellectual. The new birth alone leads to eniqueous: all knowledge which proceeds not from renewal of heart, is but outward appearance: and of this kind was that among the false Colossian teachers. On the other hand, in Wisd. ii. 23 [δ θεός έκτισεν τόν άνθρωπον έπ' άφθαρσία, καί εἰκόνα της ίδίας ίδιότητος (ἀϊδιότ. F. [not A.]) $\epsilon \pi o i \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \delta \nu$] the physical side of the divine image is brought out." Olsh. Sticr suggests that there is perhaps a slight contrast in $\delta_{i\kappa\alpha_i\sigma\sigma'\nu\eta}$ to $\pi\lambda\epsilon_{i\sigma}$.

'We allow ourselves the remark, hoping it may not be over-refining, that the Apostle instead of $\pi\rho\delta s$ - $\tau\delta\nu$ $\pi\lambda\eta\sigma\delta\nu$ with the LXX, prefers following the Hebrew text and writing $\mu\epsilon\tau \dot{a}$, to express by anticipation our inner connexion with one another as $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\eta\lambda\omega\nu$ $\mu\epsilon\lambda\eta$.' Stier): for we are members of one another (Rom. xii. 5. The άλλήλων brings out the relation between man and man more strongly than if he had said, of one body : at the same time it serves to remind them that all mutual duties of Christians are grounded on their union to and in Christ, and not on mere ethical considerations). 26.] Be ye angry and sin not (citation: see ref. Psa.: and that from the LXX, not from the Hebrew, which [see Hupfeld on the Psalms in loc.] means "tremble ['stand in awe,' E.V.] and sin not.' The first imperative, although jussive, is so in a weaker degree than the other : it is rather assumptive, than permissive. 'Be angry [if it must be so] :' as if he had said, 1 Cor. vii. 31, χρασθε τῷ κόσμφ τούτφ [for that must be], καὶ μἡ καταχρῶσθε. As Chr., εἴ τις ἐμπέσοι ποτὲ εἰς τὸ πάθος, ἀλλὰ μἡ εἰς τοσοῦτον. Thus Tholuck's question, Bergpred., p. 186, is answered :-- " If Paul speaks of culpable anger, how can he distinguish sinning from being angry? If of allowable anger, how can he expect not to retain it over the night ?"-the answer being, that he speaks of anger which is an infirmity, but by being cherished, may become a sin): let the sun not set upon (so Thue. has, νὺξ ἐπεγένετο τῷ ἔργψ) your irritation (i.e. set to your wrath with a brother [in every case : the omission of the art. gives the sense 'upon any $\pi a \rho o \rho \gamma \sigma \mu \delta s'$] a speedy limit, and indeed that one which nature prescribes-the solemn scason when you part from that brother to meet again perhaps in eternity. The Commentators quote from Plut. de am. frat., p. 488 B, a custom of the Pythagoreans, είποτε προsaχθειεν είς λοιδορίας ύπ' όργης, πρίν ή τόν ήλιου δυναι, τάς δεξιας εμβάλλοντες αλλήλοις κ. ασπασάμενοι διελύοντο. παροργισμός is a late word, apparently not found beyond the N. On the genitive, see Winer, § 30. 2,-so ήμέρα δργήs, Rom. ii. 5, &c. So far from the doctrine of final perseverance, for which Eadie more sharply than reasonably contends, being involved here, there could hardly be a plainer denial of it by implication. V. 1, 2.] These verses are best taken as transitional, -the inference from the exhortation which has immediately preceded, and introduction to the dehortatory passage which follows. Certainly Stier scens right in viewing the περιπατείτε as resuming περι- $\pi a \tau \hat{\eta} \sigma a i$ ch. iv. 1, and indicating a beginning, rather than a close, of a paragraph. Be ye (viveofe, see on last verse) therefore (seeing that God forgave you in Christ, see next verse) imitators of God (viz. in walking in love, see below), as children beloved (see next verse : and 1 John iv. 19, ήμεις άγαπῶμεν, ὅτι αὐτὸς πρῶτος ήγά- $\pi\eta\sigma\epsilon\nu$ $\dot{\eta}\mu\hat{a}s$) and (shew it by this, that ye) walk in love, as Christ also (this comes even nearer : from the love of the Father who gave His Son, to that of the Son, the Personal manifestation of that love in our humanity) loved (not, ' hath loved' as E. V.) you (the buas ... buw is more a personal appeal : the $\eta\mu\hat{a}s\ldots$ $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ of the rec. is a general one, deduced from the universal relation of us all to Christ), and gave up Himself (absol. : not to be joined with $\tau \hat{\varphi} \ \theta \epsilon \hat{\varphi}$) for you (see note on Gal. iii. 13 :- ' on your behalf :' in fact, but not necessarily here implied, 'in your stead') an offering and a sacrifice (beware of $\pi \rho o s \phi$. κ . $\theta v \sigma$. = θυσίαν προsφερομένην [Conyb.]: it is our duty, in rendering, to preserve the terms coupled, even though we may not be able precisely to say wherein they differ. The ordinary distinction, that $\pi \rho os \phi o \rho \dot{\alpha}$ is an unbloody offering, $\theta v \sigma i \alpha$ a slain victim, cannot be maintained, see Heb. x. 5, 18; xi. 4. I believe the nearest approach to the truth will be made by regarding $\pi \rho os \phi$.

as the more general word, including all kinds of offering,-Ovoía as the more special one, usually involving the death of a victim. The great prominent idea here is the one sacrifice, which the Son of God made of Himself in his redeeming Love, in our nature-bringing it, in Himself, near to God-offering Himself as our representative Head : whether in perfect righteousness of life, or in sacrifice, properly so called, at his Death) to God (to be joined, as a dat. commodi, with mp. K. Ovor. : not with παρέδωκεν [ns De W. and Mey.], from which it is too far removed : still less [as Stier, who would apply the clause $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ $\bar{\theta}$ $\epsilon v \omega \delta [as, to us]$ with what follows) for an odour of sweet smell (the question so much discussed, whether these words can apply to a sin-offering strictly so called, is an irrelevant one here. It is not [see above] the death of Christ which is treated of, but the whole process of His redeeming Love. His death lies in the background as one, and the chief, of the acknowledged facts of that process: but it does not give the character to what is here predicated of Him. The allusion primarily is to ref. Gen., where after Noah had brought to God a sacrifice of every clean beast and hird, ωσφράνθη κύριος δ θεδς όσμην edubias,-and the promise followed, that He would no more destroy the earth for man's sake). 3-21.] Dehortation (for the most part) from works unbecoming the holiness of the life of children and imitators of God. 3.] But (not transitional merely: there is a contrast brought out by the very mention of mopveig after what has just been said) fornication and all impurity or (see ch. iv. 19 note) covetousness (ib.), let it not be even named ('ne nomen quidem audiatur.' Wetst. quotes from Antigonus de Mirabilibus, 126, τὰ μεγάλα κ. ἐπανεστηκότα μωρολογίας κ. άδολεσχίας. Trench well maintains, Syn. § 34, that in Christian ethics, it is more than mere 'random talk :' it is that talk of fools, which is folly and sin together : including not merely the $\pi \hat{a} \nu$ δήμα ἀργόν of our Lord [Matt. xii. 36], but in good part also the $\pi \hat{a}s \lambda \delta \gamma \sigma s \sigma a \pi \rho \delta s$ of his Apostle [Eph. iv. 29]) or (disjunctive, marking oll εύτραπελία as πλεονεξία before) jesting (much interest attaches to this word, which will be found well discussed in Trench, as above. It had at first a good signification : Aristot. Eth. Nic. iv. 8, deals with the ευτράπελος-of έμμελώς παίζοντες εύτράπελοι προςαγοpevovrai, - and describes him as the mean between the βωμολόχοs and μγροικοs. So too Plato, Rep. viii. p. 563 A,-oi de γέροντες ξυγκαθιέντες τοις νέοις εύτμαπελίας τε κ. χαριεντισμοῦ ἐμπίπλανται, . . ίνα δη μη δοκώσιν ἀηδεῖs εἶναι μηδὲ δεσποτικοί. But Trench remarks that there were indications of a bad sense of the word : e. g. Pind. Pyth. i. 178,-μη δο- $\lambda \omega \theta \eta s$, $\hat{\omega}$ $\phi (\lambda \epsilon$, κέρδεσιν εὐτραπέλοιs, where he quotes from Dissen—' primum est de facilitate in motu, tum ad mores transfertur.et indicat hominem temporibus inservientem, diciturque tum de sermone urbano, lepido, faceto, imprimis cum levitatis et assentationis, simulationis notione.' I may add, as even more apposite here, Pyth. iv. 185, ούτε έργον ούτ' έπος εύτράπελον κείνοισιν είπών. Aristotle himself, Rhet. ii. 12 end, defines it as $\pi \epsilon \pi a \epsilon$ δευμένη ΰβρις. "The profligate old man in the 'miles gloriosus' of Plautus, iii. VOL. III.

1. 42-52, who at the same time prides himself, and with reason, on his wit, his elegance, and his refinement [cavillatus, lepidus, facetus], is exactly the ευτράπελος : and remarkably enough, when we remember that $\epsilon \vartheta \tau \rho a \pi \epsilon \lambda (a$ being only expressly forbidden once in Scripture, is forbidden to Ephesians, we find him bringing out, that all this was to be expected from him, seeing that he was an Ephesian : 'Post Ephesi sum natus : non enim in Apulis, non Animulæ."" Trench : whose further remarks should by all means be read), which are not becoming (the reading tà oùk avhkovta has perhaps come into the text from the $\tau \dot{a} \mu \dot{n}$ καθήκοντα of Rom. i. 28, the our of the text being preserved through inadvertence. If, however, the participial clause be retained in the text, it may be grammatically justified by remembering that, where the various objects arc specified which as matter of fact are our avhrouta, the objective negative particle obk may be used : whereas in Rom. i. 28, where no such objects are specified, we have $\pi oisiv \tau a$ μή καθήκοντα, 'si quæ essent indecora, as Winer, § 59. 3: sec Hartung, vol. ii. p. 131): but rather thanksgiving (not, as Jer., Calv., al., 'sermo qui gratiam apud audientes habet,' which the word cannot mean. It is a question, what verb is to be supplied : Beng, supposes ανήκει, which is perhaps most likely, as suiting the simplicity of the construction of these hortatory verses better than going back to δνομαζέσθω [De W., Mey., al.],-and as finding a parallel in ch. iv. 29, where the ellipsis is to be supplied from the sentence itself. There is a play perhaps on the similar sound of evrpa- $\pi \epsilon \lambda i a$ and $\epsilon \dot{v} \chi a \rho_i \sigma \tau i a$, which may account for the latter not finding so complete a justification in the sense as we might expect: the connexion being apparently, 'your true cheerfulness and play of fancy will be found, not in buffoonery, but in the joy of a heart overflowing with a sense of God's mercies ').

5.] Appeal to their own knowledge that such practices exclude from the kingdom of God: see below. For this ye know (indicative, not imperative: this to my mind is decided 1) by the context, in which an appeal to their own consciousness of the fact is far more natural than a communication of the fact to them: 2) by the position of the words, which in the case of an imperative would more naturally be ίστε γάρ τοῦτο γινώσκοντες: 3) by the use of the construction fore yives, which almost necessitates a matter of fact underlying γινώσκοντες.- ίστε γιν. is not an example of the γινώσκων γνώση [Gen. xv. 13 al.] of Hebrew usage, the two verbs being different) being aware that every fornicator or (n now, not kai, for individualization of each) unclean man, or covetous man, which is (i. c. Col. iii. 5, which shews that even ös eoriv would apply to the mleovék-This only, not, as Stier, al., to the three : see Job xxxi. 21; Ps. lii. 7; Matt. vi. 24. Mey. remarks well, that it was very natural for St. Paul, whose forsaking of all things (2 Cor. vi. 10; xi. 27) so strongly contrasted with selfish greediness, to mark with the deepest reprobation the sin of $\pi\lambda\epsilon_{ov\epsilon\xi(a)}$, hath not inheritance (the present implying more the fixedness of the exclusion, grounded on the eternal verities of that Kingdom,-than mere future certainty: see 1 Cor. xv. 25) in the Kingdom of Christ and God (not ' and of God ' $[\kappa, \tau o \hat{\boldsymbol{\upsilon}} \boldsymbol{\theta}_{\cdot}]$, as E. V. No distinction is to be made, χριστού και θεού being in the closest union. Nor is any specification needed that the Kingdom of Christ is also the Kingdom of God, as would be made with the second article. This follows as matter of course: and thus the words bear no legitimate rendering, cxcept on the substratum of our Lord's Divinity. But on the other hand, we cannot safely say here, that the same Person is intended by χριστοῦ κ. θεοῦ, merely on account of the omission of the article. For 1) any introduction of such a predieation regarding Christ would here be manifestly out of place, not belonging to the context : 2) beds is so frequently and unaccountably anarthrous, that it is not safe to ground any such inference from its use here). 6. Let no one deceive you with vain (empty-not containing the kernel of truth, of which words are but the shell—words with no underlying facts. The word is a valuable middle term between unbelief and disobedience, implying their identity in a manner full of the highest instruction).

7. Be not (the distinction ' Become not' ['nolite effici,' Vulg. : so Stier, Ellic., al.] is unnecessary and indeed unsuitable : it is not a gradual 'becoming,' but 'being,' like them, which he here dehorts from. ful works of darkness (see Gal. v. 19, 22; on which Jer., vol. vii. p. 505, says 'vitia in semctipsa finiuntur et pereunt, virtutes frugibus pullulant et redundant.' See also the distinction in John iii. 20, 21; v. 29, between τὰ φαῦλα πράσσειν and τὰ dyaθa or την dληθειαν ποιείν), but rather even reprove them (see reff., -in words : not only abstain from fellowship with them, but attack them and put them to shame). 12.] For (the connexion seems to be, 'reprove them-this they want, and this is more befitting you-for to have the least part in them, even in speaking of them, is shameful') the things done in secret by them, it is shameful even to speak of (so kal in Plat. Rep. v. p. 465 D, τά γε μήν σμικρότατα των κακών δι' απρέπειαν όκνω και λέγειν, sec Hartung ii. p. 136. Klotz, Devar. ii. p. 633 f. : the connexion being-' I mention not, and you need not speak of, these deeds of darkness, much less have any fellowship with them-your connexion with them must be only that which the act of $\tilde{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\gamma\xi$ is necessitates'): 13.] but (opposition to τ . $\kappa\rho\nu\phi\hat{\eta}$ $\gamma\nu$.) all things (not only, all the $\kappa\rho\nu\phi\hat{\eta}$ $\gamma\nu\delta\mu\epsilon\nua$, as Ellic. after Jer. al.: the Apostle is treating of the general detecting power of light, as is evident by the resumption of the $\pi \bar{a} \nu$ in the next clause) being reproved, are made manifest by the light: for every thing which is made manifest is light (the meaning being, 'the light of your Chris-tian life, which will be by your reproof shed upon these deeds of darkness, will bring them out of the category of darkness into light ' [έπειδαν φανερωθή, γίνεται $\phi \hat{\omega} s$, Chr.]. They themselves were thus 'once darkness,' but having been 're-proved' by God's Spirit, had become 'light in the Lord.' There is in reality no difficulty, nor any occasion for a long note here. The only matters to be insisted on are, 1) ύπὸ τοῦ φωτόs belongs to φανεpourai, not to exceptioners : for it is not the fact of pavepoural that he is insisting on, but the fact that if they reproved the works of darkness, these would become no longer works of darkness, but would be ύπο τοῦ φωτός φανερούμενα. And 2) φανερούμενον is passive, not middle, in which sense it is never used in N. T.; 'every thing which is made manifest, is no longer darkness, but light: and thus you will be, not compromised to these works of darkness, but making an inroad upon the territory of darkness with the $\delta \pi \lambda a \ \tau o \hat{v} \ \phi \omega \tau \delta s$.' And thus the context leads on easily and naturally to the next verse. The objection to this [Eadic] that ' light does not always exercise this transforming influence, for the devil and all the wicked are themselves condemned by the light, without becoming themselves light,' is null, being founded on misapprehension of the $\phi \hat{\omega}s \ \epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu$. Objectively taken, it is universally true : every thing shone upon 18 LIGHT. Whether this tend to condemnation or otherwise, depends just on whether the transforming influence takes place. The key-text to this, is John iii. 20, παις γαρ ο φαύλα πράσσων μισεί τό φῶs, κ. οὐκ ἔρχεται πρόs τὸ φῶs, Ίνα μη έλεγχθη τὰ έργα αὐτοῦ,—His works being thus brought into the light,-made light, and he being thus put to shame. Notice also φανερωθή in the next verse, which is the desire of him who $\pi o_i \epsilon_i \tau_{\eta \nu}$ $\lambda \lambda \eta \theta \epsilon_{iav}$. The E. V. is doubly wrong— 1) in 'all things that are reproved' $[\pi$. Ta $\hat{e}_{\lambda e \gamma \chi \phi \mu e \nu a}$]: 2) in whatsoever doth make manifest is light' [$\pi \hat{a} \nu \tau \delta \phi a \nu \epsilon - \rho \sigma \hat{\nu}$]: besides that such a proposition has absolutely no meaning in the context. The meaning is discussed at length in Harl., Eadie, who however fall into the error of rendering φανερούμενον active [not middle],—Stier, Ellicott,—and best of all, Meyer): 14.] wherefore (this being so-seeing that every thing that is made manifest becomes light,-is shone upon by the detecting light of Christ,objectively,-it only remains that the man should be shone upon inwardly by the same Christ revealed in his awakened heart. We have then in Scripture an

In the first place, by the introduction of o xpioros, it is manifestly a paraphrase, not an exact citation. The Apostle cites, and had a perfect right to cite, the language of prophecy in the light of the fulfilment of prophecy : and that he is here doing so, the bare word 'Christ' shews us beyond dispute. I insist on this, that it may be plainly shewn to be no shift in a difficulty, no hypothesis among hypotheses,---but the necessary inference from the form of the citation. This being so,-of what passage of the O. T. is this a paraphrase? I answer, of Isa. lx. 1, 2. There, the church is set forth as being in a state of darkness and of death [cf. lix. 10], and is exhorted to awake, and become light, for that her light is come, and the glory of Jehovah has arisen upon her. Where need we go further for that of which we are in search? It is not true [as Stier], that there is 'no allusion to sleep or death' in the prophet: nor is it true again, that ini or partioeral κύριος κ. ή δόξα αύτοῦ ἐπὶ σὲ ὀφθήσεται is not represented by ἐπιφαύσει σοι ὁ χριστός. The fact is, that Stier has altogether mistaken the context, in saying,-"The Apostle quotes here, not to justify the exhortation—' convict, that they may become light;'—but to exhort—' Become light, that ye may be able to convict [shine]:" the refutation of which see above, on ver. 13). 15. He now resumes the hortative strain, interrupted by the digression of vv. 12-14. Take heed then (there is not any immediate connexion with the last verse : but the ouv resumes from the $\pi\epsilon\rho$ imateite in ver. 8, and that which followed it there) how ye walk strictly (the construction is exactly as in ref. 1 Cor., ἕκαστος δὲ βλεπέτω πῶς ἐποικοδομεῖ. 'Take heed, of what sort your $d\kappa\rho_i\beta\omega_s$ $\pi\epsilon\rho_i\pi\alpha\tau\epsilon\hat{i}\nu$ is: '--the impli-cation being, 'take heed not only that your walk be exact, strict, but also of what sort that strictness is-not only that you have a rule, and keep to it, but that that rule be the best one.' So that a double exhortation is involved. See Ellie. here : and the Fritzschiorum Opuseula, pp. 208 f., note), (namely) not as unwise, but as wise (qualification of the akpißes περιπατείτε, and expansion of the $\pi \hat{\omega}s$ [$\mu \eta$, subj.]: no $\pi \epsilon \rho i - \pi a \tau o \hat{v} \tau \tau \epsilon s$ need be supplied after $\mu \eta$, as Harl.), buying up for yourselves (the) opportunity (viz. of good, whenever occurriug; let it not pass by, but as merchants carefully looking out for vantages, make it your own: see Col. iv. 5. It is not so easy to assign precisely its connexion with those which have preceded. It is hardly enough to say that as the first three name three special duties in regard to God, so this last a comprehensive moral duty in regard to man [Ellie.]: for the question of the connexion is still unanswered. I would rather regard it [as I see Eadie also does], as a thought suggested by the $\mu \eta \mu \epsilon \theta$. $\kappa \tau . \lambda$. with which the sentence began-that as we are otherwise to be filled, otherwise to sing and rejoice, so also we are otherwise to behavenot blustering nor letting our voices rise in selfish vaunting, as such men do,-but subject to one another, &c.) in the fear of Christ ('rara phrasis,' Beng. : of Him, whose members we all are, so that any displacement in the Body is a forgetfulness of the reverence due to Him).

22.] Wives (supply, as rec. has inserted, $\delta \pi \sigma \tau \delta \sigma \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$, seeing that the subsequent address to husbands is in the 2nd person), to your own husbands (ibíois, as we often use the word [e.g. ' He murdered his own father'], to intensify the recognition of the relationship and suggest its duties : see 1 Cor. vii. 2: also John v. 18), as to the Lord ('quasi Christo ipsimet, cujus locum et personam viri repræsentant.' Corn.-alap. in Ellic. : i. e. 'in obeying your husbands, obey the Lord :' not merely as in all things we are to have regard to Him, but because, as below expanded, the husband stands peculiarly in Christ's place. But he is not thus identified in power with Christ, nor the obedience, in its nature, with that which is owed to Him) : for a husband (any husband, taken as an example : the same in sense would be expressed by $\delta a \nu h \rho$, the husband in each case, generic : sing. of oi avopes) is head of his wife, as also (kai, introducing identity of category) Christ is Head of the church (see for the sentiment, 1 Cor. xi. 3 note), (being, in His case-see below) Himself Saviour of the Body (i. e. 'in Christ's case the Headship is united with, nay gained by, His having SAVED the body in the process of Redemption : so that I am not alleging Christ's Headship as one entirely identical with that other, for He has a claim to it and office in it peculiar to Himself.' 'Vir autem non est servator uxoris, in co Christus excellit : hinc sed sequitur.' Bengel. Stier remarks the apparent play on σωτήρσώματος, in reference to the supposed derivation of $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ from $\sigma \hat{\omega} \omega$ ($\sigma \hat{\omega} \zeta \omega$); and has noticed that in the only other place [except the pastoral Epistles] where St. Paul uses σωτήρ, Phil. iii. 20, 21, it is also in connexion with $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$): but (what I do say is, that thus far the two Headships are to be regarded as identical, in the subjection of the body to the Head) as the church is subjected to Christ, so also (again, identity of category in the υποτάσσ.) let the wives be to their husbands (not islos now, as it would disturb the perspicuity of the comparison) in every thing (thus only, with Calv., Beng., Mey., Ellic., can I find any legitimate meaning or connexion in the words. All attempts 1) to explain σωτήρ τοῦ σώμ. also of the marriage state [Bulling., Beza, 'viri est quærere quod mulier conservet'], or 2) to deprive and of its adversative force [Rück., Harl., al.], or 3) refer it to something other than the preceding elause [De W., Eadie] seem to me unsatis-25.] I cannot refrain from factory). citing Chrys.'s very beautiful remarks on , this next passage, - είδες μέτρον ύπακοής; άκουσον και μέτρον αγάπης. βούλει σοι την γυναίκα ύπακούειν, ώς τῷ χριστῷ Chr.) that (intermediate purpose, as regarded her ; see below, ver. 27) He might sanctify her, having purified her (ayidon and kalapioas might be contemporaneous, and indeed this is the more common usage of past participles with past finite verbs in the N. T. [see ch. i. 9 note]. But here, inasmuch as the sanctifying is clearly a gradual process, carried on till the spotless presentation [ver. 27], and the washing eannot be separated from the introductory rite of baptism, it is best to take the καθαρίσαs as antecedent to the ayiaon) by the laver (not 'washing,' as E. V.: a meaning the word never has) of the water (of which we all know : viz. the baptismal water, see ref. Tit. We can hardly set aside the reference to the purifying bath of the bride previous to marriage :-- see below on ver. 27, and cf. Rev. xxi. 2) in the word (what word? iv dvouari matpos κ. υίοῦ κ. άγίου πνεύματος, says Chrys. alluding to the formula in Baptism : and so many fathers :- the 'mandatum divinum' on which Baptism rests [Storr, Peile] :- the 'invocatio divini nominis' which gives Baptism its efficacy [Erasn.]: -the preached word of faith [Rom. x. 8] of which confession is made in baptism, and which carries the real cleansing [John xv. 3; xvii. 17] and regenerating power [1 Pet. i. 23; iii. 21 (?)]-so Aug. Tract. 80 in Joan. 3, vol. iii. p. 1840, Migne; where those memorable words occur, " Detrahe verbum, et quid est aqua nisi aqua ? Accedit verbum ad elementum, et fit sacramentum, etiam ipsum tanquam visibile verbum." And this certainly seems the sense most analogous to St. Paul's usage, in which $\hat{\rho}\hat{\eta}\mu a$ is confined to the divine word. But we must not join ϵv ρήματι with $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ λουτρφ nor with του υδατοs; for the former would require τῷ ἐν ῥήματι,—the latter, τοῦ ἐν ῥήματι,-there being no such close connexion as to justify the omission of the article; indeed the specification being here absolutely required, after so common a term as το λουτρον του ύδατος. So that we are referred back to the verb [άγ.] and participle [καθαρίσας] preceding. The former connexion is not probable, on account of the participle inter-vening: see also below. The latter is on all accounts the most likely. Thus, the word, preached and received, is the conditional element of purification,—the real water of spiritual baptism ;- that wherein and whereby alone the efficacy of baptism is conveyed—that wherein and whereby we are regenerated, the process of sanctification being subsequent and gradual), Hal., Plut., Lucian, &c. The proper ac-centuation seems to be as in text, not σπίλos. In Anthol. vi. 252, we have ασπιλον, αρρυτίδωτον, beginning a hexameter) or wrinkle (δυτίs, ή συγκεκλυσμένη σάρξ, Etym. Mag.: from [ε]ρύω, see Palm and Rost, Lex. A classical word, see reff.), or any of such things, but that she may be holy (perfect in holiness) and blameless (see on both, note, ch. i. 4). The presentation here spoken of is clearly, in its full sense, that future one at the Lord's coming, so often treated under the image of a marriage (Matt. xxii. 1 ff. ; xxv. 1 ff. ; Rev. xix. 7 fl. ; xxi. 2 al. fr), not any progress of sanctification here below, as Harl., Beng., al., maintain [and Calv., commonly quoted on the other side : for he says on παραστήση, ' finem baptismi et ablutionis nostræ declarat : ut sancte et inculpate Deo vivamus']: however the progress towards this state of spotlessness in this life may sometimes be spoken of in its fulness and completion, or with reference to its proper qualities, not here found in their purity. Schöttgen quotes a rabbinical comment on Cant. i. 5 :-- ' Judæi de synagoga intelligunt, et sic explicant : nigra sum in hoc sæculo, sed decora in sæculo futuro.' 28.] Thus (two ways of understanding this outes are open to us : 1) as referring back to Christ's love for the church,—' Thus,' 'in like manner,' &c., as [being] 'their own bodies :' and 2) as referring forward to the &s below, as very frequently [though Eadie calls it contrary to grammatical law] in St. Paul [cf. 1 Cor. iii. 15; iv. 1; ix. 26, al., and ver. 33 below, where Eadie himself renders, 'so as himself'], - ' Thus,' 'so,' &c., 'as [they love] their own bodies.' After weighing maturely what has been said on one side and the other, I cannot but decide for the latter, as most in accordance with the usage of St. Paul and with ver. 33 : also as more simple. The sense [against Ellie.] remains substantially the same, and answers much better to the comment furnished by the succeeding clauses : -husbands ought to love their own wives as they love their own bodies [= themselves : for their wives are in fact part of their own bodies, ver. 31]: this being illustrated by and referred to the great mystery of Christ and His ehurch, in which the same love, and the same incorporation, has place) ought the husbands also (as well as Christ in the archetypal example just given) to love their own (emphatic: see above on vcr. 22) wives, as (with the same affection as) their own bodies. He that loveth his own (see above) wife, loveth himself (is but complying with that universal law of nature by which we all love ourselves. The best words to supply before the following yap will be, "And this we all do"): for (see above) no man ever hated his own flesh (= $\epsilon av \tau \delta v$, but put in this form to prepare for είs σάρκα μίαν in the Scrip-ture proof below. 'warming,' as Beng. ['id spectat amic-tum'], Mey., al.: for it is very forced to apply the feeding and clothing to the other member of the comparison [as Grot.: 'nutrit eam verbo et spiritu, vestit eam virtutibus'], as must then be done [against Mey.]) it, as also (does) Christ (nourish and cherish) the church. 30.] For (again a link is omitted; 'the church, which stands in the relation of marriage to Him : for, &c.') members we are of His Body [,-(being) of His flesh, and of His bones (see Gen. ii. 23. As the woman owed her natural being to the man, her source and head, so we owe our entire spiritual being to Christ, our source and head: and as the woman was one fiesh with the man in this natural relation, so we in our entire spiritual relation, body, soul, and Spirit, are one with Christ, God manifested in our humanity,-parts and members of His glorified Body. Bengel well remarks, that we are not, as in Gen., c. δστοῦν ἐκ τῶν ὀστέων αὐτοῦ, καl σὰρξ ἐκ τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτ.:—' non ossa et caro nostra, sed nos spiritualiter propagamur ex humanitate Christi, carnem et ossa habente')]: wherefore (the allusion, or rather free eitation, is still carried on : cf. Gen. ii. 24:--i. c. because we are members of Him in the sense just insisted on. This whole verse is said [see on ver. 32 below] not of human marriages, but of Christ and the church. He is the άνθρωτος in the Apostle's view here, the Church is the yurn. But for all this, I would not understand the words, as Meyer, in a prophetical sense of the future coming of Christ :-the omission of the article before ανθρωπος sufficiently retains the general aphorismatic sense :- but would regard the saying as applied to that, past, present, and future, which constitutes Christ's Union to His Bride the Church : His leaving the Father's bosom, which is past-His gradual preparation of the union, which is present : His full consummation of it, which is future. This seems to me to be necessary, because we are as truly now eis orápka µíav with Him, as we shall be, when heaven and earth shall ring with the joy of the nuptials ;- and hence the exclusive future sense is inapplicable. In this allegorical sense [see below], Chrys., Jer., and most of the ancients: Beng., Grot., Mcy. [as above], al., interpret : and Eadie would have done well to study more deeply the spirit of the context before he characterized it as 'strange romance,' 'wild and visionary,' and said, 'there is no hint that the Apostle intends to allegorize.' That allegory, on the contrary, is the key to the whole) shall a man leave father and mother and shall be closely joined to his wife, and they two shall become (see Matt. xix. 5, note) one flesh ('non solum uti antea, respectu ortus: sed respectu novæ conjunctionis.' Beng.). 32.1 This mystery is great (viz. the matter invitically alluded to in the Apostle's application of the text just quoted : the mystery of the spiritual union of Christ with our humanity, typified by the close conjunction of the marriage state. This meaning of µυστήριον, which is strictly that in which St. Paul uses the word [see reff.],-as something passing human comprehension, but revealed as a portion of the divine dealings in Christ,-is, it seems to me, required by the next words. It is irksome, but necessary, to notice the ridiculous perversion of this text by the Romish church, which from the Vulgate rendering, 'sacramentum hoc magnum est, ego autem dico in Christo et in Ecclesia,' deduces that 'marriage is a great sacrament in Christ

It will be enough to say that this their blunder of 'sacramentum' for 'mysterium,' had long ago been exposed by their own Commentators, Cajctan and Estius) : but I (emphatic) say (allege) it with reference to Christ, and [with reference to] the church (i. c. my meaning, in citing the above text, is to call your attention, not to mere human marriage, but to that high and mysterious relation between Christ and His Church, of which that other is but a faint resemblance). 33.] Nevertheless (not to go further into the mystical bearings of the subject-so Meyer) you also (as well as Christ) every one (see reff. and 1 Cor. xiv. 27; Acts xv. 21; Heb. ix. 25), let each (the construction is changed and the verb put into concord with exactos instead of upers : so Plat. Jer.]: for cf. Col. iii. 20, ύπακούετε τοΐς γονεύσιν κατά πάντα. I should rather believe, that he regards both parents and children as ev κυρίω, and the commands, as well as the obedience, as having that sphere and element. How children were to regard commands not answering to this description, would be understood from the nature of the case: but it seems to violate the sim-. plieity of this υποτασσόμενοι άλλήλοις passage, to introduce into it a by-thought of this kind)]: for this is right (Thdrt., Harl., De W., Mey., al., regard δίκαιον as explained by the next verse, and meaning $\kappa a \tau a \tau d \nu \theta \epsilon o \hat{\nu} \nu \delta \mu o \nu$. But it seems rather an appeal to the first principles of natural duty, as Est., 'ut a quibus vitam acceperimus, iis obedientiam reddamus.' So Beng. Surely it is better to regard the next verse as an additional particular, not the mere expansion of 2.] Honour thy father and this). thy mother, for such is ('seeing it is,' as Ellie., is rather too strong for yris, throwing the motive to obedience too much on the fact of the promise accompanying it. logue, which naturally stands at the head of all God's other commandments; and which, though not formally binding on us as Christians, is quoted, in matters of eternal obligation [not of positive enactment], as an eminent example of God's holy will) with a promise (i.e. with a special promise attached : 'in respect of promise' is too vague, and does not convey any definite meaning in English. The fact certainly is so, and the occurrence of the description of God as 'shewing mercy unto thousands, &c.' after the second commandment, does not, as Jer., al., have thought, present any difficultyfor that is no special promise attached to the commandment. Nor does the fact that no other commandment occurs in the decalogue with a promise : see above. The ev, as in reff.-in the sphere or department of -- characterized by -- accom-panied with), that it may be well with thee, and thou be long-lived upon the earth (he paraphrases the latter portion of the commandment, writing for Iva µanp. $\gamma \epsilon \nu \eta$, $\epsilon \sigma \eta$ μ .,—and omitting after $\gamma \eta s$, [$\tau \eta s$ $a \gamma a \vartheta \eta s$, so in Exod., but not in Deut.] ηs $\kappa \nu \rho \iota o s$ δ $\theta \epsilon \delta s$ σου $\delta (\delta \omega \sigma \iota \nu \sigma o \iota :$ thus adapting the promise to his Christian readers, by taking away from it that which is special and peculiar to the Jewish people. It is surely a mistake, as Jer., Aq., Est., Olsh., to spiritualize the promise, and understand by $\tau \hat{\eta} s \gamma \hat{\eta} s$ the heavenly Canaan. The very fact of the omission of the special clause removes the words from the region of type into undoubted reality: and when we remember that the persons addressed are $\tau \dot{a} \tau \epsilon \kappa \nu a$, we must not depart from the simplest sense of the words. For the future after $l\nu a$, see 1 Cor. ix. 18, note: and John vii. 3; Rev. xxii. 14. To consider it as such, is far better than to suppose a change of construction to the direct future-' and thou shalt be, &c.').

4.] And ye, fathers (the mothers being included, as brotassource tois idiois $\frac{\partial \nu \delta \rho d\sigma i \nu}{\partial \nu}$ —they being the fountains of domestic rule: not for any other less worthy reason, to which the whole view of the sexes by the Apostle is opposed), irritate not (olov, says Chrys., of πολλοl ποιούσιν, αποκληρονόμους έργαζόμενοι, καλ αποκηρύκτους ποιοθντες, και φορτικώς έπικείμενοι, ούχ ώς έλευθέροις αλλ' ώς ανδραπόδοις. But the Apostle seems rather to allude to provoking by vexations commands, and unreasonable blame, and uncertain temper, in ordinary intercourse : cf. Col. iii. 21) your children, but bring them up (see on ch. v. 29, where it was used of physical fostering up: and cf. against the spiritual (armies) (so we have [Mey.] το πολιτικόν [Herod. vii. 103], τό ίππικόν [Rev. ix. 16], τὰ ληστρικά [Polyæn. v. 14], τὰ δοῦλα, τὰ αἰχμάλωτα &c. Winer, Gr. § 34, note 3, compares τὰ δαιμόνια, originally a neuter-adjective form. See Bernhardy, Synt. p. 326, for more examples. Stier maintains the ab-stract meaning, 'the spiritual things ' but as Ellic. remarks, the meaning could not be 'spiritales malignitates,' as Beza, but 'spiritualia nequilia,' as the Vulg., i.e. 'the spiritual elements,' or 'properties,' 'of wickedness,' which will not suit here) of wickedness in the heavenly places (but what is the meaning? Chrys. connects in tois inouparious with $\dot{\eta}$ τάλη έστιν—έν τοις έπ. ή μάχη κείται ώς τν εί έλεγεν, ή συνθηκη έν τίνι κείται; έν χρυσφ. And so Thdrt., Phot., Ec., al. But it is plain that έν will not bear this [Chrys. says, $\tau \delta \epsilon \nu$, ύπέρ έστι, καὶ τὸ έν, διά έστι], though possibly the order of the sentence might. Rückert, Matth., Eadie, al., interpret of the scene of the combat, thus also joining $\epsilon \nu \tau$. $\epsilon \pi$. with $\epsilon \sigma \tau$. $\eta \mu$. $\eta \pi \delta \eta$. The objection to this is twofold: 1) that the words thus appear without any sort of justification in the context: nay rather as a weakening of the following dia touto, instead of a strengthening : and 2) that according to Eadle's argument, they stul-tify themselves. He asks, "How can they [the heavenly places, the scenes of divine blessing, of Christ's exaltation, &c.] be the seat or abode of impure fiends?" But if they are "the scene of" our "combat" with these fiends, how can our enemies be any where else but in them? Two ways then remain: to join iv rois iroup. a) with ra nrevuaτικά της πονηρίας-b) with της πονηplas only. The absence of an article before ev forms of course an objection to both : but not to both equally. Were b) to be adopted, the specifying *t^{n}s would appear to be required - because the sense would be, 'of that wickedness,' viz., the rebellion of the fallen angels, 'which was (or is) in the heavenly places.' If Vol. III.

a), we do not so imperatively require the tá before èv, because èv tois enoup. only specifies the locality,-does not distinguish τὰ πνευματικά της πονηρ. έν τοις έπουρ. from any other πνευματικά $au\eta s$ $\pi o \nu \eta \rho las$ elsewhere. So that this is in grammar the least objectionable rendering. And in sense it is, notwithstanding what Eadic and others have said, equally unobjectionable. That habitation of the evil spirits which in ch. ii. 2 was said, when speaking of mere matters of fact, to be in the anjp, is, now that the difficulty and importance of the Christian conflict is being foreibly set forth, represented as ev Tois enovpavious-over us, and too strong for us without the panoply of God. Cf. $\tau \dot{a}$ πετεινà τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, Matt. vi. 26; and reff.). 13.] Wherefore (since our focs are in power too mighty for us,-and in dwelling, around and above us) take up (i. e. not ' to the battle,' but ' to put on :' frequens est ἀναλαμβάνειν de armis; Kypke in loc. See also Wetst.) the entire armour of God (see on ver. 11) that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day (not as Chrys., ήμέραν πονηράν τον παρόντα Βίον φησί - for then the evil day would be upon the Christian before he has on the armour; the del δπλίζεσθε of Chr., if taken literally, would be but a poor posture of de-fence. Nor again can his view stand, $d\pi \partial$ τοῦ χρόνου παραμυθείται βραχύς, φησίν, ó kaipós-evidently no such point is raised in the following exhortations, but rather the contrary is implied-a long and weary conflict. The right interpretation is well given by Bengel-"Bellum est perpetuum : pugna alio die minus, alio magis fervet. Dies malus, vel ingruente morte, vel in vita: longior, brevior, in se ipso sæpe varius, ubi Malus vos invadit, et copiæ malignæ vos infestant, ver. 12"), and having accomplished all things (requisite to the combat : being fully equipped and having bravely fought. must not be taken in the sense of, 'omnibus debellatis,' as if катеруата́µегоі = καταπολεμήσαντες [so Chrys. — άπαντα - τουτέστι, καὶ πάθη κ. ἐπιθυμίας ἀτόπους κ. τὰ ἐνοχλοῦντα ἡμῖν ἅπαντα], nor again, understood of preparation only [= παρασκευασάμενοι, 1 Cor. xiv. 8] as Erasm., Beza, Bengel, al. To finish, or accomplish, is the invariable Pauline usage of the word when taken in a good sense) to stand firm (at your post: as Estius, reporting others, - 'ut posteaquam omnia quæ boni militis sunt, perfeceritis, stare et subsistere possitis:'-that you may not, after having done your duty well in battle, fall off, but stand your ground to the end. The other interpretation, 'stare tanquam triumphatores,' is precluded by what has been said above). 14-20. Particulars of the armour, and attitude 14. Stand therefore of the soldier. (whether 'ready for the fight,' or 'in the fight,' matters very little : all the aoristic participles are in time antecedent to the $\sigma \tau \tilde{\eta} \tau \epsilon$ -and the fight ever at hand), having girt about your loins with (ϵv , not instrumental, but local: the girt person is within, surrounded by, the girdle: but this is necessarily expressed in English by ' with') truth (not truth objective, which is rather the βήμα θεοῦ below, ver. 17 : but 'truthfulness,' subjective truth : to be understood however as based upon the faith and standing of a Christian, necessarily his truthfulness in his place in Christ. As the girdle [hardly here, however true that may have been, to be regarded as carrying the sword, for that would be confusing the separate images, cf. ver. 17] kept all together, so that an ungirded soldier would be (see Mey.) a contradiction in terms,-just so Truth is the band and expediter of the Christian's work in the conflict, without which all his armour would be but encumbrance. Gurnall's notion [Christian Armour, vol. i. p. 378], that 'the girdle is used as an ornament, put on uppermost, to cover the joints of the armour, which would, if seen, cause some uncomeliness' [see also Harl. 'fie ift bes Chriften Schmutt'], is against the context, and against the use of the phrase Lovv. T. dord. in the N. T.), and having put on the breastplate of righteousness (see ref. Isa., and Wisd. v. 19. As in those passages, righteousness is the breastplate-the genitive here being one of apposition. The righteousness spoken of is that of Rom. vi. 13-the purity and uprightness of Christian character which is the result of the work of the Spirit of Christ; the inwrought righteousness of Christ, not merely the imputed righteousncss), and having shod your feet (as the soldier with his sandals-cf. the frequent description of arming in Homer- $\pi \sigma \sigma \sigma$? δ' ύπαί λιπαροΐσιν έδήσατο καλά πέδιλα. The Roman caliga may be in the Apostle's mind : see on ver. 11) with (local again, not instrumental: see on ver. 14) the (article omitted after $\epsilon \nu$) readiness (the uses of έτοιμασία ['in classical Greek, έτοιμότης, Dem. 1268. 7.' Mey.] in Hellenistic Greek are somewhat curious, and may have a bearing on this passage. In Ps. ix. 17, it has the sense of inward · preparedness,'-την έτοιμασίαν της καρδίας [τῶν πενήτων],—of outward, in Jos. Antt. x. 1. 2, διςχιλίους ίππους εἰς έτοιμασίαν ύμιν παρέχειν έτοιμός είμι: of preparation, in an active sense, Wisd. xiii. 12, τὰ ἀποβλήματα τῆς ἐργασίας είς έτοιμασίαν τροφής αναλώσας ένεπλή- $\sigma\theta\eta$: in Ezra ii. 68, it answers to the Heb. בכון, a foundation, τοῦ στῆσαι αὐτών (the temple) έπι την έτοιμασίαν αὐτοῦ, see also Ps. lxxxviii. 14, δικαιοσ. κ. κρίμα έτοιμασία τοῦ θρόνου σου, and Dan. xi. 7 Theod. From this latter usage [which can hardly be a mistake of the translators, as Mey. supposes] some [Beza, Bengel, al.] have believed that as the unobypara are the lowest part of the panoply, the same meaning has place here: but no good sense seems to me to be gained : for we could not explain it 'pedes militis Christiaui firmantur Evangelio, ne loco moveatur,' as Beng. Nor again can it mean the preparation (active) of the Gospel, or preparedness to preach the Gospel, as Chrys. and most Commentators ['shod as ready messengers of the glad tidings of peace,' Conyb.], for the persons addressed were not teachers, but the whole church.

But this again is laying too much on the phrase: see below. The same objection applies to Beza and Piscator's rendering, 'ut aperiam os meum :' and to taking the phrase of an opening of his mouth by God, as [Chrys. ή άλυσις επίκειται την παρόησίαν επιστομίζουσα, άλλ' ή ευχή ή ύμετέρα άνοίγει μου τό στόμα, Ίνα πάντα & επεμφθην είπειν, είπω] Corn.a-lap., Grot., Harl., and Olsh. from Ps. 1. 17 and Ezek. xxix. 21. The best rendering is that of Est. ['dum os meum aperio'], Meyer, Eadie, Ellic., al., 'in [at] the opening of my mouth,' i. c. ' when I undertake to speak:' thus we keep the meaning of avolytiv to otopa [reff. and Job iii. 1; Dan. x. 16], which always carries some solemnity of subject or occasion with it), in boldness ([subjective] freedom of speech, not as Grot. ['ut ab hac custodia militari liber per omnem urbem per-ferre possem sermonem evangelieum,' &c.], Koppe [objective], liberty of speech) to make known (the purpose of the gift of λόγοs ἐν ἀνοίξει τοῦ στόματοs) the mystery of the gospel (contained in the gospel : subjective genitive. 'The genitive is somewhat different to τδ μυστήρ. τοῦ θελήματος, ch. i. 9: there it was the mystery in the matter of, concerning the $\theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \mu a$, gen. objeeti,' Ellie.), on behalf of which (viz. $\tau o \hat{v}$ μυστ. τοῦ εὐαγγ.--for as Meyer remarks, this is the object of yvapioat, and yvaρίσαι is pragmatically bound to πρεσβεύω) I am an ambassador (of Christ [ref.] : to whom, is understood : we need not supply as Michaelis, to the court of Rome) in chains (the singular is not to be pressed, as has been done by Paley, Wiescler, al., to signify the chain by which he was bound to ' the soldier that kept him ' [Acts xxviii. 20]: for such singulars are often used collectively : see Bernhardy, Syntax, p. 58 f., See examples of such a co-ordinate iva in Rom. vii, 13; Gal. iii. 14; 2 Cor. ix. 3. But no tautology [as Harl.] is involved : see below) in (the matter of, in dealing with : cf. $\lambda \eta \theta \eta$ έν τοις μαθήμασι, Plat. Phileb. p. 252 B: and see Bernhardy, p. 212 : not as in 1 Thess. ii. 2, επαδρησιασάμεθα εν τώ θεώ $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$, where $\epsilon \nu$ denotes the source or ground of the confidence) it I may speak freely, as I ought to speak (no comma at µe, as Koppe-'that I may have confidence, as I ought, to speak ;' but the idea of speaking being already half understood in $\pi a\beta\beta\eta\sigma(a, \lambda a\lambda\eta\sigma a)$ merely refers back to it. This last clause is a further qualification of the $\pi a \rho \delta \eta \sigma i a$ —that it is a courage and frec-spokenness ws bei: and therefore involves no tautology).

If so, it would be an argument for the priority of the Epistle to the Colossians [so Harl. p. lx, Mey., Wieseler, and Wigger's Stud. u. BLESSING; addressed (23) to the brethren, and (24) to all real lovers of the Lord Jesus 23.] Peace (need not be fur-Christ. ther specified, as is done by some :- the Epistle has no special conciliatory view. It is sufficiently described by being peace from God) to the brethren (of the Church or Churches addressed : see Prolegg. to this Epistle, § ii. : not as Wieseler, άδελφοιs to the Jews, and πάντων below to the Gentiles : for least of all in this Epistle would such a distinction be found) and love with faith (faith is perhaps presupposed as being theirs: and he prays that love may always accompany it, see Gal. v. 6 : or both are invoked on them, see 1 Tim. i. 14) from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ (see note on Rom. i. 7). 24.] General benediction ou all who love Christ : corresponding, as Mey. suggests, with the malediction on all who love Him not, 1 Cor. xvi. 22. May the grace (viz. of God, which comes by Christ) be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in incorruptibility (i. e. whose love is incorruptible. The method of exegesis of this difficult expression will be, to endeavour to find some clue to the idea in the Apostle's mind. He speaks, in Col. ii. 22, of worldly things which are els $\phi \theta o \rho a \nu \tau \eta$ αποχρήσει — άφθαρτοs is with him an epithet of God [Rom. i. 23. 1 Tim. i. 17]: the dead are raised άφθαρτοι [1 Cor. xv.

VI.

[1 Cor. ix. 25]. adoaporía is always elsewhere in N. T. [reff.] the incorruptibility of future immortality. If we seek elsewhere in the Epistles for an illustration of the term as applied to inward qualities, we find a close parallel in 1 Pct. iii. 4; where the ornament of women is to be δ κρυπτός της καρδίας άνθρωπος έν τώ ἀφθάρτῳ τοῦ πραέος κ. ἡσυχίου πνεύματος the contrast being between the $\phi\theta a\rho$ τά, ἀργύριον καl χρυσίον, and the incorruptible graces of the renewed spiritual man. I believe we are thus led to the meaning here ;- that the love spoken of is έν ἀφθαρσία;—in, as its sphere and element and condition, incorruptibilitynot a fleeting earthly love, but a spiritual and eternal one. And thus only is the word worthy to stand as the erown and climax of this glorious Epistle : whereas in the ordinary [E. V.] rendering, 'sincerity,' -besides that [as Mey.] this would not be àqeapola but àqeopla [Tit. ii. 7] or άδιαφθορία [see Wetst. on Tit. l. c.], the Epistle ends with an anti-climax, by lowering the high standard which it has lifted up throughout to an apparent indifferentism, and admitting to the apostolic blessing all those, however otherwise wrong, who are only not hypocrites in their love of Christ. As to the many interpretations,that ev is for ὑπέρ[Chr. 2nd alt.], διά['Thl.], μετά ['Thdrt.], είs [Beza], σύν [Piscator] that iv addapoia is to be taken with xapis [Harl., Bengel, Stier], that iv aq0. means 'in immortality,' as the sphere of the $\dot{a}\gamma\dot{a}\pi\eta$, cf. $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ to $\hat{c}s$ $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\sigma\nu\rho\alpha\nu/c_{1}s$, ch. i. 3, that it is to be joined with 'Inooû xpioroù ['Christum immortalem et gloriosum, non humilem,' Wetst.], that it is short for Iva ζωήν έχωσιν έν αφθαρσία [Olsh.], &c. &c. CHAP. I. 1, 2.] ADDRESS AND GREET-1.] Timotheus seems to be ING. named as being well known to the Philippians (Acts xvi. 3, 10 ff.), and present with St. Paul at this time. The mention is merely formal, as the Apostle proceeds (ver. 3) in the first person singular. Certainly no official character is intended to be given by it, as Huther, al., have thought: for of all the Epistles, this is the least official: and those to the Romans and Galatians, where no such mention occurs, the most so. Observe, there is no aπόστολοs subjoined to Παύλοs (as in Col. i. 1), probably because the Philippians needed no such reminiscence of his authority. Cf. also 1 and 2 Thess. On δοῦλοι χρ. 'Ιησ., see Ellicott.

magnetic particular both here and in vv. 4, 7, 8, 25; ch. ii. 17, 26, is best accounted for from the warm affection which breathes through this whole Epistle (see on ver. 3), not from any formal reason, as that the Apostle wishes to put those Philippians who had not sent to his support, on a level in his affection with those who had (Van Hengel),—that he wishes to set himself above all their party divisions (ch. ii. 3: so De W.), &c. συν έπισκ.] This is read by Chrys. συνεπισκόποις, and he remarks : τί τοῦτο ; μιᾶς πόλεως πολλοl ἐπίσκοποι ἦσαν; οὐδαμῶς ἀλλὰ τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους ούτως ἐκάλεσε. ότε γὰρ τέως έκοινώνουν τοις όνόμασι, κ. διάκονος ό ἐπίσκοπος ἐλέγετο (see also var. readd.). But thus the construction would be imperfect, the σύν having no reference. Theodorct remarks, επισκόπους τούς πρεσβυτέρους καλεί αμφότερα γαρ είχον κατ έκείνον τον καιρον ονόματα,—and alleges Acts xx. 28, Tit. i. 5, 7, as shewing the same. See on the whole subject, my note on Acts xx. 17, and the article Bifchof, by Jacobson, in Herzog's Realencyclopädie für protestantische Theologie u. Kirche.

κ. διακόνοις] See on Rom. xii. 7; xvi. 1. Chrys. enquires why he writes here to the $\kappa \lambda \tilde{\eta} \rho \sigma$ as well as to the äyıoı, and not in the Epistles to the Romans, or Corinthians, or Ephesians. And he answers it, ὅτι αὐτοl καl ἀπέστειλαν, κ. ἐκαρποφόρησαν, κ. αὐτοl ἕπεμψαν πρόs αὐτὸν τὸν Ἐπαφρόδιτον. But the true reason seems to be, the late date of our Epistle. the time when the two former of those Epistles were written. That to the Epiesians rests on grounds of its own. The simple juxtaposition of the officers with the members of the Church, and indeed their being placed after those members, shews, as it still seems to me, against Ellicott in loc., the absence of hierarchical views such as those in the Epistles of the apostolic fathers. 2.] See on Rom. i. 7.

έπί here with a dative is hardly distinguishable in English from the same preposition with a genitive in Rom. i. 10; Eph. i. 16;-at, or in: the primitive idea of such construction being addition by close adherence: 'my whole remembrance of you is accompanied with thanks to God.' πάση τη μνεία must not be rendered as in E. V. (so even Conyb.) 'every remem-brance,' but my whole remembrance. The expression comprehends in one all such remembrances : but the article forbids the above rendering : cf. $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \dot{\eta}$ πόλις, Matt. xxi. 10; also ib. vi. 29; Mark iv. 1 ; Luke iii. 3 : Winer, § 18. 4. Some (Maldon., Bretschn., al.) take eni as assigning the reason for εύχαριστώ (as 1 Cor. i. 1), and µveiq upon as meaning, 'your' remembrance of me,' viz. in sending me sustenance. But this is evidently wrong : for the ground of en xapior û follows, ver. 5. µvela here, remembrance, not 'mention,' which meaning it only gets by $\pi oiei\sigma \theta ai$ being joined to it, 'to make an act of remembrance,' i. c. to mention, Rom. i. 9; Eph. i. 16; 1 Thess. i. 2; Philem. 4. 4.] πάντοτε-πάση-πάντων-here we have the last clause is by Lachm. and Meyer attached to $\pi \epsilon \pi o i \theta \omega s$, but they are surely The reason assigned is, that, in error. if it had belonged to κοινωνία, &c., the article $\tau \hat{\eta}$ would have been repeated. But the same account which I have quoted from Meyer himself above of its omission after $\delta \mu \tilde{\omega} \nu$ will also apply to its omission here-that the whole κοινωνία from the first is taken as one idea, and therefore this feature of it, that it was $\dot{a}\pi \partial \tau \eta s \pi p$. $\dot{\eta}\mu$. άχρι τ. νῦν, need not be specially particularized by the definite article. It is St. Paul's constant habit to place $\pi \epsilon \pi o i \theta a$ first in the sentence (cf. Rom. ii. 19; 2 Cor. ii. 3; Gal. v. 10; ch. ii. 24; 2 Thess. iii. 4; Philem. 26 : also Matt. xxvii. 43), pregnant as it is with emphasis, and including the matter of confidence which follows: and we may certainly say that had this clause referred to $\pi \epsilon \pi o \iota \theta \omega s$, it would have followed, not preceded it. Besides which, the emphatic auto touto would be rendered altogether vapid, by so long an emphatic clause preceding the verb. Ecum., Beza, and Bengel connect the words with the distantly preceding verb $\epsilon i \chi a \rho_i \sigma \tau \hat{\omega}$, which (hardly however, as Ellic., on account of the pres. tense and $\pi \dot{a} \nu \tau \sigma \tau \epsilon$) is still more improbable. πεποιθώς] parallel with ποιούμενοs-being (i. e. seeing I am) confident of ... αὐτὸ τοῦτο this very thing (it points out sharply and emphatically, implying, as here, that the very matter of confidence is one which will ensure the success of the $\delta \epsilon \eta \sigma \iota s$. Conyb. renders it ' accordingly,' which is far too weak. As regards the construction, auto touto is only a secondary accusative, of reference, not governed directly by $\pi \epsilon \pi o i \theta \omega s$. It is immediately resolved into öτι δ έν. κ.τ.λ.). 6. ò έναρξ.] He who has begun in you a good work, viz. God : cf. ch. ii. 13. Wakefield, perversely enough, renders, 'he among you who has begun &c.' By 'a good work,' he refers his confidence to the general character of God as the doer and finisher of good: the one good work in his mind being, their kolvavía &c. év is in, not 'among:' but the preposition in evapsáµevos seems not to be connected with it, cf. reff., where the verb has an absolute meaning, irrespective of any immanent working. The άχρι ήμέρας χρ. Ίησοῦ assumes the nearness of the coming of the Lord (μέχρι της του σωτήρος ήμων έπιpaveias, Thdrt.). Here, as elsewhere, Commentators (even Ellic. recently) have endeavoured to escape from this inference. Thus Thl., Ec., refer the saying not only to the then existing generation of Philippians, but καl τοις έξ ύμων: Estius, in the case of cach man, 'usque ad mortem suam ;' Calov., understanding not the continuance till the day of Christ, but 'terminus et complementum perfectionis, quod habituri isto die erimus :' and so nearly Calvin, but saying very beautifully,-- 'Tametsi enim qui ex corpore mortali sunt liberati, non amplius militent cum carnis concupiscentiis, sintque extra teli jactum ut aiunt: tamen nihil erit absurdi, si dicentur esse in profectu, quia nondum pertigerunt quo aspirant : nondum potiuntur felicitate et gloria quam sperarunt : denique nondum illuxit dies, qui revelet absconditos in spe thesauros. Atque adeo quum de spe agitur, semper ad beatam resurrectionem, tauquam ad scopum, refe-rendi sunt oculi.' Doubtless, this is our lesson, and must be our application of such passages: but this surely was not the sense in which the Apostle wrote them. 7.] Justification of the aboveexpressed confidence :- it was fair and right for him to entertain it. καθώς] a word of later Greek, never used by the elder Attic writers; $= \kappa a \theta \delta$ [Thue.], καθά, καθάπερ (see Phryn. His bonds were his situation: his defence and confirmation of the Gospel his employment in that situation ;- whether he refers to a public defence (2 Tim. iv. 16), or only to that defence of the Gospel, which he was constantly making in private. However this may be, the two, $\dot{a}\pi o \lambda o \gamma$. and $\beta \epsilon \beta a i \omega \sigma i \varsigma$, are most naturally understood as referring to one and the same course of action : otherwise the $\tau_{\hat{\Pi}}$ would be repeated before $\beta \epsilon \beta$. One such $\dot{\alpha} \pi o \lambda$. and $\beta \epsilon \beta$. we have recorded in Acts xxviii. 23 ff. These words, Ev TE Evayyellov, are most naturally taken with the foregoing (Chrys., al., Meyer, De W.), as punctuated in the text, not with the following (Calv., al.) συγκοιν. $\kappa.\tau.\lambda.$, which render a reason for the whole, $\delta_{i\dot{\alpha}}$ to evaryellou.

The rendering gaudii in the Vulg. must have arisen from reading χαραs. The repetition of ύμαs, referring to a vuas gone before, is usual in rhetorical sentences of a similar kind. So Demosth. p. 1225, — би акоύοντά με, каl παρά των άφικνουμένων . . ., — τίνα με ofeoθe ψυχην έχειν; But Bernhardy, Synt. p. 275, remarks that the most accurate writers in verse and prose do not thus repeat the personal pronoun. No such pleonasm is found in Homer or Plato.

In ή άγάπη ὑμῶν its existence is recognized; in µaalov Kal μαλλον περισσ., its deficiency is hinted at. ϵv is not to be taken as if $\epsilon \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma i s$ and alotyous were departments of Love, in which it was to increase : but they are rather elements, in whose increase in their characters Love is also, and as a separate thing, to increase : q. d. ' that your love may increase, but not without an increase in επίγνωσιs and αίσθησιs.' For by these Love is guarded from being ill-judged and misplaced, which, separate from them, it would be : and accordingly, on the increase of these is all the subsequent stress laid. έπίγνωσις is accurate knowledge of moral and practical truth : aiotyous, perceptivity of the same, the power of apprehending it : " the contrary of that dulness and inactivity of the $a i \sigma \theta \eta \tau \eta \rho i a \tau \eta s$ καρδίας (Jer. iv. 19), which brings about moral want of judgment, and indifference" (Meyer). De W. renders it well, moral tact. 10.] Purpose of the increase in knowledge and perceptiveness: with a view to your distinguishing things that are different, and so choosing the good, and refusing the evil. Meyer's objection to this rendering—that the purpose is, not such distinction, but the approval of the good, is, after all, mere triffing : for the former is stated as implying the latter.

He would render with Vulg., E. V., Chr. Hier. i. 3; Dio Cassius xliv. 25. But the simpler and more usual meaning of both verbs is preferable, and has been adopted by Thart. (διακρίσεως, ώςτε είδέναι τίνα μέν καλά, τίνα δε κρείττονα, τίνα δέ παντάπασι τὰ διαφορὰν πρός άλληλα έχοντα), Beza, Wolf, all., Wies., De Wette, al. $\epsilon i \lambda \kappa \rho i \nu \epsilon \bar{s}$] pure: — a double derivation is given for the word : (1) $\epsilon \bar{i} \lambda \eta$, $\kappa \rho i \nu \omega$: that which is proved in the sunlight,-in which case it would be better written as it is often in our MSS., είλ. : and (2) $\epsilon i \lambda os$ ($\epsilon i \lambda \epsilon i \nu$, $i \lambda \lambda \epsilon i \nu$), $\kappa \rho i \nu \omega$: that which is proved by rapid shaking, as in sifting. That this was so, is shewn by the greeting sent ch. iv. 22 from oi en the Kaloapos oinlas, who would hardly have been mentioned in the other case. The word 'prætorium' is also used of castles or palaces belonging to Cæsar [Suet. The fact here mentioned may be traced to St. Paul being guarded by a prætorian soldier, and having full liberty of preaching the Gospel [Acts xxviii. 30 f.]: but more pro-bably his situation had been changed since then,-see Prolegg. to this Epistle, § iii. 6. I should now say that the δλφ, and the tois Aoinois madiv, make it more probable that the prætorium is to be taken in the larger acceptation,-the quadrangular camp now forming part of Aurelian's city walls,-including also the smaller camp on the Palatine) and to all the rest (a popular hyperbole :--- i. e., to others, besides those in the prætorium : not to be taken [Chr., Thdrt., E. But from the context it must refer to his own spiritual good-his own fruitfulness for Christ and glorification of Him, whether by his life or death ;-and so eventually his own salvation, in degree of blessedness, not in relation to the absolute fact itself), through your prayer (his affection leads him to make this addition-q. d. if you continue to pray for me ;--not without the help of your prayers : see similar expressions, 2 Cor. i. 11; Rom. xv. 30, 31; Philem. 22) and (your) supply (to me, by that prayer and its answer) of the spirit of Jesus Christ (the construction obliges us to take έπιχορηγίαs as parallel with δεήσεως, and as the article is wanting, as also included under the $\psi\mu\omega\nu$. Were the sense as E. a meaning can be dogmatically objectionable, I am wholly unable to see. Surely, that intercessory prayer should attain its object, and the supply take place in consequence of the prayer, is only in accord with the simplest idea of any reality in such prayer at all. Then again, is TOU πνεύματος a subjective genitive, 'supply which the Spirit gives,'-so Thdrt. [τοῦ θείου μοι πν. χορηγούντος την χάριν], Calv., De W., Meyer, all.:—or objective, the Spirit being that which is supplied [so Chrys., Thl., Œe., Grot., Beng., al.]? Decidedly, I think, the latter, on account [1] of St. Paul's own usage of $\epsilon \pi i \chi op$ - $\eta\gamma\epsilon\hat{\imath}\nu$ with this very word $\pi\nu\epsilon\hat{\imath}\mu a$ in Gal. iii. 5, which is quite in point here, and [2] perhaps also, but see Ellic., of the arrangement of the words, which in the case of a subjective genitive would have been κ . τοῦ πν. 'Ι. χ. ἐπιχορηγίας, as in Eph. iv. 16, διὰ πάσης ἁφής της επιχορηγίας.-By a delicate touch at the same time of personal humility and loving appreciation of their spiritual eminence and value to him, he rests the advancement of his own salvation, on the supply of the Holy Spirit won for him by their prayers), 20.1 according to (for it is 'our confidence, which hath great recompense of reward, Heb. x. 35 f.) my expectation (not, 'earnest expectation,' which never seems to be the sense of $\dot{a}\pi \dot{o}$ in composition: still less is and superfluous : but kapadokeiv significs to 'attend,' 'look out'-[mapa την κάραν δλην δοκείν ('observare'), Thl. ad loc.]; and $\dot{a}\pi \dot{o}$ adds the signification of 'from a particular position,' or better still that of exhaustion, ' look out until it be fulfilled, '-as in 'exspectare,' $\dot{a}\pi\epsilon\kappa\delta\epsilon\chi_{0\mu}a_{1}$, $\dot{a}\pi\epsilon\chi_{\omega}$, &c. See the word thoroughly discussed in the Fritzschiorum Opuscula, p. 150 ff.) and hope that (Est., al., take $\delta \tau_1$ argumentatively, because : but thus the expectation and hope will have no explanation, and the flow of the sentence will be broken) in nothing (in no point, no particular, see ref. It should be kept quite indefinite, not specified as Chrys. [κάν ότιοῦν γένηται]. ' In none' [of those to whom the Gospel is preached], as Hoelemann, is beside the purpose-no persons are adduced, but only the most general considerations) I shall be ashemed (general: have reason to take shame for my work for God, or His work in me), but (on the contrary: but perhaps after the ev oudevi this need not be pressed) in all (as contrasted with ev ouder above) boldness (contrast to shame :-- boldness on my part, seeing that life or death are both alike glorious for me--and thus I, my body, the passive instrument in which Christ is glorified, shall any how be bold and of good cheer in this His glorification of Himself in me) as always, now also (that I am in the situation described above, ver. 17) Christ shall be magnified (δειχθήσεται ös έστι, Thdrt.: by His Kingdom being spread among men. So Ellicott, saying rightly that it is more than 'praised,' as in my earlier editions) in my body (my body being the subject of life or death, - in the occurrence of either of which he would not he ashamed, the one bringing active service for Christ, the other union with Him in heaven, ver. 21 ff.), either by (means of) life or by (mcans of) death. 21.] For (justification of the preceding to me (emphatic) to live (continue in life, present), (is) Christ (see especially Gal. ii. 20. All my life, all my energy, all my time, is His—I live Christ. That this is the meaning, is clear, from the corresponding clause and the context. But many have taken xpiotos for the subject, and to Ly for the predicate, and others [as Chrys.] have understood $\tau \delta$ ($\tilde{y}\nu$ in the sense of higher spiritual life. Others

'mihi enim vivendo Christus est et moriendo lucrum,' understanding before 7b (. and $\tau \delta$ $d\pi$., kata or the like), and to die ('to have died,' aorist; the act of living is to him Christ; but it is the state after death, not the act of dying, which is gain to him [the explanation of the two infinitives given here does not at all affect their purely substantival character, which Ellic. defends as against me: $\tau \delta (\hat{\eta} \nu is$ life and $\tau \delta$ another is death: but we must not any the more for that lose sight of the tenses and their meaning. τλ αποθνήσκειν would be equally substantival, but would mean a totally different thing]) (is) gain. This last word has surprised some Commentators, expecting a repetition of xpioros, or something at all events higher than mere képsor. But it is to be explained by the foregoing context. 'Even if my death should be the result of my enemies' machinations, it will be no $ai\sigma\chi\dot{\nu}\nu\eta$ to me, but gain, and my $\pi a \beta \delta \eta \sigma i a$ is secured even for that event.

22.] But if (the syllogistic, not the hypothetical 'if :' assuming that it is so) the continuing to live in the flesh (epexcgesis of $\tau \delta$ ($\bar{p}\nu$ above), this very thing (Touro directs attention to the antecedent as the principal or only subject of that which is to be asserted : this very $\langle \hat{\eta} v$ which I am undervaluing is) is to me the fruit of my work (i. e. that in which the fruit of my apostolic ministry will be involved,-the condition of that fruit being brought forth), then (this use of kaí to introduce an apodosis is abundantly justified : cf. Simonides, fragm. Danae, ci δέ τοι δεινόν τόγε δεινόν ήν, καί κεν έμων ρημάτων λεπτον ύπειχες ούας: Hom. Il. ε. 897, εἰ δέ τευ ἐξ άλλου γε θεῶν γένευ ῶδ' ἀίδηλος, καί κεν δη πάλαι ησθα ἐνέρτερος οὐρανιώνων: Od. ξ. 112, αὐτὰρ έπει δείπνησε κ. ήραρε θυμόν έδωδη, καί οί πλησάμενος δώκε σκύφον, ώπερ έπινεν. Atque illum præceps prono rapit alveus ammi.' See Hartung, Partikell. i. 130, where more examples are given. The primary sense is 'also,' introducing a new feature-for whereas he had before said that death was gain to him, he now says, but, if life in the flesh is to be the fruit of my ministry, then [I must add,—this be-sides arises—], &c.) what (i. c. which of the two) I shall choose (for myself) I know not. The above rendering is in the main that of Chr., Thdrt., Œc., Thl., Erasm., Luth., Calv., all., Meyer, De Wette,-and as it appears to me, the only one which will suit the construction and sense. Beza's 'an vero vivere in carne mihi operæ pretium sit et quid eligam ignoro,' adopted [except in his omission of the τοῦτο and his rendering of καρπός έργου by 'operæ pretium'] by Conyb., is open to several objections: (1) the harshness of attaching to on yrwplfw the two clauses $\epsilon i \dots$, and $\tau i \dots$: (2) the doubtfulness of such a construction at all as où $\gamma \nu \omega \rho (\zeta \omega, \epsilon i \dots (3)$ the extreme clumsiness of the sentence when constructed, "whether this life in the flesh shall be the fruit of my labour, and what I shall choose, I know not" (Conyb.): (1) in this last rendering, the lameness of the apodosis in the clause $\epsilon i \ \delta \epsilon \ \lceil \tau \delta \ \langle \eta \nu \ \epsilon \nu \rangle$ σαρκί τοῦτό] μοι καρπός ἔργου, which would certainly, were τοῦτο to be taken with το ζην, have been καρπός μοι έργου οr καρπός έργου μοι. 23.] But (the contrast is to the decision involved in $\gamma \nu \omega \rho i (\omega)$ I am perplexed (rcfl. and Acts xviii. 5 note : held in, kept back from decision, which would be a setting at liberty) by (from the direction of,-kept in on both sides) the two (which have been mentioned, viz. to (no and to anotaveiv: not, which follow . this is evident by the insignificant position of ex Tŵr δύο behind the emphatic verb συνέχομαι, whereas, had the two been the new particulars about to be mentioned, to avaligat and to emilievely.

iva eite κ.τ.λ. This clause is loosely constructed, — the verb ἀκούσω belonging properly only to the second alternative, eiτe ἀπών, but here following on both. Meyer tries to meet this by understanding ἀκούσω in the former case, ' hear from your own mouth : but obviously, idov is the real correlative to ἀκούσω, only constructed in a loose manner : the full construction would be something of this kind, Ίνα, είτε έλθών κ. ἰδών ὑμᾶς είτε ἀπών κ. ἀκούσας τὰ περὶ ὑμῶν, γνῶ ὅτι στήκετε. Then τα περί ύμων, ότι στήκετε is another irregular construction-the article generalizing that which the 871 particularizes, as in oldá oe, tis el, and the like.

έν ένὶ πνεύματι] refers to the unity of spirit in which the various members of the church would be fused and blended in the case of perfect unity: but when Meyer and De W. deny that the Holy Spirit is meant, they forget that this one spirit of Christians united for their common faith would of necessity be the Spirit of God which penetrates and inspires them: cf. Eph. iv. 3, 4. Then, as this Spirit is the highest principle in us,--he includes also the lower portion, the animal soul; μιά ψυχή συναθλούντες] These words must be taken together, not ψυχή taken with στήκετε as in apposition with πνεύματι (Chr., Thl., all.), which would leave συναθλ. without any modal qualification. The ψυχή, receiving on the one hand influence from the spirit, on the other impressions from the outer world, is the sphere of the affections and moral energies, and thus is that in and by which the exertion here spoken of would take place. συναθλοῦντες, either with one another (so Chr., Thdrt., Thl., Ec., all., De W., al.), or with me (so Erasm., Luth., Beza, Bengel, al., Meyer). The former is I think preferable, both on account of the ένι πν. and μιφ ψυχή, which naturally prepare the mind for an united effort, and because his own share in the contest which comes in as a new element in ver. 30, and which Meyer adduces as a reason for his view, seems to me, on that view, superfluous; ¿µoí after συναθλοῦντες (ef. ch. iv. 3) would have expressed the whole. I would render then as E. V., striving together. τη πίστα is a 'dativus commodi'-for the faith, cf. Jude 3-not, as Erasm. Paraphr., 'with the faith,' 'adjuvantes decertantem adversus impios evangelii fidem;' for such a personification of $\pi i \sigma \tau is$ would be without example: nor is it a dative of the instrument (Beza, Calv., Grot., al.), which we have already had in $\psi v \chi \hat{y}$, and which could hardly be with τοῦ εὐαγ. added. 28.] πτύρω, akin to πτοέω, πτώσσω, πτήσσω, to frighten, especially said of animals (ref.), but often also used figuratively, c. g. by Plato, Axioch. p. 370 A, ούκ άν ποτε πτυρείης τον θάνατον: Ps-Clem. The MSS. evidence in favour of the reading el rus is overwhelming ; and in Tischendorf's language, "nobis servandum crit ris, nisi malumus grammatici quam editoris partes agere." It is in its favour, that almost all the great MSS, have $\epsilon i \tau i$ before $\pi a \rho a \mu \upsilon \theta i o \nu$. For if el ris had been a mere mechanical repetition of the preceding, why not in one place as well as in the other ? And if this were once so, and the former τ_{15} got altered back to its proper form, why not this also? The construction may be justified perhaps as analogous to oxhov . . . έχόντων, Mark viii. 1 ; see also Luke ii. 17 ; vii. 49: though, it must be confessed, it is the harshest example of its kind.

