SINCE the founding of the Theological Tripos Examiners have frequently complained, that the Candidates for it do not, as a rule, take pains to acquire an accurate knowledge of even the Elements of the Sacred Tongue. This has been, doubtless, in great measure the fault of the Curriculum, to the requirements of which they have been obliged to conform their studies. It need, however, be a matter of surprise to none, that the Regulations for a Tripos Examination in the chief subjects of a field of learning so wide as that of Theology, should not at the first have been perfect: for כל התהלות קשות, i.e. Il n'y a que le premier pas qui coûte. We have every reason to hope that from the inauguration of the New Regulations for that Tripos will date a new era in the Hebrew scholarship of the University, and that the Theological Tripos will thenceforth send forth into the world scholars as sound in their knowledge of the Elements of Hebrew as did the 'Voluntary Examination' which it superseded. This Student's Commentary has been written with a view to aiding this New Scheme of Theological Studies. The plan of it is as follows:

Words and sentences are treated from a purely grammatical point of view, and in so doing no difficulties have been wittingly avoided, but, rather, some have at times been intentionally raised, when by so doing an opportunity has been afforded of explaining some of the minutiæ of Hebrew Syntax. Unpointed Hebrew, and Transliteration, have been freely used from considerations of economy. But, if the student will point for himself the unpointed Hebrew words, and afterwards correct his own vowel-points from a pointed Text, this apparent incompleteness in the Notes will thus be transformed into a distinct advantage. The Hebrew Text quoted in reference to matters of punctuation is that of Baer, in the Books Genesis, Isaiah, Job, Proverbs, Psalms, and The Minor Prophets; in the case of the other Books various editions have at times been consulted.

The 'Remarks' (on the interpretation of the prophecies) are looked upon as of secondary importance, and are consequently printed in smaller type. Enough has, we hope, been given in them, to enable the Student (who is supposed to be studying the Book chiefly with a view to learning the language) to read the prophecies with an intelligent notion of their contents. But, if he should wish to see such questions discussed at much greater length, he may refer to Wright's Bampton Lectures.

The Excursus treat of matters, which may perhaps be of some interest to riper Scholars than those, for whom the bulk of the book is intended.

I am much indebted to Rev. A. T. Chapman, Fellow and formerly Tutor of Emmanuel College, for reading the proof-sheets, and for several valuable suggestions, which he has made to me in the course of so doing.

INTRODUCTION.

PROLEGOMENA TO CHAPTERS I.—VIII.

Personal to the Prophet.

OF the personal history of the Prophet Zechariah hardly anything is recorded. He styles himself "Zechariah, son of Berechiah, son of Iddo, the prophet," which certainly implies that he was the grandson of Iddo. But in Ezra v. 1, vi. 14 he is spoken of as "son of Iddo." This, however, presents no difficulty, for similarly Jehu is mentioned as son of Jehoshaphat son of Nimshi (2 Kings ix. 14), while (ver. 20) he is called merely son of Nimshi. The father of Zechariah, and the father of Jehu, seem to have been (to use an illustration from modern times) somewhat in the position of *Abraham Mendelssohn*¹, they could both boast of being the father and the son of a man of reputation. Knobel's supposition, then, that "son of Berechiah" (Zech. i. 1, 7) is an interpolation from Is. viii. 2, where Zechariah son of Jeberechiah is mentioned, is unnecessary. In Ezra v. 1, 2 "Zechariah son of Iddo" is mentioned as prophesying in conjunction with "Haggai the prophet," and being instrumental in bringing about the resumption of the work of rebuilding the Temple. We know nothing further for certain about him, except that he prophesied up to the month of Cislew in the 4th year of Darius. Something may, however, be deduced from circumstantial evidence.

Among the Priests and Levites who came up with Zerubbabel is mentioned "Iddo" (Neh. xii. 4), as one of heads of the priestly families and father of Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy the musician.

(râshê haccôh'nîm) in the days of Jeshua (see p. 32) the High Priest. Again in the days of Joiakim, the son of Jeshua (the High Priest), a Zechariah son of Iddo is mentioned (ver. 10, 12, 16) as one of the heads of families (râshê hà'âbhôth), and that evidently among the Priests. From these facts it is deduced by many (and not unreasonably), that Zechariah (like Jeremiah and Ezekiel) was a priest as well as a prophet: and that (supposing the Iddo of Neh. xii. 4, 16 to be the same person that is mentioned in Zech. i. 1), while Zechariah began his ministry during the High-priesthood of Joshua, he was head of his family in the days of Joiakim the son of Joshua. Thus Zechariah's father, probably, died early and never became the head of his family, and Zechariah was a young man at the time of the return from the Captivity.

The times of the Prophet, and occasion of his Mission.

In the first year of his reign in Babylon B.C. 538 (Rawlinson) Cyrus the Great made a decree for the return of the Jewish exiles to Jerusalem, and for the rebuilding of the House of the LORD God of Israel, which was in Jerusalem (Ezr. i. 3). The sum total of the "Congregation" (qâhâl) which came up on this occasion was 42,360 (fathers of families, probably, i.e. about 200,000 free men, women and children), besides male and female slaves to the number of 7,337 (Ezr. ii. 64, 65, Neh. vii. 66, 67). These came up under Zerubbabel (or Sheshbazzar comp. Ezr. iii. 8, v. 16, Zech. iv. 8), the Head of the Captivity (Rêsh Gâlûthâ) son of Shealtiel (Ezr. iii. 2, 8, v. 2 &c., Hagg. i. 1, 12 &c., Matt. i. 12, Luke iii. 27), and Joshua the son of Josedech the High Priest. Zerubbabel is called (1 Chron. iii. 19) son of Pedaiah (son of Jeconiah, son of Jehoiakim), Shealtiel having probably died without male issue, and his brother Pedaiah having (in accordance with Deut. xxv. 5—10) taken his deceased brother's wife. Zerubbabel was thus legal heir of Jehoiachim, king of Judah. Feeble indeed was the people's response to the Persian king's invitation to return to their own country, and remarkably so with those who ought to have been most eager to avail themselves of it, viz. the priesthood. Of them but 4 out of the 24 orders, and of the Levites only 74 (households, probably) returned. After the returned exiles had arrived at their respective cities, as the seventh month was approaching they were assembled, as one man, to Jerusalem, and rebuilt the altar of burnt offerings, and from the 1st day of Tishri (see page 10) reestablished the daily sacrifices. They kept also in that month the Feast of Tabernacles¹ (Ezra iii. 1—6) “according to the scripture” (viz. from the 15th to the 22nd² of the 7th month, Lev. xxiii. 33—42). Then in the second month (Iyyār) of the second year of their return (whether this was the second or third year of Darius cannot be decided) energetic measures began to be taken for the building of the Temple, and the foundation thereof was shortly laid amid the blasts of trumpets, the clashing of cymbals, and songs and praises to the LORD “for His mercy (endureth) for ever upon Israel,” while some shouted for joy, and the ancient men, who had seen the Former House, wept, when the foundation of this House was laid before their eyes (Ezr. iii. 8—13). But the building was not destined to be completed at this time. When the Samaritans heard that the community, which had returned from the Captivity, were beginning to rebuild the Temple, they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chiefs of the people, and desired to take part in the work. On their cooperation being declined they set themselves to hinder the Jews in their work, and bribed some of the favourites at the Court of Persia so effectually, that they frustrated the purpose of the people of Judah during the rest of “the reign of Cyrus, even up to the reign of Darius” (Ezra iv. 1—5);—i.e. from about B.C. 536 to B.C. 529 when Cyrus died, and during the reign of Cambyses, son of Cyrus (B.C. 529—522), and the 10 months (or less) of the reign of the pseudo-Smerdis (or Bardes) B.C. 522—1, and during one year of the reign of Darius, who succeeded Bardes in 521—in all about 15 years³. In the second year of Darius, God raised up Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo (Ezr. v. 1, 2) to prophesy to the Jews which were in Judah and Jerusalem, so that Zerubbabel and Joshua the High Priest and the rest of the people “came and worked at the House of the Lord of Hosts in the 24th day of the 6th month of the second year of Darius,” (Hag.

² The 22nd called Sh'mini 'aṣēreth is looked on as a separate Festival, vēgel biph'ne 'aṣmo (T. B. Succah 47^b—48^a).

³ For further particulars with regard to the events of this interval see the book of Ezra.

i. 15). Although it is true that the enemies of Judah and Benjamin were a chief cause of this long neglect of the work of rebuilding, still such neglect seems to have been in great measure caused by remissness on the part of Zerubbabel and Joshua, and the heads of the people. For Haggai on the 1st of the 6th month (i. 1—11) administered to them a scathing rebuke, when he said to them “Is it time for you, you indeed, to dwell in your houses all ceiled, while this House lieth waste?” He calls on them too to “consider their ways,” to call to mind, why it was that they “sowed much, and brought in little,” it is (says he) because “My House is waste, and ye run every one to his own house.” In the 7th month the word of the LORD came again to Haggai, and he foretells the “shaking of the heavens and the earth and the sea,” encourages the people by the promise that “the choicest things of the nations should come” to glorify God’s House (ii. 7, 8), and assures them that “the glory of that House will in later times be greater than at the first” (ver. 9). At this juncture it was, that the first recorded revelation came to Zechariah, in the 8th month, and he is commanded to exhort the people to repentance, and to warn them against neglecting the words of the prophets as their fathers had done before them, if they would not experience their chastisements (i. 1—6).

Contents of Chap. i.—viii.

After the (1) introductory verses (Chap. i. 1—6), Chapters i. 7—viii. 23 fall into two divisions, divided from each other, and from the introduction, by the mention of the exact date of each revelation. They comprise (2) Chap. i. 7—vi. 15, and (3) Chap. vii. and viii.

(2) Chap. i. 7—vi. 15 consists of a series of seven visions, with two appendices—chaps. ii. 6—13—vi. 9—15.

First Vision (chap. i. 7—17).—The horsemen between the myrtles. This vision was intended to convey to the prophet the truth that, though as yet there may be little sign of God’s “overthrowing the kingdoms” (Haggai ii. 22), yet He, with His all-watchful eye, was scanning the horizon, and preparing to fulfil His word.

Second Vision (chap. i. 18—21).—The four horns and four workmen indicate that God would continue to remove the hostility of the Persians, even as He had already broken the power of the Assyrians, Egyptians, and Babylonians.

Third Vision (chap. ii. 1—5).—The man with the measuring line. The enlargement and perfect security of the people of God. An appendix (chap. ii. 6—13), prophetic of the ingathering of the nations in the days of BRANCH, the Messiah.

Fourth Vision (chap. iii.)—Joshua, the high priest, arraigned before the angel of the Lord. The forgiveness of the sins of the priesthood and people, whose representative he was.

Fifth Vision (chap. iv.).—The candlestick with the two olive-trees. The diffusion of God's grace by means of His two channels—the priesthood and civil power. It contains a promise (ver. 9) that Zerubbabel's hands should finish the building of the Temple.

Sixth Vision (chap. v. 1—11).—The flying roll, and the woman in the ephah, denoting the curse on sinners, and the banishment of sin.

Seventh Vision (chap. vi. 1—8).—The four chariots. God's judgments on the nations. An appendix (chap. vi. 9—15) describing the crowning of Joshua, which foreshadows the twofold office of BRANCH, as king and priest. A probable lacuna in the text.

(8) Chaps. vii., viii.—The inquiry concerning the fasts. The prophet's rebuke of the people for their formalism. The answer to their inquiry, in the form of a promise that their fasts should be turned into feasts.

PROLEGOMENA TO CHAPTERS IX.—XIV.

Integrity, Date and Authorship.

The first to call in question the genuineness of these chapters was Mede (the great English writer on Prophecy, who died 1638). He was led to do so in defence of the correctness of the Text of the New Testament. Observing that in Matt. xxvii. 9 a passage, which is evidently a quotation from Zech. xi. 12, 13, is ascribed to Jeremiah, he felt bound to support this authoritative statement of the Evangelist (as he considered it), and in endeavouring so to do he came to the conclusion that there is much in these Chapters which argues their pre-exilian origin. Since his time the question has been repeatedly discussed, with such inconsistent results, that while Hitzig places chaps. ix.—xiv. as early as B.C. 772, in the reign of Uzziah, Eichhorn refers them to "after the battle of Issus, B.C. 333," and Böttcher "after B.C. 330" (see Pusey's "Table of Dates &c."). We now proceed to review the arguments which have been brought forward by the impugners of the genuineness of these chapters, bearing in mind Pusey's weighty remark "It is obvious that there must be some mistake either in the tests applied, or in their application, which admits of a variation of at least 450 years."

I. A difference has been alleged between chaps. i.—viii., and chaps. ix.—xiv., (1) with regard to Style, (2) with regard to Historical Standpoint.

(1) With regard to style it has been urged :

(a) That the style of chaps. i.—viii. is utterly different to that of chaps. ix.—xiv. This (speaking generally) we are free to admit. But we cannot admit it as a valid argument against the Unity of Authorship. For, upon the argument of mere style it might be maintained that the same author could not have written Zech. i. 1—6, vii. and viii., and i. 7—vi. 15 ; the first-mentioned passages consist chiefly of rebuke, and in them there is no mention of Cémach, while in the other passage there is nothing but a series of visions, with passages of encouragement and promise interspersed (ii. 10—17, iii. 7—10, vi. 9—15). As for the heading of chap. vii. 1, which ascribes it to Zechariah, it might be put out of the argument for one side or the other, since such critics are in the habit of rejecting such verses as spurious, when they are subversive of their preconceived conclusions. Again, we may adduce cases in which the argument from style has no weight with these critics : e.g. the style of Hos. i.—iii. is utterly different to that of iv.—xiv. and that of Ezek. iv. v. to that of vi. vii. or of xxvii. xxviii. and yet the general integrity of these books is universally admitted.

(β) That in i. 7—vi. 15 there is nothing but visions, while in ix.—xiv. there are none. But, there can surely be no reason why a prophet should not relate visions when he sees them, while there is every reason why he should not relate them when he does not see them ; neither can there be any reason in the nature of things why a prophet, who once in his life saw a series of visions in one night, should be expected to have all revelations made to him in that particular manner. Zech. i. 1—6, vii. viii. contains no visions, and yet the genuineness of those passages is not doubted. Similarly, Amos vii.—ix. consists wholly of visions, while in i.—vi. there are none ; Isaiah, too, and Ezekiel related such visions as they saw, but when they saw none they delivered their message in a different manner. If the thoughtful reader will compare this objection with that which we have said might be brought against the unity of authorship of chap. i. 1—6, vii., viii., and chap. i. 7—vi. 15, he will probably come to the conclusion, that one is of as little weight as the other.

(γ) That the angel interpreter, and Satan, and the Seven Eyes disappear from chaps. ix.—xiv. This is quite natural. They were part of the visions, and when the visions disappear, they disappear also. It might as reasonably be argued that the Prophet was bound in the latter portion of his prophecies to refer continually to Horses, Chariots, Candlesticks, Horns &c., because, forsooth, he had seen such in his visions!

(δ) That (a) Exact dates are given in the former chapters, but none in the latter. So, too, are dates prefixed to Is. vi. 1, Ezek. i. 1—3, viii. 1, xl. 1, &c.—That (b) in chaps. i.—viii. introductory formulas constantly occur, which are wanting in the latter chapters. Similarly Hosea uses introductory formulas in the first five chapters, but none in the last nine. And yet (as we have said) no doubt is entertained of the integrity of that book.

Finally the argument from style must always be a doubtful one. Pusey has given an instance of the precarious nature of such arguments in the following. The Laws of Plato an acute German critic imagined to have proved from their style to be not the work of Plato. And yet Jowett (Transl. Plato Dialog. iv. p. 1) has shown their genuineness by 20 citations in Aristotle (who must have been intimate with Plato for some 17 years), by allusions of Isocrates (writing a year after Plato's death), by references of the comic poet Alexis (a younger contemporary), besides the unanimous voice of later antiquity. Further, critics of similar tendencies do not agree on points of style: e.g. Rosenmüller speaks of the first eight chapters as being "prosaic, feeble, poor," and of the remaining six as "poetic, weighty, concise, glowing," (comp. Maurer and Hitzig). Böttcher on the other hand says "In comparison with the lifeless language of these chapters (ix.—xiv.), as to which we cannot at all understand how any can have removed them into so early pre-exile times, the Psalms attributed to the time of the Maccabees are amazingly fresh." When critics so disagree as to the respective merits of the styles of the two sections, it seems hardly worth while to consider the argument. We will merely remark, that neither sweeping statement is correct. In the first chapters when Zechariah is describing his visions, he uses the natural language of narrative, viz. prose. When (ii. 10—17, vi. 12, 13) he looks forward to the distant future, he speaks in glowing language such as will bear comparison with anything contained in the latter chapters.

(2) A difference with regard to the Historical Standpoint has been urged (a) in particular passages, (β) in the two sections generally.

(a) We have shown in the Commentary that the arguments of those who see in certain passages of chap. ix.—xiv. positive indications of the pre-exilian origin of these chapters are inconclusive. See especially "Remarks" on ix. 1—8, pp. 82—84; ix. 9—17, p. 90; x. 2, p. 91; x. 3—12, pp. 95, 96; xi. 1—3, p. 97, 8, p. 101; xi. 14, p. 104; xii. 1—9, p. 110, 111; xii. 11, p. 16; xiv. 5, p. 124; xiv. 1—21, p. 131, 132.

(β) With regard to the historical standpoint generally, it has been alleged that in chap. i.—viii. the prophet is continually mentioning the rebuilding of the Temple, and the re-inhabiting of Jerusalem; while in chap. ix.—xiv. he is occupied with quite different matters. In the former he mentions his contemporaries, such as Zerubbabel and Joshua, but not so in the latter portion. As regards the Temple and the prophet's contemporaries this is perfectly true, but it is no argument for the pre-exilian authorship of chap. ix.—xiv., nor against their contents having been delivered by Zechariah. For, if our theory as to the date of these chapters be correct, they were written at a time when the rebuilding of the Temple had been long completed, and when those abuses of the Temple-service, which occupy so much of the attention of the Prophet Malachi, had not as yet crept in. The Prophet is occupied in the latter chapters with matters quite different from those with which he is concerned in the former chapters, hence the frequent recurrence in the latter section of the expression "in that day" (ix. 16, xii., xiii., xiv. passim). But, that in the latter section there is no mention of the re-inhabiting of Jerusalem is certainly untrue, see (ix. 16, 17), x. 6, 7, xii. 6, xiv. 10.

The arguments, however, against the pre-exilian origin of these chapters are not merely of a negative kind.

II. We now proceed to adduce from (a) parallel passages, (β) notes of time, &c., what we consider to be

Internal Evidence in favour of the hypothesis of the Post-exilian Origin of Chap. ix.—xiv.

(a) The writer of chap. ix.—xiv. shows such a familiarity with the writings of the later prophets as seems to some reconcileable only with the supposition that he wrote at a date posterior to them: thus with the so-called *Deutero-Isaiah*¹. Compare

Zech. ix. 12 ^a with Is. xlii. 7, xlix. 9, lxi. 1.	Zech. xii. 1 with Is. li. 13. — — 2 „ — li. 22, 23.

	— — 21 „ — xlv. 9.

Haggai. Compare

Zech. xiv. 13 with Hag. ii. 21, 22.

Similarly chap. i.—viii, which are of undeniable post-exilian authorship, show a thorough acquaintance with the later prophets. Compare, for example :

chap. ii. 6 (E.V.) with Isa. xlvi. 20, or with Isa. lii. 11 and Jer. li. 6, 9 ;
chap. ii. 9, 11 (E.V.), and chap. iv. 9, with Ezek. vi. 7, 10, xxxix. 10, &c. ; chaps. iii. 8, vi. 12, with Jer. xxiii. 5, xxxiii. 15 (Isa. iv. 2) ;
chap. vi. 15 with Jer. xvii. 24 ;

¹ The date of Is. xl.—lxvi. need not come under consideration here, since most critics who regard Zech. ix.—xiv.

as pre-exilian, consider Is. xl.—lxvi. as contemporary with the later prophets.

chap. vii. 5—10 with Isa. lviii. 3—7;
chap. vii. 9 with Ezek. xviii. 8, and Jer. vii. 5—7, xxii. 3;
chap. vii. 12 with Ezek. xi. 19;	chap. viii. 4 with Isa. lxx. 20;
chap. vii. 13 with Jer. xi. 11;	chap. viii. 6 with Jer. xxxii. 17, 27;
chap. vii. 14 with Jer. xvi. 13, &c.;	chap. viii. 7 with Isa. xliii. 6;
chap. viii. 3 with Jer. xxxi. 23;	chap. vii. 8 with Isa. xlvi. 1.

This argument seemed so convincing to de Wette that, after having in the first three editions of his Einleitung declared for two authors, he felt compelled to change his mind, and in his fourth edition admitted the post-exilian origin of Chap. ix.—xiv., and even the possibility of their having been written by Zechariah. We are not, however, prepared to regard this argument as conclusive. We own the difficulty that there is in computing the exact weight due to the argument derived from the consideration of parallel passages, and concur with Cheyne's pertinent remarks on the subject (The Prophecies of Isaiah, II. p. 210):

“The argument from parallel passages is sometimes much overrated. How prone we are to fancy an imitation where there is none, has been strikingly shown by Munro's parallel between the plays of Shakspeare and Seneca (Journal of Philology, Vol. VI. Camb. 1876, pp. 70—72), and even when an imitation on one side or the other must be supposed, how difficult it is to choose between the alternatives!...A recent revolution of opinion among patristic students may be a warning to us not to be too premature in deciding such questions. It has been the custom to argue from the occurrence of almost identical sentences in the Octavius of Minucius Felix and the Apologeticum of Tertullian, that Minucius must have written later than the beginning of the third century, on the ground that a brilliant genius like Tertullian's cannot have been such a servile imitator as the hypothesis of the priority of Minucius would imply. But Adolf Ebert (Tertullians Verhältnis zu Minucius Felix) seems to have definitely proved that Tertullian not only made use of Minucius, but did not even understand his author rightly.”

(β) There are certain notes of time, &c. in chaps. ix.—xiv. which seem to compel us to admit their post-exilian origin.

1. No mention is made of any king of Israel or Judah, except the Messiah (ix. 9). For chap. xi. 6 evidently refers to the different nations of the world (i. e. hā'ādām means “mankind,” and hā'āreç “the world”). The expression “from their hand” indicates that several kings are referred to: and so, if “his king” meant an Israelite king, the expression “(and each) into the hand of his king” would imply that each Israelite had a separate king. But the meaning is

“I will deliver mankind into the hand of one another and (each people) into the hand of its king.”

2. The manner in which Greece is named (ix. 13) as the chief enemy of Zion (quite different from that of Joel iv. 6, Is. lxvi. 19), besides other historical references, which we have pointed out in our “Remarks,” leave us no choice but to understand chap. ix.—xi. as descriptive of the Macedonian and Maccabean periods. While the prophecies of chap. xii.—xiv., which manifestly form one section, would be simply untrue if uttered in reference to any pre-exilian epoch.

3. Except in Mal. i. 1 the expression Maṣṣá d'bhár YHVH occurs only in chap. ix. 1 and xii. 1.

4. In xii. 11 a place in the tribe of Issachar is called by an Assyrian name.

The reader will perceive that the arguments adduced in II. (α) and (β) answer from the positive side of the argument those objections which in I. (α) and (β) we treated merely from the negative side.

We conclude, therefore, that chap. ix.—xiv. are, equally with chap. i.—viii., of post-exilian origin.

III. The Integrity of Chap. ix.—xiv.

The theory, which Bunsen has called one of the triumphs of modern criticism, that chap. ix.—xi. and chap. xii.—xiv. are the work of two different prophets: viz. chap. ix.—xi. that of a contemporary of Isaiah, perhaps Zechariah son of Jeberechiah (Is. viii. 2), and chap. xii.—xiv. possibly that of Urijah son of Shemaiah (Jer. xxvi. 20—23), falls to the ground with the establishment of the post-exilian origin of the whole section. Archbishop Newcombe, who originated this theory, concluded that chap. ix.—xi. were written much earlier than the time of Jeremiah, and before the captivity of the tribes; but was not so positive as his followers with regard to the pre-exilian authorship of chap. xii.—xiv., though he thinks the mention of idols (xiii. 2) to be in favour of that supposition. We must, therefore, discuss a little more fully what have been termed the grounds for separating chap. xii.—xiv. from chap. ix.—xi.

(1) Chap. xi. has a distinct introductory formula. But since this formula is the same as that of chap. ix. 1, and that a formula which recurs only in Mal. i. 1, this argument tends rather in the other direction.—(2) The former chapters speak of Israel and Judah, but the latter do not mention "Israel." On the contrary chap. xii. 1 states that the whole of the following prophecy is concerning "Israel."—(3) In the former Syrians, Phoenicians, Philistines, and Greeks are mentioned, but Assyrians and Egyptians described as the most powerful. These chapters belong therefore to early times. We have already shown that the manner in which the Greeks are here described as enemies of Israel fixes the date of these chapters to the post-exilic period. Egypt and Assyria are spoken of (x. 10) as the nations who had carried off the people, and whence they were to be brought back, while in ver. 11 the stereotyped language of former prophets is evidently used in a figurative sense.—(4) The anticipations of the two prophets are different. The first trembles for Ephraim, but for Judah he has no fear. On the contrary, Ephraim and Judah are included equally in the promised protection. The second prophet does not mention the northern kingdom, but is full of alarm for Judah, and sees the enemy laying siege to Jerusalem. "Ephraim" does not denote "the northern kingdom" in chap. ix.—xi. (see Remarks). If Jerusalem was to be besieged at any time after its rebuilding (but see Remarks, p. 132), there is no reason why the same prophet who spoke before in general terms of wars, should not afterwards speak more particularly of a siege. In prophesying concerning a siege of Jerusalem it is only natural that Judah, in which tribe it partly stood, should be especially mentioned. Moreover, as we remarked above, the section is expressly addressed to all "Israel."—(5) Difference of style: "And it shall come to pass" does not occur in ix.—xi., "in that day" which occurs so often in xii.—xiv. occurs only once in ix.—xi., and "n'um YHVH," occurs only twice in ix.—xi. There are also favourite expressions in xii.—xiv., such as "all peoples," "all nations round about," "family of Egypt," &c. This is true, but chap. xii.—xiv. are admitted by all to be a separate section, delivered probably on a different occasion to the former section, and pointing on the whole to a much further distant future. These facts are quite sufficient to account for such very slight differences of style.