And this is all that ean be reasonably said of the difference between them. In the more fervid portions of such an Epistle as this, we must be prepared for something very nearly approaching to tautology. βαβαί, says Chrys., ποσάκις το αυτό λέγει από διαθέσεως πολλής. τ. αύτην άγάπ. έχοντες] τουτέστιν, δμοίως και φιλείν κ. σύμψ. τ. έν φρ.] φιλείσθαι, Chrys. to be taken together as one designation only: $\sigma \dot{\nu} \mu \psi$. having the emphasis, and defining the $\tau \delta \hat{\epsilon} \nu \phi \rho$., with union of soul, unanimous (minding one thing). The ral shows that that first is to be taken with some allowance, for by our very nature, each man must σκοπείν τὰ έαυτοῦ in some measure). On the nature of the strife in the Philippian church, as shewn by the exhortations here, see Prolegg. § ii. 7. 5-11.] The exhortation enforced, by the example of the self-denial of Christ Jesus. The monographs on this important passage, which are very numerous, may be seen enumerated in Meyer. For (reason for the exhortation of the preceding verse) think this in (not 'among,' on account of the ev xp. 'I. following. On the reading, see various readings, and Fritzschiorum Opuseula, p. 49 note) yourselves, which was (expoveito) also in Christ Jesus (as regards the dispute, whether the $\lambda \delta \gamma \sigma s$ άσαρκος or the λόγος ένσαρκος be here spoken of, see below. The expression is one very difficult to render. We may observe, (1) that άρπαγμόν holds the emphatic place in the sentence: (2) that this fact casts to elvar loa beg into the shade, as secondary in the sentence, and as referring to the state indicated by $i\nu \mu op\phi\eta \theta eo \vartheta i \pi d\rho \chi \omega \nu$ above: (3) that $a\rho \pi a \gamma \mu o s$ strictly means, as here given, the act of seizing or snatching [so in the only place in profane writers where it occurs, viz. answers to tà éautŵv σκοποῦντεs above], not [apmayma] the thing so seized or snatched: but that here, $\tau \delta \in lvai$ ioa $\theta \in \hat{\omega}$, i. e. a state, being in apposition with it, the difference between the act [subjective] and the thing [objective] would logically be very small : (4) that το elvai loa θεφ is no new thing, which He thought it not robbery to be, i. e. to take upon Him,but His state already existing, respecting which He οὐχ ἡγήσατο &c. : (5) that this clause, being opposed by and to His great act of self-denial, cannot be a mere secondary one, conveying an additional detail of His Majesty in His præ-existent state, but must earry the whole weight of the negation of selfishness on His part : (6) that this last view is confirmed by the ήγήσατο, taking up and corresponding to ήγούμενοι above, ver. 3. (7) Other renderings have been :-- (a) of those who hold τὸ εἶναι ίσα $θε \tilde{\phi}$, as above to be virtually identical with έν μορφή θεου ύπάρχειν before,—Chrys. says, δ τοῦ θεοῦ vids oùn έφοβήθη καταβήναι από του αξιώματος. ού γαρ άρπαγμον ήγήσατο την θεότητα, ούκ έδεδοίκει μή τις αυτόν άφέληται την φύσιν ή τὸ ἀξίωμα. διὸ καὶ ἀπέθετο αὐτό, θαβρών ότι αυτό άναλήψεται και έκρυψεν, ήγούμενος οὐδεν ελαττοῦσθαι ἀπό τούτου. διὰ τοῦτο οὐκ εἶπεν οὐχ ήρπασεν, ἀλλὰ ούχ άρπαγμεν ήγήσατο, ότι ούχ άρπάσας είχε την άρχην, άλλα φυσικήν, ου δεδομένην, αλλά μόνιμον κ. ασφαλή. And so in the main, Ec., Thl., Aug. :-Beza, "non ignoravit, se in ca re (quod Deo patri coequalis esset) nullam injuriam cuiquam facere, sed suo jure uti : nihilominus famen quasi jure suo cessit "-and so Calvin, but wrongly maintaining for $\eta \gamma \eta \sigma a \tau o$ a subjunctive sense : ' non fuisset arbitratus :' Thurt., Beds yap ov, K. QUOEL BEDS, K. την πρός τόν πατέρα ισότητα έχων, ού μέγα τοῦτο ὑπέλαβε. τοῦτο γὰρ ἴδιον τών παρ' άξίαν τιμής τινος τετυχηκότων. άλλα την άξίαν κατακρύψας, την άκραν ταπεινοφροσύνην είλετο, κ. την ανθρωπείαν ὑπέδυ μορφήν : and so, nearly, Ambr., Castal., all. ; - Luther, Erasm., Grot., Calov., all.,- 'He did not as a victor his spoils, make an exhibition of $\mathcal{E}^{c., but'}$...(β) of those who distinguish τό είναι ίσα θεφ from έν μορφή θεού ύπάρχειν : Bengel,-' Christus, quum posset esse pariter Deo, non arripuit, non duxit rapinam, non subito usus est illa facultate ?' De Wette, ' Christ had, when He began His Messianic course, the glory of the godhead potentially in Himself, and might have devoted Himself to manifesting it forth in His life : but seeing that it lay not in the purpose of the work of Redemption that He should at the commencement of it have taken to Himself divine honour, had He done so, the assumption of it would have been an act of robbery :' - Lünemann [in Meyer]: 'Christus, etsi ab æterno inde dignitate creatoris et domini rerum omnium frueretur, ideoque divina indutus magnificentia coram patre consideret, nihilo tamen minus haud arripiendum sibi esse autumabat existendi modum cum Deo æqualem, sed ultro se exinanivit.' And in fact Arius [and his party] had led the way in this explanation : ότι θεδς ών ελάττων ούχ ήρπασε τό είναι ίσα τῷ θεῷ τῷ μεγάλφ καl μείζονι. See this triumphantly answered in Chrys. Hom. vi. in loc. Indeed the whole of this method of interpretation is rightly charged with absurdity by Chrys., seeing that in $\epsilon \nu \mu o \rho \phi \hat{\eta} \theta \epsilon o \hat{v} \delta \pi d \rho \chi \omega \nu$ we have already equality with God expressed : εὶ ἦν Θεός, πῶς εἶχεν ἁρπάσαι; κ. πῶς ούκ απερινόητον τοῦτο; τίς γαρ αν είποι, δτι δ δείνα, άνθρωπος ών, ούχ ήρπασε τὸ είναι άνθρωπος; πῶς γὰρ άν τις ὅπερ ἐστίν, ἁρπάσειεν; (8) We have now to enquire, whether the opening of the passage will bear to be understood of our Lord already incarnate. De Wette, al., have maintained that the name xpioros 'Inoous cannot apply to the $\lambda \delta \gamma \sigma s \ \delta \sigma \sigma \rho \kappa \sigma s$. But the answer to this is easy, viz. that that name applies to the *entire historical Per*son of our Lord, of whom the whole passage is said, and not merely to Him in his præ-existent state. That one and the same Person of the Son of God, ev mopon deou ύπάρχων, afterwards έν δμοιώματι άνθρώ- $\pi\omega\nu$ eyévero, gathering to itself the humanity, in virtue of which He is now designated in the concrete, Christ Jesus. So that the dispute virtually resolves itself into the question between the two lines of interpretation given above,-on which I have already pronounced. But it seems to me to be satisfactorily settled by the contrast between έν μορφή θεου ύπάρχων

The δoûlos is contrasted with 'equality with God'-and imports 'a servant of God,'-not a servant generally, nor a servant of man and God. And this state, of a servant of God, is further defined by what follows), being made (by birth into the world, - ' becoming :' but we must not render the general, yevóµevos, by the particular, 'being born') in the likeness of men (cf. ev δμοιώματι σαρκός άμαρτίας, Rom. viii. 3. He was not a man, purus putus homo [Mey.], but the Son of God manifest in the flesh and nature of men. On the interpretation impugned above, which makes all these clauses refer to acts of Christ, in our nature, this word δμοιώµati loses all meaning. But on the right interpretation, it becomes forcible in giving another subordinate specification to µopφ ην δούλου λαβών — viz. that He was made in like form to men, who are beou 8.] My interpretation has δούλοι). hitherto come very near to that of Meyer. But here I am compelled to differ from him. He would join και σχ. εύρ. ώς άνθρ. to the foregoing, put a period at avep., and begin the next sentence by eramelvagev without a copula. The main objection to this with me, is, the word copedeis. It seems to denote the taking up afresh of the subject, and introducing a new portion of the history. Hitherto of the act of laying aside the form of God, specified to have consisted in $\mu o \rho \phi h \nu$ δούλου λαβείν, and έν όμ. άνθρώπων γενέσθαι. But now we take Him up again, this having past; we find Him in his human appearanceand what then? we have further acts of self-humiliation to relate. So Van Hengel : "duo enim, ut puto, diversa hic tradit Paulus, et quamnam vivendi rationem Christus inicrit, et quomodo hane vivendi rationem ad mortem usque persecutus sit." And when He was (having been) found in having (guise, outward semblance ; e.g. of look, and dress, and speech. σχήματι is a more specific repetition of όμοιώμ. above : and is here emphatic : being found in habit, &c. He did not stop with this outward semblance, but') as a man (for He was not a man, but God [in Person], with the humanity taken on Him: ώς άνθρωπος — ή γάρ ἀναληφθεῖσα φύσις τοῦτο Ϡν αὐτὸς δὲ τοῦτο οὐκ ήν, τοῦτο δὲ περιέκειτο, Thdrt.) He humbled himself (in His humanity : a further act of self-denial. This time, έαυτόν does not precede, because, as Meyer well says,-in ver. 7 the pragmatic weight rested on the reflexive reference of the act, but here on the reflexive act itself) by becoming (see on the aorist participle above. It specifics, wherein the $\tau a \pi \epsilon i \nu \omega$ - σ is consisted) obedient (to God; as before in the δούλου: not 'capientibus se, damρου. ⁹ διο και ό θεος αυτον ύπερύψωσεν και έχαρί- ^b=[Rom.i.24. is 23] σατο αυτώ [το] ο συομα το υπέρ παν συνομα, ¹⁰ ίνα έν chere only τώ ο ονόματι Ίησου παν ^g γόνυ ^g κάμψη έπουρανίων και ³⁵. xevi. 9. 9-11.] Exaltation of Jesus, consequent on this His humiliation :- brought forward as an encouragement to follow His example. "Quod autem beati sint quicunque sponte humiliantur cum Christo, probat ejus exemplo : nam a despectissima sorte evectus fuit in summam altitudinem. Quicunque ergo se humiliat, similiter exaltabitur. Quis nunc submissionem recuset, qua in gloriam regni calestis conscenditur ?" Calvin. Wherefore (i. e. on account of this His self-humiliation and obedience : see Heb. ii. 9, note : not as Calv., 'quo facto,' trying to evade the meritorious obedience of Christ thus, 'quod dictio illativa hic magis consequentiam sonet quam causam, hinc patet, quod alioqui sequetur, hominem divinos honores posse mereri et ipsum Dei thronum acquirere, quod non modo absurdum sed dictu etiam horrendum est :' strangely forgetting that herein Christ was not a man, nor an example what we can do, but the eternal Son of God, lowering Himself to take the nature of men, and in it rendering voluntary and perfect obedience) also (introduces the result, reff. and Luke i. 35; Acts x. 29) God (on His part : reference to the $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ $\theta \epsilon \hat{\varphi}$ understood after $i\pi \eta \kappa oos$ above) highly exalted Him (not only υψωσεν, but υπερύψωσεν; His exaltation being a super-eminent one, cf. $\delta \pi \epsilon \rho$ - $\nu \iota \kappa \hat{q} \nu$, Rom. viii. 37, also 2 Cor. xii. 7; 2 Thess. i. 3. Not, $\delta a t \hbar$ highly exalted :' the reference is to a historical fact, viz. that of His Ascension), and gave to Him (the Father being greater than the incarnate Son, John xiv. 28, and having by His exaltation of Jesus to His throne. freely bestowed on him the kingly office, which is the completion of His Mediatorship, Rom. xiv. 9) the name which is above every name (ovoua must be kept, against most Commentators, to its plain sense of NAME, - and not rendered ' glory,' or understood of His office. The name is, the very name which He bore in His humiliation, but which now is the highest and most glorious of all names, to ovopa 'IHZOT. Compare His own answer in glory, Acts ix. 5, eyú elui 'Inooûs, ôv où διώκειs. As to the construction in the ree., without the $\tau\delta$ before $\delta\nu\rho\mu a$, the indefinite Svopa is afterwards defined to be that name, which we all know and reverence, by $\tau \delta$ $\delta \pi \epsilon \rho$ $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. The $\tau \delta$ be-fore $\delta \nu o \mu a$ may have been inserted to assimilate the expression to the more 10.] that (intent of this usual one), exaltation) in the name of Jesus (emphatic, as the ground and element of the act which follows) every knee should bend (i. c. all prayer should be made ∫not, as E. V., 'at the name of Jesus every knee should bow,'-which surely the words will not bear]. But what prayer? to JESTS, or to GOD THROUGH HIM? The only way to answer this question is to regard the general aim of the passage. This undoubtedly is, the exaltation of Jesus. The eis $\delta\delta\xi a\nu$ $\theta\epsilon o\hat{\nu}$ $\pi a\tau \rho \delta s$ below is no deduction from this, but rather an additional reason why we should carry on the exultation of Jesus until this new particular is introduced. This would lead us to infer that the universal prayer is to be to JESUS. And this view is confirmed by the next clause, where every tongue is to confess that Jesus Christ is kipios, when we remember the common expression, έπικαλείσθαι το ύνομα κυρίου, for prayer : Rom. x. 12 f.; 1 Cor. i. 2 [2 Tim. ii. 22]; Acts [vii. 59] ix. 14, 21; xxii. 16), of those in heaven (angels. It is therefore better, with Meyer, to refer usre to that which has just preceded, than with De Wette, Wiesinger, al., to all the foregoing exhortations, ch. i. 27 ff. ύπηκούσατε] i. e. to God, as Christ above : not as ordinarily, 'to me' or 'my Gospel.' This last De W. grounds on the presence and absence of the Apostle mentioned below: those clauses however do not belong to $\delta \pi \eta \kappa o \delta \sigma \sigma \tau \epsilon$, but to $\kappa \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \gamma \delta \langle \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$. This is evident by µh is and viv. In fact it would be hardly possible logically to connect them with bankovoare. As it is, they connect admirably with κατεργάζεσθε, see below. ús is by no means superfluous, but gives the sense not as if (it were a matter to be done) in my presence only,--but now (as things are at present) much more (with more carnestness) in my absence (because spiritual help from me is withdrawn from you) carry out (bring to an accomplishment) your own (emphasis on $\epsilon \alpha v \tau \hat{\omega} v$, perhaps as directing attention to the example of Christ which has preceded,-as HE obeyed and won HIS exaltation, so do you obey and carry out your own salvation) salvation (which is begun with justification by faith, but must be carried out, brought to an issue, by sanctification of the Spirit-a life of holy obedience and advance to Christian perfection. For this reason, the E. V., 'work out your own salvation,' is had, because ambiguous, giving the idea that the salvation is a thing to be gotten, brought in and brought about, by ourselves) with fear and trembling (lest you should fail of its accomplishment at the last. The expression indicates a state of anxiety and self distrust : see reff. $-\delta\epsilon\hat{\imath}$ γάρ φοβείσθαι κ. τρέμειν έν τῷ έργάζεσθαι την ίδίαν σωτηρίαν ἕκαστον, μήποτε ύποσκελισθεls έκπέση ταύτης. This working must not be explained away with Pelagius (in Mey.), 'velle operatur suadendo et præmia promittendo?' it is an efficacious working which is here spoken of: God not only brings about the will, but ereates the will -we owe both the will to do good, and the power, to His indwelling Spirit.

The $\theta \in \lambda \in \mathcal{V}$ and $\ell \neq \varphi \neq \psi$ are well explained by Calvin : "Fatemur, nos a natura habere voluntatem : sed quoniam peecati corruptione mala est, tunc bona esse incipit, quum reformata est a Deo. Nee dicimus hominem quicquam boni facere, nisi volentem : sed tune, quum voluntas regitur a Spiritu Dei. Ergo quod ad hanc partem spectat, videmus Deo integram laudem asseri, ac frivolum esse quod sophistæ docent, offerri nobis gratiam et quasi in medio poni, ut cam ampleetemur si libeat. Nisi enim efficaciter ageret Deus in nobis, non diceretur eflicere bonam voluntatem. De secunda parte idem sentiendum. Deus, inquit, est [d] evepywv evepyeiv. Perducit igitur ad finem usque pios affectus, quos nobis inspiravit, ne sint irriti : sicut per Ezechielem (xi. 20) promittit : Faciam ut in præceptis meis ambulent. Conyb. would join ύπερ της εύδ. with the following verse, - do all things for the sake of good will'-and remarks, ' It is strange that so clear and simple a construction, involving no alteration in the text, should not have been before suggested.' But surely St. Paul could not have written thus. The sense of eidoxía indeed, would be the same as in ch. i. 15 :- but that very passage should have prevented this conjecture. It must have been in that case here as there, $\delta i' \epsilon \delta \delta \delta \kappa (a\nu)$, or at all events, $\delta \pi \epsilon \rho$ eddoklas : the insertion of the article where it is generally omitted from abstract nouns after a preposition, as here, necessarily brings in a reflexive sense,-to be referred to the subject of the sentence: and thus we should get a meaning very different from that given by Convb., viz. : ' Do all things for the sake of (to earry out) your own good pleasure.' It has been proposed (I know not by whom, but it was communicated to me by letter : I see it also noticed in Ellic.'s note, and Van Hengel's refutation of it referred to) to take tavτών [ver. 12] as = ἀλλήλων, and render " with fear and trembling labour heartily for one another's salvation;" thus con-necting the $\&s\tau\epsilon$ with ver. 4. The sug-gestion is ingenious, and as far as the mere question of the sense of Eaut ŵv goes, perhaps allowable; but see Eph. iv. 32; Col. iii. 13, 16; 1 Pct. iv. 8, 10: there are, however, weighty and I conceive fatal objections to it. 1) the emphatic position of eaur ŵv, which restricts it to its proper meaning : 2) the occurrence of \u00e9avt\u00e0\u00e9, in the very verse [4] with which it is sought to connect our passage, in its proper meaning—μή τὰ έαυτων ἕκαστοι σκοπεῖτε, ἀλλὰ καl τα έτέρων έκαστοι: 3) the context, and inference drawn by $\omega_{s\tau\epsilon}$, which this rendering altogether mistakes: see it ex-14 if.] More detailed plained above. exhortations, as to the manner of their Christian energizing. yoyyuoµós, in every other place in the N. And the context here makes it best to keep the same sense : such murinurings arising from selfishness, which is especially discommended to us by the example of Christ. putings with men, than doubts respecting God or duty (Mey.). It is objected that the N. T. meaning of διαλογισμόs is generally the latter. But this may be doubted (see on 1 Tim. ii. 8); and at all events the verb διαλογίζω, and its cognute διαλέγοµa, must be taken for 'to dispute' in Mark ix. 33, 34. φaiveoθe, not imperative, as most of the Fathers, Erasm., Calvin, Grot., al., - but indicative, for this is the position of Christians in the world: see Matt. v. 14; Eph. v. 8. So De W., Meyer, Wiesinger, &c. &c. It has been said (Mey., Wies., al.) that we must not render φaiveoθe 'shine,' which would be φaivere: but surely there is but very little difference between 'appear' and 'shine' here, and only St. John and St. Peter use pairw for ' to shine,' John i. 5; v. 35; 1 John ii. 8; Rev. i. 16; 2 Pet. i. 19,-not St. Paul, for whom in such a matter their usage is no rule. Ellic. 1) objects that this must not be alleged against the simple meaning of the word, and 2) wishes to give the middle a special use in connexion with the appearance or rising of the heavenly bodies. But we may answer 1) by such examples as δεινοί δέ οι ύσσε φάανθεν, where Rost and Palm translate the passive 'leuchteten :' and 2) by urging that such a reference seems here to lay too much pregnancy of meaning on the word.

Various senses have been given,-e. g. 'holding fast,' Luther, Estius, Bengel, De Wette, al. : 'in vertice tenentes,' Erasm. : 'sustinentes,' Calv. : 'possessing,' Meyer, who quotes for this meaning Herod. i. 104, of Se Ekúbal Thy 'Aσίαν πασαν ἐπέσχον, and Thue. ii. 101, ό δε τήν τε Χαλκιδικήν κ. Βοττικήν κ. Μακεδονίαν ἅμα ἐπέχων ἔφθειρε,—neither of which justify it: for in both these places it is 'to occupy,' not 'to possess :' as also in Polyb. iii. 112. 8, edxal K. Ovolai κ.τ.λ. επείχον την πόλιν. And this sense would manifestly be inapplicable. His objection to the ordinary rendering, that the subjects of the sentence themselves shine by means of the $\lambda \delta \gamma \sigma \tau \eta s$ $\zeta \omega \hat{\eta} s$, surely is irrelevant: for may not the stars be said 'præbere,' 'prætendere,' their light, notwithstanding that that light is in them? eis kaúx. eµoí] for (result of your thus walking, as concerns myself) a matter of boasting for me against (temporal: reserved for) the day of Christ, that (871 ού μάτην την ύπερ ύμων ανεδεξάμην σπουδήν, Thdrt.) I did not run (the past tense is from the point of view of that day. On έδραμον, see reff.) for nothing, nor labour for nothing (cf. ref. Job). 17, 18.] These verses are closely connected with the preceding; not, as De W., al., with ch. i. 26, which is most unnatural, and never would occur to any reader. The connexion is this : in ver. 16 he had tacitly assumed (eis $\eta\mu$. χ .) that he should live to witness their blameless conduct even till the day of Christ. Now, he puts the other alternative-that the dangers which surrounded him would result in his death :-- and in that case equally he rejoiced, &c. εί καί implies more probability than κa ϵi : in the former the case is presupposed, in the latter mercly hypothesized. Klotz in Devar. p. 519 f., gives two examples from Xcn.'s Anabasis : (1) δδοποιήσειέ γ' αν αύτοις, και εί σύν τεθρίπποις βούλοιντο ἀπιέναι (iii. 2. 24), a supposition evidently thought improbable : (2) $\epsilon \gamma \omega$, $\tilde{\omega} \ K \lambda \epsilon a \nu \delta \rho \epsilon$, εί και οίει με άδικοῦντά τι άγεσθαι (vi. 4. 27), where as evidently the speaker believes that Cleander does entertain the thought. The difference is explained by the common rules of emphasis. In ei wal, the stress is on el, which is simply 'posito,' and the 'even' belongs to that which is assumed : in kal el, the stress is on kal, even, and the strangeness belongs not to the thing simply assumed, but to the making of the assumption. In the present case then, the Apostle seems rather to believe the supposition which he makes. σπέν· Sopal] not future, but present; If I am even being poured out, because the danger was besetting him now, and waxing onward to its accomplishment. He uses the word literally, with reference to the shedding of his blood. "He represents his whole apostolic work for the faith of the Philippians, as a sacrifice : if he is put to death in the course of it, he will be, by the shedding of his blood, poured out as a libatiou upon this sacrifice, as among the Jews (Num. xxviii. 7; xv. 4 ff. Jos. Autt. iii. 9. 4. Winer, RWB., s. v. Trankopfer) and heathens, in their sacrifices, libations of wine were usual, which were poured over the offerings (Hom. Il. λ . 775, $\sigma \pi \epsilon \nu$ δων αίθοπα οίνον ἐπ' αἰθομένοις ίεροισιν: cf. ulso Herod. ii. 39)." Meyer. Wetst., al., would render it 'affundor' (κατασπέν-Somai), and understand it of the pouring of wine over a live victim destined for sacrifice-but wrongly. The Ovoía is the sacrifice : i.e. the deed of sacrifice, not the victim, the thing sacrificed. λειτουργία, priest's ministration, without another article, signifying therefore the same course of action as that indicated by θυσία, viz. his apostolic labours : see below.

της πίστεως ύμ., gen. objective ; your faith is the sacrifice, which I, as a priest, offer to God. The image is precisely as in Rom. xv. 16, where he is the pricst, offering up the Gentiles to God. And the case which he puts is, that he, the priest, should have his own blood poured out at, upon (i.e. in accession to : not locally "upon :" for it was not so among the Jews, see Ellic. here), his sacrificing and presentation to God of their faith. χαίρω] not to be joined with eni, as Chrys., but absolute, I rejoice for myself (ούχ ώς ἀποθανούμενος λυποῦμαι ἀλλὰ χαίρω, ὅτι σπονδὴ γίνοµai, Thl.) and congratulate you (so the Vulg. rightly, and all. : not, ' rejoice with ² · ver. 24. ¹⁹ 'Ελπίζω δὲ ² έν κυρίω 'Ιησοῦ Τιμόθεον ταχέως ABCDF ¹⁰ ndat. Meyer well observes that the following verse is decisive against this: for if they rejoiced already, what need of kai upers xaipere ?- congratulate you, viz. on the fact that I have been thus poured out for your faith, which would be an honour and a boast for you. De W.'s objection, after Van Hengel, that to congratulate would be $\sigma v \gamma \chi \alpha i \rho \rho \mu \alpha \iota$ is futile : cf. Æschin. p. 34, την Έστίαν επώμοσε την βουλαίαν συγχαίρειν τη πόλει ότι τοιούτους άνδρας έπι την πρεσβείαν εξέπεμψεν: -Demosth. p. 194, - Poblois . . . συγχαίρω τῶν γεγενημένων): 18.] and ('but' would be too strong : the contrast is only in the reciprocity) on the same account (accusative of reference, governed by χαίρ.) do ye (imperative, not indicative, as Érasm., al.) rejoice (answer to συγχαίρω above,-for this your honour) and congratulate me (answer to $\chi \alpha l \rho \omega$ above,—

I stated in some former editions, that it is in no case equivalent to the mere local πρόs ύμαs. But Ellic. has reminded me, that this is too widely stated, later writers undeniably using it in this sense. See note on Acts xxi. 16, and cf. such examples as πότερον ηγόμην 'Αβροκόμη, Xen. Eph. iii. 6, and ήγαγεν αὐτόν 'Αθανασίω $\tau \hat{\varphi} \pi \dot{a} \pi \pi q$, Epiph. vit. p. 340 d. The verb is unknown to the classics: the imperative $\epsilon \dot{\nu}\psi \dot{\nu}\chi\epsilon_i$ is found in inscriptions on tombs, in the sense of the Latin 'have pia anima.'

20.] Reason why he would send Timotheus above all others: for I have none else like-minded (with myself, not with Timotheus, as Beza, Calv., al.) who (of that kind, who) will really (emphatic : -with no secondary regards for himself, as in ver. 21) care for your affairs (have real anxiety about your matters, to order 21.] for all them for the best): (my present companions) (who these were, we know not : they are characterized, ch. iv. 21, merely as of συν έμοι άδελφοί-certainly not Luke-whether Demas, in transition between Philem. 24 and 2 Tim. iv. 10, we cannot say) seek their own matters, not those of Jesus Christ (no weakening of the assertion must be thought of, as that of rendering of $\pi dv \tau \epsilon s$, many, or most,-or understanding the assertion, care more about &c. than &c., -as many Commentators: nor must it be restricted to the love of ease, &c., unwillingness to undertake so long a journey, as Chr., Ec., Thl.: both of $\pi d\nu \tau \epsilon s$ and the assertion are absolute). 23.] But the approved worth (reff.) of him ye know (viz. by trial, when we were at Philippi together, Acts xvi. 1, 3,-xvii. 14),-viz.: that as a son (serves) a father, he served with me for (reff.) the Gospel. The construction is this: the Apostle would have written, 'as a son a father, so he served me,' - but changes it to 'so he served with me,' from modesty and reverence, seeing that we are not servants one of another, but all of God, in the matter of the Gospel. We must not supply $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu$ before $\pi a \tau \rho \dot{i}$:--when, in caso of several nouns governed by the same preposition, that preposition is omitted before any, it is not before the first, ef. Plat. Rep. iii. p. 414, dei us mepl μητρός κ. τροφού της χώρας έν ή είσι βουλεύεσθαι: and see Bernhardy, Syntax, p. 205. The examples cited by Ellicott to disprove this, do not seem to me to apply : viz. Æsch. Suppl. 313 [311], Eur. Hel. 872 [863]: both are instances of local terms coupled by wal, and both occur in poetry, where the exigencies of metre come into play. Winer takes the construction as above, edn. 6, § 63, ii. 1 : "as a son with a father" being, in the English translation [p. 599], a misrendering of the German, 'wie bem Bater ein Rinb,' and of a kind which considerably diminishes one's confidence in the accuracy of the English edition. $\mu \epsilon \nu$ answers to $\delta \epsilon$, ver. 24: ovy reassumes ver. 19. ώς ἂν ἀφίδω] as soon as I shall have ascertained. On the force of the proposition, see Heb. xii. 2, note. ás áv, of time, implying uncertainty as to the event indicated : see reff. and Cebes, tab. p. 168, προστάττει δè τοις είςπορευομένοις, τί δει αυτούς ποιείν, ώs αμ eiseλθωσιν eis τον βίον. Sce also Klotz, Devar. pp. 759. 63. The form $\mathbf{\dot{a}}\phi\mathbf{i}\delta\omega$ is supposed by Meyer to be owing to the pronunciation of $i\delta\omega$ with the digamma. The word signifies here, see clearly, as in Herod. viii. 37, enel de dyχοῦ τε ἔσαν οἱ βάρβαροι ἐπιόντες καὶ απώρεον το ipdv following the analogy of $d\pi \epsilon_X \omega$ and similar words: the preposition being not intensive (as Ellic. wrongly reports my view), but exhaustive.

The name was a common one : see Wetst. h. l., and Tacit. Ann. xv. 55; Suet. Domit. 14. There is perhaps no reason for supposing him identical with Epaphras (Col. i. 7; iv. 12. Philem. 23), who was a minister of the Colossian church. We must not attempt to give a strict official meaning to each of the words predicated of Epaphroditus. The accumulation of them serves to give him greater recommendation in the eyes of the Philippians. 25.] συνστρατ. applies to the combat with the powers of darkness, in which the ministers of Christ are the leaders : see besides ref., 2 Tim. ii. 3.

παραπλήσιον does not involve any ellipsis (De W.) as of aplacero or the like, but (as Mcy.) it stands adverbially as $\pi a \rho a \pi \lambda \eta$ σίως; so in Polyb. iii. 33. 10, εί πεποιήκαμεν παραπλήσιον τοις άξιοπίστως ψευδομένοις των συγγραφέων: and θανάτω is the dative of congruence after it, -sometimes a genitive, as Plat. The dative after $\epsilon \pi i$ is more usual: so $\phi d\nu os$ έπ) φόνω, Eur. Iph. Taur. 197 (189): the accus. giving the sense of accession,-"sorrow coming upon sorrow," - not, sorrow superimposed upon sorrow. The second $\lambda \psi \pi \eta \nu$ refers to his own distress in his imprisonment, so often implied in this Epistle : see Prolegg. § iii. 4, 5 : 'si ad vincula accessisset jactura amici,' Grot. This is better, than with Chrys., al., to refer it to Epaphroditus's siekness, $-\tau \eta \nu$ από της τελευτής έπι τη δια την αρφωστίαν,—which does not agree with ἀλυπότερος, ver. 28, implying that λύπη would remain even after the departure of Epaphroditus. 28.] πάλν most naturally, considering St. Paul's habit of prefixing it to verbs, belongs to $\chi a \rho \bar{\eta} \tau \epsilon$: and there is here no reason to depart from his usage and attach it to lδόντε, as Beza, Grot., De W., all., have done. doubt whether to read παραβουλ. or παραβολευσάμενος. Both words are unknown to Greek writers. The first verb would signify 'male consulere vitw,' and is found not unfrequently in the fathers, especially Chrys., which makes it all the more likely to have been introduced here for the other. This latter would be formed from παράβολος, 'venturesome,' as περ-περεύομαι from πέρπερος (1 Cor. xiii. 4), άλογεύομαι from άλογος (Cic. ad Att. vi. 4): similarly ἀσωτεύομαι, φιλανθρωπεύομαι, πονηρεύομαι, &c. 1.] He appears to have been closing his Epistle ($\tau \delta \lambda o_i \pi \delta \nu$, and reff.), but to have again gone off, on the vehement mention of the Judaizers, into an explanation of his strong term κατατομή. Chrys., al., find a connexion with the foregoing, but it is farfetched (έχετε Ἐπαφρ., δι' δν ήλγειτε, έχετε Τιμόθ., έρχομαι κάγώ. το εὐαγγέλιον ἐπιδίδωσι· τί ὑμῖν λείπει λοιπόν;): the sense is evidently closed with ch. iii. 30.

Tà avtá] It seems to me that Wiesinger has rightly apprehended the reference of this somewhat difficult sentence. The xalpere ev Ruply, taken up again by the outes otykete iv kupie, ch. iv. 1, is evidently put here emphatically, with direct reference to the warning which follows-let your joy (your boast) be in the Lord. And this same exhortation, xaipew, is in fact the groundtone of the whole Epistle. See ch. i. 18, 25; ii. 17; iv. 4, where the πάλιν έρῶ seems to refer back again to this saying. So that there is no difficulty in imagining that the Apostle may mean $\chi \alpha i \rho \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ hy the $\tau \dot{a} \alpha \dot{v} \tau \dot{a}$. The word $\dot{a} \sigma \phi \alpha \lambda \dot{\epsilon} s$ is no objection to this : because the xalp. iv nup. is in fact an introduction to the warning which follows : a provision, by upholding the antagonist duty, against their falling into deceit. And thus all the speculation, whether tà aùta refer to a lost Epistle, or to words uttered $(\gamma \rho \dot{\alpha} \phi \epsilon i \nu ?)$ when he was with them, falls to the ground. And the inference from Polycarp's words in his Epistle to these Philippians, § 3, p. 1008,

The appellation occurs in various references ; but in the Jewish usage of it, uncleanness was the prominent idea : see, besides reff., Deut. xxiii. 18; Isa. lvi. 10, 11; Matt. xv. 26, 27. The remark of Chrys. is worth noting in connexion with what follows: οὐκέτι τέκνα Ιουδαίοι. ποτέ οί έθνικοί τοῦτο ἐκαλοῦντο, vvv de excivor. But I would not confine it entirely to them, as the next clause certainly generalizes further. τούς κακούς έργάτας] cf. δόλιοι έργάται, 2 Cor. xi. 13,- έργάτην ανεπαίσχυντον, 2 Tim. ii. 15,- έργάζονται μέν γάρ, φησιν, άλλ' $\ell \pi$ | $\kappa \alpha \kappa \hat{\varphi}$. Laert. vi. 24, of Diogenes the Cynic, την Εὐκλείδου σχολην ἕλεγε χολήν, την δὲ Πλάτωνος διατριβήν κατατριβήν. Cf. Gal. v. 12 note. On the thrice repeated article, Erasmus says, 'indicat, cum de certis quibusdam loqui, quos illi noverint') : 3. for we are the περιτομή, the real cincumcision (whether bodily circumcised, or not there would be among them some of both sorts : see Rom. ii. 25, 29; Col. ii. 11), who serve (pay religious service and obedience) by the Spirit of God (cf. John iv. 23, 24. The dative is instrumental, Rom. viii. 13,-expressing the agent, whereby our service is rendered : see Rom. v. 5; viii. 14; xii. 1; Heb. ix. 14. The emphasis is on it : for both profess a λατρεία. The 6coû is expressed for solemnity), and glory in (stress on Kauxúµevot, -are not ashamed of Him and seek our boast in circumcision, or the law, but make our boast in Him) Christ Jesus, and trust not in the flesh (stress on iv σαρκί - 'but, in the Spirit in our union with Christ').

Calvin well distinguishes between the real and apparent righteousness in the law-the former before God, never possessed by any man: the latter before men, here spoken of by Paul : - ' erat crgo hominum judicio sanctus, et immunis ab omni reprehensione. Rara sane laus, et prope singularis : videanus tamen quanti cam fecerit').

Or, it may be, "them all," as Ellic. : but this almost involves a tautology; and, besides, τa $\pi d \nu \tau a$ stands too far from $d \tau \iota \nu a$ for the $\tau \dot{a}$ to be reflexive), and esteem them to be refuse, that I may (by so disesteeming them : Iva gives the aim of what went before) gain Christ (not, as the rationalizing Grot., ' Christi favorem :' no indeed, it is Christ Himself,-His perfect image, His glorious perfection, which he wishes to win. He has Him now, but

Cf. ref. 2 Cor.) in Him (living and being, and included, in Him as my element), not having (specification of eup. ev av to, but not to be joined, as Lachm., al., with ev avro, which would make this latter superfluous) my own righteousness (see on ver. 6) which is of (arising from) the law, but that which is through (as its medium) the faith of (in) Christ (a construction of this sentence has been suggested to me, which is perhaps possible, and at all events deserves mention. It consists in making έμην δι-Kalogurny predicative; "not having as my righteousness that righteousness which is of the law, but that which is through faith in Christ"), the righteousness which is of (answering to ek vouou,-as its source, see Eph. ii. 8) God on my faith (built on, grounded on, granted on condition of, my faith. It is more natural to take έπὶ τῆ πίστει with δικαιοσύνην, which it immediately follows, than with Meyer to understand another $\xi_{\chi\omega\nu}$ to attach it to. The omission of the article is no objection, but is very frequent, where the whole expression is joined as one idea. Chrys., al., join eni ti niotel with tou γνώναι, as if it were του έπι τ. π. γνώναι, which of course is unallowable: Calv., Grot., Bengel, make the infinitive τοῦ γνώναι dependent on πίστει ["describit

Not, 'from above,' = άνω- $\theta \epsilon \nu$: but the allusion is to his appointment having been made directly in heaven, not by delegation on earth) calling (not as we familiarly use the word,—' calling in life,' &c.-but to be kept to the act of his being called as an Apostle : q. d. 'the prize consequent on the faithful carrying out of that summons which I received from God in heaven') of God (who was the caller: but we must not think of Him, as Grot., al., -as the arbiter sitting above and summoning to the course,-for in these last words the figure is dropt, and $\dot{\eta} \, \check{\alpha} \nu \omega \, \kappa \lambda \hat{\eta}$ - σ is represents real matter of fact) in Christ Jesus (to what are these last words to be referred ? Chrys., al., join them with διώκω :- έν χ. 'Ι. τοῦτο ποιῶ, φησιν. ού γάρ ένι χωρίς της εκείνου βοπής τοσούτον διελθείν διάστημα πολλής δεί τής βοηθείας, πολλής τής συμμαχίας. But I own the arrangement of the sentence thus seems to me very unnatural-and the constant practice of St. Paul to join $\theta \epsilon \delta s$ and things said of beds with ev xpioto weighs strongly for the other connexion, viz. that with τ. κλήσεως του θεου. The objection that then $\tau \eta s$ or $\tau o \hat{v}$ would be required before $\epsilon \nu$, is not valid; the unity of the idea of the κλησις έν κυρίω, 1 Cor. vii. 22, would dispense with it). 15, 16. Erhortation to them to be unanimous in following this his example. In order to understand this somewhat difficult passage, we must remember (1) that the description of his own views and feelings which he holds up for their imitation (συμμιμηταί μου $\gamma i \nu$.) began with having no confidence in the flesh, ver. 4, and has continued to ver. 14. Also (2) that the description commencing with oros our release, is taken up again from ver. 3, ήμεῖς γάρ ἐσμεν ή περιτομή, οί πνεύματι θεοῦ λατρεύοντες, κ. καυχώμενοι έν χ. Ίησοῦ, κ. οὐκ ἐν σαρκὶ πεποιθότες. These two considerations will keep us from narrowing too much the TouTo φρονῶμεν, and from misunderstanding the όσοι ούν τέλειοι. As many of us then (refers to ver. 3: see above) as are perfect (mature in Christian life, = those described above, ver. 3), let us be of this mind (viz. that described as entertained by himself, vv. 7-14): and if in any thing (accusative of reference : see Kühner, Ġramm. ii. 220 ff.) ye be differently minded (for έτέρως, cf. Od. a. 232 ff., μέλλεν μέν ποτε οίκος όδ' ἀφνειὸς κ. ἀμύμων | ἕμμε-ναι, ὕφρ' ἕτι κεῖνος ἀνὴρ ἐπιδήμιος ήεν | νυν δ' έτέρως εβάλοντο θεοί, κακά μητιόωντες: Demosth. p. 298. 22, εἰ μέν τι των δεόντων έπράχθη, τον καιρόν, οὐκ έμέ φησιν αίτιον γεγενήσθαι, των δ' ώς έτέρως συμβάντων απάντων έμε και την έμην τύχην αίτίαν είναι. Hence it gives the meaning of diversity in a bad sense. The difference referred to seems to be that of too much self-esteem as to Christian perfection : see below), this also (as well as the rest which He has revealed) will God reveal to you (i. e. in the progress of the Christian life, you will find the true knowledge of your own imperfection and of Christ's all-sufficiency revealed to you by God's Spirit, Eph. i. 17 fl. öpa e here onlyt. 17 ^e Συμμιμηταί μου γίνεσθε, ἀδελφοί, καὶ ^f σκοπείτε ABDP KLN ab Gal. ri. i ref. τοὺς οὕτως ^g περιπατοῦντας καθὼς ἔχετε ^h τύπον ⁱ ἡμᾶς. cde fg 8 rom. vi. 1 ¹⁸ πολλοὶ γὰο ^g περιπατοῦσιν, ^k οῦς πολλάκις ^k ἔλεγυν ^h no 17 ref. h - 1 Thess. i.7. 2 Thess. iii. 9. 1 Tim. iv. 12. On the construction, see reff.), walk by the same (path) (reff.: Polyb. xxviii. 5. 6, βουλόμενοι στοιχείν τη της συγκλήτου προθέσει: see Fritz. ad Rom. iii. p. 142. On the elliptic usage of the infinitive for the imperative see Kühner, ii. p. 342, where many examples are given. It appears from these that the usage occurs in the 2nd person only: which determines this to be not 'let us walk,' but 'walk ye'). The exhortation refers to the onward advance of the Christian life-let us go on together, each one in his place and degree of advance, but all in the same path. 17 -IV. 1.] Exhortation to follow his example (17): warning against the enemies of the cross of Christ (18, 19): declaration of the high privileges and hopes of Christians (20, 21), and affectionate entreaty to stedfastness (iv. 1). Be imitators together (i. e. with one another: so, and not imitators together with those mentioned below [Mey., Wies.], must the word here be rendered. The latter would be allowable as far as the word is concerned, but the form of the sentence determines for the other. συμμιμηταί μου γ ire $\sigma \theta \epsilon$ forms a complete clause, in which συμμιμηταί has the place of emphasis, and in $\sigma \nu \mu \mu \mu \eta \tau al$ the preposition: it is therefore unallowable to pass on the sense of the $\sigma \nu \mu$. to another clause from which it is separated by kai and another verb. So that instead of kal σ koneite $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. being a reason for this meaning, it is in fact a reason against it) of me, and observe (for imitation : τούς εὐτέλειαν μαλ-λον ή πολυχρηματίαν σκοποῦντας, Xen. Symp. iv. 42) those who walk in such manner as ye have an example in us. The construction is much controverted. Moyer and Wiesinger would separate ούτωs and καθώs-observe those who thus walk (i. e. as implied above); as ye have (emphatic-ye are not in want of) an example in us (viz. Paul and those who thus walk). My objection to this is, that if ovtus and kabus are to be independent -the three verbs yiveole, okomeire, exere, being thus thrown into three independent clauses, will be all correlative, and the έχετε τύπον will not apply to ούτως περιπατούντας, but to the foregoing verbs, thus stultifying the sentence : "Be &c., and observe Sc., as ye have an example (viz. of being συμμιμηταί μου and of σκοπείν τούς ούτως περιπατούντας) in us." Besides which, the outure $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\pi a \tau o v \tau a s$ would be (1) very vague as referring back to what went before, seeing that no $\pi \epsilon \rho i$ - $\pi a \tau \epsilon i \nu$ has been specified, whereas (2) it is directly related to what follows, by the πολλοί περιπατούσιν of ver. 18. I therefore retain the usual rendering. Meyer's objections to it are, (1) that it is Exerc, not $\xi_{XOV \sigma i \nu}$:-- but this does not affect the matter: for, the example including in its reference the rows obras $\pi \epsilon \rho_1 \pi a \tau_0 \partial \nu \tau a s$ and the Philippians, the 2nd person would be more naturally used, the 3rd making a separation which would not be desirable: -(2) that it is $\eta\mu\bar{\alpha}s$, not $\epsilon\mu\epsilon$:-but granting that this does not apply to Paul alone, it certainly cannot, as Mey., be meant to include the robs our. $\pi \epsilon \rho$. with him, which would be a way of speaking unprecedented in his writings,-but must apply to himself and his fellow-workers, Timotheus, Epaphroditus, &c. Of course the $\tau \upsilon \pi \circ \nu$ is no objection (as De W.) to the proper plural sense of $\eta \mu \hat{a}s$, for it is used of that wherein they were all united in one category, as in ήδειs την ύψιν (Plat.), κακοί την ψυχήν (Æsch.): see Kühner, ii. 27. 18.] For (reason for σκοπείτε κ.τ.λ. in the form of warning against others who walk differently) many walk giving the English reader the idea of $\zeta \omega \eta$, and so misleading him. I may remark, in passing, on the unfortunate misconception of St. Paul's use of the plural, which has marred so many portions of Mr. Cony-bearc's version of the Epistles, and none more sadly than this,-where he gives the Apostle's noble description of the state and hopes of us Christians, as contrasted with the τà eπly. φρονοῦντες,-all in the singular-' For my life, &c., - from whence also I look, &c.') subsists (the word is more solemn, as indicating priority and fixedness, than estiv would be : see notes, ch. ii. 6, and Acts xvi. 20) in the heavens, from whence (où does not refer to $\pi o \lambda l$ - $\tau \epsilon \nu \mu a$, as Beng., al.—nor $\equiv \delta \nu$, nor to be rendered 'ex quo tempore,' as Erasm., but έξ οῦ is adverbial, 'unde,' see Winer, § 21. 3, and ef. Xen. Anab. i. 2. 20, ήμέρας τρεîs, έν φ) also (additional particular, following on heaven being our country) we wait for (expect, till the event arrives: see note on Rom. viii. 19, and a dissertation in the Fritzschiorum Opuscula, p. 150 ff.) a Saviour (emphatic: therefore we cannot tà enly. opoveiv, because we are waiting for one to deliver us from them. Or, as Saviour [Ellic.]: but perhaps the other is preferable, as being simpler), (viz.) the Lord Jesus Christ, 21.] (describes the method, in which this Saviour shall save us-a way utterly precluding our making a God of our body) who shall transform (see 1 Cor. xv. 51 ff. The words assume, as St. Paul always does when speaking incidentally, the $\eta\mu\epsilon$ surviving to witness the coming of the Lord. The change from the dust of death in the resurrection, however we may accommodate the expression to it, was not originally contemplated by it; witness the anekoexoue0a, and the σώμα της ταπεινώσεως ήμῶν. It is quite in vain to attempt to escape from this inference, as Ellicott does, by saying that "every moment of a true Christian's life involves such an ἀπεκδοχήν." This is most true, but in no way accounts for the peculiar expressions used here) the body of our humiliation (beware of the hendiadys, by which most Commentators, and even Conyb. here enervate the Apostle's fine and deep meaning. The body is that object, that material, in which our humiliation has place and is shewn, by its suffering and being degraded-πολλά πάσχει νῦν τὸ σῶμα, δεσμεῖται, μαστίζεται, μυρία πάσχει δεινά, Chrys. He once had such a raneivwois, and has passed through it to His glory-and He shall change us so as to be like Him .- Whereas the rendering 'our vile body' sinks all this, and makes the epithet merely refer to that which is common to all humanity by nature. It is besides, perhaps, hardly allowable : for rancivoris cannot-unless the exigency of context require it, as in ref. Luke [not in Prov. xvi. 19],-signify mere 'vileness,' raneworns, but must imply the act wherehy the body $\tau a \pi \epsilon i \nu o \hat{v} \tau a i$ (so as to be) conformed to (on this common idiom, є борнов, & тахалка, коїщитов отоща, Æsch. So Thdrt., - σύνζυγον καλεί, ώς τον αὐτόν έλκοντα της εύσεβείας (υγόν, Pelag., all., and De W.,-and of these some (Grot., Calov., al.) have understood Epaphroditus, -Estius, Timotheus,-Bengel (but afterwards he preferred Epaphroditus), Silas, -Luther, the chief bishop at Philippi. (4) Others have regarded SúvLuye as a proper name : so Tivés in Chrys. and Ec., and so In this case the yvhore would Meyer. mean, 'who art veritably, as thy name is,' a yoke-fellow. And this might be said by the Apostle, who elsewhere compares the Christian minister to the Bous alow. It seems to me that we must choose bctween the two last hypotheses. The objections to each are about of equal weight : the Apostle nowhere else calls his fellowlabourers σύνζυγοι,- and the proper name Σύνζυγοs is nowhere else found. But these are no reasons, respectively, against either hypothesis. We may safely say with Chrys., είτε τοῦτο, είτε ἐκείνο, οὐ σφόδρα ἀκριβολογείσθαι δεί. συνλαμβάνου αυταίς] help them (Euodia and Syntyche) : but not, as Grot., 'ut habeant, unde se suosque honeste sustentent :' it is the work of their reconciliation which he clearly has in view, and in which they would need help. aïrives] 'utpote quæ'-seeing that they The E.V. here is in error, 'help those women which ...' These words belong to συνήθλησαν, not to συνλαμβάνου, and are rather an additional reminiscence, than a part of the exhortation 'as did Clemens also &c.' q. d. 'not that I mean, by naming those women with distinction, to imply forgetfulness of those others &c., and especially of Clemens.' The insertion of kal between the preposition and substantive is said to be a habit principally of Pindar,-c.g.

έν καὶ θαλάσσα, Ol. ii. 28 ; έν καὶ τελευτậ, Ol. vii. 26 : επl κal θανάτω, Pyth. iv. 330. See Hartung, i. 143. It is not necessary to regard the $\kappa al - \kappa al$ as bound together: so that these examples are in point (against Ellic.). Clemens must have been a fellow-worker with the Apostle at Philippi, from the context here; and, from the non-occurrence of any such name among Paul's fellow-travellers, and the fact that ol Aoinol συνεργοί must have been Philippians,—himself a native of Philippi. It is perhaps arbitrary, seeing that the name is so common, to assume his identity with Clemens afterwards Bishop of Rome, and author of the Epistles to the Corinthians. So Eus. H. By the γνωσθήτω πασιν ανθρ., the Apostle rather intends, thet no man know of you any inconsistency with $\epsilon \pi \imath \epsilon i \kappa \epsilon \imath a$. The universality of it justifies its application even to those described above, ch. iii. 18 f., -that though warned against them, they were to show all moderation and elemency towards them : so Chrys. Meyer observes well, that the succession of these precepts seems to explain itself psychologically by the disposition of spiritual joy in the Lord exalting us both above rigorism, and above anxiety of mind (ver. 6). δ κύριος eyyús] These words may apply either to the foregoing-'the Lord will soon come, He is the avenger; it is yours to be moderate and clement' (so De Wette, all.) : or to the following-' the Lord is near. be not auxious :' so Chrys., Thdrt., all. Perhaps we may best regard it as the transition from the one to the other: Christ's coming is at hand-this is the best enforcer of clemency and forbearance : it also leads on to the duty of banishing ansiety. ό κύριος is Christ, and the iyyús refers to the $\pi a \rho o \upsilon \sigma i a$; see on ch. iii. 20. 6.] $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon\nu$ has the emphasis. Hence, though edxap. occurs 12 times in St. Paul's Epistles, it is only twice used with the article, 1 Cor. xiv. 26, 2 Cor. iv. 15." Your care for me was, so to speak, the life of the tree; it existed just as much in winter when there was no vegetation, when ye $\eta \kappa a i \rho \epsilon \hat{i} \sigma \theta \epsilon$, as when the buds were put forth in spring. This is evident by what follows. We must thank Meyer, to whom we owe so much in accuracy of grammatical interpretation, for having followed out the right track here, first indicated by Bengel, and rendered $\tau \delta$ and Ellicott recently) has been to regard the words as $= \tau \delta' \phi \rho \sigma \nu \epsilon i \nu \delta \pi \epsilon \rho \epsilon \mu \sigma i$, thus depriving the relative έφ' φ of any thing to refer to, and producing the logical absurdity [Mey.], $\epsilon \phi \rho \rho \nu \epsilon \hat{\iota} \tau \epsilon \epsilon \pi i$ τῷ ὑπέρ ἐμοῦ φρονείν, or forcing ἐφ' ῷ to some unjustified meaning ('although,' as Luth., al.,-'sicut,' as vulg.,-&c.), or understanding it 'for whom,' as Calv., al., -contrary to the Apostle's usage, in which [reff.] io is always neuter. But if we take το υπέρ έμου together, - ' my interest,'-and govern it by poveiv, all will be simple and clear : I rejoiced, &c. that at last ye flourished in anxiety for my interest: for which purpose (cf. Plat. Gorg. p. 502 B, έφ' φ έσπούδακε :- the purpose, namely, of flourishing, putting forth the supply which you have now sent. It is true the Philippians had all the giving, the Apostle all the receiving : the debtor side was vacant in their account, the creditor side in his: but this did not make it any the less an account of "giving-and-receiving," categorically so called. This explanation, which is Meyer's, is in my view far the most simple [against Ellic., who appa-rently has misunderstood it], and preferable to the almost universal one, that his creditor and their debtor side was that which he spiritually imparted to them : for the introduction of spiritual gifts does not belong to the context, and therefore disturbs it. In this Epistle, the plural and singular are too plainly distinguished to allow us to confuse them in translating : the plural pervading eh. i., the singular ch. ii., and the two occurring together in ch. iv. 3, 4, and the singular thenceforward. The change, as Mey. remarks, is never made without a pragmatic reason) give thanks to God the Father $\pi a \tau \eta \rho$, like $\eta \lambda \iota os$, $\gamma \eta$, &c. is anarthrous, as indeed often in our own language, from its well-known universal import as a predicate necessarily single of its kind: see Eph. i. 2, 3) of our Lord Jesus Christ, always (I prefer, against De W., Mey., B. Crus., Eadie, to join πάντοτε to περ. ύμ. προσευχ., rather than to εύχαριστ. For 1] it would come rather awkwardly after so long an interruption as $\tau \hat{\varphi} \theta$. $\pi a \tau$. τ. κυρ. ήμ. Ίησ. χρ. [see however 1 Cor. xv. 58]: and 2] I doubt whether the next clause would begin with περί ύμων, so naturally as with πάντοτε περί ύμων, which are found together so usually, cf. 1 Cor. i. 4; 1 Thess. i. 3 [2 Thess. i. 2]) praying for you (Meyer's and Eadle's objection to joining $\pi \dot{\alpha} v \tau \sigma \tau \epsilon$ with $\pi \rho \sigma s \epsilon v \chi \dot{\alpha} \mu \epsilon v \sigma s$ is, that it is much more natural to say 'we always give thanks when we pray,' than ' we give thanks, always pray-ing.' But we must remember that ' prayer with thanksgiving' was the Apostle's re-commendation [Phil. iv. 6], and doubtless his practice, and that the wider term προseuχόμενοs included both): since we heard of (not, because we heard : see Eph. i. 15. The facts which he heard, not the fact of his hearing, were the ground of his thanksgiving) your faith in (not $\tau \eta \nu$ ϵv : the immediate element of their faith, not its distinctive character, is the point brought out) Christ Jesus, and the love which ye have (these words, dwelling on the fact as reported to him, carry more affectionate commendation than would merely the article $\tau h \nu$ of the ree.) towards all the saints, 5.] on account of (not to be joined with evyapior. as Beng., Eadic, al.: for, as Mey., the ground of such thanksgiving is ever in the spiritual state of the person addressed, see Rom. i. 8; 1 Cor. i. 4 ff.; Eph. i. 15 &c., and this can hardly [against Eadie] be said to be of such a kind: but with $h\nu \, \epsilon \chi \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ so Chr.: τοῦτο πρὸς τοὺς πειρασμούς, ώςτε μη ένταῦθα ζητεῖν την ἄνεσιν. So also Calvin, who combats the argument of Est., al., deriving support for the idea of meritorious works from this verse. It is obvious that we must not include $\tau \eta \nu$ $\pi i \sigma \tau i \nu \dot{\nu} \mu \hat{\nu} \nu$ in the reference, as Grot., Olsh., De W., al., have done: for $\pi i \sigma \tau i s$ ev x. This love is emphatically a gift, and in its full reference the chief gift of the Spirit, [Gal. v. 22; Rom. xv. 30], and is thus in the elemental region of the Spirit, -as distinct from those unspiritual states of mind which are ev oapki. This love of the Colossians he lays stress on, as a ground for thankfulness, a fruit of the hope laid up for them, — as being that side of their Christian character where he had no fault [or least fault, see ch. iii. 12—14] to find with them. This is by far the most difficult of the three readings [see var. readd.], the meaning of $\epsilon \nu$ and ϵls , being very obvious-the former pointing out the clement, the latter the proposed measure, of the increase. And hence, probably, the variations. It is the knowledge of God which is the real instrument of enlargement, in soul and in life, of the believernot a $\gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \sigma_{13}$ which $\phi \nu \sigma_{10}$, but an $\epsilon \pi i$. 11.] (cor- $\gamma \nu \omega \sigma \iota s$ which $a \dot{v} \xi \dot{a} \nu \epsilon \iota$), responding to $i \nu \pi a \nu \tau i \kappa \tau \lambda$. above) in (not instrumental [Mey.], but betokening the element : all these, $\overline{\epsilon}\nu \pi d\sigma \eta$, $\epsilon \nu \pi a \nu \tau l$ are subjective, not objective. The instrument of this strength comes in below) all (departments of every kind of) strength being strengthened according to (in pursuance of, as might be expected from, reff.) the power of His glory (beware of the hendiadys, 'his glorious power,' into which

E. V. has fallen here : the attribute of His glorious majesty here brought out is its κράτος [see Eph. i. 19, note], the power which it has thus to strengthen. In the very similar expression Eph. iii. 16, it was the $\pi \lambda o \hat{v} \tau o s \tau \hat{\eta} s \delta \delta \xi \eta s a \dot{v} \tau o \hat{v}$, the exuberant abundance of the same, from which as an inexhaustible treasure our strength is to come) to (so as to produce in you, so that ye may attain to) all patient endurance (not only in tribulations, but generally in the life of the Spirit. Endurance is the result of the union of outward and inward strength) and long-suffering (not only towards your enemics or persecutors, but also in the conflict with error, which is more in question in this Epistle. Chrys.'s distinction, μακροθυμεί τις πρός εκείνους ούς δυνατόν και αμύνασθαι ύπομένει δέ obs où dúvatai àµúvaotai, though in the main correct, must not be closely pressed: see [Mey.] Heb. xii. 2, 3) with joy (Mey. argues that these words must be joined, as Chr., Ec., Thl., Est., al., with edxapior., because in the other clauses the participles were preceded by these propositional qualifications. But this can hardly be pressed, in the frequent disregard of such close parallelism by our Apostle, and seeing that ευχαριστ. does in fact take up again μετà $\chi a \rho \hat{a} s$, which if attached to it is flat and unmeaning : and as De Wette says, by joining $\mu\epsilon\tau$. $\chi a\rho$. to $\epsilon v \chi$., we lose the cssential idea of joyful endurance,-and the beautiful train of thought, that joyfulness in suffering expresses itself in thankfulness to God. Jesus Christ: sec reff.) who made (historical-by His gift of the Spirit through His Son) us (Christians) capable (not, 'worthy,' as Est. after the Vulg.) for the share (participation) of the inheritance of the saints in the light (it is much disputed with what iv Tỹ φωτί is to be joined. Mey., after Chr., Ec., Thl., &c., regards it as instrumental—as the means of the inavaoral which has been mentioned. But this seems unnatural, both in sense, and in the position of the words, in which it stands too far from in. to be its qualifying clause. It connects much more naturally with κλήρου, or perhaps better still with the whole, $\tau h \nu \mu \epsilon \rho (\delta a$ τ. κλήρου των άγ., giving το φωs as the region in which the inheritance of the saints, and consequently our share in it, is situated. The question as to whether he is speaking of a present inheritance, or the future glory of heaven, seems best answered by Chrys., δοκεί δέ μοι κ. περί τῶν παράντων κ. περί τῶν μελλόντων όμοῦ λέγειν. The inheritance is begun here, and the meetness conferred, in gradual sanctification : but completed hereafter. We are $\ell \nu \tau \hat{\varphi}$ φωτί here : cf. This arrangement, Church which is Meyer's, is far more exact than the triple division of Bähr,- 'Source of creation [15, 16]: upholder of creation [17]: relation to the new moral creation [18-20]'), who is (now-in His glorified state-essentially and permanently : therefore not to be understood, as De W. after Erasm., Calv., Beza, Grot., Beng., al., of the historical Christ, God manifested in our flesh on earth : nor again with Olsh., Bleck on Heb. i. al., of the eternal Word : but of Christ's present glorified state, in which He is exalted in our humanity, but exalted to that glory which He had with the Father before the world was. So that the following description applies to Christ's whole Person in its essential glory,-now however, by His assumption of humanity, necessarily otherwise conditioned than before that assumption. See for the whole, notes on Phil. ii. 6, and Heb. i. 2 f.; and Usteri, Paulinisches Lehrbegriff, ii. § 4, p. 286 ff.) image (= the image) of the invisible God (the adjunct toù dopátov is of the utmost weight to the understanding of the expression. The same fact being the foundation of the whole as in Phil. ii. 6 ff., that the Son $\epsilon \nu$ μορφή θεού ύπήρχεν, that side of the fact is brought out here, which points to His being the visible manifestation of that in God which is invisible: the Adyos of the eternal silence, the ἀπαύγασμα of the δόξα which no creature can bear, the χαρακτήρ of that υπόστασιs which is incommunicably God's: in one word the $\epsilon \xi \eta \gamma \eta \tau \eta s$ of the Father whom none hath seen. So that while dópatos includes in it not only the invisibility, but the incommunicability of God, elkov also must not be restricted to Christ corporeally visible in the Incarnation, but understood of Him as the manifestation of God in His whole Person and work-præ-existent and incarnate. It is obvious, that in this expression, the Apostle approaches very near to the Alexandrian doctrine of the $\lambda \circ \gamma \circ s$: how near, may be seen from the extracts from Philo in Usteri: e. g. de sommiles, 41, vol. i. p. 656, καθάπερ την ανθήλιον αύγην ώς ήλιον οι μη δυνάμενοι τον ήλιον αύτὸν ἰδεῖν δρῶσι, κ. τὰς περί τὴν σελήνην άλλοιώσεις ώς αυτήν εκείνην ουτως καί την του θεου είκόνα, τον άγγελον αύτοῦ λόγον, ώς αὐτὸν κατανοοῦσι : and de Monarch. ii. 5, vol. ii. p. 225, λόγος δέ έστιν είκών θεού, δι' ού σύμπας ό κόσμος έδημιουργείτο. See other passages in Bleek on Heb. i. 2. He is, in fact, as St. John afterwards did, adopting the language of that lore as far as it represented divine truth, and rescuing it from being used in the service of error. [This last sentence might have prevented the misunderstanding of this part of my note by Ellic. in loc. : shewing, as it does, that the inspiration of St. Paul and the non-inspiration of Philo, are as fully recognized by me as by himself]), the first-born of all creation (such, and not 'every creature, is the meaning [so I still hold against Ellic. But see his whole note on this passage, as well worth study]: nor can the strict usage of the article be alleged as an objection : cf. below, ver. 23, and Eph. ii. 21 note : the solution being, that κτίσις, as our word 'creation,' may be used anarthrous, in its collective sense. Christ is & πρωτότοκος, THE FIRST-BORN, Heb. i. 6. The idea was well known in the Alexandrian terminology: τοῦτον μὲν γάρ,—viz. τὸν ἀσώματον ἐκεἶνον, θείας ἀδιαφορούντα εἰκόνος --- πρεσβύτατον υίδν δ τών ύντων ανέτειλε πατήρ, δν έτερωθι πρωτό-

That the word is used as one whose meaning and reference was already known to the readers, is shewn by its being predicated of Christ as compared with two classes so different, the creatures, and the dead (ver. 18). The first and simplest meaning is that of priority of birth. But this, if insisted on, in its limited temporal sense, must apply to our Lord's birth from his human mother, and could have reference only to those brothers and sisters who were born of her afterwards; a reference clearly excluded here. But a secondary and derived meaning of πρωτότοκοs, as a designation of dignity and precedence, implied by pri-ority, cannot be denied. Cf. Ps. Ixxxviii. 27, κάγώ πρωτότοκον θήσομαι αὐτόν, ὑψηλδν παρά τοις βασιλεύσι της γης:-Exod. iv. 22, vids πρωτότοκός μου Ίσραήλ :-Rom. viii. 29, and Heb. xii. 23, έκκλησία προτοτόκων απογεγραμμένων έν οὐρανοῖς, where see Bleek's note. Similarly $\pi \rho \omega$ τόγονος is used in Soph. Phil. 180, ούτος πρωτογόνων ίσως οίκων οὐδενός ὕστερος. It would be obviously wrong here to limit the sense entirely to this reference, as the very expression below, auto's eotly $\pi\rho\delta$ $\pi\dot{a}\nu\tau\omega\nu$, shews, in which his priority is distinctly predicated. The safe method of interpretation therefore will be, to take into account the two ideas manifestly included in the word, and here distinctly referred to-priority, and dignity, and to regard the technical term πρωτότο. kos as used rather with reference to both these, than in strict construction where it stands. "First-born of every creature" will then imply, that Christ was not only first-born of His mother in the moth in the world, but first-begotten of His Father, before the worlds, - and that He holds the rank, as compared with every created thing, of first-born in dignity: FOR, &c., ver. 16, where this assertion is justified. Cf. below on ver. 18.

It may be well to notice other interpretations: 1) Meyer, after Tert., Chr., Thdrt., al., Bengel, al., would restrict the term to its temporal sense: ' primogenitus, ut ante omnia genitus:' on this, see above. 2) The Arians maintained that Christ is thus Himself deelared to be a $\kappa \tau i \sigma s$ of God. It might have been enough to guard them from this, that as Chr. remarks, not $\pi \rho \omega - \tau \delta \kappa \tau i \sigma \sigma s$, but $\pi \rho \omega \tau \delta \tau \sigma \sigma \sigma s$ is advisedly used by the Apostle. 3) The Socinians [also Grot., Wetst., Schleierm., al., after Theod. Mops.] holding the mistaken view of the necessity of the strict interpretation of $\pi \rho \omega \tau \delta \tau \sigma \sigma \sigma s$ -maintain, that Christ must be one of those among whom He is $\pi\rho\omega$ - $\tau \delta \tau \rho \kappa \sigma s$ — and that consequently $\kappa \tau i \sigma s$ must be the new spiritual creation—which it certainly cannot mean without a qualifying adjective to indicate such meaning and least of all here, where the physical $\kappa \tau i \sigma s$ is so specifically broken up into its parts in the next verse. 4) Worst of all is the rendering proposed by Isidore of Pelusium and adopted by Erasm. and Er.-Schmidt, 'first bringer forth' [$\pi \rho \omega \tau o$ - $\tau \delta \kappa \sigma s$, but used only of a mother]. See on the whole, De W.: and a long note in Bleek on the Hebrews, vol. i. pp. 43—48):

For Suváµeis there, we have $\theta \rho \delta \nu o \iota$ here. It would be vain to attempt to assign to each of these their places in the celestial world. Perhaps, as De W., the Apostle chose the expressions as terms common to the doctrine of the Colossian false teachers and his own : but the occurrence of so very similar a catalogue in Eph. i. 21, where no such object could be in view, hardly looks as if such a design were before him. Mey. well remarks, "For Christian faith it remains fixed, and it is sufficient, that there is testimony borne to the existence of different degrees and categories in the world of spirits above; but all attempts more precisely to fix these degrees, beyond what is written in the N. T., belong to the fanciful domain of theosophy." All sorts of such interpretations, by Teller and others, not worth recording, may be seen refuted in De W.): the whole universe (see above on $\tau \dot{a}$ $\pi \dot{a} \nu \tau a$, ver. 16) has been created (not as in St. Paul, it is the church which is, not which possesses, the body, see reff.): who (q.d. But the word evidently has, standing as it does here alone, a wider and more glorious reference than that of mere temporal precedence : cf. ref. Rev. and note: He is the Beginning, in that in Him is begun and conditioned the Church, vv. 19, 20), the First-born from (among) the dead (i.e. the first who arose from among the dead : but the term $\pi\rho\omega$ τότοκος [see above] being predicated of Christ in both references, he uses it here, regarding the resurrection as a kind of birth. The aspirate should never be placed over $av\tau$ -, unless where there is a manifest necessity for such emphasis. But we are not [as Conyb.,—also Est., Grot., Olsh., De W.] to understand Christ to be meant : see above), having made peace (the subject is not Christ [as in Eph. i. 15; so Chrys. ($\delta i \dot{\alpha}$ $\tau o \hat{\nu}$ idlou $\sigma \tau a u p o \hat{\nu}$), Thdrt., (Ec., Luth., al.], but the Father : He is the subject in the whole sentence since εὐδόκησεν) by means of the blood of (genitive possessive, belonging to, figuratively, as being shed on : 'ideo pignus et pretium nostræ cum Deo pacificationis fuit sanguis Christi, quia in cruce fusus,' Calv.) His Cross,-through Him (emphatic repetition, to bring adros, the Person of Christ, into its place of prominence again, after the interruption occasioned by cipyv. autov: not meaning, as Castal. It has been a question, in what sense this reconciliation is predicated of the whole universe. Short of this meaning we cannot stop: we cannot hold with Erasm., al., that it is a reconciliation of the various portions of creation to one another : 'ut abolitis peccatis, quæ dirimebant concordiam et pacem cœlestium ac terrestrium, jam amicitia jungerentur omnia:' for this is entirely precluded by the cite . . . cite : nor, for the same reason, with Schleierm., understand that the clements to be reconciled are the Jews and Gentiles, who were at variance about carthly and heavenly things, and were to be set at one in reference to God (els av- $\tau \delta \nu$). The Apostle's meaning clearly is, that by the blood of Christ's Cross, reconciliation with God has passed on all creation as a whole, including angelic as well as human beings, unreasoning and lifeless things, as well as organized and intelligent. Now this may be understood in the following ways: 1) creation may be strictly regarded in its entirety, and man's offence viewed as having, by inducing impurity upon one portion of it, alienated the whole from God : and thus tà márta may be involved in our fall. Some support may seem to be derived for this by the undeniable fact, that the whole of man's world is included in these consequences (see Rom. viii. 19 f.). But on the other side, we never find the angelic beings thus involved: nay, we are taught to regard them as our model in hallowing God's name, realizing His kingdom, and doing His will (Matt. vi. 9, 10). And again the erre . . . erre would not suffer this : reconciliation is thus predicated of each portion separately. We are thus driven, there being no question about $\tau \dot{a} \ \epsilon \pi i \ \tau \eta s \ \gamma \eta s$, to enquire, how $\tau \dot{a}$ ev rois oupp. can be said to be reconciled by the blood of the Cross. And here again, 2) we may say that angelic, celestial creation was alienated from God because a portion of it fell from its purity: and, though there is no idea of the reconciliation extending to that portion, yet the whole, as a whole, may need thus reconciling, by the final driving into punishment of the fallen, and thus setting the faithful in perfect and undoubted unity with God. But to this I answer, a) that such reconeiliation (?) though it might be a result of the coming of the Lord Jesus, yet could not in any way be effected by the blood of His Cross : b) that we have no reason to think that the fall of some angels involved the rest in its consequences, or that angelic being is evolved from any root, as ours is from Adam : nay, in both these particulars, the very contrary is revealed. We must then seek our solution in some meaning which will apply to angelic beings in their essential nature, not as regards the sin of some among them. And as thus applied, no reconciliation must be thought of which shall resemble ours in its process-for Christ took not upon Him the seed of angels, nor paid any propitiatory penalty in the root of their nature, as including it in Himself. But, forasunuch as He is their Head as well as ours,-forasmuch as in Him they, as well as ourselves, live and move and have their being, it cannot be but that the great event in which He was glorified through suffering, should also bring them nearer to God, who subsist in Him in common with all creation. And at some such increase of blessedness does our Apostle seem to hint in Eph. iii. 10. That such increase might be described as a reconciliation, is manifest: we know from Job xv. 15, that "the heavens are not clean in His sight," and ib. iv. 18, "His angels He charged with folly." In fact, every such nearer approach to Him may without violence to words be so described, in comparison with that previous greater distance which now seems like alienation; and in this case even more properly, as one of the consequences of that great propitiation whose first and plainest effect was to reconcile to God, in the literal sense, the things upon earth, polluted and hostile in consequence of man's sin. So that our interpretation may be thus summed up: all creation subsists in Christ : all creation therefore is affected by His act of propitiation: sinful creation is, in the strictest sense, reconciled, from being at enmity : sinless creation, ever at a distance from his unapproachable purity, is lifted into ncarer participation and higher glorification of Him, and is thus reconciled, though not in the strictest, yet in a very intelligible and allowable sense. Meyer's note, taking a different view, that the reconciliation is the great $\kappa \rho i \sigma s$ at the $\pi a \rho o \upsilon \sigma l a$, is well worth reading : Eadie's, agreeing in the main with the above result, is unfortunately, as so usual with him, overloaded with flowers of rhetoric, never more out of place than in treating lofty subjects of this kind. A good summary of ancient and modern opinions is given in De W.