IV. The Integrity of the whole Book.

With regard to the integrity of the book we must premise, that the fact that a passage occurs in a certain book is not to be regarded as a proof that it was looked upon by those who drew up the Canon as necessarily an integral portion of that book. For, the principle was to insert short compositions into longer ones lest from their lack of bulk they should be lost (איידי דוטר מירנס Baba Bathra 14^b). Thus (Vayyiqra Rabba xv. 2) the two verses Is. viii. 19, 20 are ascribed to Beeri (father of Amos), and are said to have been placed there because they were not long enough to form a book by themselves. Again, in T. B. Maccoth 24^b the verse Mic. iii. 12 is ascribed, without remark, to Urijah the priest, the co-witness with Zechariah son of Jeberechiah (Is. viii. 2). If therefore it should be thought that Zech. xi. 1—3; and xiii. 7—9 have no apparent connection with the context in the places in which they stand, it would be quite admissible to suppose them to be fragments, say of Ezekiel, and Jeremiah respectively, which had not been included in those books, and which were now inserted in the prophecies of Zechariah to prevent their being lost. There is no doubt, that we are aware of, expressed in Talmudim or Midrashim as to the genuineness of the last six chapters of Zechariah. On the contrary, chap. xi. 1 is distinctly ascribed to “Zechariah son of Iddo” (T. B. Yoma 39^a). While, on the other hand, Rabbi Akivah, in a remarkable piece of exegesis (Maccoth ibid.), identifies Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah with the author of Zech. viii. 4, although he is perfectly aware, that Zechariah prophesied during the time of the Second Temple. (See further Introduction to Zechariah in Bishop Ellicott's “Old Testament Commentary for English Readers.”)

We have given reasons for assigning the whole of chap. ix.—xiv. to the post-captivity period: we have shown, too, that there is nothing in the style or contents of the two sections of this division (ix.—xi. and xii.—xiv.) to cast any serious doubt on the unity of authorship. We now proceed to adduce some arguments to prove that there is sufficient correspondence between chap. i.—viii. and ix.—xiv. to justify us, in default of any positive evidence to the contrary, in regarding the whole book as the work of one prophet.

(1) Both portions exhibit, as we have shown, an extensive acquaintance with the writings of the later prophets.

(2) They both exhibit also an extensive acquaintance with the earlier books, thus: in chap. i. 4—6, chap. vii. 12, reference is made to “the former prophets” generally;

chap. ii. 12 (E. V. 8) recalls the thought, though not the phraseology, of Ps. xvii. 8; chaps. iii. 8, vi. 12, allude to Isai. iv. 2, as well as to Jer. xxiii. 5, and xxxiii. 15;

chap. iii. 10 is from Mic. iv. 4;

chap. vi. 13 evidently refers to Ps. cx. 4;

chap. viii. 8 recalls Hos. ii. 21 (E. V. 19);

chap. viii. 20—22, in substance may be compared with Mic. iv. 1, 2, Isa. ii. 2, 3.

And in the second part, chap. ix. 1—8 bears some resemblance to Amos i. 3, ii. 6;

- chap. ix. 10 (first half) is borrowed from Mic. v. 10, and (second half) from Ps. lxxii. 8 ;
- chap. xiii. 2 is a quotation from Hos. ii. 17, or Mic. v. 12, 13 (comp. Is. ii. 18, 20) ; and verse 9 from Hos. ii. 20 (E. V. 23) ;
- comp. also chap. ix. 16 with Is. xi. 12 ;
- chap. x. 12 with Mic. iv. 5 ;
- chap. x. 10—12 with Is. xi. 15, xiv. 25, x. 24—27, xxx. 31, &c. ;
- chap. xii. 8 with Joel iv. 10 ;
- chap. xii. 10 with Joel iii. 1, 2.
- chap. xiv. 3 with Is. xxxiv. 1—4 ;
- chap. xiv. 6, 7 with Amos v. 18, 20, Joel iv. (E. V. iii.) 15, Is. xxx. 26 ;
- chap. xiv. 8 with Is. xi. 9, ii. 3, Mic. iv. 2 ;
- chap. xiv. 11 with Amos ix. 13—15 ;
- chap. xiv. 20 with Is. xxiii. 18 ;
- chap. xiv. 21 with Is. iv. 3, xxxv. 8, Joel iv. (E. V. iii.) 17 : etc.

But we cannot lay much stress on this argument, since prophets, belonging as they did in most cases to a school, were in all probability acquainted with the works of their predecessors.

(3) In both divisions there are similar if not identical expressions to represent the whole people such as “the house of Israel, and the house of Judah” (viii. 13), “the house of Judah, and the house of Joseph” (x. 6). See further on pp. 90, 110.

(4) Chap. xi. 11 is very similar to ii. 9, 11 [13, 15 Hebr.]. And the promise of x. 1 to that of viii. 12. In both portions Jerusalem is bid rejoice (ii. 10 Hebr. ver. 14, ix. 9), and in both the only king of Israel mentioned is the Messiah.

(5) In both portions there are promises of the bringing back of the exiles (comp. ii. 10—17, viii. 6—8 with ix. 11, 12 and x. 10—12).

(6) In both there is the habit of dwelling on the same thought or word (e.g. ii. 14, 15, vi. 10, vi. 12, 13, viii. 4, 5, viii. 23, xi. 7, xiv. 10, 11, xiv. 4, xiv. 5). In both the whole and its part are mentioned together for emphasis as v. 4, x. 4, and in xii. 11 we have “every family apart,” and then in ver. 12, 13 the specification. In both parts we have the unusual number of five sections to a verse, e.g. vi. 13, ix. 5, 7.

(7) Both divisions are written in Hebrew free from Aramaisms. In both the expression mè'òbhér umishshábh occurs (vii. 14, ix. 8), an expression which occurs elsewhere only in Ezek. xxxv. 7.

(8) The highly poetic language and deep prophetic insight of chap.

ix.—xiv. we consider as an additional argument in favour of the unity of authorship of the whole book. For the man, to whom in his youth such mystic visions as those of chap. i.—vi. were vouchsafed, is just such an one to whom we should not be surprised to find, that in his later years such profound revelations as those contained in chap. ix.—xiv. were revealed, and who from his poetic and imaginative temperament would be likely to find suitable poetic language and metaphors, wherewith to clothe them when revealed to him.

The internal evidence being favourable to the hypothesis of the post-exilic origin of chap. ix.—xiv., as well as of chap. i.—viii., and to that of unity of authorship, rather than adverse to it, and there being no positive external evidence to the contrary, we conclude that it is probable that the whole of the so-called book of Zechariah (except perhaps xi. 1—3, and xiii. 7—9) is the work of Zechariah, grandson of Iddo.

V. Probable date of Zech. ix.—xiv.

Holding the view that by divine inspiration prophets are able to predict events, we cannot agree with those who assert that they must always have written after the events which they describe. Further, in the case before us, while chap. ix.—xiii. are a sufficiently accurate description of the chief features of the Macedonian and Maccabean periods to be interpreted as prophetic thereof, they are so vague in detail, and of such an imaginative and idealistic character as to render the supposition that they are descriptive of events which had already taken place extremely improbable. We conclude, therefore (apart from any consideration of authorship), that they were written before Alexander's victorious march through Palestine (B.C. 333). But, though a prophet could foretell events, he would not speak of matters, which could be of no interest to his contemporaries. Zechariah would not, therefore, prophesy concerning the wars of the sons of Zion with the sons of Greece before the Greeks had begun to attract attention in the East (comp. p. 132). Now the first event in connection with the Greeks, which would become notorious in the East, is the burning of Sardis by the Ionians (B.C. 499). These chapters must, then, have been composed after that date (viz. between 499—333 B.C.). Now

Zechariah was, as we have shown, in all probability a young man when he came from Babylon. Suppose he was 25 years of age in the second year of Darius (520), he would have been but 46 in the year of the burning of Sardis, or 55 in the year of the battle of Marathon (490), or 65 in the year of the battle of Salamis (480). Now, this last great victory, being a naval one, was likely to attract the most attention among the Jews. For, the fleets of the Phœnicians had been requisitioned by the Persians for the subjugation of the Ionians, and the Jews might well have feared that the Greeks, confounding them with the Phœnicians, would wreak a speedy and bitter vengeance on them. We consider therefore that about 479 B.C. (the year after the battle of Salamis) is the date to which the last six chapters of Zechariah may most reasonably be assigned.

Contents of Chap. ix.—xiv.

These chapters consist of two sections: (1) Chap. ix.—xi., (2) Chap. xii.—xiv., each of which commences with the formula Maṣṣá d'bhár Adōnáy.

- (1) Chap. ix., x. Doom of adjacent nations. The struggles, but eventual triumph and security, of Israel. The coming of the King (chap. ix, 9, seqq.).
- ,, xi. [xiii. 7—9 (?)]. The storm threatens the shepherds (?). Rejection of the Good Shepherd. Doom of the foolish shepherd.
- (2) Chap. xii. 1—9. Struggles of Israel with the nations.
- ,, xiii. 1—4. Zeal against prophets in general.
- ,, xii. 10—14. Mourning over him whom they pierced.
- ,, xiii. 5, 6. General disclaiming of prophetic powers. [chap. xiii. 7—9 (?)].
- ,, xiv. "The last things," as seen in the light of the old dispensation.

CHAPTER I.

IN the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying, “Came,” lit. was (and so elsewhere): LXX. ἐγένετο. “Iddo the prophet,” this is, in part, the meaning of the Hebr. according to the traditional accentuation; but the words “the prophet” were originally intended, doubtless, to apply to Zechariah, not to Iddo¹.

Verse I.
Translation.

שְׁתַּי is the fem. of שְׁנַיִם “two”: it (with its constr. שְׁתַּי) is the only word which has a בְּנִדְכַפַּת letter with dagesh after a moving sh^{va}. The dagesh is forte, representing the lost נ. The full form of the word would be either (Gesen.) שְׁנַתַּיִם (which, however, is used as the dual of שָׁנָה “a year”), or rather שְׁנַתַּיִם. The Arabic has a prosthetic Alef², being masc. ithnāni, fem. ithnatāni (or dropping

Words.

¹ The tradition is: “When a prophet’s name is mentioned and that of his father, then he is a prophet, and the father also. When only the prophet’s name is mentioned, then his father was not a prophet.” אִךְ יוֹחֵן כָּל נְבִיא שֶׁנִּחְפָּשׁ שְׁמוֹ וְנִחְפָּשׁ שֵׁם אָבִיו, נְבִיא וּבֵן נְבִיא. וְכֹל נְבִיא שֶׁנִּחְפָּשׁ שְׁמוֹ וְלֹא נִחְפָּשׁ שֵׁם אָבִיו, הוּא נְבִיא. וְאָבִיו אֵינוֹ נְבִיא. ר’ אֱלֵעָזָר בִּשְׁם ר’ יוֹסִי בֶן זִמְרָא מֵיִתִּי לֵה מִן הָרָא (עוֹרָא הַ). וְהִתְנַבֵּי... זְכַרְיָה בֶר עֲדוּא נְבִיאִי. שֶׁהִיא נְבִיא בֶן נְבִיא. וְיִקְרָא רִנָּה, with the anachronism of supposing the grandfather (or father) of Zechariah to have been “Iddo the prophet” (2 Chron. xiii. 22), who lived more than four centuries earlier, for the name was an old one in the Priesthood (see 1 Chron. vi. 6, E. V. v. 21). At any rate, according to common sense (not to mention that it is in accordance with the usual custom of other Semitic languages), the title, which comes at the end of a genealogical string like this, belongs naturally to that person of whom the writer is especially speaking.

² R. David Qimchi in his Grammar on account of this to saddle Tradition the prefix and retaining the Nun) thintāni, which is exactly שְׁנַתָּיִם, since Arab. Th often corresponds to Hebr. ש, as שׁוֹר “an ox,” Arab. Thour.

(Sha’ar diqdūq hash-shēmōth, sha’ar

דָּרְיֹוֹשׁ, “Darius,” has a metheg under the first letter, to indicate that the sh’va under the rēsh is moving¹. The pointing דָּרְיֹוֹשׁ² in Tregelles’ English edition of Gesenius (1846) is contrary to the authority of MSS., neither is the word so pointed in Gesen. Thesaurus. [By a remarkable coincidence the sum of the numerical values of the consonants of דָּרְיֹוֹשׁ (4 + 200 + 10 + 6 + 300 = 520) gives the date B. C. of the second reign of Darius, when the prophecies of Haggai and those of the first six chapters of Zechariah were delivered.]

יהוה, the Jews always read this word as אֲדֹנָי “The LORD,” with the vowels of which it is furnished; unless it is preceded or followed by the word אֲדֹנָי itself, when it is read as אֱלֹהִים (and pointed יְהוָה). Consequently the prefixes ב, כ, ל, מ, when placed before this word, are pointed as though actually prefixed to אֲדֹנָי, or אֱלֹהִים, as the case may be.—זְבַרְיָה is compounded of the stem זָכַר and יָה, the latter half of the Sacred Name יהוה. The Sacred Name as a termination of Proper names occurs in various forms, e.g. יְהוּדָה, יְהוּדָה, יְהוּדָה and even simply י. Thus צְדַקְיָהוּ, יִשְׁעֵיָהוּ, יִשְׁעֵיָהוּ, and אֲבִי (2 Kings xviii. 2) hash-sh’vā) bears witness to the fact that the orientals (בני מזרח) read the Hebrew words as eshtaim, eshté.

¹ The cuneiform contract-tablets of the time of Nebuchadnezzar all point to a moving sh’va under the rēsh, for a moving sh’va before a yūd, even if the yūd be pointed with quite a different vowel, should always incline towards an i sound (Qimchi, ibidem), and in them the syllable is always ri. The forms are (1) Da-ri-ya-us, (2) Da-ri-ah-us, (3) Da-ri-ya-mu-us, (4) Da-ri-ya-a-mu-us, (5) Da-ri-ah-u-su, (6) Da-ri-ya-a-uts, (7) Ta-ri-ah-mu-su (Budge). All of these exhibit in the second syllable what could, at the least, be represented in Hebrew only by a moving sh’vā. Nos. (2), (4), (5), (6) and (7) point clearly to a long ā after the yūd. The Hebrew was prevented from representing properly the u or ū of the ultimate before the š, by the fact that two vowels cannot fall together in Hebrew. It could only have been done by inserting an awkward ā after the š, thus דָּרְיֹוֹשׁ.

² But, for all that, the Persic inscription of Behistan points to a short (ā). There we read, over and over again, a-d-m D-a-r-y-w-u-sh “I Darius,” in which the first letter of a-d-m is the same as the second of the name. Now Adm is the Sanscrit āhām, Zend āzem, whence I conclude (but I am open to correction) that the first a of Darius was originally short.

for אֲבִיָּה (2 Chron. xxix. 1).—בֶּן-בְּרִיָּה. The construct of בֶּן unlike that of שֵׁם (which is but six times שָׁם) is generally joined to its consequent by a hyphen (maqṣeph), which has the effect of making the two words into one (which seems to be the effect also of mahpac in הַלְבֵּן Gen. xvii. 17): and then, since a long vowel cannot stand in a closed syllable unless it have the accent or metheg (see Excurs. i. 8), the long ē is changed into ĕ or ĭ as בֶּן-נֹנִן, בֶּן-מִלְכָּךְ. The first vowel of בְּרִיָּה has metheg or rather munach. (See Excurs. ii. A. 1 and 9 N.B.)—לְאמֹר “saying,” though sometimes it means “to say.” The infinitive construct is אֲמֹר, when ל is prefixed to it the vowel of ל is ē and the א becomes quiescent; but this is not the case with the prefixes ב and כ, thus בְּאֲמֹר (Deut. iv. 10), כְּאֲמֹר (Josh. vi. 8). With the word אֱלֹהִים, however, the change takes place with all three suffixes, thus, בְּאֱלֹהִים, כְּאֱלֹהִים, לְאֱלֹהִים.

בַּחֹדֶשׁ הַשְּׁמִינִי means simply “in the eighth month,” without stating the day of the month. Some have maintained that the word חֹדֶשׁ (which means “new-moon” and then Constructions.

“month”) is used here in a constructio prægna to denote “the first day of the month.” In 1 Sam. xx. 5 חֹדֶשׁ does mean “new moon”; comp. 2 Kings iv. 23; Is. i. 13. But, never does the word when used with the def. art. and followed by an ordinal have this meaning. It is true that the בַּחֹדֶשׁ הַשְּׁלִישִׁי of Ex. xix. 1 is by Jewish Tradition said to mean the 1st of Sivan, but the Tradition is hung on the words which come after בְּיוֹם הַזֶּה (see M^ccilta, T. B. Shabbath 86^b and Rashi), and not on any such special meaning of חֹדֶשׁ (the Pentateuchal expression for “new moons” being רֵאשִׁי חֹדָשִׁים, Numb. x. 10, &c.). Moreover Haggai (Zechariah’s contemporary), when wishing to express the 1st day of the month distinctly, adds the words בְּיוֹם אַחַד לַחֹדֶשׁ (i. 1). Comp. Gen. viii. 5, 13; Ex. xl. 2, 17; Numb. i. 1; xxix. 1; xxxiii. 38, &c. It would be possible to make the words of our text denote “the 1st day of the 8th month” only by altering the pointing to בַּחֹדֶשׁ הַשְּׁמִינִי which would mean “on the new moon of the eighth [scil. month].”—ל. בִּשְׁנַת שְׁתַּיִם. This is the regular way of expressing a date

2 The LORD hath been sore displeased with your fathers.

3 Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts;

Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.

from (or rather with respect to) a certain starting point: viz. ב is prefixed to the constr. of שנה, which is followed by the fem. numeral in the absolute, and that again by ל: e.g. (2 Kings xxiv. 12) בַּשָּׁנָה שְׁמֹנֶה לְמַלְכוֹתוֹ, lit. "In the year eight with respect to his reigning." N.B. The Hebr. construct-form simply denotes a close relation (or annexation) to the following word. "Of" is only one of the meanings expressed by the construct.

This version seems to make Addo identical with Barachias: πρός Ζαχαρίαν τὸν τοῦ Βαραχίου υἱὸν Ἀδδῶ τὸν προφήτην. But, possibly, υἱὸν is a corruption of υιοῦ caused by the collocation. In any case τὸν προφήτην must refer to Ζαχαρίαν.

Remarks. In point of time this prophecy in the 8th month, comes in between Hag. ii. 1—9, in the 7th month, and Hag. ii. 10—23, in the 9th month.

: קִצְּף... קִצְּף. קִצְּף (the pausal form of קִצְּף) is the acc. of the cognate subst. following the verb קִצְּף. Even intransitive verbs can take such an acc. (the case-ending being, however, almost lost in Hebr.), e.g. (Ps. xiv. 5) פָּחַדוּ פָּחַד. The use of the absolute infinitive (which is but a subst.) before a finite verb, to intensify its meaning, is only another form of this construction. In Arabic, also, both transitive and intransitive verbs take this cognate acc. (with the case-ending retained), e.g. ḡaraba ḡaraban "he struck a blow," and intrans. nāma nouman "he slept a sleep"; the Hebr. פִּן־אִישׁן הַמּוֹת "lest I sleep death" (Ps. xiii. 4) is but a slight extension of this construction (comp. for the idea כִּד רָמַךְ "when he slept," i.e. died—Talm. Jerush.; οὐ γὰρ ἀπέθανε τὸ κοράσιον, ἀλλὰ καθέσθει, Matt. ix. 24; and the Syr. d'mec he slept, died).

The student may here observe that אֱלֹהִים is written first without a ' after the ל, and afterwards (as usually) with the ' , thus אֱלֹהִים. It is convenient to say that אֱל and עַל take the plural pron.-suff.; but as a matter of fact the ' which appears before the suffixes is part of the word itself, as the poetic forms אֱלִי (Job iii. 22,

Verse 3.
Words.

&c.), עֲלֵי (Ps. l. 5, &c.), and the Arab. forms distinctly show. נָאֵם is a subst. (of the form of גְּבוּל "boundary") from a verb, which only occurs once, and then followed by נָאֵם as the cognate accusative (Jer. xxiii. 31) וַיִּנְאֲמוּ נָאֵם "and say God saith." Such nouns are the same in the absol. and in the constr. state. N.B. the u of this word is only ו written defectivè, and is no more a short vowel, than is the ו of זְבוּלָן.

וַאֲמַרְתָּ אֵלַי. When ו is prefixed to the perfect tense, 2nd pers. sing. masc., or 1st sing. com., if the accent remains in its proper place (viz. on the second root-letter) the perfect retains its ordinary meaning; if, however, the verb is to have the force of a future, subjunctive, imperative, &c. the accent¹ is (as a rule) thrown on the last syllable, e.g. (Deut. iv. 30) וּשְׁבַתָּ, (Numb. xiv. 15) וְהִמַּתָּה, (Gen. vi. 18) וְהִקַּמְתִּי, (Ps. lxxxix. 24) וְכַתַּוְתִּי, (Gen. xvii. 6) וְהִפַּרְתִּי. In such a case, if the vowel of the first letter be not supported by a sh'va, or dagesh forte, that vowel will require metheg (Excurs. II. A. 1): thus we have וַאֲמַרְתָּ אֵלֵהֶם "therefore say unto them." But there are certain cases in which the accent is not thrown on the last syllable: (1) When such a perfect is immediately followed (without a distinctive accent) by the tone-syllable of the succeeding word, as (Deut. xiv. 26) וְאָכַלְתָּ שָׁם "and thou shalt eat there." This is in order to avoid the concurrence of two tone-syllables. (On the dagesh in the ש see Excurs. III.): (2) With a disjunctive as (Deut. viii. 10) וְאָכַלְתָּ וְשָׂבַעְתָּ "and thou shalt eat and be satisfied": (3) In the Qal only of verbs quiescent לֵה and ל"א, thus (2 Kings xxi. 13) וּמַחִיתִי "and I will wipe out," (Gen. xvii. 19) וְקָרָאתָ "and thou shalt call." A Perfect thus changed, as *V'amarti*² is here, into an Imperative has usually bearing the tone-vowel.

² In transliteration metheg will in future be represented by ' , and the tone-accent by ' .

4 Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings: but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith the LORD.

some other verb preceding it. But sometimes, as here, it stands alone, comp. (2 Sam. xiv. 10) הַמְדַבֵּר אֵלַי וְהֵבֵאתוּ אֵלַי "Anyone that saith [ought] unto thee bring him unto me."—Adōnāy ʿbā'ōth. Since neither the NAME YHVH, nor its substitute Adōnāy, has a constr. form, some Jewish grammarians say that between THE NAME and ʿbā'ōth the word אֱלֹהֵי is to be understood (though not read). Thus the expression means "THE LORD (God of) Hosts."— וְאָשׁוּב אֵלֵיכֶם. The E. V. "and I will turn, &c." is admissible; but it would, perhaps, be better to render the words "that I may return unto you." The ordinary form to express "and I will return" is with the final הָ, e.g. Mal. iii. 7 וְאָשׁוּבָה אֵלֵיכֶם. In speaking of the Hebr.

Imperfect, we must always remember that Arabic, which retains distinctive terminations, and their distinctive meanings, more than any Semitic language, has four (or five) forms of the Imperfect: (1) the Indicative ending in u, (2) Subj. in a, (3) Jussive without final vowel (like the Hebr. and colloquial Arab. Imperf.), (4 and 5) the Energetic in anna and an. Now, while we maintain that the Hebr. Imperf. in āh is often used, merely for the sake of variation of sound, in the same sense as the ordinary Imperf., still it seems to us evident that the final āh sometimes represents the a of the Arab. Subj. and sometimes the anna of the Energetic. But as the case-endings (where found) have in Hebrew (for the most part) lost their distinctive meaning, so too the mood-endings.

Remarks. Though God had declared (Hag. i. 13, ii. 4) that He was "with them," Hag. ii. 14, 17 shows how much need the people still had of repentance.

הָרֵאשִׁימִים. Baer (with Leusden) has the metheg incorrectly under the הָ (Excurs. II. A. 1). But he places it correctly in vii.

Verse 4. Words. 7, 12, viii. 11, &c.—וּמַעַלְלֵיכֶם with the note יְתִיר, which means that the י between ל and ל is superfluous. In such a case the vowels given above are to be read with the consonants which the note declares are to be read. Thus here we are to read וּמַעְלֵיכֶם. Since there is not, elsewhere, such a word as מַעְלִיל, while the word מַעְלָל (in the plur. form only) is very common, it is natural that the traditional reading should be וּמַעְלֵיכֶם. But, there is a way in which the letters as they stand וּמַעְלֵיכֶם might be read, and that is וּמַעְלֵיכֶם; the objection, however, to this reading is that there is no known plur. עַלְיִים, the plur. of עַלְיָה being always עַלְיֹת. But, there is yet another difference of reading, viz. that, while the Western Jews read וּמַעְלֵיכֶם, the Oriental Jews read וּמַמְעֵלֵיכֶם (but the Codex Petropolitanus, A.D. 916, inferior in age only to the Camb. MS. Mm. 5. 27, A.D. 856, and that only with respect to the consonants, while it has the Oriental reading in the margin marked as the “correct reading,” has in its text the Western variant). The Oriental may be the correct reading, but the prefixed מ is quite unnecessary, as it might well be supplied from the preceding מַדְרִיכֶם, as (Hag. i. 10) מ may be supplied before יְבוּלָה from the מַמְלָל which precedes; compare Zech. xiv. 10. But, on the whole, it appears that וּמַעְלֵיכֶם is a reading which cannot be improved on, the prefix מ being naturally understood after מַדְרִיכֶם, and the more easily omitted since the word already begins with a מ.

The student need hardly be reminded that since מַדְרִיכֶם is defined by the pron. suff. (כֶּם) the adjective which follows it (being simply an epithet) takes the definite article. When Constructions. on the contrary the article is omitted the adj. becomes a tertiary predicate, thus Hag. i. 4 should be rendered “Is it time for you, you [I say], to dwell in your houses ceiled as they are (בְּבֵתֵיכֶם סְפוּנִים), while this House is in ruins?”

οἱ προφήται ἔμπροσθεν is a very free rendering of the Hebr. It ought to have been rather οἱ ἔμπροσθεν προφήται, οἱ πρότεροι προφήται.—מַעְלֵיכֶם is generally rendered correctly (as here) LXX. by ἐπιτηδεύματα (comp. i. 6, Hos. ix. 15, xi. 3, Mich. iii. 4, vii. 13).—עַלְיֹת is also similarly rendered in Zeph. iii. 4 (but in v. 7 by ἐπιφυλλίς). But in Hos. iv. 9, v. 4, vii. 2 διαβούλια is given as the equivalent of מַעְלֵיכֶם.

5 Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

6 But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not take hold of your fathers? and they returned and said, Like as the LORD of hosts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, so hath he dealt with us.

Words.

in the Hebr. of the Post-Captivity. Elsewhere we find אֵים for "where are they?" and nowhere, except in Job xv. 23 (where there is nothing at all following the word) do we find אֵיה except followed by a suff. or subst. The other extant Biblical forms with a suffix are: אֵיכָה "where art thou?" (Gen. iii. 9), and אֵי "where is he?" (Job xx. 7, &c.), or "where is," with a noun following (2 Kings xix. 13, Mich. vii. 10). On the ga'yā under the ה of הַלְעוּלִים and the י of יִחִי see Excurs. II. B. 2, and A. 7. In any but very incorrect editions there is also sillūq placed under the second yūd, thus: יִחִי (compare יִחִי at the beginning of ver. 4). Yich'yā is the real Imperfect "did they keep on living?" comp. (1 Sam. xxii. 12) עָנוּ הֲלֹא לֹוֹה יִעֲנוּ "did not they keep praising this man?"