21, 22.] And you, who were once alienated (subjective or objective? — 'estranged' [in mind], or 'banished' [in faet] ? In Eph. ii. 12, it is decidedly objective, for such is the cast of the whole sentence there : so also in ref. Ps. : in Eph. iv. 18 it describes the objective result, with regard to the life of God, of the subjective 'being darkened in the understanding. It is better then here to follow usage, and interpret objectively-'alienated'- made aliens) (from God, - not άπο της πολιτείας τοῦ Ἰσρ., nor ἀπο της ζωής τ. θεοῦ: for 'God' is the subject of the sentence), and at enmity (active or passive? 'hating God,' or 'hated by God?' Mey. takes the latter, as necessary in Rom. v. 10 [see note there]. But here, where the δ_{id} and $\epsilon_{\rho\gamma\alpha}$ $\tau\dot{\alpha}$ movypá are mentioned, there exists no such necessity: the objective state of enmity is grounded in its subjective causes ; - and the intelligent responsi-ble being is contemplated in the whole sentence : cf. ef ye enuevere n.r. below. Erasm.'s rendering, in his Par., 'enemies to reason,' 'etenim qui carni servit, repugnat rationi,' is clearly wrong: Siávoia is a 'vox media,' and can-not signify 'reason:' besides, there is nothing here about ' carni inservire :' that of Tert., Ambr., and Jer., 'enemies to God's will,' rests on the reading abrow after Siav.,-see var. readd. : that of Beza, Mich., Storr, and Bähr,-' mente operibus malis intenta,' is allowable constructionally: the verb is followed by $\epsilon \nu$, cf. [and so Grot., Calov.],of which the same may be said :- as against the Docetæ, who maintained the unreality of the incarnation : so Beza, al.; but St. Paul nowhere in this Epistle maintains, as against any adversaries, the doctrine of its reality. I am persuaded that Mey. is right: 'He found occasion enough to write of the reconciliation as he does here and ver. 20, in the angel-following of his readers, in which they ascribed reconciling mediatorship with God partly to higher spiritual beings, who were without a $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a \tau \hat{\eta} s \sigma a \rho$ - $\kappa \delta s'$) by means of His Death (that being the instrumental cause, without which the reconciliation would not have been effected) to (aim and end, expressed without eis ro: as in Eph. i. 4, al. fr.) present

But is this quite correct? do not audu. and aveyal. both refer to blame from without? rather with Meyer, ayious represents the positive, dumu. and dreykl. the negative side of holiness. The question whether sanctitas inhærens or sanctitas imputata is here meaut, is best answered by remembering the whole analogy of St. Paul's teaching, in which it is clear that progressive sanctification is ever the end, as regards the Christian, of his justification by faith. Irrespective even of the strong testimony of the next verse, I should uphold here the reference to inherent holiness, the work of the Spirit, consequent indeed on entering into the righteousness of Christ by faith: 'locus est observatione dignus, non conferri nobis gratuitam justitiam in Christo, quin Spiritu etiam regeneremur in obedientiam justitiæ: guemadmodum alibi [1 Cor. i. 30] docet, Christum nobis factum esse justitiam et sanctificationem.' (plural, because the $\theta \lambda i \psi \epsilon is$ are thought of individually, not as a mass : those sufferings which are wanting) of the tribulations of Christ in my flesh (belongs to deravaπλ., not [as Aug. on Ps. lxxxvi. c. 3, vol. iv. p. 1104, Storr, al.] to των θλίψ. τοῦ $\chi \rho$, not only because there is no article [τῶν ἐν τῆ σαρκί μου], which would not be absolutely needed, but on account of the context: for if it were so, the clause $\tau \hat{\omega} r$ $\theta \lambda (\psi, \tau, \chi \rho, \epsilon \nu \tau \hat{\eta} \sigma, \mu, would contain in$ itself that which the whole clause asserts, and thus make it flat aud tautological) on behalf of (see on $i\pi\epsilon\rho$ above) His body, which is the Church (the meaning being this: all the tribulations of Christ's body are Christ's tribulations. Whatever the whole Church has to suffer, even to the end, she suffers for her perfection in holiness and her completion in Him : and the tribulations of Christ will not be complete till the last pang shall have passed, and the last tear have been shed. Every suffering saint of God in every age and position is in fact filling up, in his place and degree, the $\theta \lambda (\psi \epsilon_{15} \tau_{00}) \chi \rho_{10} \tau_{00}$, in his flesh, and on behalf of His body. Not a pang, not a tear is in vain. The Apostle, as standing out prominent among this suffering body, predicates this of himself κατ' έξοχήν; the $dva\pi\lambda\eta\rho\omega\sigma$ is to which we all contribute, was on his part so considerable, as to deserve the name of ανταναπλήρωσιs itself—I am contributing $\theta \lambda l \psi \epsilon_{15}$ which one after another fill up the $\delta\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho\eta\mu$ ara. Notice that of the παθήματα τοῦ χριστοῦ not a word is said [see however 2 Cor. i. 5]: the context does not concern, nor does θλίψεις express, those meritorious sufferings which He bore in His person once for all, the measure of which was for ever filled by the one sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction, on the cross: He is here regarded as suffering with His suffering people, bearing them in Himself, and being as in Isa. lxiii. 9, "afflicted in all their affliction." The above interpretation is in the main that of Chrys., Thl., Aug., Anselni, Calv., Beza, Luth., Me-laneth., Est., Corn.-a-Lap., Grot., Calov., Olsh., De W., Ellic., Conyb. The latter refers to Acts ix. 4, and thinks St. Paul remembered those words when he wrote this: and Vitringa (cit. in Wolf) says well, 'Hæ sunt passiones Christi, quia Ecclesia ipsius est corpus, in quo ipse est, habitat, vivit, ergo et patitur.' The other interpretations are 1) that the sufferings are such as Christ would have endured, had he remained longer on carth. So Phot. (in Eadie) : δσα έπαθεν αν κ. ύπέστη, καθ' δν τρόπον κ. πρίν κηρύσσων κ. εδαγγελιζόμενος την βασιλείαν τών oupavov. 2) That the sufferings are not properly Christ's, but only of the same nature with His. Thus Thdrt., after stating Christ's sufferings in behalf of the Church, says, καl δ θείος απόστολος ώςαύτως ύπερ αυτής ύπέστη τα ποικίλα παθήματα: and so Mey., Schl., Huther, and Winer. But evidently this does not exhaust the phrase here. To resemble, is not to fill up. 3) Storr, al., would render, 'afflictions for Christ's sake,'-which the words will not bear. 4) Some of the Roman Catholic expositors (Bellarmine, Cajetan, al.) maintain hence the doctrine of indulgences: so Corn.-a-Lap. in addition: 'Hinc sequitur nou male Bellarminum, Salmeroncum, Franc. Suarez, et alios Doctores Catholicos, cum tractant de Indulgentiis, hæc generalia Apostoli verba extendere ad thesaurum Écclesia, ex quo ipsa dare solet indulgentias: hunc enim thesaurum voluit Deus constare meritis et satisfactionibus non tantum Christi, sed et Apostolorum omniumque Christi Sanctorum : uti definivit Clemens VI. extravagante [on this word, I find in Ducange, glossarium in voce, 'extravagantes in jure canonico dicuntur pontificum Romanorum constitutiones quæ extra corpus canonieum Gratiani, sive extra Decretorum libros vagantur'] unigenitus.' But Estius, although he holds the doctrine to be catholic and apostolic, and 'aliunde satis probata,' yet confesses, 'cx hoe Apostoli loco non videtur admodum solide statui posse. Non enim sermo iste, quo dicit Apostolus se pati pro ecclesia, necessario sic accipiendus est, quod pro redimendis peccatorum pænis quas fideles debent, patiatur, quod forte nonnihil haberet arrogantiæ: sed percommode sie accipitur, quomodo proxime dixerat "gaudeo in passionibus meis pro vobis," ut nimirum utraque parte significet afflictiones et persecutiones pro salute fidelium, ipsiusque ecclesiæ promo-venda toleratas. Neither of these seems to satisfy the conditions of the sentence, in which Tŷs δόξηs reappears below with ή έλπίς prefixed. On this account, we must understand it of the glory of which the Gentiles are to become partakers by the revelation of this mystery: i. e. the glory which is begun here, and completed at the Lord's coming, see Rom, viii, 17, 18. CHAP. II. FIRST PART OF THE EPIS-TLE. His earnestness in entering into and forwarding the Christian life among them, so amply set forth in ch. i., is now more pointedly directed to warning them against false teachers. This he does by 1) connecting his conflict just spoken of, with the confirmation in spiritual knowledge of themselves and others whom he had not seen (vv. 1–3): 2) warning them had not seen (v. 1-3): 2) warning them against false wisdom which might lead them away from Christ (vv. 4-23): and that a) generally and in hints (vv. 4-15), -b) specifically and plain-spokenly (vv. 16-23). 1.] For (follows on, and justifies, while it exemplifies, $\frac{1}{4}yay \frac{1}{4}yay \frac{1}$ know how great (emphatic ; not only that I have an ayor, but how great it is. many as have not seen (" the form έώρα*kav* is decidedly Alexandrian The 'fonftige Gebrauch Pauli' urged against it by Mey. is imaginary, as the third person plural does not elsewhere occur in St. Paul's Epistles." Ellicott) my face in the flesh (my corporal presence : iv oapki must not be joined with the verb, as Chrys. seems to have done, who adds, δείκνυσιν ένταῦθα, ὅτι ἑώρων συνεχῶς ἐν πνεύματι; for in ver. 5 the σαρκί is attached to the Apostle. But it is not necessary nor natural, with Estius, to see any 'ranelvwois, ut intelligant pluris faciendam esse præsentiam spiritus quam carnis.' Rather is the tendency of this verse the other way-to exalt the impor-tance of the Apostle's bodily presence with a church, if its defect caused him such anxiety), that (object of the $d\gamma\omega\nu$) their hearts (these are the words on which the interpretation of the former καl őσos must turn. If αὐτῶν apply to a separate class of persons, who had not seen him, whereas the Colossians and Laodiceans had, how are we to bring them into the ayor? In ver. 4 the third person $a\dot{v}\tau\hat{\omega}v$ becomes $\dot{v}\mu\hat{a}s$. Where is the link, on this hypothesis, that binds them together ? The sentence will stand thus : "I am anxious for you who have seen me, and for others who have not : for these last, that &c. &c. This I say that no man may deceive you." What logical deduction can there be, from the circumstances of others, to theirs, unless they are included in the fact predicated of those others ? in a word, unless the Ecou above include the Colossians and Laodiceans? Thus the avt ŵv extends to the whole category of those who had never seen him, and the buas of ver. 4 singles them specially out from among this category for special exhortation and warning. This seeming to be the only logical interpretation of the $a\dot{v}\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$ and $\dot{v}\mu\hat{a}s$, the κai above must be ruled accordingly, to be not copulative but generalizing : see there) may be confirmed (see reff. It can hardly be doubted here, where he is treating, not of troubles and persecutions, but of being shaken from the faith, that the word, so manifold in its bearings, and so difficult to express in English, carries with it the meaning of strengthening, not of comforting merely. If we could preserve in 'comfort' the trace of its derivation from 'confortari,' it might answer here : but in our present usage, it does not convey any idea of strengthening. This I still hold against Ellicott), they being knit together (so E. V. well: not 'in-structi,' as vulg. On the construction, see refl. and Eph. iii. 18; iv. 2) in love (the bond of perfectness as of union : disruption being necessarily consequent on false doctrine, their being knit together in love would be a safeguard against it. Love is thus the element of the oupBi- $\beta a \sigma \theta \hat{\eta} v a i$) and (besides the elementary unity) unto (as the object of the $\sigma \nu \mu \beta$.) all (the) richness of the full assurance (reff. see also Luke i. 1) of the (Christian) understanding (the accumulated substantives shew us generally the Apostle's anxious desire for a special reason to impress the importance of the matter on them. οίδά, φησιν, ότι πιστεύετε, άλλὰ πληροφορηθήναι ύμας βούλομαι, ούκ els τόν πλούτον μόνον, άλλ' είς πάντα τόν πλοῦτον, ίνα καὶ ἐν πῶσι καὶ ἐπιτεταμένως πεπληροφορημένοι ητε, Chrys.), unto (parallel with the former, and explaining παν το πλ. τ. πληρ. της συν. by επίγν. $\tau o \hat{v} \mu$. τ . $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$) the thorough-knowledge (on $\epsilon \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma is$ and $\gamma \nu \omega \sigma is$, here clearly distinguished, see on ch. i. 9) of the mystery of God (the additions here found in the rec. and elsewhere seem to be owing to the common practice of an-notating on the divine name to specify to which Person it belongs. Thus 700 $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ having been original, $\pi a \tau \rho \delta s$ was placed against it by some, xpiorov or rov χριστοῦ by others : and then these found their way into the text in various combinations, some of which from their difficulty gave rise again to alterations, as may be seen in various readings. The reading in text, as accounting for all the rest, has been adopted by Gricsb., Scholz, Tischdf. [edn. 2], Olsh., De Wette, al. : τοῦ θεού χριστού by Mey. and Steiger. This latter is also edited, in pursuance of his plan, by Lachm. The shorter reading was by that plan excluded from his present text, as not coming before his notice. In the present digest, the principal differing readings are printed in the same type as that in the text, because I have been utterly unable to fix the reading on any external authority, and an compelled to take refuge in that which appears to have been the origin of the rest. One thing is clear, that $\tau o \hat{v} \theta \epsilon o \hat{v} \chi \rho_i \sigma \tau o \hat{v}$, which Elli-cott adopts 'with some confidence,' is simply one among many glosses, of which it is impossible to say that any has overwhelming authority. Such expressions were not corrected ordinarily by omission of any words, but constantly by supplementing them in various ways): in which (mystery, as Grot., Beng., Mey., De W., al. [Bisping well remarks, that the two in fact run into one, as Christ is Himself the μυστήριον τοῦ θεοῦ. He might have referred to ch. i. 27 and 1 Tim. iii. 16]not 'in whom,' as E. V. [but 'wherein' in marg.], and so, understanding 'whom' of Christ, Chrys., Thdrt., al. : for it is unnatural to turn aside from the main subject of the sentence,-the µυστήριον, and make this relative clause epexegetic of the dependent genitive merely. To this view the term anokovoos also testifies : see below) are all the secret (the ordinary rendering is, to make anotherwood the predicate after $\epsilon i\sigma i\nu$: 'in which are all, &c. hidden.' The objection to this is, that it is contrary to fact : the trea-sures are not hidden, but revealed. The meaning given by Bähr, B.-Crus, and Robinson [Lex.], 'laid up,' lying con-cealed, $\frac{\partial}{\partial \pi \kappa \epsilon (\mu \epsilon \nu a, does not belong to$ the word, nor is either of the places in the canonical LXX [reff.] an example of it. The rendering which I have adopted is that of Meyer, and I am persuaded on consideration that it is not only the only logical but the only grammatical one also. The ordinary one would require αποκε-κρυμμένοι, or with απόκρυφοι, a different arrangement of the words in & anokovφοί είσιν, or εν & είσιν απόκρυφοι. The objection, that for our rendering of $a\pi \delta$. κρυφοι would be required [Bähr], shews ignorance of the logic of such usage. Where the whole subject is covered by, the extent of the predicate, the latter, even though separated by an intervening clause from the former, does not require the specification by the article. It may have it, but need not. Thus if all the men in a fortress were Athenians, I might say 1) οἱ ἄνδρες ἐν τούτφ ἐν τῷ τείχει οἱ 'Αθηναίοι : but I might also say 2) οἱ άνδρες ἐν τούτφ ἐν τῷ τείχει 'Αθηναίοι. If however, part of the men were Platzans, I must use 1), and could not use 2). Here, it is not asserted that 'all the treasures, &c. which are secret, are contained in the mystery,' others being implied which are not secret,--but the implication is the other way: 'the treasures, &c. are all secret, and all contained in the mystery.' Ellicott's rendering of anonpupol as an adverbial predicate, 'hiddenly,' is quite admissible, and tallies better with the True faith is a spiritual communion : for in faith we receive not only the doctrine of Christ, but Himself, into us: in faith He Himself dwells in us: we cannot separate Christ, as Eternal Truth, and His doctrine"), in Him walk (carry on your life of faith and practice), rooted (see Eph. iii. 18) and being continually built up in Him (as both the soil and the foundation-in both cases the conditional clement. It is to be noticed 1) how the fervid style of St. Paul, disdaining the nice proprieties of rhctoric, sets forth the point in hand by inconsistent similitudes : the walking implying motion, the rooting and building, rest; 2) that the rooting, answering to the first elementary grounding in Him, is in the past : the being built up, answering to the continual increase in Him, is present. See Eph. ii. 20, where this latter is set forth as a fact in the past) and confirmed in the (or, your) faith (dat. of reference : it seems hardly natural with Mey. to take it instrumental, as there is no question of instrumental means in this passage), as ye were taught, abounding in it (refl.) in thanksgiving (the field of operation, or element, in which that abundance is manifested. the disregard to continuity of metaphor shewn in vv. 6, 7. The meaning 'to rob' [so with τον οἶκον, Aristæn. ii. 22], adopted here by Thdrt. [τουs ἀποσυλαν τ. πίστιν ἐπιχειροῦνταs], 'to undermine,' Chrys. [ωςπερ άν τις χωμα κάτωθεν διορύττων μή παρέχη αίσθησιν, το δ' ύπονοστεί], hardly appears suitable on account of the karà kará, which seem to imply motion. We have [see Rost and Palm's Lex.] $\sigma \nu \lambda \alpha \gamma \omega \gamma \epsilon \tilde{i} \nu \pi \alpha \rho$ - $\theta \epsilon \nu \sigma \nu$ in Heliod. and Nicet., which idea of abduction is very near that here) by means of his (or the article may signify, as Ellie., the current, popular, philosophy of the day: but I prefer the possessive meaning: see below) philosophy and empty deceit (the absence of the article before $\kappa \epsilon \nu \hat{\eta} s$ shows the $\kappa a i$ to be epexegetical, and the same thing to be meant by the two. This being so, it may be better to give the $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ the possessive sense, the better to mark that it is not all philosophy which the Apostle is here blaming : for Thdrt. is certainly wrong in saying ην άνω πιθανολογίαν, ένταῦθα φιλοσοφίαν ϵ κάλ ϵ σ ϵ, - the former being, as Mey.observes, the form of imparting,-this, the thing itself. The φιλοσοφ. is not necessarily Greek, as Tert. de præser. 7, vol. ii. p. 20 ['fuerat Athenis']—Clem. Strom. i. 11, 50, vol. i. p. 316, P. [οὐ πᾶσαν, ἀλλὰ τὴν Ἐπικούρειον], Grot. al. As De W. observes, Josephus calls the doctrine of the Jewish sects philosophy : Antt. xviii. 2. 1, -Ιουδαίοις φιλοσοφίαι τρείς ήσαν, ή τε των 'Εσσηνών κ. ή τών Σαδδουκαίων, τρίτην δέ έφιλοσόφουν οι Φαρισαίοι. The character of the philosophy here meant, as gathered from the descriptions which follow, was that mixture of Jewish and Oriental, which afterwards expanded into gnosticism), according to the tradition of men (this tradition, derived from men, human and not divine in its character, set the rule to this his philosophy, and according to this he έσυλαγώγει : such is the grammatical construction; but seeing that his philosophy was the instrument by which, the character given belongs in fact to his philosophy), according to the elements (see on Gal. iv. 3: the rudimentary lessons : i. c. the ritualistic observances [' nam continuo post exempli Joco speciem cdefg unam adducit, circumcisionem scilicet, hklm Calv.] in which they were becoming entangled) of the world (all these belonged to the earthly side-were the carnal and imperfect phase of knowledge-now the perfect was come, the imperfect was done away), and not (negative characteristic, as the former were the affirmative characteristics, of this philosophy) according to Christ (" who alone is," as Bisp. observes. "the true rule of all genuine philosophy, the only measure as for all life acceptable to God, so for all truth in thought likewise : every truc philosophy must therefore be kara xpiordy, must begin and end with Him"): 9.] (supply, 'as all true philosophy ought to be') because in Him (emphatic : in Him alone) dwelleth (now, in His exaltation) all the fulness (cf. on ch. i. 19, and see below) of the Godhead (Deity : the essential being of God : ' bas Gott stin,' as Meyer. $\theta\epsilon \delta \tau \eta s$, the abstract of $\theta\epsilon \delta s$, must not be confounded with $\theta \epsilon_1 \delta \tau \eta s$ the abstract of $\theta \epsilon_1 \delta s$, divine, which occurs in Rom. i. 20, where see Fritzsche's note. $\theta\epsilon \delta \tau \eta s$ does not occur in the classics, but is found in Lucian, Icaromenippus, c. 9: τδν μέν τινα πρω-τον θεδν έπεκάλουν, τοῖς δὲ τὰ δεύτερα κ. τὰ τρίτα ένεμον της θεότητος. 'The fulness of the Godhead' here spoken of must be taken, as indeed the context shews, metaphysically, and not as 'all fulness' in ch. i. 19, where the historical Christ, as manifested in redemption, was in question; see this well set forth in Mey.'s note. There, the lower side, so to speak, of that fulness, was set forth-the side which is presented to us here, is the higher side. Some strangely take $\pi\lambda \dot{\eta}$ - $\rho\omega\mu a$ here to mean the Church—so Heinr. in Mey.: "Ab co collecta est omnis ex omnibus sine discrimine gentibus ecclesia, eo tanquam $\delta'\kappa\varphi$, tanquam $\sigma\omega\mu\alpha\tau$, con-tinctur gubernaturque." Others again hold Christ here to mean the Church, in whom [or which] the $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu a$ dwells: so rives in Thdrt. and Chrys.) bodily (i. e., manifested corporeally, in His present glorified Body-cf. on olkel above, and Phil. iii. 21. Before His incarnation, it dwelt in Him, as the Adyos arapros. but not $\sigma\omega\mu\alpha\tau\iota\kappa\omega$ s, as now that He is the $\lambda\delta\gamma$ os $\epsilon\nu\sigma\alpha\rho\kappa$ os. This is the obvious, and brought about by union with, Christ: nearly =, but expresses more than ' Christian circumcision,' inasmuch as it shews that the root and cause of this circumcision without hands is in Christ, the union with whom is immediately set forth. Two other interpretations are given: 1) that in which Christ is regarded as the circumciser : δ χρ. περιτέμνει έν τῷ βαπτίσματι, ἀπεκδύων ἡμῶς τοῦ παλαιοῦ Blov, Thl., but not exactly so Chrys., who says, οὐκέτι φησίν ἐν μαχαίρα ἡ περιτ., ἀλλ' ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ χρ. οὐ γὰρ χεῖρ ἐπάγει, καθώς έκει, τ. περιτομήν ταύτην, άλλά τό πνεῦμα. Beza comhines both — 'Christus ipse nos intus suo spiritu cir-cumcidit.' 2) that in which Christ is the circumcised-so Schöttg.: "per circumcisionem Christi nos omnes circumcisi sumus. Hoc est : circumcisio Christi qui se nostri causa sponte legi subjecit, tam efficax fuit in omnes homines, ut nulla amplius circumcisione carnis opus sit, præcipue quum in locum illius baptismus a Christo surrogatus sit" [i. p. 816]. The objection to both is, that they introduce irrelevant elements into the context. The circumcision which Christ works, would not naturally be followed by συνταφέντες abro, union with Him : that which was wrought on Him might be thus followed, but would not come in naturally in a passage which describes, not the universal efficacy of the rite once for all performed on Him, but the actual undergoing of it in a spiritual sense, by each one of us), one of us), 12.] (goes on to con-nect this still more elosely with the person of Christ-q. d., in the eircumeision of Christ, to whom you were united, &c.)-buried together (i. c. 'when you were buried :' the aorist participle, as so often, is contemporary with the preceding past verb) with Him in your baptism (the new life being begun at haptism,-an image familiar alike to Jews and Christians,-the process itself of haptism is regarded as the burial of the former life: originally, perhaps, owing to the practice of immersion, which would most naturally give rise to the idea : but to maintain from such a eircumstance that immersion is necessary in baptism, is surely the merest triffing, and a resuscitation of the very ccremonial spirit which the Apostle here is arguing against. As reasonably might it be argued, from the aménovois here, that nakedness was an essential in that sacrament. The things represented by both figures belong to the essentials of the Christian life: the minor details of the sacrament which corresponded to them, may in different ages or climates be varied ; but the spiritual figures remain. At the same time, if circumstances concurred, e.g. a climate where the former practice was always safe, and a part of the world, or time of life, where the latter would be no shock to decency,-there can be no question that the external proprieties of baptism ought to be complied with. And on this principle the baptismal services of the Church of England are constructed); in which (i. e. baptism: not, as Mey. [and so most expositors], 'in whom,' i. e. Christ. For, although it is tempting enough to regard the iv & kai as parallel with the $i\nu$ φ κai above, we should be thus introducing a second and separate leading idea into the argument, manifestly occupied with one leading idea, viz. the completeness of your Christian circumcision,-cf. arpoBuoría again below,-as realized in your baptism : whereas on this hypothesis we should be breaking off from baptism altogether,-for there would be no link to connect the present sentence with the former, but we must take up again from ¿¿ovolas. This indeed is freely confessed by Mey., who holds that all allusion to baptism is at an end here, and that the following is a benefit conferred by faith as separate from baptism. But see below. His objection, that if $\epsilon v \hat{\phi}$ applied to baptism, it would not correspond to the rising again, which should be it ob, or at all events the unlocal $\delta i' \circ b$, arises from the too precise materialization of the image. As ϵv before did not necessarily apply to the mere going under the water, but to the process of the sacrament, so $\epsilon \nu$ now does not necessarily apply to the coming up out of the water, but also to the process of the sacrament. In it, we both die and rise again,-both unclothe and are clothed) ye were also raised again with Him (not your material, but your spiritual resurreetion is in the foreground : it is bound on, it is true, to His material resurrection, and brings with it in the background, yours :

Here, the force of -ypapov passes on to the dative, as if it were $\tau \delta \gamma \epsilon \gamma \rho a \mu$ μένον τοις δόγμασιν-ef. Plato, Ep. vii. p. 343 a, κ. ταῦτα είς ἀμετακίνητον, ὑ δή πάσχει τὰ γεγραμμένα τύποις. This explanation of the construction is negatived by Ellicott, on the ground of xeipoypapos being "a synthetic compound, and apparently incapable of such a decomposition :" referring to Donaldson, Gram. § 369 [it is § 377]. But there it is laid down that in synthetic compounds of this kind, the accent makes the difference between transitive and intransitive, without any assertion that the verbal element may not pass on in the construction. If xeipoypapov means written by hands, then surely the element in which the writing consists may follow. Meyer would make the dative instrumental: but it can be so only in a very modified sense, the contents taken as the instrument whereby the sense is conveyed. The xelpóyp. represents the whole law, the obligatory bond which was against us [see below], and is apparently used because the Decalogue, representing that law, was written on tables of stone with the finger of God. The most various interpretations of it have been given. Calv., Beza, al., understand it of the mere ritual law : Calov., of the moral, against mávra rà $\pi a \rho a \pi \tau$. above : Luther, Zwingl., al., of the law of conscience. Thdrt.'s view is very curious : he interprets $\tau \delta \chi \epsilon \iota \rho \delta \gamma \rho$. to inean our human body, $-\delta \tau o l \nu v \theta \epsilon b s$ λόγος, την ήμετέραν φύσιν ἀναλαβών, πάσης αὐτην ἁμαρτίας ἐλευθέραν ἐφύλαξε, κ. έξήλειψε τα κακώς ύφ' ήμων έν αυτή γενόμενα των όφλημάτων γράμματα. Ης urges as an objection to the usual interprotation, that the law was for Jews, not Gentiles, whereas the Apostle says $\kappa a \theta$ $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$. But this is answered by remembering, that the law was just as much against the Gentiles as against the Jews : it stood in their way of approach to God, see Rom. iii. 19: through it they would be compelled to come to Him, and by it, whether written on stone or on fleshy tablets, they were condemned before Him. Chrys., C., Thl., al., would understand τὸ χειρόγραφον Ὁ ἐποίησε πρός Ἀδὰμ ὁ θεός εἰπών ἦ ἂν ἡμέρα φάγης ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, ἀποθάνη-but this is against the whole anti-judaistic turn of the sentence) which was hostile to us (the repetition of the sentiment already contained in $\kappa \alpha \theta'$ $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ scens to be made by way of stronger emphasis, as against the false teachers, reasserting and invigorating the fact that the law was no help, but a hindrance to us. There does not appear to be any force of 'subcontrarius' in υπεναντίος; Mey. refers, besides reff., to Herod. iii. 80, τό δ' ύπεναντίον τούτου είς τούς πολιήτας πέφυκε — to δ πεναντιότης, Diog. Laert. x. 77 : $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\epsilon\nu a\nu\tau l\omega\mu a$, Aristot. poet. xxvi. 22: ὑπεναντίωσις, Demosth. 1405. 18), and (not only so, but) has taken it (the handwriting itself, thus obliterated) away (i.e. 'from ont of the way,' cf. reff. : 'Dem. de corona, p. 351, τὸ καταψεύδεσθαι κ. δι' έχθραν τι λέγειν ανελόντας έκ μέσου: other places in Kypke, ii. 323 : and the contrary expression, Dem. 682. 1, -oùdèv ἁν ἦν ἐν μέσφ πολεμεῖν ἡμᾶς πρός Καρδιανούς $f(\delta\eta)$, by nailing (contemporary with the beginning of $\hat{\eta}_{\rho\kappa\epsilon\nu}$) it to the cross ("since by the death of Christ on 15.] The utmost care must be taken to interpret this verse according to the requirements of grammar and of the context. The first seems to me to necessitate the rendering of anekovoánevos, not, as the great majority of Commentators, 'having spoiled' (απεκδύσας), a meaning unexampled for the middle, and precluded by the plain usage, by the Apostle himself, a few verses below, ch. iii. 9, of the same word $\dot{a}\pi\epsilon\kappa\delta\nu\sigma d\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma$, — but 'having put off,' divested himself of.' Then the second must guide us to the meaning of τάς άρχάς και τάς έξουσίας. Most Commentators have at once assumed these to be the infernal powers, or evil angels : relying on Eph. vi. 12, where undoubtedly such is the specific reference of these general terms. But the terms being general, such specific reference must be determined by the context of each passage,-or, indeed, there may be no such specific reference at all, but they may be used in their fullest general sense. Now the words have occurred before in this very passage, ver. 10, where Christ is exalted as the κεφαλή πάσης άρχης κ. έξουσίας : and it is hardly possible to avoid connecting our present expression with that, seeing that in tàs apxàs k. tàs égovoías the articles seem to contain a manifest reference to it. Now, what is the context? Is it in any way relevant to the fact of the law being antiquated by God in the great Sacrifice of the atonement, to say that He, in that act (or, according to others, Christ in that act), spoiled and triumphed over the infernal potentates? Or would the following our deduce any legitimate inference from such a fact ? But, suppose the matter to stand in this way. The law was diaταγεls δι' ἀγγέλων (Gal. iii. 19: cf. Acts vii. 53), δ δι' ἀγγέλων λαληθεls λόγος (Heb. ii. 2): cf. also Jos. Antt. xv. 5. 3, ήμῶν τὰ κάλλιστα τῶν δογμάτων, κ. τὰ δσιώτατα των έν τοις νόμοις δι' άγγέλων παρὰ τ. θεοῦ μαθόντων;-they were the promulgators of the xeipoypapov tois doy*µaσıv*. In that promulgation of theirs, God was pleased to reveal Himself of old. That writing, that investiture, so to speak, of God, was first wiped out, soiled and rendered worthless, and then nailed to the Cross-abrogated and suspended there. Thus God απεξεδύσατο τας αρχας κ. τας ¿covolas-divested Himself of, put off from Himself, that ἀγγέλων διαταγή, manifesting Himself henceforward without a veil in the exalted Person of Jesus. And the act of triumph, by which God has for ever subjected all principality and power to Christ, and made Him to be the only Head of Ilis people, in whom they are complete, was that sacrifice, whereby all the law was accomplished. In that, the apxai K. ¿Lovolai were all subjected to Christ, all plainly declared to be powerless as regards His work and His people, and triumphed over by Him, see Phil. ii. 8, 9: Eph. i. 20, 21. No difficulty need be created, on this explanation, by the objection, that thus more prominence would be given to angelic agency in the law than was really the fact : the answer is, that the prominence which is given, is owing to the errors of the false teachers, who had evidently associated the Jewish observances in some way with the worship of angels : St. Paul's argument will go only to this, that whatever part the angelic powers may have had, or be supposed to have had, in the previous dispensation, all such interposition was now entirely at an end, that dispensation itself being once for all antiquated and put away. Render then,-putting off (by the absence of a copula, the vigour of the sentence is increased. temporary with $\hat{\eta} \rho \kappa \epsilon \nu$ above, and thus must not be rendered 'having put off') the governments and powers (before spoken of, ver. 10, and ch. i. 16: see above) He (GoD, who is the subject throughout: see also ch. iii. 3: -- not Christ, which would awkwardly introduce two subjects into the sentence) exhibited them (as completely subjected to Christ ;not only put them away from Himself, but shewed them as placed under Christ. There seems no reason to attach the sense of putting to shame $[\pi a \rho a \delta \epsilon_i \gamma \mu a \tau [\sigma a_i]$ to the simple verb. That this sense is involved in Matt. i. 19, is owing to the circumstances of the context) in (element of the desymatical) openness (of speech; declaring and revealing by the Cross that there is none other but Christ the Head πάσης ἀρχῆς κ. έξουσίας), triumphing over them (as in 2 Cor. ii. 14, we are said [see note there] to be led eaptive in Christ's triumph, our real victory being our defeat by Him,-so here the principalities and powers, which are next above us in those ranks of being which are all subjected to and summed up in Him) in Him (Christ: not 'in it,' viz. the cross, which gives a very feeble meaning after the $\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\rhoav\tau os$ autor, and our- $\epsilon(\omega o\pi. \sigma v u a v t \phi a bove)$. The ordinary interpretation of this verse has been attempted by some to be engrafted into the context, by understanding the $\chi \epsilon_i \rho \delta \gamma \rho$. of a guilty conscience, the $dp\chi$. κ . $\ell\xi$. as the infernal powers, the accusers of man, and the scope of the exhortation as being to dissuade the Colossians from fear or worship of them. 16.] Let no one therefore (because this is so-that ye are complete in Christ, and that God in Him hath put away and dispensed with all that is secondary and intermediate) judge you (pronounce judgment of right or wrong over you, sit in judgment on you) in (reff.) eating (not, in St. Paul's usage, meat [Bpwµa], see reff. ; in John iv. 32; vi. 27, 55, it seems to have this signification. Mey. quotes Il. 7. 210, Od. a. 191, Plat. Legg. vi. p. 783 c, to shew that in classical Greek the meanings are sometimes interchanged. The same is true of $\pi \delta \sigma \sigma$ and $\pi \delta \mu \alpha$ and (or or) in drinking (i. e. in the matter of the whole cycle of legal ordinances and prohibitions which regarded cating and drinking : these two words being perhaps taken not separately and literally,-for there does not appear to have been in the law any special prohibition against drinks,-but as forming together a category in ordinary parlance. If however it is desired to press each word, the reference of $\pi \delta \sigma_{13}$ must be to the Nazarite vow, Num. vi. 3), or in respect (reff. : Chrys. and Thdrt. give it the extraordinary meaning of 'in part,'- εν μέρει έορτης ου γαρ δη πάντα κατείχον τα πρότερα : Mey. explains it, 'in the category of' --which is much the same as the explanation in the text) of a feast or new-moon or sabbaths (i. c. yearly, monthly, or weekly 17.] which celebrations ; see reff.), (if the sing, be read, the relative may refer either to the aggregate of the observances mentioned, or to the last mentioned, i. c.

Or it may be singular by attraction, and refer to all, just as if it were plural, see Matt. xii. 4) is (or as in rec. are : not, 'was,' or were : he speaks of them in their nature, abstractedly) a shadow (not, a sketch, σκιαγραφία or $-\phi\eta\mu\alpha$, which meaning is precluded by the term opposed being $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$, not the finished picture,-but literally the shadow: see below) of things to come (the blessings of the Christian covenant : these are the substance, and the Jewish ordinances the mere type or resemblance, as the sbadow is of the living man. But we must not, as Mey., press the figure so far as to imagine the shadow to be cast back by the τa $\mu \epsilon \lambda \lambda o \nu \tau a$ going before [cf. also Thdrt., somewhat differently, προλαμβάνει δε ή σκιά το σώμα ανίσχον. τος τοῦ φωτός ώς είναι σκιάν μέν τόν νόμον, σώμα δὲ τὴν χάριν, φῶς τὸν δεσπότην χριστόν]: nor with the same Commentator, interpret τῶν μελλ. of the yet future blessings of the state following the mapovola,—for which $\epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu$ [see above] gives no ground. Nor again must we imagine that the obscurity [Suicer, al.] of the Jewish dispensation is alluded to, there being no subjective comparison instituted between the two,-only their objective relation stated); but the body (the substance, of which the other is the shadow) belongs to Christ (i. e. the substantial blessings, which those legal observances typified, are attached to, brought in by, fouud in union with, Christ : see on the whole figure Heb. viii. 5; x. 1). We may observe, that if the ordinance of the Sabbath had beeu, in any form, of lasting obligation on the Christian church, it would have been quite impossible for the Apostle to have spoken thus. The fact of an obligatory rest of one day, whether the seventh or the first, would have been directly in the teeth of his assertion here: the holding of such would have been still to retain the shadow, while we possess the substance. And no answer can be given to this by the transparent special-pleading, that he is speaking only of that which was Jewish in such observances; the whole argument being general, and the axiom of ver. 17 universally applicable.

I cannot see that Ellicott in loc. has at all invalidated this. To hold, as he does, that the sabbath was a $\sigma\kappa_{14}$ of the Lord's day, is surely to fall into the same error as we find in the title of 1 Cor. x. in our authorized bibles,—'The Jewish Vor. III.

antitype is not to be found in another and a higher type, but in the eternal verity which both shadow forth. An extraordinary punctuation of this verse was proposed by some mentioned by Chrys.: οἱ μέν οἶν τοῦτο στίζουσι, τὸ δὲ σῶμα, χριστοῦ. ἡ δὲ ἀλήθεια ἐπὶ χριστοῦ γέγονεν· οί δέ, τὸ δὲ σῶμα χριστοῦ μηδείς ύμας καταβραβευέτω· and Aug. cp. 149 [59]. 27, vol. ii. p. 811 f., has 'corpus autem Christi nemo vos convincat. Turpe est, inquit . . . ut cum sitis corpus Christi, seducamini umbris.' No wonder that the same father should confess of the passage, 'nec ego sine caligine intelligo. 18-23.] See above-warning, 2ndly, with reference to angel-worship and asce-ticism. 18.] Let no one of pur-pose (such is by far the best rendering of θέλων,-to take it with καταβραβ. and understand it precisely as in ref. 2 Pet. And thus apparently Thl. : θέλουσιν ύμαs καταβραβεύειν διὰ ταπεινοφροσ. Mey. pronounces this meaning 'ganz unpakend,' and controverts the passages brought to defend it; omitting however ref. 2 Pet. So also does Ellicott, believing it to "impute to the false teachers a frightful and indeed suicidal malice, which is neither justified by the context, nor in any way credible." But his own "desiring to do it" is hardly distinguishable from that other: nor does it at all escape the imputation of motive which he finds so improbable. But surely it is altogether relevant, imputing to the false teachers not only error, but insidious designs also. Others take $\theta \in \lambda \omega \nu$ with $\epsilon \nu \tau a \pi$., keeping however its reference as above, and understanding, as Phot. in Ec., TovTo Toleiv after it. So Thdrt., τοῦτο τοίνον συνεβούλευον ἐκεῖνοι γίνεσθαι ταπεινοφροσύνη δηθεν κεχρημένοι,—Calv., 'volens id fa-cere,'—Mey., Eadic, al. This latter, after Bengel, assigns as his reason for adopting this view, that the participles $\theta \epsilon \lambda \omega \nu$, έμβατεύων, φυσιούμενος, κρατών, form a scries. This however is not strictly true -for $\theta \in \lambda \omega \nu$ would stand in a position of emphasis which does not belong to the next two: rather should we thus expect έν ταπ. θέλων κ. θρ. τών άγγ. I cannot help thinking this rendering flat and Others again suppose a harsh spiritless. Ilebraism, common in the LXX [reff., especially Ps. cxlvi. 10], but not found in the N. Aug., Est., Olsh., al. The principal objection to this rendering here is, that it would be irrelevant. Not the delight which the false teacher takes in his $\tau a\pi$. &c., but the fact of it as operative on the Colossians, and its fleshly sources, are adduced) defraud you of your prize (see reff. Mey. points out the difference between $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \beta \rho$, a fraudulent adjudication with hostile intent against the person wronged, and mapa Bpa Beveiv, which is merely, as Thdrt. explains this, ἀδίκως βραβεύειν. So Polyb. xxiv. 1. 12, τινές δ' έγκαλοῦντες τοῖς κρίμασιν, ὡς παρα-βεβραβευμένοις, διαφθείραντος τοῦ Φιλ $l\pi\pi \sigma v$ τους δικαστάς. Supplying this, which Chrys. has not marked, we may take his explanation : καταβραβευθήναι γάρ ἐστιν ὅταν παρ' ἐτέρων μέν ἡ νίκη, παρ' ἑτέρων δὲ τὸ βραβεῖον. Ζοπαras gives it better, in Suicer ii. 49: καταβο. έστι, τὸ μὴ τὸν νικήσαντα ἀξιοῦν τοῦ βραβείου, ἀλλ' ἐτέρω διδόναι αὐτό, ἀδι-κουμένου τοῦ νικήσαντος. This depri-vation of their prize, and this wrong, they would suffer at the bands of these they would suffer at the hands of those who would draw them away from Christ the giver of the prize [2 Tim. iv. 8. James i. 12. 1 Pet. v. 4], and lower them to the worship of intermediate spiritual beings. The want of firm holding of Christ has set him loose to eußareveiv & έδρακεν) the Head (Christ: see on Eph. i. 22. Each must hold fast the Head for himself, not mercly be attached to the other members, however high or eminent in the Body), from whom (better than with Mey., 'from which,' viz. the Head,-Christ, according to him, being referred to 'nicht perionlich, sondern sächlich:' but if so, why not $\xi = \hat{\eta}s$ —what reason would there be for any change of gender? The only cause for such change must be sought in personal reference to Christ, as in ref. 1 Tim. ; and this view is confirmed by the τ. $a \delta \xi \eta \sigma_{i\nu}$ τ. θεοῦ below, shewing that the figure and reality are mingled in the sentence. Beng. gives as his first alternative, 'ex quo, sc. tenendo caput :' but this would be δι' οῦ, not ἐξ οῦ. The Head itself is the Source of increase : the holding it, the means) all the body (in its every part: not exactly = 'the whole body,' in its entirety, which would, if accurately expressed, be $\tau \delta \pi \hat{a} \nu \sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$, cf. τόν πάντα χρόνον, Acts xx. 18, — δ πâs νόμος, Gal. v. 14. On the whole passage see Eph. iv. 16, an almost exact parallel) by means of the joints (see against Meyer's meaning, 'nerves,' on Eph. Still less must we adopt the adjectival rendering, 'godly growth,' Conyb., making that an attribute of the growth, which is in reality The Roman its condition of existence). Catholic Commentators, Corn.-a-Lap., Estius, Bisping, endeavour by all kinds of evasions to escape the strong bearing of this passage on their following (and outdoing) of the heretical practices of the Judaizing teachers in this matter of the θρησκεία των αγγέλων. The latter (Bisp.) remarks,-" It is plain from this passage, as indeed from the nature of things, that the Apostle is not blaming every honouring of the angels, but only such honouring as put them in the place of Christ. The true honouring of the angels and saints is after all in every case an honouring of Christ their Head." On this I may remark 1) that the word 'honouring' (Berehrung) is simply disingenuous, there heing no question of honouring, but of worship in the strict sense (Opnokela). 2) That whatever a Commentator may say in his study, and Romanists may assert when convenient to them, the honour and worship actually and practically paid by them to angels and saints does by very far exceed that paid to Christ their Head. Throughout Papal Europe, the worship of Christ among the body of the middle and lower orders is fast becoming obliterated, and supplanted by that of His Mother.

20.] Warning against asceticism. If ye died (in your baptism, as detailed above, vv. 11 ff.) with Christ from (a pregnant construction : 'died, and so were set free from :' not found elsewhere in N. T. : cf. Rom. vi. 2; Gal. ii. 19, where we have the dative) the elements (cf. ver. 8: the rudimentary lessons, i.e. ritualistic observances) of the world (see on ver. 8: Christ Himself was set free from these, when, being made under the law, He at His Death bore the curse of the law, and thus it was antiquated in Him), why, as living (emphatic, as though you had not died, see Gal. vi. 14) in the world, are ye being prescribed to (the active use of the verb, 'to decree,' is common in the later classics, and occurs in the LXX, and Apoerypha. The person to whom the thing is decreed or prescribed is put in the dative [2 Macc. x. 8], so that, according to usage, such person may become the subject of the passive verb: cf. Thuc. i. 82, ήμειs ύπ' 'Αθηναίων ἐπιβουλευόμεθα [ἐπιβουλεύειν τινί],-Herod. vii. 141, αί δε νήες οὐκ ἐχρήσθησαν [χρησθαί τινι], and see Kühner, Grain. ii. p. 35. Some, as Bernhardy, p. 346, and Ellicott, prefer considering this form as middle, and give it the sense of "doceri vos sinitis." It seems to be of very little consequence which we call it; the meaning in either case is almost identical : "why is the fact so?" or, "why do you allow it?" To my mind, the passive here carries more keen, hecause more hidden, rebuke. The adiκείσθε and αποστέρεσθε of 1 Cor. vi. 7 rest on somewhat different ground. There, the voluntary element comes into emphasis. and the middle sense is preferable. See note there. I cannot see, with Meyer, why we should be so anxious to divest the sentence of all appearance of blaming the Colossians, and cast all its blame on the false teachers. The passive [see above] would demand a reason for the fact being so-'Cur ita siti estis, ut ...,' which is just as much a reproach as the middle

'Cur, sinitis, ut . . .' The active renderings, 'decreta facitis,' Melaneth. [in Eadie], ' decernitis,' Ambrst. [ib.], are wrong both in grammar and in fact. The reference to $\delta \delta \gamma \mu a \sigma i \nu$ ver. 14 is plain. They were being aga n put under that $\chi \epsilon_i \rho \delta \gamma \rho$, which was wiped out and taken away) "Handle not, neither taste, nor even touch" (it will be understood that these words follow immediately upon $\delta_{\sigma\gamma\mu\alpha\tau}i\zeta\epsilon\sigma\theta\epsilon$ without a stop, as tà δογματιζόμενα ;- just as the inf. in 2 Macc. x. 8. Then as to the meaning, - I agree with Calv., Beza, Beng., and Meyer in referring all the three to meats,-on account mainly of vv. 22, 23 [see below], but also of yevoy coming as a defining term between the two less precise ones $\xi \psi \eta$ and $\theta i \gamma \eta s$. Others have referred the three to different objects: clean objects, or women : $\gamma \epsilon i \sigma \eta$ univer-sally to meats. Mey. remarks of the negatives, the relation of the three prohibitions is, that the first $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon$ is 'nec,' the second 'ne... quidem.' This would not be necessary from the form of the sentence, but seems supported by the word $\theta i \gamma \eta s$ introducing a climax. Wetst. and the Commentators illustrate $\#\psi\eta$ and $\theta(\gamma\eta s$ as applied to meats, by Xen. Cyr. i. 3. 5, 87av μέν τοῦ ἄρτου ឪψη, [όρῶ] εἰς οὐδὲν την χεῖρα ἀποψώμενον, ὅταν δὲ τούτων τινός θίγης, εὐθὺς ἀποκαθαίρη την χεῖρα εἰς τὰ χειρόμακτρα)-which things (viz. the things forbidden) are set (toriv emphatic, 'whose very nature is . . .') all of them for destruction (by corruption, see reff.) in their consumption (i.e. are appointed by the Creator to be decomposed and obliterated with their consumption by us. So Thdrt.—πῶς . . . νομίζετε τινα μέν τῶν έδεσμάτων έννομα, τινὰ δὲ παράνομα, κ. ού σκοπείτε ώς μόνιμον τούτων οὐδέν; εἰς κόπρον γὰρ ἅπαντα μεταβάλλεται: and similarly (Ec. - φθορά γάρ, φησιν, ύπόκειται ἐν τῷ ἀφεδρῶνι - Thl., Erasm., Luth., Beza, Calv., Grot., Wolf, Olsh., Mey., al. The argument in fact is similar to that in Matt. xv. 17, and 1 Cor. vi. 13.

Two other lines of interpretation have been followed: 1) that which earries the sense on from the three verbs, "Handle not fc. things which tend to [moral] corruption in their use." De W., Baum.

Crus., al. But this suits neither the collocation of the words, nor $d\pi u \chi \rho \eta \sigma \epsilon i$, the 'using up,' 'consumption,' which should thus rather be $\chi \rho \eta \sigma \epsilon i$. 2) that which makes a refer to δόγματα, and renders which boymara all tend to [everlasting] destruction in their observance ;' but this is just as much against the sense of $d\pi \delta$. χρησιs, and would rather require τήρησιs, if indeed $\tau \hat{\eta}$ anoxphose be not superfluous altogether. See these same objections urged at greater length in Meyer's note)-according to (connects with δογ- $\mu a \tau i \zeta \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon \quad M \eta \dots \theta i \gamma \eta s$: the subsequent clause being a parenthetical remark; thus defining the general term $\delta \delta \gamma \mu a \tau a$ to consist in human, not divine commands) the commands and systems (διδασκαλία is the wider term comprising many evrdaματα. In refl., the wider term is prefixed : here, where examples of separate ἐντάλµara have been given, we rise from them to the system of doctrine of which they are a part) of men (not merely ἀνθρώπων, bringing out the individual authors of them, but $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \, d\nu$. describing them generically as human, not divine. This I would press as against Ellic., who views the $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ as the art. of correlation, rendered necessary by τὰ ἐντάλματα. But even if this usage were to be strictly pressed with such a word as $d\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\omega\nu$, the substantive nearest to it, διδασκαλίας, has no article), such as (ariva brings us from the general objective, human doctrines and systems, to the specific subjective, the particular sort of doctrines and systems which they were following : q.d., 'and that, such sort of έντ. к. διδασκ. as . . .') are possessed of $(\epsilon\sigma\tau)\nu$ $\epsilon\chi\sigma\nu\tau a$ does not exactly = $\epsilon\chi\epsilon$, but betokens more the abiding attribute of these δόγματα-' enjoy,' as we say) a reputation (λόγον έχειν occurs in various meanings. Absolutely, it may signify 'avoir raison,' as Demosth. p. 204, έστι δέ τοῦτο οὕτωσι μέν ἀκοῦσαι λόγον τινὰ $\xi_{\chi o\nu}$, which meaning is obviously out of place here :—as is also 'to take account of,' Herod. i. 62, 'Αθηκαΐοι δε οί εκ του άστεος, έως λόγον οὐδένα εἶχον. It is implied by it, not by the mere phrase λόγον έχειν [see the examples above], that they had the repute only without the reality) of wisdom in (element of its repute) voluntary worship (words of this form are not uncommon : so we have έθελοπρόξενος, a volunteer or self-constituted proxenus, in Thuc. iii. 70,—έθελοκωφέω, to pretend to be deaf, Strab. i. p. 36, — ¿θελοδουλεία, voluntary slavery, Plat. Symp., p. 184 c, &e. &e.; see Lexx., and Aug., Ep. 149 [59, cited above on ver. 17], says 'sic et vulgo dicitur qui divitem affectat thelodives, et qui sapientem thelosapiens, et cætera hujusmodi.' Mey. cites Epiphan. Hær. xvi. p. 31, explaining the name Pharisees, Sià 78 άφωρισμένους είναι αύτούς άπό των άλλων διὰ την έθελοπερισσοθρησκείαν παρ' αὐτῶν νενομισμένην. See many more examples in Wetst. The $\theta \rho$, was mainly that of angels, see above, ver. 18 : but the generality of the expression here may take in other voluntary extravagancies of worship also) and humility (see ver. 18) and unsparingness of the body (Plato defines έλευθερία, ἀφειδία ἐν χρήσει κ. ἐν κτήσει ovoías, Def. p. 412 D: Thuc. ii. 43 has άφειδείν βίου: Diod. Sic. xiii. 60, ἀφειδώs έχρώντο τοις ίδίοις σώμασιν είς την κοινην σωτηρίαν, &c. &c., see Wetst.), not in any honour of it (on the interpretations, see below. τιμή is used by St. Paul of honour or respect bestowed on the body, in 1 Cor. xii. 23, 24 : of honourable conduct in matters relating to the body, 1 Thess. iv. 4 [see note there : cf. also Rom. i. 24] : and such is the meaning 1 would assign to it here—these δόγματα have the repute of wisdom for (in) &e., and for (in) unsparingness of the body, not in any real honour done to it-its true honour being, dedication to the Lord, 1 Cor. vi. 13),to the satiating of the flesh ? 1 connect these words not with the preceding clause, but with $\delta_{\sigma\gamma\mu\alpha\tau}i\zeta\epsilon\sigma\theta\epsilon$ above—' why are ye suffering yourselves [see on the passive above] to be thus dogmatized [in the strain $\mu\eta$ äųn &c. according to &c., which are &c.], and all for the satisfaction of the flesh'-for the following out of a didaoka- $\lambda i a$, the ground of which is the $\phi \nu \sigma i o \hat{\nu} \sigma \theta a i$ ύπό τοῦ νοὸς τῆς σαρκός, ver. 18? Then after this follow most naturally the exhortations of the next chapter; they are not to seek the $\pi\lambda\eta\sigma\mu\sigma\nu\eta$ $\tau\eta s$ $\sigmaa\rho\kappa\deltas$ not τὰ ἐπι τῆς γῆς φρονεῖν, but νεκρῶσαι τὰ μέλη τὰ ἐπι τῆς γῆς. The ordinary τὰ μέλη τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. interpretation of this difficult passage has been, as E. V. 'not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh,' meaning thereby, that such commands do not provide for the honour which we owe to the body in the supply of the proper refreshment to the flesh. But two great objections lie against this, and are in my judgment fatal to the interpretation in every shape: 1) that $\dot{\eta}$ $\sigma \alpha \rho \xi$ cannot be used in this indifferent sense as equivalent to $\tau \delta \sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$, in a sentence where it occurs together with $\tau \delta$ $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu \alpha$, and where it has before occurred in an ethical sense: 2) that $\pi\lambda\eta\sigma\mu\sigma\nu\eta$ will not bear this meaning of mere ordinary supplying, ' satisfying the wants of :' but must imply satiety, 'satisfying to replction.' The children of Israel were to eat the quails eis πλησμονήν, Ex. xvi. 8 : cf. also Deut. xxxiii. 23 : Lam. v. 6 ; Hab. ii. 16: also διά τάς άλόγους olvoφλυγίας κ. πλησμονάς, Polyb. ii. 19. 4. Meyer renders-' these commands have a repute for wisdom, &c., -not for any thing which is really honourable (i.e. which may prove that repute to be grounded in truth), but in order thereby to the satiation of men's sensual nature :' and so, nearly, Ellicott. The objections to this are, 1) the strained meaning of $\tau i\mu \eta \tau is$, -2) the insertion of 'but' before $\pi\rho\delta s$, or as in Ellic. 'only' after it, both which are wholly gratuitous. This same latter objection applies to the rendering of Beza, al., 'nec tamen ullius sunt pretii, quum

warranted. See other renderings still further off the point in Mey. and De W. Among these I fear must be reckoned that of Conyb., 'are of no value to check (?) the indulgence of ficshly passions,' and that of Bähr and Eadie, regarding λόγον- τ ivit as participial, and joining $\epsilon \sigma \tau$ iv with $\pi \rho \delta s$ —a harshness of construction wholly unexampled and improbable. The interprotation above given seems to me, after long consideration, the simplest, and most in accord with the context. It is no objection to it that the antithesis presented by ούκ έν τιμή τινι is thus not to έν έθελοθρ. κ.τ.λ., but merely to ἀφειδία $\sigma \omega \mu a \tau os$: for if the Apostle wished to bring out a negative antithesis to these last words only, he hardly could do so without repeating the preposition, the sense of which is carried on to $d\phi \epsilon i \delta i q$.

CHAP. III. 1-IV. 6.] SECOND FART OF THE EFISTLE. Direct exhortations to the duties of the Christian life—founded on their union with their risen Saviour.

1-4.] Transition to the new subject, and grounding of the coming exhor-tations. 1.] If then (as above as-serted, ch. ii. 12, 20: the ei implies no doubt of the fact, but lays it down as ground for an inference, see ch. ii. 20, and cf. Xcn. Mem. i. 5. 1) ye were raised up together with Christ (not as E. V. ' are risen :' the allusion, as above, ch. ii. 11-13, is to a definite time, your baptism. And it is important to keep this in view, that we may not make the mistake so commonly made, of interpreting συνηγέρ- $\theta_{\eta\tau\epsilon}$ in an ethical sense, and thereby stultifying the sentence-for if the participation were an ethical one, what need to exhort them to its ethical realization? The participation is an objective one, brought about by that faith which was the condition of their baptismal admission into Him. This faith the Apostle exhorts them to energize in the ethical realization of this resurrection state), seek the things above (heavenly, spiritual things : cf. Matt. vi. 33; Gal. iv. 26; Phil. iii. 20) where Christ is ('se trouve,' not merely the copula. If you are united to Him, you will be tending to Him; and He is in heaven),-seated on the right hand of God (see Eph. i. 20. Here, as every where, when the present state of Christ is spoken of, the Ascension is taken for granted) : care for the things above (opoveire, wider than (nreire, extending to the whole region of their thought and desire), not the things on the earth (cf. οί τὰ ἐπίγεια φρονοῦντες, Phil. iii. 19: i. c. matters belonging to this present mortal state-carthly pleasure, pelf, and pride. There is no reason, with Thl., Calv., Schrad., Huther, to suppose him still aiming at the false teachers, and meaning by τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, τὰ περὶ βρωμάτων κ. ἡμερῶν [Thl.]: in this part of the Epistle he has dropped the controversial and taken the purely ethical tone). For ye died (ch. ii. 12: 'are dead,' though allowable, is not so good, as merely asserting a state, whereas the other re-calls the fact of that state having been entered on. That being made partakers with Christ's death, cut you loose from the $\tau \dot{\alpha} \epsilon \pi i \tau \eta s \gamma \eta s$: see Rom. vi. 4-7), and your life (that resurrection life [which is "your real and true life" as Ellic., objecting to this explanation. The root of the mistake has been the want of a sufficiently comprehensive view of that resurrection life of ours which is now hidden with Christ. It includes in itself both spiritual, ethical, and corporeal : and the realization of it as far as possible, here, is the sum of the Christian's most earnest endeavours: but the life itself, in its full manifestation, is that perfection of body, soul, and spirit, in which we shall be manifested with Him at His appearing. This reminiscence refers to the whole context from ver. 8, in which the exhortations had been to mutual Christian graces. διὰ τί γὰρ ἄλλο έσμὲν ἕν σῶμα, ἡ ἴνα ὡς μέλη ὄντες ἀλλήλων ταύτην τηρώμεν, κ. μη διϊστώμεθα; Thl.) : and be thankful (to God, who called you: so the context before and after certainly demands: not 'one to another,' as Conyb., which though an allowable sense of evaluation of evaluation bere, which is as Chrys. on ver. 16-mapaivéoas εύχαρίστους είναι, και την δδόν δείκνυσι. The $\epsilon \kappa \lambda \eta \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$ was the word which introduced the exhortation-all conduct inconsistent with the ' calling in one body' being in fact unthankfulness to God, who called us. Jer., Erasm.-not., Calv., al., render it 'amiable,' 'friendly,' against which the same objection lies. See Eph. v. 4; and ib. 19, 20: where the same class of exhortations occurs). 16. See the connexion in Chrys. above. This thankfulness to God will shew itself in the rich indwelling in you and outflowing from you of the word of Christ, be it in mutual edifying converse, or in actual songs of praise. Let Christ's word (the Gospel : genitive subjective; the word which is His-He spoke it, inspired it, and gives it power) dwell in you (not 'among you,' as Luther, De W., al.: which does not suit evour. As Ellie. observes, St. Paul's usage [reff., remembering that ref. 2 Cor. is a quotation] seems to require that the indwelling should be individual and personal. Still we may say with Mey. that the ὑμεῖs need not be restricted to individual Christians: it may well mean the whole community-you, as a church. The word dwelling in them richly, many would arise to speak it to edification, and many would be moved to the utterance of praise. And to this collective sense of built, tauroús below seems to correspond ; see above on ver. 13) richly (i. e. in abundance and fulness, so as to lead to the following results), in all wisdom (these words seem to be better taken with the following than with the foregoing. For 1) ch. i. 28 already gives us νουθ. . . κ. διδ. . . έν πάση σοφία. 2) ενοικείτω has already its qualifying adverb $\pi \lambda o \upsilon \sigma l \omega s$ emphatically placed at the end of the sentence. 3) The two following clauses will thus correspond-έν πάση σοφία διδάσκοντες . . . έν τη χάριτι άδοντες. And so Beng., Olsh., De W., Mey., al.: the usual arrangement has been with E. V., all. [not Chrys.], to join them with the preceding) teaching and warning (see on ch. i. 28) each other (see on ver. 13) in psalms, hymns, spiritual songs (on the meaning of the words, see notes, Eph. v. 19. The arrangement here adopted may be thus vindicated : ψ . $\forall \mu \nu$. $\psi \delta$. $\pi \nu$. must be joined with the preceding, not with the following, because 1) the instrumental dative is much more naturally taken after διδ. κ. νουθ. έαυτ., from the analogy of Eph. v. 19, λαλοῦντες έαυτοις ψ. κ. ύμν. κ. ψδ. [πν.], άδοντες κ.τ.λ. 2) άδοντες here has already two qualifying clauses, one before and one after, ev Ty xapiri and έν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν. Meyer's note here is important : "Notice moreover that Paul here also [see on Eph. ut supra] is not speaking of 'divine service' properly so called, for this teaching and admonishing is required of his readers generally and mutually, and as a proof of their rich possession of the word of Christ :- but of the communication of the religious life among one another (e.g. at meals, at the Agapæ, and other meetings, in their family circles, &c.), wherein spiritual influence caused the mouth to overflow with the fulness of the heart, and gave utterance to brotherly instruction and reproof in the higher form of psalms, &c.; perhaps in songs already known,-or extemporized, according to the peculiarity and productivity of each man's spiritual gift : perhaps sung by individuals alone [which would especially be the case when they were extemporized], or in chorus, or in the form of antiphonal song [Plin. Ep. x. 97]." How common religious singing was in the ancient church, independently of 'divine service' properly so called, see in Suicer, Thes. ii. p. 1568 f. Euseb., H. E. ii. 17, v. 28, testifics to the existence of a collection of rhythmical songs which were composed $d\pi a \rho \chi \eta s$ by Christians [ψαλμοί δε όσοι κ. ώδαί, άδελφων άπαρχης ύπό πιστών γραφείσαι, τόν λόγον του θεού τόν χριστόν ύμνοῦσι θεολογοῦντες, v. 28]. On singing at the Agapæ, see Tert. Apol. 39, vol. i. p. 477 : "post aquam manualem et lumina, ut quisque de scripturis sanctis vel proprio ingenio potest, provocatur in medium Deo canere "); in grace (the grace-of Christ [see reff. for the absolute use of $\dot{\eta} \chi d\rho is$]- $d\pi \partial \tau \eta s \chi d\rho i \tau os$ τοῦ πνεύματός φησιν άδοντες, Chrys.: so Ec., διὰ τῆς παρὰ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος δοθείσης χάριτος : not as Erasm., Luth., Melancth., Calv. ['pro dexteritate quæ grata sit'], and indeed Chrys. [altern. : ταις έν χάριτι άδαις], Beza, Corn.-a-lap., al., 'gracefully,'-which would be irrelevant as applied to the singing of the heart : see below-nor as Anselm, and De W., Conyb., al., ' thankfully,' which would be a flat and unmeaning anticipation of εὐχαριστοῦντεs below. The article marks 'the grace,' which is yours by God's indwelling Spirit) singing in your hearts to God (this clause has generally been understood as qualifying the former. But such a view is manifestly wrong. That former spoke of their teaching and warning one another in effusions of the spirit which took the form of psalms, &c.: in other words, dealt with their intercourse with one another; this on the other hand deals with their own private intercourse with God. The second participle is coordinate with the former, not subordinate to it. The mistake has partly arisen from imagining that the former clause related to public worship, in its external form : and then this one was understood to enforce the genuine heartfelt expression of the same. But this not being so, that which is founded on it falls with it. The singing τῷ θεῷ is an analogous expression to that in 1 Cor. xiv. 28, — έαν δέ μή ή διερμηνευτής, ... έαυτφ ... λαλείτω κ. τῷ θεῷ. So the ἐν ταῖς καρδ. ὑμ. describes the method of uttering this praise, viz. by the thoughts only: $\tau \hat{\varphi} \ \theta \epsilon \hat{\varphi} \ de$. signates to whom it is to be addressed,not, as before, to one another, but to God) :

RELATIVE SOCIAL DUTIES: 18, 19, to the married: 20, 21, to children and parents: 22-1V. 1, to slaves and masters. Seeing that such exhortations occur in Ephesians also in terms so very similar, we are not justified, with Chrys., al., in assuming that there was any thing in the peculiar eircunstances of the Colossian church, which required more than common exhortation of this kind. It has been said, that it is only in Epistles addressed to the Asiatic churches, that such exhortations are found : but in this remark the entirely general character of the Epistle to the Ephesians is forgotten. Besides, the exhortations of the Epistle to Titus cannot be so completely severed from these as to be set down in another category, as Eadie has endeavoured to do. See throughout the section, for such matters as are not remarked on, the notes to Eph. v. 22-18. ws avnkev] The verb is vi. 9. in the imperfect-as eder and xpyv, conveying always in its form a slight degree of blame, as implying the non-realization of the duty pointed out – just as when we say, 'It was your duty to,' &c. See Winer, § 41. 3, end. The words $\epsilon \nu$ $\kappa \nu \rho i \omega$ belong to $\epsilon \nu \pi \kappa \epsilon \nu$, not to $i\pi \sigma \tau a \sigma \sigma \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$; as is shewn by the parallel expression in ver. 20: was fitting, in that element of life designated by $\tilde{\epsilon}\nu$ vertas occurs in the same sense in Demosth. 1464.18: also in Plat. I would render then, equity,-fairness: understanding by that, an extension of $\tau \delta$ δίκαιον to matters not admitting of the application of strict rules-a large and liberal interpretation of justice in ordinary matters. In every place cited by Meyer where the word is used ethically and not materially, this rendering is better than his. In Polyb. ii. 38. 8, the case is different: it there Vol. III.

Here, the idea of final result is prominent: but the purport is also included. θύραν τ. λόγου] Not as Calv., al., oris apertionem, Eph. vi. 19; but as in reff., objective, an opening of opportunity for the extension of the Gospel by the word. [τὰ δεσμὰ φανεροῦ αὐτόν, οὐ συσκιάζει], Bengel ['vinctus sum ut patefaciam : paradoxon'],—nor to be joined with προseuχόμενοι, as Beza, De W., al. If that might be so, the door opened, &c.,-then he would make it known as he ought to do-then he would be fulfilling the requirements of that apostolic calling, from which now in his imprisonment he was laid aside. Certainly this is the meaning,-and not, as ordinarily understood, cf. Chrys., al., that he might boldly declare the Gospel in his imprisonment. 5; 6. Exhortations as to their behaviour in the world.

6. Let your speech ($\pi\rho\delta s \tau \sigma\delta s \in \mathcal{E}\omega$ still) be always in (as its characteristic element) grace (i. e. gracious, and winning favour : ef. Luke iv. 22), seasoned with salt (not insipid and void of point, which can do no man any good : we must not forget that both these words have their spiritual meaning : xápis, so common an one as to have almost passed out of its ordinary acceptation into that other,--the grace which is conferred on us from above, and which our words and actions should reflect :- and äλas, as used by our Saviour in reff. [see note on Mark], as symbolizing the unction, freshness, and vital briskness which characterizes the Spirit's presence and work in a man. So that we must beware here of supposing that mere Attic 'sales' are meant, or any vivacity of outward expression only, and keep in mind the Christian import. Of the Commentators, Thdrt. comes the nearest, $-\pi v \epsilon v \mu a \tau i \kappa \hat{\eta} \sigma v \nu \epsilon \sigma \epsilon i$ $\kappa \sigma \mu \epsilon i \sigma \theta \epsilon$. There seems to be no allusion here to the conservative power of salt : the matter in hand at present is not avoiding corrupt conversation. Still less does the meaning of wit belong to this place. A

It implies that there were painful circumstances of trial, to which the subsequent παρακαλέση also has reference. δείκνυσιν αυτούς έν τοις πειρασμοις ύντας, Chrys. The objection (Eadie), that thus the eis auto touto will announce another purpose from that enounced above in $\tau \dot{a}$ κατ' έμè π. γνωρ., will apply just as much to the other reading ;- for any how the αύτδ τοῦτο must include the καl παρακα- $\lambda \epsilon \sigma \eta \kappa \tau \lambda$. But the fact is, that about $\tau o \hat{v} \tau o$ may apply exclusively to the following, without any reference to what has pre-

When Calv. wrote "vix est credibile hune csse servum illum Philemonis, quia furis et fugitivi nomen dcdecori subjectum fnisset," he forgot that this very term, $d\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\delta s$ $d\gamma a\pi\eta\tau\delta s$, is applied to him, Philem. 16. $\xi \tilde{\xi} \tilde{\mu}\mu\tilde{\nu}\eta$ most probably, a native of your town.

10.] Aristarchus was a Thessalo-nian (Acts xx. 4), first mentioned Acts xix. 29, as dragged into the theatre at Ephesus during the tunult, together with Gaius, both being συνέκδημοι Παύλου. He accompanied Paul to Asia (ib. xx. 4), and was with him in the voyage to Rome (xxvii. 2). In Philem. 24, he sends greeting, with Marcus, Demas, and Lucas, as here. On συναιχμάλωτος, Meyer (after Fritzsche, Rom. vol. i. prolegg. p. xxi) suggests an idea, which may without any straining of probability be adopted, and which would explain why Aristarchus is here συναιχμ., and in Philem. 24, συνepyds, whereas Epaphras is here, ch. i. 7, merely a σύνδουλοs, and in Philem. 23 a συναιχμάλωτος. Apostle's friends may have voluntarily shared his imprisonment by turns : and that Aristarchus may have been his fellowprisoner when he wrote this Epistle, Epaphras when he wrote that to Philemon. συναιχμάλωτοs belongs to the same image of warfare as συνστρατιώτης, Phil. ii. 25; Philem. 2. Μάρκος] can hardly be other than John Mark, cf. Acts xii. 12, 25, who accompanied Paul and Barnabas in part of their first missionary journey, and because he turned back from them at Perga (ib. xiii. 13; xv. 38), was the subject of dispute between them on their second journey. That he was also the Evangelist, is matter of pure tradition, but not therefore to be rejected.

άνεψιός] not 'sister's son ?' this rendering has arisen from mistaking the definition given by Hesych., aveyol, abexφων vioi,-incaning that aveyioi are sons of brothers, i. c. cousins. (Ellic. in notes on his translation of the Epistle, suggests that 'sister's-son' may after all be no mistake, but an archaism to express, as the German Geschwiftertinb, a cousin.) "Pollux dicit, filios fliasque fratrum et sororum, dici aveycous, ex his prognatos ἀνεψιαδοῦς, ἀνεψιαδάς, — tertio gradu ¿taveyious, ¿taveyias a Menandro dici." Lobeck on Phrynichus, p. 306. This is decisively shewn in Herod. vii. 5, Map8óνιος . . . δς ην Ξέρξη μεν ἀνεψιός, Δa -ρείου δε ἀδελφεης πάϊς. It is also used in a wider sense (see Hom. II. a. 464): but there is no need to depart here from the strict meaning. περὶ οὖ...] What these commands were, must be left in entire uncertainty. They had been sent previous to the writing of our Epistle (ελά-Bere): but from, or by whom, we know not. They concerned Marcus, not Barnabas (as Thl., al.) : and one can hardly help connecting them, associated as they are with $\epsilon \dot{a}\nu \ \epsilon \lambda \theta \eta$, $\delta \epsilon \xi a \sigma \theta \epsilon \ a \upsilon \tau \delta \nu$, with the dispute of Acts xv. 38. It is very possible, that in consequence of the rejection of John Mark on that occasion by St. Paul, the Pauline portion of the churches may have looked upon him with suspicion.

11. 'Ιησοῦς . . . 'Ιοῦστος] Entirely unknown to us. A Justus is mentioned Acts xviii. 7, as an inhabitant of Corinth, and a proselyte: but there is no further reason to identify the two. The surname Justus (Erra) was common among the Jews: cf. Acts i. 23, and Jos. Vit. 9, 65, 76.

These alone who are of the circumcision (the construction is of the nature of an anacoluthon, of ovtes en m. being equivalent to 'of those of the circumcision.

We have a similar construction frequently in the classics : e.g. άμφω δ' έζομένω γεραρώτερος ήεν 'Οδυσσεύς, Il. γ. 211 : όρκια πιστὰ ταμόντες ό μὲν βασιλευέτω aleí, Od. ω. 483. See many more examples in Kühner, ii. § 678. 2. This seems far better, with Meyer and Lachmann, than with rec. Ellic. al. to place the stop at $\pi \epsilon \rho i \tau o \mu \eta s$ and attach the elause to the three preceding names. For thus we lose [in spite of the assertion by Ellic. that the µbroi naturally refers the thought to the category last mentioned] the fact that there were other συνεργοί not of the circumcision who had been a comfort to him. The judaistic teachers were for the most part in opposition to St. Paul: cf. his complaint, Phil. i. 15, 17) are my fellow-workers towards the kingdom of God (the rest would not be called by this name-so that De W.'s objection to the construction does not apply, that the opponents would not be called $\sigma \nu \epsilon \rho \gamma o i$; for they are not so called), men that proved (the passive meaning of εγενήθη- $\sigma a \nu$ is not safely to be pressed : see notes on Eph. iii. 7; 1 Thess. i. 5, 6; 1 Pet. i. 15. This connexion, of orthite with èv, as Mey., seems better than, as ordinarily (so also De W. and Ellic.), to join $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ with the participles. Eadic characterizes it as needless refinement in Mey. to assert that thus not only a mobal= bestimmung but a local=bestimmung is attached to $\sigma \tau \hat{\eta} \tau \epsilon$: but the use of $\sigma \tau \hat{\eta} r \alpha i$ $\epsilon \nu$ in the reff. seems to justify it.

not well be taken, as rivés in Chrys., to mean ούχι την Π. πρός αύτούς απεσταλμένην, ἀλλὰ τὴν παρ' αὐτῶν Παὐλῷ (so also Syr., Thdr., Phot. in Ge., Erasm., Beza, Calv., Wolf, Est., Corn. a-Lap., al.), both on account of the awkwardness of the sense commanding them to read an Epistle sent from Laodicca, and not found there, and on account of the phrase The is commonly having the pregnant meaning of 'which is there and must be sought from there;' cf. Kühner, ii. § 623 a. Herod. iii. 6. Thucyd. ii. 31; iii. 22; vi. 32; vii. 70, and other examples there. We may safely say that a letter not from, but to the Laodiceans is meant. For the construction of this latter sentence, $\pi o_{i} \dot{\eta}_{-}$ $\sigma \alpha \tau \epsilon$ again is of course to be supplied.

17.] Archippus is mentioned Philem. 2, and called the Apostle's συνστρα- $\tau_{i\omega\tau\eta s}$. I have treated on the inference to be drawn from this passage as to his abode, in the Prolegg. to Philemon, § iii. 1. He was evidently some officer of the church, but what, in the wideness of δ_{ia} κονία, we cannot say : and conjectures are profitless (see such in Est. and Corn .a-Lap.). Meyer well remarks, that the authority hereby implied on the part of the congregation to exercise reproof and discipline over their teachers is remarkable: and that the hierarchical turn given to the passage by Thl. and C.c. (iva örav έπειμậ 'Αρχ. αὐτοῖs, μὴ ἔχωσιν ἐγκαλεῖν ἐπείνοġ ὡσ πικρῷ, . . . ἐπεὶ ἕλλωs ἕτοπον τοῖs μαθηταῖs περὶ τοῦ διδασκάλου διαλέγεσθαι, Thl.) belongs to a later age. As to the words themselves,—Take heed to the ministry which thou receivedst in the Lord (the sphere of the reception of the ministry; in which the receipient lived and moved and promised at his ordination: not, of the ministry itself [τὴν ἐν κυρ.],—nor is ἐν to be diverted from its simple local meaning), that (aim and end of the βλέπε,—in order that) thou fulfil it (reff.).

to mere pecuniary support, or even mere prayers: they were ever to keep before them the fact that one who so deeply cared for them, and loved them, and to whom their perils of false doctrine occasioned such anxiety, was a prisoner in chains: and that remembrance was to work and produce its various fruits-of prayer for him, of affectionate remembrance of his wants, of deep regard for his words. When we read of ' his chains,' we should not forget that they moved over the paper as he wrote. His right hand was chained to the soldier that kept him. See Smith's Dict. of Antiq. under ή χάρις—cf. reff. and ch. iii. ' Catena.' 16. 'The grace' in which we stand (Rom. v. 2): it seems (reff.) to be a form of valediction belonging to the later period of the Epistles of St. Paul.

CHAP. I. 1.] ADDRESS AND GREETING. The Apostle names Silvanus and Timotheus with himself, as having with him founded the church at Thessalonica, see Acts xvi. 1: xvii. 14. Silvanus is placed before Timotheus, then a youth (Acts xvi. 1 f., see further in Prologg. to 1 Tim. § i. 3, 4), as being one $\eta\gamma o \dot{\nu} \mu \epsilon \nu os$ $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau o \hat{s}$ $d\delta \epsilon \lambda \phi o \hat{s}$ (Acts xv. 22, 32; xviii. 5), and a $\pi \rho o$ φήτης (ib. xv. 32, see also 2 Cor. i. 19; 1 Pet. v. 12). He does not name himself an Apostle, probably for (an amplification of) the reason given by De Wette,-bccause his Apostleship needed not any substantiation to the Thessalonians. For the same reason he omits the designation in the Epistle to the Philippians. This last fact precludes the reasons given,-by Pelt, al., 'id ei tum non jam moris fuisse,' by Chrys., - διά το νεοκατηχήτους είναι τούς άνδρας, κ. μηδέπω αυτοῦ πείραν εἰλη-φέναι, — by Estius, Pelt (altern.), and Zwingl., out of modesty, not to distinguish himself from Silvanus and Timotheus,-by Jowett, "probably the name 'Apostle," which in its general sense was used of many, was gradually, and at no definite period, applied to him with the same special meaning as to the Apostles at Jerusalem." τη έκκλησία So in 2 Thess., Gal., Corr., in the other Epistles, viz. Rom., Eph., Col., Phil., more generally, e. g., — πασιν τοις ούσιν έν 'Ρώμη άγα-πητοις θεου, κλητοις άγίοις. This is most probably accounted for by the circumstances of the various Epistles. We may notice that the gen. plur. of the persons constituting the church occurs only in the addresses of these two Epistles. We may render 'of Thessalonians,' or 'of the Thessalonians:' better the former. έν θεῷ πατρί] The construction need not ev θeφ marpi The construction need not be filled up by $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ or $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ οδση, as Chr., al.: nor with Schott, by understanding χalpειν λέγουσιν, which would be unnecessary, seeing that the apostolic greeting follows. The $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$, as usual, denotes communion and participation in, as the element of spiritual life. Xápıs ὑμῖν κ. εἰρήνη "Gratia et pax a Deo sit vohis, ut, qui humana gratia et sæculari pace privati estis, apud Deum gratiam et pacem habeatis." Anselm (in Pelt). The words which follow in the rec. are not yet added in this his first Epistle. Afterwards they became a common formula with him.

2-111. 13.] FIRST PORTION OF THE EPISTLE, in which he pours out his heart to the Thessalonians respecting all the circumstances of their reception of and adhesion to the faith. 2-10. Jowett remarks, that few passages are more characteristic of the style of St. Paul than this one: both as being the overflowing of his love in thankfulness for his converts, about whom he can never say too much : and as to the very form and structure of the sentences, which seem to grow under his hand, gaining force in each successive clause by the repetition and expansion of the preceding. See this exemplified in detail in his note. 2.] εύχαριστοῦμεν, coming so immediately after the mention of Paul, Silvanus, and Timotheus, can hardly be here understood of the Apostle alone, as Pelt, Conyb. and Hows., Jowett, al. For undoubted as it is that he often, e.g. ch. iii. 1, 2, where sce note, uses the plural of himself alone, yet it is as undoubted that he uses it also of himself and his fellowlabourers-e.g., 2 Cor. i. 18, 19. And so De W., Lünemann, al., take it here.

πάντοτε περl πάντων] We have the same alliteration Eph. v. 20. These words belong to εὐχαριστ., not to μνείαν ποι. On these latter words see Rom. i. 9 f.

άδιαλείπτωs seems by the nearly parallel place, Rom. i. 9, to belong to µvelav bµ. ποι., not to μνημονεύοντες, as Lün., Pelt, al. Such a formula would naturally repeat itself, as far as specifications of this kind are concerned. Still it must be borne in mind, that the order there is slightly different. 3.] μνημον. is not intransitive, as Erasm.-Schmid, al.: but as in reff. : ' commemorantes,' Beza. upŵv is by Œcum., Calv., al., regarded as the genitive after µνηµον. standing alone, and ένεκα supplied before the other genitives. But such a construction may be doubted, and at all events it is much simpler here to regard $\delta\mu$. as the genitive governed by τοῦ έργου, τοῦ κόπου, and της ύπομονήs, and prefixed, as belonging to all three. mioris, dyann, edmis, are the three great Christian graces of 1 Cor. xiii. See also ch. v. 8; Col. i. 4, 5: and Usteri, paulinisch. Lehrbegriff, p. 236 ff.

τοῦ ἔργου τῆς πίστεως] Šimple as these words are, all sorts of strange meanings have beeu given to them. Koppe and Rosenmüller hold T. Epyou to be pleonastic : Calv., Calov., al., render (un-grammatical) 'your faith wrought by God ;' Kypke, 'the reality (ξργ. as contrasted with Noyos) of your faith ;' Chrys., Thl., Thdrt., Ee., al., 'the endurance of your faith in suffering ? &c. Comparing the words with the following genitives, they seem to mean, 'that work (energetic activity) which faith brings forth' (as Chrys. ή πίστις δια των έργων δείκνυται: the gen., as also those following, being thus a possessive one : see Ellicott here) : q. d. 'the activity of your faith :' see 2 Thess. i. 11: or perhaps, as Jowett (but not so well), "'your work of faith,' i. e. the Christian life, which springs from faith :" thus making the gen. one of origin.

Olsh. refers the words to all three preceding substantives-but this seems alien from St. Paul's style. On all three Jowett says well, 'your faith, hope, and love ; a faith that had its outward effect on your lives : a love that spent itself in the service of others : a hope that was no mere transient feeling, but was content to wait for the things unscen when Christ should be revealed.' έμπρ. τ. θ. κ. πατρ. ήμ.] belongs most naturally to µνημονεύονres-making mention before God : not to the genitives preceding (see Rom. iv. 17; xiv. 22), as Thdrt., al.

4.] előóres refers back to $\mu\nu\eta$ μονεύοντες; in that we know - or for we know. Thdrt., Erasm., Grot., al., take it for σίδατε γάρ, or είδότες έστέ, wrongly referring it to the Thessalonians : Pelt joins it with $\mu\nu\epsilon la\nu$ ποιούμενοι: but the construction as above seems the best. und Geoû belongs to ηγαπημένοι, as in 2 Thess. ii. 13, see also Rom. i. 7 : not to elbores, as Est, thinks possible ($i\pi \delta$ for $\pi \alpha \rho d$?), nor to ekhoyhv-either as E. V., 'your election of God,' which is ungrammatical (requiring την ύπ. θ. έκ), or as Ec., Thl., all., ύπό θ. την έκλ. ύμ. (είναι), which would introduce an irrelevant emphasis on ύπο θεού. čκλογή must not be softened down: it is the election unto life of individual believers by God, so commonly adduced by St. Paul (reff. : and 1 Cor. i.

27; 2 Thess. ii. 13). ύμῶν, objective genitive after $i\kappa\lambda\sigma\gamma\eta\nu$ — knowing that God έξελέξατο ύμûs. 5. 571 has been taken to mean 'videlicet, ut,' and the verse to be an epexegesis of ϵκλογήν : but as Lün. remarks, evidently verses 5, 6 ff. arc meant not to explain wherein their election consisted, but to give reasons in matter of fact for concluding (eidores) the existence of that election. or must then be because, and a colon be placed at ύμῶν. These reasons are (1) the power and confidence with which he and Silvanus and Timotheus preached among them (ver. 5), and (2) the earnest and joyful manner in which the Thessalonians received it (vv. 6 ff.). Both these were signs of God's grace to them-tokens of their election vouchsafed by Him. τὸ εὐαγγ. ήμ., the gospel which we preached. έγενήθη cis] Sce reff., especially Gal.: came to you is perhaps the nearest: els betokens the direction. $\pi \rho \delta s$, with $\epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu$, would give nearly the same sense, or perhaps that of apud, see ref. 1 Cor. &c. We must not take εγενήθη είs ύμ. for a constr. prægnans ($\bar{\eta}\lambda\theta$. eis kal $\epsilon\gamma$. $\epsilon\nu$), which with $\bar{\eta}\nu$ it might be: for eyevhon els carries motion in itself without any thing supplied. On 'the passive form $\epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu \eta \theta \eta$, alien to the Attic, and originally Doric, but common in the κοινή' (Lün.), see note on Eph. iii. 7 ; Lobeck on Phryn. p. 108 ff.; Kühner, i. 193; Winer, § 15. It was attempted in my earlier editions to press the passive sense in the frequent occurrences of this form in this Epistle. But wider acquaintance with the usage has since convinced me that this is not possible, and that we must regard it as equivalent in meaning to the more usual eyévero. The prepositions iv following indicate the form and manner in which the preaching was carried on, not (as Pelt, al.) that in which the Thessalonians received it, which is not treated till ver. 6. δυνάμει is not ' miracles,' as Thdrt., Ec., all., nor efficacia et

This interpretation is fixed by Kabús, referring back to the whole previous description. Chrys. understands this participle as if it were πιστεύσασιν:-καl μην έν ύστέρω ήλθε πρός αὐτούς ἀλλ' οὕτως έλάμψατε, φησίν, ώς τῶν προλαβόντων γενέσθαι διδασκάλους . . . ού γαρ είπεν, ώςτε τύπους γενέσθαι πρός το πιστεῦσαι, άλλα τοις ήδη πιστεύουσι τύπος έγένεσθε. But it was not so : for the only church in Europe which was in Christ before the Thessalonian, was the Philippian (Acts xvi. 12-xvii. 1, see ch. ii. 2). Μακ κ. 'Aχ.] Cf. Rom. xv. 26; Acts xix. 21: the two Roman provinces, comprehending Northern and Southern Greece. There is no reference, as Thdrt., to the Greeks being έθνη μέγιστα κ. έπι σοφία θαυμαζόμενα, and so their praise being the greater : these are mentioned simply because the Apostle had been, since their conversion, in Macedonia, and had left Silvanus and Timotheus 8.] there,-and was now in Achaia. ձգ՝ մանջ Proof of the praise in ver. 7. is merely local, from you, as in ref.; not 'by you' (as preachers) (ὑφ' ὑμῶν), as Rückert, "locorum Paulinorum 1 Thess. i. 8 et 1 Thess. iii. 1-3 explanatio:" nor 'by your means,' viz. in saving Silas and myself from danger of our lives and so enabling us to preach (δι' ύμῶν), as Storr, and Flatt. έξήχηται] δηλών ότι ώςπερ σάλπιγγος λαμπρόν ήχούσης ό πλησίον άπας πληρούται τόπος, ούτω της ύμετέρας ανδρείας ή φήμη καθάπερ εκείνη σαλπίζουσα ίκανη την οἰκουμένην έμπλησaι. Chrys. ό λόγ. τ. κυρίου, cannot be as De W. 'the fame of the reception of the Gospel by you? the sense seems to be that your ready reception and faith as it were sounded forth the $\lambda \delta \gamma o \nu$ $\tau o\hat{v}$ kuplov, the word of the Lord, the Gospel message, loudly and clearly, through all parts. The logical construction of this verse is somewhat difficult. After the ού μόνον έν τ. Μακ. κ. 'Αχ., we expect merely $d\lambda\lambda' d\nu \pi a\nu\tau i \tau d\pi \omega$: but these words appear, followed by a new subject and a new predicate. Either then we must regard this new subject and predicate as merely an epexegesis of the former, $\partial \xi \eta \chi \eta$ ται ό λόγ. τοῦ κυρ., or, with Lünemann, we must place a colon at kupiou, and begin a new sentence with ou µovor. This last is very objectionable, for it leaves $\dot{\alpha}\phi^{*}\dot{\nu}\mu$ kuplou standing alone in the most vapid and spiritless manner, with the strong rhetorical word εξήχηται unaccounted for and unemphatic. The other way then must be our refuge, and I cannot see those objections to it which Lün. has found. It is quite according to the versatile style of St. Paul, half to lose sight of the où µóvov àxx', and to go on after $\epsilon v \pi a v \tau i \tau \delta \pi \omega$ with a new sentence; and especially as that new sentence explains the somewhat startling one preπρός, towards, directed ceding. towards God as its object (and here, as contrasted with idols, see next verse)not = the more usual ϵis , to and into, as Ellie. correcting my previous on (ἐπί).

De Wette, al., suppose with some probability that the report of the Thessalouians' faith may have been spread by Christian travelling merchants, such as Aquila and Priseilla. $\delta s \tau \epsilon \mu \eta \dots$]

This he does, to square the following clauses, which otherwise are not correspondent: but there are two objections to his view : the emphatic position of περὶ ήμῶν, which seems to necessitate its keeping its strict meaning: (2) that it would in this case have been much more naturally ὑμῶν than $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$, as the second person has prevailed throughout, and our elsobos to you was quite as much a matter happening to you as to us. That kai περί ύμων, πωs should be abbreviated as we find it, will surely not surprise any one familiar with the irregularities, in point of symmetry, of The anayyexxou St. Paul's style. here correspond to the two members of the above proof, verses 5 and 6. onoiav has no reference to danger, as Chrys., al. eïsobos, merely access, in the way of coming to them : see ch. ii. 1: not of itself facilis aditus, as Pelt. mus, merely fully and energetically, as Lünem. : if so, the long specification $(\pi\rho\delta s \dots \epsilon e\rho\chi o\mu\epsilon \nu\eta s$), which follows the (thus) unemphatic verb, drags wearily : whereas, regarded as indicating matter of fact only, the $\pi\hat{\omega}s$ is unemphatic, and the matter of fact itself, carrying the emphasis, justifies the full statement which is made of it.

Thdrt. 10. The especial aspect of the faith of the Thessalonians was hope : hope of the return of the Son of God from heaven : a hope, indeed, common to them with all Christians in all ages, but evidently entertained by them as pointing to an event more immediate than the church has subsequently believed it to be. Certainly these words would give them an idea of the nearness of the coming of Christ : and perhaps the misunderstanding of them may have contributed to the notion which the Apostle corrects, 2 Thess. ii. 1 ff.: sce note there. By δν ηγ. έκ τῶν νεκρῶν, that whereby (Rom. i. 4) Jesus was declared to be the Son of God with power, is emphatically prefixed to His name. \overrightarrow{rov} $\overrightarrow{pooptevov}$ who de-livereth: not = τ . $\overrightarrow{poofpevov}$,—still less as E. He reminds the Thessalonians of his manner of preaching among them (1 -12, answering to ch. i. 9 a): praises them for their reception of the Gospel, and firmness in persecution (13-16, answer-1.] γάρ refers ing to ch. i. 9 b). back to onolar, ch. i. 9: 'not only do strangers report it, but you know it to be true.' He makes use now of that knowledge to carry out the description of his preaching among them, with a view, by recapitulating these details, to confirm them, who were as yet but novices, in the κενή] It is evident from vv. faith. 2 ff., that this does not here apply to the fruits, but to the character of his preaching: the result does not appear till ver. 13. As regards the participles, the simplest way of constructing them is to supply εγενήθημεν, which has just preceded. Calvin suggests the following reason for his here introducing the conflict of the Judzan churches with the Jews : ' Poterat illis hoe venire in mentem : Si hæc vera est religio, cur cam tam infestis animis oppugnant Judæi, qui sunt sacer Dei populus? Ut hoe offendiculum tollat, primum admonet, hoc cos commune habere cum primis Ecclesiis, quæ in Judæa erant : postea Judæos dicit obstinatos esse Dei et omnis sacræ doctrinæ hostes.' But manifestly this is very far-fetched, and does not naturally lie in the context : as neither does Olsh.'s view, that he wishes to mark out the judaizing Christians, as persons likely to cause mischief in the Thessalonian church. The reason for introducing this character of the Jews here was because (Acts xvii. 5 ff.) they had been the stirrers up of the persecution against himself and Silas at Thessalonica, to which circumstance he refers helow. By the mention of them as the adversaries of the Gospel in Judza he is carried on to say that there, as well as at Thessalonica, they had ever been its chief enemies. And this is a remarkable coincidence with the history in the Acts, where we find him at this time, in Corinth, in more than usual conflict with the Jews (Acts xviii. 5, 6, 12). Jowett's note is worth quoting : "Wherever the Apostle had gone on his second journey, he had been persceuted by the Jews: and the longer he travelled about among Gentile cities, the more he must have been sensible of the feeling with which his countrymen were regarded. Isolated as they were from the rest of the world in every eity, a people within a people, it was impossible that they should not be united for their own self-defence, and regarded with suspicion by the rest of mankind. But their inner nature was not less repugnant to the nobler as well as the baser feelings of Greece and Rome. Their fierce nationality had outlived itself: though worshippers of the true God, they knew Him not to be the God of all the nations of the carth : hated and despised by others, they could but cherish in return an impotent contempt and hatred of other men. What wonder that, for an instant (? on all this see below), the Apostle should have felt that this Gentile feeling was not wholly groundless ? or that he should use words Thue. i. 24), and the aorist refers it to a definite event, as in the case of anorteivávtwv: when their habit is spoken of, the participles are present, e. g. ἀρεσκόντων and κωλυόντων below. ήμας refers to Paul and Silas.

θεῷ μη ἀρεσκ.] The μή gives a subjective sense : not exactly that of Bengel, al., 'Deo placere non quærentium.' For in strictness, as Ellicott, the shade of sub-jectivity is only to be found in the aspect in which the subject and the participle is presented to the reader : and therefore can hardly be reproduced in English. Compare on the usage, Winer, cdn. 6, § 55. 5, g. β, and Ellicott's note here. In πασιν ανθρώποις έναντίων, most Commentators, and recently Jowett (see above), have seen the odium humani generis ascribed to the Jews by Tacitus (Hist. v. 5), and by several other classic authors (Juv. Sat. xiv. 103 ff. Diod. Sic. xxxiv. p. 524, &c.). But it is hardly possible that St. Paul, himself a Jew, should have blamed an exclusiveness which arose from the strict monotheism and legal purity of the Jew : and besides this, the construction having been hitherto carried on by copulæ, but now dropping them, most naturally goes on from $e^{\nu a \nu \tau l \omega \nu}$ to $\kappa \omega \lambda \nu \delta \nu \tau \omega \nu$, in that they prevent, and thus $\kappa \omega \lambda$. specifies were a further specification of $\delta \pi \hat{\epsilon} \rho \tau \hat{\eta} s$ $\pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s \ \delta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$, it would not be accusative but genitive. 4) It only remains that we should take $\tau \dot{o} \mu$. σ . as in apposition with the whole foregoing sentence, eis τό στ. ύ. κ. παρ. ύπ. τ. πίστ. ύμ.—so that $\tau \delta \mu \eta \delta$. $\sigma a i \nu$. serves only to repeat the same thought, which was before positively expressed, in a negative but better defined form : $\tau \delta$ being nearly = $\tau o v \tau - \epsilon \sigma \tau i$. So that the sense is: to confirm you and exhort you on behalf of your faith, that is, that no one may be shaken in these troubles: τὸ μηδ. being dependent, not on a second eis understood, as in (1), but on the first ϵis , which is expressed. With this view I entirely agree, only adding, that instead of making $\tau \delta = \tau o \upsilon \tau \epsilon \sigma \tau \iota$, I would rather say that τουτέστι might have been inserted before το μηδένα. αύτοι γάρ . . .] Reason why no one should be shaken. De W. would render, not, 'therefore I also &c.'-but 'therefore also, I &c.' But this would require (as Lün.) διά και τοῦτο-οr και διά τ. eis το γν.] that I (not 'he') might know (be informed about): belongs to the subject of the verb $\xi \pi \epsilon \mu \psi \alpha$. μή πως $\kappa.\tau.\lambda.$] lest perchance the tempter (ref.) have tempted (not, as Whitby, al., 'se. duced ') you (indicative betokening the fact absolute), and our labour might be (subjunctive, betokening the fact conditional) to no purpose (reff.). Fritz. and De W. rather harshly take $\mu \eta \pi \omega s$ in two different meanings,-with the first clause as 'an forte,' and with the second as 'ne forte.'

The $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ answers to a suppressed δέ, q. d. περί δε των άλλων ου νῦν ὁ λόγοs, or the like. Grot., al., think the suppressed $\delta \epsilon$ refers to the rest having intended it once only, but the Apostle more times, taking κ . $\delta\pi$. κ . δ is with $\epsilon\gamma$. μ . $\Pi a \hat{v}$.), not once only but twice (literally, 'both once and twice:' not used widely $[\tilde{a}\pi, \kappa, \delta s]$, but meaning that on two special occasions he had such a plan : see ref. Grot.): for the Apostle, after having asked and answered the question τίς γàρ κ.τ.λ., breaks off, and specifies that wherein this hope and joy inainly consisted, viz. the glorious prospect of their being found in the Lord at His appearing. But he does not look forward to this as anticipating a reward for the conversion of the Thessalonians (Est., al.), or that their conversion will compensate for his having persecuted the Church before, but from generous desire to be found at that day with the fruits of his labour, and that they might be his boast and he theirs before the Lord : see 2 Cor. i. 14; On στέφ. καυχ., see Phil. ii. 16. reff. and Soph. I should be inclined to ascribe to ver. 20, on this very account, a wider range than ver. 19 embraces: q. d. you will be our joy in the day of the Lord: for ye are (at all times, ye are, abstractedly) our glory and joy. Such is the more natural view, when we take into account the fervid and affectionate heart of the writer. See, however, note on 1 Tim. v. 23; with which timid character of Timotheus such designations as this may be connected), in order to confirm you, and exhort on behalf of (in order for the furtherance of) your faith, 3.] that no one might be disquieted (ref. : Soph. agitation, disquicting, which the context must interpret for better or worse) in (in the midst of) these tribulations (which are happening to us both). The construction of to undéra sairestat is doubted. Lünem. enters into the matter, as usual, at length and thoroughly. He first deals with the rec. τῷ μηδ. σ., and exposes as ungrammatical the view which would regard it as a dativus commodi, as $= \epsilon i s$ τδ . . . , rejecting also Rückert's more grammatical view, that it indicates "unde naseituram την παράκλησιν speraverat, quum Timotheum misit, apostolus." Then as to $\tau \hat{o} \mu$. σ .,—we may take it either 1) with Matthai, supplying a second ϵis from the former $\epsilon is \tau \delta \sigma \tau \eta \rho$. But then why is not the second els expressed, as in Rom. iv. 11? Or, 2) with Schott, as a pendent accusative, in the sense 'quod attinet, ad.' But this is a very rare construction, which has been often assumed without reason (see Bernhardy, pp. 132 ff.), and therefore should only be resorted to when no other supposition will help the construction: 3) Winer, cdn. 3 (not in edu. 6), § 45. 3 ann., whom De W. and Ellicott follow, makes it dependent on παρακαλέσαι, and treats it as a further explanation of unep this mistews - viz. 'to exhort, that none should become unstable.' But if $\tau \delta \mu \eta \delta$. $\sigma a i \nu$. depended on παρακαλέσαι, then παρακαλείν, in the sense of ' to exhort,' would be followed by a simple accusative of the thing, which though perhaps possible, see 1 Tim. vi. 2, is very harsh. [Consult however Ellicott's note, as to the mere mediate dependence of such clauses on the governing verb in comparison with the immediate dependcnce of substantives.] Besides, if τδ μ. σ.

6-8.] Of the good news brought by Timotheus. 6.] apri Sé is by Lünem. (and De W. hesitatingly) separated by a comma from exbouros, and joined to map- $\epsilon \kappa \lambda \eta \theta \eta \mu \epsilon \nu$ ver. 7. The conditional form of this last sentence, with $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\alpha}v$, not $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon i$, carries it forward as an exhortation for the future also; while the solocistic indicative gives the Apostle's confident expectation that such would be the case. The reading must not be dismissed, as Ellic., by taking refuge in Serivener's assertion that permutations of similar vowels are occasionally found even in the best MSS. I have examined the Vatican Codex through the greater part of the N. T., and ean safely say that these permutations are found only in such cases as H, I, and EI, and O and Ω in doubtful inflexions, as éwpak. and éopak. ; not in cases like the present, nor in any ordinary occurrences of long and short vowels. Cf. 2 Thess. ii. 16, 17. κατευθύναι] not infinitive, but third person singular optative aorist. It certainly cannot be passed without remark, that the two nominatives should thus be followed, here and in 2 Thess. ii. 16, 17, by a singular verb. It would be hardly possible that this should be so, unless some reason existed in the subjects of the verb. More unity of will between the Father and the Son (Lünem.) would not be enough, unless absolute unity were also in the writer's mind. Athanasius therefore seems to be right in drawing from this construction an argument for the unity of the Father and the Son. πρòs ὑμâs more naturally belongs to katevever than to την όδον ήμων, in which case it should be 12.] úµâs την όδ. ήμ. την πρός ύμ. $\delta \epsilon$ – emphatic – 'sive nos veniemus sive minus,' Bengel. $\delta \kappa \nu \rho \iota \sigma$ may refer either to the Father, or to Christ.  $\pi\epsilon\rho_i\pi\alpha\tau\epsilon_i\tau\epsilon$. Evidently the Apostle would originally have written $l\nu a$, $\kappa a\theta$. $\pi a\rho$. παρ' ήμ. το πως κ.τ.λ. . . ., ούτως και $\pi\epsilon\rho_i\pi a\tau \eta\tau\epsilon$: but while writing, altered this his intended expression, that he might not say too little, wishing to notice the good beginning already made by the Thessalonians. The repetition of Iva after so long an intervening clause is too natural to have given rise [as De W. thinks] to the insertion) that ye abound yet more, viz.: έν τῷ ούτως περιπατείν: not, as Chrys., ίνα έκ πλείονος περιουσίας, μη μέχρι των έντολων ίστασθε, άλλ' ίνα καί and appeals to their memory in its confirmation. See similar appeals in Gal. iv. 13; 1 Cor. xv. 1. $\pi \alpha \beta \alpha \gamma \gamma$.] commands, see reff. The stress is on τίνας, to which τοῦτο answers, ver. 3.

δια τ. κ. Ίησ.] by, i. e. coming from, παραγγελθείσας διά. So τὰς διὰ τῶν δλίγων πολιτείας, Demosth. p. 489: δι έαυτοῦ, of himself, Xen. Cyr. viii. 1. 43: see Bernhardy, p. 236. 3.] further specification (γάρ) of the παραγγελίαι: see above. τοῦτο is the subject, not the predicate (as De W.): see Rom. ix. 8: Gal. iii. 7: not superfluous, as Pelt, but emphatically prefixed (so Lü nem.). θέλημα τ. θεοῦ serves to take up again the διὰ τ. κυρ. Ἰησοῦ.

The article may be omitted, because the predicate $\theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \mu a \tau$. θ . is not distributed (?): but in this case, $\tau \delta \ \theta \epsilon \lambda$, would be equally applicable, there being no danger of $\tau \delta \ \theta \epsilon \lambda$. being unistaken for 'the whole will,' but rather specifying 'that which forms part of the will.' This explanation is not to be abandoned, as Ellic., on account of the merely occasional omission of the article after a noun substantive, mentioned by Middleton and Ellic.: for the reason of that onission is to be sought rather in logic than in idiom. Rather perhaps should we say that there is in Greek a tendency to omit articles before predicates, even where such an omission cannot be logically pressed. $\delta \, \dot{\alpha}\gamma$. $\delta\mu$. is in apposition with $\theta\epsilon\lambda$. τ . θ . as a 'locus communis,' the will of God respecting us being known to be, our sanctification, and then this sanctification being afterwards specified as consisting in $\dot{\alpha}\pi$ - $\epsilon\chi\epsilon\sigma\thetaai$, &c. Therefore $\dot{\alpha}\gamma_{1a}\sigma\mu\delta\sigma$ must be taken in the most general sense, and that which is afterwards introduced, $\dot{\alpha}\pi\epsilon\chi\epsilon\sigma\thetaai$, &c., as a part of our $\dot{\alpha}\gamma_{1a}\sigma\mu\deltas$.

ύμῶν is the objective genitive, of you. ἀπέχεσθαι and εἰδέναι are not the negative and positive sides of ἀ ἀν. ὑμ. as Lünem. and Ellic.,—for the negative comes in again in verses 5, 6,—but the latter (εἰδέναι to διεμαρτυράμεθα, ver. 6) further specifics and ensures the former.

4.] eldérai, know how (refl.). On the meaning of to grevos, there has been much difference. Very many Commenta-tors understand it of 'the body.' (So, among others, Chrys. [see below], Thdrt., Ec., Thl., Tert., Pelag., Calv., Corn.-a-Lap., Beza, Grot., Calov., Ham., Beng., Mac-knight, Pelt, Olsh., Baumg.-Crus.) But it is fatal to this interpretation, (1) that it must force an untenable meaning on κτασθαι, which can only mean ' to acquire,' not ' to possess.' Chrys., whose sense of Greek usage led him to feel this, tries to fit the meaning 'to acquire' into the sense : ήμεῖς αὐτὸ κτώμεθα, ὅταν μένη καθαρόν κ. έστιν έν άγιασμώ δταν δέ ἀκάθαρτον, ἀμαρτία—(so Olsh. also); but this is lame enough, and would not, as De W. remarks, answer for the other member of the sentence, µh èv πάθει ἐπι- $\theta v \mu las.$ (2) that the mere use of $\sigma \kappa \epsilon \tilde{v} os$, without any explanation, could hardly point at the body. In all the passages ordinarily quoted to support it, the metaphor is further explained by the context : -e. g., Barnab., ep. 7, 11, pp. 744, 760, τδ σκεῦος τοῦ πνεύματος αὐτοῦ,—Philo, quod det. pot. insid. § 46, vol. i. p. 223, της ψυχής άγγείον το σώμα,-de migr. Abr. § 36, vol. i. p. 467, tois ayyeiois this ψυχῆς σώματι κ. αἶσθῆσει,—Cic. disp. Tusc. i. 22 : 'corpus quidem quasi vas est aut aliquod animi receptaculum,'-Lucret. iii. 441 : ' corpus, quod vas quasi constitit ejus (sc.animæ).' 2 Cor. iv. 7 is evidently no case in point, dorpakivous being there added, and the body being simply compared to an earthen vessel. (3) that the order of the words is against it. In to έαυτοῦ σκεῦος, the emphasis must lie on ¿avtoù-ef. 1 Cor. vii. 2, έκαστος την έαυτοῦ γυναϊκα έχέτω. Had the body been meant, this would be without import, and it would more naturally have been to skeves tautov (or avrov). (4) But a more fatal objection than any of the former is, that the context is entirely against the meaning. The aylaouds has been explained to consist in απέχεσθαι από της πορνείας. And now this $\pi o \rho \nu \epsilon i a$ comes to be specified, wherein it consists, and how it may be guarded against : viz. in carrying on the divinelyappointed commerce of the sexes in holi-ness and honour. In fact, the thought is exactly as in 1 Cor. vii. 2, διà τàs πορνείας εκαστος την εαυτού γυναϊκα εχέτω, κ. έκάστη τόν ίδιον άνδρα έχέτω. Many have therefore understood onevos in its literal meaning as applied to $\tau \delta \pi \rho \hat{\alpha} \gamma \mu a$, -i. e. the woman (or indeed the man, on the other side, inasmuch as the woman has ¿¿ovola over his body, see 1 Cor. vii. 4. So that thus it would be an exhortation to the woman also: so De Wette). Thus the context would be satisfied, and the emphatic position of taurov (as in 1 Cor. vii. 2) ;-and «Târθat would retain its proper meaning: that each of you should know how to acquire his own vessel (for this purpose) in sanctification (κτασθαι έν άγ. belong together) and honour. This sense of orkevos is found in the Jewish books (Megill. Esth. i. 11: "In convivio dixerunt aliqui : mulicres Medicæ sunt pulcriores : alii, Persicæ sunt puleriores. Dixit Ahasuerus : Vas meum, quo ego utor, nee Persicum est nee Medicum, sed Chaldaieum"). And the expression κτασθαι γυναϊκα is common : cf. Xen. Symp. ii. 10: ταύτην (Ξανθίππην) κέκ-τημαι: Ruth iv. 10; Sir. xxxvi. 24. And so Thdr. Mops. (σκεῦος τὴν ἰδίαν

But he mistakes KTAJ041 for possidere, and so understands the command as given conjugatis fidelibus), Thom. Aquin., Zwingle, Est., Heins., Wetst., Schöttg., Michaelis, Koppe, Schott, De Wette, Lünem., al. (Much of the foregoing note is from Dc W. and Lün.) The objection to the above view, that thus only men would be addressed (Calv., al.) is easily answered (besides as above, under 4) by observing that in other places also, where $\pi o \rho \nu \epsilon i a$ is in question, the male only is exhorted, e.g. 1 Cor. vi. 15-18: the female being included by implication, and bound to interpret on her side that which is said of the 5.] έν πάθει έπιθ.,---πάθει other. having the emphasis, - 'in the mere passio of lust,'-as Thdr. Mops. (Lün.), is av τούτο ποιούντος οὐκέτι ταύτη ώς γυναικί συνόντος άλλὰ διὰ μίξιν μόνην ἁπλῶς, δπερ πάθος επιθυμίας εκάλεσεν.

καθ. καί] the καί so usual after particles of comparison, points to the association in the same category which the particle supposes : καὶ ἡμῖν ταὐτὰ δοκεί äπερ καὶ Baoilei, Xen. Anab. ii. 1. 22. It is not a mere fact which is stated, but that fact as logically interwoven with the course of the context: and hence the subjective negative. See 6. I cannot help regarding it reff. as most unnatural, to interpret this verse of a new subject introduced, viz. the not wronging one another in the business of life. How such Commentators as De Wette and Lünem. can have entertained this view, I am at a loss to imagine. For (1) the sense is carried on from vv. 4, 5, without even the repetition of ERAGTON $\delta\mu\omega\nu$ to mark the change of topic: and (2) when the Apostle sums up the whole in ver. 7, he mentions merely impurity, without the slightest allusion to the other. To say that more than one kind of sin must be mentioned because of $\pi \epsilon \rho l \pi d\nu$ των τούτων, is mere trifling : the πάντα ταῦτα (not ταῦτα πάντα, which would collect many individuals into a whole) generalizes from the sin mentioned to a wider range. The interpretation which I impugn, is also that of Zwingle, Calv., Grot., Calov., Le Clerc, Wolf, Koppe, Flatt. I understand the verse, with Chrys., Thdrt., Cc., Thl., Jer., Erasm., Est., Corn.-a-Lap., Heins., Whitby, Wetst., Kypke, Beng., Michaelis, Pelt, Ölsh., all., to refer to the sins of uncleanness, and continue vv. 4, 5 :- that he should not (viz. rivá, contained in the adrou following : so that $\tau \dot{\partial} \mu \dot{\eta} \dots$ is a further specification of 6 aylaou6s, rather than parallel with eideval) set at nought (the order of the sentence requires that ὑπερβ. should not stand absolutely, as Dc W., Lün., al., for 'transgress' [μη νῦν ὑπέρβαιν', ἀλλ' ἐναισίμως φέρε, ΕυΓ. Alc. 1077: ὅτε κέν τις ύπερβήη κ. άμαρτη, Il. 1. 497], but transitively : otherwise tiva would have occurred after $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\epsilon\rho\beta a(\nu\epsilon\nu)$ to mark the distinction of construction : and $b\pi\epsilon\rho\beta$. with an accusative of person significs either 'to pass by' or 'take no notice,' 'posthabere,' as Herod. iii. 89, ὑπερβαίνων τούς προςεχέας: or 'to go beyond' or 'surpass,' as Plat. Tim. 24 D, πάση πάντας ανθρώπους ύπερβεβηκότες αρετή. Of these, the former seems most applicable here: see below) or overreach his brother in the matter (viz. of $\tau \delta$ $\delta \alpha \upsilon \tau \sigma \tilde{\upsilon}$ σκεῦος κτασθαι-that there should be among you none of those strifes on account of the $\pi d\theta \eta \epsilon \pi i \theta v \mu las$, the 'teterrima belli causa' in the heathen world. As Jowett rightly observes, "It is not necessary to suppose that any idea of unchastity is conveyed by the term $\pi \lambda \epsilon o \nu \epsilon \kappa \tau \epsilon i \nu$, any more than in the tenth commandment. 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife.' The meaning exclusively arises from the connexion and application of the word." How $\tau \hat{\varphi} \pi \rho \dot{\alpha} \gamma \mu \alpha \tau \iota$ can ever signify tors πράγμασιν, 'business affairs' [De W., alt.], I cannot imagine; and it is equally futile [with E. V. arm.] to take $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ for $\tau \varphi = \tau i \nu_i$ in the N. T. "It is probable that the obscurity of the passage arises partly from the dccency in which the Apostle clothes it." Jowett), because God is the avenger ('righter,' in such cases of setting at nought and overreaching) of all these things (viz. cases of $i\pi\epsilon\rho\beta$ asía and $\pi\lambda\epsilon\rho\nu$ - $\epsilon \xi i a$, and by inference, lustful sins like them) as also (see on ver. 5) we before told you and constantly testified. 7.] This verse (see above) is in my view decisive for the above rendering of ver. 6. There is no mention here of avarice : nor is it possible to understand akalapoía, when ver. 3 has gone before, of any thing but earnal impurity. Chap. ii. 3, which is adduced to shew that it may here represent covetousness, is a very doubtful ex-

There is no need to supply any thing after dθeτών-ό άθετών simply describes him who commits the act of rejecting; q. d. the rejecter-what he rejects, is not to be supplied in the construction, but is clear from the context-viz. $\tau \partial \nu \ \partial \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi \partial \nu \ a \vartheta \tau o \hat{v}$. The distinction between $\delta \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi o \nu$ (anarthrous) and $\tau \delta v \theta \epsilon \delta v$, seems to be, that the former is indefinite; not (any) man, but (definite) God. τόν [καί] δόντα] q. d. who also is the AUTHOR of our sanetification. ⌈καί—' novum hie additur momentum,' Bengel. It conveys tacit but gentle reproof. The knowledge and the practice already exist : but the latter is not quite in proportion to the former. τῷ εἰπεῖν, οὐ χρεία ἐστί, μείζον έποίητεν ή εἰ είπεν. Chrys. The construction οὐ χρείαν ἔχετε γράφειν ὑμῖν (de-fended by De Wette and Winer), has been pronounced inadmissible by Lünemann, such use of the infinitive active being only found where no special personal reference is attached to the verb, as $\delta \mu i \nu$ here: so that this would require $i\mu \hat{\epsilon} \gamma \rho$. or $\gamma \rho \dot{a} \phi \epsilon$ σθαι. He therefore reads έχομεν. But with so many corrections (see var. readd.), and with the known irregularities of St. Paul's style in such constructions, it surely is not safe to speak so positively. I should regard the construction, not as analogous with χώρον ούχ άγνον πατείν, Soph. Ed. Col. 37; agios bavuárai, Thue. i. 38, and the like,-but as a mixed one between έχομεν γράφειν and έχετε γράφεσθαι. aυτοι υμεϊς, in opposition to $\eta\mu$ ûs, the

It would seem as if, notwithstanding their liberality to those without, there were some defect of quiet diligence and harmony within, which prompted this exhortation : see 2 Thess. iii. 11, 12. Thdrt. assigns another reason for it : our evavtla τοις προβρηθείσιν επαίνοις ή παραίνεσις. συνέβαινε γάρ τούς μέν φιλοτίμως χορηγείν τοις δεομένοις την χρείαν, τους δε δια την τούτων φιλοτιμίαν αμελείν της έργασίας· εἰκότως τοίνυν κἀκείνους ἐπήνεσε, καί τούτοις τα πρόςφορα συνεβούλευσε. (So also Est., Benson, Flatt, Schott, and De W.) Lünem. objects to this, that thus the Church would be divided into two sections, the one exhorted to persist and abound in their liberality, the other to work diligently to support themselves ; whereas there is no trace in the text of such a division. He therefore would abandon the idea of a connexion, and treat vv. 11, 12 as applying to a totally distinct subject; accounting for its introduction in such close grammatical connexion with ver. 10, by St. Paul's rapid transitions in the practical parts of his Epistles. But we may well answer, that instances are frequent enough of exhortations being addressed to whole churches which in their application would require severing and allotting to distinct 11. φιλοτιμείσθαι classes of persons. ήσυχάζειν] to make it your ambition to be quiet—have no other φιλοτιμία than that of a quiet industrious holy life. It would certainly seem as if the preaching of the kingdom of Jesus at Thessalonica had been partially misunderstood, and been perverted into a cause why they should not quietly follow active life, and why they should be uneasy about those who fell asleep before that kingdom was brought in, imagining that they would have no part in its glories. pression (reff.) conveying definite meaning to the Thessalonians as importing the dead in Christ (ver. 16). No inference must therefore be drawn from the Apostle's use of this word, as to the intermediate state (as De W. after Weizel, for the sleep of the soul, — and Zwingle, Calvin, al., against it): for the word is a mere common term. $iva \mu \eta \lambda$.] object of my not wishing you to be ignorant. $\mu \eta \lambda \nu \pi$. is absolute, that ye mourn not:

This shews of what kind their $\lambda \dot{\upsilon} \pi \eta$ was: viz. a grief whose ground was unbelief in a resurrection : which regarded the dead as altogether cut off from Christ's heavenly kingdom. 14. κοιμασθαι: see Thdrt. in loc." Ellicott. σύτως] The two clauses do not accurately correspond. We should expect καl πιστεύομεν ὅτι σύτως καὶ οἰ έν Ίησοῦ κοιμηθέντες ἀναστήσονται, or the like. Still the σύτως betokens identity of lot for the two parties concerned, viz., death, and resurrection. In this they resemble: but in the expressed particulars here, they differ. Christ's, was simply ἀνέστη: theirs shall be a resurrection through Him, at His coning.

διὰ τ. 'Ιησοῦ] I feel compelled to differ from the majority of modern scholars (not Ellicott), in adhering to the old connexion of these words with τ. κοιμηθέντας. I an quite aware of the grammatical difficulty : but as I hope to shew, it is not insuperable. But if we join διὰ τ. 'Ιησ. with áξει, we obtain a clause which I am persuaded the Apostle could never have written,—flat and dragging in the extreme—διὰ τοῦ 'Ιησοῦ áξει σὺν αὐτῷ aὑτῷ referring to 'Ιησοῦ already mentioned in the same clause. Whereas, on the other connexion, we have 'Ιησοῦ set over against one another, the very article, and the unemplatic position of the words, shewing the reference back,—and we have αὐτῷ naturally and foreibly referring back to 'Iησούς and δια του 'Iησού, in the preceding clauses. In other words, the logical construction of the sentence seems to me so plainly to require the connexion of δια του 'Ιησού with κοιμηθέντας, that it must be a grammatical impossibility only, which can break that connexion. But let us see whether there be such an impossibility present. oi κοιμηθέντες are confessedly the Christian dead, and none else. They are distinguished by the Apostle's use of and adhesion to the word, from the merely Bavovres. What makes this distinction? Why are they asleep, and not dead? By whom have they been thus privileged? Certainly, $\delta i a \tau o \tilde{v}$ 'Ιησού. We are said πιστεύειν δι' αύτού (Acts iii. 16), — εύχαριστεῖν δι' αὐτοῦ (Rom. i. 8), εἰρήνην ἔχειν δι' αὐτοῦ (ib. v. 1), καυχᾶσθαι δι' αὐτοῦ (ib. 11), παρακαλείσθαι δι' αὐτοῦ (2 Cor. i. 5), &c. &c. : why not also κοιμασθαι δι' αὐτοῦ ? And when Lünem. objects, that the extent of the idea oi koundévres is understood from the former part of the sentence, εί πιστεύομεν κ.τ.λ., - this very reason seems to me the most natural one for the specification-If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, then even thus also those, of whom we say that they sleep, just because of Jesus, will God, &c. : the emphasis being on the Sic. Jowett keeps this connexion, merely saying however, "nor will the order of the words allow us to connect them with Eger;" a reason surely insufficient for it. He is certainly in error when he continues, "The only remaining mode is to take διά for $\epsilon \nu$ (?), 'those that are asleep in Christ.'' άξει σιν αυτω will bring (back to us) with Him (Jesus): i. e. when Jesus shall appear, they also shall appear with Him, being (as below) raised at His coming. Of their disembodied souls there is here no mention: nor is the meaning, as often understood, that God will bring them (their disembodied souls, to be joined to their raised bodies) with Him : but the bringing them with Jesus = their being raised when Jesus appears. 15. That this was his expectation, we know from other passages, especially from 2 Cor. v. 1-10, where see notes. It does not seem to have been so strong towards the end of his course; see e.g. Phil. i. 20-26. Nor need it surprise any Christian, that the Apostles should in this matter of detail have found their personal expectations liable to disappointment, respecting a day of which it is so solemnly said, that no man knoweth its appointed time, not the angels in heaven, nor the Son (Mark xiii. 32), but the Father only. At the same time it must be borne in mind, that this inclusion of himself and his hearers among the Luvres and περιλειπόμενοι, does not in any way enter into the fact revealed and here announced, which is respecting that class of persons only as they Thdrt.) to meet the Lord (as He descends : so Aug. de civit. Dei xx. 20. 2, vol. vii. p. 688: 'non sic accipiendum est tanquam in aëre nos dixerit semper cum Domino mansuros, quia nec ipse utique ibi manebit, quia veniens transiturus est, venienti quippe itur obviam, non manenti.' Christ is on His way to this earth : and when De W. says that there is no plain trace in St. Paul of Christ's kingdom on earth,—and Lün., that the words shew that the Apostle did not think of Christ as descending down to the earth, surely they cannot suppose him to have been so ignorant of O. T. propheey, as to have allowed this, its plain testimony, to escape him. είς ἀπάντησιν occurs [reff.] twice more in the N. T., and each time implies meeting one who was approaching-not mercly 'meeting with 'a person) into the air (belongs to άρπαγησόμεθα, not to εἰς ἀπ. τοῦ κυρ. as in E. V.), and thus we (i. e. we and they united, ήμεις άμα, σύν αύτοις, who were the subject of the last sentence) shall be always with the Lord. That he advances no further in the prophetic description, but breaks off at our union in Christ's presence, is accounted for, by his purpose being accomplished, in having shewn that they who have died in Christ, shall not be thereby deprived of any advantage at His coming. The rest of the great events of that time—His advent on this carth, His judgment of it, assisted by His saints (1 Cor. vi. 2, 3),—His reign upon earth,— His final glorification with His redeemed in heaven,-are not treated here, but not therefore to be conceived of as alien from the Apostle's teaching. 18.] ωστε, so then: reif. παρακ., comfort: cf. not things, here or any where : but words : these words, which I have by inspiration delivered to you. It will be manifest to the plain, as well as to the scholar-like reader, that attempts like that of Mr. Jowett, to interpret such a passage as this by the rules of mere figurative language, are entirely beside the purpose. The Apostle's declarations here are made in the practical tone of strict matter of fact, and are given as literal details, to console men's minds under an existing difficulty. Never was a place where the analogy of symbolical apocalyptic language was less applicable. Either these details must be received by us as matter of practical expectation, or we must set aside the Apostle as one divinely em-powered to teach the Church. It is a fair opportunity for an experimentum erucis: and such test cannot be evaded by Mr. Jowett's intermediate expedient of figurative language.

It is both the suddenness, and the ii. 16. terribleness (surely we cannot with Ellic. omit this element, in the presence of the image in the next verse) of the Day's coming, which is here dwelt on : cf. next οῦτως fills up the comparison verse. -as a thief in the night (comes), so . . it comes (not for future, but expressing, as so often by the present, the absolute truth and certainty of that predicated-it is its attribute, to come). 3. It is pressing too close the comparison $\delta s \pi e_p + \eta + \delta \delta l \nu \kappa . \tau . \lambda$, when De W. says that it "assumes the day to be near,—for that such a woman, though she does not know the day and the hour, yet has a definite knowledge of the period." for it is not the woman, nor her condition, that is the subject of comparison, but the unexpected pang of labour which comes on her.

There is no distinction, as Macknight pretends, between μεθυσκόμενοι and μεθύουσιν ('the former denoting the act of getting drunk, the latter the state of being so'), but they are synonymous, answering to $\kappa a \theta \epsilon v \delta o v \tau \epsilon s$ and $\kappa a \theta \epsilon v \delta o v \sigma v \tau$. Nor are the expressions to be taken in a spiritual sense, as Chrys., al. (μέθην ἐνταῦθά φησιν, οὐ τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴνου μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν κακῶν : ' Spiritual sleep and intoxication belong to the state of darkness,' Baum.-Crus.): the repetition of the same verbs as subjects and predicates (Lün.) shews that vuktos is merely a designation of time, and to be taken literally. 8.7 Contrast $(\delta \epsilon)$ of our course, who are of the day. And this not only in being awake and sober, hut in being armed-not only watchful, but as sentinels, on our guard, and guarded ourselves. Notice, that these arms are defensive only, as against a sudden attack-and belong therefore not so much to the Christian's conflict with evil, as (from the context) to his guard against being surprised by the day of the Lord as a thief in the night. The best defences against such a surprise are the three great Christian graces, Faith, Hope, Love,which are accordingly here enumerated : see ch. i. 3, and 1 Cor. xiii. 13. In Eph. vi. 13-17, we have offensive as well as defensive weapons, and the symbolism is somewhat varied, the Gúpag being δικαιο- $\sigma \ell \nu \eta$, $\pi \ell \sigma \tau \iota s$ being the $\theta \upsilon \rho \epsilon \delta s$; while the

It seems rather far-fetched to refer it back to ver. 13. όλοτελείς seems to refer to the entireness of sanctification, which is presently expressed in detail. Jerome, who treats at length of this passage, ad Hedibiam (ep. exx.) quæst. xii., vol. i. p. 1004, explains it, 'per omnia vel in omnibus, sive plenos et perfectos :' and so Pelt, ' ut fiatis integri :' and the reviewer of Mr. Jowett in the Journal of S. That St. Paul had these distinctions in mind, is plain (against Jowett) from such places as 1 Cor. ii. 14. The spirit, that part whereby we are receptive of the Holy Spirit of God, is, in the unspiritual man, erushed down and subordinated to the animal soul ($\psi \nu \chi \hat{\eta}$): he therefore is called $\psi \nu \chi \iota \kappa \delta s \pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu a \mu \tilde{\epsilon} \chi \omega \nu$, Jude 19: see also note on 1 Cor. as above.

On the construction $\tau \delta \nu$ $\kappa \dot{\nu} \rho$, see refl. Jowett offers various solutions for the Apostle's vehemence of language. I should account for it, not by supposing any distrust of the elders, nor by the other hypo-

Calvin says, ' repetit in die illa ideo autem repetit, ut fidelium vota cohibeat, ne ultra modum festiment.' I should rather say, to give more fixity and definiteness to the foregoing). We may observe, as against Jowett's view of the arguments here being merely "they suffer now; therefore their enemies will suffer hereafter :- their enemies will suffer hereafter; therefore they will be comforted hereafter,"-that the arguments are nothing of the kind, resting entirely on the word Sinator, bringing in as it does all the relations of the Christian covenant, of them to God, and God to them,-and by contrast, of God to their enemies and persecu-11.] With a view to which tors. The verb has the secondary emphasis: see below) of your calling (just as we are exhorted to walk aliws της κλήσεως ής εκλήθημεν, Eph. iv. 1-the calling being taken not merely as the first act of God, but as the enduring state produced by that aet [see especially 1 Cor. vii. 207, the normal ter-

So that $\kappa \lambda \hat{\eta} \sigma \iota s$ is not 'the good thing to which we are called,' as Lun. : which besides would require $\tau \eta s \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma \epsilon \omega s$ at $\omega \sigma \eta$: now that $\tau \eta s$ $\kappa\lambda$ ήσεωs is sheltered behind the verb, it is taken as a matter of course, 'your call-ing,' an acknowledged faet), and may fulfil (complete,—bring to its fulness in you) all (possible) right purpose of goodness (it is quite impossible, with many ancient Commentators, E. V., &c., to refer evolution to God—' His good pleasure.' In that case we must at least have $\tau h v$ εὐδοκίαν—and ἀγαθωσ. will not refer with any propriety either to God, of whom the word is never used [occurring Rom. xv. 14; Gal. v. 22; Eph. v. 9 only, and always of MAN], or to the Thessalonians $[\pi, \dot{a}\gamma a\theta \omega$ σύνην εὐδοκίας]. It [εὐδοκία] must then apply to the Thessalonians, as it does to human agents in Phil. i. 15. And then άγαθωσύνης may be either a gen. objecti, 'approval of that which is good,'or a gen. appositionis, a ευδοκία con-sisting in άγαθωσύνη. The latter 1 own seems to me [agst Ellic.] far the best: as $\dot{a}\gamma a\theta \omega \sigma \dot{\nu} \eta$ is in all the above citations a subjective quality, and the approval of that which is good would introduce an element here which seems irrelevant) and (all) work of faith (activity of faith: see ref. 1 Thess. note. Lünemann refers έν αὐτῷ to ὄνομα, 'and ye in it i' but surely the expression is one too appropriated in sacred diction, for it to refer to any but our Lord Himself: cf. 1 Cor. i. 5; 2 Cor. xiii. 4; Eph. i. 4; iv. 21; Col. ii. 10, al.

CH. H. 1-12.] DOGMATICAL PORTION OF THE EPISTLE. Information (by way of correction) concerning the approach of the day of the Lord : its prevenient and accompanying circumstances. This passage has given rise to many separate treatises : the principal of which I have enumerated 1.] But in the Prolegomena, § v. (passing from those things which he prays for them, to those which he prays of them) we entreat (reff.) you, brethren (to win their affectionate attention), in regard of (the Vulg., E. V., and many ancient Commentators, render bree, 'per,' 'by,' and understand it as introducing a formula jurandi, as in Il. ω. 466, καί μιν ὑπέρ $\pi a \tau \rho \delta s \dots \lambda i \sigma \sigma \epsilon o$. But this construction is not found in the N. T.; and it is most unnatural that the Apostle should thus conjure them by that, concerning which he was about to teach them. It is best therefore to take $i\pi\epsilon\rho$, as so often, not quite = $\pi \epsilon \rho i$, but very nearly so, the meaning 'on behalf of' being slightly hinted-for the subject had been misrepresented, and justice is done to it by the Apostle; and so Chrys. $[\pi \epsilon \rho] \tau \hat{\eta} s$ παρουσίας τ. χριστοῦ ἐνταῦθα διαλέγεται κ. περί της έπισυναγ. ήμῶν] al.: see reff.) the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together (i. e. the gathering together of us, announced in 1 Thess. iv, 17) to Him (Lün. condemns to, and would render 'up to' as 1 Thess. iv. 17: but so much does not seem to lie in the 2.] in order that (aim preposition), of $\epsilon \rho \omega \tau \tilde{\omega} \mu \epsilon \nu$) ye should not be lightly (soon and with small reason) sbaken (properly of the waves agitated by a storm) from (see reff.) your mind (vous here in its general sense-your mental apprehension of the subject :- not 'your former more correct sentiment,' as Est., Corn .a-lap., Grot., al.) nor yet troubled (reff.), neither (on $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon$, which is disjunctive $[\delta \epsilon]$, and separates negative from negative, — and $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon$, which is adjunctive $[\tau \epsilon]$, and connects the separate parts of the same negation, see Winer, Gr. edn. 6, § 55. 6; and cf. Luke ix. 3) by spirit (by means of spiritual gift of prophecy or the like, assumed to substantiate such a view) nor by word (of mouth: belongs closely to $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon$ $\delta\iota$ ' $\epsilon\pi\iota\sigma\tau$. following, as is shewn by ver. 15, where they again appear together) nor by epistle as by (agency of) us (pretending to be from us. Let no pretended saying, no pretended epistle of mine, shake you in this matter. That there were such, is shewn by this parallel position of the clauses with dia πνεύματος, which last agency certainly was among them. Sayings, and an epis-tle, to this effect, were ascribed to the Apostle. So Chrys.: ἐνταῦθα δοκεῖ μοι αινίττεσθαι περϊιέναι τινάς επιστολήν πλάσαντας δήθεν από τοῦ Παύλου, κ. ταύτην ἐπιδεικνυμένους λέγειν ώς άρα έφέστηκεν ή ήμέρα τοῦ κυρίου, Ίνα πολλούς έντεῦθεν πλανήσωσιν. However improbable this may seem, our expression would seem hardly to bear legitimately any other meaning. Cf. also ch. iii. 17, and note. It is impossible to understand the ἐπιστολή ὡς δι' ἡμῶν of the first Epistle, wrongly understood, which certainly would have been more plainly expressed, and the Epistle not as here disowned, but explained. Jowett says, "The most probable hypothesis is, that the Apos-

But this seems hardly definite enough) to the effect that (' as if; or 'as that.' Lünem. is quite wrong in saying that is shews that the matter indicated by 571 is groundless,-see 2 Cor. v. 19, and note) the day of the Lord is present (not, 'is at hand :' ἐνίστημι occurs six times besides [refl.] in the N. T., and always in the sense of being present : in two of those places, Rom. viii. 38, 1 Cor. iii. 22, τὰ ἐνεστῶτα are distinguished expressly from $\tau \dot{a} \mu \epsilon \lambda \lambda o \nu \tau a$. Besides which, St. Paul could not have so written, nor could the Spirit have so spoken by him. The teaching of the Apostles was, and of the Holy Spirit in all ages has been, that the day of the Lord is at hand. But these Thessalonians imagined it to be already come, and accordingly were deserting their pursuits in life, and falling into other irregularities, as if the day of grace were closed. So Chrys., — δ διάβολος έπειδη ούκ Ισχυσε πείσαι ότι ψευδη τα μέλλοντα, έτέραν ήλθεν όδόν, και καταθεls ανθρώπους τινας λυμεωνας, επεχείρει τούς πειθομένους απατάν, ότι τα μεγάλα έκεινα καί λαμπρά τέλος είληφε. τότε μέν αδν έλεγον έκεινοι την άνάστασιν ήδη γεγονέναι νῦν δὲ ἔλεγον ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν ἡ κρίσις και ή παρουσία τοῦ χριστοῦ, Ίνα τόν χριστόν αὐτόν ψεύδει ὑποβάλωσι, καὶ πείσαντες ώς οὐκ ἔστι λοιπὸν ἀντίδοσις οὐδὲ δικαστήριον καl κόλασις καlτιμωρία τοῖς κακῶς πεποιηκόσιν, έκείνους τε θρασυτέρους έργάσωνται, καί τούτους ταπεινοτέρους. καί τὸ δὴ πάντων χαλεπώτερον, ἐπεχείρουν οἱ μέν ἁπλῶς ῥήματα ἀπαγγέλλειν ὡς παρὰ τοῦ Παύλου ταῦτα λεγόμενα, οἱ δὲ καὶ ἐπιστυλάς πράττειν ώς παρ' έκείνου γραφείσας. Hom. in 2 Thess. i. 1, vol. xi. p. 469).

tention on the part of the Apostle to fill up the ellipsis: it supplies itself in the reader's mind. Knatchbull connects 571 with ¿ξαπατήση, and supplies ἐνέστηκεν after it : but this is very harsh) unless there have come the apostasy first (of which he had told them when present, see ver. 5 : and probably with a further reference still to our Lord's prophecy in Matt. xxiv. 10-12. There is no need, with Chrys., Thdrt., Thl., Aug., to suppose ἀποστασία to mean Antichrist himself [τί ἐστιν ἡ ἀποστασία; αὐτὸν καλεῖ τὄν άντίχριστον αποστασίαν, Chr.], nor to regard him as its only cause : rather is he the chief fruit and topstone of the apostasy), and there have been revealed (ref. ch. i. As Christ in his time, so Antichrist in his time, is 'revealed' - brought out into light: he too is a $\mu\nu\sigma\tau\eta\rho\mu\nu$, to be unfolded and displayed : see vv. 8, 9) the man of sin (in whom sin is as it were personified, as righteousness in Christ. The gen. is called by Ellicott that of the predominating quality), the son of perdition (see ref. John, where our Lord uses the expression of Judas. It seems merely to refer to Antichrist himself, whose essence and inheritance is ἀπώλεια,—uot to his influence over others, as Thdrt.[both: ὡs κ. αὐτὸν ἀπολλύμενον, κ. ἑτέροις πρόξενον τούτου γενόμενον], (Ec., Pelt, al.), he that withstands (the construction is not to be carried on by zeugma, as if έπι πάντα κ.τ.λ. belonged to αντικείμεvos as well as to $b\pi\epsilon\rho a \rho \delta\mu\epsilon vos$ [the omission of the second article is no proof of this, as Pelt supposes, but only that both predicates belong to one and the same subject], but avrikeluevos is absolute, 'he that withstands CHRIST,' the avti your tos. 1 John ii. 18), and exalts himself above (in a hostile sense, reff.) every one that is called God (cf. λεγόμενοι θεοί, 1 Cor. viii. 5. From these passages it is plain that such figurative sense was familiar to the Apostle. And if so, $\kappa \alpha \theta | \sigma \alpha \iota$ makes no difficulty. Its figurative sense, as holding a place of power, sitting as judge or ruler, is more frequent still: see in St. Paul, 1 Cor. vi. 4: and Matt. xxiii. 2: Rev. xx. 4: to which indeed we might add the many places where our Lord is said kalloai on the right hand of God, e.g. Heb. i. 3; viii. 1; x. 12; xii. 2; Rev. iii. 21. recognize God's law-see reff. The genitive is one of apposition : the avopia is that wherein the μυστήριον consists :-- not a genitive of the working cause, as Thdrt. ως κεκρυμμένην έχοντας της ανομίας $\bar{\tau}\eta\nu \pi \dot{a}\gamma\eta\nu$],—nor must we understand by the words, Antichrist himself, as Olsh., comparing τδ της ευσεβείας μυστήριον, 1 Tim. iii. 16,—nor the unexampled depths of ungodliness, as Krebs, al., from Joseph. As to the order of the B. J. in reff. words, cf. Arrian, exp. Alex. i. 17. 6, κ . εύρέσθαι συγγνώμην τῷ πλήθει τῶν Θηβαίων της ἀποστάσεως, Lün.) only until he that now hinders (& κατέχων is placed before \u00e9us for emphasis, as in ref. Various erroneous arrangements and renderings of this sentence have been current : of which the principal have arisen from fancying that the participle Katéxwy requires some verb to be supplied after it. So Vulg. ['tantum ut qui tenet nune, teneat, donec de medio fiat :' so Syr., Erasm., Est., all.], and E. V. Cf. rcf. John), and in all (manner of) deceit (not, as E. V. ' deceivableness,' for it is the agency of the man of sin-active deceit, of which the word is used) of unrighteousness (belonging to, consisting in, leading to, άδικία) for (the dativus incommodi) those who are perishing (on their way to perdition), (WHY? not by God's absolute decree, but) because (in requital for this, that) they did not (when it was offered to them) receive the love of the truth (the opposite of the $\psi \in \hat{v} \delta os$ which characterizes all the working of the man of sin : see as before, John viii. 44) in order to their being saved. 11.] And on this account (because they did not receive, &c.) It is better here to take $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ definite, referring to what has gone before, than abstract),-that (the higher or ultimate purpose of God) all might be judged (i. e. here ' condemned,' by the context) who did not (looking back over their time of probation) believe the truth, but found pleasure in iniquity. No human reasoning powers can connect the two,-God's sovereignty and man's free-will: all we know of them is, that the one is as certain a truth as the other. does or says that which is inappropriate under the circumstances. Thus it answers to ineptus in Latin (Cic. de Orat. ii. 4). From 'aptitude,' it passes to its wider ethical meaning, and is used of men who act contrary to divine or human laws. Thus it gets the general signification of bad or ungodly. See examples in Kypke, Obss. ii. p. 145,—in Lösner and Wetst." Who are these men? It is obvious that the key to the answer will be found in Acts xviii. They were the Jews at Corinth, who were at that time the especial adversaries of the Apostle and his preaching. And this is confirmed by the clause which he has added to account for their atonla and novypla: ού γάρ πάντων ή πίστις-for to all men the (Christian) faith does not belong-all men do not receive it—have no receptivity for it —obviously pointing at Jews by this description. It is more natural to understand the article here as definite, the faith, than as abstract : for faith, as such, would not bear much meaning here.

Calov., Le Clerc, Beug., Pelt, Winer, al.) have joined δia The encorolis with what follows, and explained it (usually, see below),- ' note that man by an Epistle (to me).' But This is decidedly against this rendering,-unless we suppose that it signifies 'your' answer to this. [Bengel and Pelt, taking $\tau \hat{\eta} s \, \hat{\epsilon} \pi$. for this Epistle, would render, ' notate nota censoria, hanc Epist., ejus admonendi causa, adhibentes cique incultantes' (Beng.),-'Eum hac epistola freti severius tractate' (Pelt): but both these require $\sigma\eta\mu\epsilon\omega\delta\sigma\theta\epsilon$ to be diverted from its simple meaning.] The great objection to the above connexion is that St. Paul has already pointed out the manner of treating such an one, ver. 6, and is not likely to enjoin a further reference to himself on the subject. It is far better therefore, with Chrys. (there seems no reason for qualifying this by apparently, as Ellie.), Est., Corn.-a-Lap., Beza, Hamm., Whitby, Schott, Olsh., De W., Baum .-Crus., Lün., Ellic., all., to join διà τηs έπ. with the preceding $\tau \hat{\varphi} \lambda \delta \gamma$. $\dot{\eta} \mu$., and render it our word by this Epistle, as ή έπιστολή is undoubtedly used in reff., and the word is that in ver. 12. σημειοῦσθε] mark, see ref. 15.] καί is more delicate than ἀλλά or δέ would be: q. d. 'and 1 know that it will follow as a consequence of your being ώs in Christians, that ye will, &c.' the first clause seems superfluous : it is perhaps inserted to correspond with the other clause, or still further to soften the έχθρον ήγεισθε. So ωςπερ, Job xix. 11; 16.] Concluding wish. xxxiii. 10.

ό κύριος της ειρήνης] As the Apostle constantly uses $\delta \theta \epsilon \delta s \tau \bar{\eta} s \epsilon i \rho$. for the God of Peace (see Rom. xv. 33; xvi. 20: 2 Cor. xiii. 11, al.), we here must understand our Lord Jesus Christ. ή είρήνη must not be understood only of peace with one another : for there has been no special mention of mutual disagreement in this Epistle: but of peace in general, outward and inward, here and hereafter, as in Rom. xiv. See Fritz. on Romans, vol. i. p. 22. 17.

The stress is on $\dot{\nu}\mu\hat{\nu}$ -May the Lord of Peace give you (that) Peace always in every way (whether it be outward or inward, for time or for eternity). μετά πάντων $\dot{\mathbf{u}}$.] therefore with the $\dot{a}\tau \dot{a}\kappa\tau\omega s$ περιπατοῦντεs also (Lün.) : not as Jowett, pleonastic. 17.] Autographic salutation. The Epistle, as it follows from this, was not written with the Apostle's own hand, but dictated. So with other Epistles; see Rom. xvi. 22: 1 Cor. xvi. 21 : Col. iv. 18. 6] which circumstance : not attraction for os. The whole of vv. 17, 18, not merely the benediction, are included. By the words outes γράφω, we must not conceive that any thing was added, such as his signature,--or as Ec., οίον το ασπάζομαι ύμας, η το έδρωσθε, ή τι τοιοῦτον: they are said of that which he is writing at the time. His reason for this caution evidently was, the έπιστολή ώς δι' ήμῶν, spoken of ch. ii. 2. And the words ev maon emigroli must not, with Lün., be limited to any future Epistles which he might send to the Thessalonians, but understood of a caution which he intended to practise in future with all his Epistles : or at least with such as required, from circumstances, this identification. Thus we have (1 Thess. being manifestly an exception, as written before the rule was established) Gal. written with his own hand (see note on Gal.

CHAP. I. 1, 2.] ADDRESS AND GREET-1. Kat' entr.] See reff., especially ING. Tit. : a usual expression of St. Paul, and remarkably enough occurring in the doxology at the end of the Epistle to the Romans, which there is every reason to think was written long after the Epistle itself. It is a more direct predication of divine command than $\delta_{i\dot{a}}$ $\hat{\theta}_{\epsilon\lambda}\eta\mu a\tau os$ $\theta_{\epsilon o\hat{v}}$ in the carlier Epistles. θεού σωτήρος ήμ.] Apparently an expression helonging to the later apostolic period,-one characteristic of which seems to have been the gradual dropping of the article from certain wellknown theological terms, and treating them almost as proper names (see, however, Ellicott's note). Thus in Luke i. 47 it is $\epsilon \pi l \tau \hat{\varphi} \theta \epsilon \hat{\varphi} \tau \hat{\varphi} \sigma \omega \tau \hat{\eta} \rho l \mu ov$: and indeed in almost every place in the pastoral Epistles except this, $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\rho$ has the article. In ref. Jude, the expression is the same as here. Kai $\chi \rho$. 'In σ .] See a similar repetition after $\delta o \hat{\nu} \lambda o s \chi \rho$. 'In $\sigma o \hat{\nu}$ in Rom. i. 4 & 6. The Apostle loves them in his more solemn and formal passages-and the whole style of these Epistles partakes more of this character, as was natural in the decline of life. της έλπίδος ήμων] It is not easy to point out the exact reference of this word here, any further than we may say that it gives utterance to the fulness of an old man's heart in the near prospect of that on which it naturally was ever dwelling. It is the ripening and familiarization of χριστόs έν ύμιν $\dot{\eta}$ έλπls τ η̂s δόξηs of ref. Col. See also Tit. i. 2. I am persuaded that in many such expressions in these Epistles, we are to seek rather a psychological than a pragmatical explanation. Theodoret notices the similar occurrence of words in Ps. lxiv. (lxv.) 6, επάκουσον ήμων ό θεός δ σωτήρ ήμῶν, ή ἐλπὶς πάντων τῶν περάτων τῆς γῆς—which is interesting, as it might have suggested the expression here, familiar as the Apostle was with O. T. diction. ev πίστει] When Conyb. says, "' in faith,' not 'in the faith,' which would require $\tau \hat{\eta}$ " (so Ellic., without the protest),-he forgets (1) the constant usage by which the article is omitted after prepositions in cases where it is beyond doubt in the mind of the writer and must be expressed in translation: (2) the almost uniform anarthrousness of these Epistles. He himself translates the parallel expression in Tit. i. 4, 'mine own son according to our common faith,' which is in fact supplying the article. Render therefore in the faith: joining it with yvyolw tékvy : and comέλεοs and είρήνη are pare reff. found joined in Gal. vi. 16, in which Epistle are so many similarities to these (see Prolegg. to these Epistles, § i. 32, note).

legg, to first photos η and η , absolute, is found in St. Paul, in Gal. i. 1, 3: Eph. vi. 23: Phil. ii. 11: Col. iii. 17 ($\tau \varphi \ \theta. \pi$.): 1 Thess, i. 1: 2 Thess, i. 1: 2 Tim. i. 2: Tit. i. 4. So that it belongs to all periods of his writing, but chiefly to the later.

3–20.] From specifying the object for which Timotheus was left at Ephesus (vv. 3, 4), and characterizing the false teachers (5-7), he digresses to the true use of the law which they pretended to teach (8-10), and its agreement with the gospel with which he was entrusted (11): thence to his own conversion, for the mercies of which he expresses his thankfulness in glowing terms (12-17). Thence he returns to his exhortations to Timotheus On these repeated digres-(18 - 20).sions, and the inferences from them, see 3.] The sen-Prolegg. ch. vii. § i. 36 f. tence begins As I exhorted thee, &c., but in his negligence of writing, the Apostle does not finish the construction : neither verse 5, nor 12, nor 18, will form the apodosis without unnatural forcing.

άκουε τό προςηνές, πώς ού διδασκάλου κέχρηται βωμή, άλλ' οἰκέτου σχεδόν οὐ γὰρ εἶπεν ἐπέταξα οὐδὲ ἐκέλευσα, οὐδὲ παρήνεσα, ἀλλὰ τί; παρεκάλεσά σε. This has been met (Huther, al.), by remarking that he says διεταξάμην to Titus, Tit. i. 5. The present word however was the usual one to his fellowhelpers, see reff. : and διεταξάμην there refers rather to a matter of detail-'as I prescribed to thee.' The sense of προςμείναι, to tarry, or stay at a place, is sufficiently clear from ref. Acts. The mposimplies a fixity when the word is absolutely used, which altogether forbids the joining προsμείναι with πορευόμενοs understood of Timotheus, as some have attempted to do. The aorist $\pi \rho os \mu \epsilon \bar{\nu} a \iota$ refers to the act of remaining behind when the Apostle departed; the present would have marked an endurance of stay. Various endeavours have been made to escape from the difficultics of the fact implied. Schneckenburger would read mpospeivas: others would take $\pi \rho os \mu \epsilon i \nu a \iota$ as imperative, most unnaturally. No one can doubt, that the straightforward rendering is, As I besought thee to tarry in Ephesus, when I was going to Macedonia And on this straightforward rendering we must build our chronological considerations. See the whole subject discussed in the Prolegomena, ch. vii. § ii.: and cf. Ellicott's note here.

πορευόμενος, present, when I was on my way. iva, &c. object of his tarrying. παραγγείλης, see reff. τισίν so constantly (reff.) in these Epistles : sometimes of avtileyovtes Tit. i. 9, or $\pi o \lambda \lambda o i$ ib. 10. Huther infers from $\tau_{i\sigma}$, that the number at this time was not considerable: but this is hardly safe. "The indefinite pronoun is more probably slightly contemptuous: 'le mot $\tau i \nu \epsilon s$ a quelque chose de méprisant,' see Arnaud, on Jude 4, compare Gal. ii. 12." έτεροδιδασκαλείν] There Ellicott. seems to be in $\epsilon \tau \epsilon \rho \sigma$, as in $\epsilon \tau \epsilon \rho \sigma \langle \nu \gamma \sigma \hat{\nu} \nu \tau \epsilon s$

2 Cor. vi. 14, the idea of strange, or incongruous, not mercly of different : cf. also έτερόγλωσσος, 1 Cor. xiv. 21. And the compound -διδασκαλείν, not -διδάσκειν, brings in the sense of 'acting as a teacher .' not to be teachers of strange things. Euschius has the substantive, H. E. iii. 32 —διὰ τῆς τῶν ἐτεροδιδασκάλων ἀπάτης, in the sense of heretical teachers-which however is too fixed and developed a meaning to give here. We have καλοδι-δάσκαλος, Tit. ii. 3. The meanings of 'other teaching' and 'false teaching,' when we remember that the faith which St. Paul preached was incapable (Gal. i. 8, 9) of any the least compromise with the errors subsequently described, lie very close to one another. προςέχειν, το give attention to: see reff.: "as it were, a mean term between arover and miorev. ειν, compare Polyb. iv. 84.6, διακούσαντες ούδεν προςέσχον; Jos. μύθοιs] We can only judge from the other passages in these Epistles where the word occurs, what kind of fables are alluded to. In Tit. i. 14, we have $\mu\eta$ $\pi pos \xi \chi ov \tau \epsilon s$ loudaäkoîs $\mu b \theta o s$. In our ch. iv. 7, they are designated as $\beta \in \beta \eta \lambda oi$ kal $\gamma \rho a \omega \delta \in is$. In 2 Tim. iv. 4, they are spoken of absolutely, as here. If we are justified in identifying the 'fables' in Tit. with these, they had a Jewish origin : but merely to take them, as Thdrt., for the Jewish traditional comments on the law (μύθους δε ού την τοῦ νόμου διδασκαλίαν ἐκάλεσεν, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἰουδαϊκὴν ἑρμηνείαν την ύπ' αυτών καλουμένην δευτέρωσιν רִשְׁנֶה], mischna]), does not seem to satisfy the βέβηλοι καl γραώδεις. And consequently others have interpreted them of the gnostic mythology of the Æons. So Tert. adv. Valentinianos, ch. 3, vol. ii. p. 545 : 'qui ex alia conscientia venerit fidei, si statim inveniat tot nomina wonum, tot coniugia, tot genimina, tot exitus, tot eventus, felicitates, infelicitates dispersae atque concisae divinitatis, dubitabiturne ibidem pronuntiare, has esse fabulas et genealogias indeterminatus, quas apostoli spiritus his iam tune pullulantibus seminibus haereti-cis damnare praevenit?' And Iren., in his præf., p. 1, assumes these words in the very outset, almost as his motto - $\epsilon \pi \epsilon i \tau \eta \nu \dot{a} \lambda \eta$ θειαν παραπεμπόμενοί τινες επειςάγουσι λόγους ψευδεΐς κ. γενεαλογίας ματαίας αίτινες ζητήσεις μαλλον παρέχουσι, καθώς

ό απόστολός φησιν, ή οἰκοδομήν θεου την $e^{i} \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon i \ldots$ Others again (as Suidas's definition, μῦθος, λόγος ψευδής, εἰκονίζων την αλήθειαν) would give an entirely general meaning to the word,- 'false teaching' of any kind. But this is manifestly too lax: for the descriptions here (ver. 7, e. g.) point at a Jewish origin, and a development in the direction of yevealoylas άπέραντοι. It does not seem easy to define any further these µûθou, but it is plain that any transitional state from Judaism to gnostieism will satisfy the conditions here propounded, without inferring that the full-blown gnosticism of the second century must be meant, and thus calling in question the genuineness of the Epistle. On the whole subject, see Prolegg. ch. vii. γενεαλ. άπερ.] De W. in § i. 8 ff. his note on Tit. i. 14, marks out well the references which have been assigned to this expression : "Yevealoyíat cannot be 1) properly genealogical registers,-either for a pure genealogico-historical end (Chr., (Ee., Thl, Ambr., Est., Calov., Schöttg., Wolf), or for a dogmatico-historical one, to foster the religious national pride of Jews against Gentiles, cf. Phil. iii. 4 f. (Storr, Flatt, Wegsch., Leo), or to ascertain the descent of the Messiah (Thdrt., Jer., Wegseh.: according to Nicol. Lyr., to shew that Jesus was not the Messiah), least of all genealogies of Timotheus himself (Wetst.),-for all this does not touch, or too little touches religious interests: nor are they 2) gentile theogonies (Chr. gives this as well as the former interpretation : also (Ec., Thl., Elsn.); nor again 3) pedigrees of the cabalistic sephiroth (Vitring. Obss. 1, v. 13: see Wolf), which will hardly suit yeveal. : nor 4) Essenian genealogies of angels (Mich., Heinr., al.), of the existence of which we have no proof; nor 5) allegorizing genealogies, applications of psychological and historical considerations to the genealogies contained in the books of Moses; as in Philo (Dähne, Stud. u. Krit. 1853, 1008),-a practice too peculiar to Philo and his view: but most probably 6) lists of gnostic emana-tions (Tert. contr. Val. 3,—præser. 33, Iren. præf. [see above], Grot., Hamm., Chr., Mosh., Mack, Baur, al.), &c." But again, inasmuch as yevealoyíal are coupled in Tit. iii. 9 with $\mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \alpha i$ vominal, it seems as if we must hardly understand the ripened fruits of gnosticism, but rather the first beginnings of those genealogies in the abuse of Judaism. See Prolegg. "It is curious that Polybius uses both terms in similarly close connexion, Hist. ix. 2. 1." Ellicott. άπεράντοιs may be used mercly in popular hyperbole to signify the tedious length of such genealogies. The meaning 'profitless' (Chr., ήτοι πέρας μηδέν έχουσαι, η ούδεν χρή-σιμον, η δυςκατάληπτον ημιν, and so Thdrt.; see below) would be a natural deduction from the other, and is therefore hardly to be so summarily set aside as it has been by De W., al. aïtives, of the kind which. ζητήous] objective, questions: not subjective, 'questionings :' see reff. in these Epistles, in which $(\eta \tau \eta \sigma \epsilon is are not themselves, but$ lead to, épeis, µáxai, &c. παρέχουow] minister, as E. V., is the best rendering : 'afford,' 'give rise to,' 'furnish ' see below. μαλλον ή is a mild way of saying Kal ov : see reff. οίκονομίαν θεοῦ . . .] This has been taken two ways : 1) objectively: the dispensation (reff.) of God (towards man) which is (consists) in (the) faith : in which case παρέχουσιν must bear something of a transferred meaning,-zeugmatic, as the grammarians call it, - as applied to oikovoµíav, implying, "rather than they set forth," &e. And to this there can be no objection, as the instances of it are so common. This meaning also suits that of oikovoula in the reff., even 1 Cor. ix. 17, where the oikovo- $\mu l \alpha$ is the objective matter wherewith the Apostle was entrusted, not his own subjective fulfilment of it. 2) subjectively :- 'the exercising of the steward-ship of God in faith :' so Conyb. : or as paraphrased by Storr (in Huther) (ητοῦντας αὐτοὺς ποιοῦσι, μᾶλλον η οἰκονόμους $\theta \in \delta \tilde{\nu} \pi i \sigma \tau \delta v$. But to this there is the serious objection, that oikovoµla in this subjective sense, 'the fulfilment of the duty of an oikovóµos,' wants example: and even could this be substantiated, ofκονομίαν παρέχειν, in the sense required, would seem again questionable. I would therefore agree with Huther and Wiesinger (and Ellicott) in the objective sense - the dispensation of God. Then The tr πίστει has also been variously taken. Chrys. says, καλώς είπεν, οἰκονομίαν θεοῦ· μεγάλα γαρ ήμιν δουναι ήθέλησεν δ θεός, άλλ' οὐ δέχεται ό λογισμός τὸ μέγεθος αύτοῦ τῶν οἰκονομιῶν. διὰ πίστεως οὖν τοῦτο γίνεσθαι δεῖ. And Thdrt.: ai μèν περιτταί ζητήσεις ανόνητοι, ή δε πίστις φωτίζει τον νοῦν, καl ἐπιδείκνυσι τàs θείαs οἰκονομίαs. But the words will hardly bear either of these. The only legitimate meaning seems to be-which is in faith, i. e. finds its sphere, and element, and development among men, in faith. Thus iv miore stands in contrast to ζητήσεις, in which the οἰκονομία θεοῦ does not consist; and the way for the next sentence is prepared, which speaks of πίστις ἀνυπόκριτος as one of the means to the great end of the gospel. 5.] But (contrast to the practice of these pretended teachers of the law) the end (purpose, aim : Chrys. quotes τέλος ἰατρικής byiefa) of the commandment (viz. of the law of God in [ver. 11] the gospel: not, although in the word there may be a slight allusion to it, -of that which Timothy was $\pi a \rho a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \lambda \epsilon i \nu$, ver. 3. This commandment is understood from the οίκονομία just mentioned, of which it forms a part) is Love (as Rom. xiii. 10. We recognize, in the restating of former axiomatic positions, without imme-diate reference to the subject in hand, the characteristic of a later style of the Apostle) out of (arising, springing from, as its place of birth-the heart being the central point of life : see especially ref. 1 Pet.) a pure heart (pure from all selfish views and leanings: see Acts xv. 9: on the psychology, see Ellicott's note: and Delitzsch, Biblische Psychologie, iv. 12, p. 204) and good conscience (is this συνείδησις ἀγαθή, 1) a conscience good by being freed from guilt by the application of Christ's blood,-or is it 2) a conscience pure in motive, antecedent to the act of ^c Mark x. 30, ^k Luke x. ^{27, from} Beut, vi.5. ^{17, from} Peut, vi.5. ^{17, from} ^{17, k} i στεως ^g ανυποκρίτου⁶ ων ^h τινές ⁱ αστοχήσαντες cd efg ^{17, k} i ξετράπησαν είς ¹ματαιολογίαν, ⁷ θέλοντες είναι^m νομο-^{h kim} ^{17, k} i ξετράπησαν είς ¹ματαιολογίαν, ⁷ θέλοντες είναι^m νομο-^{h kim} ^{17, k} i δίδασκαλοι, μηⁿ νοοῦντες μήτε ^a λέγουσιν, μήτε περὶ love? This must be decided by the usage of this and similar expressions in these Epistles, where they occur several times [reff. and 1 Tim. iii. 9. 2 Tim. i. 3. 1 Tim. iv. 2. Tit. i. 15]. From those examples it would appcar, as De W., that in the language of the pastoral Epistles a good conscience is joined with soundness in the faith, a bad conscience with unsoundness. So that we can hardly help introducing the element of freedom from guilt by the effect of that faith on the conscience. And the carlier usage of St. Paul in Acts xxiii. 1, compared with the very similar one in 2 Tim. i. 3, goes to substantiate this) and faith unfeigned (this connects with $\tau \eta \nu \, \epsilon \nu$ $\pi l \sigma \tau \epsilon_1$ above ; it is faith, not the pretence of faith, the mere ' Ccheinglaube' of the hypoerite, which, as in Acts xv. 9, καθαρίζει τàs καρδίαs, and as in Gal. v. 6, δι' ἀγάπης everyeita: Wiesinger well remarks that we see from this, that the general character of these false teachers, as of those against whom Titus is warned, was not so much error in doctrine, as leading men away from the carnestness of the loving Christian life, to useless and vain questionings, ministering only strife) : 6.] (the connexion is-it was by declining from these qualities that these men entered on their paths of crror) of which (the καθαρὰ καρδία, — συνείδησις ἀγαθή, and πίστις $d\nu\nu\pi\delta\kappa\rho\mu\sigma\sigma$, which last they have therefore missed by losing them) some having failed (reff. : 'missed' their mark :' but this seems hardly precise enough : it is not so much to miss a thing at which a man is aiming, as to leave unregarded one at which he ought to be aiming : as Schweigh. Lex. Polyb., 'rationem alicujus rei non habere, et respectu cjus sibi male consulere.' Thus Polyb. i. 33. 10, της μέν πρός τὰ θηρία μάχης δεόντως ήσαν έστοχασμένοι, της δε πρός τούς ίππεῖς, πολλαπλασίους ὄντας τῶν παρ' αὐτοῖς, όλοσχερῶς ἠστόχησαν: v. 107. 2, πρός μέν τό παρόν ένδεχομένως έβουλεύσατο, τοῦ δὲ μέλλοντος ἠστόχησε: see also vii. 14. 3) turned aside to (¿§-,

Cf. Palm and Rost's Lex. sub voce) teachers of the law (of what law? and in what sense ? To the former question, but one answer can be given. The law is that of Moses ; the law, always so known. The usage of νομοδιδάσκαλος (refl.) forbids our giving the word, as coming from a Jew, any other meaning. That this is so, is also borne out by Tit. i. 14. Then as to the sense in which these men professed themselves teachers of the law. (1) Clearly not, as Baur, by their very antinomianism,-teachers of the law by setting it aside : this would at best be an unnatural sense to extract from the word, and it is not in any way countenanced by vv. 8 fl. as Baur thinks : see below. (2) Hardly, in the usual position of those Judaizing antagonists of St. Paul against whom he directs his arguments in Rom., Gal., and Col. of their subject, but one not even touched on here—an offence against the liberty of the Gospel, and its very existence, by reintroducing the law and its requirements. (3) We may see clearly by the data furnished in these pastoral Epistles, that it was with a different class of adversaries that the Apostle had in them to dcal : with men who corrupted the material enactments of the moral law, and founded on Judaism not assertions of its obligation, but idle fables and allegories, letting in latitude of morals, and unholiness of life. It is against this abuse of the law that his arguments are directed : no formal question arises of the obligation of the law : these men struck, by their interpretation, at the root of all divine law itself, and therefore at that root itself does he meet and grapple with them. [See more in Prolegg.] Hence the follow-ing description), understanding neither (notice μήτε μήτε, making the two branches of the negation parallel, not progressively exclusive, as would be the case with $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon$: they understand as little about the one as about the other) the things which they say (the actual diatribes which they themselves put forth, they do not understand : they are not honest men, speaking from conviction, and therefore lucidly: but men depraved in conscience [Tit. i. 14, 15], and putting forth things obscure to themselves, for other and selfish purposes), nor concerning what things they make their affirmations (nor those objective truths which properly belong to and underlie the matters with which they This explanation of are thus tampering. the sentence is called in question by De W., on the ground of the parallel expression in Tit. iii. 8, περί τούτων βούλομαί σε διaβeβaιovσθai, in which he maintains that in διαβεβαιοῦσθαι περί τινος, περί Twos represents the more thing asserted, not the objective matter concerning which the assertion is made,-and he therefore holds our sentence to be a mere tautology, - & λέγουσιν answering exactly to $\pi \epsilon \rho l$ τίνων διαθεβαιοῦνται. But in reply we may say, that there is not the slightest necessity for such a construction in the passage of Titus : see note there. And so Huth., Wies. Cf. Arrian. Epict. ii. 21, τί δ' έρουσι και περί τίνων ή πρός τίνας, VOL. III.