Both LXX. and Syr. have (according to the interpunctuation) "Your fathers, where are they and the prophets? Will they live for ever?" But there is no reason why the interpunctuation should not be rejected, and both read "Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, will they live for ever?" The order of the Hebr. words, apart from interpunctuation, shows that this is the collocation intended.

Rab¹ (who brought the Mishnah and other traditions into Babylon, and was in a manner the founder of the Talmud Babil) interprets this verse as containing a saying of the Prophet which is objected to by the people. The prophet says "Your fathers, where are they?" The people answer "It is true enough that our fathers are dead—but are the prophets any more alive than they?" To which the Prophet replies "The prophets, indeed, are dead—but their words have come to pass" (T. B. Synhedrim 105 a). This is the only interpretation, which seems to us to give good sense, and it is certainly in accordance with the controversial, not to say colloquial, style of the Post-captivity Prophets. We are glad to see that Keil has adopted this interpretation. Another view of the matter is that Zechariah's words are equivalent to this: The light of prophecy is dying out: while ye have the light, walk as children of the light. But to us it appears, that to put the words "Do (or did) the prophets live for ever?" into the mouth of Zechariah, is to destroy utterly his argument.

“But (אך) [in spite of what you say].” The word אך when used as an affirmative particle denotes the result of some mental process, sometimes incorrect (as in Gen. xlv. 28, Ps. lxxiii. Verse 6. Words. 13), sometimes correct (as in Ps. lxxiii. 1).—הִשִּׁיב is of course the Hif. of נָשַׁב, and must not be confounded with a verb, parts of which have the same pronunciation, viz. סוּג, Hif. הִפִּיג, Mich. vi. 14, as though from נָסַג which actually occurs in Is. lix. 13, comp. יָפַג Mich. ii. 6) “to remove,” Nif. יָפַגוּ אָחֶר (Ps. xxxv. 4) “let them start back.” Sometimes the former verb is construed with ל (as in Lev. v. 11), or is even used absolutely as (Lev. xxv. 47) וְכִי תִשָּׁג יַד גֵּר “and if the hand of a stranger acquire (wealth).”

After the words τὰ νόμμά μου they introduce δέχεσθε: perhaps they dittographed the word חֲקִי, and read חֲקִי קָחוּ. After ἐντέλλομαι they introduce ἐν πνεύματί μου, which they borrowed from vii. 12. οἱ κατελάβοσαν may be a corruption of οὐ κατ., comp. Lam. i. 12, where they have οἱ πρὸς ὑμᾶς for לֹא אֱלֵיכֶם; or, they may have read הִלְלוּ as hēllū, and thought that it was equivalent to the Aram. אֱלֵי = Hebr. אֱלֵה: the former supposition is, perhaps, the more probable. For vayyāshābhū they give καὶ ἀπεκρίθησαν, reading vayyāshābhū, and understanding it in the uncommon biblical (without an acc. of the thing answered) but later Hebr. sense of replying, comp. Syr. pannū, and Arab. radda.

The Prophet quotes an historical case (from Jeremiah) in proof of what he says; עֲשָׂה יְיָ אֲשֶׁר זָכַרְתָּ (Lam. ii. 17). The first prophecy ends here. Remarks.

THE VISION OF THE HORSEMAN AMONG THE MYRTLES (vv. 7—17).

There are two expressions in Hebr. for the numeral eleven, viz. אָחַד עָשָׂר (masc.), אַחַת עָשָׂר (fem.); and עֲשֵׁתֵי עָשָׂר (masc.), עֲשֵׁתֵי עָשָׂר. In Assyrian the numeral one in the masc. is expressed by istin (עִשְׁתֵּי): the Hebr. seems to have retained this old numeral in the second form of the compound numeral eleven (comp. ἕν-δεκα, &c.) in the fem. as well as in the masc. “Sebat”: the names of the months as found in the books of Zech., Esth., and Neh., are most of them of Assyrio-Babylonian origin: they are in use among the Jews to this day. The following is a table of the months:

Verse 7. Words.

No. of Month.	Old Hebrew Name.	Assyrio-Babylonian.	Later Hebrew.	No. of days in an ordinary year.	Corresponding to our
1.	חֹדֶשׁ הָאָבִיב (Ex. xiii. 4—Deut. xvi. 1).	Ni-sá-an-nu.	נִסָּן (Neh. ii. 1, Esth. iii. 7).	30.	March—April.

13 (intercalary).	„	“The month after Addaru.”	אֲדָרָא (Non-biblical).	30.

It will be observed that in an ordinary year the months consist alternately of 30 and 29 days. A month containing 30 days is called קָלָא “full,” one containing 29 days is called חֶסֶר “defective.”

7 Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

8 I saw by night, and behold a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle trees that were in the bottom; and behind him were there red horses, speckled, and white.

The name "Iddō" is here (as in Ezr. v. 1, vi. 14, Neh. xii. 4, 16) spelt with a final א; but in i. 1 and in Chronicles it is without the final א.

In mentioning the months, if the numeral required have an ordinal form, that form is used as (i. 1) בַּחֲדָשׁ הַשְּׁמִינִי; but, if the numeral be higher than ten it has no ordinal form, and therefore there is no choice but to use the cardinal: hence we get עִשְׁתֵּי-עָשָׂר חֳדָשׁ "the eleventh month." (On the metheg see Excurs. II. A. 1.)

לֵילָה has the accent on the penultimate because it is a masc. nom. (לַיִל and לַיִל) with an additional final ה. But all fem. nouns (Verse 8. Words. (subst., adj., and part.) which end in ה have the acc. on the *last syll.*¹: thus נַחֲלָה is a fem. noun meaning inheritance, but נַחֲלָה (Ps. cxxiv. 4) is a masc. noun = נַחַל "a valley." The additional ה is a remnant of the ending of the accusative case, though in many instances the force of the case is lost, and לֵילָה is simply the nominative. The Semitic case-endings were Nom. um, Oblique im, Acc. am, in Arab. they are still un, in, an, and after the def. article simply u, i, a. In Hebr. traces of these cases are found, e.g. of Nom. in o as the final ם of הִיתָו (Gen. i. 24), בָּנָו (Numb. xxiv. 3): the Oblique is i, as the final ם of דְּבַרְתִּי and מְלִכֵי- (Ps. cx. 4), and of בָּנֵי (Gen. xlix. 11), &c.: the Acc. in om used adverbially as פְּתָאם "suddenly," or in am as חֲנָם "in vain," רִיקָם, &c.: or in ah as לַיִלָה "by night" (Ps. i. 2), and in the final ה denoting "motion to" as נַחֲלָה מ' "to the river of Egypt" (Numb. xxxiv. 5). The nom. and oblique case terminations have quite lost their force, it is only the accusative ending which has (and that in the majority of cases) retained its force.—The word הָרִם (Is. xli. 19, lv. 13, Neh. viii. 15) “a myrtle,” by the absorption of the d and the change of ה into ס, becomes in Talmudic (Traditional Pronunciation) assā, in Aram. āsā, and in Arab. ās.—מִצְלָה has the simān rāp̄hēh (see Excurs. iv.) over the ל, to show that the ל is not to be doubled after the qibbuç (see on verse 13), and that it is therefore from the Root צֹל, and means “depth,” “hollow”; and not from Root צִלַל, and meaning “shady place.” The qibbuç (ִ) is only shūriq (י) written defectively (compare note on נָאֵם in verse 3).—אֲדָמִים (plur. of אָדָם). Observe the dagesh in third root-letter, similarly in the next word, and in עֲרוֹמִים “naked” (Gen. ii. 25), only that there the shūriq is anomalously written instead of qibbuç before dagesh forte.—שֵׁרָקִים. It is impossible to speak with any certainty about this word, as it does not occur elsewhere as an adj. of colour. There is, however, a Persian word surch “red,” “dun,” used of the hair of camels (שֵׁרָה), Zend çukhra, Sanscrit çukhrá “red,” “bright”), which the Prophet might have brought from Persia, only that (if Justi be correct) the form of the word in Persian must at that time have been thukhra. Again, there is an Arabic word with the ר and ק transposed שֵׁקֶר, from which comes the adj. ashqar “red,” used of men or horses, with which most commentators are inclined to identify our word. But, we cannot with some connect it with Talmudic שֵׁרֶק, סֵרֶק and שֵׁרִיקוֹן “red paint” or “rouge,” because that is probably the Greek στυράκον. While, however, שֵׁרֶק does not occur elsewhere in Bibl.-Hebr. as an adj. of colour, it does occur, viz. in (Is. xvi. 8) שֵׁרִיקָה (another instance of dagesh forte after shūriq), as “its [the vine’s] branches” or “clusters” Comp. שֵׁרֶק (Is. v. 2, Jer. ii. 21), and שֵׁרֶקָה (Gen. xlix. 11), a choice kind of vine, which Abu-l-Walid (Hebr.-Arab. Dict. ed. Neubauer, col. 751) calls sheriq, and says that it is the choicest kind grown in Syria. Also שֵׁרִיקוֹת “combs” is used with reference to working “flax” (Is. xix. 9).

לַיְלָה would mean “by night,” but הַלַּיְלָה (comp. הַיּוֹם “to-day”) means properly “to-night” (Gen. xix. 5, 34, xxx. 15), and Constructions. here “on this night” (the night of the 24th) is equivalent to בַּלַּיְלָה הַזֶּה (Ex. xii. 12). For, though it is true that the Jews count from the evening, so that the evening of the 24th is regarded as 9 Then said I, O my lord, what are these? And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will shew thee what these be.

10 And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, These are they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth.

the 25th, yet, when a particular day is mentioned, and then such an expression occurs as "in the evening," &c. (Ex. xii. 18), it denotes the evening of that day.—בְּמַצְלֵהָ "in a certain hollow": the article is used in the (practically) indefinite sense, as in דְּפַלִּיט "a certain fugitive" (Gen. xiv. 13), see my Fragment of T. B. P'sachim, p. 94, note 36.

Halláy'lah, τὴν νύκτα. Bén hâ'dassim 'sher bamm'çulâh, ἀναμέσον τῶν ὀρέων τῶν κατασκίων. For דְּהַרִּים they seem to have read דְּהַרְרִים, a plur. of הַר "mountain," which occurs often LXX, etc. in the constr. (e.g. Ps. l. 10), and also with suffixes (e.g. Deut. viii. 9). Some have supposed that they may have read דְּהַרְוִים, which they translate ὄρη in Is. xlv. 2. Either solution supposes הַר to have been read for ד. Others have suggested that the LXX. merely translated conjecturally, and imagined that "mountains" must be the meaning here, because of the mention of "the two mountains" in vi. 1. For the colours of the horses we have (1) δummitm πυρρόι; (2) s'ruqqim ψαροί "starling-grey" καὶ ποικίλοι; (3) l'bhānīm λευκοί. In chap. vi. they are as follows: (1) as here, both in Hebr. and LXX.; (2) sh'chōrīm "black" LXX. μέλας; (3) as here, both in Hebr. and LXX.; and then there is (4) brādim amzīm LXX. ποικίλοι ψαροί. Whence it would appear that the LXX., being unable to understand s'ruqqim, rendered it ψαροί καὶ ποικίλοι in order to give four colours as in chap. vi. We may note here that the colours in Rev. vi. are λευκός (lābhān); πυρρός (ādōm); μέλας (shāchōr); and χλωρός "pale" (the equivalent, probably, of dārōd). For hâh'dassim Aq. and Symm. give correctly τῶν μυσσινεῶνων.

Strong Vāv with the Imperfect has the power of drawing back the accent from the ultimate to the penultimate, when no quiescent sh'va or dagesh forte intervenes between the two syllables. Consequently (since we cannot have a long vowel in a closed syllable) the last vowel must be shortened. Thus אִמַּר becomes אִמְרָ.

But in the case of a pausal accent it remains in its original place, thus: אִמַּר (ver. 10)¹. In the 1st pers. sing. the accent is not drawn back, even when not in pause: thus we have וְאַלְךָ פְּרַתָּהּ (Jer. xiii. 7), but the verbs quiescent לָהּ are an exception¹, e.g. the form וְאַרְאֶה (ii. 1), and וְאַעֲן (iv. 4); so וְאַפֵּן, וְאַעֲלֶה, and וְאַעֲשֶׂה.—דָּבַר, the pres. partic. is the only part of the Qal of this verb that is commonly used in the sense of “speaking” (but we find the past partic. דָּבַר in Prov. xxv. 11, and the infin. with suff. דְּבַרְךָ Ps. li. 6).—אֵרְאֶה happens never to occur except with a disjunctive accent, therefore it is always אֵרְאֶהְךָ (Gen. xii. 1, Judg. iv. 22) with segōl under the second א, and dagesh forte in the ךָ. The pausal form of the suffix when it is possessive (not objective) is ךָֿ without dagesh: thus צְדִקְךָֿ “thy righteousness” (Job viii. 6). Out of pause such a verb would take simply ךָ as אֵעֲשֶׂהְךָֿ (Gen. xii. 2).—On the metheg of l'hithhalléc see Excurs. II. B. 4.

11 And they answered the angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle trees, and said, We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.

Haddōbhēr bē (LXX. ὁ λαλῶν ἐν ἐμοί). The verb dibbēr is found generally construed with אֵל, ל, or עִם of the person spoken to. But, in the case of God's speaking by revelation, the preposition בְּ is often used, perhaps on account of the subjective nature of revelation (comp. Numb. xii. 6, 8, Jer. xxxi. 30, Hab. ii. 1). Māh-hém-māh ēlleh, the pronoun דְּמַה discharges the office of the verb “are”: “I [emphatic] will show thee what these are” (LXX. τί ἐστὶ ταῦτα). But above the emphasis is on these: māh-ēlleh “what (are) these?” (LXX. τί οὐτοί). Observe the same constructions in iv. 4 and 5; and comp. Ps. xxiv. 8 and 10.

On the first metheg on Vāyyā “nu” see Excurs. II. B. 3.—Hā'īsh Judg. xviii. 7), since שב sometimes (as in Mich. v. 3) has that meaning when standing alone; but, rather, ישבת means "dwelling at ease," and ושקמת "and that, in a state of insolent assumption of security" (comp. ישבת וישלוח vii. 7, and ושקמת וישלוח 1 Ch̄ron. vi. 40). LXX. for Yōshēbheth has κατοικείται, as in ii. 5 (Hebr. 9) κατοικηθήσεται (correctly there) for Tēshēbh.

Since the NAME YHVH cannot take the article, and the article cannot be put before a noun in construct., it might have been difficult to say whether "מלאך" meant "an angel of the LORD," or "the Angel of the LORD." But, considering that eth is prefixed (which is, as a rule, the case only with defined nouns), and the participle hā'ōmēd occurs afterwards (with the def. article), and that Mal'ac Adōnāy occurs so frequently to denote a particular Angel, it must needs be so here. He is, of course, to be identified with "the man" of verses 8, 10. For, had he been a fresh person introduced here, the construction in the next clause must have been והוא עימך.

רחם "he pitied" is usually construed (as here) with a direct object, or absolutely (as Jer. xxi. 7). But sometimes (e.g. Ps. ciii.

13) with על. The construction of ועם is exactly similar (the only passage in which it is construed with על is Dan. xi. 30). זה שבעים שנה, this is just the construction in the English: "this seventy years," compare vii. 3, and זה פעמים "this twice" (Gen. xxvii. 36).

Another form of substantive also from the Pi’el of the same verb, and having a meaning similar to that of נַחֲמִים, is תְּנַחֲמִים. These nouns (here mentioned) are used in the plural for the sake of strengthening their meaning.

דְּבָרִים נַחֲמִים. Had nāchumīm been an adjective agreeing with d’bhārīm there would have been no need to place a conjunctive accent on דְּבָרִים (as there is in the preceding clause); for, see the first words of the chapter בְּהַדְּשׁ הַשְּׁמִינִי, where hashshēmīnī agrees with chōdesh, and yet הַדְּשׁ is furnished with a disjunctive accent pashūtā (which is always placed on the last letter of the word: while, if the tone-syllable be the penultimate, an additional accent of the same form is placed on the consonant which bears the vowel of that syllable). But nāchumīm is, as we have said, a substantive: we must therefore either take it as in apposition with d’bhārīm meaning “words [viz.] comfort,” or understand דְּבָרִים נַחֲמִים as standing for דְּבָרִים [דְּבָרִי] נַחֲמִים “words [viz. words of] comfort,” like הָאָרוֹן הַבְּרִית (Josh. iii. 14), which may be taken as equivalent to הָאָרוֹן [אָרוֹן] הַבְּרִית “the ark [viz. ark of] the covenant.” But see note on iv. 7.—By LXX. Nāchumīm is rendered as an adj. παρακλητικούς.

קִנְיָתִי is the perfect used to denote the immediate past, the action being continued in the present: it is best translated by the English present¹. “Thus saith the LORD” in this verse is the same use of the tense. This verb קָנָא when construed with ל (as here, Numb. xxv. 13, &c.) denotes “to be jealous, or zealous, for,” but with the acc. (Numb. v. 14), or ב (Gen. xxx. 1), “to be jealous against.” On qin’āh g’dōlāh compare note on ver. 2.

The adj. שְׂאֵן is of the same form as רֵעֵן “green” (which latter has no fem. or plur. in use). The doubling of the last letter, substituting a pathach followed by dagesh forte for qāmāç, before the plur. termination occurs also in such forms as the following; מְטַעְמִים (Gen. xxvii. 4), מְטַעְמוֹת (Prov. xxiii. 3, 6); compare also נְמַל plur. נְמָלִים, קָטָן plur. קְטָנִים &c., and our note on "dummīm (verse 8). On מַעַט the Massoreth says קַמִּיץ בּוֹקֵף, i. e. the pathach of the word is turned into qāmāç, although the disjunctive accent on the syllable (viz. zāqēf) is not strong enough to have such an effect in most cases.

with the heathen that are at ease : | and they helped forward the affliction.

ni qōçēf is the Present Tense. It seems to be used here, in preference to the Perfect (compare qinnethi ver. 14), because the very word קִצַּפְתִּי is required in the second section of the verse to be used as an actual Perfect, and it would have been extremely awkward to use the same tense of the same verb in two different ways in the same verse.—shēr means here "for," "because" (= יַעַן אִשֶּׁר or יַעַן כִּי), comp. Gen. xxx. 18, xxxiv. 13, 27, &c.—V'hémāh "and they" is emphatic; but not the ni above (except in so far as there is a contrast between "I" and "they") because the pronoun is, as a rule, required with the participle, when it represents the Pres. Tense; for a case in which the pronoun of the First Person is supplied with a partic. from a verb in the First Person, which comes in the next verse, see chap. ix. ver. 12.—עֲזָרוּ לְרָעָה. Some would render this "helped the evil," after the analogy of such passages as לְעֹזֵר לְהַרְדֵּעוֹר "to help Hadadezer" (2 Sam. viii. 5). But it seems better to understand לְרָעָה (as in Jer. xlv. 11) in the sense of "for evil," the prefix ל being used as it is after 'āzrū in 2 Chron. xx. 23, עֲזָרוּ אִישׁ בְּרֵעֵהוּ לְמִשְׁחִית, "they helped, each against other, for destruction," i. e. "they helped to destroy each other." In this example the verb עֹזֵר is construed with ב "against," and the substantive with ל is merely complementary. The verb, here, we take as used absolutely, as in Is. xxx. 7, "And as for Egypt, utterly in vain, do they help." So that we should render עֲזָרוּ לְרָעָה "But they helped for evil," meaning "And they cooperated [with me, but] for evil."

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the LORD of hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.

17 Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad; and the LORD shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem.

16. השאננים τὰ συνεπιτιθέμενα. The ננ seems to have been read as ת, so that they read השאנתים, partic. of שית; comp. the form קאם 3rd perf. (Hos. x. 14). For this meaning of shēth comp. (Ps. iii. 7) אשר כביב שתו עלי. For עורו they give συνεπέθεντο. The ען written close together might give ש, and ר seems to have been read as ת, giving שתו.

Observe that ירושלם (except in Jer. xxvi. 18, Esth. ii. 6, 1 Chr. iii. 5, 2 Chr. xxv. 1, xxxii. 9) is always spelt defectively, i. e. without yūd in the last syllable.—On the accent of יבנה, and the dagesh in בה, see Excurs. III. The Kṯīb קנה (which form occurs only as kṯīb, and that only again in 1 Kings vii. 23, Jer. xxxi. 39) must be read קנה, after the analogy of קצה (Gen. xix. 4). The Kṯrī is קן (or, rather, קו, ed. Baer); comp. צו. Either word would mean “a line.”

Shābhī should be rendered “I am returned,” as the Present complete, rather than as the Prophetic Perfect “I will return” (which grammatically would be equally admissible).

תפוצנה stands for תפוצינה; Baer correctly edits it תפוצנה with the sīmān rāphēh over the נ, as he does also תהימנה (Mich. ii. 12); see Excurs. iv. In chap. xiii. 7 the same word is used of “being scattered,” in a bad sense, and such is the ordinary use of the verb. But in Gen. x. 18 the Niph. (it is exactly equivalent to the Qal in this verb) is used of “being spread,” not in a bad sense. And so the Qal is, undoubtedly, used here. The corresponding Arab. fāḍa yafīḍu means “to be abundant,” in which sense פרץ is, however, the common word in Hebr. See note on ii. 10.—The מן of מטוב denotes “on account of,” as in מרב “on account of the multitude of” (ii. 8).

LXX. has ἐτι διαχυθήσονται... ἐν ἀγαθοῖς.

נָחַם (Qal Nāqām unused) may, as far as grammatical form is concerned, be either the Perf. Niphal or Pi'el. But the Niph. means "to pity," and is construed with עַל, אֵל, or ל, or מִן (see Dictionaries); while in the Pi'el it means "to comfort," and is construed with the direct object as in Gen. i. 21, Job ii. 11, and here (and sometimes with a complementary עַל or מִן of the thing concerning which the comfort is given, as in Is. xxii. 4, Gen. v. 29).—בָּחַר "to choose" is (normally) construed with בַּ of the thing chosen.

Except 'od for ἔτι there is nothing in the Hebr. to correspond with the words καὶ εἶπε πρὸς μὲ ὁ ἄγγελος ὁ λαλῶν ἐν ἐμοὶ ἔτι. The translators seem to have borrowed the words from ver. 14 (such is the common practice of the LXX., comp. p. 9).

Between the first revelation to Zechariah (i. 1—6), and the series of visions, &c. contained in Zech. i. 7—vi. 15, Haggai had received the revelations of Hag. ii. 10—23. Therein God had foretold "I will shake the heavens, and the earth: and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, &c." The people were, no doubt, in eager expectation, waiting for this promised overthrow of their enemies. The object of this vision was to assure the prophet (and through him the people) that, though this overthrow had not yet commenced, God's eyes were open, and He was (as it were) sending forth His angel-scouts to reconnoitre, and that, consequently, He was preparing to perform His word. From the grammatical considerations mentioned above it is certain that "the man who stood among the myrtles," and "the Angel of the LORD" are identical. We need not, therefore, enter into the controversies, which have arisen on the subject. With regard to the colours of the horses, since "bay" is first mentioned, it is hardly probable that s'ruqqim means another shade of "red." I should, therefore, either render it conjecturally "starling-grey," following the LXX., or suggest that it is a corruption of s'chōrim, "black." Since the angel-interpreter gives us no clue to any symbolical meaning of the colours, and therefore all interpretations of this kind must needs be merely conjectural, it seems best to suppose that these colours were mentioned, as those most commonly found among horses, for the purpose of making the picture more realistic (or, because they so appeared to the prophet in the vision). The variety of the opinions of those, who attach symbolical meanings to the colours, is in itself sufficient to show how little dependence can be placed on such interpretations. The following are specimens of such interpretation, (1) that of KEIL: The riders on red horses are to cause war and bloodshed, those on pale-grey (s'ruqqin) to cause hunger, famine and pestilence, those on white go to conquest. But this explanation takes no account of the single horseman on the red (bay) horse. Moreover victory implies bloodshed, as much as does war, so that there is no practical distinction made between the red and the white horses. (2) EWALD deprives "the man standing among the myrtles" of his horse, then he renders the colours of the horses bright-red, brown, grey, and supplies dark-red (from his interpretation of vi. 3). Having thus arranged the colours to his fancy, he compares this vision with that of the chariots in chap. vi., and sees in the colours the mission of the riders to the four quarters of heaven. The red denotes the East, the brown (=black of chap. vi.) the North, the grey (i.e. lābhān) the West, the dark red the South! (3) VITRINGA interprets the three colours as follows: red times of war, varicoloured times of varying distress and prosperity, white times of complete prosperity, which were sent on the Jewish people. (4) KLIEFOTH considers the colours to denote the different lands in which the riders discharge their mission, viz. Babylon, Medo-Persia, and the Græco-Macedonian empire. (5) RABBI MOSHEH ALSHEKEH, the cabbalist, interprets red of the company of Gabriel which inclines to Strict Justice, struggim of that of Raphael (who is the angel of healing after smiting, that is Justice tempered with Mercy), white of that of Michael who inclines to Free Grace. But enough has surely been said to show the futility of such methods of interpretation. We will only add that, while the author of the Revelation undoubtedly borrows the idea of the different coloured horses from Zech. and gives them such meanings as suit his purpose, it would be most uncritical to interpret Zechariah by means of the book of Revelation. The mystical interpretation of the words myrtles and the hollow are equally fantastic. By some the myrtles are said to represent the Pious, by others the Theocracy, or the Land of Judah; and the hollow is said to symbolize Babylon, or the Degradation into which the Theocracy, or Judah, had fallen. But what need of such far-fetched ideas? A hollow place where there would be water, and shade of trees, is, of course, a most natural place for a troop to be represented as halting at. Whether there was actually such a place near "The Horse-Gate," well known at that time, we cannot say.

(Hebr. II. 1) 18 Then lifted I | up mine eyes, and saw, and behold
| four horns.

SECOND VISION. THE FOUR HORNS AND THE FOUR SMITHS.

On the form קָרְנַיִם see on i. 9. קָרְן "a horn," like the name of Verse 1. most things which usually are found in pairs, is ordinarily Words. used in the dual instead of the plural. In this case there are two forms, viz. קָרְנַיִם (Amos vi. 13, Hab. iii. 4), and קָרְנִים (Daniel viii. 3, 6, 20). The construct of both is קָרְנַי; if from the former the sh'va under the ר is quiescent, if from the latter it is moving; but since נ is not a BeGaDceFaTh letter there is no means of discovering which is the case here. The plur. קָרְנוֹת (constr. qa-r'nōth) is used only of the altar-horns, or (Ezek. xxvii. 25) other artificial horns (compare פְּעֻמוֹת the artificial feet Ex. xxv. 12, 1 Kings vii. 30); or figuratively as in Ps. lxxv. 11, and here.

(Hebr. II. 2) 19 And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.

(Hebr. II. 3) 20 And the LORD shewed me four carpenters.

(Hebr. II. 4) 21 Then said I, What come these to do? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that זָרָה (accentuated, of course, on the last syllable, viz. under the זָ) is the Pi'el of זָרָה.

Verse 2.
Words.

Observe that אַת is prefixed to Y'hūdāh and to Yisrā'el, but not to Y'rūshālāim. In Post-captivity language (comp. Mal. ii. 11) "Judah," and Israel-cum-Jerusalem, seem to have been an exhaustive expression for "the whole nation." LXX. [i. 19] supplies κύριε from ver. 9.

Constructions.

חָרֵשׁ is a substantive of the form גָּנַב a thief (not of the form דָּבַר, plur. דְּבָרִים). The qāmāṣ under the chēth stands for pathach followed by dagesh forte, and is therefore immovable; thus the constr. is חָרֵשׁ, as in חָרֵשׁ אֲבָן (Ex. xxviii. 12) "an engraver of precious-stones," חָרֵשׁ בַּרְזֶל (Is. xlv. 12) "a worker in iron," חָרֵשׁ עֵצִים (ibid. 13) "a carpenter": and the plur. is חָרָשִׁים, constr. חָרָשֵׁי (Is. xlv. 16), with metheg under the chēth. (Excurs. II. A. 1.)

Verse 3.
Words.

"And the Lord showed me," sometimes, as in iii. 1, it is not said who was the person who showed. Perhaps this verse may afford the correct clue. Remark.

בָּאִים should be without a dagesh in the ב (see Excurs. III.).— לִיְדוֹת is infin. constr. Pi'el of יָדָה. The verb only occurs once in the Qal, viz. Jer. l. 14, יָדוּ אֵלֶיהָ, "shoot ye at her." In the Pi'el it always, elsewhere, means to cast a lot, גִּזְרָל (Joel iv. 3, Obad. 11, Nah. iii. 10), or in the form וַיִּדְּוּ אֲבָן (for וַיִּדְּוּ) "and they cast a stone (or stones)," in Lam. iii. 53.— לְזָרוֹתֶיהָ is, of course, the infin. Pi'el of the word זָרָה (above), with the pron. suff. 3rd fem. objective.

Verse 4.
Words.

no man did lift up his head: but these are come to fray them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, | which lifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

וְרַן must be taken as an actual Past, and not as a Prophetic Perfect, because the Perf. Tense נִשָּׂא, in the subordinate clause, thus limits its meaning.—The expressions עַל פִּי, לְפִי, כְּפִי, “in proportion to,” are, in any but Post-captivity books, only used with a noun (or pronominal suffix as in Job xxxiii. 6) following. In Lev. xxvii. 8 עַל פִּי אֲשֶׁר תִּשְׂיֹג יַד הַנֶּדֶר, “in proportion to what (= that which) the ability of the vower may be able to compass,” is no exception; for, the relative אֲשֶׁר (or the antecedent understood in it) is the noun after פִּי עַל. But in Malachi iii. 9 we do find כְּפִי governing a relative clause כְּפִי אֲשֶׁר אֵינְכֶם שֹׁמְרִים “because that (or since) ye do not keep,” like the more modern Hebr. לְפִי שׁ. Now, כְּפִי in the passage before us is put for כְּפִי אֲשֶׁר (comp. יַעַן אֲשֶׁר and יַעַן, &c.), only not in the sense in which it is used in Malachi, but as meaning “so that,” Fr. de sorte que, modern Hebr. בְּאוֹפֵן שׁ. Thus, in the only two biblical passages in which we have כְּפִי (אֲשֶׁר) as a relative particle it means “because that” (introducing the cause), and “so that” (the effect).—הַנִּשְׂאִים “which lifted up,” not “which do lift up”: since the tense of the participle depends on the context, and it is here already settled by the Perfect נִשָּׂא.

[i. 21.] After the words τὰ διασκοπίσαντα τὸν Ἰουδα follow καὶ τὸν Ἰσραὴλ κατέαξαν, because in ver. 2 (i. 19 LXX.) Israel, as well as Judah, was mentioned.—כְּפִי simply καί.—L'hàch^a-rîd òthâm l'yaddòth τοῦ ὀξύναι αὐτὰ εἰς χεῖρας αὐτῶν, reading לְהַחְרִיד as לְהַחְרִיד (as Hiph. of חָרַד) and taking לְיָדוֹת as לְיָדוֹת = לְיָדַי! They insert τέσσαρα before κέρατα, and read יהוה as יהוה, Κυρίου.

The first vision had revealed to the Prophet, that God was about to fulfil His promise of breaking up the self-complacent security of the Gentile world. The second vision is intended to give him additional assurance, by showing how God had already destroyed some of those, who had in time past scattered His people, and by declaring that He would continue to do so. We have already shown in our note on the expression “so that no man did lift up his head,” that the scattering of Israel referred to must be that of the past, We must, therefore, at once reject the interpretation, which would make the four horns refer to the Assyrian, Babylonian, Medo-Persian, and Græco-Macedonian

ii. 1-4.

(E. V. II. 1, Hebr. II. 5) I lifted up mine eyes again, and looked, and behold a man with a measuring line in his hand.
 (Hebr. II. 6) 2 Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said

Empires, because the latter had not yet come into existence. For the same reason we must, still more emphatically, repudiate the notion that they refer to the four Empires of the prophecies of Daniel, viz. the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman. EWALD, and HRTZIG, again have recourse to the four quarters of the heavens, and interpret the horses of Edom and Egypt (S.), Philistines (W.), Moabites and Ammonites (E.), and Syrians, Assyrians, and especially the Chaldeans (N.). But an objection to this view is that the greater number of these nations had no real hand in the dispersion of Israel and Judah. Having disposed of these theories, we have little hesitation in interpreting the four horses as symbolizing the Assyrian, Babylonian, Egyptian, and Medo-Persian Empires. For, though it is true that it was under the patronage of this last-mentioned Empire, that they were carrying on the rebuilding of the Temple, and that it was Cyrus who first passed a decree for the return of the Jews, yet the intervening kings had listened to the accusations of their adversaries, and had decreed the cessation of the work of restoration, and may well be reckoned among the oppressors of the Nation. This vision, therefore, assures the Prophet that, as the horn of the power and hostility of Assyria, Babylonia, and Egypt had been broken, so should that of Persia be cast down, that nothing might be left which could hinder the people from consummating the work of restoration. With regard to the four workmen WRIGHT goes so far as to identify them with Nebuchadnezzar who shattered the power of Assyria, Cyrus who broke down the pride of Babylon, Cambyses who finally subdued Egypt (which had been but humbled by Nebuchadnezzar) and Alexander the Great who in his turn levelled the might of Persia in the dust. But KOEHLER supposes that they merely refer to the means in general, whereby God's Providence overthrows the enemies of His people.

THIRD VISION. THE MAN WITH A MEASURING-LINE.

מָה־יָבֵן, "whither?" is compounded of מָה־ = מָה־ "where," and יָבֵן (unaccentuated) a remnant of the acc. case-ending denoting "towards" (see above, note on láy'lah, i. 8). The ך has the simán Verse 6.

rāphéh (see Excurs. III. and II. A. 5).—מָדֵד is the infin. constr. of מָדַד "to measure," with ל prefixed. When ל is prefixed to a monosyllabic infin., or to one from מָדַד or מָדַד verb (not in construction), it takes qāmāç, thus לְדַעַת to know, לְשִׁבֵת to sit, לְמָדַד to measure (but this is not the case with the prefixes ב and כ). As far as form is concerned מָדֵד might be the infin. absol. of לָמַד "to learn."—כִּמָּה denotes "how much?" of quantity, length, time, &c., either in the oratio recta unto me, To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof.

(Hebr. II. 7) 3 And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, (Hebr. II. 8) 4 And said unto or obliqua (as here); or "how much!" i.e. ever so much, or many, as in vii. 3; or (in accordance with the custom, so common in languages, of using a question to imply a negation) it is used (Job xxi. 17) in the sense of "How often [how seldom! if ever] is the lamp of the wicked extinguished?"

All infinitives are nouns substantive. Most of them in Hebrew are of a masc. form, as פָּקַד, constr. פִּקְדָּ. But some (especially from verbs פ"ו and פ"נ, e.g. לָדַת, and לָדָה, "to bring forth," שָׁבַת "to sit") are fem. in form: thus לְאַהֲבָה אֶת־שֵׁם "to love the name of the LORD" (from אָהַב, אָהַבְתָּ, "and to fear Him" (from יָרָא, יָרָאְתָּ). And so from קָרָה, "to meet," we have an infin. of a fem. (but always of a construct) form, viz. לְקַרְאֵת "to meet the LORD," לְקַרְאֵתְכֶם "to meet you," לְקַרְאֵתוֹ (ver. 7) "to meet him"; in which it will be noticed that (1) an א is introduced, as though the root were קָרָה, (2) the vowel is always thrown back on the ר, and the א is quiescent, thus לְקַרְאֵת is for לְקַרְאֵת (compare מְלֵאכְתּוֹ "his work" for מְלֵאכְתּוֹ), (3) before another noun, or the heavy suffixes כֶּם and בֶּן, the form is קַרְאֵת, but before the other suff. it is קַרְאֵת.

Verse 8. Words and constructions. u of וְנָסוּ (ver. 10); see note on i. 3. נָעַר denotes a male, from infancy (as Moses in the ark of bulrushes, Ex. ii. 6) to the prime of life (as Isaac, when his father was about to sacrifice him at the age of thirty, Gen. xxii. 5—15).—The full form of הִלָּץ is הַלְלוּהָ, which latter is always masculine, while the former is used once as fem. (2 Kings iv. 25). A fem. form הַלְלוּ occurs once (Ezk. xxxvi. 35). The word הַלְלוּהָ is compounded of the def. article הַ, an intensive demonstrative element לָ, and the ordinary demonstrative pronoun הָ, thus ha-llā-zeh exactly corresponds with the Arabic al-la-dhī, which, from being originally a demonstrative, has passed into a relative pronoun “who,” “which”; comp. Engl. “that,” Germ. “der, die, das.”—פְּרוּת “plains,” then “unwalled-towns,” “suburbs” (comp. Arab. farz, “a plain”). The word may be taken as used adverbially, or as the accusative of limitation (these being but two different ways of speaking of one and the same construction); compare notes on i. 2.—The verb יָשַׁב means not only to “sit,” “dwell,” “remain,” “inhabit,” but also “to be inhabited,” as here (comp. Is. xiii. 20); such is also the case with the verb שָׁבַן (ibid.). LXX.—[ii. 4] κατακάρπως, freely, for p'rāzōth.

On the dagesh in the ל of ek'yeh-llāh see Excurs. III.—Sābhībī is a substantive meaning “circuit,” it is used here (comp. Ps. iii. 7) in the accusative (but without any distinctive termination) as an adverb “round about.”—In the first half of the verse the verb “to be” is followed by the acc. chōmāth ēsh. We may assume that this is the acc. (and not the nominative as it would be in Latin) from the fact that in Arabic the verb kāna “to be” (together with the verbs of like meaning) takes the acc. after it. In the second half of the verse the same verb is followed by לָ, as by the Dative in the Latin example “Exitio est avidis mare nautis.” The former construction may be illustrated by such a passage as ver. 13, or Gen. xii. 2 וְהָיָה בְרַכָּה “And be thou (i.e. and thou shalt be) a blessing”; and the latter by Zech. ii. 15, or Ex. iv. 16 לֹא יְהִי לְךָ לְפָה וְאַתָּה תִּהְיֶה לוֹ לְאֵלֹהִים: both constructions are very common.—בְּתוֹכָהּ comes from תוֹךְ “midst,” constr. תוֹךְ (there is also a word תָּךְ Ps. x. 7, lv. 12, lxxii. 14, compare תִּכְבֵּים Prov. xxix. 13, meaning “deceit,” “oppres-

But here (as in Is. xviii. 1, 2 ... הוּ אֲרִין צִלְצֵל פְּנָפִים) הוּ is simply a particle of exhortation and calling. Thus הוּ הוּ may be correctly rendered "Ho! come ye!" It is practically equivalent to an Impert. There is, consequently, no need to understand a verb בּוֹא, or צֵא (as E. V. come forth) before וְנָסוּ.—The u in the middle of וְנָסוּ is long and accentuated, it is merely written defectively (comp. note on i. 3).—כֹּאֲרַבֵּעַ. A few MSS. have כֹּאֲרַבֵּעַ, but this reading is of no importance (there is no reading לֹאֲרַבֵּעַ). The form אֲרַבֵּעַ is absl. and constr. fem. Either the absol. or the constr. may precede its noun.—The Pi'el פָּרַשׁ occurs in all nine times in the Hebrew Scriptures. Once (Ps. lxxviii. 15 בְּפָרַשׁ שְׂרֵי מְלָכִים) it seems to mean "to scatter." Seven times it is used of stretching forth the hands (Is. i. 15, xxv. 11 bis, lxxv. 2, Jer. iv. 31, Ezek. xvii. 21, Ps. cxliii. 6): here it seems to be used in the sense of "spreading abroad," i.e. "multiplying greatly," in which sense פָּרַן with יָן is used, intransitively however (Gen. xxx. 30, Hos. iv. 10, Job i. 10). The verb must be rendered as the Prophetic Perfect "I will spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven."

[ii. 6.] They seem to have understood pērāstī in a bad sense

LXX. "I will scatter"; then, feeling the difficulty of such an expression being made use of to the people on their return from captivity, they deliberately altered the passage into ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων ἀνέμων τοῦ οὐρανοῦ συνάξω ὑμᾶς.

is not to be regarded as an angel (as in i. 8): for, he has no message to deliver, and is implicitly rebuked for his folly in endeavouring to measure the city. There is little need to discuss the question whether "is" or (Hebr. II. 11) 7 Deliver thyself, | O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.

“should be” or “shall be” is to be supplied with the expression “how great its width, &c.” The Vision refers, no doubt, to the future of Jerusalem, beginning from the time then present. The Interpreting Angel “goes forth,” i. e. leaves the Prophet’s side, and another angel “comes forth,” i. e. appears on the scene, and goes to meet him. In ver. 8 the speaker must be the “other angel,” otherwise he appears for no object or purpose. “This young man” is by many commentators understood of the Prophet; but, to us it appears much more probable that it refers to the “man with the measuring-line.” He is forbidden to measure the city, not because it was to become too great to be measured, but because it was to extend beyond its boundaries, whatever they might be, on account of the multitude of its inhabitants, &c. This promise was literally fulfilled: for Josephus (Bell. Jud. v. 4 § 2) speaking of Jerusalem in the time of Herod Agrippa says: πλήθει γὰρ ὑπερχεομένη κατὰ μικρὸν ἐξείρπε τῶν περιβόλων, καὶ τοῦ ἱεροῦ τὰ προσάρκτια πρὸς τῷ λόφῳ συμπολλίζοντες ἐπ’ οὐκ ὀλίγον προῆλθον, καὶ τέταρτον περιουκισθῆναι λόφον, ὃς καλεῖται Βεζεθά, κείμενος μὲν ἀντικρὺ τῆς Ἀντωνίας, ἀποστεμνόμενος δὲ ὀρύγματι βαθεῖ. Compare the letter of Aristéas to Philocrátes, in which a description of Jerusalem after the restoration is given; and the fragments of Hecatæus (who flourished under Alexander the Great), in which Jerusalem is described as a city fifty stadia in circumference, and inhabited by 120,000 men.

הַמְלִטָּה, although with ethnāch ($\bar{\alpha}$), is not in the pausal form הַמְלִטָּה (after the analogy of הַשְּׁמֵרוֹ Jer. ix. 3), because Verse 11. Words. the verse being very short (like Gen. i. 1), and the second clause being in apposition with צִיּוֹן in the first clause, the sense does not end with the ethnāch sufficiently for the only verb of the sentence to take a pausal form with that accent. Had there been two verbs in the sentence, the first would have had the pausal form; for instance, if the verse had been הִנֵּה צִיּוֹן הַמְלִטָּה וְתַנּוּסִי יוֹשֶׁבֶת בַּת-בָּבֶל: “Daughter of Babylon” means inhabitants of Babylon, like “Daughter of Zion” in ver. 14.—בֵּית־אֱלֹהִים means “gate of God,” and is a contraction of בֵּית־אֱלֹהִים (comp. בֵּית־אֱלֹהִים of the next verse), the old Assyrian name being Bāb ilu, which is a Semitic translation of the still older Accadian ca-dimirra-ci “Place of the Gate of God” (Sayce).—יוֹשֶׁבֶת means “dwelling with,” and is here construed with the acc., as (Ps. v. 5) יִגְרָה means יִגְרָה עִמָּךְ. The instances יוֹשֶׁב תְּהִלּוֹת (Ps. xxii. 4), יוֹשֶׁב

בֵּית עֵין. It seems probable that בֵּית is a fem. form of כַּבַּת (the masc. of which is common in Arab. and Aram.) in the sense of "gate," "opening," which would be very suitably applied to the "pupil of the eye." (But see the Dictionaries.)

אֶחָר is sometimes used as an adverb of place, as (Gen. xxii. 13) וְהָנָה אֵיל אַחֲרַי "and lo! a ram behind"; or as an adverb of time before a verb, as (Gen. xviii. 5) אַחֲרַי תַּעֲבֹרוּ "afterwards ye shall pass on," or, if before a substantive, with a disjunctive accent, as (Ps. lxxiii. 24) וְאַחֲרַי כָּבוֹד תִּקְחֵנִי "and, afterward, Thou wilt gloriously receive me." When, however, it is put before a substantive with a conjunctive accent it is a preposition, meaning "after," as (Gen. ix. 28) אַחֲרַי הַמַּבּוּל "after the flood"; (Ps. lxxviii. 26) אַחֲרַי נִגְנִים "after the players on stringed instruments." So, here, אַחֲרַי כְּבוֹד שְׁלַחְנִי means "after glory hath he sent me," i. e. posterior to some glory which had already been manifested; or, preferably, "after," i. e. in quest of, glory," comp. (Lev. xxvi. 33) וְהִרְיָקוּתִי אַחֲרֵיכֶם הָרֶב "and I will draw the sword after you," i. e. to find you out, reach you.

sh'vā as in הנני no metheg is placed. The student will observe that Baer points הנני without metheg, while less correct editions have it with a metheg.—The reading of the old editions, and by far the majority of MSS., is לעבדיהם “to their servants,” not לִ־עֲבָדֵיהֶם “to those who serve them.”—Sh'lāchānī, the student is reminded that with the 2nd and 3rd sing. perf. of the verb, while the suffix of 1st pers. plur. is always ānū (in or out of pause), that of the 1st per. sing. is ānī out of pause (ver. 15), and ānī in pause: thus we always have the forms קִמְלָנוּ and קִמְלָתָנוּ; but קִמְלָנוּ, קִמְלָתָנוּ out of pause, and קִמְלָנוּ, קִמְלָתָנוּ in pause.

Ronnī is the pronunciation of the first word of this verse, for the $\bar{\tau}$ being in a closed syllable without accent or metheg (Excurs. II. A. 5) is ō not ā; comp. the Infin. This pathach is (not furtive, i.e. to be read before the y as in הוֹדִיעַ hōdī'a', but) merely a helping-vowel, and is to be read after the y, comp. the pathach after the ה of וַיִּחַד vayyīchad (from חָדַד) “and he rejoiced.”

"and he stilled." Some grammarians maintain that it is an interjection, which afterwards became conjugated, like the Arab. haluma (Hebr. הָלַם "hither"), plur. halumū "come ye hither!" At any rate it is an onomatopoeitic; the Arab. is ṣah "sh...!"—נָעוּר is an anomalous form of Niph. participle from עוּר. The normal form of such participles is with qāmāç in the first syllable, as נָסוּג. The Participle נָמוּל "circumcised" probably comes from מוּל, but some take it from מָלַל. Such participles seem to follow the analogy of the Imperf. יִקוּם. In Jer. xlviii. 11 we have the Perf. Niph. נָמַר from מוּר, the root being confounded with מָרַר.

Remarks. ii. 10-17. North is Babylonia (Jer. i. 14, &c.). Those, who had not yet returned, are exhorted to flee from the evils which are impending over Babylon, such as the rebellions of this period and consequent vengeance of Darius (see Records of the Past, i. pp. 118-125). Observe the continual change of Person; the Prophet speaks in the first person when he gives the very words of God, and in the third when he merely conveys their general meaning; or (as especially in ver. 15) the personality of the Sent is at times merged in that of the Sender. Verr. 14-17 are distinctly Messianic, and were fulfilled in the Birth of Jesus. But we must not look for the literal fulfilment of the mere details of the prophecy, which are but the background of the picture. The Prophet foresaw the Messianic times from an Old Testament standpoint, and expected the literal choosing-again of Jerusalem; while, as a matter of fact, the fulfilment of the prophecy was the commencement of the rejection of Israel. At the same time we may believe, on the authority of S. Paul, that God hath not cast off His own people, and that a time will come when all Israel shall be saved.

CHAPTER III.

AND he shewed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the LORD, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him.

FOURTH VISION.—JOSHUA THE HIGH PRIEST ARRAIGNED BEFORE THE ANGEL OF THE LORD.

For the probable subject of vayyar'ênî comp. ii. 3.—The first 'ōmed denotes the state, or circumstances, of the person seen, as (Ex. ii. 11) וִירָא אִישׁ מִצְרִי מַכֵּה אִישׁ עִבְרִי “And he saw an Egyptian man smiting a Hebrew man.” (Comp. i. 18, and see notes on iv. 7.)—The second 'ōmed stands for הָיָה עֹמֵד “was standing.”—Haṣṣātān lit. “The Adversary.” The word is used, as a Proper Name, with def. art., here and in Job i. ii., without the art. in Ps. cix. 6, 1 Chron. xxi. 1.—לְשֹׂמְנֹו l'si-t'no “to act as adversary towards him.” This verb occurs nowhere else in the Inf., so that from it we can deduce no rules as to the use of š instead of ś in the first syllable. But, the following facts will show how incorrect is the remark of Gesenius (§ 61), “The Inf. of the form שָׁכַב becomes with suffix שְׁכַבָּה.” Even as far as this one verb is concerned, he is in error: for though the constr. infin. is always שָׁכַב, there is only one passage (Gen. xix. 33, 35) in which it takes š in the first syllable with suffixes, while in Deut. vi. 7, xi. 19, Prov. vi. 22 (בְּשֹׁכְבָךָ) and in Ruth iii. 4 (בְּשֹׁכְבוֹ) it has ś. Then again, from לְבַלַּע (Jon. ii. 1), which is the only form of the Infin. of this verb, we get בְּלַעִי (Job vii. 19). Similarly the verb שָׁבַן (and שָׁכַן), which has only the Infin. in ś (Gen. xxxv. 22) בְּשֹׁכְבָן (comp. Numb. ix. 22, 1 Kings viii. 12, Job xxx. 6, Ps. lxxviii. 19, lxxxv. 10, 2 Chr. vi. 1), in the only two passages in which it occurs with suffix, takes in one ś לְשֹׁכְבָנִי l'sho-c'ni (Ex. xxix. 46), and in the other š לְשֹׁכְבָנוֹ l'shi-c'no (Deut. xii. 5).

Verbs which take a double accusative in the active, are able to retain one in the passive, so that it is not necessary to put lābhūsh into the constr.; but that construction is also admissible, e.g. (Ezk. ix. 11) לְבוּשׁ הַבְּרִים "who was clothed in fine linen." The Qal lābēsh, and lābhāsh, means to "put on," "be clothed with," with acc. of the thing put on (once with ב, Esth. vi. 8). In the Hiph. it denotes "to clothe another," and is generally used with two acc. e.g. (Ex. xxviii. 41) וְהִלְבַּשְׁתָּ אֹתָם אֵת-אֹרֶן "And thou shalt clothe Aaron with them."

The article in haççānīph haṭṭāhōr is definite, denoting "the clean turban" requested above.—The participle 'ōméd here denotes "kept standing (where he was)."

There is a great variety of opinion among commentators with respect to the capacity, in which Joshua is represented as standing before the Angel of the LORD. THEODORER, among early expositors, and HENGSTENBERG, among moderns, maintain that Joshua is seen in the Sanctuary engaged in the work of his priestly office before the Angel of the LORD. Against this view may be urged, that, however high may be the dignity of the Angel of the LORD, it is hardly in accordance with the spirit of the Old Testament to represent the high priest as ministering before him, as if before God. Observe, too, how in i. 12, 13 the Personality of the Angel of the LORD is distinct from that of the LORD Himself. EWALD imagines that at this time the high priest was actually accused, or was dreading an accusation, at the Persian court, and that a defamation and persecution of this kind may be discerned as underlying this vision. But there is no historical trace of any such personal accusation, nor could Joshua be looked upon as the people's representative before the Persian Court, since Zerubbabel was their civil representative. KOEHLER regards Joshua as standing before the judgment-seat of the Angel, while Satan stands at his right hand (Ps. cix. 6) to accuse him. But, while this interpretation is in the main correct, it must be remembered that no formal judicial process is described in the vision, nor is there any mention of a judgment-seat. WRIGHT's explanation seems to us the best: "The high priest was probably seen in the vision, busied about some part of his priestly duties. While thus engaged, he discovered that he was actually standing as a criminal before the angel, and while the great Adversary accused him, the truth of that accusation was but too clearly seen by the filthy garments with which he then perceived that he was attired."—The filthy garments denote sin (Is. lxiv. 5, comp. iv. 4, Prov. xxx. 9). This sin cannot have been that of marrying strange wives (Ezr. x. 18) as TARG., QIMCHI, &c. suppose, for those marriages took place some sixty years later. Nor is KOEHLER right in referring it to the neglect to rebuild the Temple. For, as KEIL remarks, had this been the accusation, it would have been rather late, since the active resumption of the work of rebuilding had taken place five months previously (comp. Hag. i. 15 with Zech. i. 7). The view of WRIGHT is almost correct: "The fourth vision (chap. iii.) is connected with the coming of the LORD recorded in chap. ii., in a way similar to that in which the purification of the sons of Levi, spoken of by Malachi, stands related to the prophecy of the coming of the Angel of the Covenant predicted by that prophet (Mal. iii. 1—4)... The high priest was the representative of the priesthood, and the priests representatives of the people of Israel, who were 'a kingdom of priests, &c.' (Ex. xix. 6). Joshua's sin is therefore spoken of in ver. 9 as 'the sin of the land,' whereby the whole people was defiled." It is true, that the priesthood had fallen under special condemnation, "Her priests have violated my law, and have profaned my holy things" (Ezek. xxii. 26), so that the sins of the priesthood may well be especially referred to here. But, at the same time Joshua, as the people's representative before God, may be looked on as, in a sense, laden with their sins, as well as with his own and those of the priesthood in particular. We do not, therefore, entirely agree with the last remark we quoted from C. H. H. Wright.—For instances of "standing before" being used of the defendant see Numb. xxxv. 12, Deut. xix. 17, Josh. xx. 6.—With ver. 2 comp. Jude 9.—The persons referred to in ver. 4 are, doubtless, the angels of grade inferior to that of the Angel of the LORD. In this verse the Prophet is assured that the iniquity of Joshua is taken away. He seems to have feared that this might be only a personal absolution, hence his anxiety about the "mitre" (ver. 5). Upon the Miqnépheth was the Çiq, on which was inscribed Qódesch V'Adōnāy, and it was to be always on the forehead of the high priest, "that he might bear the iniquity of the holy things" (Ex. xxviii. 36—38). By the granting of his request, that a clean mitre might be placed on the head of Joshua, he is assured that the high priest is not pardoned only personally, but also in his official capacity.—There is nothing in the word 'ōmēd' to justify Ewald's statement that the angel, "having risen from the judgment-seat," now lingers, &c.