8 ff. On the other hand the law bas its right use :-- not that to which they put it, but to testify against sins in practice : the catalogue of which seems to be here introduced, on account of the lax moral practice of these very men who were, or were in danger of, falling into them : not, as Baur imagines, because they were antinomians and set aside the (moral) law. They did not set it aside, but perverted it, and practised the very sins against which it was directed. Now (slight contrast to last verse, taking up the matter on general grounds) we know (see ref.: especially Rom. vii. 14 : a thoroughly pauline expression) that the law is good (Rom. vii. 16: not only, as Thdrt., $\dot{\omega}\phi\epsilon\lambda\mu\sigma\nu$, but in a far higher sense, as in Rom. vii. 12, 14: good abstractedly, - in accordance with the divine holiness and justice and truth; see ver. 18, ch. iv. 4) if a man (undoubtedly, in the first place, and mainly, a teacher : but not [as Bengel, De W., and Ellie.] to be confined to that meaning : all that is here said might apply just as well to a private Christian's thoughts and use of the law, as to the use of it by teachers themselves) use it lawfully (i. e. not, as most expositors, according to its intention as law [ἐάν τις ἀκολουθή αὐτοῦ τῷ σκόπῳ, Thdrt.], and as directed against the following sins in Christians : but clearly, from what follows, as De W. insists [see also Ellic.], and as Chrys. obscurely notices amongst other interpretations, vouiµws in the Gospel sense : i. c. as not binding on, nor relevant to Christian believers, but only a means of awakening repentance in the ungodly and profane. Chr.'s words arc: τίς δε αὐτῷ νομίμως χρήσεται; ὁ είδὼς ὅτι οὐ δεῖται αὐτοῦ. His further references of vouluws, 'as leading us to Christ,'-as 'inducing to piety not by its injunctions but by purer motives,' &c., are not in place here), being aware of this (belongs to ris, the teacher, or former of a judgment on the matter. elbús implies both the possession and the application of the knowledge : 'heeding,' or 'being aware of '), that for a just man (in what sense ? in the mere sense of 'virtuous,' 'righteous,' in the world's acceptation of the term?

in Chrys.'s third alternative, δίκαιον ένταῦθα καλεῖ τὸν κατωρθωκότα τὴν ἀρετήν? or as Thl., δς δι' αυτό το καλόν τήν τε πονηρίαν μισεί και την άρετην περιπτύσσεται? All such meanings are clearly excluded by ver. 11, which sets the whole sentence in the full light of Gospel doctrine, and necessitates a corresponding interpretation for every term used in it. δíκalos therefore can only mean, righteous in the Christian sense, viz. by justifying faith and sanctification of the Spirit,justilia per sanctificationem,'as De Wette from Croc.,-one who is included in the actual rightcousness of Christ by having put Him on, and so not forensically amenable to the law, --partaker of the inherent righteousness of Christ, inwrought by the Spirit, which unites him to Him, and so not morally needing it) the law (as before : not, 'a law' in general, as will be plain from the preceding remarks: nor does the omission of the article furnish any ground for such a rendering, in the presence of numerous instances where vouos, anarthrous, is undeniably 'the Law' of Moscs. This second pair expresses opposition to God, whose law it is - ἀσεβήs being the man who does not reverence Him, άμαρτωλός the man who lives in defiance of Him), for unholy and profane (this last pair betokens separation and alienation from God and His law alikethose who have no share in His holiness, no relation to things sucred. [Ellic.] The Apostle puts the avopanooio the as the most flagrant of all breakers of the eighth commandment. No theft of a man's goods can be compared with that most atrocious act, which steals the man himself, and robs him of that free will which is the first gift of his Creator. And of this crime all are guilty, who, whether directly or indirectly, are engaged in, or uphold from whatever pretence, the making or keeping of slaves), for liars, for perjurers (breakers of the ninth commandment. It is remarkable that he does not refer to that very commandment by which the law wrought on himself when he was alive without the law and sin was dead in him, viz. the tenth. Possibly this may be on account of its more spiritual nature, as he here wishes to bring out the grosser kinds of sin against which the moral law is pointedly enacted. The subsequent clause however seems as if he had it in his mind, and on that account added a coneluding general and inclusive description), and if any thing else (he passes to sins themselves from the committers of sins) is opposed (reff.) to the healthy teaching (i. e. that moral teaching which is spi-ritually sound := $\eta \kappa \alpha \tau$ evo($\beta \epsilon i \alpha \nu$ di-daormala, ch. vi. 3, where it is parallel with υγιαίνοντες λόγοι οι τοῦ κυρ. ήμ. The gospel is 'the glad tidings of the glory of God,' as of Christ in l. c., inasmuch as it reveals to us God in all His glory, which glory would be here that of justifying the sinner without the law by His marvellous provision of redemption in Christ) of the blessed God ($\mu\alpha\kappa\dot{a}\rho_{10}\sigma_{s}$, used of God, is called unpaulinifd) by De Wette, occurring only in 1 Tim. Nor is it that in ver. 5, for that is introduced as regarding a matter quite different from the present-viz. the aberrations of the false teachers, who do not here appear till the exhortation to Timotheus is over. What this command is, is plain from the following. This command I commit (as a deposit, to be faithfully guarded and kept : see ref. 2 Tim. and ch. vi. 20: Herod. vi. 86, beginning) to thee, son Timotheus (see on ver. 2), according to (in pursuance of: these words belong to παρατίθεμαί σοι, not as (Ec., Flatt, al., to ίνα στρατεύη below) the former prophecies concerning thee (the directions, or, prophecies properly so called, of the Holy Spirit, which were spoken concerning Timotheus at his first conversion, or at his admission [cf. ch. iv. 14] into the ministry, by the $\pi \rho o \phi \hat{\eta} \tau a i$ in the church. We have instances of such prophetic intimations in Acts xiii. 1, 2,—[xi. 28,]—xxi. 10, 11. By such intimations, spoken perhaps by Silas, who was with him, and who was a $\pi \rho o$ φήτης [Acts xv. 32], may St. Paul have been first induced to take Timotheus to him as a companion, Acts xvi. 3. All other meanings, which it has been attempted to give to $\pi \rho o \phi \eta \tau \epsilon i as$, are unwarranted, and beside the purpose here : as e. g. There is nothing against it in what is there said of him [against De Wette]. He appears there to have been an adversary of the Apostle, who had withstood and injured him at his late visit to Ephesus : but there is no reason why he should not have been still under this sentence at that time) : whom I delivered over to Satan (there does not seem to he, as almost always taken for granted, any necessary assertion of excommunication properly so called. The delivering to Satan, as in 1 Cor. v. 5, scems to have been an apostolic act, for the purpose of active punishment, in order to correction. It might or might not be accompanied by extrusion from the church: it appears to have been thus accompanied in 1 Cor. v. 5 :- but the two must not be supposed identical. The upholders of such identity allege the fact of Satan's empire being conceived as including all outside the church [Acts xxvi. 18 al.]: but such expressions are too vague to be adduced as applying to a direct assertion like this. Satan, the adversary, is evidently regarded as the buffeter and tormentor, cf. 2 Cor. xii. 7—ever ready, unless his band were held, to distress and afflict God's people,and ready therefore, when thus let loose by one having power over him, to execute punishment with all his malignity.

Observe that the verb is not perfect but aorist. He did this when he was last at Ephesus. On the ecclesinstical questions here involved, Ellic. has, as usual, some very useful references) that they may be disciplined (the subj. after the aorist indicates that the effect of what was done still abides; the sentence was not yet taken off, nor the $\pi a(\delta ev \sigma s)$ at an end.

I exhort then ('ouv is without any logical connexion,' says De W. Certainly,-with what immediately precedes; but the account to be given of it is, that it takes up the general subject of the Epistle, q. d., 'what I have then to say to thee by way of command and regulation, is this :' see 2 Tim. ii. 1. It is, in order and importance, his first exhortation) to make (cf. rcf. Phil. It has been usual to take moleiofal passive : and most Commentators pass over the word without remark. In such a case, the appeal must be to our sense of the propriety of the middle or passive meaning, according to the arrangement of the words, and spirit of the sentence. And thus I think we shall decide for the middle. In the prominent position of moreiobar, if it were passive, and consequently objective in meaning, 'that prayer, &c. be made,' it can hardly be passed over without an emphasis, which here it manifestly cannot have. If on the other hand it is middle, it is subjective, belonging to the person or persons who are implied in παρακαλ $\hat{\omega}$: and thus serves only as a word of passage to the more important substantives which follow. And in this way the Greek fathers themselves took it: e.g. Chrys.-- $\pi \hat{\omega} s \ i \pi \hat{\epsilon} \rho \ \pi a \nu \tau \delta s \ \tau o \tilde{\nu} \kappa \delta \sigma \mu o \nu$, kal Basiléav, k.T.A. $\pi o noi o \dot{\mu} \epsilon \theta a \tau \hbar \nu \delta \hat{\epsilon} \eta \sigma v \nu$) supplications, prayers, intercessions (the two former words, Seifores and προsevxaí, are perhaps best distinguished as in Eph. vi. 18, by taking *πρos*evx*h* for prayer in general, δ \eta \eta \sigma sin for supplication or pelition, the special content of any particular prayer. έντεύξεις, judging from the cognate verbs έντυγχάνω, and ύπερεντυγχάνω (reff. Rom.), should be marked with a reference to 'request concerning others,' i. e. intercessory prayer. [Ellic. denies this primary reference, supporting his view by ch. iv. 5, where, he says, such a meaning would be inappropriate. But is not the meaning in that very place most appropriate? It is not there intercession for a person : but it is by Evreuges, prayer on its behalf and over it, that $\pi \hat{a} \nu \kappa \tau i \sigma \mu a$ is hallowed. The meaning in Polybius, coniously illustrated by Raphel, an interview or appointed meeting, compellatio aliqua de re, would in the N. T., where the word and its cognates are always used in reference to prayer, for persons or things, necessarily shade off into that of pleading or intercession. Very various and minute distinctions between the three have been imagined :-e. g. Theodoret :-δέησιs μέν έστιν ύπερ ἀπαλλαγῆς τινῶν λυπηρῶν ίκετεία προςφερομένη προςευχή δέ, αίτη-σις άγαθων έντευξις δέ, κατηγορία των αδικούντων :- Origen, περί ευχής, § 14 [not 44, as in Wetst. and Huther], vol. i. p. 220, - ήγοῦμαι τοίνυν, δέησιν μέν είναι την έλλείποντός τινι μεθ' ίκετείας περί τοῦ ἐκείνου τυχεῖν ἀναπεμπομένην εὐχήν την δέ προςευχήν, την μετά δοξολογίας περί μειζόνων μεγαλοφυέστερον ἀναπεμ-πομένην ὑπό του ἕντευξιν δέ, την ὑπὸ παβρησίαν τινὰ πλείονα έχοντος περί τινων ἀξίωσιν πρός θεόν κ.τ.λ. The most extraordinary of all is Aug.'s view, that the four words refer to the liturgical form of administration of the Holy Communion-δεήσειs being "precationes . . . quas facinus in celebratione sacramentorum antequam illud quod est in Domini mensa incipiat benedici :- orationes

Ep. exlix. [lix.] 16, vol. ii. p. 636 f.), thanksgivings, for all men (this gives the intercessory character to all that have preceded. On the wideness of Christian benevolence here inculcated, see the arguunent below, and Tit. iii. 2); for (i.e. 'especially for '-this one particular class being mentioned and no other) kings (see Tit. iii. 1; Rom. xiii. 1 ff.; 1 Pet. ii. 13. It was especially important that the Christians should include earthly powers in their formal public prayers, both on account of the object to be gained by such prayer [see next clause], and as an effectual answer to those adversaries who accused them of rebellious tendencies. Jos. [B. J. ii, 10. 4] gives the Jews' answer to Petronius, Ιουδαΐοι περί μέν Καίσαρος και τοῦ δήμου τῶν Ῥωμαίων δις τῆς ήμέρας θύειν ἔφασαν, and afterwards [ib. 17.2], he ascribes the origin of the war to their refusing, at the instigation of Eleazar, to continue the sacrifices offered on behalf of their Gentile rulers. See Wetst., who gives other examples: and compare the ancient liturgies-e. g. the bidding prayers, Bingham, book xv. 1. 2 : the consecration prayer, ib. 3. 1, and on the general practice, ib. 3. 14. 'Kings' must be taken generally, as it is indeed generalized in the following words : not understood to mean 'Cresar and his assessors in the supreme power,' as Baur, who deduces thence an argument that the Epistle was written under the Antonines, when such an association was usual) and all that are in eminence (not absolutely in authority, though the context, no less than common sense, shews that it would be so. Cf. Polyb. v. 41. 3, -τοιs έν ύπεροχαίς οδσι περί την αυλήν. He, as well as Josephus [c. g. Antt. vi. 4. 3], uses $b\pi\epsilon\rhoo\chi al$ absolutely for authorities: see Schweigh. Lex. Polyb. Huther rightly remarks, that Mosheim's view, "nisi pax in orbe terrarum vigeat, fieri nullo modo posse ut voluntati divinæ quæ omnium hominum salutem cupit, satisfiat," destroys the true context and train of thought: see more below. Wiesinger remarks σωθήναι, — not σωσαι, us in Tit. iii. 5, as adapted to the mediatorial effect of prayer, not direct divine agency: but we may go yet further, and say that by θέλει πάντας άνθρ. σωθήναι is expressed human acceptance of offered salvation, on which even God's predestination is contingent. $\theta \in \lambda \in \sigma \cup \sigma$ as could not have been said : if so, He would have saved all, in matter of fact. This realization of the truth is in fact identical with $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\rho la$, not only [Huther] as that $\sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho i a$ is a rescue from life in untruth, but in its deepest and widest sense of salvation, here and hereafter : ef. John xvii. 3, αύτη έστιν ή alώνιος ζωή, ίνα γινώσκωσίν σε τον μόνον άληθινόν θεόν and ib. 17, άγίασον αυτούς έν τη άληθεία).

5.7 For (further grounding of the acceptableness of prayer for all men,-in the UNITY of God. But this verse is joined by the $\gamma d\rho$ directly to the preceding, not to ver. 1. Chrys. gives it rightly-δεικνύς ότι σωθήναι θέλει πάντας) there is ONE God (He is ONE in essence and one in purpose-not of different minds to different nations or individuals, but of one mind towards all. Similarly Rom. iii. 30, and, which is important for the understanding of that difficult passage, Gal. iii. 20. The double reference, to the unity in essence and unity of purpose, for which I have contended there, is plain and unmistakeable here), ONE Mediator (sec reff. It occurs, besides the places in the Gal., only in the Epistle to the Heb., viii. 6; ix. 15; xii. 24. There is no necessity that the idea should, as De W. and Schleierm., be connected with that of a mutual covenant, and so be here far-fetched as regards the context [borrowed from the places in the Heb., according to De W.]: the word is used as standing alone, and representing the fact of Christ Jesus being the only go-between, in whatever sense) also (the els prefixed to the ral for emphasis) of (between) God and men (if one only goes between, then that One must be for all), (the) man Christ Jesus (why ἄνθρωπος? Thdrt. answers, άνθρωπον δε τον χριστον ωνόμασεν, έπειδη μεσίτην εκάλεσεν ενανθρωπήσας yap euertrevrev: and so most Commentators. But it is not here the Apostle's object, to set forth the nature of Christ's mediation as regards its being brought about ;- only as regards its unity and universality for mankind. And for this latter reason he calls him here by this name MAN,-that He gathered up all our human nature into Himself, becoming its second Head. So that the $\delta \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma s$ in fact carries with it the very strongest proof of that which he is maintaining. Notice it is not à avenues, though we are obliged inaccurately thus to express it : in personality, our Lord was not a man, but in nature He was man. It might be rendered, "Christ Jesus, Himself man."

I should object, as against Ellicott, to introduce at all the indefinite article : not individual but generic humanity is predicated : and "a man" unavoidably conveys the idea of human individuality. It is singularly unfortunate that Ellic. should have referred to Augustine, Serm. xxvi. as cited by Wordsw., in corroboration of the rendering "a man :" the Latin homo being of course as incapable of deciding this as the Greek άνθρωπος, and " a man" being only Dr. Wordsworth's translation of it. Nay, the whole tenor of the passage of Augustine (ed. Migne, vol. v. p. 174) precludes such a rendering. The stupidity of such writers as Baur and the Socinians, who regard such an expression as against the deity of Christ, is beyond all power of mine to characterize. In the face of els beds, els meritys beou καὶ ἀνθρώπων, to maintain gravely such a position, shews utter blindness from party bias even to the plainest thoughts expressed in the plainest words), who gave himself (reff., especially Tit.) a ransom (ἀντί-, as in ἀντιμισθία, Rom. i. 27; 2 Cor. vi. 13 : ἀντάλλαγμα, Matt. xvi. 26, expresses more distinctly the reciprocity which is already implied in the simple word in each case. That the main fact alluded to here is the death of Christ, we know: but it is not brought into prominence, heing included in, and superseded by the far greater and more comprehensive

This oneness of the Mediator, involving in itself the universality of Redemption, was the great subject of Christian testimony : see below) in its own seasons (reff.; in the times which God had appointed for it. On the temporal dative, see Ellicott's note), for (towards) which (the μαρτύριον) I was placed as a herald (pastoral Epistles and 2 Pet. only : but see 1 Cor. i. 21, 23 ; ix. 27 ; xv. 14) and apostle (the proclaiming this universality of the Gospel was the one object towards which my appointment as an apostle and preacher was directed. Those who hold the spuriousness of our Epistle regard this returning to himself and his own case on the part of the writer as an evidence of his being one who was acting the part of Paul. So Schleierm. and De W. They have so far truth on their side, that we must recognize here a characteristic increase of the frequency of these personal vindications on the part of the Apostle, as we so often have occasion to remark during these Epistles :- the disposition of one who had been long opposed and worried by adversaries to recur continually to his own claims, the assertion of which had now become with him almost, so to speak, a matter of stock-phrases. Still, the propriety of the assertion here is evident : it is only in the manner of it that the above habit is discernible. Sco more on this in the Prolegomena. The same phrase occurs verbatim in ref. 2 Tim.),-I speak the truth, I lie not-(in spite of all that Huther and Wiesinger say of the evident appropriateness of this solemn asseveration here, I own I am unable to regard it as any more than a strong and interesting proof of the growth of a habit in the Apostle's mind, which we already trace in 2 Cor. xi. 31, Rom. ix. 1, till he came to use the phrase with less force and relevance than he had once done. Nothing can be more natural than that one whose life was spent in strong conflict and assertion of his Apostleship, should repeat the fervour of his usual asseveration, even when the occasion of that fervour had passed away. Nor can I consent to abandon such a view because it is designated "questionable and precarious" by Ellie., who is too apt in cases of difficulty, to evade the real conflict of decision by strong terms of this kind)-a teacher of the Gentiles (it was especially in this latter fact that the $i\pi \epsilon \rho \pi d\nu \tau \omega \nu d\nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \omega \nu$ found its justification. The historical proof of his constitution as a teacher of the Gentiles is to be found in Acts ix. 15, xxii. 21, xxvi. 17; but especially in Gal. ii. 9) in (the) faith and (the) truth (do these words refer subjectively to his own conduct in teaching the Gentiles, or objectively to that in which he was to instruct them ? The former view is taken by Thdrt. and most Commentators : µerà της προςηκούσης πίστεως και άληθείας τοῦτο πῶσι προςφέρω: the latter by Heydenreich, al. Huther [also Ellic.] takes the words as signifying the sphere in which he was appointed to fulfil his office of $\delta_1\delta_1$. $\partial_1\psi_{\omega\nu}$, $-\pi(\sigma\tau)$ being faith, the subjective relation, and $d\lambda \hbar \bar{\theta} \epsilon_{ia}$ the truth, the objective good which is appropriated by faith : Wiesinger, as meaning that he is, in the right faith and in the truth, the διδ. έθν. Bengel regards them merely as another asseveration belonging to the assertion that he is $\delta_1\delta_2 \in \theta_{\nu_1, -}$ in faith and truth I say it.' This latter at once discommends itself, from its exceeding flatness : though Chrys. also seems to have held it $-\epsilon \nu \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon i \pi a \lambda i \nu$ a $\lambda \lambda a \mu \eta$ νομίσης ἐπειδή ἐν πίστει ήκουσας, ὅτι ἀπάτη τὸ πρῶγμά ἐστι. καὶ γὰρ ἐν ἀληθεία φησίν. εί δε άλήθεια, ούκ έστι ψεύδος. into account the usage of $d\lambda \eta \theta \epsilon_i a$ above, ver. 4, in a very similar reference, when it was to be matter of teaching to all men. There it undoubtedly is, though anarthrous, the truth of God. I would therefore take it similarly here, as Wiesinger, -the sphere in which both his teaching and their learning was to be employedthe truth of the Gospel. Then, if so, it is surely harsh to make $i\nu \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon i$ subjective, especially as the $\epsilon \nu$ is not repeated before $d\lambda\eta\theta\epsilon ia.$ It too will most properly be objective,—and likewise regard that in which, as an element or sphere, he was to teach and they to learn : the faith. This $\epsilon v \pi$. κ . $d\lambda$. will be, not the object of $\delta_i \delta d\sigma \kappa a \lambda$., but the sphere or element in which he is the διδάσκαλος). 8.] See summary at beginning of chapter. I will then ("in βούλομαι the active wish is implied: it is no mere willingness or acquiescence," Ellic. On the distinction between βούλομαι and θέλω, see Donaldson, Cratyl. § 463, p. 650 f. ed. 2: and Ellic. on ch. v. 14) that the men (the E. V. by omitting the article, has entirely obscured this passage for its English readers, not one in a hundred of whom ever dream of a distinction of the sexes being here intended. But again the position of rows avopas forbids us from supposing that such distinction was the Apostle's main object in this verse. Had it been so, we should have read rows av- $\delta \rho as \pi \rho os \epsilon \upsilon \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$. As it now stands, the stress is on προsεύχεσθαι, and τουs άνδραs is taken for granted. Thus the main subject of ver. 1 is carried on, the duty of PRAYER, in general-not [as Schleierm. objects] one portion merely of it, the allotting it to its proper offerers) pray in every place (these words iv marri rome regard the general duty of praying, not the particular detail implied in rows avδpas: still less are we to join τουs άνδρας [τουs] έν παντί τόπω. It is a local command respecting prayer, answering to the temporal command ἀδιαλείπτως προςεύχεσθε, 1 Thess. v. 17. It is far fetched and irrelevant to the context to find in the words, as Chr., Thdrt., al., Pel., Erasm., Calv., Beza, Grot., al., the Christian's freedom from prescription of place for prayer - πρός την νομικήν διαγόρευσιν τέθεικεν ου γάρ [vulgo ds γάρ] τοις Ίεροσολύμοις περιέγραψε την λατρείαν, Thdrt.: and Chrys., ὕπερ τοις Ἰουδαίοις θέμις οὐκ ἦν), lifting up holy hands (see LXX, ref. Ps. : also Ps. xxvii. 2, xliii. 20; Clem. Rom. Ep. 1 to Corinthians, ch. 29, p. 269 : προςέλθωμεν αύτῷ εν δσιότητι ψυχής, άγνὰς καὶ ἀμιάντους χεῖρας αἴροντες $\pi\rho\delta s$ autov. These two passages, as Huther observes, testify to the practice in the Christian church. The form orious with a feminine is unusual : but we must not, as Winer suggests [edn. 6, § 11. 1], join it to επαίροντας. His own in-stances, στρατιά οὐράνιος, Luke ii. 13, lois δμοιοs λίθφ, Rev. iv. 3, furnish soine precedent: and the fact that the ending -los is common to all three establishes an analogy. "Those hands are holy, which have not surrendered themselves as instruments of evil desire : the contrary are βέβηλοι χείρες, 2 Mace. v. 16 : compare, for the expression, Job xvii. 9, Ps. xxiii. 4, and in the N. T., especially James iv. 8, καθαρίσατε χειρας και άγνίσατε καρδίας." Huther. See classical passages in Wetst.) without (separate from, " putting away," as Conyb.) wrath and disputation (i. c. in tranquillity and mutual peace, so literally, sine disceptatione, as vulg., see note on ref. Phil. Ellic.'s objection, that we should thus import from the context a meaning unconfirmed by good lexical authority, is fully met by the unquestionable usage of the verb $\delta_{\alpha\lambda}$ or δ_{ω} in the N. T. for to dispute. At the same time, seeing that the matter treated of is prayer, where disputing hardly seems in place, perhaps doubling is the better sense; which, after all, is a disputation within one's self). 9.] So also (ὡsaύτως, by the parallel passage, Tit. ii. 3, seems to be little more than a copula, not necessarily to refer to the matter which has been last under treatment) I will that women (without the article, the reference to rows avopas above is not so pointed: i. e. we need not imagine that the reference is necessarily to the same matter of detail, but may regard the verse [see below] as being to the general duties and behaviour of women, as not belonging to the category of of προsευχόμενοι έν $\pi a\nu\tau l \tau \delta\pi\psi$) adorn themselves (there is no need, as Chrys. and most Commentators, to supply $\pi \rho ose \delta \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta a to complete$ the sense: indeed if I have apprehended the passage rightly, it would be altogether irrelevant. The ώσαύτωs serving merely as a copula [see above], the $\pi \rho os \epsilon \dot{v} \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta \alpha i$ helonging solely and emphatically to $\tau o \dot{v} s$ $\check{\alpha}\nu\delta\rho as$, — the question, 'what then are women to do?' is answered by insisting on modesty of appearance and the ornament of good works, as contrasted [ver. 12] with the man's part. The public assemblies are doubtless, in ver. 12, still before the Apostle's mind, but in a very slight degree. It is the general duties of women, rather than any single point in reference to their conduct in public worship, to which he is calling attention: though the subject of public worship led to his thus speaking, and has not altogether disappeared from his thoughts. According to this view, the construction proceeds direct with the infinitive $\kappa o \sigma \mu \epsilon i \nu$, without any supposition of an anacoluthon, as there must be on the other hypothesis) in orderly (ref.) apparel (ef. Tit. ii. 3, note: "in scemly guise," Ellic. Karaστολή, originally 'arrangement,' ' putting in order,' followed in its nsage that of its verb καταστέλλω. We have in Eur. Bacch. 891, αὐτὸν [τὸν πλόκαμον] πάλιν καταστελοῦμεν,—' we will re-arrange the dishevelled lock :' then Aristoph. Thesm. 256, ίθι νῦν κατάστειλόν με τὰ περί τώ σκέλη-clothe, dress me. Thus in Plut. Pericl. 5, we read of Anaxagoras, that his καταστολή περιβολήs, 'arrangement of dress,' was πρός οὐδὲν ἐκταραττομένη πάθος έν τῷ λέγειν. Then in Jos. B. J. ii. 8. 4, of the Essenes, that their karaστολή καί σχήμα σώματος was δμοιον τοις μετά φόβου παιδαγωγουμένοις παισίν, which he proceeds to explain by saying ούτε δε εσθητας, ούτε ύποδήματα αμείβουσι, πρίν ή διαβραγήναι, κ.τ.λ. So that we must take it as meaning 'the apparel,' the whole investiture of the person. This he proceeds presently to break up into detail, forbidding πλέγματα, χρυσόν, μαργαρίτας, ίματισμον πολυτελ $\hat{\eta}$, all which are parts of the καταστολή. This view of the meaning of the word requires έν καταστολή κοσμίω to belong to κοσμείν, and then to be taken up by the $\epsilon \nu$ following, an arrangement, as it seems to me, also required by the natural construction of the sentence itself) with shamefastness (not, as modern reprints of the E. V., 'shamefacedness,' which is a mere unmeaning corruption by the printers of a very expressive and beautiful word : see Trench, N. T. Synonyms, § xx.) and selfrestraint (I adopt Conybeare's word as, though not wholly satisfactory, bringing out the leading idea of σωφροσύνη better than any other. Its fault is, that it is a word too indicative of effort, as if the unchaste desires were continually breaking bounds, and as continually held in check : whereas in the $\sigma \dot{\omega} \phi \rho \omega \nu$, the safe-andsound-minded, no such continual struggle has place, but the better nature is established in its rule. Trench [ubi supra] has dealt with the two words, setting aside the insufficient distinction of Xenophon, Cyr. viii. 1. 31,-where he says of Cyrus, διήρει δε αίδω και σωφροσύνην τηδε, ώς τους μεν αίδουμένους τα έν τώ φανερώ αἰσχρὰ φεύγοντας, τοὺς δὲ σώφρονας καὶ τὰ ἐν τῷ ἀφανεῖ. The adjective $\theta \epsilon o \sigma \epsilon \beta h s$ is common enough), - by means of good works (not ev again, because the adornment lies in a different sphere and cannot be so expressed. The adorning which results from good works is brought about by [Sid] their practice, not displayed by appearing to be invested with them $[\epsilon \nu]$. Huther's construction, after Thdrt., Ec., Luth., Calv., and Mack and Matthies, — έπαγγελλ. θεοσέβειαν δι' έργων $d\gamma \alpha \theta \hat{\omega} \nu$,—is on all grounds objectionable : -1) the understanding δ as $\epsilon \nu \tau o \delta \tau \phi$ δ or $\kappa a \theta' \delta$, which of itself might pass, introduces great harshness into the sentence : —2) the junction of επαγγελλομέναιs δι' is worse than that of KOTHER SI', to which words is against it, which would thus rather be $\gamma \nu \nu \alpha_i \xi l \nu \delta_i' = \epsilon \delta \rho \omega \nu \delta \alpha \nu$ θεοσ εβειαν επαγγελλομέναιs:-4) he does not see that his objection, that the adornment of women has been already specified by $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \ \kappa \alpha \pi \alpha \sigma \tau o \lambda \eta \ \kappa. \tau. \lambda.$, and therefore need not be again specified by $\delta \iota^* \dot{\epsilon} \rho \gamma \omega \nu \dot{\alpha} \gamma$, applies just as much to his own rendering, taking δ for $\kappa \alpha \theta$ ' δ or $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \tau o \dot{\epsilon} \tau \phi$ $\ddot{\nu}$. 11.] Let a woman learn (in the congregation, and every where : see below) in silence in all (possible) subjection (the thought of the public assemblies has evidently given rise to this precept [see 1 Cor. xiv. 34]; but he carries it further than can be applied to them in the next verse): but (the contrast is to a suppressed hypothesis of a claim to do that which is forbidden : cf. a similar δέ, 1 Cor. xi. 16) to a woman I permit not to teach (in the church [primarily], or, as the context shews, any where else), nor to lord it over (αὐθέντης μηδέποτε χρήση ἐπὶ τοῦ δεσπότου, ώς οἱ περὶ τὰ δικαστήρια ῥήτορες, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτόχειρος φονέως, Phryn. But Euripides thus uses it, Suppl. 442: καὶ μὴν ὅπου γε δῆμος αὐθέντης χθονός, ὑποῦσιν ἀστοῖς ήδεται νεανίαις. The fact is that the word itself is originally a 'vox media,' signifying merely 'one who with his own hand ' and the context fills up the rest, $a\dot{v}\theta\dot{\epsilon}\nu\tau\eta s \phi \delta\nu\sigma v$, or the like. And in course of time, the meaning of 'autocrat' prevailing, the word itself and its derivatives henceforth took this course, and αὐθεντέω, -ία, -ημα, all of later growth, bore this reference only. Later still we have addevtikos, from first authority ['id enim avertikas, nuntiabatur,' Cic. ad Att. x. 9]. It seems quite a mistake to suppose that $a \vartheta \theta \epsilon \nu \tau \eta s$ arrived at its meaning of a despot by passing through that of a murderer) the man, but (supply [" βούλομαι, not κελεύω, which St. Paul does not use." with Eve) made (see ref. Gen., from which the word $i \pi \lambda \dot{a} \sigma \theta \eta$ seems to be taken : cf. 1 Cor. xi. 8, 9, and indeed that whole passage, which throws light on this), then 14.] Second reason-as the Eve. woman was last in being, so she was first in sin-indeed the only victim of the Tempter's deceit. And Adam was not deceived (not to be weakened, as Thdrt. : τὸ οὐκ ἡπατήθη, ἀντὶ τοῦ, οὐ πρῶτος, είρηκεν : nor, as Matthies, must we supply ύπο του όφεως: nor, with De W., Wiesinger, al., must we press the fact that the woman only was misled by the senses. Bengel and Huther seem to me [but cf. Ellicott] to have apprehended the right reference : ' serpens' mulierem decepit, mulier virum non decepit, sed ci persuasit.' As Huther observes, the $\eta \pi \dot{a} \tau \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$, in the original narrative, is used of the woman only. We read of no communication between the scrpent and the man. The "subtlest beast of all the field" knew his course better: she listened to the lower solicitation of sense and expediency: he to the higher one of conjugal love) : but the woman (not now Eve, but generic, as the next clause shews: for Eve could not be the subject to $\sigma \omega \theta \dot{\eta} \sigma \epsilon \tau \alpha \iota$) having been seduced by DECEIT (stronger than $\dot{a}\pi a \tau \eta$ - $\theta \epsilon i \sigma a$, as exoro than oro : implying the full success of the $d\pi d\tau \eta$) has become involved (the thought is - the present state of transgression in which the woman and the man too : but that is not treated here] by sin is constituted, arose [which was not so in the man] from her originally having been seduced by deceit) in transgression (here as always, breach of a positive command : cf. Rom. iv. 15).

15.] But (contrast to this her great and original defect) she (general) shall be saved through (brought safely through, but in the higher, which is with St. Paul the only sense of $\sigma\omega(\omega)$ see below) her child-bearing (in order to understand the fulness of the meaning of $\sigma\omega\theta\eta\sigma\sigma\tau\alpha$ here, we must bear in mind the history itself, to which is the constant allusion. The curse on the woman for her $\pi a \rho \dot{a} \beta a \sigma is$ was, $\dot{\epsilon} \nu$ λύπαις τέξη τέκνα [Gen. iii. 16]. Her τεκνογονία is that in which the curse finds its operation. What then is here promised her? Not only exemption from that curse in its worst and heaviest effects : not merely that she shall safely bear children : but the Apostle uses the word ouθήσεται purposely for its higher meaning, and the construction of the sentence is precisely as ref. 1 Cor.—aυτόs δε σωθήσεται, ούτως δε ώς δια πυρός. Just as that man should be saved through, as passing through, fire which is his trial, his hindrance in his way, in spite of which he escapes,-so she shall be saved, through, as passing through, her child-bearing, which is her trial, her curse, her [not means of salvation, but] hindrance in the way of it. The other renderings which have been given seem to me both irrelevant and ungrammatical. Chrys., Thl., al., for instance, would press TEKNOYOVIa to mean the Christian education of children : Heinrichs, strangely enough, holds that her $\tau \epsilon \kappa \nu o \gamma$. is the punishment of her sin, and that being undergone, she shall be saved Sia This T., i.e. by having paid it. Conyb. gives it 'women will be saved by the bearing of children,' i. e., as he ex-plains it in his note, "are to be kept in the path of safety (?) by the performance of the peculiar functions which God has assigned to their sex." Some, in their anxiety to give dia the instrumental meaning, would understand δια της τεκνογ. ' by means of the Child bearing,' i.e. ' the Incarnation :' a rendering which needs no refutation. I see that Ellicott maintains this latter interpretation : still I find no reason to qualify what I have above written. 1 Cor. iii. 15 seems to me so complete a key of Pauline usage of $\sigma \omega \langle \epsilon \sigma \theta \alpha i \delta i d$, that I cannot abandon the path opened by it, till far stronger reason has been shewn than he here alleges. In his second edition he has not in any way strengthened his argument, nor has he taken any notice of the Pauline usage which I allege. After all, it is mainly a question of exceptical tact: and I own I am surprised that any scholar can believe it possible that St. Paul can have expressed the Incarnation by the bare word $\dot{\eta} \tau \epsilon \kappa \nu o$ yovía. He himself in this same Epistle, v. 14, uses the eognate verb, of the ordinary bearing of children : and these are the only places where the compound occurs in the N. The identity of the $\epsilon \pi l \sigma \kappa o$ -17, 28. mos and $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \dot{\upsilon} \tau \epsilon \rho os$ in apostolic times is evident from Tit. i. 5-7: see also note on Phil. i. 1, the article Bifchof in Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, and Ellic.'s note here), he desires a good work (not 'a good VOL. thing:' but a good employment: see 1 Thess. v. 13: 2 Tim. iv. 5: one of the καλà έργα so often spoken of [reff.]). It behoves then (ovv is best regarded as taking up Kaldv Epyov, and substantiating that assertion : "bonum negotium bonis committendum," Bengel) an (τόν generic, singular of τούς επισκόπους) overseer to be blameless (Thucyd. v. 17, Πλειστοάναξ δέ νομίζων . . . κάν αὐτὸς τοῖς έχθροις ανεπίληπτος είναι , where the Schol. has, µh av avtos παρέξων κατηγορίας ἀφορμήν. Thdrt. draws an important distinction : μηδεμίαν πρόφασιν μέμψεως παρέχειν δικαίαν το γαρ ανεπίληπτον, οὐ τὸ ἀσυκοφάντητον λέγει ἐπεὶ καί αὐτὸς ἀπόστολος παντοδαπὰς συκοφαντίας ὑπέμεινεν), husband of one wife (two great varieties of interpretation of these words have prevailed, among those who agree to take them as restrictive, not injunctive, which the spirit of the pas-sage and the insertion of $\mu i \hat{a} s$ surely alike forbid. They have been supposed to prohibit either 1) simultaneous polygamy, or 2) successive polygamy. 1) has somewhat to be said for it. The custom of polygamy was then prevalent among the Jews [see Just. Mart. Tryph. 134, p. 226, -διδασκάλοις ύμων οίτινες και μέχρι νυν καί τέσσαρας κ. πέντε έχειν ύμας γυναϊκας έκαστον συγχωροῦσι : and Jos. And such, it is argued, was the Apostle's reference, not to second marriages, which he himself commands ch. v. 14, and allows in several other places, e.g. Rom. vii. 2, 3 : 1 Cor. vii. 39. But the objection to taking this meaning is, that the Apostle would hardly have specified that as a requisite for the episcopate or presbyterate, which we know to have been fulfilled by all Christians whatever : no instance being adduced of polygamy being practised in the Chris-tian church, and no exhortations to abstain from it. As to St. Paul's command and permissions, see below. Still, we must not lose sight of the circumstance that the carlier Commentators were unanimous for v this view. Chrys. is the only one who proposes an alternative: $-\tau \dot{\eta} \nu \dot{a} \mu \epsilon \tau \rho (a \nu$ κωλύει, έπειδή έπι των Ιουδαίων έξην καί δευτέροις δμιλεῖν γάμοις, κ. δύο ἔχειν κατὰ ταὐτόν γυναϊκας. Thdrt.: τὸ δὲ μιῶς γυ-ναικός ἀνδρα, εὐ μοι δοκοῦσιν εἰρηκέναι τινές. πάλαι γαρ εἰώθεισαν και Έλληνες κ. 'Ιουδαίοι κ. δύο κ. τρισί κ. πλείοσι γυναιξι νόμω γάμου κατά ταύτον συνοικείν. τινές δε καί νῦν, καίτοι των βασιλικών νόμων δύο κατά ταὐτὸν ἄγεσθαι κωλυόντων γυναϊκας, καί παλλακίσι μίγνυνται κ. έταίραις. έφασαν τοίνυν τον θείον απόστολον εἰρηκέναι, τὸν μιῷ μόνη γυναικὶ συνοικοῦντα σωφρόνως, τῆς ἐπισκοπικῆς ἄξιον εἶναι χειροτονίας. οὐ γὰρ τὸν δεύτερον, φασίν, εξέβαλε γάμον, ό γε πολλά-κις τοῦτο γενέσθαι κελεύσας. And similarly Thl., Ec., and Jer. 2) For the view that second marriages are prohibited to aspirants after the episcopate,-is, the most probable meaning [see there] of évds άνδρός γυνή in ch. v. 9, — as also the wide prevalence in the early Church of the idea that, although second marriages were not forbidden to Christians, abstinence from them was better than indulgence in them. So Hermas Pastor, ii. 4. 4, p. 921 f., 'Domine, si vir vel mulier alicujus discesserit, et nupserit aliquis corum, numquid peccat?' 'Qui nubit, non peccat: sed si per se manscrit, magnum sibi conquirit honorem apud Dominum :' and Člem. Alex. And so in Suicer, i. p. 892 f., Chrys., Greg. Naz. [7d πρώτον (συνοικέσιον) νόμος, τὸ δεύτερον συγχώρησις, τό τρίτον παρανομία. τό δέ ύπέρ τουτο, χοιρώδης. Huther cites from Athenagoras the expression $\epsilon \vartheta \pi \rho \epsilon \pi \eta s \mu \rho \iota \chi \epsilon la applied to$ second marriage. With regard to the Apostle's own command and permissions of this state [see above], they do not come into account here, because they are confessedly (and expressly so in ch. v. 14) for those whom it was not contemplated to admit into ecclesiastical office. 3) There have been some divergent lines of interpretation, but they have not found many advocates. Some [e.g. Wegscheider] deny altogether the formal reference to 1) or 2), and understand the expression only of a chaste life of fidelity to the marriage vow: "that neither polygamy," nor concubinage, nor any offensive deuterogamy, should be able to be alleged against such a person." But surely this is very vague, for the precise words μιῶs γυναικόs ἀνήρ. Bretschmeider maintains that mas is here the indefinite article, and that the Apostle means, an $\epsilon \pi (\sigma \kappa \sigma \pi \sigma s)$ should be the husband of a wife. This Winer hardly needs serious refutation. Winer however has treated it, edn. 6, § 18. 9 note, shewing that by no possibility can the indefinite els stand where it would as here cause ambiguity, only where unity is taken for granted. Worse still is the Romanist evasion, which understands the μία γυνή of the Church. The view then which must I think be adopted, especially in presence of ch. v. 9 [where see note] is, that to candidates for the cpiscopate [presbytery] St. Paul forbids second marriage. He requires of them pre-eminent chastity, and abstinence from a licence which is allowed to other Christians. How far such a prohibition is to be considered binding on us, now that the Christian life has entered into another and totally different phase, is of course an open question for the present Christian church at any time to deal with. It must be as matter of course understood that regulations, in all lawful things, depend, even when made by an Apostle, on circumstances: and the superstitious observance of the letter in such cases is often pregnant with mischief to the people and cause of Christ), sober (probably in the more extended sense of the word [' vigilantem animo,' Beng : διεγηγερμένον, και προσκοπείν τό πρακτέον δυνάμενον, Thdrt. τουτέστι

This duty in the early days of the Christian church was one of great importance. Brethren in their travels could not resort to the houses of the heathen, and would be subject to insult in the public deversoria), apt in teaching (τὰ θεῖα πεπαιδευμένον, καὶ παραινεῖν δυνάμενον τὰ προςήκοντα, Thdrt. : so we have tobs intikous Boulo. μένους γενέσθαι, Xen. Sympos. vi. 1. And perhaps the literal meaning should not be lost sight of. At the same time the word and its cognates were often used without reference to wine : see $\pi a \rho \circ \nu \epsilon \omega$, ϵa , ϵa , ϵa , in Palm and Rost's Lex. As $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \pi \tau \eta s$ answers to $\pi \dot{a} \rho \omega \nu \sigma s$, it will be best to extend the meaning to signify rather the character, than the mere fact, of $\pi a \rho \circ \nu \epsilon a$), not a striker (this word also may have a literal and narrower, or a metaphorical and wider sense. In this latter it is taken by Thdt.: $o \dot{\nu} \tau \delta \dot{\epsilon} \pi \tau \tau \mu \ddot{\mu} \nu$ $\epsilon is kaip br koh \dot{\nu} \epsilon \dot{\lambda} \lambda \dot{\lambda} \tau \delta \mu \dot{\eta} \delta \epsilon \delta \sigma \tau \omega$

But perhaps the coarser literal sense is better, as setting forth more broadly the opposite to the character of a Christian enioxonos), but (this contrast springs out of the two last, and is set off by them) forbearing (reasonable and gentle :φέρειν είδότα τὰ πρός αὐτὸν πλημμελήµara, Thdrt. See note on Phil. iv. 5, and Trench, N. T. Syn. § xliii. ; but correct his derivation, as in that note), not quarrelsome (cf. 2 Tim. ii. 24. Conyb.'s 'peaceable' is objectionable, as losing the negative character), not a lover of money (' liberal,' Conyb.: but this is still more objectionable: it is not the positive virtue of liberality but the negative one of ab-stinence from love of money, which, though it may lead to the other in men who have money, is yet a totally distinct thing. Thdrt.'s explanation, while true, is yet characteristic of an επίσκοπος of later days: οὐκ εἶπεν ἀκτήμονα σύμμε-τρα γὰρ νομοθετεῖ ἀλλὰ μὴ ἐρῶντα χρημάτων. δυνατόν γὰρ κεκτῆσθαι μέν, οίκονομείν δε ταύτα δεόντως, και μή δουλεύειν τούτοις, άλλα τούτων δεσπόζειν):

The emphatic position of $\tau \epsilon \kappa \nu a$, besides its anarthrousness, should have prevented this mistake: cf. also Tit. i. 6,—µiâs yvvaikos ανήρ, τέχνα έχων πιστά, κ.τ.λ.) in subjection (i. e. who are in subjection) with all gravity ('reverent modesty,' see ch. ii. 2. These words are best applied to the children, not to the head of the house, which acceptance of them rather belongs to the rendering impugned above. It is the ocuvorns of the children, the result of his $\pi \rho o \sigma \tau \hat{\eta} \nu a i$, which is to prove that he knows how to preside over his own house,-not his own $\sigma \epsilon \mu \nu \delta \tau \eta s$ in governing them : the matter of fact, that he has children who are in subjection to him in all gravity,-not Y 2

So Chr. [veokath Xntos], Thl. [νεοβάπτιστος.] An objection has been raised to this precept by Schleierm., that it could hardly find place in the apostolic church, where all were veóquroi. Matthics answers, that in Crete this might be so, and therefore such a precept would be out of place in the Epistle to Titus, but the Ephesian church had been many years established. But De W. rejoins to this, that the precepts are perfeetly general, not of particular applica-tion. The real reply is to be found, partly by narrowing the range of vedqutor, partly in assigning a later date to these Epistles than is commonly held. The case here contemplated is that of one very recently converted. To ordain such a person to the ministry would, for the reason here assigned, be most unadvisable. But we cannot imagine that such period need be extended at the most to more than three or four years, in cases of men of full age who became Christians; and surely such a condition might be fulfilled in any of the Pauline churches, supposing this Epistle to bear any thing like the date which I have assigned to it in the Prolegg. ch. vii. § ii.), lest being besotted with pride (from vuoos, smoke, steam, and hence inctaphorically, the pother which a man's pride raises about him so that he cannot see himself or others as they are. He adds, "sed verior Chrysostomi opinio", Beza It is hardly worth [altern.], Huther. while recounting under this head, the views of those who take τοῦ διαβόλου for a slanderer, inasmuch as o diábolos never occurs in this sense in the N. T. [on διάβυλοs, adjective, in this sense, see below, ver. 11]. This is done in both verses 6 and 7, by Luther [Eafterer], Rosenm., Michaelis, Wegseh., Flatt : in verse 6 and not in verse 7, by Erasm., In deciding between the Mosheim, al. above, one question must first be answered : are we obliged to preserve the same character of the genitive in verses 6 and 7? because, if so, we must manifestly take [2]: for [$\delta \nu \epsilon \epsilon \delta \sigma \mu \delta \nu \kappa$.] $\pi a \gamma \delta \delta a \tau \delta \tilde{\nu}$ $\delta \iota a \beta \delta \lambda \omega$ [see below] cannot bear any other meaning than 'the [reproach and] snare which the devil lays.' This question must be answered, not by any mere consideration of uniformity, but by careful enquiry into the import of the substantive κρίμα. I conceive we cannot understand it here otherwise than as a condemnatory sentence. The word is a vox media; our εύκριτον τὸ κρίμα, Æsch. Suppl. 392 : but the dread here expressed of falling into it necessarily confines it to its adverse sense. This being so, Bengel's remark is noticeable :- " diabolus potest opprobrium inferre, judicium non potest : non enim ju-dieat, sed judicatur." To this Huther answers, that we must not consider the κρίμα of the devil as necessarily parallel with God's κρίμα, any more than with man's on his neighbour. "To understand," he continues, "the κρίμα τοῦ διαβόλου, we must compare Eph. ii. 2, where the devil is called $\tau \delta \pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu \alpha \tau \delta \nu \tilde{\nu} \nu$ ένεργούν έν τοις υίοις της απειθείας: 50 that whatever the world does to the reproach [jur Schmach] of Christ's Church, is the doing of the spirit that works in the world, viz. of the devil." But surely this reply is quite inadequate to justify the use of the decisive κρίμα ; and Huther him-self has, by suggesting 'reproach,' evaded the real question, and taken refuge in the unquestioned meaning of the next verse. He goes on to say, that only by understanding this of a deed of the Prince of the antichristian world, can we clearly establish a connexion with the following verse, pointed out as it is by $\delta \epsilon$. But this is still more objectionable : $\delta \hat{\epsilon} \kappa \alpha \hat{i}$ disjoins the two particulars, and introduces the latter as a separate and additional matter. From the use of the decisive word kpiµa, I infer that it cannot be an act of the adversary which is here spoken of, but an act in which δ άρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κέκρι-Tai. Then as to uniformity with ver. 7, I should not be disposed to make much account of it. For one who so loved similarity of external phrase, even where different meanings were to be conveyed, as St. Paul, to use the genitives in kpiµa τοῦ διαβόλου and παγίς τοῦ διαβόλου in these different meanings, is surely nothing which need cause surprise. τοῦ διαβόλου is common to both : the devil's condemnation, and the devil's snare, are both alike alien from the Christian, in whom, as in his divine Master, the adversary should find nothing, and with whom he should have nothing in common. The κρίμα τοῦ διαβόλου is in fact but the consummation of that state into which the $\pi a \gamma ls \tau o \hat{v}$ διαβόλου is the introduction. I therefore unhesitatingly adopt [1]-the condemnation into which Satan fell through the same blinding effect of pride). 7.] Moreover (Sé, bringing in the con-trast of addition; 'more than this,'.... kal, the addition itself of a new particular) he must have a good testimony (refl.) from those without (lit. 'those from without :' the unusual -dev [reff.] being added as harmonizing with the $\dot{a}\pi \dot{o}$, the testimony coming 'from without'), lest he fall into (a question arises which must be answered before we can render the following words. Does $\delta \nu \epsilon i \delta i \sigma \mu \delta \nu$ [1] stand alone, into reproach, and the snare of the devil, or is it [2] to be joined with $\pi \alpha \gamma i \delta \alpha$ as belonging to $\delta \sigma \alpha \beta \gamma \delta \alpha$. διαβόλου? For [1], which is the view of Thl., Est., Wolf, Heyden., Huther, Wiesinger, al. [and Ellic. doubtfully], it is alleged, that $\delta \nu \epsilon i \delta i \sigma \mu \delta \nu$ is separated from $\kappa a l$ $\pi a \gamma i \delta a$ by $\epsilon \mu \pi \epsilon \sigma \eta$. But this alone cannot decide the matter. The Apostle β Rom. xvi. 1. 8 g Διακόνους ^h ώς αύτως ⁱ σεμνούς, μη ^j διλύγους, μη ADFII bril. ii.0 reff. i Pini. i.v. 8 νer. 11. may have intended to write merely els όνειδισμόν έμπέση τοῦ διαβόλου. Then in adding kai παγίδα, we may well conceive that he would keep eis $\partial \nu$. $\epsilon \mu \pi$. for uniformity with the preceding verse, and also not to throw κ . $\pi a \gamma i \delta a$ into an unnatural prominence, as would be done by placing it before $\epsilon \mu \pi \epsilon \sigma \eta$. We must then decide on other grounds. Wiesinger, seeing that the dveidiouds του διαβόλου, if these are to be taken together, must come immediately from of $\xi \in \theta \in \nu$, objects, that he doubts whether any where the devil is said facere per se that which he facit per alterum. But surcly 1 John iii. 8 is a case in point: δ ποιών την άμαρτίαν έκ τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστίν, ὅτι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ὁ διάβολος αμαρτάνει. είς τοῦτο ἐφανερώθη ὁ vids τοῦ θεοῦ, ἵνα λύση τὰ ἔργα τοῦ διαβόλου, -and indeed Eph. ii. 2, τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ νῦν ἐνεργοῦν ἐν τοῖς υἰοῖς τῆς ἀπειθείας. Huther supports this view by ch. v. 14: but I am unable to see how that verse touches the question: for whether the or to του διαβ. or not, it clearly must come in either case from of έξωθεν. One consideration in favour of this view has not been alleged :—that $\dot{\eta}$ παγls τοῦ διαβόλου seems, from 2 Tim. ii. 26, to be a familiar phrase with the Apostle, and therefore less likely to be joined with another governing substantive.

For [2], we have Thdrt. $[\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \epsilon \xi \omega \theta \epsilon \nu$ τῶν ἀπίστων λέγει. ὁ γὰρ καὶ παρ' ἐκείνοις πλείστην έχων πρό της χειροτονίας διαβολήν, επονείδιστος έσται, καλ πολλοίς όνείδεσι περιβαλεί τό κοινόν, και είς την προτέραν ύτι τάχιστα παλινδρομήσει παρανομίαν, τοῦ διαβόλου πάντα πρός τοῦτο $\mu\eta\chi a\nu\omega\mu\epsilon\nuo\nu$], al., - Bengel ["diabolus potest antistiti malis testimoniis laboranti plurimum excitare molestiæ, per se et ,per homines calumniatores"], De W., al. The chief grounds for this view are, [a] grammatical—that the ϵis is not repeated before $\pi a \gamma i \delta a$. I am not sure, whether we are right in applying such strict rules to these Pastoral Epistles : but the consideration cannot but have some weight. [b] contextual-that the Apostle would hardly have alleged the mere $\epsilon \mu \pi \epsilon$ σείν els dreidiopór as a matter of sufficient importance to be parallel with $\ell\mu\pi$. ϵis $\pi\alpha\gamma i\delta a \tau o \hat{v} \delta i a \beta \delta \lambda o v$. This latter, I own, inclines me to adopt [2], but I would not by any means speak strongly in repudiation of the other) the reproach and the snare of the devil (reff. This latter is usually taken as meaning, the danger of relapse [cf. Thdrt. cited above] : so Calv. : "ne infamiæ expositus, perfrictæ frontis esse incipiat, tantoque majore licentia se prostituat ad omnem nequitiam : quod est diaboli plagis se irretire. Quid enim spei restat ubi nullus est peccati pudor?" Grot. gives it a different turn : 'ne contumeliis notatus quærat se uleisci.' These, and many other references, may well be contained in the expression, and we need not, I think, be at the pains precisely to specify any one direction which the evil would take. Such an one's steps would be shackled-his freedom hampered-his temper irritated-his character lost-and the natural result would be a fall from his place, to the detriment not of himself only, but of the Church of Christ).

8–13.] Precepts regarding deacons and deaconesses (see below on ver. 11).

8. The construction continues from the preceding-the Sei elvas being in the Apostle's mind as governing the accusa-tives. In like manner (the wsavrws seems introduced by the similarity of character,—not merely to mark an additional particular) the deacons (mentioned as a class, besides here, only Phil. i. 1, where, as here, they follow the enionon. Phase, Rom. xvi. 1, is a διάκονος of the church at Cenchrea. The term or its cognates occur in a vaguer sense, but still indicating a special office, in Rom. xii. 7: 1 Pet. iv. 11. The connexion of the ecclesiastical deacons with the seven appointed in Acts vi. is very doubtful: see Chrysostom's and Ec.'s testimony, distinguishing them, in note there. But that the ecclesiastical order sprung out of similar necessities, and had for its field of work similar objects, can hardly be doubted. See Suicer, διάκονος: Winer, RWB.: Neander, Pfl. u. greedy of gain (hardly, as E. V., to be doubly rendered, - 'greedy of filthy lucre,' -so also Thdrt., δ έκ πραγμάτων αἰσχρῶν κ. λίαν ατόπων κέρδη συλλέγειν ανεχόμεvos. It would appear from 'Iit. i. 11, διδάσκοντες & μη δεί αισχρού κερδους χάριν, that all κέρδοs is alσχρόν which is set before a man as a by-end in his work for God : so likewise in 1 Pet. v. 2, $-\epsilon \pi i \sigma \kappa o$. ποῦντες μή μηδέ αἰσχροκερδώς 'nor with a view to gain,' such gain being necessarily base when thus sought. This particular of the deacons' character assumes special importance, if we connect it with the collecting and distributing alms. Cyprian, Ep. 54 [12 ad Corn. Pap. § 1, Migne, Patr. Gr. vol. iii. p. 797], stigmatizes the deacon Felicissimus as 'pecuniæ commissæ sibi fraudator'), holding the mystery of the (or their) faith (that great objective truth which man of himself knows not, but which the Spirit of God reveals to the faithful : ef. Rom. xvi. 25 f. : 1 Cor. ii. 7-10: and even Him who in fact is that mystery, the great object of all faith : see note on ver. 16, το της ευσεβείας μυστήpiov. That expression makes it probable that $\tau \eta s \pi l \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$ is here to be taken subjectively : the, or their, faith : the apprehension which appropriates to them the contents of God's revelation of Christ. That revelation of the Person of Christ, their faith's μυστήριον, they are to hold. See Ellic.'s note) in pure conscience (see refl. and ch. i. 19. From those passages it appears, that we must not give the words a special application to their official life as deacons, but understand them of carnestness and singleness of Christian character : -being in heart persuaded of the truth of that divine mystery which they profess to have apprehended by faith). 10. T And moreover (the $\delta \epsilon$ introduces a caution -the slight contrast of a necessary addition to their mere present character. On this force of κal . . . $\delta \epsilon$, see Hartung, i. 182 : Ellie., here. There is no connexion in $\kappa al \ldots \delta \epsilon$ with the former requirements regarding ¿πίσκοποι) let these (who answer, in their candidateship for the diaconate, to the above character) be put to the proof first (viz. with regard to their blamelessness of life, cf. avéyna. övtes below: e. g. by testimonials, and publication of their intention to offer themselves: but no formal way is specified, only the reality insisted on), then let them act as deacons (or, minister : but more probably here in the narrower technical sense, as in reff.(?) Not 'be made deacons,' as Conyb. : the word is of their act in the office, not of their reception of it, which is of course understood in the background), if they are (found by the δοκιμή to be) irreproachable. 11.] (The) women in like manner (who are these? Are they (1) women who were to serve as deacons,-dcaconesses?-or (2) wives of the deacons ?-or (3) wives of the deacons and overseers ?- or (4) women in general? I conceive we may dismiss (4) at once, for Chrys.'s reason : TI yap ¿Bouλετο μεταξύ των είρημένων παρεμβαλειν τι περί γυναικών; -(3) upheld by Calv., Est., Calov., and Mack, may for the same reason, seeing that he returns to diákovoi again in ver. 12, be characterized as extremely improbable,-(2) has found many supporters among modern Commentators : Luth., Beza, Beng. [who strangely adds,] 'pendet ab habentes ver. 9'], Rosenm., Heinr., Huther, Conyb., al., and E. V. But it has against it (a) the omission of all expressed reference to the deacons, such as might be given by $a\dot{v}\tau\hat{\omega}v$, or by $\tau \dot{a}s$: (b) the expression of $\dot{\omega}sa\dot{\upsilon}\tau \omega s$, by which the diakovoi themselves were introduced, and which seems to mark a new ccclesiastical class: (c) the introduction of the injunction respecting the deacons, έστωσαν μιας γυναικός ανδρες, as a new particular, which would hardly be if their wives had been mentioned before : (d) the circumstance, connected with the mention of Pheebe as diánovos of the church at Cenchrea in Rom. xvi. 1, that unless these are deaconesses, there would be among these injunctions no mention of an important class of persons employed as officers of the church. We come thus to consider (1), that these yuvaines are dea-conesses, ministræ, as Pliny calls them in his letter to Trajan [see note on Rom. xvi. 1]. In this view the ancients are, as far as I know, unanimous. Of the moderns, it is held by Grot., Mosh., Mich., De W., Wiesinger, Ellicott. It is alleged against it—(a) that thus the return to the διάκονοι, verse 12, would be harsh, or, as Conyb. "on that view, the verse is most unnaturally interpolated in the midst of the discussion concerning the deacons." But the ready answer to this is found in Chrys.'s view of verse 12, that under δ_{ia} . Kovol, and their household duties, he comprehends in fact hoth sexes under one: ταῦτα καὶ περὶ γυναικῶν διακόνων ἁρμότ- $\tau \epsilon_i \epsilon_i \rho \hat{\eta} \sigma \theta a_i$: (b) that the existence of deaconesses as an order in the ministry is after all not so clear. To this it might be answered, that even were they nowhere else mentioned, the present passage stands on its own grounds; and if it seemed from the context that such persons were indicated here, we should reason from this to the fact of their existence, not from the absence of other mention to their non-indication here. I decide then for (1): that these women are deaconesses) (must be) grave, not slan. derers (corresponds to µh διλόγουs in the males, being the vice to which the female sex is more addicted. Cf. Eurip. Phoen. 298 ff., φιλόψογον δε χρημα θηλειών έφυ, | σμικράς τ' άφορμας ην λάβωσι των λόγων, πλείους επειςφέρουσιν ήδονη δέ τις | γυναιξί, μηδέν ύγιες άλλήλαις λέγειν.

διάβολος in this sense [reff.] is peculiar in N. T. to these Epistles), sober (see on ver. 2, corresponding to μη σίνφ πολλφ προsέχοντας), faithful in all things (corresponds to μη αίσχροκερδείς: trusty in the distribution of the alms committed to them, and in all other ministrations).

12.] General directions respecting those in the diaconate (of both sexes, the female being included in the male, see Chrys. eited above), with regard to their domestic condition and duties, as above (verses 4, 5) respecting the episcopate. Let the deacons be husbands of one wife (see on this above, ver. 2), ruling well over children (the emphatic position of the anarthrous $\tau\epsilon\kappa\nu a$, as above ver. 4, makes it probable that the having children to rule is to be considered as a qualification : see Tit. i. 6, note. Chrys. gives a curious and characteristic reason for the precept: πανταχοῦ τίθησι τὴν των τέκνων προστασίαν, Ίνα μη άπο τού-του οι λοιποί σκανδαλίζωνται) and their 13.] The importance own houses. of true and faithful service in the diaconate. For those who served well the office of deacon (the aor. participle, not the perf., because the standing-point of the sentence is at first the great day, when their $\delta_{iakovia}$ has passed by. In fact this aor. participle decides between the interpretations : see below) are acquiring (the Apostle having begun by placing himself at the great day of retribution, and cousequently used the aor. participle, now shifts, so to speak, the scene, and deals with their present conduct : q. d., 'Those who shall then be found to have served well, &c. are now, &c.' On περιποιέω and περιποίησις, see notes, Eph. i. 14: 1 Thess. v. 9) for themselves (emphatic-besides the service they are rendering to the church) a good standing-place (viz. at the great day : cf. ch. vi. 19, αποθησαυρίζοντας έαυτοις θεμέλιον καλόν είς το μέλλον, ίνα ἐπιλάβωνται τῆς ὄντως ζωῆς:—and Dan. xii. 3 [Heb. and E. V.], where however the metaphor is different. The interpretations of $\beta a \theta \mu \delta v$, a step, or place to stand on [in LXX, the threshold, or step, before a door: see reff.], have been very various. (1) Ambr., Jer., Pel., Thl., Erasm., Bull, Beza, Corn.-a-Lap., Est., Grot., Lightf., Beng., Wolf, Mosh., Schöttg., Wordsw., al., understand it of a degree of ecclesiastical preferment, scil. from the office of deacon to that of presbyter, and take $\kappa a \lambda \delta \nu$ for a comparative. Against this is (a) the forcing of $\kappa \alpha \lambda \delta \nu$; (b) the improbability that such a rise upwards through the ecclesiastical offices was known in the Apostle's time : (c) the still greater unlikelihood, even if it were known, that he would propose as a motive to a deacon to fulfil his office well. the ambitious desire to rise out of it. (2) Mack, Matth., Olsh., Huther, al., following Calv, and Luther, understand by it a high place of honour in the esteem of the church [see on mappyoia below] : "qui probe ghkl functi fuerint hoc ministerio, non parvo honore dignos esse." Calv. Against this is (a) that there is not a more distinct reference made to the estimation of the church ; indeed that the emphatic éavrois [see above] is altogether against such reference: (b) that thus again an unworthy motive would be set before the deacons: (c) that again [see below] $\pi a \beta \delta \eta \sigma i a$ will not on this interpretation, bear any legitimate rendering. (d) the aor. part. Siaκονήσαντες, as before. (3) Muse., al., take it spiritually, as meaning progress in the faith. Chrys. is claimed for this view, but this is somewhat doubtful. His words are, τουτέστι, προκοπήν και παβρησίαν πολλήν την έν πίστει χρ. 'Ιησού' ώsελ έλεγεν, οί έν τοις κάτω δείξαντες έαυτούς διεγηγερμένους, ταχέως καὶ πρός ἐκεῖνα άνελεύσονται : where, notwithstanding that προκοπήν would seem to mean subjective progress, Thl.'s explanation of έκεινα, — τὰ ἀνώτερα, the higher office, seems best to fit the sentence : and thus προκοπή must be objective,-preferment. But (a) the whole [especially $\beta a \theta \mu \delta \nu \pi \epsilon \rho i \pi \sigma i o \tilde{\nu} \tau \pi a$] is of too objective a character thus to be interpreted of a mercly subjective process—besides that (b) thus also the present περιποιουνται would require a present participle διακονοῦντεs. (4) Thdrt. [below], Croc., Flatt, Heinrichs modified : see below], De W., Wiesinger, understand it nearly as above-of the station or standing-place which the faithful deacon acquires before God, with reference to his own salvation. The opinions of these Commentators are, however, somewhat various as to the exact time to which the standing on this $\beta \alpha \theta \mu \delta s$ is to be referred. Thart. says: ei kai erátrova, φησί, τιμήν έχουσι κατά τόνδε τον βίον, άλλ' οὖν εἰδέναι προςήκει, ὡς τὴν ἐγχειρισθείσαν πεπληρωκότες διακονίαν, τον τιμιώτατον βαθμόν έν τῷ μέλλοντι λήψονται βίψ, καὶ τῆς πρός τὸν δεσπότην χριστόν απολαύσονται παζόησίας. Heinrichs, with whom De W. and Wiesinger are disposed to agree, understands that they procure to themselves a good expectation of salvation : a Babuos i. e. in this life, with reference to the future one. I believe, from the form of the sentence, that the truth will be found by combining the two views. The Siakornoartes, as above stated, is used with reference to their finished course at that day. The $\pi \epsilon \rho i$ - $\pi o_i o \hat{v} \tau a_i$ transfers the seene to the pre-The βaθμόs is that which sent time. they are now securing for themselves, and will be found standing on at that day: belonging therefore in part to both periods, and not necessarily involving the idea of different degrees of blessedness, though that idea [cf. 1 Cor. iii. 15] is familiar to St. Paul,-but merely predicating the soundness of the ground on which these diakovoi will themselves stand) and much confidence (this also is variously understood, according as Babuos is interpreted. Those who think of ecclesiastical preferment, render παρρησία 'freedom of speech as regards the faith [obj.],' i. e. in teaching ['majore fiducia aliis Evange-lium prædicabunt,' Grot.], or in resisting error,-or, 'libertas ingenue agendi,' as Est. : or 'a wide field for spiritual action,' as Matthies. To these there might be no objection, but for the adjunct to $\pi a \rho \delta \eta$ σία, έν πίστει τη έν χριστώ 'Ιησού. Thus defined, $\pi a \beta \delta \eta \sigma i a$ must necessarily have a subjective reference,-i. e. to the confidence towards God possessed by those who have made good advance in faith in Christ, as in reff. And so Thdrt. [above], Ambr., Croc., Coee., Flatt, Calv., Beza [these two understand it more generally, of the confidence wrought by a good conscience], Bengel, Wies., De W., Ellie., al.) in [the] faith (subjective, from what follows) which is in (see relf. iv denotes more the repose of faith in, cis the reliance of faith on, Christ) Christ Jesus.

Some supply it,-before this Epistle come to thee: or, before thou shalt have need to put these precepts into practice: but the above scems simpler, and suits better the usage elsewhere): but if I should delay (coming) (from $\epsilon \lambda \pi i \zeta \omega \nu$ to βραδύνω may be regarded as parenthetical, the Iva belonging immediately to $\gamma \rho a \phi \omega$), that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to conduct thyself (reff. Huther would take $\pi \hat{\omega} s \ \delta \epsilon \hat{i} \ \dot{a} r a \sigma \tau p \dot{\epsilon} \phi \epsilon \sigma$ θal generally,—' how men ought to behave themselves ;' alleging, that in the preeeding, there is no direct prescription how Timotheus is himself to act, and that if we supply $\sigma \epsilon$ [as D¹ in digest], we confine the reference of olkos brow to the Ephesian church. The latter objection need not detain us long. If the church in general is the house of God, then any portion of it may clearly partake of the title and the dignity. To the former, we may reply, that in fact, the whole of what has preceded does regard Timotheus's own behaviour. He was to see to all these things-to take care that all these precepts were observed) in the house of God (see reff. also Heb. iii. 2, 5, 6, and notes: 1 Cor. iii. 16: 2 Cor. vi. 16: Eph. ii. 22:-that congregation among whom God dwells, by His Spirit); - for such (the house of God: the $\eta \tau is$ brings out into prominence the appository explanation, and specially applies it to the anteccdent) is the congregation (ἐκκλησίας ού τούς οίκους λέγει τούς εύκτηρίους, κατά την τών πολλών συνήθειαν, άλλά τών πιστών τόν σύλλογον. Theod.-mops.) of the living God (thus designated for solemnity, and to shew His personal and active presence among them), the pillar (see below) and basement (= $\theta \epsilon \mu \epsilon \lambda \iota os$, 2 Tim. ii. 19: 'firmamentum.' It is a climax, not as Bengel, "instar unius vocabuli solidissimum quiddam exprimentis:" the στύλοs is the interincipate, the έδραίω $\mu \alpha$ the final support of the building: as Wahl,-"omne id, cui ut primario et præ ceteris insigni innititur aliquid") of the truth (these latter words are variously referred : being (1) by Camero, Er-Schmid., Limborch, Le Clerc, Schöttg., Beng., Mosh., Rosenm., Heinr., Wegsch., Heydenr., Flatt, al. [see in Wolf. Not Chillingworth, as stated in Bloomf.: see below], joined with the following sentence, putting a period at (@vros, and proceeding στύλος και έδραίωμα της άληθείας καί δμολογουμένως μέγα έστιν τό μυστ. $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. To this I can only say, that if any one imagines St. Paul, or any other person capable of writing this Epistle, able to have indited such a sentence, I fear there is but little chance in arguing with him on the point in question. To say nothing of its abruptness and harshness, beyond all example even in these Epistles, how palpably does it betray the botching of modern conjectural arrangement in the wretched anti-climax—στύλος καl έδραίωμα [rising in solemnity] $\tau \hat{\eta} s \ a \lambda \eta \theta \epsilon las$, $\kappa a i \ what$ grander idea, after the basement of the whole building, does the reader suppose about to follow?] δμολογουμένως μέγα! These two last words, which have [see below] their appropriate majesty and grandeur in their literal use at the emphatic opening of such a sentence as the next, are thus robbed of it all, and sink into the very lowest bathos; the metaphor being dropped, and the lofty imagery ending with a vague generality. If a sentence like this occurred in the Epistle, I should feel it a weightier argument against its genuineness than any which its opponents have yet adduced. (2) by Gregory of Nyssa [de vita Mosis : vol. i. p. 385, ου μόνον Πέτρος και Ίάκωβος και Ίωάννης στύλοι της έκκλησίας είσι ... ό θείος απόστολος ... και τον Τιμόθεον στύλον καλόν έτεκτήνατο, ποιήσας αὐτόν, καθώς φησί τῆ ίδία φωνῆ, στύλον καὶ έδραίωμα τῆς άληθείas], Chillingworth [Religion of Protestants, &c., ch. iii. 76: but he allows as possible, the reference to the Church: "if you will needs have St. Paul refer this not to Timothy, but to the Church, I will not contend about it any further, than to say, Possibly it may be otherwise "], -by others vi. 13. ch. iv. 10. mentioned in Wolf, and in our own days by Conybeare, it is taken as referring to TIMOTHEUS :- " that thou mayest know how to conduct thyself in the house of God, which is &c.... as a pillar and basement of the truth." In the very elaborate discussion of this passage by Suicer [s. v. $\sigma \tau i \lambda \sigma s$], he cites those fathers who seem more or less to have favoured this idea. Of these we must manifestly not claim for it those who have merely used the word στύλos or columna of an Apostle or teacher, or individual Christian,-as that is justified, independently of our passage, by Gal. ii. 9: Rev. iii. 12:-but Greg. Naz. applies the very words to Eusebius of Samosata [Ep. xliv. 1, vol. iii. (Migne) p. 39], and to Basil [Orat. xviii. 1, vol. i. p. 330]: and Basil in the Catena says, eigl kal στύλοι της 'Ιερουσαλήμ οι απόστολοι, κατά τό είρημένον, στύλος και έδραίωμα της άλη- $\theta \epsilon las$: and in the Epistle of the churches of Lyons and Vienne, Euseb. v. 1, it is said of Attalus, στύλον και έδραίωμα των ένταῦθα ἀεὶ γεγονότα. Other cognate expressions, such as $\tau \delta \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \epsilon \omega \mu a \tau \eta s \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$ [Chrys., of St. Peter, Hom. xxxii. vol. v. p. 199; and Basil, of Eusebius, as above], πίστεως έρεισμα [Greg. Naz., of Basil, Or. xviii. as above], τδ τῆς ἐκκλησίας στήριγμα [Thl. on Luke xxii., of St. Peter], 8pnσκείας στηρίγματα [of Pastors, Nicephorus Hist. vii. 2], are adduced by Suicer. The principal modern reasons for adopting this view have been (a) polemical—as against Roman Catholic infallibility of the Church, or (b) for uniformity of sym-bolism, seeing that in Gal. ii. 9, Rev. iii. 12, men are compared to pillars [see this very copiously illustrated in Suicer]. On both of these I shall treat expressly To the grammatical conbelow. struction of the sentence thus understood, there is no objection. The nominative στύλος after δεί would be not only allowable, but necessary, if it expressed, not a previous predicate of the understood $\sigma\epsilon$, but the character which by the $d\nu a\sigma \tau \rho \epsilon$. $\phi \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$ he was to become or shew forth: cf. Plat. and Demost. in Kühner, § 646, 2 anm., who however has not apprehended the right reason of the idiom. But to the sentence itself thus arranged and understood, there are weighty, and I conceive fatal objections : to wit, (c) if στύλος κ.τ.λ. had been meant to apply to Timotheus, it would hardly have been possible that $\sigma \epsilon$ should be omitted. He would thus be the prominent object in the whole passage, not . as now the least prominent, lurking behind \dot{a} ναστρέφεσθαι to make way for greater things. (d) I can hardly think, that, in this case, στύλος would have been anarthrous. Though 'a pillar' might be the virtual meaning, σε, τόν στύλον, or σε άναστρέ- $\phi \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$, . . . $\delta \sigma \tau \nu \lambda o s$, would certainly be the Greek expression. (e) In this case also, the ral δμολογουμένωs which follows would most naturally refer, not to the great deposit of faith in Christ which is entrusted to the church to keep,-but to the very strong and unusual expression which had just been used of a young minister in the church,-'and confessedly great is the dignity of the least of the ministers of Christ : for,' &c. (3) The reference to THE CHURCH is upheld by Chrys. [ούχ ώς ἐκεῖνος δ ἰουδαικός οίκος θεού. τούτο γάρ έστι τό συνέχον τὴν πίστιν καὶ τὸ κήρυγμα ἡ γὰρ αλήθειά έστι της έκκλησίας και στύλος και έδραίωμα. This inversion of the sentence may have arisen from taking $\tau \hat{\eta} s \, \hat{a} \lambda \eta \theta \epsilon i a s$ as a genitive of apposition], Thdrt. [olkov θεοῦ καὶ ἐκκλησίαν τῶν πεπιστευκότων τόν σύλλογον προςηγόρευσε. τούτους έφη στύλον και έδραίωμα της αληθείας. έπι γαρ της πέτρας έρηρεισμένοι και ακλόνητοι διαμένουσι, καλ διὰ τῶν πραγμάτων κπρύττοντες την των δογμάτων άλήθειαν], Theodor.-mops. [as cited above, on ἐκκλησía, as far as σύλλογον, then he proceeds, öθεν καί στύλον αὐτὴν καὶ ἐδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας ἐκάλεσεν, ὡς ἁν ἐν αὐτῆ τῆς ἀληθείας τὴν σύστασιν ἐχούσης], Thl., Ec., Ambr., Pel., the Roman Commentators, Luth., Calv. ["veritatem sustentat atque attollit ecelesia, efficit ne labatur ex animis, efficit ut longe lateque conspiciatur"], Calov., Wolf, &e. De Wette, Huther, Wiesinger, al. And this interpretation agrees with 2 Tim. ii. 19: see note there. But there is brought against it the objection, that there is thus introduced confusion of metaphor. The έκκλησία, which was the olkos above, now becomes $\sigma \tau \dot{\nu} \lambda \sigma s$, a part of the olkos. This is not difficult to answer. The

16. On the famous disputed reading in this verse, I give an analysis of the present state of the evidence :- I. rec $\theta \epsilon o s$, i.e. $\overline{\Theta C}$, with the follg : (not A, nor C : see below) D³K (F has OC without any apparent stroke in the O) L N⁵ has written OE above the OC of the codex [cent xii.] rel. The testimonies of the fathers for Beos are very doubtful. Few make a direct citation of the passage as thus read : those which seem to do so being naturally explained on the supposition of their supplying $\theta\epsilon\delta s$ as the subject of 5s. The readg deos is directly supported by Chrysostom, Theodoret, Euthalius, Macedonius (who has been charged by some of the Latins with introducing the reading), Damascenus, Theophylact, Ecumenius. Those supposed to favour the reading are Ignatius (ad Eph. 19, p. 660, -θεοῦ [but the Syriac has νίοῦ] ἀνθρωπίνως φανερουμένου: al ώς ἀνθρώπου φαινομένου), the Apostolic Constitutions(θεός κύριε ό ἐπιφανείς ήμῖν ἐν σαρκί) Hippolytus(agst Noetus: θεὸς ἐν σώματι ἐφανερώθη) Gregory Thauma-turgus or rather Apollinaris(in Phot: θεὸς ἐν σαρκὶ φανερωθείς). The testimonics of Athanasius, Nyssen, Cyr, usually adduced in favour of $\theta\epsilon\delta s$, are either uncertain from Action is now matter of certainty. The black line at present visible in the 0, is a modern retouching of an older but not original fainter one, due apparently to the darkening of the stroke of an C seen through from the other side. I have examined the page, and find that a portion of the virgula of the e, seen through, and now eorroded through, extends nearly through the Θ , not however quite in, but somewhat above, its centre, as Sir Frederick Madden has observed to me. It was to complete this that Junius made a dot. See also Ellicott's note, Past. Epp. edn 2, p. 103. Besides which, the mark of abbreviation above the line is modern, not corresponding with those in the MS. Sir Frederick Madden now informs me that a very powerful microscope has been applied by Professor Maskelyne, at his request, to the passage in the MS, and the result has been that no trace of either virgula in the O or mark of contraction over it, can be discovered. It is to be hoped therefore, that A will never again be cited on the side of ree) C(see Tischendorf, prolegg to his edn of the Codex Ephremi, p. 30)FN¹ 17. 73. 181 mss mentd by Liberatus (Cent VI) Victor Tununensis (Cent VI)

Why may not the $\sigma \tau \dot{\upsilon} \lambda \sigma s$ he taken collectively? the very word ἐκκλησία, occurring since, has pluralized the idea-the building consists of the κλητοί, who are so many στύλοιwhy should it not in the aggregate be described as the στύλος? This seems to me far better than, with some in Suicer, to suppose a monumental pillar, or base of an image, to be meant. The way in which the congregation of the faithful is the pillar and basement of the truth is admirably given by Thdrt. and Calvin above: viz. in that it is the element in which and medium by which the truth is conserved 16. And (follows on and upheld). the preceding : it is indeed worth all thy care to conduct thyself worthily in this house of God-for that truth which is there conserved and upheld is great and glorious above all others, being [see below] none other in fact than THE LORD HIM-SELF, in all His gracious manifestation and glorious triumph) confessedly ('as is acknowledged on all hands :' so Thueyd.