Vayyā'ad is the apoc. Imperf. Hiph. of עָוָה. The pathach in the last syllable is on account of the y; the normal form of this tense from verbs with medial vāv quiescent, is עָוָהּ with segōl. This verb, when construed with הָ, denotes to "call another to witness against" (Deut. iv. 26), but also "to testify to," as here; see Jennings and Lowe on Ps. l. 7 (for other meanings and constructions consult the Dictionaries).

Observe that v'im-eth-mishmartī takes no ga'yā because it is with a conjunctive accent (Excurs. II. B. 4). On the form mishmartī see note on xi. 3.—The apodosis to im "if," is introduced by הַיָּ "then indeed." Simple הָ would have been sufficient to introduce the apodosis (e.g. xiv. 18), but הַיָּ is added to intensify the declaration, as in a simple sentence like (Job xviii. 5) גַּם אוֹר רְשָׁעִים יִדְעַךְ "the light of the wicked shall indeed be extinguished": comp. (Gen. xlii. 22) וְגַם דַּמּוֹ הִנֵּה נִדְרֵשׁ "therefore his blood &c.": also observe, that גַּם introduces an interrogative apodosis in Zech. viii. 6. אֵתָּה is also emphatic. The second וְגַם is used in quite a different sense, it means merely "and also." Had וְגַם...וְגַם meant "also...and," we should have expected the following collocation, וְאֵתָּה וְגַם תִּשְׁמַר גַּם תִּדְרִין...וְגַם תִּשְׁמַר. Some commentators consider the second וְגַם to be a mere repetition of the former one, for greater emphasis. In this case there is no "and" before the second clause: and so we must render, "Then shalt...: then shalt..."—Chāṣṣēr "a court" has two plurals, תְּצַרִים (e.g. Lev. xxv. 31), and תְּצַרוֹת (e.g. Ezk. xlvi. 22): this latter takes the suffixes in two different ways, viz. (Ps. xcvi. 8) תְּצַרוֹתַי, and (Ps. c. 4) תְּצַרְתָּיו (comp. 1 Chron. xxviii. 6).—Vⁿāthattī (on the accentuation see note on i. 3) is dependent on the futures of the preceding clause.—מְהַלְכִים is a plur. subst. meaning "places to walk in." There is a substantive which occurs only in the sing. constr. מְהַלֵּךְ (Ezk. xlii. 4, Jon. iii. 3, 4) and with suff. מְהַלְכֵךְ (Neh. ii. 6). Had our word been the plur. of this, we should have expected מְהַלְכִים. It appears, therefore, that it must be from an unused word מְהַלֵּךְ, and that its plur. is formed like מְסַמְרִים (Is. xli. 7), from an imaginary מְסַמֵּר, and like the plurals of מְזַבְּחַת and מְעַשֵּׂר which are מְזַבְּחוֹת and מְעַשְׂרוֹת. The supposition of Ewald, that it is a Hiph. Partic. (of what he calls Aram. form) for מְהַלְכִים = מְהַלְכִים "leaders," would require מְבִין instead of בִּין to follow.

but rather, either men for whom miracles are wrought, or men used to interpret prophetic portents. LXX. has ἄνδρες τερατοσκόποι.—“They” probably includes Joshua. For such a change of person comp. Zeph. ii. 12, “Also ye Cushim slain by my sword are they.”—The Ci before hinnēh is not to be translated, it merely introduces the oratio recta, like ὅτι in the New Test. &c. (comp. Gen. xxix. 33).—Mēbhē can only be taken as a Prophetic Participle, denoting the Future (and so too m^ophattēch in the next verse, which is followed by the Perfect with strong vāv umashētī “and I will remove”), comp. xii. 2, hinnēh ānōcē šām. In such cases there is nothing but the context to guide us to decide, whether the time referred to is near at hand, or distant. Thus, the last-cited passage appears to refer to a distant future; while הַגָּבִי לִקְחָהּ (Ezk. xxiv. 17) is shown by the next verse to be the imminent future (comp. Hag. ii. 6).

Ḷemach Ἀνατολήν. Syr. Denchō “sunrise,” the word Ḷemchō in LXX. &c. Syr. denoting “shining of the sun.” In Is. iv. 2 Yl^hyēh Ḷemach YHVH is rendered by LXX. ἐπιλάμψει ὁ θεός.

There is a difficulty in this verse which is so obvious, that one would have thought that it would have occurred to any chance reader of it, whether in the Hebr., or in a translation. And yet it has not been generally mentioned by commentators; indeed we have, as far as we have observed, found it touched on by Arnswald¹ only. It is this: if the Prophet meant by hā'ēbhen “the stone,” i. e. some particular stone, why does he afterwards say, “on one stone [shall be seven] eyes,” and not rather, “on that stone,” or “on this stone”? Arnswald evades the difficulty by paraphrasing ēbhen 'achāth by הַאֲבֵן הַזֹּאת; but this is surely not admissible. Accordingly we propose to render hā'ēbhen “the stones,” viz. the materials for rebuilding the Temple. It is true that, while אֲבֵן ēbhen is commonly used for “[precious] stones” (e. g. Ex. xxviii. 17, xxxix. 10), אֲבָנִים is generally used for “building stones” (e. g. Zech. v. 4), still we do find ēbhen in this latter sense, e. g. (Gen. xi. 3) וַיְהִי לָדָם הַלִּבְנָה לְאֲבָן “so they had

I will engrave the graving thereof, | remove the iniquity of that land
saith the LORD of hosts, and I will | in one day.

bricks instead of stones." But the question still remains: how are we to take על אבן אחת, can it mean "on each stone"? It is quite possible that it may, for the Prophet could not have written שבעה עינים שבעה עינים (the ordinary distributive phrase¹), since that would have denoted seven different eyes on each stone. But, why did he not use another form of distributive, which would have avoided the repetition, viz. על כל אבן ואבן שבעה עינים, which would have been quite admissible (comp. Esth. ii. 11, iii. 14, iv. 3, viii. 11, 1 Chron. xxviii. 14—18)? This objection can only be answered by calling attention to the fact, that in iv. 2, xii. 12 he does not use the more ordinary distributives. But, should it be thought that this interpretation is not satisfactorily supported by usage², we propose another, and render: "Behold the stones, which I have laid before Jehoshua, upon one particular stone [are] seven eyes." For this use of the numeral "one" comp. xiv. 7. Practically this latter is much the same interpretation, as that adopted by most commentators, viz. that the Prophet speaks of some particular stone (be it the foundation stone which had been laid in the time of Cyrus, or the stone on which the Ark had formerly stood, or the head-stone, or chief corner-stone); but, we have, we think, explained to our readers the reason why he said "on one stone" instead of "on this stone," while others have evaded the difficulty.—Observe that here (as in iv. 10) עינים is construed with a masc. numeral.—The expression patté^ach is used of engraving precious stones (Ex. xxviii. 9), gold (ibid. ver. 36), and of carved work (Ps. lxxiv. 6), or sculpture (2 Chron. ii. 13).—On the accentuation of umashté see note on i. 3, on the absence of metheg see Excurs. II. 1, note. It is impossible to take "And I will remove, &c." as the sentence engraved on the stone, as many have done; for such an inscription could not possibly commence with vāv conversive and the Perfect. Job xix. 25, "Yet I know, my Vindicator liveth" is in no sense a parallel case (see Delitzsch in loc.).

¹ שנים is actually used (Gen. vii. 2) for the שנים שנים of ver. 9; but, then, the preceding שבעה שבעה sufficiently secures the distributive force of שנים. Ewald is mistaken (Lehrg. § 313) in taking מטה אחר (Numb. xvii. 18) as "a rod apiece" = מטה אחר מטה אחר. The words imply merely that there should be one rod for the whole family of Levi, although they were divided into Priests and Levites; see Rashi (xith cent.), Ibn Ezra (xiith cent.), and Ramban (Nachmanides, xiiith cent.) in loc.

The verb qārā' in the sense of "calling a person to one," is very frequently followed by לְ of the person called, e.g. Ex. xii. 31

The Angel of the LORD now proclaims to Joshua a fourfold promise: (a) the confir-

Remarks. nature; (β) the mission of the Saviour; (γ) God's providential care for the House, which was being rebuilt; (δ) the peace and prosperity of the nation.—Observe in ver. 7 the introverted parallelism "if thou wilt walk...and keep," "then shalt thou...keep...places to walk." "Walk in my ways" refers to personal holiness, "keep my charge" to the faithful discharge of his official duties. So, on the other hand, "judge my house" and "keep my courts" refers to his spiritual authority as high priest, and "walks among those that stand by" denotes spiritual access among the angels of God's supernal courts.—Though Zerubbabel is certainly called "my servant" (Hag. ii. 23), the use of the participle, "behold I bring" renders it impossible to interpret the expression "my servant Branch" of him.
It can only be referred to the promised Saviour of Israel, or "Branch of the Lord"
(Is. iv. 2), a "Righteous Branch," "Branch of Righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 5), "a Righteous-one my servant" (Is. liii. 12), "my servant David" (Ezek. xxxiv. 23). See further Remarks on chap. vi. 11–15, and comp. Remarks on ii. 14–17.—On ver. 9 refer back to the notes. EWALD supposes the "seven eyes" to have been engraved on the stone, and thinks that they represent the seven Spirits (Rev. i. 4). But, it seems in every way best to understand the seven eyes as denoting God's special, yet all-embracing Providence, which is being directed towards the stone to watch and protect it. Various symbolical meanings have been given to the stones. The only one of them, which is at all reasonable, is this, that it typified the Messiah (comp.
Ps. cxviii. 22, Is. xxviii. 16). But, we prefer the interpretation which we gave above in the notes.—"In one day" cannot refer to "the day of Golgotha" (HENG-STENBERG), for how could ver. 10 be applied to that day? How could xii. 10 sq., and ii. 9, 10, be possibly referred to the same event? The meaning seems to be simply this, that the completion of the work of rebuilding would be the seal of the people's forgiveness, and restoration to favour.—The wording of ver. 10 is a reminiscence of 1 Kings iv. 25, Mic. iv. 4, &c. It is a renewal of the promise contained in Jer. xxxiii. 6, and a declaration of its speedy fulfilment.

FOURTH VISION. THE GOLDEN CANDLESTICK.

On the form vayyāshobh see notes on iii. 5. The simplest rule for deciding the vocalization of a word with a suffix, like וַיַּעֲרִנִי, is the following: when by the addition of a suffix Verse 1.
Words. (or accentuated syllable) the accent is drawn towards the end of a word, count back three vowels from this new accentuated syllable (both inclusive), and remove (α) the third vowel if it can be removed; if it cannot, remove (β) the second; (γ) in some cases none of the vowels can be removed. E.g. (α) The Imperf. Hiph. of עוֹר is יַעֲרִי yā'ēr, when the suffix is added the accent falls on ...rénī: now yā is the third syllable from rē, therefore remove the qāmāç and put sh'va, and you get יַעֲרִנִי, similarly חָפֵץ chāphéc plur. חֲפִצִּים ch'phécím. (β) תִּנְפֵץ t'nappéc "thou wilt break in pieces," when it takes the suffix ém, cannot lose the third vowel from the accent, viz. pathach, because it is supported by dagesh, therefore remove the second vowel çērē, and you get תִּנְפִצִּים, and similarly all Pres. Partic. Qal which have ō in the first syllable (which is characteristic of the Partic. and is immoveable) lose the second vowel, as עֹמֵד 'ōméd plur. עֹמְדִים 'ōm'dím. As an instance of (γ) take כּוֹכַב cōcābh plur. כּוֹכָבִים cōcābhím, and comp. note on ii. 3.—יַעֲוֹר is the Niph. Imperf. of עוֹר (of the form of יִקְוֹם), the chiriq under the yūd being changed into çērē by way of compensation, since the y cannot be doubled.—Since יִשְׁנָה "sleep" comes from Rt. ישן, it loses its first vowel when it takes a suffix, comp. עֲרָה "congregation," עֲרָתוֹ, while עֲרָה "testimony" (which comes from עוֹר) retains its vowel, thus עֲרָתוֹ. Consequently there is no difference between sh'nāthō "his sleep" from shēnāh, and sh'nāthō "his year" from shānāh.

2 And said unto me, What seest thou? and behold a candlestick all of gold, with a bowl upon the top of

The C'thúbbh וַיֵּאמֶר seems to have arisen from the fact that the words, which follow, rā'ûthā v'hinnēh, which generally mean "I looked, and behold!" are more appropriate to narration, than as the answer to the question: What seest thou? As answer we should have expected הִנֵּה רְאִיתִי "lo! I see," or אֲנִי רְאִה (v. 1) "I see." The "vayyómer" of the C'thúbbh must be looked on as parenthetical, thus: "I looked (said he) and behold," &c., comp. v. 6, 8, and the common introduction in Arabic of qāla "said he" in narration. Taking the Q'rī "and I said," we must understand rā'ûthā v'hinnēh in the sense of "I see, and lo," &c.—גֻּלָּהּ "its bowl" might be explained as from a ἀπ. λεγόμεν. גֻּל, or as standing for גֻּלְתָּהּ (from gulláh ver. 3), as כתבוּנים (Hos. xiii. 2) is for כתבותנם. But, apart from considerations of the difficulty of explaining גֻּלָּהּ, I regard גֻּלָּהּ (with the Hē r'phūyāh) as the right reading. For, it will be observed that things which must of necessity belong to a candlestick such as "top," or which belonged to the Candlestick of the Tabernacle, viz. "the seven lamps," are marked by the pronon. suff. to denote that they were proper to it, "its top," "its seven lamps," but, when other points are mentioned which would not naturally have been expected, such as the "pipes," the "olive-trees," the "spouts," they are without the pron. suff. Now this "bowl" was not a thing to have been expected: not a thing, in fact, which could be called "its bowl." Therefore, in accordance with some MSS., we read גֻּלָּהּ "and a bowl." For the absol. form of numeral before a defined substantive comp. (Josh. vi. 4) שִׁבְעָה הַנְּרוֹת shibh'áh v'shibh'áh mûṣāqóth lannēróth; for the constr. (Numb. viii. 2) שִׁבְעַת הַנְּרוֹת shibh'áh v'shibh'áh mûṣāqóth lannēróth, it has been disputed whether two numerals joined by ׀ can be distributive, i.e. whether these words can denote "seven pipes apiece to the lamps." It is certain that this is not the usual construction, we should rather have expected shibh'áh mûṣāqóth shibh'áh mûṣāqóth lannēróth (or l'nér échád), comp. Is. vi. 2. But 2 Sam. xxi. 20 has been aptly cited to the contrary, the passage runs: וְהָיָה אִישׁ... וְאַצְבְּעוֹתַי יָדָיו וְאַצְבְּעוֹת רַגְלָיו שֵׁשׁ וְשֵׁשׁ עֶשְׂרִים ויהי איש... ואצבעות ידיו ואצבעות רגליו שש ושש עשרים which should be rendered "and there was a man who had six fingers to each hand, and six toes to each foot, twenty-four in all."

it, and his seven lamps thereon, | which are upon the top thereof :
and seven pipes to the seven lamps,

In 1 Chron. xx. 6 the same passage occurs, but with the following variation, that the words "hands and feet" are not mentioned, it simply says ואצבעתיו שש-ושש עשרים וארבע. Now, those who dispute the distributive sense of שש ושש say, that "six and six" means that his hands had $6 + 6 = 12$, and his feet had $6 + 6 = 12$, total 24. That is to say, they divide the 24 fingers and toes into two groups of 12 fingers, and 12 toes, each of which groups is represented by שש ושש. But in giving this explanation they overlook the fact that they take שש ושש, which means $6 + 6$, as equivalent to "6 + 6 apiece," viz. to hands and feet 12 apiece. They do, in fact, read שש ושש as equivalent to שש ושש שש ושש (see notes on iii. 9). Kalisch and C. H. H. Wright apply this theory to the שבעה ושבעה before us, and say that it means that the seven lamps had two pipes apiece, viz. 14 in all. But their application of the theory is illogical. The seven lamps are already mentioned, as in the other case were (according to that theory) the two groups, viz. of fingers, and of toes. Distributing 12 to each of the two groups gives 24. Similarly, distributing 7 + 7 pipes to each of the seven lamps gives 98 pipes, not 14. To have expressed (according to their theory) two pipes to each lamp, we must have had after the mention of seven lamps (מספר) ארבעה עשר ואחד, i.e. "and their pipes were 1 + 1 (=2 apiece), 14 in number." Koehler¹ avoids this blunder by saying that the number is "seven and seven," not 14, because one group of seven pipes was for supplying the lamps from the reservoir, and the other group of seven to connect the seven lamps. But, unless the two outer ones are to be connected, it takes only six pipes to connect seven lamps.—Finally, we have not the slightest hesitation in interpreting שבעה ושבעה as "seven apiece" (so too Arnswald).

For rā'ūthī LXX. gives ἑώρακα, while for anī rō'ēh (v. 2) it has ἐγὼ ὀρῶ—LXX. does not express a suffix with gullāh, but says simply καὶ τὸ λαμπάδιον ἐπάνω αὐτῆς, but this is no proof versions and emendations. that they did not read the word with a suffix, since for נְרִיתָהּ עֲלֶיהָ they give λίχνοι ἐπάνω αὐτῆς. Nor does the Syr. express the suffix in either case.—LXX. Syr. Vulg. E.V. Ewald &c. get over the difficulty of the expression שבעה ושבעה by cancelling the first שבעה, καὶ ἐπὶ ἐπαρυστρίδες τοῖς λύχνους τοῖς ἐπάνω αὐτῆς. Hitzig, on the other hand,

3 And two olive trees by it, one | and the other upon the left side
upon the right side of the bowl, | thereof.

cancels the שבעה before נרתיה, and construes the שבעה, which follows עליה, with that clause, and renders thus, “and its lamps upon it were seven.” This construction is natural enough in Ex. xxv. 37, xxxvii. 23, where the candelabrum is first described, but here “and its seven lamps upon it” is the collocation we should expect. (See above.)—Pressel has made a clever suggestion, viz. that “seven” is repeated on account of its importance as corresponding to “the seven eyes of the LORD.” He would render: “seven (was) the number of its lamps above the same—seven—and seven the number of its pipes.” But, our objection to Hitzig’s translation applies also to this: and, moreover, had this been the meaning of the prophet, it is hardly likely that he would have written שבעה in such an equivocal collocation, but would rather have written שבעה מספר “seven in number.”—Nér is correctly construed with a masc. numeral (comp. Prov. xx. 27, xxiv. 20, and my Fragment of Psachim, p. 40, note).—מוצקות in the sense of “pipes” is a ḥp. λεγός. Gesen. and Fuerst are wrong in calling it a fem. substantive as the numeral here shows. It is to be considered as a subst. formed from the Hiph. of יצק (וצק) viz. maṣṣāq = mauṣṣāq = mōṣṣāq and then = mūṣṣāq (comp. מוסר, מוסר “foundation”). The interchange of o and u is not uncommon, thus we have נְבוּכָה (Esth. iii. 15), and נְבָיִם (Ex. xiv. 3); קרבן, usually Qorbán, is in Neh. x. 35, xiii. 31 qurbán; the Biblical לֹג makes in Rabb. the plur. לֹגִין; Rabb. פרוזבול is pronounced Pruzbul, and Prozbol; in old Jewish epitaphs we find NEPVS for nepos, APOSTVLI for apostoli, MAIVRES for majores, and ΦΑΟCTINI for *Faustini*¹.

¹ alēhā “by its side,” as עַל הַיָּם “by the sea” (Ex. xiv. 2), comp. al-ṣ̣mōlālāh “at its left hand.” LXX. has ἐπάνω αὐτῆς.—

Verse 3.

The student should observe that when מִן is prefixed to a word beginning with י, the yūd quiesces in the chiriq, and no compensation is made for the loss of the י, therefore we have מִימִן; for this use of מִן see note on v. 3, and comp. ἐκ τοῦ ἔμπροσθεν στῆλαι (Xen. Cyr. 2. 2). The construction is different in ver. 11.

וְאָמַר. In illustration of our remarks on i. 9 we will now give several instances of the first person imperf. of verbs, which, with strong vāv, would throw the accent on the penultimate in the 3rd masc. and fem., or 2nd per. masc. in the singular, but which retain, according to rule, the accent on the ultimate in the 1st person (they all take metheg under the ו): וְאָדַע “and I knew,” וְאָהַב “I loved,” וְאָחַז “I seized,” וְאָחַר “I stayed,” וְאָרָא “I feared,” וְאָכַל (and vā’ōcēl in pause) “I ate,” וְאָלַד “I gave birth,” וְאָלַךְ (and vā’ēlāc in pause) “I went,” וְאָסִיר “I removed,” וְאָעַד (and vā’ā’ād) “I testified,” וְאָפִיץ “I scattered,” וְאָקַל “I was despised,” וְאָקָם (and וְאָקָם) “I arose,” וְאָקַץ “I abhorred,” וְאָרַד “I went down,” וְאָשַׁב “I sat,” וְאָשׁוּב “I returned” (v. 1), וְאָשִׁיב “I returned (answer),” וְאָשִׁים “I placed.”—Here, and in ver. 12, LXX. render, well enough quoad sensum, וְאָעַן by καὶ ἐπηρώτησα.

It is necessary that the student should observe that the accent on וְאָ, being placed before the word, is disjunctive, and therefore the ך of d̄bhar retains the dagesh lene (see Excurs. Verse 6. Words. III. 1). This accent is called Y’thūbh. But when it is placed on the tone-syllable as וְאָ בְחִיל it is conjunctive, and, therefore, the B’GaDC’FuT’h letter following is r’phūyāh. This accent is called Mahpac (comp. p. 3).—The addition of μεγάλη by LXX. is merely a free rendering.

There is no difficulty in the use of מִי “who?” (not מַה “what?”) even if we do not regard “the great mountain” as a personal adversary, or as a personification of oppositions generally. Verse 7. Constructions. For מִי is often used where in English we require “what?” Thus (1 Sam. xviii. 18) מִי אֲנִי וּמִי הוּא “who am I, and who (what) is my life?" (comp. Ex. x. 8, Judg. xiii. 17, Mich. i. 5).—Har-haggādōl "O great mountain"; with the omission of the article before the substantive. "A great mountain" would be hār gādōl; "the great mountain" or "O great mountain" would properly be הַהָר הַגָּדוֹל; but the article is sometimes omitted with the noun, e. g. יוֹם הַשִּׁשִּׁי "the sixth day" (Gen. i. 31), אִישׁ אֶפְרַתִּי הוּא "this Ephrathite" (1 Sam. xvii. 12), for hā'ish hā'ephrāthī hazzēh (comp. Zech. xiv. 10).—למישור is most graphic; by one single word is expressed "thou shalt become a plain!" For this use of ל with the verb "to be" omitted comp. (Lam. iv. 3) בַּת עַמִּי לְאֶכֶזֶר; and for the omission of other verbs for the sake of terseness comp. (Hos. viii. 1) אֶל-הַכֶּךְ שָׁפַר, כִּנְשַׁר עַל-בֵּית יְיָ.—וְהוֹצִיא "he shall bring out." The perfect with strong vāv is often used, independently of any foregoing verb, to express a future, the expectation of which is rendered reasonable by the statement of the preceding clause, as (1 Sam. xvii. 36) "Both the lion and the bear thy servant slew, this uncircumcised Philistine shall be (וְהוּדָה) like one of them." So here, the statement "Who art thou O great mountain, before Zerubbabel?" "[Thou shalt become] a plain!" prepares the way for the promise "he shall bring out." The ׀ is better, as in many cases, left untranslated in English.—הַרְאֵשֶׁה is a ἄπ. λεγό. (on the simān rāphēh see Excurs. iv.), it can only be regarded as a fem. formation from ראש denoting "head," and must be in apposition with הָאֶבֶן, and the two words together must be rendered "the head-stone." Substantives are sometimes in Hebrew (with or without def. art.) put in apposition, where in Aryan languages we should have a Tat-purusha compound genitively dependent as birth-place, brick-house: thus (ver. 10) we have הָאֶבֶן הַבְּרִיל "the lead-weight," or "plumb-line," (2 Kings xvi. 14) הַמִּזְבֵּחַ הַנְּחֹשֶׁת "the brass-altar," הָעֶמְקַת הַנְּחֹשֶׁת "the brass-oxen" (ver. 17), הַרְשָׁן וְהַרְשָׁן "the corpse-and-ashes-valley" (Jer. xxi. 40), הַעֲבֹתֹת הַזָּהָב "the gold-wreaths" (Exod. xxxix. 17), שִׁבְעֵי-שָׁנִים רָעָב "seven-year-famine" (2 Sam. xxiv. 13), מַיִם לַחַיִּץ "affliction-water" (1 Kings xxii. 27). The same construction is found in Arabic (with the art.) e. g. aḡ-ḡanam udh-dhahabū "the gold-image," aḡ-ḡulbān ul-khashbū "the wood-crosses.”—תִּשְׂאוֹת: “with shoutings,” it is the acc. of nearer definition, comp. פה אחד “with one mouth” (1 Kings xxii. 13). But one cannot state definitely, whether it is in the absol. or the constr. state, because (1) such substantives are of the same form in both states, (2) either construction is admissible, viz. apposition, “With shouts, ‘Grace! Grace! to it!’” (see above in this note); or annexation, “With shouts of ‘Grace, Grace! to it,’” as (Ps. lxxxi. 5) שֵׁפֶת לֹא יָדַעְתִּי אֲשֶׁמַע “the saying of ‘I know not [the LORD, Ex. v. 2]’ I will take cognizance of.”—Chén, see xii. 10.

8 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

It is by no means unusual to find the LXX. treating Hebr. words, as though they were Aramaic: τοῦ κατορθῶσαι is an instance of this. They have taken למישר Versions. as the Aram. infin. of ישר or אשר; the student will understand this, when he is told that למימר is the Aram. for לאמר.—הַרְאֵשָׁה τῆς κληρονομίας, reading the word, apparently, הַרְאֵשָׁה, comp. יִרְשָׁה (Numb. xxiv. 18) LXX. κληρονομία. Aq. for ἡἀρῶσῆλῆ gives τὸν πρωτεύοντα.—ισότητα χάριτος χάριτα αὐτῆς, Lāh is taken as the simple possessive, thus χάριτα αὐτῆς represents chén lāh: ισότητα χάριτος represents תִּשְׂאוֹת חַן, the first of these two words being pronounced Tashvith, a noun from the verb שָׁוָה aequavit, of the form of תְּבִלִית from בָּלָה, תְּבִלִית from כָּלָה. (This noun in Aram. is generally used of the thing smoothed, e.g. pavement, pillow, bed.) Aq. has ἐξισώσει χάριτος, and Syr. and Vulg. refer the word to the same root.