τό πλοῦτος τῆς δόξης τοῦ μυστηρίου τούτου ἐν τοῖς έθνεσιν, ὅ ἐστιν χριστός έν ύμιν, ή έλπις της δόξης. This was the thought in St. Paul's mind; that the great revolution of the religious life is, CHBIST. And in accordance with his practice in these Epistles, written as I believe, far on in his course, and after the figures and results of deep spiritual thoughts had been long familiar to him, he at once without explanation, or apology as beforetime in Col. i. 27, or expression of the xpiotos justifying the change of gender in the relative, joins the deep and latent thought with the superficial and obvious one, and without saying that the mystery is in fact Christ, passes from the mystery to the Person of Christ as being one and the same. Then, thus passing, . he is naturally led to a summary of those particulars wherein Christ has been revealed as a ground for the evoréseia of His Church. And, the idea of µυστήριον being prominent before him, he selects especially those events in and by which Christ was manifested forth-came forth from that secrecy in which he had beforetime been hidden in the counsels of God, and shone out to men and angels as the Lord of life and glory. Let me say in passing, that it should be noticed, in a question which now happily no longer depends on internal considerations, how completely the whole glorious sentence is marred and disjoined by the substitution of $\theta \epsilon \delta s$. It is not the objective fact of God being manifested, of which the Apostle is speaking, but the life of God lived in the church,-the truth, of which the congregation of believers is the pillar and basement, -as identical [John xiv. 6] with Him who is its centre and heart and stock-as unfolded once for all in the unfolding of Him. The intimate and blessed link, furnished by the ős, assuring the Church that it is not they that live, but Christ that liveth in them, is lost if we understand μυστήριον merely as a fact, however important, historically revealed. There is hardly a passage in the N. T., in which I feel more deep personal thankfulness for the restoration of the true and wonderful connexion of the original text)-who (thus, and not 'which,' nor 'He who,' should we render, preserving the same transition, from the mystery, to Him of whom now all that follows is spoken. ös is, as stated in Ellicott, and of course implied here, "a relative to an omitted though easily recognized antecedent, viz. Christ") was manifested in the flesh (it has been often maintained of late, c. g. by Mack, Winer, Huther, Wiesinger, Conyb., al., that these sentences, from their parallelism and concinnity, are taken from some hymn or confession of the ancient church. We cannot absolutely say that it may not have been so: but I should on all grounds regard it as very doubtful. I can see no reason why the same person who wrote the rhetorical passages, Rom. viii. 38, 39; xi. 33-36; 1 Cor. xiii. 4-7, and numerous others, might not, difference of time and modified mental characteristics being allowed for, have written this also. Once written, it would be sure to gain a place among the choice and treasured sayings of the Church, and might easily find its way into liturgical use: but I should be most inclined to think that we have here its first expression. The reason which some of the above Commentators adduce for their belief,the abrupt insulation of the clauses disjoined from the thought in the context, has no weight with me: I on the other hand feel that so beautiful and majestic a sequence of thoughts springing directly from the context itself, can hardly be a fragment pieced in, but must present the free expansion of the mind of the writer in the treatment of his subject. On the sense of this clause, cf. John i. 14, δ λόγος σàρξ ἐγένετο, - and 2 Tim. i. 10. This is put first in the rank, as being the pre-liminary to all the rest. It is followed by the next clause, because the assertion and assurance of Christ's perfect unsinning rightcousness was the aim of his manifestation in our flesh all those thirty years which preceded His public ministry: see below), was justified (i. e. approved to be righteous,—according to the uniform Pauline usage: not as De W., al., 'proved to be what he was.' The Apostle is following the historical order of events during the manifestation of our Lord on earth. That this is so, is manifest by the final clause being, ανελήμφθη εν δόξη. Ι take these events then in their order, and refer this to our Lord's baptism and temptation, in which His righteousness was approved and proved) in the Spirit (He was dwelt on by the Spirit in His baptism—led up by the Spirit to His great trial, and ev πνεύματι, the Spirit of God being His Spirit [but cf. Ellicott's note], that of which he said to nvevua uev mpdθυμον, ή δè σàρξ ἀσθενής, He was proved to be rightcous and spotless and separate from evil and its agent. See Rom. i. 3, 4, where another proof of this His spiritual perfection is given, viz. the great and crowning one of the Resurrection from the dead. Some have thought of that proof here also: others, of the continued course of His miracles, especially the Resurrection : Bengel of the Resurrection and Ascension, by which He entered into His glory : alii aliter. But I prefer keeping the historical order, though I would by no means limit the $\delta i \kappa a \omega \sigma is$ to that time only: then it was chiefly and prominently manifested), was seen by angels (viz. by means of His Incarnation, and specifically, when they came and ministered to Him after His temptation. This seems to be regarded as the first, or at all events is the first recorded oceasion on which they ministered to Him. And thus Chrys. and Thdrt.'s remark may apply: την γαρ αόρατον της θεότητος φύσιν ουδέ έκεινοι έώρων, σαρκωθέντα δε έθεάσαντο, Thdrt. :- μεθ' ήμων, as Chrys. This, one of the particulars of the glory and manifestation of the incarnate Saviour, is, though not immediately concerning the mystery of piety as upheld in the Church, cited as belonging to the unfolding of that mystery in Christ), was preached among the nations (that preaching commencing with the sending out of the Apostles, and though not then, in the strict technical sense, carried on ev eques, yet being the beginning of that which waxed onward till it embraced all nations. See and compare Rom. xvi. 26 [Eph. iii. 8]. So that we are still proceeding with our Lord's ministry, taking ¿θνεσιν in that wider sense in which the Jews themselves are numbered among them [so also Chrys., Huther], and the fact itself as the great commencement of the proclamation of Christ to men), was believed on in the world (including all that winning of faith first from His disciples [John ii. 11], then from the Jews [ib. 23, viii. 30], and Samaritans [iv. 41, 42]: see also id. x. 42. Our clause bears with it a reminiscence of his own great saying, John iii. 16 ff., — ούτως γαρ ηγάπησεν δ θεδς τον κόσμον ώστε τον υίον αύτου τον μονογενή έδωκεν, ίνα πως ό πιστεύων είς αύτον μή απόληται αλλ' έχη ζωήν αιώνιον. ού γαρ απέστειλεν δ θεδς τον υίδν αύτοῦ είς τόν κόσμον ίνα κρίνη τόν κόσμον, άλλ' ίνα σωθή δ κόσμος δι αύτοῦ. δ πιστεύων eis αὐτον οὐ κρίνεται ὁ δὲ μὴ πιστεύων ήδη κέκριται κ.τ.λ.), was received up in glory (at His Ascension [against De Wette, who understands it of celestial precedence (von einem himmlischen Borgange): but qu, his meaning ?]: cf. reff. er Sogn is best taken as a pregnant construction-was taken up into, and reigns in, glory.

It is this distinct reference to the fact of our Lord's personal Ascension, which in my mind rules the whole sentence and makes it, whatever further reference each clause may have, a chain of links of the divine manifestation of the Person of Christ, following in chronological order from His incarnation to His assumption into glory. The order and connexion of the clauses has been very variously understood, as may be seen in Wolf, and in De Wette. The triple antithesis, so characteristic of St. Paul, can hardly escape any reader : ἐν σαρκί, ἐν πνεύματι,- αγγέλοις, έθνεσιν, - έν κόσμω, $\epsilon \nu \delta \delta \xi n$: but further it is hardly worth while to reproduce the distinctions which some have drawn, or motives for arrangement which they have supposed). Сп. IV. 1--16.] Of future false teachers (1-6); directions to Timotheus in reference to them (7-11); general exhortations to him (12-16). 1.] But (contrast to the glorious mystery of piety which has been just dwelt on) the Spirit (viz. the Holy Spirit of prophecy, speaking in the Apostle himself, or in others, -or, which is most probable, in both-in the general prophetic testimony which He bore throughout the church : cf. $\gamma i \nu \omega \sigma \kappa \epsilon$, spoken from the same point of prophetic foresight, 2 Tim. iii. 1. Some [even Wiesinger] have supposed the Apostle to refer to some prophetic passage of the O. T., or to the general testimony of the O. T. prophecies [Dan. vii. 25; viii. 23; xi. 30], or those of our Lord [Matt. xxiv. 4 ff., 11], or of the Apostles [2 Thess. ii. 3 ff. 1 John ii. 18. 2 Pet. iii. 3. Jude 18], or all these combined. But in the two former cases, we should hardly have had $\tau \delta \pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\upsilon} \mu a$ λέγει, but ή γμαφή, or δ κύριος, or the like; to aveous implying rather the present agency of the Spirit: and the latter is only a less clear way of putting the explanation given above : for why should writings be referred to, when the living men were yet testifying in the power of the Spirit among them? Besides, see the way in which such written prophecies are referred to, in Jude 17) expressly ('plainly,' 'in so many words:' ρητῶs is a postclassical word, found once in Polyb. 'in the latter times,' which though not quite so strong as 'in the last times,' yet gives the idea of close connexion with them: whereas here the Apostle speaks only of times subsequent to those in which he was writing : see the difference in 2 Tim. iii. 1 : and compare Acts xx. 29) certain men (not the false teachers : rather, those who will be the result of their false teaching) shall depart (or decline: not by formal apostasy, or the danger would not be that which it is here represented : but subjectively, declining in their own minds and lives from holding Christ in simplicity) from the faith (objective-the doetrine which faith embraces, as so often), giving heed to (see reff.: the participle contains the reason and process of their declension) seducing spirits (πνεύμασιν, as Huther remarks, is in contrast with τό πνεῦμα, ver. 1 ;—it is to be understood as in 1 John iv. 1 and 6, in which last verse we have the cognate expression $\tau \delta$ $πν ε \tilde{v} μ a τ \hat{\eta} s π λ άν η s.$ Wolf's 'spiritualibus seductoribus,' or 'doctoribus seducentibus' is quite inadmissible. The spirits are none other than the spirits of evil, tempting, energizing in, seducing, those who are described, just as the Spirit directs and dwells in those who abide in the faith), and teachings of dæmons (doctrines taught by, suggested by, evil spirits : gen. subjective: cf. σοφία δαιμονιώδης, James iii. 15, and Tert. de præser. hær. c. 7, vol. ii. p 19, "Hæ sunt doctrinæ hominum et dæmoniorum, prurientibus auribus natæ:" see Col. ii. 22. The student may refer, as a curiosity, to the very learned disquisition of Mede on these daiµóvia: -not merely for the really valuable information which it contains, but also as a lesson, to assure the ground well, before he begins to build with such pains) in the (following in the ..., iv giving the element, in which : see below) hypocrisy of those who speak lies (the whole clause belongs to rives anorthforrai, the previous one, $\pi \rho os \epsilon \chi o \nu \tau \epsilon s \ldots \delta a \iota \mu o \nu \iota \omega \nu$, being complete in itself. Bengel gives the construction well : ' construe cum deficient. Hypocrisis ea quæ est falsiloquorum, illos auferet. rivés, aliqui, illi sunt seducti; falsilogui, seductores: falsiloquorum, genitivus, unice pendet ab hypocrisi. τδ falsiloquorum dicit relationem ad alios : ergo antitheton est in iSiav, sua.' This is much better than to join the gen. $\psi \in \partial \delta \wedge \delta \gamma \omega \nu$ with Saipoviev [so Wegscheider and Conyb., but understanding that which is said of the dæmons as meant of those who follow them], or with διδασκαλίαις [Estius, -'doctrinis, inquam, hominum in hypocrisi loquentium mendacium'],-as making the sentence which follows apply to the false teachers [cf. κωλυόντων], whom the τινέs follow. And so De W., Huther, Wiesinger : and Mede himself, book iii. ch. 2, p. 677), of men branded (with the foul marks of moral erime : so Cic., Catil. i. 6, ' quæ nota domesticæ turpitudinis non inusta vitæ tuæ est ?' Livy, iii. 51, 'ne Claudiæ genti cam inustam maculam vellent :' Plato, Gorg. 521 Ε, δ 'Ραδάμανθυς πολλάκις τοῦ μεγάλου βασιλέως επιλαβόμενος ή άλλου ότουοῦν βασιλέως ή δυνάστου κατείδεν ούδὲν ύγιὲς όν τῆς ψυχῆς, ἀλλὰ διαμεμα-

See more examples in Wetst. and Kypke. καυτηριάζω is properly to burn in a mark with a $\kappa a \nu \tau \eta \rho$, a branding-instrument of hot iron. Thl. explains : $\epsilon \pi \epsilon l \sigma \nu \nu l \sigma a \sigma \nu \epsilon a \nu \tau \sigma s a \kappa a \theta a \rho$ σίαν πολλήν, διά τοῦτο τὸ συνειδός αὐτῶν άνεξαλείπτους έχει τούς καυτήρας του όυ- $\pi a \rho o \hat{v} \beta i o v$. The idea rather seems to be as Bengel, "qui ipsi in sua sibi conscientia, inustis ei perfidiæ maculis, infames sunt :" cf. Tit. i. 15; iii. 11, where advokatákpitos seems to express much the same. Or, as Ellie., 'they knew the brand they bore, and yet, with a show of outward sanctity [compare inoxplose], they strove to beguile and seduce others, and make them as bad as themselves.' The genitive still depends on ὑποκρίσει, as does κωλυόντων also) on their own conscience (την ibiav, as Beng. above-these falseteachers are not only the organs of foul spirits, but are themselves hypocritical liars, with their own consciences seared by crime. The accusative is one of reference : cf. ch. vi. 5), hindering from marrying (this description has been thought by some to fit the Jewish seets of Essenes and Therapeutæ, who abstained from marriage, Jos. B. J. ii, 8. 2: Philo de vit. contempl. 4, 8, vol. ii. pp. 476, 482 : cf. Col. ii. 18 ff. But as De W. remarks, the abstinence by and by mentioned seems too general to suit the idea that they were Jews [see below]: besides that the Epistle does not describe them as present-but as to come in after times), (commanding) (see a like ellipsis [zeugma], in which a second but logically necessary verb is omitted, and must be supplied from the context,-in ch. ii. 12, 1 Cor. xiv. 34. Bengel quotes a similar construction from Chrys., ταῦτα λέγω, ού κηδεύειν κωλύων, άλλα μετα συμ-μετρίας τοῦτο ποιείν) to abstain from meats (compare Col. ii. 16. It does not appear here from what sort of food this abstinence would be enjoined : but probably the eating of flesh is alluded to.

Euseb. H. E. iv. 29, quotes from Irenaus [i. 28. 1, p. 107], από Σατυρνίνου και Μαρκίωνος οι καλούμενοι Έγκρατεις άγαμίαν έκήρυξαν, άθετοῦντες την άρχαίαν πλάσιν τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ἡρέμα κατηγοροῦντες τοῦ άρρεν καὶ θῆλυ εἰς γένεσιν ἀνθρώπων πεποιηκότος και τῶν λεγομένων παρ' αὐτοῖς έμψύχων αποχήν είςηγήσαντο, αχαριστοῦντες τῷ πάντα πεποιηκότι θεῷ. These seem to be the persons here pointed at : and though the announcement of their success in after time is prophetic, we may fairly suppose that the seeds of their teaching were being sown as the Apostle wrote. The existence of guosticism in its earlier form is certainly implied in ch. vi. 20: and in 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18, we find that denial of the resurrection which characterized all the varieties of subsequent gnosticism. See the whole subject discussed in the Prolegg. ch. vii. § i. 12 ff.), which God made for participation with thanksgiving for (dat. commodi) those who believe, and have received the (full) knowledge of the truth. This last description of the worthy partakers of God's bounties is well illustrated by Calvin : 'Quid ergo ? annon solem suum quotidie oriri facit Deus super bonos et malos (Matt. v. 45)? annon ejus jussu terra impiis panem producit ? annon cjus benedictione etiam pessimi aluntur? est enim universale illud beneficium quod David Psal. civ. 14 decantat. Respondeo, Paulum de usu licito hie agere, cujus ratio coram Deo nobis constat. Hujus minime compotes sunt impii, propter impuram conscientiam quæ omnia contaminat, quemadmodum habetur ad Titum, i. 15. Et sane, proprie loquendo, solis filiis suis Deus totum mundum et quiequid in mundo est destinavit, qua ratione etiam vocantur nundi hæredes. Nam hac conditione constitutus initio fuerat Adam omnium dominus, ut sub Dei obedientia maneret. Proinde rebellio adversus Deum jure quod illi collatum fuerat, ipsi una cum posteris spoliavit. riore membro definit quos vocat fideles, nempe qui notitiam habent sanæ doetrinæ.' On μετά εύχαριστίας, see 1 Cor. x. 30: and below on ver. 4. 4, 5.] Reason for the above assertion. Because (ori is more the objective, $-\gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho$, which follows, the subjective causal particle : őri introduces that which rests on a patent fact, as here on a Scripture quotation,-yáp, that which is in the writer's mind, and forms part of his own reasoning) every thing which God has made is good (in allusion to ref. Gen. See also Rom. xiv. 14, 20); and nothing (which God has made) is to be rejected (Wetst. cites Hom. II. γ . 65, ούτοι απόβλητ' έστι θεων έρικυδέα δώραon which the Schol., - άπόβλητα, άποβολης άξια· τὰ ὑπὸ θεῶν, φησί, δεδομένα δώρα οὐκ ἔστι μέν ἀρνήσασθαι) if received with thanksgiving ("properly, even with-out this condition, all things are pure: but he did not rise to this abstraction, because he was regarding meats not per se, but in their use, and this latter may become impure by an ungodly frame of mind." De Wette) : for (see on 571 and $\gamma \dot{a} \rho$ above) it (this subject is gathered out of the preceding clause by implication, and = 'every $\kappa \tau i \sigma \mu \alpha$ which is partaken of with thanksgiving') is hallowed (more than 'declared pure,' or even than 'rendered pure :' the latter it does not want, the former falls far short of the work of the assigned agents. The emphasis is ou άγιάζεται, and a new particular is introduced by it-not purity merely, but holiness, - fitness for the godly usage of Christian men. To this, which is more than mere making or declaring pure, it is set apart by the evaporia; so that the minus is proved by the majus. There is certainly a slight trace of reference to the higher consecration in the Lord's Supper. The same word $\epsilon \partial \chi a \rho_i \sigma \tau i a$ is common to both. Ordinary meals are set apart for ordinary Christian use by asking a bless-ing on them: that meal, for more than ordinary use, by asking on it its own peculiar blessing) by means of the word of God and intercession (what 'word of God?' how to be understood? treating the plainer word first, the evreuses is evidently intercession [see on ch. ii. 1] on behalf of the $\kappa \tau i \sigma \mu a$ partaken of - that it may be 'sanctified to our use.' This, bound on as $\lambda \acute{o} \gamma o \upsilon \theta e o \widetilde{\upsilon}$ is to $\acute{e} \nu \tau e \acute{v} \xi e \omega s$ by the non-repetition of the preposition, may serve to guide us to its meaning. And first, negatively. It cannot mean any thing which does not form part of the edxapioría: such as God's word in the Scripture just cited [Mack], or in any other place [Grot., al.]: or God's word in the foundation truths of Christianity. Then, positively: it must mean in some sense the edxapioría, or something in it. But not, as Wahl and Leo, the 'word addressed to God,' 'oratio ad Deum facta,' which would be an unprecedented meaning for $\lambda \delta \gamma os \ \theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$: the only way open for us is, that the edgapiorla itself, or some part of it, is in some sense the word of God. This may be (1) by its consisting in whole or in part of Scripture words, or (2) by the effusion of a Christian man, speaking in the power of God's Spirit, being known as $\lambda \delta \gamma \omega s \ \theta \epsilon o \tilde{\upsilon}$. This latter is perhaps justified by the reff. : but still it seems to me hardly probable, and I should prefer the former. [So Ellic. also.] It would generally be the case, that any form of Christian thanksgiving before meat would contain words of Scripture, or at all events thoughts in exact accordance with them : and such utterance of God's revealed will, bringing as it would the assembled family and their meal into harmony with Him, might well be said $\dot{a}\gamma_i \dot{a} \zeta \epsilon_i \nu$ the Bpúµara on the table for their usc. Many of the Commentators quote from the Constt. Ap. vii. 49, p. 1057, Migne, the following grace before meat, used in the primitive times: εύλογητός εί κύριε ό τρέφων με έκ νεότητός μου, ό διδούς τροφήν πάση σαρκί πλήρωσον χαρώς και εύφροσύνης τὰς καρδίας ήμῶν, Ίνα πάντοτε πασαν αυτάρκειαν έχοντες, περισσεύωμεν είς παν έργον άγαθον εν χριστώ 'Ιησοῦ τῷ κυρίω ἡμῶν, δι' οῦ σοl δόξα τιμὴ καί κράτος eis τούς αίωνας, άμήν. (Baur understands this epithet to refer to the gnostic idea of an old universal mother, the σοφία or ἀχαμώθ [see Irenæus, i. 4. 1 ff. pp. 18 f.] : but Wiesinger well replies that this will not suit the word γραώδηs [from ypavs, eldos, as beaeidys], which must be subjective, — nor $\beta \epsilon \beta \eta \lambda os$, which on this supposition would not be appropriate) fables (see notes on ch. i. 4 and 7, and Prolegg.) decline (lit. James, 'for a short time, as the contrast $\pi \rho \delta s \pi a \nu \tau a$ below shews) profitable (to what sort of exercise does he allude ? Ambr., Thom.-Aq., Lyra, Calv., Grot., Heydenr., Leo, Matthies, al., take it as alluding to corporal austerities for religion's sake: 'hoe nomine appellat quæeunque religionis eausa suscipiuntur externæ actiones, ut sunt vigilize, longa inedia, humi cubatio, et similia,' Calv. But against this are two considerations: 1) that these are not now in question, but the immediate subject is the excellence of being trained and thoroughly exercised in piety: 2) that if they were, it would hardly be consistent with his previous severe characterization of these austeritics, ver. 3, to introduce them thus with even so much creditable mention. Wiesinger has taken up this meaning t Z 2 cannot be said to be $\pi \rho \delta s \ \delta \lambda (\gamma o \nu, \text{ for it}$ would contribute to edoéBeia. And indeed he may be refuted on his own ground : he says that the σωματ. γυμνασία must belong to evoéBeia: for that if it meant bodily exercise merely, πνευματική γυμνασía, not εὐσέβειa, would be the proper contrast to it. But surely we may say, if σωματική γυμν. does belong to εὐσέβεια, how can it form a contrast to it? On his hypothesis, not on the other, we should require $\pi \nu \in \nu \mu \pi \tau$ is the contrast. A part cannot be thus contrasted with the whole. It is therefore far better to understand the words, as Chrys., Thl., Thdrt. [οί της του σώματος, φησίν, εὐεξίας ἐπιμελούμενοι πρός ὀλίγον ταύτης ἀπολαύουσιν], Pel., Corn.-a-Lap., Estius, Wolf, al., Bengel, Mack, De W., Huther, of mere gymnastic bodily exercise, of which the Apostle says, that it has indeed its uses, but those uses partial only. Bengel adds, perhaps more ingeniously than conclusively, "Videtur Timotheus juvenis interdum usus fuisse aliqua exercitatione corporis [ch. v. 23] quain Paulus non tam prohibet quam non laudat." Two eurious interpretations of the expression have been given ; one by Chrys., as a sort of afterthought : δ δε λέγει, τοιουτόν εστι μηδε eis γυμνασίαν ποτε καταθήs σεαυτόν διαλεγόμενος πρός εκείνους, άλλα ταῦτα τοῖς αύτοῦ παραίνει. οὐ γάρ ἐστι πρός τοὺς διεστραμμένους μαχόμενον όνησαί τι ποτε, -the other by Braun [Selecta sacra i. 10. 156, cited by Huther], who understands by it the ceremonial law): but piety (the first member of the antithesis contained the means, $\dot{\eta}$ σωματική γυμ-varía: this, the end, εὐσέβεια;—thut which is sought by γυμνασία πρὸs εὐ-σέβειαν) is profitable for all things (not one portion only of a man's being, but every portion of it, bodily and spiritual, temporal and eternal), having (seeing that it has) promise of the life (we may, as far as the construction is concerned, take $\zeta \omega \eta s$, as Ellic., abstract, of life, and then divide it off into $\tau \hat{\eta} s \ \nu \hat{\nu} \nu$ and $\tau \hat{\eta} s \ \mu \epsilon \lambda$ λούσηs. But see below), which is now and which is to come (how is the genitive ζωήs to be taken ? is it the objective genitive, giving the substance of the promise, LIFE, in its highest sense ? in this case it would be $\epsilon \nu \tau \tilde{\varphi} \nu \tilde{\nu} \nu$ alwr kal $\epsilon \nu$ τ $\tilde{\varphi}$ μέλλοντι. And seeing it is not that, but $\tau \eta s v v \kappa$. $\tau \eta s \mu \epsilon \lambda \lambda o v \sigma \eta s$, we should have to understand $\zeta \omega \eta$ in two different meanings,-long and happy life here, and eternal life hereafter – it bears a promise of this life and of the life to come. This to say the least is harsh. It would be better therefore to take emayyedia as ' the promise,' in the sense of 'the chief blessedness promised by God,' the blessed contents of His promise, whatever they be, and $(\omega \hat{\eta} s)$ as the possessive genitive : the best promise belonging to this life and to that which is to come. It may be said, this also is harsh; and to some extent I acknowledge it, -- it is not however a harshness in thought, as the other, but only in construction, such as need not surprise us in these Epistles. The concrete $\epsilon \pi a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda (a$ instead of the abstract is already familiar to us, Luke xxiv. 49: Acts i. 4; xiii. 32, al.: and the possessive genitive after $i\pi a\gamma\gamma$. is justified by Rom. xv. 8, ἐπαγγ. τῶν πα- $\tau\epsilon\rho\omega\nu$, and by the arrangement of the sen-9.] Faithful is the saying, tence). and worthy of all acceptation (see on ch. i. 15. The words refer to what follows, not as Heinr. to ch. iii. 16, nor as De W., Huther, Wies., al., to what went immediately before: see on $\gamma d\rho$ below. The connexion is with $\kappa al \tau \eta s \mu \epsilon \lambda \lambda o \dot{\upsilon} \sigma \eta s$. Piety has the promise of that life attached to it, according to the well-known Christian saying which follows. Otherwise verse 10 comes in disjointedly and unaccountably): for (γάρ is introduced from a mixture of two constructions, rendering a reason for kal $\tau \eta s \mu \epsilon \lambda \lambda o \upsilon \sigma \eta s$, as if $\pi \iota \sigma \tau \delta s$ $\delta \lambda \delta \gamma \sigma s$ had not been inserted. We have the same construction in 2 Tim. ii. 11, where Huther, though he regards the $\gamma d\rho$ as decisive against it here, refers the $\pi_{i\sigma\tau\delta s}$ $\delta \lambda \delta \gamma \sigma s$ to what follows) to this end (viz. the $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\rho ia$ implied in that which follows, introduced by ori, -as in reff. : thus alone can the saying as a $\pi i \sigma \tau \delta s \lambda \delta \gamma \sigma s$ cohere together : and so Thdrt., Thl., Beza, Grot., Beng., Mosh., Wegsch., Leo, Wahl :- not, as De W., Huther, Ellic., al., for the obtaining of the promise mentioned above [De W. claims Thdrt. and Bengel for this meaning, but wrongly: the former says, $\tau l \delta \eta$ ποτε, &c. εί μή τίς έστι των πόνων αντίδοσις; άλλα γάρ έστιν αντίδοσις. αίδιος γάρ θεός άγωνοθετεί τοις άθλουσι, καί πάντων έστιν άνθρώπων σωτήρ κ.τ.λ.; and the latter, 'hoe nomine, hoc fine, hac spe,' referring to $\eta \lambda \pi i \kappa a \mu \epsilon \nu$]) We (Christians in general) [both] toil (more than labour $[\epsilon \rho \gamma a \langle \delta \mu \epsilon \theta a]$: it gives the idea of ' toil and moil :' see reff.) and suffer reproach (climax : we might toil and be had in honour, but as it is, we have both fatigue and shame to bear. The reading dywrigo- $\mu\epsilon\theta a$ is very strongly supported, but appears to have been introduced from Col. i. 29), because we have fixed our hope (the same perfect occurs John v. 45: 2 Cor. i. 10: ch. v. 5, vi. 17: it refers to the time when the strong resolve and waiting began, and to its endurance since that time) on (for construction see reff., and Ellicott's note here. this universality of salvation offered by God, that we have rested our hopes on Him and become $\pi_{i\sigma\tau ol}$), especially them that believe (in these alone does that universal salvation, which God has provided, become actual. He is the same $\sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho$ towards and of all: but these alone appropriate His $\sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho i a$. Bengel rightly observes, 'Latet nervus argumenti a minori ad majus:' but he applies the $\sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho \pi d \nu \tau \omega \nu$ to this life, and $\mu d\lambda i \sigma \tau a \pi i \sigma \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ to the life to come. So also Chrys : el de robs àníoτους σώζει ένταῦθα, πολλφ μαλλον τοὺς $\pi i \sigma \tau o \dot{v} s \, \epsilon \kappa \epsilon \hat{i}$. But this does not seen to suit the context, nor the higher sense to which $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\rho$ is every where in the N. T. confined, and most especially in these Epistles, where it occurs very frequently. The true 'argumentum a minori ad majus' lies in this -" if God be thus willing for all to be saved, how much more shall he save them that put their trust in Him." For the expression, see reff., and especially Gal. vi. 11.] Command (see ch. i. 3) 10). these things (viz. those insisted on since ver. 7) and teach them. 12-16.] General exhortations to Timotheus. Let no one despise thy youth (as to the construction, Chrys. [μηδείς διὰ την νεότητα καταφρονήση σου], Leo, Mack, Matthies, take σoû as immediately governed by καταφρονήση, and της νεότητος as a second genitive - ' thee for thy youth.' But though I cannot think with Huther that such a construction would be illegitimate [for in what does $\kappa a \tau a \phi \rho o \nu \epsilon \omega$ differ in logical reference from $\kappa a \tau \eta \gamma o \rho \epsilon \omega$? - cf. ϵi . . . παρανόμων . . . ήμελλον αὐτοῦ κατnyopeîv, Demosth. Meid. p. 515. 26], yet ver. 15 seems to rule in favour of the simpler construction, where we have gov preceding its governing substantive with no such ambiguity. As to the matter of the youth of Timotheus, see Prolegg. ch. vii. § ii. 35, note ; and remember, that his age relative to that of the Apostle himself, whose place he was filling, rather than his absolute age, is evidently that which is here meant. By the $\epsilon\omega s \epsilon \rho \chi o \mu a i$, we see that this comparison was before the Apostle's mind. The interpretation of Bengel, "" talem te gere quem nemo possit tanquam juvenem contemnere :" libenter id faciunt senes inanes,' thus endeavouring to eliminate the fact, of Timotheus's youth, is forced, and inconsistent with the Tis. It is quite true [cf. what follows— $d\lambda\lambda\dot{a} \tau \dot{\nu}$ mos $\gamma i \nu o \nu$, &c.] that the exhortation is to him, not to the Ephesian church : but it is grounded on the fact of his youth, in whatever light that fact is to be interpreted);-but become (by gaining their respect for the following acts and qualities) a pattern of the believers (the comma after $\pi_{1}\sigma_{1}\tilde{\omega}_{\nu}$, in which I have followed Lachmann, gives more force and independence to the clause adversative to $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon$'s $\kappa.\tau.\lambda.$, and then leaves the specifications to follow),-in word (the whole of thine utterances, in public and private : ἐν λόγφ is elsewhere contrasted, as in Col. iii. 17, with $\epsilon \nu \epsilon \rho \gamma \omega$), in behaviour (the other outward sign of the life within: $\epsilon \nu \epsilon \rho \gamma \omega$, Col. 1. c., but expressing more-'in quotidiana consuetudine,' as Beng. The dva. $\sigma \tau \rho o \phi \eta$ may testify, in cases where no actual deed is done), in love, in faith (the two great springs of Christian conduct, the one it is true set in motion by the other,-cf. Gal. v. 6, $\pi i \sigma \tau is \delta i' d \gamma d \pi \eta s$ ένεργουμένη,-but both, leading principles of the whole man), in purity (probably, not chastity, in the more restricted sense, though in ch. v. 2 it certainly has this meaning from the context: but in the wider and higher meaning which the context here requires, all believers being in view, of general holiness and purity. Cf. for this, - ayvos, ch. v. 22: 2 Cor. vii. 11 : James iii. 17, - άγνίζω, James iv. 8 : 1 Pet. i. 22. From these passages the quality would appear definable as simplicity of holy motive followed out in consistency of holy action). 13.] Till I come (not as De W., as long as thou in my absence presidest over the Ephesian church: for this supposes the Apostle to be the normal president of that Church and Timotheus his locum-tenens, which was not the case. Timothcus was put there with a special commission from the Apostle: that commission would cease at the Apostle's coming, not because he would resume residence and presidence, but because he would enforce and complete the work of Timotheus, and thus, the necessity for special interference being at an end, the church would revert to the normal rule of its own presbytery), attend to the (public, see below) reading ("scriptura sacræ, in ecclesia. Huic adjunguntur duo præcipua genera, adhortatio, quæ ad agendum, et doctrina, quæ ad cognoscendum pertinet, ch. vi. 2 fin. Rom. xii. 7 fl." Beng. This is certainly the meaning ; cf. Luke iv. 16 ff. : Acts xiii. 15 : 2 Cor. iii. 14,-not that of Chrys. [ἀκούωμεν ἅπαντες, καί παιδευώμεθα μή αμελείν της των θείων γραφων μελέτης], Grot., Calv. Chrys. takes $\pi a \rho a$ κλήσει as social, διδασκαλία as public,τῆ παρακλήσει τῆ πμὸς ἀλλήλους, τῆ διδασκαλία τη πρός πάντας — so Grot, 'in monendis aliis privatim, docendis publice:' but why so?). 14. Do not neglect (= ἀναζωπυρεῖν, 2 Tim. i. 6,do not suffer to decay and smoulder by carelessness : ' negligunt qui non exercent, nee putant se posse excidere,' Bengel) the spiritual gift which is in thee (see more at length in 2 Tim. i. 6. The spiritual gift is that of teaching and ruling the church. Thdrt. says, too narrowly [and so nearly Ellic.], χάρισμα την διδασκαλίαν eraλεσe: it was not teaching only, but the whole grace of God given him for the office to which he was set apart by special ordination), which was given thee (by God, 1 Cor. xii. 4, 6) by means of prophecy (not as Mack, 'on account of prophecies,' alleging the plural in ch. i. 18. That verse [see note] refers to the same fact as this-viz. that, either at the first conversion of Timothcus, or at his ordination to the ministry [and certainly the latter seems here to be pointed at], the Holy Spirit spoke, by means of a prophet or prophets, His will to invest him with $\chi a \rho i \sigma \mu a \tau a$ for the work, and thus the gift was said to be conferred, as to its certainty in the divine counsels, by such prophecy-'ita jubente per os prophetarum Spiritu Sancto,' Beza. All attempts to make διά bear other meanings ['potest tamen sic accipi ut idem valeat quod eis $\pi \rho o \phi \eta \tau \epsilon (a \nu, i. e. ad prophetandum; vel$ $\epsilon \nu \pi \rho o \phi \eta \tau \epsilon i a$ ita ut quod sit hoc donum exprimat apostolus,' Beza] are illegitimate and necdless : see Acts xiii. 1, 2, 3, which is a case precisely analogous : the gift was in Paul and Barnabas dia προφητείας, $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{a}\ \epsilon\pi\iota\theta\epsilon\sigma\epsilon\omega s\ \chi\epsilon\iota\rho\omega\nu$. Bengel strangely joins προφητείαs with πρεσβυτερίου, parenthesizing $\mu \epsilon \tau \dot{a} \epsilon \pi i \theta$. τ . $\chi \epsilon i \rho \hat{\omega} \nu$, alleging that 'impositio manus proprie fit per unam personam et quident digniorem : prophetia vero fiebat etiam per æquales,' &c. But this certainly was not so: see below), with laying on of the hands (see on Acts vi. 6. Neander, Pfl. u. Leit. i. 267. There is no real difference, as De W. thinks, between this and 2 Tim. i. 6. There was a special reason there for putting Timotheus in mind of the fact that the Apostle's own hands were laid on him : but that fact does not exclude this. I have punctuated it so as to connect this clause with what follows, and thus to render it not quite so harsh, seeing that it then will assume the form of a recapitulatory conclusion); for doing this (' in doing this,' as E. This indeed is evident from the quadruple specification in these verses. So even Mack, though he maintains that the vewrepoi of Acts v. 6 were official. Leo, as cited by Wiesinger, gives well the connexion with the last chapter : "quum supra scripsisset, nemini licere ex juventute Timothei ejus despiciendi oceasionem sumere, nunc jam ipsum hortatur Timothcum, ut semper memor sux veórnros ita se gerat erga seniores uti revera deceat virum juniorem." But this connexion must not be too closely pressed. Some important general instructions have intervened since the μηδείς σου της νεότητος καταφρονείτω.

"The rule of Jerome (Ep. 52 [2]. 5, vol. i. p. 259) is simple : 'omnes puellas et virgines Christi aut æqualiter ignora aut æqualiter dilige.'" Ellic. 3-16.] Directions concerning widows. This whole passage is somewhat difficult, and has been very variously understood. The differences will be seen below. 3. $\tau(\mu \alpha)$ is this to be interpreted generally, 'honour' merely, or with reference to the context? The best guide to an answer will be what follows. If the command be merely to hold them in honour, why should the destitute be held in more honour than those who had families? The command $\chi \eta \rho as \tau \eta \mu a$ would surely apply to all alike. But seeing that it does not apply to all alike, we must necessarily limit its general meaning to that particular in which the onc would be honoured, and the other not. Thus without giving or seeking for an unusual meaning to $\tau i \mu a$, we may fairly interpret it of this particular kind of honour, viz. being inscribed on the Church's $\kappa a \tau a \lambda a \gamma o s$ (ver. 9) as a fit object of charitable sustenance. That such a roll existed in the very earliest days of the church, we know from Acts vi. 1. Cf. also Iguat. ad Polyc. c. 4, p. 721 f.: Justin M. Apol. i. 67, p. 84: Euseb. H. E. vi. 43. Thus Huther and De W., and Ellic., after Grot., Calv., all. τὰς ὄντως χήρας] cf. ver. 16 below,- those who are really in a widowed (destitute) state, as contrasted with those described ver. 4. But then the enquiry has been made, Is this όντως χήρα to be defined by mere external circumstances, or not rather by the religious character, described below, ver. 5? Or are we to bind [as Chrys., al.] the two together? In a certain sense, I believe we must thus unite them. The Apostle commands, 'Honour [by placing on the list] those who are widows indeed :' for it is these especially, they who are destitute of earthly friends, who are most likely to carry out the true religious duties of a widow. Thus, without the two qualifications being actually united, the former is insisted on as ordinarily ensuring the lat-4.] The case of the $\chi h \rho a$ who ter. is not ovrws xhpa, having earthly relations answerable for her support. έκγονα] τέκνα τέκνων, Hesych.; grandchildren: not as E. V. 'nephews;' at least, not in its present sense. μανθανέτωσαν] What is the subject? (1) The ancient its present sense. Commentators mostly understand al xipai, implied in τ is $\chi \eta \rho a$: so vulg. (discat : also D-lat, 2 eursives have μανθανέτω), Chr. (see below), Thdrt., Œc., Jer., Pel., Ambr., Luth., Calv., Grot., Calov., Huther, al. (2) But some of the ancients took $\tau \dot{a} \tau \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \nu a$ ή ἕκγονα as the subject : e. g. Œc. 2, Thl., and so Beza, Wolf, Mosh., Wegscheid.: Heydenr., Flatt, Mack, De W., Wiesinger, Ellicott. There is much to be said for both views; and as we advance, we shall give the interpretations on both hypotheses, (1) and (2). πρώτον] Either, 'first of all duties,' which seems supported by ver. 8 below; or first, before applying to the church for sustenance. These meanings will apply to both the above alternatives: whether we understand the subject to be the widows, or the children and grandchildren. τόν ίδιον αίκον εύ- $\sigma \in \beta \in v$] On hypothesis (1), — to behave piously towards, i.e. to rule religiously (Luth.; so vulg.), their own household. This seems somewhat to force evoe Beiv, see below; while the sense of the idea olkov is thus the simple and usual one, as the widow in question would be the head of the household. On hypothesis (2), to behave piously towards, i.e. to honour with the honour which God commands, their own family, i.e. the widowed mother or grandmother who is one of their own family. This sense of εὐσεβής, εὐσέβεια, and $\epsilon v \sigma \epsilon \beta \epsilon \omega$, is common enough (see especially Palm and Rost's Lex.): the reference being generally (not always, it is true) to superiors,—those who demand $\sigma \epsilon \beta \alpha s$, those who stand in the place of God. but not therefore to be rejected. To dishonour their widowed mother or grandmother, would be to dishouour their own family, in that one of its members who most required respect. καὶ ἀμοιβὰς άποδιδόναι τοις προγόνοις] On hypothesis (1), as Chrys., απηλθον εκείνοι ούκ ήδυνήθης αὐτοῖς ἀποδοῦναι τὴν ἀμοιβήν• ού γάρ δή και αύτή έγέννησας έκείνους, ούδε ανέθρεψας. εν τοις εκγόνοις αυτού άμείβου· ἀποδίδου τὸ ὀφείλημα διὰ τῶν $\pi_{ai\delta\hat{\omega}\nu}$. But surely it is a very strange way of requiting one's progenitors for their care of us, to be kind towards our own children: and besides, what would this have to do with the question, whether or not the widow was to be put on the charity roll of the church ? But on hypothesis (2), this sentence certainly becomes more clear and natural. Let them, the children or grandchildren, learn first to be piously grateful to (these members of) their own families, and to give back returns (a return in each case) to their progenitors (so called, although living, because, the mother and grandmother having been both mentioned, $\pi \rho \delta \gamma \rho \nu \rho \iota$ was the only word which would include them in one category).

Mack is certainly wrong in, regarding oixeio: (without $\tau \hat{\eta} s \pi (\sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s)$ as meaning those connected by the faith. The omission of the article (see var. readd.) would make the two belong to one and the same class. oi $\pi \rho ovoit$, viz. in the way noted above, —of support and sustenance. την πίστιν ήρνηται] 'fides enim non tollit officia naturalia, sed perficit et firmat.' Bengel. The Roman-Catholic Commentator Mack has some good remarks here, on the faith of which the Apostle speaks : "Faith, in the sense of the Apostle, cannot exist, without including love: for the subject-matter of faith is not mere opinion, but the grace and truth of God, to which he that believes gives up his spirit, as he that loves gives up his heart : the subject-matter of faith is also the object of love. Where therefore Love is not, nor works, there is not, nor works, Faith either: so that he who fulfils not the offices of love towards his relatives, is virtually an unbeliever."

 $\dot{a}\pi i\sigma \tau \sigma v \chi \epsilon i\rho \omega v$] For even among heathens the common duties of family picty are recognized: if therefore a Christian repudiates them, he lowers himself beneath the heathen. Cf. Matt. v. 46, 47. Also, as Calv. suggests in addition, the Christian who lives in the light of the Gospel, has less excuse for breaking those laws of nature which even without the Gospel are recognized by men. According to hypothesis (1) or (2) above, this general statement applies to the widows or to their children and grandchildren: not, as Matthies, to their mutual relations, about which the context contains no hint. But surely it would be very harsh to understand it of the widows: and this forms an additional argument for hypothesis (2).

9-16. Further regulations re-9.] İs χήρα subspecting widows. ject or predicate ? 'let a widow καταλεγέσθω,' or 'let a woman καταλεγέσθω $\chi \eta \rho a$?' I own, from the arrangement of the words, I am inclined to believe the latter to be the case. The verb $\kappa a \tau a \lambda \epsilon \gamma \dot{\epsilon}$. $\sigma\theta\omega$ introduces the new particular. Had $\chi \eta \rho a$ then been the subject, the verb, having the emphasis, must have preceded. As it is, $\chi \eta \rho a$ has the emphasis, as it would have, were it the predicate, spoken of those of whom the katáloyos consisted. I render therefore,-Let a woman be inserted in the catalogue as a widow. But now, for what purpose? ката-Néveuv is to enrol on a list or roll: so Aristoph. Acharn. 1029 : orav στρατιώτας καταλέγωσι . . .,—Lysistr., δ δè Δημόστρατος | έλεγεν δπλίτας καταλέγειν Ζα-κυνθίων: Xen. Rep. But what catalogue are we to understand ? [In replying to this question I agree in the main with De Wette, from whose note the substance of the following remarks is adopted.] Hardly, (1) that of those who are to receive relief from the Church (so Chrys. h. l., Thdrt., Œc., Thl., Jer., Erasm., Calv., Est., Wolf, Neand., al.): for thus the rule, that she is to be sixty years of age, would seem a harsh oue, as many widows might be destitute at a far earlier age: as also the rule that she must not have been twice married, especially as the Apostle himself below commands second marriage for the younger widows. Again, the duties enjoined in ver. 10 presuppose some degree of competence, and thus, on this hypothesis, the widows of the poorer classes would be excluded from sustenance by charity,-who most of all others would require it. Also, for the reason alleged in ver. 11, sustenance can hardly be in question - for then the re-marrying would simply take them off the roll, and thus be rather a benefit, than a detriment to the Church. Nor again (2) can we understand the roll to be that of the deaconesses, as Pelag., Beza, Schleierm., Mack, al.: although the Theodosian code, founded on this interpretation, ordained "nulla nisi emensis LX annis secundum præceptum Apostoli ad Diaconissarum consortium transferatur," xvi. 2. 27 (De W.). For a) the age mentioned is unfit for the work of the deaconesses' office, and in the council of Chalcedon the age of the deaconesses was fixed at 40: b) not only widows but virgins were elected deaconesses (Balsamon, ad Can. xix. cone. Niceni, $\pi a \rho \theta \epsilon$ νοι τεσσαρακονταετούς ήλικίας γενόμεναι, ήξιοῦντο καὶ χειροτονίας διακονισσῶν εύρισκόμεναι πάντως äEiai. Suicer, i. 865): (3) it is implied in ver. 12, that these widows were bound not to marry again, which was not the case with the deaconcesses. It seems therefore better to understand here some especial band of widows, sustained perhaps at the expense of the church, but not the only ones who were thus supported :--set apart for ecclesiastical duties, and bound to the service of God. Such are understood here by Chrys. himself in his homily on the passage [311 in div. N. T. loc. 3, vol. iii. p. 523, Migne], - καθάπερ είσλ παρθένων χοροί, ούτω και χηρών το παλαιόν ήσαν χοροί, και ούκ έξην αύταις άπλως eis τὰς χήρας ἐγγράφεσθαι. οὐ περί έκείνης οῦν λέγει τῆς ἐν πενία ζώσης καί δεομένης βοηθείας, άλλα περί ταύτης της έλομένης χηρείαν. They are also mentioned as τάγμα χηρών, το χηρικόν, πρεσβ'' τιδεs, προκαθήμεναι: i. e. such widowsas corresponded in office for their own sex in some measure to the presbyters,-sat unveiled in the assemblies in a separate place, by the presbyters, and had a kind of supervision over their own sex, especially over the widows and orphans : were vowed to perpetual widowhood, clad with a 'vestis vidualis,' and ordained by laying on of hands. This institution of the early church, which was abolished by the cleventh canon of the council of Laodicea (in the translation of Dionys. Exiguus,--' mulieres quæ apud Græcos presbyteræ appellantur, apud nos autem viduæ seniores, univiræ, et matriculariæ nominantur, in ecclesia tanquam ordinatas constitui non debere'), is sufficiently affirmed by Chrys. l. c. Epiphan. hær. lxxix. 4, vol. ii. [Migne], p. 1060 f., and long before by Tert. de veland. virg. 9, vol. ii. p. 902: 'ad quam sedem [viduarum] præter annos LX non tantum univiræ, i. e. nuptæ aliquando, eliguntur, sed et matres et quidem educatrices filiorum.' De W. iunagines he finds also a trace of it in Herm. Pastor, i. vision 2. 4, p. 900: 'καl Γραπτή μέν ('Grapte diaconissa fuisse videtur.' Hefele, not.) νουθετήσει τὰς χήρας και τοὺς ὀρφανούς: and in Lucian de morte peregrini, Opp. iii. 335 Reig., - ἕωθεν μέν εὐθὑς ήν όρậν παρὰ τῷ δεσμωτηρίω περιμένοντα γραι-δία, χήρας τινὰς καὶ παιδία ὀρφανά. Ης also refers to the dissertation of Mosheim on this place, in which he has thoroughly gone into all the bearings of the subject and maintained the above view. So also Grot., Fritzsch., and Michaelis : so Wiesinger,—and in a somewhat modified shape, Huther, repudiating the idea of formal ordination and setting apart of widows so early as the apostolic age. In this he is probably right. Dc W. makes the allusion to this 'institute of widows' one proof of the post apostolic date of the Epistle : but on this see Prolegg. ch. vii. § i. 27. Let a woman be enrolled a widow, who is not less than sixty years old $(\gamma \epsilon \gamma \sigma \nu \sigma \tilde{a})$ is joined by the vulg. ['quæ fuerit unius viri uxor'], Jer., Luth., Calv., Beza, Grot., Mack, al., to the next clause : but against this is usage [ύτε εγένετο ετών δώδεκα, Luke ii. 42: cf. also Plat. Legg. vi. p. 765, έτων μέν γεγονώς μή έλαττον ή πεντήκοντα and see other examples in Wetst.], and the fact that mias yuvainds άνδρα stands alone in ch. iii. 2. Besides, if it belonged to the next clause, it would have in it any place but the first), the wife of one husband (cf. ch. iii. 2. Here, as contemporaneous polygamy is out of the question, and thus one element of difficulty in the other ease is climinated, we can hardly understand any thing other than that the $\pi\rho\epsilon\sigma\beta\dot{\nu}\tau$ is should have been the wife of only one hushand : i. e., not Still this latter, considering that έξενοδόχησεν is the next good work specified, seems most probable : and so, but for the most part combining it with the other, Beng., De W., Huther, Wiesinger, al. Grot. understands it, 'si nec abortum sibi fecerit, nec ob paupertatem exposuerit liberos . . . , sed omnes sibi natos educaverit, et quidem honeste ac pie :' Calv.,-'non sterilitatem hic damnari a Paulo, sed matrum delicias, quæ sobolis alendæ tædia devorare recusant'), if she (at any time) received strangers (practised hospitality. This clearly points out a person above the rank of the poor and indigent : though Chrys. pithily replies, $\kappa a \nu \pi \epsilon \nu \eta s \eta$, olkiav έχει. οὐ γὰρ δη αἴθριος μένει. One is glad to hear that all the Christian widows at Constantinople were so well off. But it can hardly have been so in the apostolic age. Of the later vows of celibacy, and ascetic views with regard to second marriages, there is no trace : see below. Calv. [al.] interprets την πρώτην πίστιν ήθέτηoav of falling away from the faith,-'quia a fide baptismi et Christianismo prorsus deficiant,' and defends this view against that given above, calling it ' nimis frigidum :' but as it seems to me quite unsuccessfully. He expresses well, however, the difference between this addiction to single life and the later compulsory yows: ' non ideo cœlibes se fore promittebant olim viduæ, ut sanctius agerent vitam quam in conjugio: sed quod non poterant marito et ccclesiæ simul esse addictæ:'-see the 13.] Moreover rest of his note). they also learn to be idle (so Syr., Chr., Thl., Beza, Huther, Winer, Ellie. ["It is needless to say that Winer does not conceive 'an ellipsis of ologat for elval' Bloomf.,-a mistake of which such a scholar could not be capable." Ellic. edn. 1] al.;-a harsh construction, but, it is said. not without example : however, the only one cited is from Plat, Euthyd. p. 276 b: oi à $\mu a \theta \epsilon i s$ ăpa $\sigma o \phi o l \mu a \nu \theta a \nu v \sigma v$, where the word sopol does not occur in Bekker's text, and seems on critical grounds very suspicious. Still, I conceive that the present sentence will admit of no other construction, on account of the emphatic position of apyai, which is further heightened by ou µόνον δε ἀργαί below. De W. objects to it, that idleness is the cause, not the effect, of going about, &c.: but it may well be answered, that not only does a spirit of idleness give rise to such going about, but such going about confirms the habit of idleness. Bengel would lay the stress on μανθάνουσιν-' reprehenditur discendi genus : sequiturque species, -discunt, quæ domos obeundo discuntur, i. e. statum familiarum euriose explorant. But $\mu a \nu \theta$. does not seem to bear this meaning. The usual interpretation has been to take περιερχ. as an infin., 'learn to go about :' so vulg., Luth., &c. : but the objection to this is, that $\mu a \nu \theta a \nu \omega$ with a participle always means to be aware of, take notice of, the act implied in the verb : e.g. διαβεβλημένος ύπο 'Αμάσιος où µavbaveis, Herod. iii. 1) going about

We may generally state that $\theta \in \lambda \omega$ is the resting inclination of the will, $\beta o_i \lambda o_\mu a_i$ its active exertion) then (" $o_{\bar{\nu}}$ has here its proper collective force, 'in consequence of these things being so, I desire.'" Mack]: for it is not younger widows who have been taken into the catalogue of $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \upsilon \tau \iota \delta \epsilon s$ of whom he is speaking, but younger widows in general : Chrys.'s interpretation would make the Apostle contradict himself. The $o\partial \nu$ on which Mack lays stress as favouring this meaning, simply infers from the temptations of young widows just described. There is no inconsistency here with the view expressed in 1 Cor. vii. 39, 40: the time and circumstances were different), bear children, govern households (i. e. in their place, and with their share of the duties : olkoupeiv, as Chrys. Both these verbs belong to later Greek: cf. Lobeck on Phryn., p. 373), give no occasion (starting-point, in their behaviour or language) to the adversary (who is meant? Chrys. and the ancients for the most part understand, the devil [µ) Bourduevos tov διάβολον ἀφορμήν λαμβάνειν]: and so, lately, Huther, defending it by his interpretation of λοιδορίas χάριν [see below]. But St. Paul's own usage of αντικείμενοs [reff., see also Tit. ii. 8] is our best guide. Ordinarily using it of human adversaries, he surely would here have mentioned & diá-Bolos, had he intended him. And the understanding him to be here meant brings in the next verse very awkwardly, as he there has an entirely new part assigned him. Understand therefore, any adversary, Jew or Gentile, who may be on the watch to get occasion, by the lax conduct of the believers, to slander the Church) for the sake of reproach (to be joined with άφορμήν: the άφορμή, when taken advantage of by the adversary, would be used λοιδορίαs χάριν, for the sake and purpose of reproaching the people of God. disgrace brought on the church by the fall of the widows) ;- for already ('particula provocat ad experientiam,' Beng.) some (widows) have been (we are obliged here to give a perfect rendering in English. Our language will not, as the habit of mixed constructions in the Greek permits, bear the placing an indefinite past event in a definite portion of time such as ήδη expresses) turned away (out of the right path, ref.) after (so as to follow) Satan ('eoque occasionem dedere calumniæ,' Beng. When De W. doubts whether St. Paul's experience could have been long enough to bear out such an assertionand thus impugns the genuineness of the Epistle,-this is very much a matter of dates : and even taking the earliest commonly assigned, the assertion might be strictly true, applying as it does not only to Ephesus, but to the far wider range of his apostolic ministry). 16. Not a repetition of vv. 4, 8, but an extension of the same duty to more distant relatives than those there spoken of. If any believing [man or] woman has widows (in [his or] her family-dependent in any degree, however distant-e.g. as sister, or sister-in-law, aunt, niece, cousin, &c.), let such person relieve them (see above, ver. 10), and let the church not be burdened (with their support: "later and less correct form for Bapuveuv;" see Ellic.), that it may relieve those who are widows in reality (really $\chi \hat{\eta} \rho a = destitute$ of help).

17.] Let the presbyters who well preside (not, us in some former editions, have well presided: the perf. of $l \sigma \tau \eta \mu$ has the present signification throughout. I owe the correction of this inadvertence to Bishop Ellicott. Preside, viz. over their portion of the Church's work. Chrys. has well expressed the meaning, but not all the meaning; for wisdom and ability must be taken also into account: $-\tau i \ \delta \epsilon \ \epsilon \sigma \tau i$, καλώς προεστώτας; ἀκούσωμεν τοῦ χριστοῦ λέγοντος δ ποιμήν δ καλός την ψυχήν αύτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπέρ τῶν προβάτων. ἄρα τοῦτό ἐστι καλῶς προεστάναι, μηδενὸς φείδεσθαι της έκείνων κηδεμονίας ἕνεκα), be held worthy of double (not, as compared with the widows, as Chr.,-[alt. l: διπλής τής πρός τὰς χήρας, ή τής πρός τούς διακόνους, ή άπλως διπλής τιμής, $\pi_{0\lambda}\lambda_{\eta}s$ $\lambda\epsilon_{\gamma\epsilon_{1}}$, Thl. [2],—the poor, as Flatt, &c.—but as compared with those who have not distinguished themselves by καλώς προεστάval; and evidently, as Chrys. 3, it is not to be taken in the mere literal sense of double, but implies increase generallysee reff., and below) honour (so Plat. Legg. v. p. 378 D, Thus use of ral d μηδέν αδικών ό δέ μηδ' έπιτρέπων τοις άδικοῦσιν ἀδικεῖν πλέον ἡ διπλασίας TILIN'S alios excluor : and see other examples in Wetstein. From the general tenor of those, as well as from the context here, it is evident that not merely honour, but recompense is here in question: but the word need not be confined to that meaning : honour, and honour's fruit, may be both included in it. Grot. conceives an allusion to the double portion of the firstborn [Deut. xxi, 17]: Elsner, to the double share of provision which used to be set before the presbyters in the Agapæ [Heydr., Baur : cf. Constt.-apost. as above]. But as De W. remarks, that practice was much more probably owing to a misunder-standing of this passage): especially those that labour in (the) word and teaching (therefore the preaching of the word, and teaching, was not the office of all the πρεσβύτεροι. Conyb. rightly remarks, that this is a proof of the early date of the Epistle. Of these two expressions, Xóyos would more properly express preaching; διδασκαλία, the work of instruction, by catechetical or other means). 18.] Ground for the above injunction. See the first citation ('an [or 'the,' an anarthrous emphatic word] ox while treading,' &c., not, 'the ox that treadeth,' &c., as E. V.) treated by the Apostle at more length, 1 Cor. ix. 9. It is doubted whether the words agios o epyar. K.T.A. are a citation at all. Some have referred them to Levit. xix. 13: Deut. xxiv. 14, which passages however say nothing of the kind, being special directions about paying a labourer's wages before night. Thdrt. and Thl. suppose it to be quoted from the New Testament ; i. c. from our Lord's saying, reff. Matt., Luke. But it is very unlikely that the Apostle should cite these under the title of $\dot{\eta} \gamma \rho a \phi \eta$: and Calvin's view secms most probable, that he adduces the sentiment, as our Lord Himself docs, as a popular and well-known saying (so Wolf and Huther). This verse it is which makes it extremely probable, that $\tau_{i\mu\eta}$ above refers to the honorarium of pecuniary recompense. 19.] Sce the summary above. Against a presbyter (Chrys., Thl., are certainly wrong in supposing that age, not office is again here indicated: the whole passage is of presbyters by office-cf. ver. 22 below) entertain not an accusation, except (reff. pleonastic expressions such as entros el µή, $\chi \omega \rho ls \epsilon i \text{ or } \epsilon i \mu \eta$, are found in later writers, such as Plutarch, Dio Cassius, &c.: we have $\pi \lambda \eta \nu \in \mu \eta$ in Demosth. 141. 21, 719. 1 : Aristot. de Anim. i. 5. 9, al. Sec Lobeck on Phrynichus, p. 459) before (lit. in presence of; and perhaps we ought to press the meaning : but from the occurrence of $\epsilon \pi$ στόματος δύο μαρτ. κ.τ.λ. in ref. Deut., it is more likely figurative, 'in the presence of,' signifying merely 'vorhandensenn,' their presence in the case) two or three witnesses (De W. asks, -but were not these required in every case, not only in that of a presbyter? Three answers are given : one by Chrys. Γτό δε επί άλλων, φησί, μάλιστα δε κατά πρεσβυτέρου], Thdrt. [συμβαίνει γάρ έκκλησίας αὐτῶν προστασίαν πεπιστευμένον καί λυπήσαι τών άμαρτανόντων τινάς, είτα έντεύθεν έκείνους δεομένως διατεθέντας συκοφαντίαν ύφηναι. δεί τοίνυν άπαντησαι των μαρτύρων τον αριθμόν], and so Calvin at more length : the other by Huther, that Timotheus was not constituted judge in private men's matters, only over the officers of the church in faults with which they might be charged as regarded the execution of their duty : a third by Bengel,--- ' privatus poterat, lege Mosis, citari uno teste, non condemnari: presbyterum ne eitari quidem Paulus jubet, &c.' But this is manifestly a distinction without point - the κατηγορίαν παραδέ- $\chi \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$ being used not of mere eitation, but of entertaining the charge as a valid one: in other words, as including citation and conviction as well. So nearly Grotius, but bringing out a different distinction, which is manifestly here not in question-'poterat ad unius testis dictum vir plebeius capi aut contra eum inquisitio incipi: non ita autem contra Senatorem, cui æquiparatur Presbyter.' The first reason seems the more probable: that he is only recalling the attention of Timotheus to a known and prescribed precaution, which was in this case especially to be always observed. Somewhat otherwise Ellicott : see his note). 20.] [But] those who are doing wrong (if $\delta \epsilon$ is read, these are the sinning presbyters, and cannot well be any others. Without the particle, the application may be doubted. De W., Wiesinger, and Ellic., following a few others [Arct., Heinr., Matthies, al.], maintain the general reference. So appears Chrys. to have done, understanding $\pi\rho\epsilon\sigma\beta$. merely of age, and going on without any further remark, and so [ap-parently] Thdrt. But, even thus, the other view is the more likely, from the strong language used in ver. 21, and the return again to the subject in ver. 22; and so most Commentators. The pres. part. is no argument against it (against De W. and Wiesinger): 'those who are

Had it not been for ecclesiastical considerations, we should never have heard of such a limited meaning for $\epsilon v \omega \pi i o v$ $\pi \dot{a} \nu \tau \omega \nu$), that the rest also (not, the other presbyters, which would have certainly been pointed out if intended,-but in its usual sense of 'the rest,' generally : the kai seems to make this even plainer: that the warning may not be confined to a few, but may also spread over the whole church) may have fear (see Deut. xiii. 11: fear, on seeing the public disgrace consequent on sin. exwow, as above, ver. 12).

21.] I adjure thee (see reff., especially 2 Tim. iv. 1) in the presence of God, and of Christ Jesus (on the supposed reference to one Person only, see Ellie.'s note); and of the elect angels (the holy angels, who are the chosen attendants and ministers of God. Thus ekkektwv is an epithet distributed over the whole extent of ἀγγέλων, not one designating any one elass of angels above the rest, as De W. Bengel says rightly, ekaentav, " epitheton, Timothei reverentiam acuens :- the an-gels, God's chosen ministers." Various meanings have been proposed : good angels as distinguished from bad (so Thl., Ambr., Grot., Est., Wolf, al.), - but of άγγελοι without any such designation, are ever good angels :- the guardian angels of Timotheus and the Ephesian church (Mosheim): 'those especially selected by VOL. III.

God as His messengers to the human race, as Gabriel' (Conyb.), - which, if we suppose these to be any particular class of angels, would be the best; but I doubt έκλεκτός, absolute, ever bearing this meaning, and much prefer that upheld above. Calvin says: "electos vocat angelos non tantum ut a reprobis discernat, sed excellentiæ cansa, ut plus reverentiæ habeat eorum testimonium." There is a parallel form of adjuration in Jos. B. J. ii. 16. 4, where Agrippa is endeavouring to persuade the Jews to remain in the Roman allegiance: μαρτύρομαι δ' έγω ύμων τα άγια καί τοὺς ἰεροὺς ἀγγέλους τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ πατρίδα την κοινήν. Schleiermacher thinks this mention of one class of angels as 'elect,' inconsistent with the Apostle's warning against genealogies and idle questions : but with the above interpretation such objection falls to the ground. Baur would explain the expression by the gnostic notion of angels more immediately connected with our Lord, alluded to by Irenæus, i. 4. 5, p. 21, οἱ ήλικιῶται αὐτοῦ ἄγyelou: see ib. 7. 1, p. 32. But Irenaus' text is μετά τῶν ἡλικιωτῶν αὐτοῦ τῶν ἀγγέλων, which hardly justifies the interpretation : and if it did, the whole lies too far off the matter in our text, to be brought to bear upon it), that thou keep these things (viz. the injunctions, vv. 19, 20. Dc W., taking ver. 20 generally, is obliged, although he confesses that the connexion with ver. 19 would be best if only vv. 19, 21 came together, to explain TauTa of ver. 20 only, see below) without prejudice ('præ-judicium'-previous condemnation before hearing a man's case: a word only found here), doing nothing according to par-tiality (bias towards, as the other was bias against, an accused presbyter. The reference is primarily to presbyters : of course extending also in its spirit to all other church offices. This reference, which is maintained by Chrys., Thdrt., Thl., Grot., Est., Flatt, Mack, al., is de-nied by De W., Wiesinger, and Huther: the two former (as also Hammond, Ellie.) understanding the command of receiving back into the church excommunicated persons, or hereties, which from later testimonies (Cypr., the Nicene council, &c.) they shew to have been the practice : Huther, rightly rejecting this idea, yet interprets it of laying on of hands as mercly conveying ecclesiastical blessing on many various occasions. But surely this is too vague and unimportant for the solemn language here used. Regarding the whole, to v. 25, as connected, and belonging to one subject, I cannot accept any interpretation but the obvious and ordinary one: see especially ch. iv. 14: 2 Tim. i. 6.

Lay hands hastily on no one, nor be partaker in other men's sins (as he would do by being the means of negligently adiniting into the ministry unfit and ungodly persons, being properly held responsible for the consequence of those bad habits of theirs which more care might have ascertained. aµaprías points to the former auaptavovtas) : - keep THYSELF (highly emphatic : not merely others over whom thou art called to preside and pronounce judgment in admitting them to the ministry. And the emphasis is peculiarly in place here, as applying to that which has just preceded. If he were to admit improper candidates to the ministry from bias or from negligence, his own character, by his becoming a partaker in their sins, would suffer: whatever thou doest therefore, be sure to maintain, by watchful care and caution, thyself above all stain of blame) pure (not here to be referred to personal purity and chastity, though that of course would be the most important of all elements in carrying out the precept : but as above. On the word, No longer (habitually) drink see Ellic.). water, but use a little winc, on account of thy stomach, and thy frequent illnesses (the question, why this injunction is here inserted, has never been satisfactorily answered. Est., Grot., al., De W., Ellic., al., take it as a modification of $\sigma \epsilon a \nu \tau \delta \nu$ άγνον τήρει, so as to prevent it from being misunderstood as enjoining asceticism. But on our explanation of the words, and I may add on any worthy view of the context, such a connexion will at once be repudiated. Chrys. has caught the right clue, when he says bokei be poi καί άλλως επίνοσος είναι. και τοῦτο δείκνυσι λέγων, διὰ τὰς πυκνάς σου ἀσθενείας, από τε τοῦ στομάχου, από τε τῶν άλλων μερών: but he has not followed it up. Timotheus was certainly of a feeble bodily frame, and this feebleness appears, from other hints which we have respecting him, to have affected his character. See especially 1 Cor. xvi. 10, 11, and note therc. Is it not very possible, that such feebleness, and perhaps timidity, may have influenced him as an overseer of the church, and prevented that keen-sighted judgment and vigorous action which a bishop should ever shew in estimating the characters of those who are candidates for the ministry? If this was so, then it is quite natural that in advising him on this point, St. Paul should throw in a hint, in fatherly kindness, that he must not allow these maladies to interfere with the efficient discharge of his high office, but take all reasonable means of raising his bodily

I feel compelled to adopt this view, from the close connexion of the next verse with the whole preceding passage, and the exceedingly unnatural isolation of this, unless it bears It is impossible to such a reference. avoid remarking, that the characteristic, but unnecessary anxiety of Ellicott to rescue the apostolic Timotheus from any imputation of feebleness of character, has blinded him to the delicate connexion of thoughts here, as frequently in the second 24. The same subject con-Epistle). tinued : τον περί της χειροτονίας άναλαμ-Bave Noyov. Thart. If my view of the last verse is correct, the connexion will be found in the fact, that the conservation of himself in health and vigour would ensure his being able to deal ably aud firmly with the cases which should come before him for decision. To guide him still further in this, the Apostle subjoins this remark, indicating two classes of characters with which he would have to deal in judging, whether favourably or unfavourably. Of some men the sins (connects with auaptlais allotplais, ver. 22) are evident (there does not seem to be any relation of time in πρόδηλοι, 'manifest beforehand,'-for thus the meaning would be, as in πρόδηλος πότμος, κίν- $\delta u \nu o s$, &c., that the sins were manifest before they were committed, which would reduce this case to the other [see below]: but the $\pi \rho o$ - seems rather of place than of time, $-\pi\rho\delta \tau \tilde{\omega}\nu \ \delta\phi\theta a\lambda\mu\tilde{\omega}\nu$, —openly manifest,-notorious by common report), going before them (so that the man's bad report comes to the person appointed to judge, before the man himself: not transitive, as Heinrichs,-- ' peccata in judicium cos vocant') to judgment (i. c. so that ' when they come before thee to be judged of as candidates, their sins have arrived before them): but some men again they (their sins) follow (i. c. after-proof brings judgment. Their characters come before thee unanticipated by adverse rumour: but thou mayest by examination discover those flaws in their conduct which had been skilfully concealed - the sins which, so to speak, follow at their heels. Therefore be watchful, and do not let the mere non-existence of previous adverse rumour lead thee always to presume fitness for the sacred office). 25.] So also (in like manner on the other side of men's conduct) the good works (of some) are openly manifest: and those which are otherwise situated (which are not $\pi \rho \delta \delta \eta \lambda a$) cannot be hidden (will come out, just as the sins in ver. 24, on examination. The tendency of this verse is to warn him against hasty condemnation, as the former had done against hasty approval. Sometimes thou wilt find a man's good character go before him, and at once approve him to thee : but where this is not so, do not therefore be rash to condemnthou mayest on examination soon discover, if there really be any good decds accompanying him: for they are things which cannot be hidden-the good tree like the bad will be known by his fruits, and that speedily, on enquiry). I have abstained from detailing all the varieties of interpretation of these verses, following as they do those already specified on verses 20-22. They may be seen shortly enumerated in De W. and Ellicott, and commented on at somewhat tedious length in Wiesinger. Chrys., al., confuse the context by understanding kplois of eternal judgment, and the sentiment as equivalent to $\epsilon \kappa \epsilon i \pi a \nu \tau a$ γυμνά έστιν. And so even Ellicott, who in objecting to the above interpretation (which is also Dr. Wordsworth's) charges it somewhat naïvely with failure in explaining the context. That it only does explain it satisfactorily, is, in my view, the decisive consideration in its favour.

CII. VI.] The Apostle's exhortations are continued, and pass from ecclesiastical to civil relations : and first to the duties of Christian slaves. This chapter has been charged (Schleierm., al.) with want of co-herence. But to a careful observer the thread of connexion is very plain. I have endeavoured to indicate it as we pass on. Such a thread being detected, the idea of Schleierm. (partly approved by De W.) of its being a clumsy compilation out of the Epistles to Titus and 2 Tim. hardly re-1.] Let as many quires refutation. as are slaves under the yoke (I have adopted the rendering of De W. and Huther, attaching δούλοι to the predicate, as the simpler construction. The other, 'as many slaves as are under the yoke, making υπό ζυγόν emphatic as distinguishing either 1) those treated hardly, or 2) those who were under unbelieving masters, has undoubtedly something to be said for it, but does not seem to me so likely, from the arrangement of the words. Had $\delta \pi \delta$ Suydu been intended to bring out any distinction, it would have more naturally preceded $\epsilon i \sigma i \nu$. I take then $\dot{\nu} \pi \delta \zeta \nu \gamma \delta \nu \delta \delta \hat{\nu} \lambda \sigma i$ as the predicate : ' bondsmen under yokc') hold their own (idious, as in Eph. v. 22, al., to bring out and emphasize the relation; see note there) masters worthy of all (fitting) honour, that the name of God and his doctrine (cf. Tit. ii. 10, where, writing on the same subject, he admonishes slaves Ίνα την διδασκαλίαν την του σωτήρος ήμων θεού κοσμώσιν έν πασιν. Hence it would appear that the article here is possessive, and ή διδασκ. corresponding to to broma) be not spoken evil of (Chrys. gives the sense well : ό απιστος αν μέν ίδη τούς δούλους διά την πίστιν αυθάδως προφερομένους, βλασφημήσει πολλάκις ώς στάσιν έμποιοῦν τὸ δόγμα όταν δε ίδη πειθομένους, μαλλον πεισθήσεται, μάλλον προςέξει τοις λεγοµévois. This verse obviously applies only to those slaves who had unbelieving masters. This is brought out by the reason given, and by the contrast in the next verse, not by any formal opposition in terms. The account to be given of the absence of such opposition is, that this verse contains the general exhortation, the case of Christian slaves under unbelieving masters being by far the most common. The exception is treated in the next verse).

2.] But (see above) let those who have believing masters not despise them because (belongs to Karappovelrwoav only, containing the ground of their contempt,not to the exhortation $\mu \dot{\eta} \kappa a \tau a \phi \rho o \nu \epsilon (\tau \omega \cdot$ $\sigma a \nu$) they (the masters, not the slaves) are brethren, but all the more serve them (µâllov has the emphatic position : cf. Eph. v. 11, where it merely signifies 'rather,' and the verb has the emphasis, μάλλον δέ και έλέγχετε. Cf. also Hom. Od. ο. 369, φίλει δέ με κηρόθι μαλλον: 🜩 and in the same sense in µannov, Herod. i. 94,— ἐπεί τε δὲ οὐκ ἀνιέναι τὸ κακόν, άλλ' έπὶ μᾶλλον έτι βιάζεσθαι, iii. 104; iv. 181. "The slaves who were under heathen masters were positively to regard their masters as deserving of honour ; -the slaves under Christian masters were, negatively, not to evince any want of respect. The former were not to regard their masters as their inferiors, and to be insubordinate ; the latter were not to think them their equals, and to be disrespectful." Ellicott), because those who receive (mutually receive : the interchange of service between them in the Christian life being taken for granted, and this word purposely used to express it. So Eur. έσθίων πλειόνων ήδονῶν ἀμτιλήψεται. On other senses, see below) the benefit (of their μάλλον δουλεύειν. There is an apt and interesting passage in Seneca, de beneficiis, iii. 18 : 'Quæritur a quibusdam, an beneficium dare servus domino possit ?' This question he answers in the affirmative : 'servos qui negat dare aliquando domino beneficium, ignarus est juris humani : refert enim, cujus animi sit qui præstat, non cujus status:' and at some length explains when, and how, such benefits can be said to be bestowed. The passage is remarkable, as constituting perhaps one of those curious indications of community of thought between the Apostle and the philosopher which could hardly have been altogether fortuitous. For instance, when Seneca proceeds thus, "Quidquid est quod servilis officii formulam excedit, quod non ex imperio sed ex voluntate præstatur, benchicium est," we can hardly forbear connecting the unusual sense here of εψεργεσία after the μάλλον δουλευέτω- $\sigma a\nu$, with the moralist's discussion) are faithful and beloved. Very various meanings and references have been assigned to these last words. Chrys., Thl., Grot., Kypke, al., interpret everyerias of the kindness of the master to the slave ("quia fideles sunt et dilecti qui beneficii participes sunt [vulg.] : primum, quia fide in Deum sunt præditi : deinde diligendi eo nomine quod curam gerant, ut vobis benefaciant : id est ut vos vestiant, pascant, ab injuriis protegant." Grot.). On the other hand, Ambr. (?), Lomb., Th.-Aq., Calv., Beza, Bengel, al., understand it of God's grace in redemption. But thus, if we make of $\tau \eta s \in \partial \epsilon \rho \gamma$. $d \nu \tau i \lambda$. the subject, as by the article it must be, the sentence will express nothing but a truism : if we escape from this by turning those words into the predi-cate (as E. V., "because they are faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit"), we are violating the simplest rules of grammar. These things (viz. those immediately pre-eeding, relating to slaves) teach and exhort. 3-5.] Designation of those who oppose such wholesome teachingfervid indeed, and going further (see Prolegg.) than strict adherence to the limits of the context would require, but still suggested by, and returning to the context : cf. ver. 5 fin. and note. If any man is a teacher of other ways (see on ch. i. 3: sets up as an adviser of different conduct from that which I have above recommended), and does not accede to (so a convert to the true faith was called mposhdutos: aud we have in Origen, ii. 255 [Wolf], προςιόντας τ $\hat{\varphi}$ λόγ φ in the sense of just converted, and in ib. 395, προseρχομένουs τώ $\theta\epsilon i\varphi \lambda \delta\gamma \varphi$. So also Irenæus, in two places cited by Wolf : see also Philo in refl. There was therefore no need for Bentley's conjecture, προιέχεται [see itacism in N, var. read.] or προsέχει, or προsίσχεται, though the use of these is commoner : see ch. i. 4 reff. Cf. also Ellic.'s note) wholesome words (reff.), (namely) those of our Lord Jesus Christ (either, precepts given by Him respecting this duty of subjection, such as that Matt. xxii. 21,-which however seems rather far-fetched : or words agreeing with His teaching and expressing His will, which is more probable), and to the doctrine which is according to (after the rules of) piety,-he is (the apodosis begins here, not as Mack, al., with the spurious apiorago, ver. 5) besotted with pride (see ch. iii. 6, note), knowing (being one who knows : not 'although he knows') nothing (not $o\dot{v}\delta\dot{\epsilon}v$, which would be used to express the bare fact of absolute ignorance or idiotey), but mad after (so Plat. Calv. explains it well, "contensiosas disputationes de verbis magis quam de rebus, vel, ut vulgo loquuntur, sine materia, aut subjecto" from which cometh envy, strife, evil speakings (the context of such passages as Col. iii. 8, shews that it is not blasphemy, properly so called [$\epsilon \kappa \delta \epsilon \tau \eta s$ έριδος ή κατά τοῦ θεοῦ βλασφημία τολμά- τa_i , Thdrt.], but mutual slander and rcproach which is here meant), wicked suspicions (not concerning God [περl θεοῦ & μὴ δεῖ ὑποπτεύομεν, Chrys.], but of one another: not " 'opiniones malæ,' quales Diagoræ, non esse Deum," as Grot.), incessant quarrels (dia-gives the sense of continuance; $\pi a \rho a \tau \rho_i \beta \eta$, primarily 'friction,' is found in later writers in the sense of irritating provocation, or hostile collision : so Polyb. ii. 36. 5, rà µèr our karà Καρχηδονίους και 'Ρωμαίους από τούτων ήδη των καιρών έν ύποψίαις ην πρός άλλήλους καί παρατριβαίς :- xxiii. 10. 4, διά την πρός του Φιλοποίμενα παρατριβήν: see also iv. 21. 5; xxi. 13. 5; xxiv. 3. 4. According to the other reading, $\pi a \rho \dot{a}$ would give the sense of useless, vain, perverse, and SiarpiBh would be disputation, thus giving the sense 'perverse dis-putings,' as E. V. Chrys., (Ec., Thdrt., explain our word ἀπδ μεταφορâs τῶν ψωραλέων προβάτων [\mathbf{E} c.]: and Chrys. says, καθάπερ τὰ ψωραλέα των προβάτων παρατριβόμενα νόσου και τα υγιαίνοντα έμπίπλησιν, ούτω και ούτοι οι πονηροί άνδρες) of men depraved in mind (reff.; and see Ellic. on the pyschology and construction) and destitute of the truth, who suppose that godliness is gain (lit., 'a gainful trade,' as Conyb. : see reff. :- and therefore do not teach contentment and acquicscence in God's providence, as in ver. 6: but strive to make men discontented, and persuade them to use religion as a means of worldly bettering them-6.] He then goes off, on the selves). mention of this crroncous view, to show how it really stands with the Christian as to the desirc of riches : its danger, and the mischief it has occasioned. But (although they are in error in thus thinking, there is a sense in which such an idea is true ['eleganter et non sine ironica correctione in contrarium sensum cadem verba retorquet.' Calv.], for) godliness accompanied with contentment [see above, and Phil. iv. 11] is great gain (alluding, not to the Christian's reward in the next world, as Thdrt., - την γαρ αιώνιον ήμιν πορίζει ζωήν, Erasm., Calv., al.,-but as Chrys., Thi., Ambr., al.,-the nopiouos is in the very fact of possessing piety joined with contentment, and thus being able to dispense with those things which we cannot carry away with us). 7.] Reason why this is so. all sprung from the difficulty of the shorter and original construction. The meaning appears to be, - we were appointed by God to come naked into the world, to teach us to remember that we must go naked out of it. But this sense of öre is not without difficulty. De W. cites Il. π. 35, γλαυκή δέ σε τίκτε θά-λασσα, πέτραι τ' ήλίβατοι, δτι τοι νόος έστιν απηνής, and Od. χ. 36, & κύνες, ού μ' έτ' έφάσκθ' ὑπότροπον οίκαδ' ίκέσθαι | δήμου άπο Τρώων, ὕτι μοι κατεκείρετε οίκον, in both which it has nearly the sense required, of 'seeing that.' The sentiment is found in Job i. 21, Eccl. v. 14: and in words remarkably similar, in Sencea, Ep. 102. 21, 'non licet plus ef-ferre, quan intuleris.' See other examples in Wetst.): 8.] but (contrast to the avaricious, who forget this, or knowing it do not act on it: not as Dc W., = obv, which would be a direct inference from the preceding verse) having (if we have) food (the δ_{ia} - gives the sense of 'sufficient for our continually recurring wants,'-' the needful supply of nourishment :' the plur. corresponds to the plur. Chrys.: ούχ ἁπλῶς εἶπεν, οἱ πλουτοῦντες, ἀλλ', οἱ βουλόμενοι ἐστὶ γάρ τινα καὶ χρήματα έχοντα καλώς οἰκονομεῖν καταφρονοῦντα αὐτῶν), fall (reff.) into temptation (not merely 'are lempted,' but arc involved in, cast into and among temptations; "in $\epsilon \mu \pi i \pi \tau \epsilon i \nu$ is implied the power which the $\pi\epsilon i \rho a \sigma \mu \delta s$ exercises over them." Huther) and a snare (being entangled by the temptation of getting rich as by a net), and many foolish and hurtful lusts (foolish, because no reasonable account can be given of them [see Ellic. on Gal. iii. 1]: hurtful, as inflicting injury on all a man's best interests), such as sink men (mankind, generic) into destruction and perdition (temporal and eternal, but especially the latter : see the usage in reff. of both words by St. Paul: not mere moral degradation, as De W.). 10.7 For the love of money is the (not ' a,' as Huther, Conyb., and Ellicott, after Middleton. Here in the first clause it is requisite to throw $\pi a \nu \tau \delta s$ a $\nu \delta \rho \delta s$ into emphasis : but had the arrangement been the same as that of the others, we should have read $\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\eta$ (not ή κεφ.) παντός άνδρός ό χριστός: but no one would therefore have thought of rendering 'a head') root of all evils (not, is the only root whence all evils spring : but is the root whence all [manner of] evils may and as matter of fact do arise. So that De W.'s objections to the sentiment have no force : for neither does it follow [1] that the covetous man cannot possibly retain any virtuous disposition, — nor [2] that there may not be other roots of evil besides covetousness: neither of these matters being in the Apostle's view. So Diogenes Laert. vit. Diogen. [vi. 50], την φιλαργυρίαν είπε μητρόπολιν πάντων τῶν κακῶν : and Philo de judice 3, vol. ii. p. 316, calls it δρμητήριον τών μεγίστων παρανομημάτων. See other examples in Wetst.): after which (φιλαργυρία, see below) some lusting (the method of expression, if strictly judged, is somewhat incorrect: for $\phi_i \lambda_{apyupla}$ is of itself a desire or δρεξιs, and men cannot be properly said ορέγεσθαι after it, but after its object apyupiov. Such inaccuracies are, however, often found in language, and we have examples of them in St. Paul elsewhere : e. g. έλπls βλεπομένη, Rom. viii. 24,— ξλπίδα ην καλ αύτολ ούτοι προςδέχονται, Acts xxiv. 15) wandered away from the faith (ch. i. 19; iv. 1), and pierced themselves through (not 'all round' or 'all over,' as Beza, Elsner, al. : the $\pi \epsilon \rho i$ refers to the thing pierced surrounding the instrument piercing : so περιπ. την κεφαλήν περί λόγχην, Plut.

upon (as the aim and object of the lifelong struggle; the prize to be gained: so that the second imperative is, as Winer well observes, edn. 6, § 42, not the mere result of the first, as in 'divide et impera,' but correlative with it and contemporaneous: 'strive . . . , and while doing so, endeavour to attain ') everlasting life, to which thou wast called (here apparently the image is dropped, and the realities of the Christian life spoken of. Some have supposed an allusion to the athletes being summoned by a herald : but it seems far-fetched-and indeed inaccurate: for it was to the contest, not to the prize, that they were thus summoned), and didst confess (we must not supply els $\eta \nu$ again before $\omega \mu o \lambda \delta \gamma \eta \sigma as$, with Mack, al.,-'in reference to which,'-a most unnatural construction : but regard it, with De W., as simply coupled to $\epsilon \kappa \lambda \eta \theta \eta s$) the good confession (of faith in Christ: the confession, which every servant of Christ must make, on taking upon himself His service, or professing it when called upon so to do. From the same expression in the next verse, it would seem, that the article rather represents the notoriousness of the confession, 'bonam illam confessionem,' than its defi-nite general character. 'There is some uncertainty, to what occasion the Apostle here refers; whether to the baptism of Timotheus,-so Chrys. [?], Œc., Thl. [alt.], Ambr., Grot., Beng., &c.: to his ordination as a minister,-so Wolf, al.: to his appointment over the church at Ephesus,-so Mack: to some confession made by him under persecution,-so, justifying it by what follows, respecting our Lord, Huther, al. Of these the first appears to me most probable, as giving the most general sense to ή καλή όμολογία, and applying best to the immediate consideration of alwros (wh, which is the common object of all Christians. The reference supposed by Thdrt. [#avtas #ap αύτοῦ δεξαμένους τὸ κήρυγμα μάρτυρας είχε της καλής όμολογίας], Calv., al., to Timotheus's preaching, is clearly inadmissible) before many witnesses.

13.7 I charge thee (ch. i. 3) in the presence of God whe endues all things with life (for the sense, see reff. : most probably a reference to address (why above : hardly, as De W., al., after Chrys., to the resurrection, reminding him that death for Christ's sake was not to be feared : for there is here no immediate allusion to danger, but only to the duty of personal firmness in the faith in his own religious life), and of Christ Jesus, who testified ('testari confessionem erat Domini, confiteri confessionem erat Timothei,' Bengel. See Ellicott's note) before Pontius Pilate (De W., al. [and Ellicott : see below on δμολογ.] would render it, as in the Apostles' creed, 'under Pontius Pilate .' but the immediate reference here being to His confession, it seems more natural to take the meaning, 'coram :' and so Chrys., who as a Greek, and familiar with the Creed, is a fair witness)-the good confession (viz. that whole testimony to the verity of his own Person and to the Truth, which we find in John xviii., and which doubtless formed part of the oral apostolic teaching. Those who render $\epsilon \pi i$, 'under,' understand this confession of our Lord's sufferings and death-which at least is far-fetched. There is no necessity, with Huther, to require a strict parallel between the circumstances of the confession of our Lord and that of Timotheus, nor to infer in consequence of this verse that his confession must have been one before a heathen magistrate : it is the fact of a confession having been made in both cases that is put in the foreground-and that our Lord's was made in the midst of danger and with death before him, is a powerful argument to firmness for his servant in his own confession. Another rendering of this verse is given by Mack, al. : it makes την καλην δμολογίαν governed by $\pi a \rho a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \lambda \omega$, and understands by it the same confession as in verse 12: 'I enjoin on thee,-in the presence and of Christ Jesus who bore testimony before Pontius Pilate-the good confession.' But this is quite inadmissible. For it is opposed both to the sense of $\pi a \rho a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \lambda \omega$, and to the following context, in which $\dot{\eta} \epsilon \nu$ τολή, not ή καλή δμολογία, is the thing to be observed), that thou keep (preserve : cf. άσπιλον below, and ch. v. 22) the commandment (used not to designate any special command just given, but as a general compendium of the rule of the Gospel, after which our lives and thoughts must be regulated : cf. $\pi a \rho a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda l a$ in the same sense, ch. i. 5) without spot and without reproach (both epithets belong to την έντολήν, not to σε, as most Commentators, some, as Est., maintaining that $d\nu\epsilon\pi i$ - $\lambda\eta\pi\tau os$ can be used of persons only. But this De W. has shewn not to be the case : we have $\dot{\eta} \ \dot{d}\nu\epsilon\pi i\lambda\eta\pi\tau os \ \tau\epsilon\chi\nu\eta$ in Philo de opif. 22, vol. i. p. 15 : ανεπιληπτότερον το λεγόμενον in Plato, Phileb. p. 43 c. Besides, the ordinary construction with $\tau \eta \rho \epsilon i \nu$ is that the qualifying adjective should belong to its object: cf. ch. v. 22: James i. 27: 2 Cor. xi. 9. The commandment, entrusted to thee as a deposit [cf. ver. 20], must be kept by thee unstained and unreproached. Consult Ellic.'s note) until the appearance (reff.) of our Lord Jesus Christ (τουτέστι, say's Chrys., μέχρι τηs σηs τελευτηs, μέχρι τηs έξόδου. But surely both the usage of the word $\epsilon \pi i \phi \dot{a} \nu \epsilon i a$ and the next verse should have kept him from this mistake. Far better Bengel: "fideles in praxi sua proponebant sibi diem Christi ut appropinquantem : nos solemus nobis horam mortis proponere." We may fairly say that whatever impression is betrayed by the words that the coming of the Lord would be in Timotheus's lifetime, is chastened and corrected by the kaipois idiois of the next verse. That, the certainty of the coming in God's own time, was a fixed truth respecting which the Apostle speaks with the authority of the Spirit : but the day and hour was hidden from him as from us : and from such passages as this we see that the apostolic age maintained that which ought to be the attitude of all ages, constant expectation of the Lord's return)

17—19.] Precepts for the rich. Not a supplement to the Epistle, as commonly regarded: the occurrence of a doxology is no sufficient ground for supposing that the Apostle intended to close with it : cf. ch. i. 17. Rather, the subject is resumed from verses 6—10. We may perhaps make an inference as to the late date of the

Epistle, from the existence of wealthy members in the Ephesian church. 17.] To those who are rich in this present world (no rois before ev ra vov ai., because $\pi \lambda o \dot{\sigma} \sigma i \sigma i \dot{\epsilon} \nu \cdot \tau \hat{\varphi} \cdot \nu \hat{\upsilon} \nu \cdot a \dot{\omega} \nu i$ is the designation of the persons spoken of. Thdrt.], the $\tau \sigma is$ would have been more naturally prefixed. Such a distinction would besides have been improbable, as drawing a line between the two characters, which it is the object of the exhortation to keep united in the same persons. See the distinetion in Luke xii. 21) give in charge not to be high-minded ($\tau a \hat{v} \tau a \pi a \rho a i v \epsilon \hat{i}$, είδώς ότι ούδεν ούτω τίκτει τύφον, καί απόνοιαν, καὶ αλαζονείαν, ὡς χρήματα, Chrys.), nor to place their hope (i. c. to have hoped, and continue to be hoping: see on ch. iv. 10) on the uncertainty (reff.) of riches (not $= \tau \hat{\varphi} \pi \lambda o \dot{\tau} \tau \hat{\varphi}$ $d\delta\eta\lambda\varphi$, but far more foreible, hyperbolically representing the hope as reposed on the very quality in riches which least justified it. On the sense, Thdrt. says, άδηλον γάρ τοῦ πλούτου τὸ κτῆμα νῦν μέν γάρ παρά τούτω φοιτậ, νῦν δὲ πρòs έκεινον μεταβαίνει· και πολλούς έχων κυρίους, ούδενός έστι κτήμα. Col. iv. 17. This is the most probable explanation. Some regard it as the ϵv_{-} $\tau o \lambda \eta$ above, ver. 14: some as meaning the grace given to him for his office, or for his own spiritual life : but ch. i. 18, compared with 2 Tim. ii. 2, seems to fix the meaning as above. Herodotus has a very similar use of the word, ix. 45, Evopes 'Abyvaio, παραθήκην ύμιν τάδε τα έπεα τίθεμαι. And with this the following agrees : for it is against false doctrine that the Apostle cautions him), turning away from (cf. αποτρέπου, 2 Tim. iii. 5) the profane babblings (empty discourses: so also 2 Tim. ii. 16) and oppositions (apparently, dialectic antitheses and niceties of the false teachers. The interpretations have been very various : Chrys. says, όρậs πῶs πάλιν κελεύει μηδε δμόσε χωρείν πρός τούς τοιούτους; εκτρεπόμενός, φησιν, τας αντιθέσεις. άρα είσιν αντιθέσεις, πρός as οὐδὲ ἀποκρίνεσθαι χρή ; - understand-ing by ἀντιθ., sayings of theirs opposed to this teaching. But this can hardly be. Grot., 'nam ipsi inter se pugnabant ? but this is as unlikely. Pelag., Luth., al., understand 'disputations ? Mosheim, the dualistic oppositions in the heretical systems : Mack, the contradictions which the heretics try to establish between the various doctrines of orthodoxy : Baur, the oppositions between the Gospel and the law maintained by Marcion. On this latter hypothesis, see Prolegomena. There would be no objection philologically to understanding 'propositions opposed to thee;' and robs artislariseµévous, cf. 2 Tim. ii. 25, would seem to bear out such meaning: but seeing that it is coupled with KEVOQWVIas, it is much more probably something entirely subjective to the ψευδώνυμος γνωσις) of that which is falsely-named (ύταν γάρ πίστις μη ή, γνώσις ούκ έστι. Chrys.) knowledge (the true yvwois, being one of the greatest gifts of the Spirit to the Church, was soon counterfeited by various systems of hybrid theology, calling themselves by this honoured name. In the Apostle's time, the misnomer was already current : but we are not therefore justified in assuming that it had received so definite an application, as afterwards it did to the various forms of Gnostic heresy. All that we can hence gather is, that the true spiritual $\gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \sigma_{13}$ of the Christian was already being counterfeited by persons bearing the characteristics noticed in this Epistle. Whether these were the Gnostics themselves, or their precursors, we have examined in the Prolegomena to the Pastoral Epistles), κατ' έπαγγ, ζωη̂ς] according to (in pursuance of, with a view to the fulfilment of) the promise (ref.) of life, which is in Christ Jesus (all this is to be taken with $d\pi \delta \sigma \tau o \lambda o s$, not with $\theta \epsilon \lambda \eta u a \tau o s$. Thdrt. explains it well, ωςτε με την έπαγγελθείσαν αλώνιον ζωήν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις κηρύξαι. Chrysostom sees, in this mention of the promise of life in Christ, a consolation to Timotheus under present troubles: ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ποιεῖται τὴν παραμυθίαν — εἰ έπαγγελία έστί, μη ζήτει αυτην ένταυθα έλπίς γάρ βλεπομένη οὐκ ἔστιν ἐλπίς. And this idea seems to be borne out by the strain of the subsequent portion of the Epistle, which is throughout one of confirmation and encouragement. So Bengel, – "nervus ad Timotheum hortandum, ver. 10, cap. ii. 8"). 2. άγαπητῷ τέκνψ] "Can it be accidental," says Mack, "that instead of yrnoly terr, as Timotheus is called in the first Epistle, i. 2, and Titus i. 4,—here we have $\dot{\alpha}\gamma a\pi\eta \tau \hat{\omega}^2$ Or may a reason for the change be found in this, that it now behoved Timotheus to stir up afresh the faith and the grace in him, before he could again be worthy of the name yunglow τέκνον in its full sense ?" This may be too much pressed : but certainly there is throughout this Epistle an altered tone with regard to Timotheus-more of mere love, and less of confidence, than in the former: and this would naturally shew itself even in passing words of address. When Bengel says, "in Ep. i., scripserat, genuino: id compensatur hic versu 5," he certainly misses the delicate sense of ver. 5 : see below. To find in άγαπητῷ more confidence, as Heyd. (and Chrys., maintaining that οἱ κατὰ πίστιν ὅταν ὦσιν ἀγαπητοί, δι' οὐδὲν ἕτερόν εἰσιν, ἀλλ' ἡ $\delta i' \dot{a} \rho \epsilon \tau \eta \nu$), can hardly be correct: the expression of feeling is different in kind, not comparable in degree : suiting an Epistle of warm affection and somewhat saddened reminding, rather than one of rising hope aud confidence. I regret to be, on this point, at issue throughout this second Epistle, with my friend Bishop Ellicott, who seems to me too anxious to rescue the character of Timotheus from the slightest imputation of weakness: thereby marring the delicate texture of many of St. Paul's characteristic periods, in which tender reproof, vigorous reassurance, and fervent affection are exquisitely intermingled. See refl. and notes.

3—5. Thankful declaration of love and I give thanks (reff.) anxiety to see him. to God whom I serve from my ancestors (i. e. as Bengel, "majores, innuit, non Abrahamum &c., quos patres, nunquam προγόνους appellat: sed progenitores proximos." The reason for the profession may perhaps be found in the following mention of the faith of the mother and grandmother of Timotheus, which was already in the Apostle's mind. We may observe that he does not, as De W. charges him, place on the same ground the Jewish and Christian service of God: but simply asserts what he had before asserted, Acts xxiii. 1, xxiv. 14,—that his own service of God had been at all times conscientious and singlehearted, and that he had received it as such from his forefathers) in pure conscience, how (not 'that,' as Chrys. [euxaριστώ τῷ θεῷ ὅτι μέμνημαί σου, φησίν, ούτω σε φιλω], Luth., E. V., al.,-nor 'when,' as Calv. ['quoties tui recordor in precibus meis, id enim facio continenter, simul ctiam de te gratias ago'],--nor 'since,' 'seeing that,' as Heyd., Flatt, al., --nor 'as,' as De W., Huther, Ellic., al. : but as in the parallel, Rom. i. 9, the construction is a mixed one between µáprus μου έστιν ό θεός, ώς άδιάλ. έχω, and ενχαριστω άδιάλειπτον έχων: and hence the meaning 'how' must be retained, and with it the involution of construction, which is characteristic of one with whom expressions like these had now become fixed in diction, and liable to be combined without regard to strict logical accuracy) unceasing I make my mention (not 'mention' only, on account of the article, which specifies the $\mu\nu\epsilon la$ as a thing constantly happening) concerning thee (so Herod. i. 36, παιδός μέν περί τοῦ έμοῦ μη μνήσθητε έτι:-Xen. Cyr. i. 6. 12, ούδ' ότιοῦν περί τούτου ἐπεμνήσθη :--Plat. Laches, p. 181 a, δδ' έστι Σωκράτης, περί οῦ ἐκάστοτε μέμνησθε: and Heb. xi. 22) in my prayers, night and day (see Luke ii. 37 note: belongs to αδιάλειπτ. έχω κ.τ.λ., not to δεήσεσιν, much less, as Mack, al., to the following, for which 1 Thess. ii. 9, iii. 10 are no precedents, as here such an arrangement would deprive the participle $\epsilon \pi i \pi o \theta \hat{\omega} \nu$ of its place of emphasis); longing ($\epsilon \pi i$, as the prep. in composition so often, seems to mark not intensification, but direction : see Ellie.'s note) to see thee, remembering thy tears (shed at our parting), that I may be filled with joy (the expressions in this verse are assurances of the most fervent personal love, strengthened by the proof of such love having been reciprocal. From these he gently and most skilfully passes to a tone of fatherly exhortation and reproof): having remembrance (the aor. participle may be taken either (1) as dependent on iva, and the condition of $\pi\lambda\eta$ - $\rho\omega\theta\hat{\omega}$,—or, which is more probable, (2) as in apposition with $\epsilon \pi i \pi o \theta \hat{\omega} \nu$ and $\mu \epsilon \mu \nu \eta \mu \epsilon$. vos) of the unfeigned faith [which was] (Ellie. objects to 'was,' and would render 'is;' see note above on ver. 2. But I do not see how St. Paul could be said δπόμνησιν λaβεiv of a thing then present. Surely the remembrance is of the time when they parted, and the faith then existing. But the sentence does not require any temporal filling up-'the unfeigned faith in thee' is quite enough, and is necessarily thrown into the past by the $\dot{\upsilon}\pi \dot{\upsilon}$ -

He adds, έν ήμῖν γάρ ἐστι καὶ σβέσαι καὶ ἀνάψαι τοῦτο. ὑπό μέν γὰρ ἀκηδίας καὶ ῥαθυμίας σβέννυται, ύπό δε νήψεως και προςοχής διεγείρεται) the gift of God (χάρισμα, singular, as combining the whole of the gifts necessary for the ministry in one aggregate [την χάριν τοῦ πνεύματος, ην έλαβες είς προστασίαν της εκκλησίας, Chrys.]: not 'the gift of the Spirit imparted to all believers :' see 1 Tim. iv. 14, note. Any apparent discrepancy with that passage, from the Apostle here speaking of the laying on of his own hands alone, may be removed by regarding the Apostle as chief in the ordination, and the presbytery as his assistants, as is the case with Bishops at the present day. the Roman-Catholic expositors, c. g. Mack, to the whole spirit of St. Paul's teaching, as declaring that by such au expression he does not mean that the inward spiritual grace is operated merely and barely by the outward visible sign,-but is only asserting, in a mode of speech common to us all, that the solemn dedication by him of Timotheus to God's work, of which the laying on of his hands was the sign and seal, did bring with it gifts and grace for that work. In this sense and in this alone, the gift came $\delta_{i\dot{\alpha}} \tau \eta s \ \epsilon \pi_i \theta \epsilon \sigma \epsilon \omega s$, that laying on being the concentrated and effective sign of the setting apart, and conveying in faith the answer, assumed by faith, to the prayers of the church. That the Apostle had authority thus to set apart, was necessary to the validity of the act, and thus to the reception of the grace :- but the authority did not convey the grace. I may just add that the 'indelibility of orders,' which Mack infers from this passage, is simply and directly refuted by it. If the xapiopa to iv ooi required ava(wnupeioBai, if, as Chrys. above, εν ήμιν εστι και σβέσαι και ανάψαι $\tau o \tilde{v} \tau o$,—then plainly it is not indelible). 7.] For (q. d., 'and there is reason for my thus exhorting thee, seeing that thou hast shewn a spirit inconsistent with the character of that x ápio µa.' The usage of $\pi \nu \epsilon \hat{\nu} \mu a$ without the art. in the sense of the spirit of man dwelt in by the Spirit of God, and as the Spirit of God working in the spirit of man, as e. g. continually in Rom. viii. [vv. 4, 5, 9 bis, 13, 14], in 1 Cor. ii. 4; cf. 1 Cor. vi. 17, forbids our rendering πνεῦμα ' a spirit' [subjective], as Conyb. al.) of cowardice (the coincidence in sound with the $\pi \nu \epsilon \hat{\nu} \mu a$ δουλείas of Rom. viii. 15, is remarkable, and the most decisive of all testimonics

terous idea that this passage is an imitation from that. Rather I should account the circumstance a fine and deep indication of genuineness :- the habitual assertion of the one axiom having made even its sound and chime so familiar to the

Apostle's ear, that he selects, when enouncing another like it, a word almost reproducing that other. There is also doubtless a touch of severity in this Seillas, putting before Timotheus his timidity in such a light as to shame him : oux "wa δειλιώμεν τους υπέρ της ευσεβίας κινδύvous, Thdrt.), but (the spirit) of power (as opposed to the weakness implied in $\delta \epsilon_i \lambda i a$, and love (as opposed to that false compliance with men, which shrinks from bold rebuke :- that lofty self-ubandonment of love for others, which will even sacrifice repute, and security, and all that belongs to self, in the noble struggle to do men good), and correction (the original meaning of σωφρονισμός, 'admonition of others that they may become \sigma \omega \phi p.,'τό σωφρονίζειν τινά, cf. Tit. ii. 4,-must be retained, as necessary both on account of that usage of the verb, and on account of the context. It is this bearing bold testimony before others, from which Timotheus appears to have shrunk : cf. $\mu\eta$ ούν επαισχυνθής το μαρτύριον, ver. 8. It also suits the construction of the other two genitives [against Huther], which both express that which the Spirit inspires a man with. For the meaning itself, cf. Palm and Rost's Lex. We have examples of it in Hippodamus [Stob. 43. 93, p. 250],-τοι μέν νέοι δέονται σωφρονισμώ και καταρτύσιος: Plut. Cat. maj. 5, — επί διορθώσει και σωφρονισμώ τών άλλων: Appian, de rebus Punicis viii. 65, —είσι γάρ οι και τόδε νομίζουσιν, αυτόν ές Ῥωμαίων σωφρονισμόν έθελησαι γεί-τονα καί άντίπαλον αυτοις φόβον ές άεί καταλιπείν. The word in after times became a common one for discipline or ecclesiastical correction : see examples under σωφρονίζω and -ισμόs in Suicer. Some, retaining this proper meaning, understand by it that the Spirit σωφρονίζει ήμας: so [alt.] Chrys., Thl. [ή Ίνα σωφρονισμόν $\tilde{\epsilon}_{\chi\omega\mu\epsilon\nu} \tau \delta \pi\nu\epsilon\bar{\nu}\mu a$]; but this does not suit the construction of the other genitives, in which it is not power over us, or love towards us, that is meant, but power and love wrought in us as towards others, and opposed to cowardice and fear of man. Thl. gives as another alternative the right meaning-) ίνα και άλλοις ωμεν σωφρονισταί και παιδευταί. The making σωφρονισμόs = σωφροσύνη, as E. V. and

The only way in which it can come virtually to that, is by supposing the σωφρονισμόs to be exercised by ourselves over ourselves, as Thdrt. : "va owφρονίσωμεν των έν ήμιν κινουμένων παθη-μάτων την άταξίαν. But this does not seem to me to suit the context so well as the meaning given above). 8.] Be not then (seeing that God gave us such a Spirit, not the other) ashamed of (for construction see reff. I cannot see, with Ellic., that the aor. subjunc. with $\mu \eta$, 'ne te pudeat unquam,' as Leo, implies in matter of fact that "Timothy had as yet evinced no such feeling." Surely, granting that such is the primary constructional inference from the words, it would be just in keeping with the delicate tact of the Apostle, to use such form of admonition, when in fact the blame had been already partly incurred. See note on ver. 1) the testimony of our Lord (i. e. the testimony which thou art to give concerning our Lord, gen. objective : not 'the testimony which He bore,' gen. subjective, as Corn.-a-lap., al.,-nor, as Chrys. [apparently], ' the martyrdom of our Lord,' nor must we, with Mack, lay stress on κυρίου, and understand the μαρτύριον to be especially this, that Jesus is the Lord. The hµŵv is added, hardly for the reason Bengel gives, 'hune opponit Cæsari, quem sui sic appellabant,' which would hardly have been thus expressed, requiring more prominence to be given to $\eta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$,—but because, being about to introduce himself, he binds by this word Timotheus and himself together), nor of me His prisoner (I would hardly say, with De W., Huther, al., that this refers only to the services which the Apostle expected from Timotheus in coming to him at Rome : such thought may have been in his mind, and may have mingled with his motive in making the exhortation : but I believe the main reference to be to his duty as upholding St. Paul and his teaching in the face of personal danger and persecution. It is impossible to deny that the above personal reference does enter again and again : but I cannot believe it to be more than secondary. On the expression, $\tau \delta \nu$ δέσμιον αὐτοῦ, see Eph. iii. 1 note : the gen. implies not possession, but the reason for which he was imprisoned, cf. Philem. 13, δεσμοί τοῦ εὐαγγελίου), but suffer hardship with me for the Gospel (this is the meaning [ref.], and not ' suffer hardship together with the Gospel, as Thart. [τῶν κηρύκων τὸ πάθος τοῦ εὐαγγελίου προςηγόρευσε πάθος], Calv. [?], Grot. [' προsωποποιεί evangelium, eique sensum tribuit, quomodo alibi legi, morti, peccato']: for St. Paul, speaking of his own bonds, ch. ii. 9, says, 6 λόγος του θεού ού δέδεται. This συγκακοπάθησον extends the sphere of his fellow-suffering with the Apostle beyond his mere visiting Rome) according to the power of God (what power? that which God has manifested in our salvation, as described below [gen. subj.], or that which God imparts to us [gen. obj.],-God's power, or the power which we get from God ? On all grounds, the former seems to me the juster and worthier sense : the former, as implying indeed the latter à fortiori-that God, who by His strong hand and mighty arm has done all this for us, will help us through all trouble incurred for Him. Chrys. gives this meaning very finely: έπει φορτικών ήν το είπειν, κακοπάθησον, πάλιν αύτον παραμυθείται λέγων, ού κατά τὰ ἔργα ἡμῶν τουτέστι, μὴ τῆ δυνάμει λογίζου τῆ σῆ, ἀλλὰ τῆ τοῦ θεοῦ ταῦτα φέρειν. σόν μέν γάρ τό έλέσθαι καί προθυμηθήναι, θεοῦ δὲ τὸ κουφίσαι καὶ παῦσαι. είτα καί της δυνάμεως αύτοῦ δείκνυσι τὰ τεκμήρια. πῶς ἐσώθης ἐννόει, πῶς ἐκλήθης. ὥςπερ φησὶν ἀλλαχοῦ, κατὰ την ενέργειαν αυτού την ενεργουμένην έν ήμιν. ούτω τοῦ ποιήσαι τὸν οὐρανὸν μείζων δύναμις αύτη ήν, το πείσαι την οίκουμένην), who saved us (all believers : there is no reason for limiting this $\eta\mu\bar{a}s$ to Paul and Timotheus. It is painful to see such Commentators as De Wette so blinded by a preconceived notion of the spuriousness of the Epistle, as to call this which follows 'sine ganz allge= meine überfluffige Erinnerung an bie driftliden heilsthatfaden.' say to the reader who has been hitherto following the course and spirit of the passage, that it is in the strictest coherence, as indeed is shewn by Chrys. above. 'Be not cowardly nor ashamed of the Gospel, but join me in endurance on its behalf, according to God's power, who has given such proofs of that power and of its excrcise towards us, in saving us,-calling us in Christ,-destroying death - &c., of which endurance I am an example [11-13]-which example do thou follow' [13, 14]), and called us (this, as indeed the whole context, shews that it is the Father who is spoken of : see note on Gal. i. 6), with an holy (τουτέστιν, αγίους έξειργάσατο ἁμαρτωλούς ὄντας καὶ ἐχθρούς, Chrys. κλήσις expressing the state, rather than merely the summoning into it [as does 'vocation' also], ayía is its quality) calling (see Eph. iv. 1; i. 18: Rom. viii. 28-30, and notes), not according to (after the measure of, in accordance with) our works : but according to (after the measure of, in pursuance of) his own purpose (τουτέστιν οὐδενὸς ἀναγκά-ζοντος, οὐδενὸς συμβουλεύοντος, ἀλλ' έξ ίδίας προθέσεως, οϊκοθεν έκ της άγαθότητος αύτοῦ όρμώμενος, Chrys. ούκ εis τον ημέτερον αποβλέψας βίον, αλλα δια μόνην φιλανθρωπίαν, Thdrt. Conyb.] the Jewish dispensation :' still less, as Dr. Burton, that 'the scheme of redemption was arranged by God immediately after the fall, before any ages or dispensations.' Even Calvin's interpretation, ' perpetuam annorum seriem a mundo condito,' fails to reach the full meaning. In the parallel, Rom. xvi. 25, the mystery of redemption is described as having been χρόνοις alwviois σεσιγημένον,-which obviously includes ages previous to the karaβολή κόσμου as well as after it ;- see Eph. iii. 11, compared with i. 4: 1 Cor. ii. 7), but (contrast to the concealment from eternity in the manifestation in time) manifested now (νυνι τοις προορισθείσι τό πέρας έπέθηκε, Thdrt. But, pace tanti viri, and recognizing to the full the distinction, I must hold that the slightly ratiocinative force of the anarthrous participle is more accurately represented by "who abolished," than by introducing the temporal element contained in "when He." These words are better taken as belonging only to $\phi \omega \tau$. δέ ζω. κ. άφθ., not to καταργ. μέν τόν $\theta d\nu$. For this former is an absolute act of Christ, the latter a manifestation to those who see it), for which (viz. the $\epsilon \dot{v} a \gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \iota o \nu$, the publication of this good news to men) I was appointed a herald, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles (see the same expression, and note, in 1 Tim. ii. 7. The connexion in which he here introduces himself is noticed above, on ver. 8. It is to bring in his own example and endurance in sufferings, and grounds of trust, for a pattern to Timotheus): on which account (viz. because 1 $\epsilon \tau \epsilon \theta \eta \nu$, as above) I also (besides doing the active work of such a mission. Or kai may be taken with Tauta, as Ellic.,-'even these things') am suffering these things (viz. the things implied in the déspion adtor, ver. 8, and further specified by way of explanation and en-couragement to Timotheus below, ver. 15): but I am not ashamed (cf. $\mu\eta$ enaioχυνθήs, ver. 8), for I know whom I have trusted (hardly to be formally expressed so strongly as De W. 'in whom I have put my trust' [eis $\delta \nu \pi \epsilon \pi$.], though the meaning, in the spiritual explanation, is virtually the same: the metaphor here is that of a pledge deposited, and the depositor trusting the depositary : and it is best to keep to the figure. The $\hat{\phi}$ refers to God, as Tit. iii. 8: Acts xxvii. 25?), and am persuaded that He is able (reff. as used of God) to keep my deposit (how are the words to be taken,-and what is meant by them ? Does µov import, the deposit which He has entrusted to me, or the deposit which I have entrusted to Him ? Let us consider the latter first. In this case µov is the gen. subjective. Now what is there which the Apostle can be said to have entrusted to God? Some say, (a) his eternal reward, the crown laid up for him, ch. iv. 8; so Thl., Beza, Calov., Wolf ['hoe est κληρονομία quæ dicitur τετηρημένη έν ουρανοῖs, 1 Pet. i. 4: habes hie τό φυλάσσειν']: but then we should have this reward represented as a matter not of God's free grace, but of his own, delivered to God to keep: (b) his soul, as in 1 Pet. iv. 19: Luke xxiii. 46: so Grot. [' Deus apud nos deponit verbum suum : nos apud Deum deponimus spiritum nostrum'], Beng. ['anima nostra : nos ipsi, et portio nostra cœlestis. Paulus, decessui proximus, duo deposita habebat : alterum Domino, alterum Timotheo committendum'], Conyb. and others [see this treated below]: (e) his salvation, so Ambr., Calv., Huther, al. [see ib.]: (d) the believers who had beeu converted by his means, as Chrys. and Thl. [alt.], and as in the Ep. ad Heron. of the Pseudo-Ignatius, 7, p. 916, -- φύλαξόν μου τὴν παραθήκην παρατίθημί σοι τὴν έκκλησίαν 'Αντιοχέων, which hardly needs refutation, as altogether unsupported by the context. Then, under the former head, which would make µov a gen. possessive. 12. on µov D1 a k.

we have the following meanings assigned : --(e) the Holy Spirit, as Thdrt. Γόσην παρέσχε μοι τοῦ πνεύματος χάριν ἀκήρατον φυλάξει μέχρι της αύτοῦ παρουσίας]:-(f) the faith, and its proclamation to the world. So Chrys. [τί ἐστι παρακαταθήκη ; ή πίστις, τὸ κήρυγμα: but only as an alternative, see above], Ellic.; not Grot. as De W. see above : (g) the apostolic office [Corn.-a-lap., Heinrichs, De W., al.] which the Apostle regarded as a thing entrusted to him, a stewardship, 1 Cor. ix. 17: (h) the faithful who had been converted by him, in the falternative in Chrys. and Thl.] view of their having been committed to him by Christ: (i) his own soul, as entrusted to him by God, as Bretschneider, al., after Josephus, B. J. iii. 8. 5, where speaking against suicide, he says, είλήφαμεν παρ' αύτοῦ τὸ εἶναι ψυχή ἀθάνατος ἀεί, καὶ θεοῦ μοῖρα τοῖς σώμασιν ἐνοικίζεται. εἶτα ἂν μὲν ἀφανίση τις ανθρώπου παρακαταθήκην, ή διάθηται κακώς, πονηρός είναι δοκεί και άπιστος. And even more strikingly Philo, quis rerum div. hæres, 26, vol. i. p. 491 :-- τοῦτ' έπαινός έστι τοῦ σπουδαίου, τὴν ίερὰν ἡν ἕλαβε παρακαταθήκην, ψυχῆς, αἰσθήσεως, λόγου, θείας σοφίας, ἀνθρωπίνης ἐπιστήμης, καθαρώς και αδόλως, μη έαυτῷ, μόνφ δε τῷ πεπιστευκότι φυλάξαντος. And Hermas Pastor, ii. 3, p. 918 : "qui ergo mentiuntur, abnegant Dominum, non reddentes Domino depositum, quod acceperunt." On all these, and this view of the $\pi a \rho a \theta \eta \kappa \eta$ generally, I may remark, that we may fairly be guided by the same words $\pi a \rho a \theta \eta \kappa \eta \nu$ φύλαξον in ver. 14 as to their sense here. And from this consideration I deduce an inference precisely the contrary to that of De Wette. He argues from it, that $\pi a \rho a$ - $\theta \eta \kappa \eta$ must necessarily have the same meaning in both places, without reference to the verb with which it is joined: and consequently that because in ver. 14 it signifies a matter entrusted to Timotheus, therefore here it must signify a matter entrusted to St. Paul. But this surely is a very lax and careless way of reasoning. The analogy between the two verses, if good for any thing, goes further than this. As, in ver. 14, παραθήκην φυλάξαι is said of the subject of the sentence, viz. Timotheus, keeping a deposit entrusted to him,-so here $\pi \alpha \rho a \theta \eta \kappa \eta \nu \phi \nu \lambda d \xi a$ must be said of the subject of the sentence, viz. God, keeping a deposit entrusted to Him. Otherwise, while keeping the mere word mapathing to the same formal meaning in both places, we shall, most harshly and unnaturally, be requiring the phrase παραθήκην φυλάξαι to bear, in two almost consecutive verses, two totally different meanings. The analogy therefore of ver. 14, which De W. uses so abundantly for his view, makes, if thoroughly considered, entirely against it, and in fact necessitates the adoption of the first alternative, viz. the objective genitive,-and the deposit committed by the Apostle to God. And when we enquire what this deposit was, we have the reply, I conceive, in the previous words, & πεπίστευκα [see this especially shewn in the quotation from Philo above, where the $\pi \epsilon \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \upsilon \kappa \omega s$ is God, not man]. He had entrusted HIMSELF, body, soul, and spirit, to the kceping of his heavenly Father, and lay safe in his hands, confident of His abiding and effectual care. A strong confirmation of this view is gained,-notwithstanding what Ellic. says of the moral reference there, and not here: for the parallel is to be sought not between oudagas and ayiasas, but between $\phi \nu \lambda \dot{a} \xi a \iota$ and $\tau \eta \rho \hat{\eta} \sigma a \iota$, which is a very close one,-from 1 Thess. v. 23, αὐτὸs δè δ θeds της εἰρήνης ἁγιάσαι ύμας όλοτελεΐς, καὶ δλόκληρον ὑμῶν τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ ή ψυχή και το σώμα αμέμπτως έν τη παρουσία τοῦ κυρίου ήμῶν ἰησοῦ χριστοῦ $\tau \eta \rho \eta \theta \epsilon (\eta)$ for (with reference to, as an object ;- 'against,' as we say, in a temporal sense: not simply 'until') that day (viz. the day of the mapovola; see reff., and cf. especially ch. iv. 8). 13.] The utinost care is required, in interpreting this verse, to ascertain the probable meaning of the words in reference to the context. On the right appreciation of this depends the question, whether they are to be taken in their strict meaning, and simple grammatical sense, or to be forced to some possible but far-fetched rendering. It has been generally, as far as I know by all the Commentators, assumed that inortinociv $\xi \chi \epsilon = \xi \chi \epsilon$ (= κάτεχε, see rell.) την ύποτύπωσιν, and that then ύγιαινόντων λόγων is to be taken as a subject. gen. after $i\pi\sigma\sigma\tau\delta\pi$; i.e. as in E. V., 'Hold fast the form of sound words:' thus making the exhortation perfectly general,-equivalent in fact to the following one in ver. 14. But to this there are several objections. The want of the art. before unorunwour might indeed be got over : a definite word emphatically prefixed to its verb is frequently anarthrous. But (1) this sense of $\xi_{\chi\epsilon}$ can hardly be maintained in its present unemphatic position. The sense is found (or something approaching to it, for it would require to be stronger here than in either place) in the reft.: but in both, the verb precedes the substantive, as indeed always throughout the N. T. where any stress whatever is to be laid on it. Cf., for some examples of both arrangements, (a) $\tilde{\epsilon}\chi\omega$ preceding, with more or less reference to its sense of having or holding, as a matter to be taken into account, Matt. v. 23; viii. 9 ||, xi. 15 || (always thus), al.,-Mark ix. 50, x. 21, xi. 22, al., - Luke iii. 11, viii. 6, xi. 5, al., -John iii. 15, 16, 29, 36, al.,-Acts ii. 44, 47, ix. 14, 31, &c.,-Rom. ii. 20, iv. 2, vi. 22 (ef. ver. 21), xii. 6, &c.: and (b) $\xi_{\chi\omega}$ following its substantive, with always the stress on the subst., and not on the verb, Matt. iii. 14, v. 46, viii. 20, &c.,-Mark iii. 22, 26, viii. 14-18, &c.,-Luke iii. 8, viii. 13, &c.,- John ii. 3, iv. 17 (instances of both arrangements, and each in full significance), &c.,-Rom. xiv. 22, &c. I cannot therefore assent to the view, which would give $\xi_{\chi\epsilon}$ the chief emphasis in the sentence, but must reserve that emphasis for ὑποτύπωσιν. Then (2) there is an objection to taking brotinwow as ' a form' with a subjective genitive,—a 'form con-sisting of sound words.' The word is once only used (ref.) elsewhere, aud that in these Epistles, as a 'pattern,' 'specimen :' and there can hardly be a doubt that so uncommon a word must be taken, as again used by the same writer, in the same meaning, unless the context manifestly point to another. (3) A third objection, not so important as the other two, but still a valid one, will be that according to the usual rendering, the relative www.would much more naturally be ήν, referring as it ought to do in that case to $\dot{\upsilon}\pi \sigma \tau \dot{\upsilon}\pi \omega \sigma \iota \nu$, the object of $\check{\epsilon}\chi \epsilon$, not to the λόγοι of which that υποτύπωσις was composed. This being so, we shall have the rendering so far .- Have (take) an ensample of (the) healthy words which thou heardest of me in faith and love which are in Christ Jesus. Then two questions arise for us : to what (1) does inorinwouv exe refer? I answer, - to the saying immediately preceding, olda yàp K.T.A. This was one of those $\pi i \sigma \tau o \lambda \delta \gamma o i$ or $\nu \gamma i a l$ νοντες λόγοι, of which we hear so often in these Epistles; one which, in his timidity, Timotheus was perhaps in danger of forgetting, and of which therefore the Apostle reminds him, and bids him take it as a specimen or pattern of those sound words which had been committed to him by his father in the faith. To what (2) do the words $iv \pi i\sigma\tau \epsilon \kappa$. $i\gamma a \pi \eta \tau$. $iv \chi p$. In σ . refer? Certainly not, as Thdrt., to $\pi a \rho^{\prime} \epsilon^{\prime} \mu o \hat{v}$, taking $\epsilon^{\prime} \nu$ as $\equiv \pi \epsilon \rho i (\tau \eta \nu \pi a \rho^{\prime})$ έμοῦ περί πίστεως κ. ἀγάπης γεγενημένην διδασκαλίαν): not, again, to ἔχε, to which in our understanding of ύποτύπωσιν έχε, such a qualification would be altogether inapplicable : but to hovoas, reminding Timotheus of the readiness of belief, and warmth of affection, with which he had at first received the wholesome words from the mouth of the Apostle, and thus tacitly reproaching him for his present want of growth in that faith and love; q. d. Let me in thus speaking, 'I know whom I have believed &c.,' call to thy mind, by one example, those faithful sayings, those words of spiritual health, which thou once heardest with such receptivity and ardour as a Christian believer. [I am bound to add, that Chrys., having too much sense of the import of the Greek arrangement, does not fall into the ordinary mistake of making $\xi \chi \epsilon = \kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \chi \epsilon$ and emphatic, but, as will be seen, understands it, "From the by alvovτes λόγοι which I delivered thee, take thine examples and maxims on every subject." But that would rather require by alvortas λόγους οῦς . . . 15-18.] Notices of the defective adherence of certain brethren. These notices are intimately connected with what has preeeded. He has held up to Timotheus, as an example, his own boldness and constancy : and has given bim a sample of the faithful sayings which ruled his own conduct, in ver. 12. He proceeds to speak of a few of the discouragements under which in this confidence he was bearing up: and, affectionate gratitude prompting him, and at the same time by way of an example of fidelity to Timotheus, he dilates on the exception to the general dereliction of him, which had been furnished by Onesiphorus. Thou knowest this, that all who are in Asia (it does not follow, as Chrys., that εἰκὸς η̂ν, ἐν Ῥώμη εἶναι πολλοὺς τότε τῶν ἀπὸ τῶν ᾿Ασίας μερῶν: this would rather require οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς ᾿Ασίας: but he uses the expression with reference to him to whom he was writing, who was in Asia) repudiated me (not as E. V., 'are turned away from me' [perf.]: the act referred to took place at a stated time, and from what follows, that time appears to have been on occasion of a visit to Rome. They were ashamed of Paul the prisoner, and did not seek him out, see ch. iv. 16: -έφυγον τοῦ ἀποστόλου τὴν συνουσίαν διà τὸ Népwvos δéos, Thdrt. : but perhaps not so much from this motive, as from the one hinted at in the praise of Onesiphorus below. The mávres must of course apply to all of whom the Apostle had had trial [and not even those without exception, vv. 16-18]: the E. V. gives the idea, that a general apostasy of all in Asia from St. Paul had taken place. On As1A, i. c. the proconsular Asia, see note, Acts xvi. 6), of whom is $(\epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu)$ is hardly to be pressed as indicating that at the present moment Phygelus and Hermogenes were in Rome and were shunning him : it merely includes them in the class just mentioned) Phygelus and Hermogenes (why their names are specially brought forward, does not appcar. Suetonius, Domit. c. 10, mentions a certain Hermogenes of Tarsus, who was put to death by Domitian ' propter quasdam in historia figuras'). 16. May the Lord give mercy (an expression not found elsewhere in N. T.) to the house of Onesiphorus (from this expression, here and in ch. iv. 19, and from what follows, ver. 18, it has been not improbably supposed, that Onesiphorus himself was no longer living at photas initial was no longer hering a this time. Some indeed, as Thdrt. [οῦ μόνον ἀντῷ ἀλλὰ και παντὶ τῷ ῦἰκῳ τὸν θεῖον ἀντέδωκεν ἔλεον], Calv. ["ob cum toti familiæ bene precatur. Unde colli-ginus Dei benedictionem non tautum super caput justi sed super totam domum residere"], al., take it as merely an extension of the gratitude of the Apostle from Onesiphorus to his household : but ch. iv. 19 is against this. Thdrt. indeed [as also Chrys.] understands that Onesiphorus was with him at this time: but the aorists here [cf. yevouvers] will hardly allow that), because on many occasions he refreshed me (from $\psi \upsilon \chi \omega$, not from $\psi \upsilon \chi \eta$. Any kind of refreshing, of body or mind, may be implied), and was not ashamed of (ver. 8) my chain (reff.): but when he was in Rome, sought me out with extraordinary diligence (literally : with more diligence than could have been looked for. Or perhaps, the more diligently: scil. because I was in chains. They all $\dot{a}\pi$ εστράφησάν με: he not only did not this, but earnestly sought me) and found me.

18.] May the Lord grant to him to find mercy from the Lord (the account to be given of the double kúpios, kupiou, here is simply this—that $\delta \phi \eta \delta \kappa \delta \rho$ is had become so completely a formula, that the recurrence was not noticed. This, the recurrence was not noticed. which is Huther's view, is far better than to suppose the second wvp. merely $= \epsilon_{av\tau o \hat{v}}$, or to enter into theological distinctions between kúpios as the Father, and mapà suplov as from the Son, the Judge) in that day (see on ver. 12) : and how many services he did (to me : or, to the saints : the general expression will admit of either) in Ephesus (being probably an Ephesian, cf. ch. iv. 19), thou knowest well (the comparative is not for the positive, here or any where: but the signification is, 'better, than that I need remind thee ').

further step of the same process—imply-ing 'in their turn.' These $\xi \tau \epsilon \rho o \iota$ would be other trustworthy men like themselves). The connexion of this verse with the foregoing and the following has been ques-I believe it to be this: 'The tioned. true keeping of the deposit entrusted to thee will involve thy handing it on uninpaired to others, who may in their turn hand it on again. But in order to this, thou must be strong in grace-thou must be a fellow-sufferer with me in hardships -thou must strive lawfully-thou must not be entangled with this life's matters.' So that ver. 2 serves to prepare him to hear of the necessity of endurance and faithful adhesion to his duty as a Christian soldier, considering that he has his deposit not only to keep, but to deliver down unimpaired. It is obviously a perversion of the sense to regard this verse as referring (as Bengel, 'παράθου, antequam istine ad me proficiscare ') mercly to his journey to Rome - that during that time he should, &c.: the eoortai, and the very contemplation of a similar step on the part of these men at a future time, are against such a supposition.

Mack constructs a long argument out of this verse to shew that there are two sources of Christian instruction in the Church, written teaching and oral, and ends with affirming that those who neglect the latter for the former, have always shown that they in reality set up their own opinion above all teaching. But he forgets that these two methods of teaching are in fact but one and the same. Scripture has been God's way of fixing tradition, and rendering it trustworthy at any distance of time; of obviating the very danger which in this Epistle we see so imminent, viz. of one of those teachers, who were links in this chain of transmission, becoming inefficient and transmitting it inadequately. This very Epistle is therefore a warning to us not to trust oral tradition, seeing that it was so dependent on men, and to accept no way of conserving it but that which God's providence has pointed out to us in the canonical books of Scripture.

3.] Suffer hardship with me (Conyb. happily renders it, 'Take thy share in suffering.' The συγ- binds it to what precedes and follows, referring primarily to the Apostle himself, though doubtless having a wider reference to all who similarly suffer : see above, on the connexion of ver. 2), as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. 4.] No soldier when on service is (suffers himself to be : the passive sense predominates : 'is,' as his normal state. sæpius occurrit in Pandectis Talmudicis." Schöttgen. On the whole matter, consult Grotius's note), that he may please him who called him to be a soldier (who originally enrolled him as a soldier: the word signifies to levy soldiers, or raise a troop, and b στρατολογή- σas designates the commander of such troop. So άντι των απολωλότων ανδρών στρατολογήσαντες έξ απάσης φυλης, Dion. Hal. xi. 24. The same writer uses $\sigma \tau \rho a \tau o$ λογία for a muster, a levy of soldiers,vi. 44; ix. 38. The 'cui se probavit' of the vulgate is unintelligible, unless as Grot. suggests, it is an error for 'qui se probavit.' The taking of these precepts according to the letter, to signify that no minister of Christ may have a secular occupation, is quite beside the purpose : for 1) it is not ministers, but all soldiers of Christ who are spoken of : 2) the position of the verb $\epsilon \mu \pi \lambda \epsilon \kappa \epsilon \tau a \iota$ shews that it is not the fact of the existence of such occupation, but the being entangled in it, which is before the Apostle's mind: 3) the Apostle's own example sufficiently confutes such an idea. Only then does it become unlawful, when such occupation, from its engrossing the man, becomes a hindrance to the work of the ministry,or from its nature is incompatible with it).

5. The soldier must serve on condition of not dividing his service : now we have another instance of the same requirement: and in the conflicts of the arena there are certain laws, without the fulfilment of which no man can obtain the victory. But (the above is not the only example, but) if any one also (q. d. to give another instance) strive in the games (it is necessary to adopt a periphrasis for $\mathbf{\hat{a}}\mathbf{\theta}\mathbf{\lambda}\mathbf{\hat{\eta}}$. That of E. V. 'strive for mas-teries,' is not definite enough, omitting all mention of the games, and by consequence not even suggesting them to the ordinary reader. The vulg. gives it 'certat in agone:' and Luth., mercly fampfet: so also Ostervald and Diodati: Scio,-'lidia en los juegos publicos.' The word $d\theta \lambda \epsilon \hat{\iota} v$, in the best Attic writers, means 'to work,' 'to endure,' and ἀθλεύειν, 'to contend in the games.' [See however Ellic.'s note.] This usage belongs to later Greek : see Palm and Rost's Lex.), he is not crowned

(even in ease of his gaining the victory? or is the word inclusive of all efforts made to get the crown,-'he has no chance of the crown ?' rather the former, from $d\theta\lambda\eta\sigma\eta$ below), unless he have striven (this seems to assume the getting of the victory) lawfully (according to the prescribed conditions not mcrely of the contest, but of the preparation also, see Ellic.]. It is the usual phrase : so Galen, comm. in Hippocr. i. 15: of yuµuaσtal καl οί νομίμως ἀθλοῦντες, ἐπὶ μὲν τοῦ ἀρίστου τον ἄρτον μόνον ἐσθίουσιν, ἐπὶ δέ τοῦ δείπνου τὸ κρέας: Arrian, Epict. iii. 10,-εἰ νομίμως ήθλησας, εἰ ξφαγες όσα δεῖ, εἰ ἐγυμνάσθης, εἰ τοῦ ἀλείπτου ήκουσas [Wetst., where see more examples]. Compare the parallel place, 1 Cor. ix. 24.—τί έστιν, έὰν μη νομίμως; οὐκ, έάν τις τον άγωνα είς έλθη, άρκει τουτο, ούδε εαν αλείψηται, ούδε εαν συμπλακή, άλλα αν μη πάντα τον της άθλησεως νόμον φυλάττη, και τον έπι σιτίων, και τόν έπί σωφροσύνης και σεμνότητος, και τόν έν παλαίστρα, και πάντα απλώς διέλθοι τὰ τοῖς ἀβληταῖς προςήκοντα, οὐδέποτε στεφανοῦται. Chrys.). 6.] Another comparison shewing the necessity of active labour as an antecedent to reward. The husbandman who is engaged in labour (who is actually employed in gathering in the fruit : not κοπιάσαντα) must first partake of the fruits (which he is gathering in : the whole result of his ministry, not here further specified. The saying is akin to βούν άλοωντα μη φιμώσεις -the right of first participation in the harvest belongs to him who is labouring in the field : do not thou therefore, by relaxing this labour, forfeit that right. By this rendering, keeping strictly to the sense of the present part., all difficulty as to the position of $\pi \rho \tilde{\omega} \tau o \nu$ is removed. Many Commentators [Calv., E. V. marg., al., Grot., al., take $\pi \rho \hat{\omega}$. TOV for 'ita demum'] not observing this have supposed, in the sense, a transposition of $\pi \rho \hat{\omega} \tau o \nu$, and given it as if it were τόν γεωργόν δεί, κοπιώντα πρώτον, τών καρπών μεταλ., or as Wahl and Winer [so in older editions of his grammar, e. g. edn. 3, p. 458 : but now, edn. 6, § 61. 4, he merely states the two renderings, without giving an opinion],-τδν

8-13. This statement and substantiation of two of the leading facts of the gospel, seems, especially as connected with the exhortations which follow on it vv. 14 ff., to be aimed at the false teachers by whose assumption Timotheus was in danger of being daunted. The Incarnation and Resurrection of Christ were two truths cspecially imperilled, and indeed denied, by their teaching. At the same time these very truths, believed and persisted in, furnished him with the best grounds for stedfastness in his testimony to the Gospel, and attachment to the Apostle himself, suffering for his faithful-ness to them : and on his adherence to these truths depended his share in that Saviour in whom they were manifested, and in union with whom, in His eternal and unchangeable truth, our share in blessedness depends. Remember, that Jesus Christ has been raised up from the dead (the accus. after µνημόνευε imports that it is the fact respecting Jesus Christ, not so much He Himself, to which attention is directed [see reff.]. Ellic. takes exactly the other view, citing in its favour Winer, § 45. 4, who however implicitly maintains my rendering, by classing even 1 John iv. 2, 2 John 7, with Heb. xiii. 23, γινώσκετε τον αδ. Τιμόθεον απολελυμένον, which he renders "ihr wiffet, bağ . . . entblaffen ift." Ellic. refers to my note on 1 John iv. 2, as if it were inconsistent with the rendering here: but the verb there is $\delta\mu\delta\lambda\delta\gamma\epsilon\tilde{i}\nu$, not μνημονεύειν, which I conceive makes all the difference. According to Ellic.'s rendering, unless we refer $\epsilon \nu \hat{\phi}$ to Christ, which he does not, the context becomes very involved and awkward. The gen. is more usual in later Greek (see Luke xvii. 32: John xv. 20; xvi. 4, 21: Acts xx. 35, &c.)-but the accus. in classical, see Palm and Rost sub vocc, and cf. Herod. i. 36, Æschyl. Pers. 769 [783 Dindorf], Soph. Ag. 1273, Philoct. 121, Eur. Androm. 1165 [1141 Matthiæ], &c.), (Jesus Christ, who was) of the seed of David (this clause must be taken as = τον $\epsilon \kappa$ σπέρμ. Δαυίδ, and the unallowable and otherwise unaccountable ellipsis of the article may probably be explained, as De W., by the words being part of a recognized and technical profession of faith. Compare Rom. i. 3, which is closely parallel. Mack's attempt to join $\epsilon\kappa \sigma \pi \epsilon \rho \mu$. Δ . to $\epsilon\gamma\eta\gamma\epsilon\rho\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\nu$ $\epsilon\kappa$ $\nu\epsilon\kappa\rho$., 'that Jesus Christ was raised from the dead in His flesh, as He sprung from David,' is hardly worth refutation), according to my Gospel ('the Gospel entrusted to me to teach,' as in reff. Here the expression may seem to be used with reference to the false teachers,-but as in the other places it has no such reference, I should rather incline to regard it as a solemn way of speaking, identifying these truths with the preaching which had been the source of Timotheus's belief. Baur, in spite of έν ψ &c. following, understands this εναγγ. µov of the Gospel of St. Lake, as having been written under the authority of St. Paul. See Prolegg. to St. Luke's Gospel in Vol. I. § iii. 6, note), in which ('cujus annuntiandi munere defungens,' Beza : see reff.) I suffer hardship (see ver. 3) even unto (consult Ellic.'s note and his references on $\mu \epsilon \chi \rho i$) chains (see ch. i. 16) as a malefactor ('κακοπαθώ, κακούργοςmalum passionis, ut si præcessisset malum actionis,' Bengel), but the word of God is not bound (δεσμούνται μέν αί χείρες, άλλ' ούχ ή γλώττα, Chrys. : similarly Thdrt. But we shall better, though this reference to himself is not precluded [cf. ch. iv. 17: Acts xxviii. 31], enlarge the words to that wider acceptation, in which he rejoices, Phil. i. 18. As regarded himself, the word of God might be said to be bound, inasmuch as he was prevented from the free proclamation of it: his person was not free, though his tongue and pen were. This more general reference Chrys. himself scems elsewhere to admit [as cited in Heydenr.]: ό διδάσκαλος έδέδετο και ό λόγος επέτετο εκείνος το δεσμωτήριον ώκει, καί ή διδασκαλία πτερωθείσα παν-The purταχόσε τῆς οἰκουμένης ἔτρεχε. pose of adding this seems to be, to remind Timotheus, that his sufferings and im-prisonment had in no way weakened the power of the Gospel, or loosened the ties by which he [Timotheus] was bound to the service of it : hardly as Chrys. : ei ήμεις δεδεμένοι κηρύττομεν, πολλφ μαλλον ύμας τοὺς λελυμένους τοῦτο ποιεῖν χρή). 10.] For this reason (what reason? 'quia me vincto evangelium currit,' says Bengel : and with this agree Huther, De W., al. But neither 1) is this sound logie, nor 2) is it in accordance with the Apostle's usage of $\delta_{1\dot{\alpha}} \tau_0 \tilde{\nu} \tau_0 \ldots \tilde{\nu} \nu_{\alpha}$. 1) The fact, that the word of God is not bound, is clearly not the reason why he suffers these things for the elect: nor can we say with Huther, that the consciousness of this fact is that in which he endures all. De W. takes the predominant idea to be, the dispersion and success of God's word, in and by which the Apostle is encouraged to suffer. But this would certainly, as Wolf says, render the connexion 'dilutior et parum cohærens.' 2) lu 1 Tin. i. 16, διά τοῦτο ήλεήθην ίνα, and Philem. 15, διὰ τοῦτο ἐχωρίσθη Ίνα, the reference of δ . τ . is evidently to what follows : cf. also Rom. iv. 16, 2 Cor. xiii, 10. I would therefore refer the words to the following, and consider them, as in the above instances, as a marked way of indicating the reason presently to be given : 'for this purpose, that;' so Chrys., Thdrt., Wolf, Wiesinger, al.) I endure all things (not merely suffer [obj.]: but readiness and persistence [subj.] are implied in the word, and the universal $\pi d\nu \tau a$ belongs to this subj. meaning--'I am enduring, ready to bear, all things') for the sake of the elect (see refl., especially Tit. i. 1. The Apostle does not, as De W., refer merely to those elect of God who are not yet converted, but generally to the whole category, both those who are [see above] says, "those yet unconverted, as well as those already converted :' and the mere kal advoi might seem to favour this view; but it manifestly is not so) may obtain the salvation which is in (as its element and condition of existence) Christ Jesus with eternal glory (salvation here, in its spiritual presence and power-xápirí έστε σεσωσμένοι, Eph. ii. 5 : and glory hereafter, the full development and expansion of salvation, Rom. viii. 21). Faithful is the saying (see on reff. : another of those current Christian sayings, probably the utterances originally of the Spirit by those who spoke $\pi \rho o \phi \eta \tau \epsilon i a s$ in the Church,-and, as in 1 Tim. iii. 16, bearing with it so much of balance and rhythmical arrangement, as to seem to be a portion of some hymn): for (Chrys., Ec., al., regard this yap as rendering a reason why the $\lambda \delta \gamma \sigma \sigma$ is $\pi i \sigma \tau \delta \sigma$, understanding $\pi_{i\sigma\tau}$. $\delta \lambda$. of what has gone before, viz. the certainty that & Juns ουρανίου τυχών, καl αίωνίου τεύξεται. But this is most unnatural. The γάρ is not merely explicative, as Grot., Huther, al., but as in 1 Tim. iv. 9, renders a reason for the $\pi i \sigma \tau \delta s$,—in the assertion of the fact in well-known words: for the fact is so, that if &c.) if we died with Christ (on account of the aorist, pointing to some one definite event, the reference must be to that participation in Christ's death which takes place at baptism in all those who are His, and which those who follow Him in sufferings emphatically shew that they then did really take on them : see Rom. vi. 3, 4, 8: Col. ii. 12. Certainly, if the aor. stood alone, it might be taken proleptically, looking back on life from that future day in which the $\sigma \nu r$ - $(\eta \sigma o \mu \epsilon \nu \text{ will be realized : but coupled as it})$ is with the present unouper and the future $d\rho\nu\eta\sigma\delta\mu\epsilon\theta a$, we can hardly take it otherwise than literally as to time, of an event already past, and if so, strictly as in the parallel Rom. vi. 8, where the reference is clear), we shall also live with Him (hereafter in glory): if we endure (with Him : the $\sigma v \nu$ must be supplied, cf. $\epsilon i \pi \epsilon \rho$ συνπάσχομεν, Rom. viii. 17), we shall also reign with Him (see Rom. v. 17; viii. 17. In the former pair, death and life are opposed: in this, subjection $\lceil \mathbf{\hat{v}} \pi \mathbf{o} \cdot \boldsymbol{\mu} \cdot \rceil$ and dominion. See the interesting anecdote of Nestor, quoted from the martyrology by Grotius) : if we shall deny (Him), He also will deny us (see Matt. x. 33): if we disbelieve (not, His Resurrection, as Chrys.: εί απιστούμεν δτι ανέστη, ούδεν από τούτου βλάπτεται εκείνος : nor His Divinity, as Ec.(2) or oeds eori, but Him, generally. 14-26. Application of the above general exhortations to the teaching and conversation of Timotheus, especially with reference to the false teachers. 14.] These things (those which have just preceded vv. 8-13) call to their minds (reff.: the minds viz. of those among whom thou art ministering, as the context shews: see a similar ellipsis in Tit. iii. 8), testifying to them before the Lord not to contend with words (see 1 Tim. vi. 4. The var. reading λογομάχει changes the whole arrangement, and attaches Siaµapr. ένώπιον τοῦ κυρίου to the preceding. The chief objections to this are 1) that ύπομίμνησκε διαμαρτυρόμενος ένώπ. τοῦ kuplou is a very laine and inconsistent junction of terms, the strong emphasis of the διαμ. κ.τ.λ. not agreeing with the far weaker word $\delta \pi o \mu (\mu \nu \eta \sigma \kappa \epsilon : 2)$ that in the other places where διαμαρτύρομαι occurs in St. Paul, it precedes an exhortation, e.g. 1 Tim. v. 21; ch. iv. 1, and μαρτύ. popular Eph. iv. 17), - (a thing) useful (xphoipov is in apposition with the preceding sentence, as Katapi (ov in the ree.

ανεπαίσχυντοs is έργατης δόλιος, 2 Cor. xi. 13), rightly administering (the meaning of δρθοτομέω is very variously derived and explained, - ' recte secare ' being unquestionably the rendering. (1) Melanchthon, Beza, Grot., al., suppose the meaning deduced from the right division of the victims, Levit. i. 6 ff.: (2) Vitringa [de Synagog. p. 714, De W.], Calv., al., from the cutting and distributing of bread by the steward or father of a household : 'ac si pater alendis filiis panem in frusta secando distribueret.' Rhes. 422, εὐθεῖαν λόγων τέμνων κέλευθον: Gal. ii. 14, δρθοποδείν πρός την αλήθειαν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου. So De W.: but Huther objects, and I think with reason, that in all these places the idea of a way is expressly introduced, and that without such expression we cannot supply the idea in λόγον. (6) Huther's own view, that, the original meaning being 'rightly to divide,' the idea of $\tau \in \mu \nu \in \nu$ was gradually lost, as in καινοτομείν, so that the word came to signify 'to manage rightly,' 'to treat truthfully without falsifying,' scems to approach the nearest to the requirements of the context : the opposite being, as he observes, $\kappa a \pi \eta \lambda \epsilon \dot{\nu} \epsilon i \nu$

The seal [inscription] would indicate ownership and destination : both of which are pointed at in the two texts following) (1) The Lord knoweth (see 1 Cor. viii. 3, note : 'novit amanter [?], nec nosse desinit,' as Bengel) them that are His (the LXX runs: επέσκεπται και έγνω δ θεός τούς ύντας αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἁγίους, καὶ προςηγάγετο πρός ἑαυτόν): and (2) Let every one that nameth the name of the Lord (viz. as his Lord : not exactly equivalent to 'calleth on the name of the Lord') stand aloof from iniquity (the passage in Isa. stands, απόστητε, απόστητε, εξέλθατε έκείθεν, και ἀκαθάρτου μή ἕψησθε, . . . άφορίσθητε οι φέροντες τὰ σκεύη κυρίου. It is clearly no reason against this passage being here alluded to, that [as Conyb.] it is expressly cited 2 Cor. vi. 17. Ellic. remarks, that it is possibly in continued allusion to Num. xvi. 26, anoσχίσθητε από τών σκηνών, τών ανθρώπων τῶν σκληρῶν τούτων). 20. Those who are truly the Lord's are known to Him and depart from iniquity: but in the visible church there are many un-worthy members. This is illustrated by the following similitude. But (contrast to the preceding definition of the Lord's people) in a great house (= $\epsilon \nu \tau \hat{\eta}$ olkov- $\mu \epsilon \nu \eta \pi a \sigma \eta$, Chrys., who strenuously upholds that view; so also Thdrt. and the Greek Commentators, Grot., al.: but far better understood of the church, for the reason given by Calv.: "contextus qui dem huc potius nos ducit, ut de ecclesia intelligamus : neque enim de extraneis disputat Paulus, sed de ipsa Dei familia :" so also Cypr., Aug., Amhr., all. The idea then is much the same as that in the parable of the drag-net, Matt. xiii. 47-49: not in the parable of the tares of the field, as De W.: for there it is expressly said, & dypos dorly & Koomos) there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and earthenware; and some for honour, some for dishonour (viz. in the use of the vessels themselves : not, as Mack, al., to bring honour or dishonour on the house or its inhabitants. Estius, anxious to avoid the idea of heretics being in the church, would understand the two elasses in each sentence as those distinguished by gifts, and those not so dis-tinguished: and so Corn.-a-Lap., al.: but this seems alien from the context: cf. especially the next verse. On the comparison, sec Ellic.'s references). 21.] Here the thing signified is mingled with the similitude: the voluntary act described belonging, not to the vessels, but to the members of the church who are designated by them. If then (our deduces a consequence from the similitude : q. d. Chrys. draws as an inference from this, μετά δε των άλλων ου χρή $\pi \rho \hat{a} o \nu \epsilon \bar{l} \nu a \iota$, which is directly against ver. 25: Thdrt. far better, drawing the distinction between love and peace : àyamav µèv γὰρ ἄπαντας δυνατόν, ἐπειδήπερ τοῦτο καὶ δ εὐαγγελικὸς παρακελεύεται νόμος, 'Αγαπατε τούς έχθρούς ύμων εἰρηνεύειν δέ ού πρός άπαντας ένεστι, της γάρ κοινης τοῦτο προαιρέσεως δεῖται τοιοῦτοι δὲ πάντες οι έκ καθαρας καρδίας τον δεσπότην επικαλούμενοι. The meaning being much the same, and δοῦλον in the emphatic place representing $\tau \partial \nu$ δούλον, the definite art., in rendering, gives the emphasis, and points out the individual servant, better than the indefinite) servant of the Lord (Jesus; see 1 Cor. vii. 22. It is evident from what follows, that the servant of the Lord here, in the Apostle's view, is not so much every true Christian,-however applicable such a maxim may be to him also,—but the minister of Christ, as Timotheus was : cf. διδακτικόν, &c. below) must not strive (the argument is in the form of an enthymeme :- ' propositionem ab experientia manifestam relinquit. Assumptio vero tacitam sui probationem includit, eamque hujusmodi : servun oportet imitari Dominum suum.' Estius), but be gentle (ref.) towards all, apt to teach (ref. :- so E. V. well: for, as Bengel, 'hoc non solum soliditatem et facilitatem in docendo, sed vel maxime patientiam et assiduitatem siguificat.' In fact these latter must be, on account of the contrast which the Apostle is bringing out, regarded as prominent here), patient of wrong (so Conyb., and perhaps we can hardly find a better expression, though 'wrong' does not by any means cover the meaning of the Kakóv: 'long-suffering' would be unobjectionable, were it not that we have $\mu \alpha \kappa \rho \delta \theta \nu \mu \sigma s$, to which that word is already appropriated. Plutarch, Coriolan. e. 15, says, that he did not repress his temper, ούδε την ερημία ξύνοικον, ώς Πλάτων έλεγεν, αὐθάδειαν εἰδώς ὅτι δεῖ μάλιστα διαφεύγειν επιχειρούντα πράγμασι κοινοΐς και ανθρώποις όμιλειν, και γενέσθαι τῆς πολλὰ γελωμένης ὑπ' ἐνίων ανεξικακίας έραστήν), in meekness correcting (not 'instructing,' see reff., and note on dπaiδεύτουs, ver. 23) those who oppose themselves (better than as Ambrst., 'cos qui diversa sentiunt :' to take the general meaning of Siarleesdai, satisfies the context better, than to supply $\tau \partial \nu$ vovv. The Vulg., 'cos qui resistunt veritati,' particularizes too much in another way), if at any time (literally, ' lest at any time :' but µήποτε in later Greek sometimes loses this aversative meaning and is almost equivalent to einore. Cf. Viger, p. 457, where the annotator says of $\mu \eta \pi \sigma \tau \epsilon$, vocula tironibus sæpissime crucem figens, cum significat fortasse, vel si quando, and he then cites this passage. The account to be given of the usage is that, from $\mu\eta$ being commonly used after verbs of fearing, &c.,—then after verbs expressing anxiety of any kind [φροντίζω, μή . . . Xen.: σκοπώ, μή . . . Plat. : ὑποπτεύειν, μή ... Xen. : alσχύνομαι, μη . . . Plat.], its proper aversative force by degrees became forgotten, and thus it, and words compounded with it, were used in later Greek in sentences where no such force can be intended. De W. refers to Kypke for examples of this usage from Plut. and Athenæus : but Kypke does not notice the word here at all) God may give them repentance (because their consciences were impure [see above on ver. 22] and lives evil. Cf. Ellic.'s remarks on $\mu\epsilon\tau a\nu$.) in order to the knowledge of [the] truth (see note, 1 Tim. ii. 4), and they may awake sober (from their moral and spiritual intoxication : so $\epsilon \kappa \nu \eta \phi$., in ref. 1 Cor., and this same word in Jos.: the $\theta \rho \hat{\eta} \nu \sigma_i$ there, as the ensnarement by the devil here, being regarded as a kind of intoxication. There is no one word in English which will express ava-výψaι : Conyb. has paraphrased it by 'escape, restored to soberness' ['return to soberness,' Ellic.]: perhaps the E. proach to the meaning as we can get. We have the word used literally by Plutarch, Camillus, c. 23 : δ Κάμιλλοs . . . περί μέσας τὰς νύκτας προςέμιξε τῷ χάρακι . . . έκταράττων ανθρώπους κακώς ύπο μέθης κ. μόλις έκ των υπνων αναφέροντας πρός τον θόρυβον. ολίγοι μέν ούν ανανήψαντες έν τῷ φόβω κ. διασκευασάμενοι, τοὺς περὶ τὸν Κάμιλλον ὑπέστησαν.... Sir Thomas North renders it, 'There were some notwithstanding did bustle up at the sudden noise.' See also examples in Wetst.) out of the snare of the devil (gen. subj., 'the snare which the devil laid for them.' There is properly no confusion of metaphor, the idea being that these persons have in a state of intoxication been entrapped, and are enabled, at their awaking sober, to escape. But the construction is elliptic, άνανήψωσιν έκ = έκφύγωσιν άνανήψαν- $\tau \epsilon s \epsilon \kappa$), having been (during their spiritual $\mu \epsilon \theta \eta$) taken captive by him unto (for the fulfilment of, in pursuance of) the will of Him (viz. God: that Other, indicated by excivou. Thus I am now persuaded the words must be rendered : abroû, referring to the devil, and it being signified that the taking captive of these men by him only takes place as far as God permits; according to His will. Rendering it thus, as do Aret., Estius, and Ellicott, I do not hold the other view, which makes $a\dot{v}\tau o\hat{v}$ and $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon i\nu ov$ both refer to the devil, to be untenable. I therefore give my note much as it stood before, that the student may have both sides before him. The difficulty is of course to determine whether the pronouns are used of the same person, or of different persons. From the Greek expositors downwards, some have held a very different rendering of the words from either of those here indicated : Thl. e. g., -- ἐν πλάνη, φησί, νήψονται, άλλὰ ζωγρηθέντες ύπο θεοῦ εἰς το έκείνου θέλημα, τουτέστι τοῦ θεοῦ, ἴσως άνανήψουσιν άπό των ύδάτων της πλάνης. This, it is true, does not get rid of the difficulty respecting the pronouns, but it pointed a way towards doing so : and thus Wetst., Bengel, and Mack, understand αὐτοῦ to apply to the δοῦλοs κυρίου,έκείνου to God—' taken prisoners by God's servant according to His will.' [Bengel however, as Beza, Grot., joins eis to ek. $\theta \epsilon \lambda$. with $d \nu a \nu \eta \psi \omega \sigma \iota \nu$, which is unnatural, leaving έζωγρ. ὑπ' αὐτοῦ standing alone.] The great objection to this is, the exceeding confusion which it introduces into the figure, in representing men who are just recovering their sense and liberty, as $\epsilon \zeta \omega$ ypnuévoi,-and in applying that participle, occurring as it does just after the mention of $\pi a \gamma is$, not to that snare, but to another which does not appear at all. Arct. and Estius proposed the rendering given above ;- ' taken captive by the devil according to God's will,' i. e. as Est., 'quamdiu Deus voluerit, eujus volun-tati nec diabolus resistere potest.' De W. charges this with rendering eis as if it were $\kappa \alpha \tau \dot{\alpha}$, but the charge is not just: for the permitting the devil to hold them captive, on this view, would be strictly ϵls , 'in pursuance of,' 'so as to follow,' God's purpose. The real objection perhaps is, that it introduces a new and foreign element, viz. the fact that this capture is overruled by God-of which matter there is here no question. There is no real difficulty whatever in the application of autou and ekelvou to the samo person. Kühner, § 629, ann. 3, gives from Plato, Cratyl. p. 430, δείξαι αὐτῷ ἁν μέν τύχη, ἐκείνου εἰκόνα, ἁν δὲ τύχη, γυναικός [where the reason for the use of ἐκείνου, viz. to emphasize the pronoun, is precisely as here; see below]: from Lysias, c. Eratosth. p. 429, έως δ λεγόμενος ύπ' ἐκείνου καιρός έπιμελώς ύπ' αυτοῦ ἐτηρήθη [which cases of enervos followed by autos must not be dismissed, as Ellic., as inapplicable : they shew at all events that there was no absolute objection to using the two pronouns of the same person. See below]. But he does not give an account of the idiom, which seems to be this: ekeivos, from its very meaning, always carries somewhat of emphasis with it; it is therefore unfit for mere reflexive or unemphatic use, and accordingly when the subject pointed out by exervos occurs in such nnemphatic position, exervos is replaced by avtos. On the other hand, where emphasis is required, excivos is repeated : e. g. Soph. Aj. 1039, κείνος τὰ κείνου στεργέτω, κάγώ $\tau d\delta \epsilon$. And this emphatic or unemphatic use is not determined by priority of order, but by logical considerations. So here in έζωγρημένοι ύπ' αὐτοῦ, the αὐτοῦ is the mere reflex of διαβόλου which has just occurred, - whereas in els to eneivou bennµa, the incivov would, according to this rendering, bring out and emphasize the danger and degradation of these persons, who had been, in their spiritual $\mu \epsilon \theta \eta$, just taken captive at the pleasure of exervos, their mortal foe. Still, it now seems to me it is better to adhere to the common meaning of the two pronouns, even though it should seem to introduce a new idea. The novelty however may be somewhat removed by remembering that God's sovereign power as the giver of repentance was already before the Apostle's mind).

Cn. III. 1-9.] Warning of bad times to come, in which men shall be ungodly and hypocritical :- nay, against such men as already present, and doing mischief.