The note attached to תְּבַצְעֶנָּה means that it has pathach although with ethnach. This form (when from verbs third root-letter Verse 9. Words. ע or ה) always takes pathach in this syllable, e.g. תְּבַקְעֶנָּה (2 Kings ii. 24), תְּפַלְחֶנָּה (Job xxxix. 3), תְּשַׁלְּחֶנָּה (ibidem) and even other verbs, which would otherwise have çerē (like תְּדַרְבְּנֶנָּה, תְּשַׁפְּרֶנָּה, תְּמַהֲרֶנָּה) take pathach in pause, as : תְּנַאֲפְנָה (Hos. iv.

13, 14), תרַטְשָׁנָה (Is. xiii. 18), תַעֲבֹסְנָה (Is. iii. 16). On the accentuation of v'yādu'tā see note on i. 3. For the change from the 2nd pers. sing. to 2nd plur. comp. Lev. xxv. 14, Mich. i. 11. The LXX. has here deliberately put both in the sing.

30). Since there is no neuter gender in Hebr. the fem. is often used to supply its place either in the sing. as (Numb. xxii. 18) q'tannāh ḥ dōlāh "any thing great or small," or in the plur. as here (comp. qāshōth Gen. xlii. 7, 30). LXX. gives wrongly ἡμέρας μικράς.

On hā'ēbhen habb'dīl see note on ver. 7.—Bunsen translates this verse "For they who have despised the day of small things, they will rejoice and see the lead-stone in the hand of Zerubbabel; these seven are the eyes of YHWH roaming through the whole earth." This rendering is grammatically defensible, comp. Gen. xlv. 9 (quoted in note on xiv. 17), מִי being used (comp. Ex. xxiv. 14, Judg. vii. 3) indefinitely "whosoever" as equivalent to מִי אֲשֶׁר (Ex. xxxii. 33). But it would be a strange thing for the Prophet to promise joy to mockers. Köhler renders v'sām'chū, &c. "while these seven see with joy," &c.; but this is an impossible translation, since in a clause descriptive of the state or circumstance beginning with vāv, the vāv is usually prefixed to the subject, e.g. וְהַמַּחֲנֶה הָיָה בְּמַח "the camp being in confident security" (1 Kings i. 40), but never to the Perfect.—The first clause "For, who hath despised the day of small things?" denotes: "surely none (who hopes to achieve great things) ever despised the day of small things!", and so is practically equivalent to a prohibition: "Let none despise the day of small things." After such a clause the perfect with vāv denotes the result of compliance with the prohibition, "Then shall they see with joy the plummet in the hands of Zerubbabel, [viz.] these seven." Of the two verbs וְשָׂמָה וְרָאוּ the former is best rendered by the adverbial expression "with joy," comp. (v. 1) וְאֶשׁוּב וְאֶשָּׂא "and I lifted up again," וְאָעַן וְאָמַר might similarly be rendered "and I said in reply." The last half of the verse should be rendered "The eyes of YHWH, they are scouring the whole earth"; or, neglecting the interpunctuation, we might render the words "The eyes of YHWH are they, scouring the whole world" (for this constr. of the partic. see iii. 1), comp. LXX. $\epsilon\pi\tau\acute{\alpha}\ \sigma\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\ \delta\phi\theta\alpha\lambda\mu\omicron\iota\ \epsilon\iota\sigma\omega\ \kappa\upsilon\rho\iota\omicron\upsilon\ \omicron\iota\ \epsilon\pi\iota\beta\lambda\epsilon\pi\omicron\upsilon\tau\epsilon\varsigma$. They ought, however, to have omitted the art. before the partic., comp. LXX. of vi. 1. In either case the last half of the verse is a farther description of "these seven." It need hardly be said that shibh'āh-ēleh "enē YHWH cannot mean "these seven eyes of YHWH ," which would have been $\text{עֵינֵי יי' הָאֵלֶּה}$ (or $\text{שִׁבְעַת (שִׁבְעָה) עֵינֵי יי' הָאֵלֶּה}$, or $\text{עֵינֵי יי' הָאֵלֶּה שִׁבְעָתָם}$ (comp. Dan. i. 17).

מֵה־שָׂתִי , see Excurs. iv.—The sing. שִׁבְלֵת "a stream" (Ps. lxi. 16), "ear of corn" (Job xxiv. 24), makes plur. שִׁבְלִים (comp. צִפּוֹר plur. צִפּוּרִים). The construct (which Verse 1^o.
Words and constructions. occurs here only) is pointed שִׁבְלִי (not שִׁבְלִי) by one of those irregularities of traditional pronunciation, for which no reason can be assigned. The word seems to mean here "pendent bunches of olives."—It is impossible (with C. H. H. Wright) to render the next clause "which by means of the two channels of gold are pouring forth, &c.," for in that case we should have had מְרִיקִים , not הַמְרִיקִים , since the clause is introduced by אֲשֶׁר .— צִנְתָּרוֹת is a $\acute{\alpha}\pi\lambda\epsilon\gamma\acute{o}$. meaning probably "spouts" (see Dictionaries); it is masc., as is shown by the numeral. This clause we render: "which are resting in the two golden spouts."— בִּיד must mean "in the hand of," i.e. resting in; but see note on vii. 7. It can hardly mean "by the side of," for the figurative expression בִּידוֹ "nigh at hand" (Job xv. 23) will not justify the rendering. To express this it would have been rather עַל (ver. 14), לִיד (1 Sam. xix. 3), בְּעַד יָד (1 Sam. iv. 18), אֵל יָד (2 Sam. xiv. 30), עַל יָד (Josh. xv. 46), or עַל יְדֵי (Judg. xi. 26).— הוֹרֵב is a $\acute{\alpha}\pi\lambda\epsilon\gamma\acute{o}$. in the sense of "the gold[en oil]." The clause should be rendered "which pour the golden oil out from themselves," grammatically it refers to the spouts, not to the olive-clusters (which are fem.).

LXX. — המריקים מעליהם הזרב they render τῶν ἐπιχέοντων καὶ ἀπαναγόντων τὰς ἐπαρυστρίδας τὰς χρυσᾶς to them, as to us, hazzāhābh is a difficulty: we solve it by supposing “the gold” to mean “the golden oil”; they by understanding it as “golden pipes (or funnels)” (comp. ver. 2). καὶ ἀπαναγόντων evidently corresponds to מעליהם, which they seem to have read as ומעלים the Hiph. Partic. of ālāh “to go up.”

יִצְחָק is a substantive of the same form as the proper name יִצְחָק.
Verse 14. “Isaac.” This word is nowhere else used of oil-for-anointing. It is used to denote oil as the juice of the olive, the produce of the ground, just as tīrbōsh is used of wine as the produce of the vine. But yāin is used of wine fermented for drinking, and shēmen of oil prepared for burning (שמן לַמָּאֹר), or for anointing (שמן הַמִּשְׁחָה). On the metheg of hā'ōm'dīm see Excurs. II. A. 9.—עַל denotes “by,” see on ver. 3.

It can scarcely be doubted, that the prototype of this golden candlestick is the candlestick, which was placed in the holy place of the former Sanctuaries “before the LORD, as an everlasting statute for their generations on behalf of the children of Israel” (Ex. xxvii. 21). This Candlestick is not mentioned among the vessels of the Sanctuary brought back from the Captivity. It may be that it was the very lack of this important article of the Temple furniture, that impressed the form of it on the Prophet's mind. Be this as it may, the form of Candlestick of the Vision is evidently based on that of the Temple, and Tabernacle. But, at the same time, that of the Vision differs in several points from the other. In the Candlestick of old the lamps had need to be trimmed every evening, by the Priests, while in this the oil poured itself spontaneously from two olive-clusters, and was communicated to the lamps by such a number of pipes, as in an actual lamp would seem almost impossible. The angel-interpreter declares that the significance of the Vision is this: that all difficulties should subside before Zerubbabel, and that he should complete the building of the Temple, and bring forth the head-stone thereof with shouts of “Grace, grace to it!” But, this was to take place by no human power (such as was used for keeping the lamps of the Candlestick alight in former times), but by the Unction from the Holy One: “Not by might, or by power, but by my Spirit, saith the LORD of Hosts.” “Do not then,” says the direct revelation of the LORD, “despise the small beginnings of the work, and then the eyes of God's all-embracing Providence, which are specially directed on this work of rebuilding (iii. 9), will yet view with benign satisfaction the completion of this material building by the hand of Zerubbabel." But, as though the Lord looked with pity on the weakness of human faith, and to explain the meaning of the two olive-clusters, He deigns to reveal to the Prophet the two human instruments by which this work was to be consummated, saying "These (the two olive-clusters) are the two anointed ones," i.e. Zerubbabel the Prince of the House of David, the civil head, and Joshua, the High-Priest, the religious head. Thus should this Building be completed. And, as the Candlestick of old had been a symbol of the diffusion of the light of Divine Truth by the Congregation of Israel, whose duty it was (and ever is) to be witnesses to the Truth of the Unity of God, so should this new Building become the centre, whence should go forth the Light to lighten the Gentiles, and to be the Glory of His People Israel. (Comp. the close connection in ch. iii. between the assurance of God's providential care of the work of building, and the promise of the mission of the Messiah.)

Translate "and I lifted up mine eyes again," see note on iv. 10.—
 עֲפָרָה (which we know to be a participle from its being accented mi'ra', see note on ver. 4, and on xiv. 18) may be taken as merely an epithet, "a flying scroll," or better, perhaps, as denoting the circumstance or state, "a scroll, flying" (comp. iii. 1, vi. 1, 5). Verse 1.

LXX. for Mcgilláh have δρέπανον, understanding the word in the sense of מַגֵּל "a sickle." Aquila and Theodotion διφθέρα. Gr. Versions. Symm. κεφαλís, var. lect. εἰλημα.

From the wording of this verse the reader will perceive the force of our note on the Q'ri and C'hibh of iv. 2.—The expression בְּאֲמָה " [measured] by the ammah " is common (comp. Ex. xxvi. 8, &c.). עֲפָרָה (masc. עֲפָרָה) is fem. to agree with ammáh understood in the da' ammah. Verse 2.

3 Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth: for every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side according to it; and every one that sweareth shall be cut off as on that side according to it.

4 I will bring it forth, saith the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter

I would render thus: "For every one that stealeth, on the one hand, shall in accordance therewith be certainly destroyed: and every one that sweareth [falsely], on the other hand, shall in accordance therewith be certainly destroyed." מוה... מוה can, surely, only be taken as contrasted one to the other. In Ex. xi. 1, where mizzéh...mizzéh occurs, the construction is so utterly different, that it affords no parallel. For the expression used in the sense of "on this side and on that" comp. Ex. xxxii. 15, Num. xxii. 24, Ezk. xviii. 7. Arnswald says that mizzéh...mizzéh cannot mean "on this and that side of the roll," because zéh is masc. while m'gilláh is fem. But (Ex. xxv. 19) ועשה כרוב אחר מקצה מוה וכרוב-אחד... מקצה מוה מן הנפרת shows that this reason for rejecting that translation is invalid. We reject it on different grounds, viz. that the words do not express that meaning: to have done so they should have been כל...ככתוב עליה מוה נקה וכל...ככתוב עליה מוה נקה. The explanation of Koehler, &c., that mizzéh in both cases means "from hence," viz. from the land (comp. Gen. xxxvii. 17, Ex. xi. 1, Deut. xi. 12), is precluded by the evident contrast between mizzéh and mizzéh implied by the collocation.

LXX. rightly for hà'áláh ñ ápá.—Symm. οί ὄρκοι.—Aq. ὡσαύτως, reading, apparently, כִּאֲלֶה. The last half of the verse is Versions rendered as follows by LXX.: διότι πᾶς ὁ κλέπτῃς ἐκ τούτου ἕως θανάτου ἐδικαηθήσεται, καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἐπίορκος ἐκ τούτου ἕως θανάτου ἐδικαηθήσεται (Cod. Vat. incorrectly omits ἕως θανάτου in the second case). They, no doubt, read מוה as מוה, as in Is. liii. 8 they read the מו of lámō as מוה. They may have rendered כ as ἕως, comp. 1 Sam. xv. 7 (LXX. Bas. a'. 15. 7, Tisch. reads ὡς), Ps. lx. 7 כְּמוֹ (cod. Kenn. 15. 6 כימי), LXX. 61. 7 ἕως ἡμέρας. Or they may have read כְּמוה as מוה (see note on LXX. ch. x. 12). With regard to נקה it must be observed that it is not elsewhere used (in the Niph.) of a person being destroyed, into the house of the thief, and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my name: and it shall remain in the midst of his house,	and shall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof.

though it is found (Is. iii. 25 וְנִקְתָּהּ, LXX. καταλειφθήσῃ μόνῃ) of a city being laid waste. The Targ. gives לְקִי (vapulans) "being judicially-smitten," giving practically the right meaning, and preserving to a certain extent, if not the original word, at any rate the sound of it. They may have taken נקה as a Niph. partic.; or as an Imperf. (see Fragment of T. B. Psachim, pp. 1—8); or as equivalent to לקה, cf. לשכה and נשכה, even in Bibl. Hebr. There is no reason for supposing (with Gesen.) that they read the word as נִקְהָ. The LXX. give essentially the same rendering, either from the Targum or collateral tradition, or translating in accordance with the context. Symm. δίκην δώσει.

וּבִאֵהּ... וְלִנְהָ. These words are both accented mil'el (see note on page 16), consequently they are the 3rd pers. fem. Perfect, not the Pres. Partic. (see note on xiv. 18). לִנְהָ stands for לְנָה, and this is the only instance of final ah becoming eh in the Perfect; but, in the Imperf. we have אֶקְרֵאָה (1 Sam. xxviii. 15), יִדְשְׁנָה (Ps. xx. 3); in a fem. partic. pass. וְנִקְהָ (Is. xxxix. 5). The case of the substantive צִנָּה (Ps. viii. 7) is not parallel: for, in the first place, if this stood for צִנָּה we should have expected it to have been accentuated on the first syllable (see note on láylah i. 8); secondly, the form צִנָּאֵם (Numb. xxxii. 24) points to a collateral form צִנָּה or צִנָּה.

Verse 4.

Note that while in Arab. dā'in (צִאִין) means "a single sheep," and the plur. dā'n (צִאִין)¹ means "sheep," there is also a verb dana-a (צִנָּה), one meaning of which is (according to Freytag) "multa fuerunt (pecora)."—Since Báyith "house" is masc., the suffix of Cilláttū (3rd fem. Perf. Pi'el of כָּלָה) is masc. to agree with it. The only instances of the

¹ It is quite within the bounds of possibility that many Hebr. nouns which we call "collectives" are in reality "broken plurals."

5 Then the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth.

3rd masc. suffix with the 3rd fem. Perfect of verbs quiescent לָהֵן are this בָּלַתָּוּ, and הִפְתָּוּ Hiph. of נָמָה (Prov. vii. 21). The (usual) form of the 3rd fem. Perfect, with 3rd masc. suffix, in the Qal, Hiph. and Polel, is in áth-hū, e.g. גָּמְלָתָהּוּ (Prov. xxxi. 12), הִחֲזַקְתָּהּוּ (Jer. i. 43), רָמַמְתָּהּוּ (Ezk. xxxi. 4), but with the Pi'el it is always áttū, as יִפְרָתָוּ (Prov. xxxi. 1), וּבִעַתָּתָוּ (1 Sam. xvi. 14), וְהִמָּתָוּ (Job xxxiii. 20). The full form of the 3rd fem. Perfect is that which occurs in Pause, viz. gāmālāh, when this takes the suffix it reverts to its older form in t, viz. gāmālat. Now observe how, in accordance with the rule given in note on iv. 1, when the accent leaves mā and falls on lāt, the vowel third from the accentuated syllable goes away, and we get gāmālāth. The next example cited, viz. hecl'ziqāth-hu', is an instance of a word in which both the second and third vowels from the accent are immoveable. In all the other cases the third vowel (from the accent) is immoveable, but the second has been removed.

וַיֵּצֵא, contrast the position of the tone in וַיֵּשֶׁב (iv. 1). The reason of this difference is, that all verbs, whose last root-letter is א, retain the tone on the ultimate even with vāv conversive, and are, therefore, an exception to the general rule given in our note on i. 9. Thus all such forms from בּוֹא are mi'bra', e.g. וַיָּבֵא (Gen. vii. 7), וְתָבֵא (viii. 11), and Hiph. וַיְבִיא (Neh. viii. 2), וַיְבִיא (Ezk. xl. 3), but commonly וַיָּבֵא; and so וַיִּקָּא (Jon. ii. 11) from קִיא. And thus also וַיִּרָא (Gen. xxviii. 17) from יִרָא, and from יֵצֵא, Qal וַיֵּצֵא, וַיְצֵא (Gen. iv. and xxx. 16), Hiph. וַיֵּצֵא (Gen. xv. 5), וַיֵּצֵא (Judg. xix. 15), וַתֵּצֵא (Gen. i. 12).—But forms, which end in א on account of the apoc. of the final ה, are mi'brā' according to rule, e.g. וַיִּרָא sign to show that there is no vowel belonging to the consonant under which it is placed.

"What is this going forth?" would be mah-zzôth yôçêth.

"And I said: 'What is it?' And he said: 'This is an ephah which is going forth: this (continued he) is their appearance in all the earth.'" The use of the def. art. with ēphāh is that which writers on the New Test. call monadic. The def. art. in such a case denotes merely a chance specimen of the known class. Thus hà'ēphāh here denotes "a specimen of the thing, you know so well, viz. the ephah-class." This is a distinct Hebraism. It is common in the Mishnah (see my Fragment of T. B. P'sachim, p. 95, note 36), as well as in Bibl. Hebr. In the Talmudim and Midrashim the idiom becomes still more marked, and we have not "the" but "that" to denote τις. Thus, while הָהוּא גְבֵרָא may mean "that man" (in which sense it is often used to denote "I" (or "thou"), like ἀνὴρ ὁδε, and ὁδ' ἀνὴρ, as equivalent to ἐγώ), it very generally stands merely for ἀνὴρ τις.—For vayyômer used parenthetically comp. ver. 8, and note on iv. 2 C'ithibh.—For עֵין in the sense of "appearance" comp. For עֵינָם LXX. has ἀδικία αὐτῶν, reading עֵוֹנָם. Jerome observes that if the Hebr. word had vav instead of yod "recte legeretur ONAM ut LXX. putaverunt." He seems to have thought that עֵוֹן was of the form of אֵוֹן, and made constr. עֵוֹן (see note on תוֹךְ p. 25). Symm. paraphrases πρὸς τοῦτο ἀποβλέπουσι.

Partic. fem. like נִפְלְאָת (Deut. xxx. 11): and so too must it be in כִּי נִשְׂאָת (1 Chron. xiv. 2); unless we point the word נִשְׂאָת after the form נִפְלְאָת (Ps. cxviii. 23), comp. נִשְׂפָּחָת (Is. xxiii. 15), נִרְפְּאָתָה (Jer. li. 9 Q^{eri}), נִפְלְאָתָה (2 Sam. i. 26).—וְזֹאת may be easily explained, if only we follow the context and the rules of grammar. It cannot be taken as equivalent to הִנֵּה, "[and I looked] and behold one woman," because (1) זֹאת is never so used, (2) throughout the visions וְזֹאת, וְזֵה always introduce an explanation of the angel interpreter. This verse, and the first clause of the next one, are merely a continuation of the angel's words. In verse 7 he points out to the Prophet the scene that was passing before his eyes, and in the beginning of verse 8 he explains its import. The angel says, "And behold (i.e. and you may see) a disc of lead being lifted up, and this [which you now see on the removal of the disc] is a woman sitting in the midst of the ephah, and this (continued he) is Wickedness."—Issháh acháth might be rendered "a certain woman" as אִישׁ אֶחָד (1 Sam. i. 1) "a certain man" (τὸς); but such a translation would be unsuitable here. Or it may be taken as "one woman." Or acháth may be used merely as the indef. article, as (Dan. viii. 3) אֵיל אֶחָד "a ram."

וּרוּחַ בְּכַנְפֵיהֶם a nominal clause introducing a further fact "and the wind was in their wings," comp. vi. 1. The phrase seems to be the Hebr. equivalent of the English nautical expression "bore down on," i.e. approached sailing before the wind. Observe the masc. suffix; comp. הַמָּה for הֵנָּה (ver. 10); and Ruth i. 8, 9.—Cⁿnāphāim is the dual (see note on p. 20), לְהֵנָּה for the usual לְהֵנָּה, so we have (Jer. xix. 16) לְהֵמָּה for the usual לְהֵמָּה: the form for 2nd pers. fem. is לְכַנְּךָ, apparently to distinguish it from לְכֵן "therefore."—חַסִּידָה is "a stork"; in later times to distinguish the fem. of חַסִּיד "pious" from ch^asīdāh "a stork," the form חַסוּדָה was used, e.g. (T. B. C^thubboth 17^a) וְחַסוּדָה וְנֵאמָר.—וְתִשְׁנֶה for וְתִשְׁנֶה (on the sīmān rāphéh see Excurs. iv.).—Bén...ābhén (Gen. i. 4) or bén...l (i. 6) "between...and."

לָהּ is softened for לָהּ and therefore the ב of the following word is without dagesh lene (see Excurs. iii. and iv.).—הוֹכֵן is the Hoph. Perf. 3rd Pers. masc. (from כּוֹן) though it agrees with a fem. subject (comp. xiii. 8).—From נוַח we have two Hiph. forms הִנִּיחַ "he gave rest" (Is. xiv. 3), and הִנִּיחַ "he placed" (ver. 1). The Hoph. Partic. from the latter is כּוֹנֵה (Ezek. xli. 9). Now the Hoph. Perf. 3rd fem. ought to be הִנְחָהּ, this being pronounced hunn'chāh might have passed into hunnīchāh (for instances of the common use of ' in non-biblical MSS. for moving sh'va see my Fragment of T. B. Psachim, p. 8, note 2), and then, on account of the following tonic syllable shām, became hunnícháh. On the other hand we find in Biblical Chaldee such a Hophal as הִקִּימַתְּ “she was set up” (Dan. vii. 4), so that those have some ground to stand on who call this a Chaldaism¹. But I prefer my own explanation, since the Hebrew of the Post-captivity Prophets is especially (and intentionally) free from Chaldaisms.

LXX. καὶ ἐροῦμάσαι, either reading וְרוּבֵן as the Hiph. וְרוּבֵן; or else taking ת for ה (as in ver. 3), and reading וְתִבֵן, which Root they render in 1 Sam. ii. 3, 2 Kings xii. 12 by the verb ἐρομάζω.

This is but one vision in three dissolving views. (α) The flying scroll denotes the curse upon sinners against the Words of the Two Tables (Exod. Remarks. xx.). The dimensions of the scroll are those of the Tabernacle in the wilderness, and of the porch of Solomon's Temple. Some commentators consider its measurement to be symbolical. If so, it is best to understand it as meaning, that transgression is not to be measured by man's standard of right and wrong, but by that of the Lord, who deigned to give a special sign of His Presence in the Sanctuary. With verse 4 may be compared the well-known story of Glaucus, and the Delphic oracle concerning Oath, who “hath a son nameless, handless, footless, but swift he pursues until he seize and destroy the whole race and house” (Herod. vi. 86). (β) Next a woman, who is Wickedness personified, appears sitting in an ephah. A leaden disc is cast on the mouth of the ephah to prevent her emerging; then (γ) two women, with strong ample wings (the like of which the prophet may have seen in the grotesque figures of Babylon), bear down on the ephah, and carry it off to the land of Shinar, where it is to be finally deposited. This vision appears to be, not only a confirmation of ch. iii. 9, but also an implicit exhortation to the people to leave in the land of their Captivity (the land where mankind first organized a rebellion against God, Gen. xi. 2) the sins, which had caused their deportation thither.

Koehler, supposes) is shown by the fact, that the plur. of אִשְׁבָּל is אִשְׁבָּלוֹת (Song of Songs vii. 8, comp. Gen. lx. 10) while the constr. is equally אִשְׁבָּלוֹת (Deut. xxii. 32) and אִשְׁבָּלוֹת (Song of Songs vii. 9): similarly we have מִלְקָחָה (Numb. iv. 9) and מִלְקָחֶיהָ (Ex. xxv. 38), comp. the common Rabbinic form of substantive הַקֹּדֶשׁ "that which is devoted to sacred purposes," which is derived from the Hiph. Infin. הִקְדִּישׁ (comp. note on LXX. xiv. 17).—V'hdhārīm hārē n'chōsheth is a nominal clause, comp. v. 9.

The last-mentioned horses have two epithets applied to them, בָּרָדִים אֲמָצִים. The latter of these cannot possibly be understood as applying to all the four different coloured horses, since in that case the prophet could only have written אֲמָצִים כֻּלָּם. It is strange that two epithets should be applied to one set of horses here, and only one to each of the other sets, both here, and in chap. i. But the greatest difficulties in this passage are (α) that, while in this verse the B'ruddīm are identified with the μυῦξίμ, in verses 7 and 8 the two are most unmistakably distinguished: and (β) that no mention of the אֲדָמִים is mentioned. The Syr., either having a more correct Hebr. text in this passage, or more probably making a conjectural emendation, omits the word μυῦξίμ in this verse, and in ver. 7 substitutes אֲדָמִים וְהָאֲדָמִים for אֲמָצִים. And this reading we are compelled to follow, for the present text commits our Prophet to writing in a meaningless style, such as would not be tolerated for a moment in any secular writer. For LXX. see p. 13. For B'ruddīm Symm. and Theodotion give πελιδνοί. For μυῦξίμ (ver. 3) Aq. has καρτεροί, but in ver. 7 he has πυρροί as though reading, with Syr., v'hd'adummtm; in ver. 7 Symm. has συνεσφιγμένοι, and Theod. ισχυροί. In the sense of "strong" אֲמָצִים would be a ἀπ. λεγόμεν.; but אֲמִיץ (and אֲמִץ) is common in this sense (it would, of course, be possible to point אֲמָצִים

Comp. תְּהַרְרַע (1 Chron. viii. 35) for תְּהַרְרַע (ix. 41). In both verses the Targ. renders "muççim" "ash-coloured"; Rashi says that he does not know the meaning of the word; Ibn Ezra on ver. 7 remarks that the "muççim" are the "dummim," which is certainly the case, by whatever means the result be arrived at.

Arbā' rūchōth hashshāmāim "the four winds of heaven," denoting God's agents working in all the four quarters, i.e. over all the earth.—Ydç'ōth, as in ver. 1, describes the state or circumstance.—מִהַתִּצַּב (on the metheg see Excurs. II. A. 2) "from standing"; but LXX. give ἐξεπορεύοντο παραστήναλ—עַל (comp. iv. 14).

Observe that ydç'im "are going forth" agrees by attraction with hassusim, instead of with the real subject of the sentence

Verse 6. which is מִרְכַּבָּה, understood in the אֲשֶׁר בָּהּ, comp. קִשְׁתָּ

גְּבָרִים חֲתָיִם (1 Sam. ii. 4).—The reason why we have יְצֵאוּ twice in this verse and once in the next, instead of יְצֵאוּ, is this: that the scene passed so vividly before the mind's eye of the Prophet, that he passes unconsciously from an account of the Angel's explanation of the vision to his own narration of it. LXX. avoid the difficulty by rendering ydç'im, as well as yāç'ū, by ἐξεπορεύοντο.—For the expression אֶל אַחֲרַי with verbs of motion, comp. 2 Sam. v. 23, and סָב אֶל-אַחֲרַי "turn thou behind me" (2 Kings ix. 18).—תִּימָן (from יָמֵן) denotes the "south," it is found here only with the def. art. (By the Jews Tēmān is understood to denote especially that part of Arabia called Yemen.)

to and fro through the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth.