1.] But (the contrast is in the dark prophetic announcement, so different in character from the hope just expressed) this know, that in the last days (see 1 Tim. iv. 1, where the expression is somewhat different. The period referred to here is, from all N. T. analogy [cf. 2 Pet. iii. 3: Jude 18], that immediately preceding the coming of the Lord. That day and hour being hidden from all men, and even from the Son Himself, Mark xiii. 32, -the Spirit of prophecy, which is the Spirit of the Son, did not reveal to the Apostles its place in the ages of time. They, like the subsequent generations of the Church, were kept waiting for it, and for the most part wrote and spoke of it as soon to appear ; not however without many and sufficient hints furnished by the Spirit, of an interval, and that no short one, first to elapse. In this place, these last days are set before Timotheus as being on their way, and indeed their premonitory symptoms already appearing. The discovery which the lapse of centuries and the ways of providence have made to us, xpoulGer & núpids μου έλθείν, misleads none but unfaithful servants: while the only modification in the understanding of the premonitory symptoms, is, that for us, He with whom a thousand years are as one day has sprcad them, without changing their substance or their truth, over many consecutive ages. Cf. ref. 1 John, --where we have the still plainer assertion, $\epsilon \sigma \chi \dot{a} \tau \eta$ $\omega \rho a \epsilon \sigma \tau (\nu)$ grievous times shall come (we can hardly express evothoovtal nearer in English : 'instabunt,' of the Vulg., though blamed by De W., is right, in the sense in-which we use 'instant' of the present month or year [Ellic. quotes Auct. ad Herenn. ii. 5, 'dividitur (tempus) in tempora tria, præteritum, instans, consequens']; 'aderunt' of Grot. and Bengel amounts in fact to the same. But this very interpenetration serves to depict more vividly the whole manifoldness of the manifestation of evil." And from these turn away (ref. : ef. ἐκτρέπεσθαι, 1 Tim. vi. 20. those presently described : attach to themselves entirely, so that they follow them as if dragged about by them : a late word, said to be of Alexandrian or Macedonian origin, and condemned by the Atticist : see Ellicott) silly women (the diminutive denotes contempt) laden with sins (De W. alone scems to have given the true reason of the insertion of this particular. The stress is on $\sigma \epsilon \sigma \omega \rho \epsilon \nu \mu \epsilon \nu a$: they are burdened, their consciences oppressed, with sins, and in this morbid state they lie open to the insidious attacks of these proselytizers who promise them case of conscience if they will follow them), led about by lusts of all kinds (I should rather imagine, from the context, that the reference here is not so much to 'fleshly lusts' properly so called,-though from what we know of such feminine spiritual attachments, ancient [see below] and modern, such must by no means be excluded, —as to the ever-shifting $[\pi oin(\lambda \eta)]$ passion for change in doctrine and manner of teaching, which is the eminent characteristic of these captives to designing spiritual teachers-the running after fashionable men and fashionable teucts, which draw them [ayovor] in flocks in the most opposite and inconsistent directions), evermore learning (always with some new point absorbing them, which seems to them the most important, to the depreciation of what they held and seemed to know before), and never (on $\mu\eta\delta$., see Ellicott) able to come to the thorough knowledge (reff., and notes: the decisive and stable apprehension, in which they might be grounded and settled against further novelties) of the truth (this again is referred by Chrys., all., to moral deadening of their apprehension by profligate lives : energy éautas κατέχωσαν ταις έπιθυμίαις έκείναις και τοις άμαρτήμασιν, έπωρώθη αὐτῶν ἡ διάνοια. It may be so, in the deeper ground of the psychological reason for this their fickle and imperfect condition : but I should rather think that the Apostle here indicates their character as connected with the fact of their captivity to these teachers.

With regard to the fact itself, we have abundant testimony that the Gnostic heresy in its progress, as indeed all new and strange systems, laid hold chiefly of the female sex : so Irenæus, i. 13. 3, p. 61, of the Valentinian Marcus, $\mu \dot{\alpha} \lambda \iota \sigma \tau a \pi \epsilon \rho l$ yuvaîkas ào xoleîtai, and in ib. 6, p. 63 f., καὶ μαθηταὶ δὲ αὐτοῦ τινες . . . ἐξαπατῶντες γυναικάρια πολλά διέφθειραν : aud Epiphanius, Hær. xxvi. 12, vol. i. p. 93, charges the Gnostics with eural (eiv rois yuvaikaplois and απατάν το αυτοίς πειθόμενον yuvaikeiov yevos, then quoting this passage. Jerome, Ep. exxxiii. ad Ctesiphontem 4, vol. i. p. 1031 f., collects a number of instances of this: "Sinon Magus hæresin condidit Helenæ meretricis adjutus auxilio: Nicolaus Antiochenus omnium immunditiarum repertor choros duxit fæmineos: Marcion Romain præmisit mulierem quæ decipiendos sibi animos præpararet. Apelles Philumenem suarum comitem habuit doctrinarum : Montanus Priscam et Maximillam primum auro corrupit, deinde hæresi polluit . . . : Arins ut orbem deciperet, sororem principis ante decepit. Donatus ... Lucillæ opibus adjutus est: Agape Elpidium . . . eæcum cæca duxit in foveam : Priscilliano juneta fuit Galla."

The general answer to Baur, who again uses this as a proof of the later origin of these Epistles, —will be found in the Prolegomena, ch. vii. § i. De Wette remarks, "This is an admirable characterization of zealous soul-hunters (who have been principally found, and are still found, among the Roman Catholics) and their victims. We must not however divide the different traits among different classes or individuals: it is their combination only which is characteristic." Jannes et Mambres liber." But Thdrt.'s account is more probable [τὰ μέντοι τούτων δνόματα οὐκ ἐκ τῆς θείας γραφῆς μεμάθη-κεν δ θεῖος ἀπόστολος, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῆς ἀγρά-φου τῶν Ίουδαίων διδασκαλίας], cspeeially as the names are found in the Targum of Jonathau on Exod. vii. 11; Num. xxii. 22. Schöttgen has [in loc.] a long account of their traditional history : and Wetst. quotes the passages at length. They were the sons of Balaam-prophesied to Pharaoh the birth of Moses, in consequence of which he gave the order for the destruction of the Jewish children, -and thenceforward appear as the counsellors of much of the cvil,-in Egypt, and in the desert, after the Exodus,which happened to Israel. They were variously reported to have perished in the Red Sca, or to have been killed in the tumult consequent on the making the golden ealf, which they had advised. Origen, contra Cels. iv. 51, vol. i. p. 543, mentions the Pythagorean Nounenius as relating the history of Jannes and Jambres : so also Euseb. præp. evang. ix. 8, vol. iii. [Migne], p. 412. Pliny, H. Nat. xxx. 1, says, "Est et alia Magices factio, a Mose et Jamme et Jotape Judæis pendens, sed multis millibus annorum post Zoroastrem." The later Jews, with some ingenuity, distorted the names into Joannes and Ambrosius), thus these also withstand the truth, being men corrupted (reff. : the Lexx. quote καταφθαpels tov Blov from a fragment of Menander) in mind, worthless (not abiding the test, 'rejectanei') concerning the faith (in respect of the faith : $\pi \epsilon \rho \tilde{l} \tau \eta \nu \pi i \sigma \tau i \nu$ is not, as Huther, equivalent to $\pi \epsilon \rho l \tau \hat{\eta} s$ $\pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$, but expresses more the local meaning of περί: 'circa,' as the Vulg. here has it. In 1 Tim. i. 19, περι την πίστιν ἐνανάγησαν, we have the local reference brought out more strongly, the faith being, as it were, a rock, on, round which they had been shipwrecked).

9.7 Notwithstanding (Ellic. well remarks that ana here after an affirmative sentence should have its full adversative force) they shall not advance further (in ch. ii. 16, it is said, έπλ πλεΐον προκόψου- $\sigma_{i\nu}$ a $\sigma_{\epsilon}\beta_{\epsilon}$ (as: and it is in vain to deny that there is an apparent and literal inconsistency between the two assertions. But on looking further into them, it is manifest, that while there the Apostle is speaking of an immediate spread of error, here he is looking to its ultimate defeat and extinction : as Chrys., κάν πρότερον ἀνθήση τὰ τῆς πλάνης, εἰς τέλος οὐ διαμενεί): for their folly (unintelligent and senseless method of proselytizing and upholding their opinions [see ref. Luke], - and indeed folly of those opinions them-scives) shall be thoroughly manifested (ref. $\pi \alpha \nu \tau$ $\epsilon \pi o (\eta \sigma \epsilon \nu \epsilon \kappa \delta \eta \lambda \alpha$, Demosth. 24. 10) to all, as also that of those men was (Exod. viii. 18; ix. 11: but most probably the allusion is to their traditional end).

Wiesinger, all. The aorist is both less obvious and more appropriate than the perfect : this was the example set before him, and the reminiscence, joined to the exhortation of ver. 14, bears something of reproach with it, which is quite in accordance with what we have reason to infer from the general tone of the Epistle. Whereas the perfect would imply that the example had been really ever before him, and followed up to the present moment: and so would weaken the necessity of the exhortation) my teaching, conduct (reff. : and add 2 Macc. iv. 16; vi. 8; xi. 24: $\tau \hat{\eta}$ διὰ $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ έμγων πολιτεία, Thdrt. All these words are dependent on μου, not to be taken [Mack] as applying to Timo-theus, 'Thou followedst my teaching in thy conduct, &c.,' which would introduce an unnatural accumulation of encomia on him, and would besides assume that he had been persecuted [ef. rois διωγμοίs], which there is no reason to suppose), purpose- (ref. τοῦτο περί προθυμίας καὶ τοῦ παραστήματος της ψυχής, Chrys. Ellic. remarks, that in all other passages in St. Paul's Epistles, $\pi \rho \delta \theta \epsilon \sigma is$ used with reference to God), faith ($\delta \pi o lav \, \epsilon \chi \omega \, \pi \epsilon \rho l$ τον δεσπότην διάθεσιν, Thdrt.), longsuffering (ὅπως φέρω τὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν πλημμελήματα, Thdrt.: or perhaps, as Chrys., πώς οὐδέν με τούτων ἐτάραττε,his patience in respect of the false teachers and the troubles of the time), love (8mep obx είχον ούτοι, Chrys.), endurance (πως φέρω γενναίως των έναντίων τὰς προςβολάς, Thdrt.), persecutions ('to these ὑπομονή furnished the note of transition.' Huth.), sufferings (not only was I persecuted, but the persecution issued in infliction of suffering), such (sufferings) as befell me in Antioch (of Pisidia), in Iconium, in Lystra (why should these be especially enu-merated? It may be so, doubtless: and this reason, though rejected by De W., Huther, Wiesinger, al., seems much better to suit the context and probability, than the other, given by Huther, al., that these persecutions were the first which befell the Apostle in his missionary work among the heathen. It is objected to it, that during the former of these persecutions Timo-theus was not with St. Paul. But the answer to that is easy. At the time of his conversion, they were recent, and the talk of the churches in those parts: and thus, especially with our rendering, and the nor. sense of $\pi a \rho \eta \kappa o \lambda o \delta \theta \eta \sigma a s$, would be naturally mentioned, as being those sufferings of the Apostle which first excited the young convert's attention to make them his own pattern of what he too must suffer for the Gospel's sake. Baur and De Wette regard the exact correspondence with the Acts [xiii. 50; xiv. 5, 19; xvi. 3] as a suspicious circumstance. Wiesinger well asks, would they have regarded a discrepancy from the Acts as a mark of genuineness ?); what persecutions (there is a zeugnatic construction here-understand, 'thou sawest; in proposing to thyself a pattern thou hadst before thee . . .' [I cannot see how, as Ellic. asserts, this rendering vitiates the construction. Doubtless his rendering, 'such persecutions as,' is legitimate, but it seems to me feeble after the preceding ofa.] Heydenr., Mack, al., understand these words as an exclamation : οίους διωγμ. υπήνεγκα! Ι need hardly observe that such an exclamation would be wholly alien from the character and style of the Apostle) I underwent, and out of all the Lord delivered me (ἀμφότερα [both clauses of the sentence] παρακλήσεως ότι καὶ ἐγὼ προθυμίαν παρειχόμην γενναίαν, και [ότι] ούκ έγ-

But (on the other hand : cuted. a reason why persecutions must be expected, and even worse and more bitter as time goes on. The opposition certainly, as seems to me [see also Wiesinger and Ellicott], is to the clause immediately preceding, not, as De W. and Huther maintain, to ver. 10 f. There would thus be no real contrast : whereas on our view, it is forcibly represented that the breach between light and darkness, between ev- $\sigma \epsilon \beta \epsilon \mu a$ and $\pi o \nu \eta \rho \mu a$, would not be healed, but rather widened, as time wont on) evil men (in general,-over the world: particularized, as applying to the matter in hand, by the next words) and seducers (lit. magicians, in allusion probably to the Egyptian magicians mentioned above. There the diffusion of evil was spoken of: here its intensity), deceiving and being deceived (πλανώμενοι is not middle [as Bengel, qui se seducendos permittunt'] but passive: rather for contrast's sake, as the middle would be vapid, than for the reason given by Huther, that if so, it would stand first, because he that deceives others is first himself deceived : for we might say exactly the same of the passive. Nor is the active participle to be assigned to the $\gamma \delta \eta \tau \epsilon s$ and the passive to the $\pi o \nu \eta \rho \delta i$, as Bengel also: both equally designate both. But his remark is striking and just, 'Qui semel alios decipere cœpit, eo ininus ipse ab crrore se recipit, ct co facilius alienos errores mutuo amplectitur').

There is considerable doubt about the construction of this clause, πασα.... ἀφέλιμος. Is it to be taken, (1) πασα γραφή (subject) θεόπνευστος (predicate) (έστιν), και ώφ., i. c. In deciding between these two, the following considerations must be weighed : (a) the requirement of the context. The object of the present verse plainly is to set before Timotheus the value of his early instruction as a motive to his remaining faithful to it. It is then very possible, that the Apostle might wish to exalt the dignity of the Scripture by asserting of it that it was $\theta \epsilon \delta \pi \nu \epsilon \upsilon \sigma \tau \sigma s$, and then out of this lofty predicate might unfold kal $\dot{\omega}\phi\dot{\epsilon}\lambda$., &c.—its various uses in the spiritual life. On the other hand it may be urged, that thus the two epithets do not hang naturally together, the first consisting of the one word $\theta\epsilon\delta\pi\nu\epsilon\nu\sigma\tau\sigma s$, and the other heing expanded into a whole sentence: especially as in order at all to give symmetry to the whole, the Iva Eprios $\frac{3}{2} \kappa.\tau.\lambda$. must be understood as the purposed result of the $\theta \epsilon_0 \pi \nu \epsilon_0 \sigma \tau i a$ as well as the $\dot{\omega}\phi\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon_{ia}$ of the Scriptures, which is hardly natural: (b) the requirements of the grammatical construction of $\kappa a i$, which must on all grounds be retained as genuine.

Can this kai be rendered 'also,' and attached to $\dot{\omega}\phi\epsilon\lambda\mu\sigma$? There seems no reason to question its legitimacy, thus taken. Such an expression as this, $\pi \hat{a}s$ ἀνηρ πλεονέκτης, καl είδωλολάτρης, though a harsh sentence, would be a legitimate one. And constructions more or less approximating to this are found in the N. T. : e.g., Luke i. 36, 'Ελισάβετ ή συγγενίς σου και αυτή συνειληφυΐα: Acts xxvi. 26, πρός δν και παβρησιαζό-μενος λαλώ: xxviii. 28, αυτοί και ακούσονται: Rom. viii. 29, ούς προέγνω καλ προώρισεν : Gal. iv. 7, εί δε υίδς και κληpovouos. In all these, rai introduces the predicatory clause, calling special attention to the fact enounced in it. Cf. also such expressions as καl τοῦτο μέν ἦττον καl θαυμαστόν, Plato, Symp. p. 177 b,σκέψαι τάλαν, ώς και καταγέλαστον τό μάλλον και έπετίθεντο, Thue. iv. 1.

I own on the whole the balance seems to me to incline on the side of (2), unobjectionable as it is in construction, and of the two, better suited to the context. I therefore follow it, hesitatingly, I confess, but feeling that it is not to be lightly overthrown. See on the whole, Ellicott, who takes the same view. Every Scripture (not 'every writing:' the word, with or without the art., never occurs in the N. T. except in the sense of 'Scripture;' and we have it, as we might expect in the later apostolic times, anarthrous in 2 Pet. i. 20, πασα προφητεία γραφήs. Where it occurs anarthrous in the Gospels, it signifies a passage of Scripture, 'a Scrip-ture,' as we say: e.g. John xix. 37. It is true, that $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \gamma \rho a \phi \eta$ might be numbered with those other apparent solœcisms, πασα οἰκοδομή, Eph. ii. 21, πασα Ίεροσόλυμα, Matt. ii. 3, where the subst. being used anarthrous, $\pi \hat{a}s = \pi \hat{a}s \ \delta$: but, in the presence of such phrases as έτέρα γραφη λέγει [John l. c.], it is safer to keep to the meaning, unobjectionable both grammatically and contextually, 'every Scripture'-i.e. 'every part of [= in the sense, 'all'] Scripture') given by inspiration of God (as γραφή answers to γράμματα above, so θεόπνευστοs to iepá. De W. has well illustrated the word : " θεόπνευστος ' divinitus inspirata,' Vulg., is an expression and idea connected with $\pi \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu \alpha$ [properly breath], the power of the divine Spirit being conceived of as a breath of life: the word thus amounts to 'inspired,' 'breathed through,' 'full of the Spirit.' It [the idea] is common to Jews, Greeks, and Romans. First of all, θεόπνευστος is found as a predicate of persons : $\delta \theta \epsilon \delta$ πνευστοs ανήρ Wetst. [from Marcus Ægyptius], cf. Jos. and Cic. in the two passages above,-2 Pet. i. 21, ύπὸ πνεύματος άγίου Φερόμενοι ελάλησαν από θεού άνθμωποι: Matt. xxii. 43, Δαυείδ έν πνεύματι καλεί autor kúpior: then it was also applied to things, cf. the last passage of Cicero, and Phocyl., Plutarch, above." On the meaning of the word as applied to the Scriptures, see Prolegg. to Vol. I. ' On the inspiration of the Gospels:' and compare Ellicott's note here. As applied to the prophets, it would not materially differ, except that we ever regard one speaking prophecy, strictly so called, as more immediately and thoroughly the mouthpiece of the Holy Spirit, seeing that the future is wholly hidden from men, and God does not in this case use or inspire human testimony to facts, but suggests the whole substance of what is said, direct from Himself) is also (besides this its quality of inspiration : on the construction, see above) profitable for (towards) teaching (& γάρ άγνοουμεν εκείθεν μανθάvouev, Thdrt. The quotations in De W. himself justify the meaning of 'press on,' 'be urgent,' generally : not perhaps in preaching only, but in the whole work of the ministry. Cf. This latter passage gives the more correct reference, -- not so much to his opportunities, as the former, but to theirs [as Ellic. quotes from Aug. on Ps. cxxviii., vol. iv. p. 1689, "sonet verbum Dei volentibus opportune, nolentibus importune"]. Bengel, from Pricæus, gives examples of similar expressions : "Nicetas Choniates, παιδαγωγώ έμβριθει έοικώς, εύ-καίρως ακαίρως έπέπληττεν. Julian: έπορεύετο έπι τας των φίλων οικίας ακλητος κεκλημένος. Virgilii : digna indigna pati,' Tcrentii: 'cum milite isto præsens absens ut sics.'" So fanda nefanda, plus minus, nolens volens, &c.), convict, rebuke (reff.), exhort, in (not ' with ;' it is not the accompaniment of the actions, but the element, the temper in which they are to be performed) all (possible) long-suffering and teaching (not subjective, 'perseverance in teaching,' as Conyb.; but 'teaching' itself: it [objective] is to be the element in which these acts take place, as well as μακροθυμία [subjective]. The junction is harsh, but not therefore to he avoided. Of course, hendiadys $[= i\nu \pi d\sigma \eta \mu a \kappa \rho \sigma \theta \nu \mu l q \delta i \delta a \chi \hat{\eta} s$, Grot., Rosenm.] is out of the question. On διδαχή and διδασκαλία, see Ellicott's note). 3, 4.] Reason why all these will be wanted. For there shall be a time when they (mcn, i. e. professing Christians, as the context shews) will not endure (not bear-as being offensive to them : reff.) the healthy doctrine (reff. : viz. of the Gospel), but according to (after the course of) their own desires (instead of, in subjection to God's providence) will to themselves (emphatic) heap up (one upon another : τδ αδιάκριτον πληθος $\epsilon \delta \eta \lambda \omega \sigma \epsilon$, Chrys. There is no meaning of 'heap upon themselves,' 'to their own eost,' as Luth., 'werden fie ihnen felbst Lehrer aufladen :' so Heydenr. also) teachers, having itching ears (ζητοῦντές τι ἀκοῦσαι καθ ἡδονήν, Hesych.: 'sermones quærunt vitia sua titillantes,' Grot. Ellic. here). 5 ff. He enforces on Timotheus the duty of worthily fulfilling his office, in consideration of his own approaching end. For this being introduced, various reasons have been given :---(1) he himself would be no longer able to make head against these adverse influences, and therefore must leave Timotheus and others to succeed him : so Heydenr., Huther, al.: (2) "ego quamdiu vixi manum tibi porrexi: tibi meæ assiduæ exhortationes non defuerunt, tibi mea consilia fuerunt magno adjumento, et exemplum etiam magnæ confirmationi : jam tempus est ut tibi ipse magister sis atque hortator, natarcque incipias sine cortice : cave ne quid morte mea in te mutatum animadvertatur," Calv. : similarly Grot. : (3) "causa quæ Timotheum moveat ad officium : Pauli discessus et beatitudo : finis coronat opus." Beng., and so Chrys., Hom. in loc., in a very beautiful passage, too long for transcription: (4) to stir up Timotheus to imitation of him: so Pel., Ambr., Heinr., al. [in De W.] There seems no reason why any one of these should be chosen to the exclusion of the rest: we may well, with Flatt, combine (1) and (4), at the same time bearing (2) and (3) in mind :- 'I am no longer here to withstand these things: be thou a worthy successor of me, no longer depending on, but carrying ont for thyself iny directions: follow my steps, inherit their result, and the honour of their end.'

5.] But (as contrasted with the description preceding) do thou (emphatic) be sober (it is difficult to give the full meaning of $v \hat{\eta} \phi \epsilon$ in a version. The reference is especially to the clearness and wakefulness of attention and observance which attends on sobriety, as distinguished from the lack of these qualities in intoxication. 'Keep thy coolness and presence of mind, that thou be not entrapped into forgetfulness, but discern and use every opportunity of speaking and acting for the truth, Mack: cf. also Ellic.) in all things, suffer hardship (refl.), do the work of an Evangelist (refl. : here probably in a wider sense, including all that belongs to a preacher and teacher of the Gospel), fill up the measure of (fill np, in every point; leaving nothing undone in. Beza's rendering, 'ministerii tui pleuam fidem facito, i. e. veris argumentis comproba te germanum esse Dei ministrum,'-so Calv. ministerium tuum probatum redde,'-is justified by usage (reff.), but hardly in accordance with ver. 17: see there) thy 6.] For the connexion, see ministry. above. For I am already being offered (as a drink-offering: i. e. the process is begun, which shall shed my blood. ' Ready to be offered ' [E. V., Conyb., so also Matthies, Est., al.] misses the force of the present. Grot. would render it 'jam nunc aspergor vino, id est, præparor ad mortem :' but such a meaning for $\sigma \pi \epsilon \nu \delta \rho \mu a \iota$ does not seem to be justified : see ref. Phil. That $\sigma \pi \epsilon \nu \delta \rho \mu a \iota$ is there followed by $\epsilon \pi i$ $\tau \hat{\eta} \theta v \sigma l \alpha \kappa. \tau. \lambda.$, and here stands absolutely, is surely no reason wby this usage should not be as significant and as correct as that; against Dc W.), and the time of my departure (avaluois [ref.] is merely this, and not dissolutio, as Vulg., Matthies,-nor as Elsner [so also Wolf] imagines, is there any allusion to guests

He quotes from Athenaus i. 13, έσπενδον από των δείπνων αναλύοντες. But against this we have only to oppose that most sound and useful rule, that an allusion of this kind must never be imagined unless where necessitated by the context : and certainly here there is no trace of the idea of a banquet having been in the mind of the Apostle, various as are the images introduced) is at hand (not, is present, 'ift vorhanden,' Luth. : which would be ἐνέστηκεν, see 2 Thess. ii. 2 note):

7.] I have striven the good strife (it is hardly correct to confine $d_{\gamma}\omega\nu$ to the sense of 'fight:' that it may be, but its reference is much wider, to any contest, see note on ref. 1 Tim. : and here probably to that which is specified in the next clause: see especially Heb. xii. 1), I have finished my race (see reff.: the image belongs peculiarly to St. Paul. In Phil. iii. 12 ff. he follows it out in detail. See also 1 Cor. ix. 24 ff. : Heb. xii. 1, 2. Wetst. quotes Virg. Æn. iv. 653, "Vixi, et quem dederat cursum fortuna, peregi"), I have kept the faith (not, as Heydenr., 'my plight to observe the laws of the race ? but as Bengel rightly observes, "res bis per metaphoram expressa nunc tertio loco exprimitur proprie." The constant use of ή πίστις in these Epistles in the objective technical sense, must rule the expression here. This same consideration will preclude the meaning 'have kept my faith,' 'my fidelity,' as Raphel, Kypke, 8. henceforth (perhaps this al): adverb expresses $\lambda_{0i\pi \acute{o}\nu}$ better than any other. It appears to be used in later Greek, from Polybius downwards, in this VOL. III.

'a crown among the righteous :' Tor Tors Sikaiois ηὐτρεπισμένον λέγει, Thdrt.: and so De W. after Chrys., δικαιοσύνην ένταιθα πάλιν την καθόλου φησιν ἀρετήν. This is better than with Huther, al., to take the gen. as one appositionis, as in James i. 12, δ στ. $\tau \eta s \langle \hat{\omega} \eta s \rangle$: and 1 Pet. v. 4, $\delta \tau \eta s \delta \delta \xi \eta s$ $\sigma\tau$.: both these, $\zeta\omega\dot{\eta}$ and $\delta\delta\xi a$, may well constitute the crown, but it is not casy to say how δικαιοσύνη can. Thdrt.'s alternative, $\tau \delta \nu$ δικαία ψήφ φ δωρούμενον [so Heydenr., Matth., al.], is equally objec-tionable. There is, as Calv. has shewn, no sort of inconsistency here with the doctrines of grace : "neque enim gratuita justificatio quæ nobis per fidem confertur, cum operum remuneratione pugnat quin potius rite conveniunt ista duo, gratis justificari hominem Christi beneficio, et tamen operum mereedem coram Deo relaturum. Nam simulatque nos in gratiam recipit Deus, opera quoque nostra grata habet, ut præmio quoque [lieet indebito] dignetur." See further on this point Estius's note, and Cone. Trident. Canones, Sess. vi. c. 16, where the remarkable expression is quoted from the Epist. of Pope Cælestinus I. 12, "Dci tanta est erga omnes homines bonitas, ut corum velit esse merita, quæ sunt ipsius dona"), which the Lord (Christ: cf. $\epsilon \pi_{i-1}$ φάν. αὐτοῦ below) shall award (more than 'give :' see reff., and Matt. vi. 4, 6, &c., xvi. 27: the idea of requital should be expressed. He may have gone there for the sake of traffic, which idea the $d\gamma a\pi\eta \sigma as \tau d\nu \nu \bar{\nu}\nu$ alwra would seem to support), Crescens (not named elsewhere. He is said traditionally to have preached the Gospel in Galatia [Constt. apost. vii. 46, p. 1056], and, more recently [in Sophronius], to have founded the church at Vienne in Gaul : this latter interpretation of Γαλατίαν [τὰs Γαλλίαs ούτως ἐκάλεσεν, see var. readd.] Thdrt. also adopts. All this traditional fabric is probably raised by conjecture on this passage. But this hardly agrees with επορεύθη, which must be understood with both names : see also the contrast in ver. 12. They had certainly left the Apostle of their own accord : why, does not appear): Luke (see Prolegg. to Luke's Gospel, § i.) is alone with me (De W.'s question, where then was Aristarchus [Acts xxvii. 2. Col. iv. 10. He says, φελόνην ένταῦθα τὸ ίμάτιον λέγει, τινές δέ φασι το γλωσσόκομον [bag or case, John xiii. 29] ένθα τὰ βιβλla έκειτο: and so Syr. and all. : but it is against this idea, as indeed Bengel remarks, that the books should be afterwards mentioned. It would be unnatural, in case a bag of books had been left behind, to ask a friend to bring the bag, also the books, and especially the parchments : 'the bag of books and pareliments which I left' would be its most obvious A long discussion of the designation. meanings of $\phi \in \lambda \delta \nu \eta s$, and of the question whether it is rightly supposed to be a corruption from qawohns, may be found in Wolf ad loc.: see also Ellic. It has been indeed supposed that he was at Rome, and that the following caution refers to Timotheus's approaching visit : but the aor. evedeltaro seems to suit better the other hypothesis. It must ever remain uncertain, whether the Alexander whom we find put forward by the Jews in the Ephesian tumult, Acts xix. 33, 34, is this same person : nothing in that narrative is against it. πάντα τὰ κακὰ & ἐνεδειξάμεθα εἰς αὐτόν - and ver. 17, άφες αὐτοῖς ὅτι πονηρά σοι ενεδείζαντο. In both these places evoltaodal represents the Hebrew verb song of , 'affecit :' similarly in the Song of the Three Children, ver. 19, ἐντραπείησαν πάντες οι ενδεικνύμενοι τοις δούλοις σου кака́ : and 2 Macc. xiii. 9, тоїз бе фроипμασιν δ βασιλεύς βεβαρβαρωμένος ήρχετο, τὰ χείριστα τῶν ἐπὶ τοῦ πατρός αὐτοῦ γεγονότων ένδειξόμενος τοις 'loudators. This usage is easily explained. From the primary sense of the middle verb 'to manifest,' applied to a subjective quality [reff. Tit., Heb., and ebrouar, Aristoph. Plut. 785, - γνώμην, Herod. viii. 141 : al. in Lexx.], we have idiomatically the same sense applied to objective facts in Hellenistic Greek : Palm and Rost give from Plutarch, ενδείξασθαι φιλανθρωπίας, a phrase intermediate between the two usages. Then in rendering $\ell\nu\delta\epsilon\ell\xi a\sigma\theta a\ell$ τινι κακά, it is for us to enquire, whether we shall be best expressing the mind of the original by changing the subjective ενδείξασθαι into an objective verb, or by changing the objective subst. Kaká to a subjective quality [Kaklav] :- and the answer to this is clear. The nand were facts which we must not disguise. The $\epsilon \nu \delta \epsilon l \xi a$ - $\sigma\theta a_i$, not the kaká, is used in an improper and secondary meaning ; and therefore in rendering the phrase in a language which admits of no such idiom, it is the verb which must be made objective to suit the substantive, not vice versa. Conyb.'s rendering, 'charged me with much evil,' as also his alternative, 'manifested many evil things (?) against me,' would, it seems to me, require the active verb): the Lord shall requite him according to his works (the optative of the rec. makes no real difficulty : it is not personal revenge, but zeal for the cause of the Gospel which the wish would express, cf. ver. 16 below, where his own personal feelings were concerned): whom do thou also beware of (see above, on Alexander); for he exceedingly withstood our (better than

'my,' seeing that µor occurs in the same sentence, and immediately follows. The plural may be used because the λόγοι were such as were common to all Christians - arguments for, or declarations of, our common faith) words.

I will only remark here, that any other defence than one made at Rome, in the latter years of the Apostle's life, is out of the question) no one came forward with me ("verbum συμπαραγίνεσθαι indicat patronos et amicos, qui alios, ad causam dicendam vocatos, nune præsentia sua, nune etiam oratione [not in the time of Ciccro, who clearly distinguishes, De Orat. ii. 74, between the orator or patronus, and the advocati : speaking of the former he says, 'orat rens, urgent advocati ut invehamur, ut maledicamus, &c.' But in Tacit. Annal. xi. 6, the orators are called advocati] adjuvare solebant. Id Cicero, eap. 29, pro Sulla, adesse supplici, et cap. 14, pro Milone, simpliciter adesse dicit. occasion referred to,-his acquittal before the 'corona populi,' in whose presence the trials took place: so Bengel-" una sæpe occasio maximi est momenti : gentesquarum Roma caput." And so Huther and Wiesinger, and in the main, De W.): and I was delivered from the mouth of the lion (the Fathers mostly understood this of Nero: so Chrys., Thdrt., Thl., Ec., Euseb., &c.: see Suicer, ii. p. 233. Aud Esth. [add.] xiv. 13, E. V., is quoted, "where Esther says concerning Artaxerxes, Put a word into my mouth ενώπιον τοῦ λέοντος." Whitby :- or, seeing that according to the chronology adopted by some, he was not in Rome at the time [see Prolegomena to Past. Epp. § ii. 33], of his locum tenens, Helius Cæsareanus : so Pearson, Annales Paulini, p. 24,-or of the Jewish accuser, as Wieseler, Chron. ii. p. 476. But these are hardly probable : nor again is it, that the Apostle was literally in danger of being thrown to wild beasts, and established his right as a Roman eitizen to be exempted from that punishment [Bengel's objection to this, ex ore leonum dicerct, si proprie bestias innucret,' is of no force : as the popular cry 'Christianos ad leonem' shews: see also ref. Psalm, of which doubtless the words were a reminiscence] : nor again is the idea [Calv., Ellic., al.], that the expression is figurative for great danger,the jaws of death, or the like: for the Apostle did not fear death, but looked forward to it as the end of his course, and certainly would not have spoken of it under this image. The context seems to ine to demand another and very different interpretation. None stood with himall forsook him: but the Lord stood by him and strengthened him: for what ! that he might witness a good confession, and that the khovyµa might be expanded to the utmost. The result of this strengthcning was, that he was delivered $\epsilon \kappa \sigma \tau \delta$ ματος λέοντος : he was strengthened, witnessed a good confession, in spile of desertion and discouragement. Then let us pass on to his confidence for the future, the expression of which is bound on to this sentence by protetal, indicating the identity of God's deliverance,-and mavτόs indicating the generalization of the danger of which this was a particular case. And how is the danger generally described ? as may Epyov morpov : and it is implied that the falling into such danger would preclude him from enduring to Christ's heavenly kingdom. It was then an $\epsilon_{\rho\gamma\rho\nu}$ $\pi_{\rho\nu\eta\rho\delta\nu}$ from which he was on this occasion delivered. What Epyon novnpov? The falling into the power of the tempter ; the giving way, in his own weakness and the desertion of all, and betraying the Gospel for which he was sent as a witness. The lion then is the devil; δ ἀντίδικος ἡμῶν διάβυλος ὡς λέων ὠρυόμενος περιπατεῖ (ητῶν τίνα καταπίη, 1 Pet. v. 8). 18.] The Lord (Jesus) shall deliver me from every evil work (see above : from every danger of faint-heartedness, and apostasy: so, even without adopting the above meaning of έκ στόματος λέοντος, Chrys., καl γαρ καί τοῦτο τὸ δυνηθήναι μέχρις αίματος άντικαταστήναι πρός την αμαρτίαν, καί μη ενδούναι, ετέρου λέοντός εστι ρύσασθαι, τοῦ διαβόλου. So also Grot., De W., al. The meaning adopted by Huther, Wiesinger, al., that the $\epsilon p \gamma a \pi o \nu \eta p a$ are the works of his adversaries plotting against him, is totally beside the purpose : he had no such confidence (ver. 6), nor would his conservation to Christ's heavenly kingdom depend in the least upon such deliverance. Besides which, the correspondence of this declaration of confidence to the concluding petition of the Lord's Prayer cannot surely be fortuitous, and then $\pi o \nu \eta \rho o \hat{\nu}$, here joined to $\xi \rho \gamma o \nu$ as neuter, must be subjective, evil resulting from our falling into temptation, not evil happening to us from without. It is

An. vi. 4. 8: 6. 23, al. freq.) unto his kingdom in heaven (though it may be conceded to De W. that this expression is not otherwise found in St. Paul, it is one to which his existing expressions easily lead on : e. g. Phil. i. 23, compared with iii. 20) : to whom be the glory unto the ages of ages, Amen (it is again objected, that in St. Paul we never find doxologies ascribing glory to Christ, but always to God. This however is not strictly true: cf. Rom. ix. 5. And even if it were, the whole train of thought here leading naturally on to the ascription of such doxology, why should it not occur for the first and only time? It would seem to be an axiom with some critics, that a writer can never use an expression once only. If the expression be entirely out of keeping with his usual thoughts and diction, this may be a sound inference: but this is certainly not the case in the present instance. Besides, the petition of the Lord's Prayer having been transferred to our Lord as its fulfiller [ef. John xiv. 13, 14], the doxology, which seems to have come into liturgical use almost as soon as the prayer itself [see Matt. vi. 13 var. readd.], would naturally suggest a corresponding doxology here).

CHAP. I. 1-4.] ADDRESS AND GREET-1.] The occurrence of δούλος ING. θεοῦ, not elsewhere found in the superscriptions of St. Paul's Epistles, is a mark of genuineness : a forger would have been sure to suit every expression of this kind to the well-known habits of the Apostle. àπ. δέ] δέ further defines—a servant of God, -this is general :- but a more particular designation also belongs to the present κατά πίστιν bas been variously matter. rendered : (1) ' according to the faith of, &c., so E. V., Luth., Matthies, al.: (2) similarly Calv., Beza, Aret., 'mutuus est inter meum apostolatum et fidem electorum Dei consensus :' (3) 'so as to bring about faith in,' &c.,-as De W., justifying it by κατὰ τὴν ληΐην ἐκπλώσαντες, Herod. ii. 152, κατά θέαν ήκειν, Thuc. vi. 31,-so also Thdrt. [ώςτε πιστεῦσαι τῆς ἐκλογῆς άξίους, Œc. 2, Thl. 1, Jer., Grot., al., but see below]. We may at once say that (1) and (2) are inadmissible, as setting up a standard which the Apostle would not have acknowledged for his Apostleship, and as not suiting $i \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma i \nu$ below, which also belongs to the nará. Nor do the instances given to justify (3) apply here: for as Huther has observed, in them it is the acquisition of the noun which is spoken of : so that here it would be to get, not to produce faith. The best sense seems to be that which he gives,-that of reference, 'with regard to,' i. e. to bring about, cherish, and perfect : nearly in the same sense as eis ύπακοήν πίστεως, Rom. i. 5. See also 2 Tim. i. 1. I would render then 'for:' Paul, a servant of God, but an Apostle of Jesus Christ, for (on this sense of katá, destination, see Ellic.'s note) the faith of the elect of God (those whom God has chosen of the world-reff.: and their faith is the only true faith-the only faith which the apostolic office would subserve) and the thorough knowledge (reff. and notes: subjective, and kará as before -to promote the knowledge. The solution of the difficulty, that no promise was actually made till the race of man existed, must be found by regarding, as in 2 Tim. l. c., the construction as a mixed one,-compounded of the actual promise made in time, and the divine purpose from which that promise sprung, fixed in eternity. Thus, as there God is said to have given us grace in Christ from eternal ages, meaning that the gift took place as the result of a divine purpose fixed from eternity, so here He is said to have promised eternal life from eternal ages, meaning that the promise took place as the result of a purpose fixed from cternity. whose description it is that they turn away-in idiomatic English, the participial clause being merely epithetal, not ratiocinative [agst Ellicott], "who turn away") from (ref.) the truth. 15.] The Apostle's own answer to those who would enforce these commandments. All things (absolutely - all things with which man can be concerned) are pure to the pure (ούδέν ό θεός ακάθαρτον έποίησεν. ούδεν γαρ ακαθαρτον, εί μη ή αμαρτία μόνη, ψυχής γαρ απτεται και ταύτην μυποϊ, Chrys. 'Omnia externa iis qui intus sunt mundi, munda sunt,' Bengel. Cf. Matt. xxiii. 26: Luke xi. 41. There is no ground whatever for supposing this to be a maxim of the false teachers, quoted by the Apostle, any more than the $\pi \dot{a}\nu\tau a$ $\mu oi \ \xi \epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu$ of 1 Cor. vi. 12, where see The maxim here is a truly Christian note. one of the noblest order. τοῖς καθαροῖς is the dat. commodi, - for the pure to use,' not, as often taken, 'in the judg-ment of the pure.' This is plainly shewn by the use of the same dative in Rom. xiv. 14, where to render it 'in the judgment of' would introduce an unmeaning tautology : τῷ λογιζομένω τι κοινόν εἶναι, čκείνφ κοινόν - ' to him [for his use] it is really κοινόν.' As usual in these Epistles [see Prolegg. § i. 38], purity is inseparably connected with soundness in the faith, cf. Acts xv. 9,-and 1 Tim. iv. 3, where our tois katapois is expanded into τοις πιστοις και επεγνωκόσιν την άλή- $\theta \epsilon_{ia\nu}$), but to the polluted and unbelieving (cf. the preceding remarks) nothing is pure, but both (or 'even,' as E. V. :but the other scens preferable, on account of the close correspondence of ral o vois with κa $\dot{\eta}$ $\sigma v \nu \epsilon (\delta)$ their mind (their rational part, Eph. iv. 17, which presides over and leads all the determinate acts and thoughts of the man) and their conscience is polluted (cf. Dion. Hal. de Thucyd. 8,--κράτιστου δε πάντων το μηδεν έκουσίως ψεύδεσθαι, μηδέ μιαίνειν την αύτοῦ συνείδησιν. And therefore, uncleanness tainting their rational acts and their reflective self-recognitions, nothing can be pure to them : every occasion becomes to them an occasion of sin, every creature of God an instrument of sin; as Mack well observes, "the relation, in which the sinful subject stands to the objects of its possession or of its inclination, is a sinful one." Philo de legg. spec. ad 6 et 7 dec. cap. § 337, vol. ii. p. 333 f., has a sentence which might be a comment on our verse :- ἀκάθαρτος γὰρ κυρίως ὁ ἄδικος καὶ ἀσεβὴς πάντα φύρων και συγχέων διά τε τὰς ἀμετρίας τῶν παθών και τὰς τών κακών ὑπερβολάς ὥςτε ῶν ἂν ἐφάψηται πραγμάτων πάντα ἐστὶν έπίληπτα τη του δρώντος συμμεταβάλλοντα μοχθηρία. και γάρ κατά το έναντίον αι πράξεις των άγαθων επαινεταί, βελτιούμεναι ταῖς τῶν ἐνεργούντων ἀρεταῖς, ἐπειδὴ πέφυκέ πως τὰ γινόμενα τοῖς δρῶσιν ἐξομοιούσθαι. Here again, the refcrence of the saying has been variously mistaken — ή βυπαρά διάνοια κακώς περί τούτων λογιζομένη έαυτη συμμιαίνει ταῦτα, Œc.: and similarly Chrys., Thl., al.: 'non placent Deo quæ agunt etiam circa res medias, quia actiones tales ex animo Deus æstimat,' Grot : ' iis nihil prodest externa ablutio et ciborum dierumque observatio,' Baldwin, Croc. in De W.).

The datives are of the element or condition : the same was expressed with έν, ch. i. 13 : Ίνα ύγιαίνωσιν έν τη πίστει. The articles should not be overlooked. The occurrence of $\tau \hat{\eta}$ and $\tau \hat{\eta}$ into- $\mu o \nu \hat{\eta}$ prevents us from rendering $\tau \hat{\eta} \pi (\sigma \tau \epsilon \iota)$ objective as in ch. i. 13, and compels us to take the subjective and reflective mean-3.] The aged women (= $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma$ ing). $\beta \dot{\nu} \tau \epsilon \rho a \iota$, 1 Tim. v. 2, there being in this case here no official term to occasion confusion) likewise (after the same general pattern, to which the separate virtues above mentioned belong) in deportment (cf. The κατάστημα would thus include gesture and habit, - more than καταστολή of 1 Tim. ii. 9), reverend (two examples, of those given by Wetst., seem nearest to touch the meaning of the word here as connected with outward deportment :--the one from Jos. Antt. xi. 8. 5, describing the High Priest Jaddus going forth to meet Alexander the Great, -πυθόμενος δ' αὐτὸν οὐ πόρμω τῆς πόλεως, πρόεισι μετά των ίερέων καί τοῦ πολιτικοῦ πλήθους, ίεροπρεπή και διαφέρουσαν των άλλων έθνών ποιούμενος την ύπάντησιντό μεν πλήθος εν ταῖς λευκαῖς έσθησι, τούς δε ίερεις προεστώτας εν ταις βυσσίναις αυτών, τον δε ἀρχιερέα εν τη ύακινθίνη και διαχρύσω στολή: the other from Plato, Theages, § 3, p. 262, Θεαγλς ύνομα τούτω, & Σώκρατες. Καλόν γε, & Δημόδοκε, τῷ υίεῖ τὸ ὕνομα ἔθηκες καὶ iεροπρεπές), not slanderers (see reff. 1 Tim. and note), nor yet enslaved (so $\pi pos-\epsilon \chi o \nu \tau as$, 1 Tim. iii. 8) to much wine (this vice may be included in the character given of the Cretans above, ch. i. 12), teachers of that which is good, that they school (see on σωφρονισμός, 2 Tim. i. 7.

The occurrence of $l\nu a$ here with a pres. indic. in the best MSS. is remarkable —especially as the only other instances of this construction in St. Paul, 1 Cor. iv. 6 and Gal. iv. 17 [see notes there], may be accounted for on the hypothesis of an unusual [provincial] formation of the subjunctive, being both verbs in $-\delta a$. If this reading is to stand, it would shew that that hypothesis is unnecessary, and that St. Paul did really write the indic. pres. after $i\sigma a$: see also 1 John v. 20. Cf. Winer, edn. 6, § 41 b. 1 c. If he did thus write it, it may be questioned whether he intended to convey any sense very distinct $\frac{k}{1-2} \frac{\text{rer } 2}{2}$, $\frac{2}{1-2} \sum_{i=1}^{n} \frac{\delta_{i}}{2} \delta_{i}$ δρους είναι, ⁱφιλοτέκνους, ⁵ κσώφρονας, 'àγνάς, '' οικουρ-² 1 Pet. iii. ² Prov. xix. γούς, ⁿ ἀγαθάς, [°]ύποτασσομένας τοῖς ἰδίοις ἀνδράσιν, ΐνα ...αγα-⁴ θος II. μη ό λόγος τοῦ θεοῦ ^p βλασφημηται.⁶ τοὺς νεωτέρους ^{ACDF} ^bὡςαύτως ^qπαρακάλει ^σσωφρονεῖν, ⁷ ^sπερὶ πάντα ^tσεαυτὺν cderg ^tπαρεχόμενος ^wτύπον ^xκαλῶν ^čεογων, έν τη ^xδιδασκα-^{hkim}^{hcim} m here only †. m here only 7. n = Matt. xx. 15. ltom. v. 7. 1 l'et. ii. 18. 1 Kings xxv. 15. o Eph. i. 22 o Eph. 1.22 μαθεχομενος τυπου καλών εργών, εν τη υπακά ref. p-2 Pet. ii. 2 λία αφθορίαν, ^y σεμνότητα, ⁸ αλόγον αύγιη, ^b ακατά-al. see 1 Tim. v. 13. It is hardly possible that for so common a word olkoupyou's should have been substituted. If the rec. is retained, 'keepers at home' will be signi-fied : so Dio Cass. lvi. p. 391 [Wetst.], πως ούκ άριστον γυνή σώφρων, οίκουρός, οίκονόμος, παιδοτρόφος; see Elsner's note on the word, in which he shews that, as might be expected, the ideas of 'keeping at home' and 'guarding the house' are both included: so Chrys.: h oikoupds γυνή και σώφρων έσται ή οίκουρός και οίκονομική ούτε περί τρυφήν, ούτε περί έξόδους ακαίρους, ούτε περί άλλων τών τοιούτων ἀσχοληθήσεται), good (Thl. joins this with oikoupous-oikoupos ayabh. So also Syr. But it seems better to preserve the series of single epithets till broken in the next clause by the construction. It may be objective, of the contents of the teaching-that it should set forth purity as its character and aim : or subjective, that he should be, in his teaching, pure in motive, uncorrupted: so Wiesinger, comparing 2 Cor. xi. 3, $\mu\eta \pi \omega s$. . . $\phi\theta a \rho \eta$ τὰ νοήματα ύμῶν ἀπὸ τῆς ἁπλότητος τηs els τον χριστόν. Huther takes it of the form of the teaching, that it should be pure from all expressions foreign to the character of the Gospel. This is perhaps hardly satisfactory : and the first interpretation would bring it too near in meaning to λόγον ύγιη which follows), gravity, a discourse (in its contents and import) healthy, not to be condemned, that he of the opposite part (τον έξ έναντίας φησί καί τον διάβολον και πάντα τον εκείνφ διακονούμενον, Chr. There is no need to depart from the universal New Testament sense of $\pi a_i \delta \epsilon i o v \sigma a_i$, and soften it into 'teaching:' the education which the Christian man receives from the grace of God, is a discipline, properly so called, of self-denial and training in godliness, accompanied therefore with much mortification and punitive treatment. Luther has well rendered παιδεύουσα ήμαs by 'und zuchtiget und.' Corn.-a-Lap. [cited in Mack] explains it also well : "tanquam pueros rudes erudiens, corrigens, formans, omnique disciplina instituens et imbuens, perinde ut pædagogus puerum sibi commissum tam in litteris quam in moribus: hoc enim est maideveiv, inquit Gell. i. 13. 13"), that (by the ordinary rendering, " teaching us, that," we make iva introduce merely the purport of the teaching: and so, following most Commentators, De W., and I am surprised to see, Huther, although I suppose representing in some measure the philological fidelity of Meyer, under whose shelter his commentary appears. There must have been some defect of supervision here.

Wiesinger only of the recent Commentators, after Mack and Matthies, keeps the telic meaning of Iva. The Greek Commentators, as might be expected, adhere to the propriety of their own language. So Chrys. [ήλθεν δ χριστός, ίνα άρνησώμεθα την ασέβειαν], Thil. [παιδεύει γὰρ ἡμῶς, Ίνα τοῦ λοιποῦ σωφρόνως ζήσωμεν], Thdrt. [τούτου χάριν ἐνηνθρώ-πησεν . . . ἵνα . . .]. The truth is, that $\pi a_i \delta_i \epsilon_i \nu$ is one of those verbs, the purpose and purport of which mutually include each other. The form and manner of instructive discipline itself conveys the aim and intent of that discipline. So that the meaning of Iva after such a verb falls under the class which I have discussed in my note to 1 Cor. xiv. 13, which see. Our English 'that,' which would be dubious after 'teaching,' keeps, after 'disciplining,' its proper telic force), denying (not, 'having denied :' the aor. part. doνησάμενοι is, as so often, not prior to, but contemporaneous with, the aor. ($h\sigma\omega\mu\epsilon\nu$ following. [This, against Ellic., requires pressing here. meaning which has become attached to 'sober,'-so much so, as almost to deprive it of its more general reference to life and thought,-has not taken possession of the adverb) and justly (better than 'righte-ously,'-'righteous,' by its forensic ob-jective sense in St. Paul, introducing a confusion, where the question is of moral rectitude) and piously in the present life ("Bernard, Serm. xi.: sobrie erga nos, juste erga proximum, pie erga Deum, Sahner. p. 630 f.: dicimus in his verbis Apostolum tribus virtutibus, sobrictatis, pietatis et justitiæ, summam justitiæ Christianæ complecti. Wolf quotes from Lucian, Somn. p. 8, the same conjunction : $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu \psi \nu \chi \dot{\eta} \nu$κατακοσμήσω....σωφροσύνη, δικαιοσύνη, και εὐσεβία . . . ταῦτα γάρ έστιν ό της ψυχής ακήρατος κόσμος.

These three comprising our $\pi a i \delta \epsilon i a$ in faith and love, he now comes to hope): looking for (this expectation being an abiding state and posture, -not, like (/1- $\sigma \omega \mu \epsilon \nu$, the life following on and unfolded from the determining impulse co-ordinate with the ἀρνήσασθαι,—is put in the pres., not in the aor.) the blessed hope (here, as in reff. Gal. and Acts, Col. i. 5 al., nearly objective,-the hope, as embodying the thing hoped for : but keep the vigour and propriety both of language and thought, and do not tame down the one and violate the other, with Grot., by a metonymy, or with Wolf, by a hypallage of μακαρία έλπίς for έλπιζομένη μακαριότης) and manifestation ($\epsilon \lambda \pi i \delta \alpha \kappa$. $\epsilon \pi i \phi$. belong togetlier) of the glory (δύο δείκνυσιν έν-ταῦθα ἐπιφανείας και γάρ εἰσι δύο ή μὲν προτέρα χάριτος, ἡ δὲ δευτέρα ἀνταποδόσεωs, Chrys. Nothing could be more unfortunate than the application here of the figure of hendiadys in the E.V.: see below) of the great God (the Father : see below) and of our Saviour Jesus Christ (as regards the sense, an exact parallel is found in Matt. xvi. 27, μέλλει γάρ δ vids τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχεσθαι ἐν τῆ δόξη τοῦ πατρός αὐτοῦ, compared with Matt. xxv. 31, όταν έλθη ό vids τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῆ δόξη αὐτοῦ. See also 1 Pet. iv. 13. The glory which shall be revealed at the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ is His own glory, and that of His Father [John xvii. 3; 1 Thess. iii. 13]. This sense having been obscured by the foolish hendiadys, has led to the asking [by Mr. Green, Gr. Test. Gram., p. 216], "What intimation is given in Scripture of a glorious appearing of God the Father and our Lord in concert ?" To which the answer is, that no such appearing is even hinted at in this passage, taken as above. What is asserted is, that the $\delta\delta\xi a$ shall be that τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ καὶ σωτήρος ήμῶν 'Ιησού χριστού. And we now come to consider the meaning of these words. Two views have been taken of them : (1) that τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν are to be taken together as the description of 'Ιησοῦ χριστοῦ,—' of Jesus Christ, the great God and our Saviour ?' (2) that as given above, τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ describes the Father, and σωτήρος ήμων 'Ιησού $\chi \rho_i \sigma \tau o \hat{v}$ the Son. It is obvious that in dealing with (1), we shall be deciding with regard to (2) also. (1) has been the view of the Greek orthodox Fathers, as against the Arians [see a complete collection of their testimonies in Dr. Wordsworth's "Six Letters to Granville Sharp on the use of the definite article in the Greek text of the N. T." Lond. 1802], and of most ancient and modern Commentators. That the former so interpreted the words, is obviously not [as it has been considered] decisive of the question, if they can be shewn to bear legitimately another meaning, and that meaning to be the one most likely to have been in the mind of the writer. The case of Iva in the preceding verse [see note there], was wholly different. There it was contended that Iva with a subjunctive, has, and can have, but one meaning : and this was upheld against those who would introduce another, inter alia, by the fact that the Greek Fathers dreamt of no other. The argument rested not on this latter fact, but on the logical force of the particle itself. And similarly here, the passage must be argued primarily on its own ground, not primarily on the consensus of the Greek Fathers. No one disputes that it may mean that which they have interpreted it : and there were obvious reasons why they, having licence to do so, should choose this interpretation. But it is our Е в 2 object, not being swayed in this or any other interpretation, by doctrinal considerations one way or the other, to enquire, not what the words may mean, but what they do mean, as far as we may be able to ascertain it. The main, and indecd the only reliance of those who take (1), is the omission of the article before σωτήροs. Had the sentence stood τοῦ μεγ. θεοῦ καὶ τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν 'Ι. χ., their verdict for (2) would have been unanimous. That the insertion of the article would have been decisive for (2), is plain : but is it equally plain, that its omission is decisive for (1)? This must depend entirely on the nature and position of the word thus left anarthrous. If it is a word which had by usage become altogether or occasionally anarthrous,-if it is so connected, that the presence of the article expressed, is not requisite to its presence in the sense, then the state of the case, as regards the omission, is considerably altered. Now there is no doubt that $\sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho$ was one of those words which gradually dropped the article and became a quasi proper name: cf. 1 Tim. i. 1 [I am quite aware of Bp. Middleton's way of accounting for this, but do not regard it as satisfactory]; iv. 10; which latter place is very instructive as to the way in which the dcsignation from its official nature became anarthrous. This being so, it must hardly be judged as to the expression of the art. by the same rules as other nouns. Then as to its structural and contextual connexion. It is joined with $\eta \mu \tilde{\omega} \nu$, which is an additional reason why it may spare the article : see Luke i. 78 : Rom. i. 7 : 1 Cor. i. 3 [1 Cor. ii. 7; x. 11]: 2 Cor. i. 2, &c. Again, as Winer has observed [edn. 6, § 19, 5 b, note 1], the prefixing of an appositional designation to the proper name frequently causes the omission of the article. So in 2 Thess. i. 12: 2 Pet. i. 1: Jude 4: see also 2 Cor. i. 2; vi. 18: Gal. i. 3: Eph. i. 2; vi. 23: Phil. i. 2; ii. 11; iii. 20 &c. If then σωτήρ ήμων 'Ιησούς $\chi \rho_i \sigma \tau \delta s$ may signify 'Jesus Christ our Saviour,'-on comparing the two members of the clause, we observe, that $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ has already had its predicate expressed in Too μεγάλου; and that it is therefore natural to expect that the latter member of the clause, likewise consisting of a proper name and its predicate, should correspond logically to the former : in other words, that τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ίη. χρ. would much more naturally suit (1) than $\tau o\hat{v}$ μεγάλου θεοῦ καὶ σωτήρος ήμ. 'Ιη. χρ. In clauses where the two appellative members belong to one expressed subject, we expect to find the former of them without any predicative completion. If it be replied to this, as I conceive on the hypothesis of (1) it must be, that Tov Heγάλου is an epithet alike of θεού and σωτήροs, 'our great [God and Saviour].' I may safely leave it to the feeling of any scholar, whether such an expression would be likely to occur. Let us now consider, whether the Apostle would in this place have been likely to designate our Lord as δ μέγας θεδς και σωτηρ ήμων. This must be chiefly decided by examining the usages of the expression $\theta \epsilon \delta s \delta \sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho$ $\eta\mu\omega\nu$, which occurs six times in these Epistles, once in Luke [i. 47], and once in the Epistle of Jude. If the writer here identifies this expression, 'the great God and our Saviour,' with the Lord Jesus Christ, calling Him 'God and our Saviour,' it will be at least probable that in other places where he speaks of "God our Saviour," he also designates our Lord Jesus Christ. Now is that so? On the contrary, in 1 Tim. i. 1, we have κατ' έπιταγήν θεού σωτήρος ήμων, καl χριστού Ίησοῦ τῆς ἐλπίδος ἡμῶν: where I suppose none will deny that the Father and the Son are most plainly distinguished from one another. The same is the ease in 1 Tim. ii. 3-5, a passage bearing much [see below] on the interpretation of this onc: and consequently in 1 Tim. iv. 10, where έστιν σωτήρ πάντων άνθρώπων corresponds to θέλει πάντας σωθήναι in the other. So also in Tit. i. 3, where the σωτήρ ήμῶν θεός, by whose $\epsilon \pi i \tau a \gamma h$ the promise of eternal life was manifested, with the proclamation of which St. Paul was entrusted, is the same aiwrios beos, by whose $\epsilon \pi i \tau \alpha \gamma \dot{\eta}$ the hidden mystery was manifested in Rom. xvi. 26, where the same distinction is made. The only place where there could be any doubt is in our ver. 10, which possible doubt however is removed by ver. 11, where the ἀπὸ πάσης ^{mn} ἀνομίας καὶ ^{mo}καθαρίση ἐαυτῷ ^m λαὸν ^p περι- ^{m Ezeκ.} xxxvii 23. ούσιον, ^qζηλωτὴν ^rκαλῶν ^rἔργων. ¹⁵ ταῦτα λάλει καὶ ^{n Paul} Rom. ^{2 Cor vi.}

same assertion is made, of the revelation of the hidden grace of God [the Father]. Then we have our own ch. iii. 4-6, where we find τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν θεοῦ in ver. 4, elearly defined as the Father, and Sia 'Ιησού χριστού τού σωτήρος ήμων in ver. 6. In that passage too we have the expression ή χρηστότης και ή φιλανθρωπία έπεφάνη τοῦ σωτήρος ήμ. Θεοῦ, which is quite decisive in answer to those who object here to the expression $\epsilon \pi i \phi \dot{a} \nu \epsilon i a \nu \tau \eta s$ δόξηs as applied to the Father. In the one passage of St. Jude, the distinction is equally clear: for there we have $\mu\delta\nu\omega$ θεφ σωτηρι ήμων δια Ιησού χριστού του κυρίου ήμων. It is plain then, that the usage of the words ' God our Saviour' does not make it probable that the whole expression here is to be applied to the Lord Jesus Christ. And in estimating this probability, let us again recur to 1 Tim. ii. 3, 5, a passage which runs very parallel with the present one. We read there, els yap beds, | είς και μεσίτης θεοῦ και ἀνθρώπων, άνθρωπος χριστός 'Ιησούς, ό δούς έαυτόν αντίλυτρον κ.τ.λ. Compare this with του μεγάλου θεοῦ | καὶ σωτήρος ἡμῶν ἰησοῦ χριστού, δς έδωκεν έαυτον ύπερ ήμων ίνα $\lambda υ \tau \rho \omega \sigma \eta \tau a \iota \kappa . \tau . \lambda$. Can there be a reasonable doubt, that the Apostle writing two sentences so elosely corresponding, on a point of such high importance, would have in his view the same distinction in the second of them, which he so strongly lays down in the first ? Without then considering the question as closed, I would submit that (2) satisfies all the grammatical requirements of the sentence: that it is both structurally and contextually more probable, and more agreeable to the Apostle's way of writing : and I have therefore preferred it. The principal advocates for it have been, the pseudo-Ambrose [i. e. Hilary the deacon, the author of the Commentary which goes by the name of that Father: whose words are these, "hanc esse dicit beatam spem credentium, qui exspectant adventum gloriæ magni Dei quod revelari habet judice Christo, in quo Dei Patris videbitur potestas et gloria, ut fidei suæ præmium conscquantur. Ad hoc enim redemit nos Christus, ut" &c.], Erasm. [annot. and paraphr.], Grot., Wetst., Heinr., Winer [ubi supra, end], De W., Huther [the other view,-not this as stated in my earlier editions, by inadvertence,—is taken by Ellicott]. Whichever way taken, the passage is just as important a testimony to the divinity of our Saviour : according to (1), by asserting His possession of Deity and right to the appellation of the Highest: according to (2), even more strikingly, asserting His equality in glory with the Father, in a way which would be blasphemy if predicated of any of the sons of men), who (our Saviour Jesus Christ) gave Himself (" the forcible éautóv, ' Himself, His whole self, the greatest gift ever given,' must not be overlooked : cf. εξειλεγμένον of Chrys., though expressing the fact, says too much for the word,—as also does the acceptabilis of the Vulg .: egregium of Jerome, too little : the oikeiov of Thdrt. is exact: that which $\pi \epsilon \rho i \epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu$ $\alpha \dot{\nu} \tau \hat{\omega}$), zealous (an ardent worker and promoter) of good works. 15.7 gathers up all since ver. 1, where the general command last appeared, and enforces it on Titus. In ch. iii. 1, the train of thought is again resumed. These things (the foregoing : not, the following) speak and exhort (in the case of those who believe and need stirring up) and rebuke (in the case of those who are rebellious) with all imperativeness (μετά αὐθεντίας καὶ μετὰ έξουσίας πολλής, Chrys.-τουτέστι, μετὰ ἀποτομίας, Thl.). Let no man despise thee (addressed to Titus, not to the people, as Calv. ['populum ipsum magis quam Titum hic compellat'] : 'so conduct thyself in thine exhortations, with such gravity, and such consistency, and such impartiality, that every word of thine may carry weight, and none may be able to cast slight on thee for flaws in any of these points'). III. 1, 2.] Rules concerning behaviour to those without. Put them in mind (as of a duty previously and otherwise well known, but liable to be forgotten) to be in subjection to governments, to authorities, to obey the magistrate ($\pi\epsilon\iota\theta$ apxeiv here probably stands absolutely, not, as Huther, connected with the dat. ἀρχαῖs ẻξ. So Xen. Cyr. viii. 1. 4, μέγιστον άγαθδυ τὸ πειθαρχείν φαίνεται είς τὸ καταπράττειν τὰ ἀγαθά. The other construction has however the reff. in its favour), to be ready towards every good work (the connexion seems to be as in Rom. xiii. 3, where the rulers are said to be où φόβος τῷ ἀγαθῷ ἔργω, ἀλλὰ τῷ какф. Compare also the remarkable coincidence in the sentiment of Xen. quoted above. Jerome in loc., Wetst., De W., al., suppose these exhortations to subjection to have found their occasion in the insubordination of the Jews on principle to foreign rule, and more especially of the Crctan Jews. In the presence of similar exhortations in the Epistle to the Romans and elsewhere, we can hardly perhaps say so much as this: but certainly Wetst.'s quotations from Diod. Sic., al., seem to establish the fact of Cretan turbulence in The inference drawn by general. Thdrt., al., from these last words,-oùde γὰρ εἰς ἄπαντα δεῖ τοῖς ἄρχουσι πειθαρχεῖν, does not seem to be legitimately deduced from them), to speak evil of no one (these words set forth the general duty, but are perhaps introduced owing to what has preceded, cf. 2 Pet. ii. 10 : Jude 8), to be not quarrelsome (ref. and note), forbearing (ib., and note on Phil. iv. 5. "The emicinty's must have been, it is to be feared, a somewhat exceptional character in Crete, where an $\xi \mu \phi v \tau os \pi \lambda \epsilon o v \epsilon \xi (a, exhibited in out$ ward acts of aggression, kal idia kal katà κοινόν [Polyb. vi. 46-9], is described as one of the prevailing and dominant vices." The second of these is evidently that here intended, but Huther's view of the correspondence of this description of God's kindness to us with that which we are required [ver. 2] to shew to others, appears to me to be borne out : and thus His $\phi_i \lambda a \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi i a$ would parallel $\pi \rho a \vartheta \tau \eta \tau a$ $\pi\rho\delta s$ $\pi d\nu \tau a s$ $d\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\sigma\sigma s$ above, and the fact of its being 'love toward men' should be expressed. Bengel's remark also is worth notice : "Hominum vitia plane contraria enumerantur versu 3." The junction of χρηστός, - ότης, with φιλάνθρω. πos , -la, is very common : see the numerous quotations in Wetst.) of our Saviour, God (the Father: cf. $\delta_{i\dot{a}}$ 'Ins. χ_{ρ} . below, and see note on ch. ii. 13), was manifested (viz. in Redemption, by the Incarnation and Satisfaction of the Redcemer),-not by virtue of ($\epsilon\xi$, as the ground out of which an act springs. V., nor 'had done,' as Conyb., -which in fact obscures the meaning : for God's act here spoken of was a definite act in time — and its application to us, also a definite act in time [see below] : and if we take this emotionauter pluperfeet, we confine the Apostle's repudiation of our works, as moving causes of those acts of God, to the time previous to those acts. For aught that this pluperfect would assert, our salvation might be prompted on God's part by future works of righteousness which He foresaw we should do. Whereas the simple aoristic sense throws the whole into the same time,-" His goodness, &e. was manifested not for works which we did He saved us,"-and renders the repudiation of human merit universal. μεν ἐκ τούτων, ἀλλὰ τὸ πῶν ἡ ἀγαθότης aυτου έποίησε), but according to (after the measure of, in pursuance of, after the promptings of : see Ellic.'s note) His compassion He saved us (this cowoer must be referred back to the definite objective act of God in Redemption, which has been above mentioned. On the part of God, that act is one—in the application of it to individuals, it is composed of many and successive acts. But this $\epsilon \sigma \omega \sigma \epsilon \nu$, being contemporaneous with öre enequivy above, cannot apply, as De Wette, to our individual salvation alone. At the same time, standing as it does in a transitional position, between God's objective act and the subjective individual application of it, it no doubt looks forward as well as backward-to individual realization of salvation, as well as to the divine completion of it once for all in Christ. Calvin, h. l., refers the completeness of our salvation rather to God's looking on it as subjectively accomplished in us : " De fide loquitur, et nos jam salutem adeptos esse docet. Ergo utcunque peecato impliciti corpus mortis eircumferamus, certi tamen de salute nostra sumus, si modo fide insiti simus in Christum, secundum illud [Joh. v. 24] : 'Qui credit in filium Dei, transivit de morte in vitam.' Paulo post tamen, fidei nomine interposito nos re ipsa nondum adeptos esse ostendit, quod Christus morte sua præstitit. Unde sequitur, ex parte Dei salutem nostram impletam esse, cujus fruitio in finem usque militiæ differtur." The juas here is not all mankind, which would be inconsistent with what follows,-nor all Christians, however true that would be,-but the same as are indicated by Ral huers above, -the particular Christians in the Apostle's view as he was writing-Titus and his Cretan converts, and himself) by means of the laver (not ' washing,' as E. V. : see the Lexx.: but always a vessel, or pool in which washing takes place. Here, the baptismal font: see on Eph. v. 26) of regeneration (first, let us treat of makiyyevería. It occurs only in ref. Matt., and there in an objective sense, whereas here it is evidently subjective. There, it is the great second birth of heaven and carth in the latter days: here, the second birth of the individual man. Though not occurring elsewhere in this sense, it has its cognate expressions, — c. g. ἀναγεννάω, 1 Pet. i. 3, 23 : γεννηθήναι άνωθεν, John iii. 3 &c. Then, of the genitive. The font is the 'laver of regeneration,' because it is the vessel consecrated to the use of that Sacrament whereby, in its completeness as a Sacrament [see below], the new life unto God is conveyed. And inasmuch as it is in that font, and when we are in it, that the first breath of that life is drawn, it is the laver of, - belonging to, pertaining to, setting forth,-regene-Observe, there is here no ration. figure : the words are literal : Baptism is taken as in all its completion,-the outward visible sign accompanied by the inward spiritual grace ; and as thus complete, it not only represents, but is, the new birth. Cf. Calvin : "Solent Apostoli a Sacramentis ducere argumentum, ut rem illie significatam probent, quia principium illud valere debet inter pios, Deum non inanibus nobiscum figuris ludere, sed virtute sua intus præstare quod externo signo demonstrat. Quare Baptismus congruenter et vere lavaerum regenerationis dieitur. Vim et usum Sacramentorum recte is tenebit qui rem et signum ita connectet, ut signum non faciat inane aut inefficax : neque tamen ejus ornandi causa Spiritui sancto detrahat quod suum est." The font then, the laver of regeneration, representing the external portion of the Sacrament, and pledging the internal ;- that inward and spiritual grace, necessary to the completion of the Sacrament and its regenerating power, is not, as too often, left to follow as a matter of course, and thus baptismal regeneration rendered a mere formal and unmeaning thing, 'ex opere operato,'but is distinctly stated in the following words) and (understand Sid again: so Thdrt. apparently, -Bengel ['duw res commemorantur : lavacrum regenerationis, quæ baptismi in Christum periphrasis,- et renovatio Spiritus sancti'], al. On the other hand, most Commentators [see Ellic. here] take avakaiváotas as a second gen. after Nourpoo : and for the purpose of making this clearer, the Tov seems to have been inserted before Aovtpou [see var. readd.]. The great formal objection to this is, the destruction of the balance of the sentence, in which $\pi a \lambda_i \gamma \gamma \epsilon \nu \epsilon \sigma las$ would be oue gen., and ἀνακαινώσεως $\pi \nu \epsilon \dot{\nu} \mu \alpha \tau \sigma s$ ἀγίου the other. The far greater contextual objection is, that thus the whole from $\pi a \lambda$. to $\dot{a} \gamma i o \nu$ would be included under Lourpoo, and baptism made not only the seal of the new birth. but the sacrament of progressive sanctifi-cation) the renewal (avakaívwors, see reff., is used of the gradual renewal of heart and life in the image of God, following upon the new birth, and without which the birth is a mere abortion, not leading on to vitality and action. It is here treated as potentially involved in God's act έσωσεν. We must not, as Huther, al., for the sake of making it contemporaneous with the λουτρόν, give it another and untenable meaning, that of mere incipient spiritual life) of (brought about by; genitive of the efficient cause) the Holy Spirit (who alone can renew unto life in progressive sanctification. So that, as in 1 Pet. iii. 21, it is not the mere outward act or fact of baptism to which we attach such high and glorious epithets, but that complete baptism by water and the Holy Ghost, whereof the first cleansing by water is indeed the ordinary sign and seal, but whereof the glorious indwelling Spirit of God is the only efficient cause and continuous agent. BAPTISMAL REGENERATION' is the distinguishing doctrine of the new covenant [Matt. iii. 11]: but let us take care that we know and bear in mind what 'baptism' means : not the mere ecclesiastical act, not the mere fact of reception by that act among God's professing people, but that, com-pleted by the divine act, manifested by the operation of the Holy Ghost in the heart and through the life), 6.1 which (attr.; not = et ob, as Heydenr. ού, viz. the Holy Spirit, not λουτρού, as even De W. confesses, who yet maintains the dependence of both genitives on App-

 $\tau \rho o \hat{v}$) He poured out (reff.) on us richly (again, it is mere waste of time to debate whether this pouring out be the one general one at Pentecost, or that in the heart of each individual believer : the one was God's objective act once for all, in which all its subjective exemplifications and applications were potentially en-wrapped) through (as its channel and medium, He having purchased it for us, and made the pouring out possible, in and by Ilis own blessed Sacrifice in our nature) Jesus Christ our Saviour (which title was used of the Father above : of Him,-ultimately: of our Lord, immediately : " Pater nostræ salutis primus auctor, Christus vero opifex, et quasi artifex," as Justiniani in Ellicott, whose own remarks are well worth consulting),

7.] in order that (this iva, in the form of the sentence, may express the aim either of $i \sigma \omega \sigma v re$ [Beng., De W., Huther, Ellie.] or of $i \xi \epsilon \chi \epsilon \epsilon v$: more naturally, I believe, of the latter [Wiesinger]: and for these reasons, that $i \sigma \omega \sigma \epsilon v$ seeming to have its full pregnant meaning as it stands, (1) does not require any further statement of aim and purpose: but $i \xi \epsilon \chi \epsilon \epsilon v$ being a mere word of action, is more properly followed by a statement of a reason why the pouring out took place: and (2) that this statement of aim and purpose, if it applies to $i \sigma \omega \sigma \epsilon v$, has been already anticipated, if $i \sigma \omega \sigma \epsilon v$ be understood as including what is geuerally known as $\sigma \sigma \tau \rho i a$.

Theologically, this statement of purpose is exact: the effusion of the Spirit has for its purpose the conviction of sin and manifestation of the righteousness of Christ, out of which two spring justifying faith) having been justified (the aor. part. here [expressed in English by 'having been '] is not contemporaneous with the aor. subj. below. Ordinarily this would be so: but the theological consideration of the place of justification in the Christian life, illustrated by such passages as Rom. v. 1, δικαιωθέντες οὖν ἐκ πίστεως εἰρήνην έχωμεν πρός τ. θεόν, κ.τ.λ., seems to determine here the aor. part. to be antecedent to γενήθωμεν) by His (ἐκείνου, referring to the more remote subject, must be used here not of our Lord, who has just been mentioned, but of the Father: and

We meet with them also in Gal. v. 20, both times as alpéoeis, divisions gathering round forms of individual self-will. But by this time, they had become so definite and established, as to have their acknowledged adherents, their alperikol. See also 2 Pet. ii. 1. Meyer remarks the tact of the Apostle in associating with Philemon those connected with his house, but not going beyond the limits of the house. The former part is noticed also by Chrys. : συμπαραλαμβάνει κ. ἕτερον (-ρους) μεθ' έαυτοῦ ὥςτε κἀκεῖνον ὑπό πολλῶν ἀξιούμενον μάλλον είξαι κ. δούναι την χάριν.

The first part., ποιούμενος, expands εὐχα- $\rho_{i\sigma\tau\hat{\omega}}$,—the 2nd, åkoví uv, gives the ground of the εύχαριστία-for that I hear

5.] It is far better (with Thdrt., Grot., De W., all.) to take ayann and $\pi i \sigma \tau i s$ as to be distributed between $\epsilon i s$ τον κύριον 'Ιησούν and eis πάντας τους ayious, than, with Meyer, to insist on the $\eta \nu$ as a bar to this, and interpret $\pi l \sigma \tau is$ in the wider sense (?) of 'fidelity,' or with Ellic. to split up $\pi i \sigma \tau i s$ into spiritual faith towards the Lord, and practical faith towards the saints. Hy is naturally in concord with the nearest subst. The $\pi \rho \delta s$ of the rec. has perhaps been a correction for reverence sake. eis is 'towards,' but more as contributing to-'towards the behoof of:' whereas $\pi \rho \delta s$ is simple direction : ef. ver. 6.

6.] ὅπως belongs, as usually constructed, to the former clause, $\epsilon i \chi a \rho_1 \sigma \tau \tilde{\omega} - \pi \rho_0 s$ ευχῶν μου. The mixing of prayer and thanksgiving in that clause does not exclude the idea of intercessory prayer, nor does (as Meyer maintains) the subsequent clause make against this : the arovwv κ.τ.λ. was the reason why he η $\partial \chi a \rho (\sigma \tau \epsilon)$ έπι των προςευχών αυτού, and δπως $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. the aim of his doing so. To join όπως κ.τ.λ. with $h\nu$ έχεις is flat in the extreme, and perfectly inconceivable as a piece of St. Paul's writing. In order that the communication of thy faith (with others) may become effectual in (as the element in which it works) the thorough knowledge (entire appreciation and experimental recognition [by us]) of every good thing (good gifts and graces,-cf. Rom. vii. 18, the negation of this in the carnal man) which is in us, to (the glory of; connect with ενεργής γένη- τa_i) Christ [Jesus]. This seems the only simple and unobjectionable rendering. To understand ή κοιν. τής π. σου, 'fides tua quam communem nobiscum habes,' as Bengel (and indeed Chrys., Thl., al.), is very objectionable : to join els xp. 'Ovήσιμον is not (with Erasm.-Schmid) to be treated as if it were a play on the name, ὃν έγένν..... δνήσιμον, 'profitable to me .' but simply to be regarded as an accusative by attraction. 11.] Here there certainly appears to be a play on the name -- 'quondam parum suo nomini re-spondens, -- nune in diversum mutatus.' Erasm. (No play on $\chi \rho i \sigma \tau \delta s$ [as Koch, al.] must be thought of, as too far-fetched, and because the datives ool and euol fix the adjectives to their ordinary meanings.) He had beeu Expnotos in having run away, and apparently (ver. 18) defrauded his master as well. Meyer quotes from Plat., Lys. p. 204 B: φαῦλοs κ. ἄχρηστοs: and from ib. Rep. p. 411 B : χρήσιμον έξ αχρήστου εποίησεν. On account of the σοl κal έμοί, εύχρηστον must not be limited to the sense of outward profit, but extended to a spiritual meaning as well-profitable to me, as the fruit of my ministry,-to thee as a servant, and also as a Christian brother (ver. 16). 12.] There does not appear to be any allusion to the fact of sonship in τὰ ẻμὰ σπλάγχνα, as Chrys. Thdrt. (ἐμός έστιν vids, έκ των έμων γεγέννηται $\sigma \pi \lambda \dot{a} \gamma \chi \nu \omega \nu$), al.: for thus the spiritual similitude would be confused, being here introduced materially. But the expression more probably means, mine own heart-'as dear to me as mine own heart.' Meyer compares the expressions in Plautus,-