8 Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit in the north country.

“Then cried he upon me,” this is an old English expression for “calling by name,” “calling out for,” “summoning” (comp. Verse 8. “who calls on Hamlet?” Shakespear, Hamlet, iv. 2. 3; “to cry on, or upon” he uses, however, in a different sense, see As iv. 3. 150, Rom. iii. 3. 101); it is as much stronger than “he called me,” as vayyaz’eq othi is than vayyiqra li. וַיִּצַק (on the form see note on v. 8) is used of “summoning,” “calling together,” in Judg. iv. 10, 13, and other forms of the Hiph. in the same sense in 2 Sam. xx. 4. 5.— הַנְּיחוּ “have given rest to,” E. V. rightly “have quieted” (see note on v. 11). רוּחַ “spirit” is here used, as in Judg. viii. 3, in the sense of “wrath.” For the phrase “to quiet anger” see Ezek. v. 12, xvi. 42, xxiv. 13. LXX. seem to have read (הַנְּיחוּ), or perhaps rather וַיְנַיְחוּ, since they give καὶ ἀνέπαυσαν.

There is no absolute need, on account of the use of the def. art., to understand the “two mountains” as two mountains well known (see notes on i. 8). Since they are spoken of as being “of copper” it is evident that they are ideal, rather than real mountains. HENGSTENBERG supposes that they represent the power of God, which shields His people; BAUMGARTEN thinks that they symbolize the two central points of the world-power. But, though they are ideal, they had probably their prototype in reality. Thus PRESSEL takes them as Zion and Moriah; WRIGHT as Zion and the Mount of Olives. This last seems the more probable, because the Mount of Olives is spoken of in Zech. xiv. 4, and Mount-Zion is represented as the place from which God executes His judgments (Joel iii. 16), and because between them lay the valley of Jehoshaphat, which Joel describes as the judgment-place of the world (iii. 2).—The four chariots are said to be “the four winds of heaven,” that is probably, as EWALD says, “they went forth as swiftly as the four winds of heaven into the four parts of the world, driven along, as it were, by the wind-angels as charioteers” (comp. Ps. civ. 4). From ver. 8 we know that, whatever else they were, they were God’s agents in executing His just wrath on the nations.—With regard to the difficulties concerning the colours of the horses, which we have mentioned above, HIRTZIG ascribes them to the carelessness of the writer. But we agree, rather, with MAURER, who suggests that the use of muççim in ver. 7 (whence probably it crept into ver. 3) is due to a blunder of an early copyist. WRIGHT tries to get over the difficulty by supposing that the damminim signify the Babylonian Empire, and that they were introduced into the vision for completeness’ sake, but that they were most suitably (JEROME) passed over in the interpretation, because the day of the real power of Babylon had passed away. He maintains that the bruddim (ver. 6) are identical with the muççim (ver. 7), as they are in ver. 3, as the text now stands. He supposes that the b'ruddim are represented as going forth as directed to the land of the south, and then because they were "muccim," "strong," as asking for further permission to traverse the whole world. But the text will not bear any such interpretation. The b'ruddim (ver. 6) are evidently distinct from the muccim (ver. 7). The text is hopelessly corrupt, and can be made intelligible only by adopting the reading (or emendation) of the Syriac. The horses in the chariots are bay, black, white, and iron-grey. These colours have no symbolical significance. They are used merely as the common colours of horses, and to distinguish one chariot from another. The chariots may denote kingdoms, but certainly not those of Daniel. They are at all events God's instruments of vengeance. Two are sent to the North (viz. black, and white) because there were two powers there to be overcome, the remnant of the old Asshur-Babylonian, and the Medo-Persian. The grey go to the South, i.e. to Egypt, which country revolted from Darius, and was reconquered by Xerxes: then after a series of revolts was finally subdued to the Persian power by Ochos, and was afterwards wrested from the hands of Persia by Alexander the Great. The bay seek, and obtain, permission to go through all the earth, signifying probably that Israel's Protector would defend them, not only against their ancient enemies, but also against any who should rise up against them from any quarter whatsoever.

THE SYMBOLICAL CROWNING OF JOSHUA.

Lāqō'ch is the Infin. Absol. used emphatically, and stands for the Verse 10. Infin. followed by the Jussive, or Imperative (comp. iii. 4).
 Constructions, &c. — מֵאֵת and מִ (of mècheldáy) are identical in meaning (see examples in note on xiv. 17).—גִּזְלוֹתָ is properly the fem. of the partic.
 גִּזְלוֹתָ (2 Sam. xv. 19), and so is here rightly used of "exiles"; but it is often used for the abstract "exile," e.g. (Ezra iv. 1) בְּנֵי הַגִּזְלוֹתָ. On the other hand גִּזְלוֹתָ is properly abstract, meaning "exile" (see note on ix. 15), but is often used for the concrete "exiles," e.g. Jer. xxiv. 5.—
Ubhāthā attāh bayyōm hakū "and enter thou thyself that very day."
Ubhāthā (mī'ra) is the Perf. with vāv convers. (see note on v'āmartā
 p. 5), it follows naturally after the Imperative implied in לְקוּחָ (see pp. 5, 6). The "thou" and "on that day" are emphatic.—וּבְנֵיתָ is, equally with the ubhāthā above, the Perfect with vāv convers., but it is accented on the penultimate on account of the disjunctive accent, R'bhī' (see (2) in the note on p. 5). The ubhāthā is repeated, because

11 Then take silver and gold, | upon the head of Joshua the son and make crowns, and set them | of Josedech, the high priest;

the insertion of the words attāh bayyōm hakkū has separated the word too far from בית. In such a case, if we are to translate the idiom of one language into that of the other, the vāv would be best rendered into English by "I say": thus, "and thou thyself shalt enter that same day, thou shalt enter (I say) into the house of, &c." (comp. vii. 3, viii. 23, 2 Sam. xiv. 4).—On the dagesh in בית see Excurs. III. 1.—On the construction of בית with the verb בוא &c. see note on xi. 13. Grammatically it would be possible to render אֲשֶׁר-בָּאוּ "into which they have entered," viz. the house. But, since "from Babylon" follows, such a rendering would be harsh. It would perhaps be better, therefore, to refer this relative sentence to the persons mentioned in the first half of the verse, and to translate it "who are come from Babylon." But this construction is, also, inelegant.

κότων αὐτῆν, translating the names. יְהִי they took as a plur. (comp. xi. 17); but why they should have given it the meaning of ἀρχόντων it is difficult to imagine. Tōbhiiyyāh they read as מְנֻבֵיהָ and referred the suffix to gōlāh: and y'da'yāh as יְדַעֶיהָ. Field (Hexapla) notes that some copies give the words as proper names; but this, no doubt, is to be accounted for as a later attempt to correct the LXX. text from the Hebr.—Aquila gives them as proper names.—shēr bā'ū LXX. read in the singl., and make it agree with Yōshiiyyāh, τοῦ ἡκοντος. Might bā'ū, perhaps, have been intended to refer to Yōshiiyyāh, and have been attracted into the plural by the number of the names which precede?

On the tone of v'lāqachtā, v'āšīthā, v'samtā see p. 5.—On the metheg on cēseph-v'zāhābh see Excurs. II. A. 2.—On the sh'va under the vāv of v'zāhābh see note on xiv. 4.—Since the Prophet has used no pronoun after v'samtā it is impossible to say for certain whether עֲטֹרוֹת means "crowns," or a "composite-crown" (comp. māch'lāzōth iii. 4). The latter seems the more probable conjecture, because (α) but one head is mentioned, on which "tārōth should be placed, (β) the word is construed (ver. 14) with a singular verb following it, and moreover, in Job xxxi. 36 אֶעֱרֹנֶנּוּ עֲטֹרוֹת לִי "I would

12 And speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the LORD;

bind it me as a crown," it seems to be used of a single crown, or fillet. This word (in the singl.) is sometimes used of a royal crown, e.g. (2 Sam. xii. 30) עֲטֶרֶת־מַלְכָּם "their king's crown" (on the methey see Excurs. II. A. 2). LXX. have here στεφάνους.

אִישׁ not "the man," but "a man of distinction" (comp. Is. xxxii. 12, Zech. viii. 23), אִשְׁרָף (but see note on xiii. 5).— וְ is placed before mittachtáv because the preceding clause includes the idea of some such word as בָּא "is coming" (see note on ii. 10).—מתחתיו denotes "from his place," the expression is found again only in Ex. x. 23, comp. tachtéhā "in her place" (Zech. xii. 6, xiv. 10).—Observe the intentional use of the verb yisgmách with the name Çémach.—The verb בָּנָה is used figuratively, comp. (Gen. xvi. 2) אֵילֵי אֲבֵנָה "perhaps I shall be built up of her." The expression hēcdl YHVH is also used figuratively (see Remarks below), as are also בֵּית י' (Hos. viii. 1), and בֵּיתִי (Hos. ix. 15, Numb. xii. 7), viz. of the spiritual community of Israel (comp. οἶκος Θεοῦ Heb. iii. 6, 1 Tim. iii. 15).

The הוּא is in both cases emphatic, and is used to distinguish Çémach from the crowned High-Priest, who merely pre-figured him. The verse should be rendered: "Yea He will build the temple of YHVH [i.e. He will be the true builder], and He will bear majesty, and will sit and rule upon His Throne, and will be a Priest upon His Throne, and a Counsel of Peace will be between Them twain." The expression בֵּין שְׁנֵיהֶם is difficult. We see no way of interpreting it, except of the only two Persons mentioned in the verse, viz. YHVH and the Priest-King (but see Versions and Remarks). We should rather have expected the expression בֵּינוּ וּבֵין אֱלֹהֵינוּ "between Him and His God": as the words stand they must have sounded most enigmatical to the Prophet's hearers.—רוֹדֵן, while it is employed in a variety of other significations, is especially used of royal majesty (Ps. xxi. 6, Jer. xxii. 18, Dan. xi. 21).—It seems more natural to take the suff. of cis'ō "His throne" as referring to the Subject of the whole sentence, than to refer it to YHVH. כִּסֵּא (which seems to have been originally a quadrilateral, comp. Arab. cursiy, Syr. cūrsyō) means an ordinary seat (1 Sam. i. 9, iv. 13), where it is accidental that it was a High-Priest who is mentioned as sitting on it. But the word is used chiefly of a royal throne, e.g. דִּבְנֵי כִסֵּא (Gen. xli. 40), כִּסֵּא מַמְלַכְתּוֹ (Deut. xvii. 18), &c.—כֹּהֵן sometimes means “a prince” (as in 2 Sam. viii. 8), but the expression “High-Priest” (ver. 11) precludes that interpretation here.—Another rendering of the last half of the verse is grammatically admissible, viz. “And there shall be a priest near his throne, and a counsel of peace shall be between them twain” (comp. LXX.). For this use of עַל comp. iv. 14. This rendering has one advantage over the other, viz. that the interpretation of bēn sh'nēhēm is rendered easier, by supposing the King and the Priest to be different persons. But, on the other hand, since the construction of v'hāyāh is exactly the same as that of v'yāshābh and umāshāl, it seems much more natural to suppose that the subject of v'hāyāh is the same as that of the other verbs (see Remarks).

14 And the crowns shall be to Helem, and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, for a memorial in the temple of the LORD.

Targum paraphrases ver. 12 thus: “Lo the man, The Messiah His name, is destined to be revealed and anointed [comp. Verses 12, 13. Targ. Y., Lev. iv. 3, &c.], and shall build the temple of Versions. YHVH.” The next verse is literally rendered, as we have done (but there are two readings “and shall be a High-Priest,” or “and shall be a ministering Priest”). Syr. omits the last words of ver. 12 ubhānāh eth-hēcāl YHVH, while LXX. omits the first words of ver. 13 v'hū'yibhnēh eth-hēcāl YHVH: both translators seem to have regarded the words as dittographed, through their not having observed the emphatic force of הוּיָא.—For the last half of ver. 13 LXX. give καὶ ἔσται ἱερεὺς ἐκ δεξιῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ βουλή εἰρηνικὴ ἔσται ἀνὰ μέσον ἀμφοτέρων, substituting עַל יְמִינוֹ for כִּסֵּא עַל, and regarding Ἀνατολή and ἱερεὺς as two different persons.

חֲלָיִים seems to be simply a corruption of חֲלָיִי (ver. 10). One of David's heroes was called Cheldáy (1 Chron. xxvii. 15), and this name is written חֲלָיִי (1 Chron. xi. 30), and חֲלָיִי Verse 14. Words and LXX. (2 Sam. xxiii. 29). Here the same name has become חֲלָיִים: for the interchange of ב and מ comp. דִּיבֹן (Is. xv. 2) and דִּימוֹן (ver. 9); בְּרֵאדָךְ (2 Kings xx. 12) and מְרֵדָךְ (Jer. l. 2); and the explanation of the name בְּלֵאב (2 Sam. iii. 3), as meaning מְכַלִּים “causing shame,” given in Talm. Babl. Bracoth 4^a.—LXX. render the name by τοῖς ὑπομένουσι, reading it as חָלַם pres. partic. of חוּל, in the sense of מִיחָלִים, comp. וַיַּחַל (Gen. viii. 10).—לחן may be rendered, as by LXX., εἰς χάριτα or “for Chén,” another name for Yōshiyāh (ver. 10), so Targ. But Syr. reads as in ver. 10.—For tzicārōn LXX. εἰς ψαλμόν, either translating conjecturally, or reading זכרון as זמרון; similarly the two readings בֶּן-עֲשָׂרִים וְשָׁתַיִם שָׁנָה (2 Kings viii. 26) and בֶּן-אַרְבַּעִים וְשָׁתַיִם שָׁנָה (2 Chron. xxii. 2) are supposed to have arisen from a confusion between כ' 20, and מ' 40.

In spite of the contrary opinion being expressed by such Hebr. commentators as Rashi, Qimchi, &c. we maintain that to render וְהָיָה as equivalent to וְהָיָה לָכֵן “and this shall happen unto you” is contrary to the usage of the language. The expression v'hāyāh im shāmō' tishm'ūn seems to be borrowed directly from Jer. xxxi. 24, where (as in every other passage where a similar expression occurs, viz Deut. xi. 13, xxviii. 1, Ex. xv. 26, xix. 5, xxiii. 22) there is an apodosis. Consequently, unless with Hengstenberg we look on this verse as an abrupt aposiopesis, we have no choice but to regard it as a case of a lacuna in the text (פסקא באמצע פסוק), see Josh. iv. 1, &c.), the existence of which has not been handed down by Tradition.

Zechariah is now commanded to go to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah, who was entertaining certain Jews, who seem to have come from Babylon with gifts and offerings for the House of the LORD. From these men he was to take gold and silver, and to cause to be made thereof a composite diadem, with which he was to crown Joshua the High-Priest. We cannot, of course, venture with EWALD to insert the words “and upon the head of Zerubbabel” after the words “upon the head of Joshua”; and to insert the name “Joshua” in the clause “and will be a priest upon his throne.” Even if such an arbitrary alteration of the text were admissible, it would be most inappropriate.

vi. 9-15.
Remarks.

For, as PUSEY has well remarked, had a crown been placed on the head of Zerubbabel, such an act would have aroused false hopes in the minds of the people of a restoration of the temporal kingdom, which had already been finally abolished (Jer. xxii. 30, Ezek. xxi. 31, 32). The crown was removed "until he should come whose right it is," viz. "the king who shall reign in righteousness" (Is. xxxii. 1) "and prosper," as "a Branch of righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 5). Since Zerubbabel is not even mentioned in this passage, Joshua himself must have felt that the Prophet's words referred to One greater than himself, and that the building spoken of was a spiritual one, to symbolize which the material building was allegorically introduced.—The interpretations of ver. 13 are various—we will note the chief of them. HITZIG holds that the Messiah and an ideal priest are referred to in the clause "counsel of peace shall be between them both." But we cannot see how the thought of some ideal priest and king, who would coincide in some unity of purpose, could have occurred to the minds of the Prophet's hearers. There would be, moreover, no special reason for speaking of unity as existing between a king and a priest: for, as a matter of history, the priests and kings were seldom at variance, though the prophets and kings were frequently so. ROSENMUELLER considers that the offices of priest and king are alluded to. But "a counsel of peace" could not be spoken of as existing between two abstracts. KEIL takes the words as referring to the two characters of ruler and priest combined in the person of the Messiah. But in this case the clause would be superfluous. Why should there not be unity between two such characters combined in one such person? KOEHLER thinks that the reference is to the two offices of the Messiah, and that the prophecy speaks of a plan devised by the Messiah in His double character, whereby peace and salvation should be secured to His people. But this is in accord with the modes of thought of neither Old nor New Testament. Such an idea would have been incomprehensible to the Prophet's hearers; and in the N. T. any such unity of design for the salvation of mankind is spoken of as existing between the Father and the Messiah (not between two of the offices of the Latter), e.g. John vi. 38, x. 15—18, iii. 16, 17, Col. i. 19, 20. The opinion of JEROME, VITRINGA, PUSEY, WRIGHT, &c., is that which we have adopted above in our notes. Seeing that the regal dignity of the Messiah must have been generally recognised in the Prophet's time (see Jer. xxiii. 5, &c.), and that, from Ps. cx. the combination of the priestly with the kingly office in the person of the Messiah must have been expected by his contemporaries, it seems to us that they would have understood the Prophet to have referred to the same person as "sitting and ruling upon his throne," and as "being a priest upon his throne": and that, however they may have taken the words of Isaiah ix. 6, "Wonder Counsellor, El gibbor, Abhi Olam, Prince of Peace," such words must have somewhat prepared them for the statement, "the Counsel of Peace shall be between Them twain." To us, who have the advantage of later revelation, there is a fitness apparent in the phraseology, which would have been hidden from them.

CHAPTER VII.

AND it came to pass in the fourth year of king Darius, that the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu; 2 When they had sent unto the house of God SHEREZER and REGEM-MELECH, and their men, to pray before the LORD, 3 And to speak unto the priests

THE BETHEL DEPUTATION (chaps. vii. viii.).

בְּנִסְלֹו "viz. in Cislév." The usual constr. is that of i. 7 הוּא חֲדָשׁ 7 שְׁבַט "that is the month Sh'bhát." B'cislév is in apposition with לְהֵרֵשׁ, comp. such a construction as לִבְנוֹ לְיוֹסֵף (Gen. xlvii. 29), where the noun in apposition is repeated with the same preposition that is prefixed to the noun with which it is in apposition. But since the ל of lachódesh is used only because it is preceded by the number of the day of the month, Cislév takes ב "in," avoiding the somewhat awkward construction with ל "of."—וַיִּשְׁלַח "then there sent" seems to denote an event subsequent to the revelation spoken of in ver. 1. Comp. 1 Kings xiv. 5, where the prophet Ahijah receives warning of the coming of the wife of Jeroboam.—Béthél seems to stand for "the inhabitants of Bethel," just as "Jerusalem" often means "the inhabitants of Jerusalem." שְׂרָאֲזַר Baer edits correctly with ש (not שׁ); it is mentioned as a name of one of the sons of Sennacherib (Is. xxxvii. 38), and Nergal-Sarezer occurs (Jer. xxxix. 3). The name is Assyrian [Nirgal]-sar-usur "May [Nirgal] protect the king" (Schrader). Ewald and Koehler take the clause "Sarezer, and Regem-melec and his men" as in apposition with Bethel, and look on these persons as being some of the chief inhabitants of Bethel, who sent the deputation. Keil, on the other hand, takes the clause as the acc. after the verb vayyishlách, and regards these names as those of the deputation sent. It is true that in the very similar passage (Jer. xxvi. 22), וַיִּשְׁלַח הַמֶּלֶךְ יְהוֹיָקִים אַנְשִׁים מִצְרַיִם אֶת-אֶלְנָתַן ... בֶּן-עַנְבּוֹר וְאַנְשִׁים אֲתוּ, the particle אֶת is prefixed to the names of the people sent; but it is not absolutely necessary that it should have been expressed, though certainly the presence of the particle makes the sentence much clearer.—Vayyishlách is in the masc. sing. agreeing with the subject nearest to it, comp. וַתְּדַבֵּר מְרִים וְאֶדְרוֹן (Numb. xii. 1).—וְאַנְשֵׁי אִשֶּׁר עִמּוֹ comp. But no reason can be assigned for such a deputation being sent to Bethel, for we have no reason for supposing that "the priests belonging to the House of the LORD Q'bhā'ōth" (ver. 3) dwelt specially at Bethel.—Bēthēl, though it means lit. "House of God," is never used to denote the Temple, which is called בית יי, or בית האלהים.—The phrase פני יי... ויהל occurs as early as Ex. xxxii. 11.

Infin. constr. as להִלָּחם (Ex. xvii. 25, &c.), or Infin. absol. as הִפְרַת תְּכַרַת (Numb. xv. 31). But it is evidently the absol. here, since that is the form used (without ל) to express what in Latin would be the gerund in do, and in Engl. the pres. partic. "separating myself": comp. Gen. xxi. 16 ותִּלְךְ ותִּשָּׁב לָהּ... הִרְחַק "and she went and sat down, removing herself."—Zēh comp. i. 12.—On כמה see note on ii. 6. Baer points it here cammēh, and in ii. 6 cammāh; *Cod. B'cislēn, ὅς ἐστι Χασελεῦ, following the ordinary construction.—For Régem mélec Ἀρβησεῦρ ὁ βασιλεύς, it seems probable that Ἀρβησεῦρ represents the numeral "fourteen" ארבעה LXX. בארבעה, Aram. Arbésar. The ארבע is easily accounted for from בארבעה above, and the עשר was perhaps deduced from the אצר of שראצר. The whole runs thus in LXX. : καὶ ἐξάπεστειλεν εἰς Βαιθὴλ Σαρασάρ καὶ —וּסְפֹר may be taken in two ways, either as the absol. Infin. emphatic for וּסְפֹר סִפְדָתֶם “and did mourn” (comp. note on iii. 4), or sāphód means “mourning,” see note on hinnāzér (ver. 3), and the ׀ denotes “even,” or “yea,” as in וּוְהָ which follows (see note on iii. 2); according to the latter explanation we should render v'sāphód “yea mourning”: comp. (Hag. i. 6) וְרַעְתֶּם מַעַט הִרְבָּה וְהִבָּא מַעַט.—הִרְבָּה וְהִבָּא מַעַט is very well rendered by the E. V.—With צִמַתְנִי comp. (Ezek. xxix. 3) וְאֲנִי עָשִׂיתִנִּי “and I made it for myself,” (Is. xlv. 21) לֹא תִנְשֵׁנִי “thou shalt not be forgotten by me” (ēnī being for lī; on ל denoting the agent after a passive see on Ps. cxi. 2); גִּדְלֵנִי (Job xxxi. 18) “grew up with me” should rather be compared with Ps. v. 5 (see p. 27, last line). For the emphatic repetition of the pronoun in the separate form after a dativál suff. compare לָשֶׁת גַּם רוּא אַתֶּם לָכֵם אַתֶּם (Hag. i. 4), and with gām לָשֶׁת גַּם רוּא אַתֶּם (Gen. x. 21).—V°cí thōc'lá “and when ye eat,” comp. 8 And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying,

9 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Execute true judgment, and shew mercy and compassions every man to his brother:

10 And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor; and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

ואתהברול נפל אל-המים there can be no doubt about את being used for emphasis before the subject of a verb (even when not a passive): moreover in viii. 17 we have an exact parallel. In the verse before us we have (h^olō) eth-hadd'bhārīm “(are not they) the very things?”, and then follows the relative governed directly by a verb “shér qārā” “which He proclaimed.” So in viii. 17 we have (ēi) eth-col-ēlleh “(for) all these very-things (are they),” and then follows “shér s̄ānēthī” “which I hate.”—B'yād “by means of,” as (Is. xx. 2) בְּיַד יִשְׁעִיהוּ.

Two renderings, both of which are equally admissible, have been proposed for the following clauses, viz. “when Jerusalem was inhabited, and at peace, and her cities round about her: and the South, and the Lowland was inhabited”: and “when Jerusalem was dwelling in security, and her cities round about her: and the South, and the Lowland dwelling (similarly)”; but see p. 15. V'hannégebh stands for ובריות הנגב.—Observe that the predicate yōshēbh is in the masc. sing.; comp. (Prov. xxvii. 9) שֶׁמֶן וקמֶרֶת יִשְׂמַח לֵב “oil and perfume rejoice the heart.”—

The Négebh is the southern district of Judah extending to Beersheba (Josh. xv. 21 sqq.).—The Sh'phēlālāh (Σεφλάα 1 Macc. xxii. 38) is the Lowland district of Judah, towards the west (Josh. xv. 33 sqq.).

Q'bhā'ōth tōw dυνάμειων.—V'zēh shūbh'īm kai idōv ēβδομήκοντα. There is also in ver. 3 a reading idou for ēδη (Field).—H^olō eth-hadd'bhārīm oūx oūtoi oī lōgoi;—Hann'bh'īm hār'ishōn'īm LXX. rightly here tōw pποφητῶν τῶν ἔμπροσθεν (see p. 7).

Mishpāt 'méth “true judgment”: in viii. 16 we have “méth umishpāt shālōm” “truth, and justice which tends to peace,” comp. Verse 9. “sāth shālōm (vi. 13).—Sh'phōtū is the correct pausal form of shiph'tū (viii. 16).—īsh eth āchīv “with one another” (see next verse).

āl-tā^ashōqū on the methegs see Excurs. II. B. 3 and A. I. 6.—The expression ורעת איש אחיו אל-תשבו requires some Verse 10. explanation.—āchīv is in apposition with īsh, and īsh means “each,” and so īsh āchīv in Gen. ix. 3 means “each his brother,” that should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts.

11 But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear.

13 Therefore it is come to pass, is "each other." But here it does not mean "each his brother," but "each your brother," i. e. "one another"; because, seeing that no such formula as (רעד or) אחיך... איש is used, the expression איש... רעדו (or אחיו) comes to be used for the second as well as the third person e. g. (iii. 10) תקראו איש לרעדו. Now, ish āchiv is the objective gen. after rā'āth, and so the whole expression rā'āth ish āchiv means "evil against one another." In this collocation it is impossible to take ish as the nom. (LXX.) καὶ κακίαν ἕκαστος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ μὴ μνησικακέτω. But in the more simple and ordinary construction (viii. 17) ואיש ואתחשבו את-רעת רעדו אל-תחשבו, ish is the nominative. We need not lay more stress on the expression each his brother (either here or in Gen. ix. 3), than to remember that this Hebrew expression, and others like it, arose from the ethical truth of the brotherhood of all mankind, which is an essential principle of the Hebrew Scriptures. The idiom was afterwards applied to the brute creation and to things inanimate.

This is merely a variation in vocalization, but no Aramaism, though it is true that in Syr. an initial א (when pronounced) has always a vowel.—נִשְׁמָה is the 3rd pers. perf. from שָׁמַם, the fem. partic. would be נִשְׁמָה.—Shammāh is a subst. meaning "a desolation."

The וְיָדִי of ver. 13 and the nāshammāh of ver. 14 show that יִקְרְאוּ אֶשְׁמַע and וְאִסְעֵרֶם are *past*s. They should be rendered "So they kept calling" (comp. note on i. 5) "and I would not hear...but I scattered them (on several occasions)."—עַל is used, and not בֵּין, because the countries of the nations are especially thought of here, comp. In Ex. xxxii. 27 we find the Imperatives עֲבְרוּ וְשׁוּבוּ "pass ye up and down" (through the camp): in Ezek. xxxv. 7 the participles עֹבְרֵי וְשׁוֹבֵי denote "all inhabitants." This latter is the meaning here, "so that there were no inhabitants," the מן being privative, comp. (Jer. xlvi. 2) מִגּוֹי. In ix. 8 we have exactly the same expression מִעֹבְרֵי וּמִשׁוֹבֵי, but there the מן is used in the sense of "on account of," and the expression denotes "on account of him [or the army] that passeth up and down [the country]."—אֶרֶץ הַמְדָּה is a reminiscence of Jer. iii. 19, and is now looked on as a sort of proper name, hence the omission of the art., comp. Çémach (iii. 8, vi. 12).—The ordinary constr. in prose of יִשְׂיָם (which may be taken as Hiph., or as Qal like יִבְיִן) is, as here, with the acc. of the thing made, and ל of that into which it is made, as (Gen. xxi. 18) לְגוֹי גָדוֹל אֲשֵׁמֶנּוּ “I will make him into a great nation.”

Thus עִיר הָאֱמֶת means “City of Truth,” הַר הַקֹּדֶשׁ “Mountain of Holiness.” There is no word in Bibl. Hebr. for “true” (though there is נֶאֱמָנָה “faithful,” cf. קְרִיָה נֶאֱמָנָה Is. i. 26), so that if the prophet had wished to say “the true city” he could only have used the expression which he has here. But, on the other hand, there is an adj. “holy,” so that had he meant to say “the true city, the holy mountain,” he might have written instead of hár haqqódes הַר הַקֹּדֶשׁ הַקֹּדֶשׁ.—LXX. πόλις ἀληθινή...ὄρος ἅγιον.

It generally means "happened" (Judg. xix. 30), "was caused" (1 Kings xii. 24), "was undone," i.e. "went off" (of sleep, Dan. ii. 1), or (into a swoon, Dan. viii. 27). In Joel ii. 2 לֹא נָהִיָּה means "was not," and so here. Observe that the tense of אִין is decided by the context.—מִן "on account of" (comp. ix. 8).—הַצֵּר "the enemy," from צָר (Is. v. 30), Rt. צָרַר (comp. גָּן from גָּנַן, רַע from רָעַע), the qāmāṣ is on account of the disjunctive accent.—וַאֲשַׁלַּח is the correct reading (not וַאֲשֵׁ). Some of these cases, in which we have và when we should have expected vā, may be explained as being the Imperf. of repeated action, as וַאֲנַרֶשׁ (Judg. vi. 9) "and I kept driving them," וַאֲשַׁלְּחָהָ (xx. 6) "and kept sending her" (comp. Zech. vii. 14). But others can only be explained as instances of anomalous vocalization as וַאֲנַתְּחָהָ (Judg. xx. 6) "and I cut her in pieces," וַאֲמַתְּתֵהוּ (2 Sam. i. 10) "and I slew him." Vā'shallāch... v'rē'chū render "and I kept letting loose all men against one another."

11 But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts.

12 For the seed shall be prosperous; the vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

13 And it shall come to pass, that as ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel; so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing: fear not, but let your hands be strong.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts, and I repented not:

"I will be"; there is no need with LXX. to supply any such verb as ποιῶ.—כי "for" introduces an assurance in proof of the statement of ver. 11. Zéra' hashshālôm "the seed [which flourishes only in times] of peace," viz. haggéphen "the vine." In Jer. ii. 21 the word zéra' "seed" is used of שורק (see p. 12) in the expression זרע אמת "genuine seed" (the καλὸν σπέρμα of Matt. xiii. 24). For cī zéra' shālôm Syr. gives "for the seed shall be in peace." LXX. ἀλλ' ἢ δείξω εἰρήνην, cī might possibly stand for כִּי אֵם (as in Gen. xxxi. 16 after a negative sentence); but here there is hardly sufficient contrast between the two sentences to justify this rendering. For זרע they read possibly ארע, Hiph. of ירע, which they render by δείκνυμι in Gen. xli. 39, &c.

In the passage (Is. iv. 1), which our Prophet seems to have had in mind, the number seven is used in this sense.—The expression l'shônôth haggôyîm "languages of the nations" is formed after הגוים והלשנות "the nations and the languages" (Is. lxvi. 18), comp. To each of these ארבע כנפים the ציצת was attached (Numb. xv. 38): this was the distinctive visible sign of an איש יהודי. C'z "that" is omitted after shāmā'nū probably because עἰ "for" immediately precedes it; on the other hand we have (2 Kings xix. 8, Is. xxxvii. 8) כי שמע כי נסע מלכיש "For he had heard that he was departed from Lachish."

This mission took place B.C. 518, in the second year after the resumption of the work of rebuilding the Temple (Hag. i. 15), and about two years before its completion (Ezr. vi. 15).—"Two hundred and twenty-three men of Bethel and Ai" had returned "to Jerusalem and Judah, every one to his own city" (Ezr. ii. 1, 28). the eleventh year of Zedekiah (Jer. lii. 5—7): (9th) Abh, when the Temple was destroyed by Nebuzar-adan in the 19th year of Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. lii. 12, 13, 2 Kings xxv. 8—10): (3rd) Tishri when Gedaliah was assassinated (2 Kings xxv. 25, Jer. xli. 2—6) B.C. 587: 10th Tebheth, when Nebuchadnezzar began to lay siege to Jerusalem (2 Kings xxv. 1, Jer. xxxix.) in the ninth year of Zedekiah. (The number of the day of the month is placed in brackets, where from the Biblical account there is some doubt as to the exact day.)—The people of Bethel seem to have been the representatives of all the people, at all events the reply is given to the whole nation (vii. 5). Though the mission came in the ninth month, no question was asked about the fast of the tenth month, but only about that of the fifth month. The reason of this appears to be, that the fast in Abh being in mourning for the destruction of the Temple, it was natural that, now the rebuilding of it had progressed so far, they should inquire whether that particular fast should be kept. The Prophet in his first reply mentions also the fast of the seventh month, which was kept in memory of the assassination of Zedekiah, which took place soon after the destruction of the Temple. The 70 years to which he refers are those between the 7th month B.C. 587 and the 9th month B.C. 518. He does not, even in viii. 19, give a definite answer to their question, but warns them against the sins which brought about the deportation of the nation, and promises that their land shall once more be fruitful and prosperous, and their fasts be turned into feasts, if only they will “love Truth and Peace.”—Chap. viii. closes (ver. 20—23) with the promise of a glorious future for Israel, in many nations uniting themselves to them to serve the One Only God; comp. Mic. iv. 2, Is. ii. 2, 3, xlv. 14, and Zech. ii. 10—12, xiv. 16—19. Ver. 23 must not be taken as a direct prophecy of the coming of our Lord, for the expression “a man a Jew” is used in the singular merely for the sake of contrast with the “ten men from all languages of the nations,” and in reality denotes not an individual Jew, but the whole Jewish nation (see Is. xlv. 14). At the same time the adoption of Christianity (the true development of Judaism) by the Gentiles was a distinct fulfilment of this prophecy.

CHAPTER IX.

THE burden of the word of the LORD in the land of Hadrach, and Damascus shall be the rest thereof: when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD.

מִשָּׁנָה, which first of all means “a burden,” comes afterwards to be

Verse 1. Words. very commonly used of “an oracle” or “prophecy” (comp. especially Jer. xxiii. 33—40), and that, generally, of a threatening character. The Root is נָשָׂא “to take up”; as a man takes up a burden, so a prophet is said in Hebrew to “take up” his speech, compare (Numb. xxiii. 18) וַיִּשָּׂא מִשְׁלוֹ “and he took up his parable.” It is only in the post-exilian prophets (Zech. ix. 1, xii. 1, and Mal. i. 1) that מִשָּׂא is followed by דָּבַר. In Arabic the conjugation, corresponding to the Hebrew Hiphil, of the verb nasha-a means "to lift up," (Hebr. נָשָׂא) and from it is derived a substantive inshā, which means "composing," "reciting," or "composition."—חֲרָרֶךְ (some MSS. read חֲרָרֶךְ) is the town and district Ha-ta-ri-ka, near Damascus and Hamath, which is mentioned in several Assyrian inscriptions (Schrader).—In מִנְחָתוֹ the u is long, and merely written defectively (see note on i. 13); the metheg is placed in accordance with Excurs. II. A. 1. The word denotes "its (i.e. of the oracle of the Lord) resting-place or goal."—אָדָם denotes "mankind"; there is no need (with J. D. Michaelis) to read אָרָם "Syria," in which case אָרָם עֵין would mean "the whole face of Syria"; comp. Ex. xx. 15, Numb. xxii. 5, 11. (Baer has accidentally עֵין).

The ב of b'erec denotes "against," as (Is. xxi. 13) מִשָּׂא בְעֵרֵב "the prophecy against Arabia"; but usually massá is put in construction with the noun following, e.g. מִשָּׂא בְּבָל (Is. Constructions. xiii. 1).—כִּי לֵי עֵין אָדָם seems simply to mean "for to the LORD shall the eye of men be directed," comp. (Ps. cxxiii. 2) "As the eyes of servants are unto the hand of their masters...so are our eyes unto the LORD (אֵל יי)"; only there it is in expectation and here in amazement, &c. It is true that "eye" is here in the singular; but that is an unimportant difference, comp. (Ps. xxxiii. 18) עֵין יי אֵל-יִרְאוּ with lxxxiv. 16) עֵינֵי יי אֵל-צְדִיקִים.—וְעֵין כָּל stands for כָּל.

Massá LXX. λήμμα, comp. 4 Kings ix. 25. Aq. ἄρμα. LXX. usually ὄρασις (Is. xiii. 1), ὄραμα (xxi. 1), or ῥήμα (xiv. Versions. 28). Chadrac LXX. Σάδραχ. Δαμασκού the locative "in Damascus." For m'nūchāthō θυσία, reading (since the ū is written defectively) מִנְחָתוֹ.—διότι K. ἐφ' ἧρᾶ ἀνθρώπων κ.τ.λ. taking אָדָם as the obj. gen. Observe that תִּנְגַּבְל־בְּהָ (as also וְתִצְבַּר-כֶּסֶף in the next verse) has ga'yā (Excurs. II. B. 7).—כִּי is a particle which is capable of various significations (see Dictionaries): here it seems best to take it in the sense of "although," as (Ex. xiii. 17) כִּי הוּא

This verse is somewhat elliptical, the style of this passage being highly poetical. The meaning is that “also against Hamath Tyre and Sidon is the prophecy”; or that “also Hamath Tyre and Sidon shall be its resting-place.” Before tiḡbol-bāh the relative must be understood, thus: “Hamath which borders thereon (viz. on Damascus),” as (Gen. xxxix. 4) כַּל-יִשְׁלֹו = כַּל-יִשְׁלֹו (of the next verse).—Chàc'máh LXX. plur. ἐφρονήσων.

Root is צור. But in the expression מְצֹר הַיָּם “fortress of the sea,” which is an appellation of Tyre in Is. xxiii. 4, the word מְצֹר does not lose its qāmāç in the construct form because it comes from Root צון (see Jennings and Lowe on Ps. xxxi. 2). The word Māçór is chosen, of course, on account of its similarity of sound with Çór “Tyre.”

And in this latter sense it may be here used “her hope is dried up.” But it is better to suppose the root to be used in the sense of בּוֹשׁ “to be put to shame,” “be disappointed” (Joel i. 11, &c.), since such interchange of roots with one weak letter is one of the commonest phenomena of the Hebr. language (and indeed of Semitic languages generally, even as early as Assyrian), see pp. 30, 46.

It is impossible to discuss all the theories which have been propounded with regard to the time of the composition of different parts of Zech. ix.

Remarks. —xiv. We will content ourselves with mentioning here the chief arguments, which have been adduced to prove the pre-exilian authorship of ix. 1—8. (1) It has been argued, that Zech. ix. 1—8 is so like to Amos i.—ii. 6 (delivered in the early part of Uzziah's reign, i.e. a few years after b.c. 810), that it seems impossible that two prophecies so similar should have been uttered at periods so wide apart. Now, the only similarity between these two passages is, that in both Damascus, Tyre, Gaza, Ashdod, Ashkelon, and Ekron are threatened. The dissimilarity, however, is much greater. (a) In Amos we find the Ammonites, Edomites, and Moabites also mentioned, but not so in Zechariah. And this is most natural, for, while in the time of Uzziah these were still powerful nations, on the return from the captivity they were so weak, that when in the time of Nehemiah “Sanballat and Tobiah, and the Arabians and the Ammonites and the Ashdodites” all conspired to hinder the Jews from rebuilding the Wall of Jerusalem, it was found sufficient to repel them that half of the returned exiles should stand to arms, while the other half went on with the work of building. (β) Amos expressly states that Aram-Damascus should be carried away to Kir, while there is no such intimation in Zech. ix. (γ) Amos speaks of Judah and Israel as separate kingdoms, to be subjected to the same judgments as the other nations, while in Zech. Israel is but one nation (comp. ver. 13 and Remarks there), and is assured of God's protection. (δ) The style of the two passages is not similar. That of Amos i.—ii. 6 is of a marked character, but we find no echo of that style in Zech. ix. 1—8. (ε) It has been urged that this oracle speaks of several cities and kingdoms as independent, which had lost their independence, before the period of the return from exile. Thus Damascus lost its independence when Tiglath-Pileser overthrew Syria in the beginning of the reign of Ahaz, and Hamath was subdued to the Assyrians in the time of Hezekiah. (The reference to Tyre and Sidon is admitted by the objectors to afford no clear indication of the early date of the prophecy.) We may reply simply, that Jeremiah prophesied against Damascus and Hamath even after Nebuchadnezzar had overrun their territories (Jer. xlix. 23—37), and Jeremiah (xxv. 20) and Ezekiel (xxv. 15—17) denounced judgments on the Philistines, so that it is not strange that a post-exilian prophet should speak in general terms of the disasters, which would overtake these nations, when the Medo-Persian empire should be overthrown by the Greeks.—(2) The prophecy has been supposed to allude to the immunity experienced by Jerusalem during the irruption of Rezin king of Syria and Pekah king of Israel into the territories of Judah (2 Kings xvi. 5), as well as during the wars with the Philistines which occurred during that period (2 Chron. xxviii. 18), and it is further argued that ch. xi. 14 shows that the struggle between Judah and Israel is looked on as already begun, at this time when the Prophet threatens Damascus (ix. 1). The denunciations against Tyre are to be viewed as naturally arising out of the sale of the Israelite captives at that period by Phœnician merchants (Joel iii. 4—6). But (a) if this were the case it would be most difficult to account for the omission of any notice of the far more important enemies of Judah at that period, viz. Ammon (2 Chron. xxvi. 8, xxvii. 5), Edom and Moab (Amos i. 11—15, ii. 1—3), and Arabia (2 Chron. xxvi. 7). (β) The dissolution of the brotherhood between Israel and Judah is in xi. 14 (see Remarks) distinctly spoken of as in the future. If, then, that passage refers to the revolt under Jeroboam, it must have been written at a time prior even to 975 B.C., when Damascus was still included in the kingdom of Solomon, and such threats against Syria would have been meaningless.—But the strongest argument against such theories is, that to no period of history does this prophecy (ix. 1—8) apply so exactly, as to the conquests of Alexander the Great in 333 B.C. The chief points of the prophecy are, judgments on Syria and Philistia, and the burning of Tyre; the removal of the king from Gaza, the desolation of Ashkelon, the introduction of a mixed race into Ashdod, and the eventual fusion of the Philistines with the Jews; the protection of Israel amid their confusion. Now, when Alexander had completely shattered the might of Persia, in the battle of Issus, he marched into Syria. He sent a strong detachment under Parmenio to operate against Damascus, and himself with the main body marched against Tyre. And this mighty stronghold, which had stood a five years' siege from the Assyrians, and a thirteen years' siege from the Chaldeans, was taken by Alexander in seven months, and then (as Q. Curtius says) "having slain all save those who fled to the temples, he ordered the houses to be set on fire." No special mention, it is true, is made of Ashkelon and Ekron in the accounts of the march of Alexander, but Gaza fell after a siege of five months, and Hegesias (a contemporary of Alexander) especially mentions that "the king of Gaza was brought alive to Alexander. The breaking up of petty nationalities and the fusion of races was part of the policy of Alexander." But no mention is made of any great conversion of the Philistines to the Jewish religion at this period. While, as late as 1 Macc. x. 83, we hear of a temple of Dagon at Ashdod being destroyed by Jonathan, after that time the Philistines disappear as a separate people, and the name of their country "Palestine" became used as the designation of the whole land. It seems best, therefore, to adopt the view of KOEHLER, that "the prophecy does not merely delineate the events connected with the triumphal progress of Alexander, but predicts the general events which followed the Greek conquest of Palestine, inclusive of the various wars which occurred in the latter days of the Grecian supremacy" (comp. Remarks on ver. 9—17). The word Y'bhusi seems to be parallel with alluph, and not contrasted with it: therefore, one would suppose it to mean either "Jebusite," in reference to the fact that "they dwelt with the children of Judah in Jerusalem" (Josh. xv. 63); or "Jerusalem itself," in which sense the word is also used (Josh. xviii. 63); and not as equivalent to "Gibeonites" or "Nethinim" who held a servile position (Josh. ix., Neh. x. 28, 29, Ezr. viii. 20, &c.). The promise of protection to Israel given in ver. 8 was signally fulfilled, when Alexander, according to the well-known story (see my Memorbook of Nürnberg, p. 20), spared Jerusalem, and granted the Jews special favours. The meaning of the words "no oppressor (task-master) shall pass through (or over) them any more" is, that the nation would not be again reduced to the position of slaves, as they were by the Babylonians and Persians. And such was the case, for God's protecting care was over them, in fulfilment of the assurance "now have I seen with mine eyes": so that neither did Alexander, nor any of the Seleucian dynasty, ever succeed in enslaving them.

9 Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having	salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.

גִּילִי (the 2nd pers. fem. of imperative Qal of גִּיל) would according to rule be accentuated on the first syllable. But there are many exceptions to the rule (caused perhaps by considerations of euphony), thus Is. li. 9 we have עוֹרֵי עוֹרֵי 'ūrī 'ūrī, and so too in the first sentences of Judg. v. 12 'ūrī 'ūrī, and Is. xxi. 2 צוֹרֵי צוֹרֵי; while in the second sentence of Judg. v. 12 the accentuation is regular 'ārī 'ārī, as also in shūbhū (ver. 12).—הֲרִיעַ is "to cry aloud," הֲרַע "to do harm."—נִשַׁע, the Niph. partic. of יָשַׁע, can only mean "saved."—הֲמוֹרֵי is a "he-ass," אֲתוֹן a "she-ass."

The ו of ועל does not mean "and" as though he were to come riding on two animals; but "even," "namely," "yea," as Ex. xxv. 9 וכן תעשו "even so shall ye do."—בן-אתנות means lit. "son of she-asses," i. e. such a foal as she-asses in general are in the habit of bearing, comp. כַּפִּיר אֲרִיֹת "cub of lions" (Judg. xiv. 5). κῆρυσσε is not a good rendering of harī'ī. Tischf. mentions no reading ἀλάλασον. Just. Mart. (Tryph. 53) ἀλάλασον κῆρυσσε, LXX. &c. but (Apol. i. 35) only κῆρυσσε.—Cod. Alex. right, ὁ βασιλεύς σου. The translation σῶζων for nōshā' cannot be justified. παρῦς would be the correct rendering of ‘ānāw rather than of ‘ānā. Symm. πτωχός. Theod. ἐπακούων. S. Matt. xxi. 5 omits the words δίκαιος καὶ σώζων. S. John xii. 15 omits also πρᾶνς, but instead of prefixing “rejoice greatly, cry out” he says μὴ φοβού, while S. Matt. puts εἶπατε τῇ θυγατρὶ Σιών, which has been thought to be borrowed from Is. lxii. 11.

Baer edits וְהִבְרַתִּי with the accent on the ultimate (comp. note on i. 3); but some editions have וְהִבְרַתִּי-רַכֵּב, with maqṣef (hyphen), which, of course, takes the accent off the word which precedes it (Excurs. II. A. 2).—Three perfects Pi’el בָּבֶס, דָּבַר, and כָּפַר take segōl in the last syllable (as a rule), unless they be in pause.—מִשְׁלוֹ mo-sh’lō (Excurs. I. 7. γ) is the infin. Qal with suffix.

καὶ πλῆθος καὶ εἰρήνη, reading the last ר of dibbēr as a ו, and joining it to the next word: thus making וְרַב וְשָׁלוֹם out of וּדְבַר שְׁלוֹם. For miyyām “from the sea,” they read מִיַּם máyim “waters,” ὕδατων.

The preceding verse concludes with a description of the glory of the King; but the glory was not to be his exclusively, therefore גַּם אַתָּה “even thou” is prefixed as a nominativus pendens to recall the attention to Israel, spoken of in ver. 9 under the figure of Báth Çiyyón and Báth Yrúshāldáim. The ב of בָּרַם denotes “in consideration of,” as in (Gen. xviii. 28) בְּחַמְשָׁה “in consideration of the five.”—Between בּוֹר and אֵין the relative אֲשֶׁר is understood, comp. note on ver. 2.

בְּצָרוֹן is a ἄπαξ λεγόμενον meaning “fastness” (LXX. ἐν ὀχυρώμασι) from בָּצַר “to cut off,” comp. עִיר בְּצוּרָה (Is. xxvii. 10) עִיר מְבִצָּר (Josh. xix. 29) “fortified city.”—אֲסִירֵי הַתְּקוּהָה “ye prisoners of hope,” i.e. ye who are still prisoners in Babylon, but have a great hope set before you.—גַּם הַיּוֹם “even to-

As in Hab. i. 5 the participle פועל borrows the pronoun of the first person sing. from הנני of the next verse, so does מגיד here from the דרכת’ of ver. 13.—משנה often means “second”; but here it means “double,” as (Is. lxi. 7) משנה (bosh-t’cém) תחת בְּשִׁתְּכֶם “instead of your shame, double.”

καθήσασθε, reading shúbhū (from שוב), as Sh’bhū (from ישב).—

miqvéh or miqváh “a gathering together” (1 Kings x. 28, &c., Is. xxii. 11), instead of תקוה.—Instead of maggíd we have (by interchange of ’ and ’, and of ’ and ’) māgūr παροικεισίας.

ךך is the ordinary verb used of “bending” a bow. But the expression מִלֵּאתִי אֶפְרַיִם is very difficult. In the connection one naturally thinks of the phrase מִלֵּא יָדוֹ בַקֶּשֶׁת

(2 Kings ix. 24) “he filled his hand with a bow,” i. e. he took a bow in his hand; but the phrases are not parallel. In the absence of any parallel we must be guided by the sense, and take the verb מלא as denoting “filling” the bow with an arrow (as we speak of loading a gun), i. e. setting an arrow on the string (for which the proper expression is יָתַר עַל יָתַר Ps. xi. 2), and render the verse: “For I will bend me Judah as a bow, and set Ephraim in it [as an arrow].” The verbs here (as also shilláchtī in ver. 11) are in the Prophetic Perfect.

For sámti “I have placed, i. e. rendered, made,” reading máshti (in ἀπειλῆς αὐτοῦ, reading אימה ēmāh "enmity," for תימן Tēmān "South." (Possibly also taking the final ך for ך and reading ēmō = ēmāthō, see note on iv. 2.)

16 And the LORD their God shall save them in that day as the flock of his people: for they shall be as the stones of a crown, lifted up as an ensign upon his land.

17 For how great is his goodness, and how great is his beauty! corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids.

כִּצְאֵן עַמּוֹ “his people like a flock”; hardly “as the flock of his people”: though either translation is grammatically admissible.—After כִּי we must understand the pronoun הֵמָּה “they are” or “they shall be,” comp. Ps. xxii. 29 [הוּא] וּמוֹשֵׁל בְּנִגְוִים, and so frequently. The Hithpolel הַתְּנוּסָה (Root נָסַם “a standard”) occurs only here and in Ps. lx. 6. With so few data it is impossible to be confident as to the exact meaning of the word, but it evidently means here either “to be lifted up” or “to glitter,” and in any case to “be in some manner gloriously conspicuous.” We would render, therefore, the clause “For [they shall be] as the stones of a diadem set up on high (or glittering) over His land.”—מִתְּנוּסָתָא ought to have ga'yā under the מ because of the disjunctive accent (Excurs. II. B. 3).

Abh'né nézer is rendered λίθοι ἄγιοι, and so in vii. 3 הַקִּיּוֹר is read

LXX. han-nézer, and rendered τὸ ἄγίασμα, comp. (Lev. xxi. 12) τὸ ἄγιον ἔλαιον, for nézer shēmen.—Mithnōs'sōth they transl. κολίονται.

The suffix of עַמּוֹ and אֲדַמְתּוֹ (ver. 16) refers to God, and so one would naturally have understood the suffixes טוֹבוֹ and יָפִיו

Verse 17. in that sense also. But, since יָפִי (יָפִי) Ezek. xxviii. 7)

“beauty” is never attributed to God, it is better to take the suffix of tūbhō and yophyō as referring to “His people.” טוֹב denotes here “goodliness.” מַה is here an exclamation of admiration, as (Gen. xxviii. 17) מַה-נּוֹרָא “how terrible!”, (Numb. xxiv. 5) מַה-טוֹבוֹ “how goodly are thy tents”; on the dagesh after מַה see Excurs. III.—בְּחֻרִים is the plur. of בְּחֹר “a youth”; while בְּחֻרִים is the plur. of בְּחֹר “chosen” (and also means the “age of youth” like זְקֵנִים “old age,” נְעֻרִים “childhood,” עֲלֻמִּים “youth,” &c.). The change of the first qāmāç into pathach is remarkable, the nearest parallel that we can adduce is אָח “brother” plur. אָחִים (comp. also Job xxxi. 24 מִבְּטָחִי (Baer, not מִבְּטָחִי); יָמָה Ps. cix. 13): observe that in all the cases, it is before η that the shortening takes place.—יִגְבַּב (only here is the Pölel) “shall make to grow (or increase),” comp. חֵיל כִּי יִגְבַּב “wealth, if it increase” (Ps. lxii. 11, comp. xcii. 15).

מֶה is taken in the indefinite sense “whatever” (comp. 2 Sam. xviii. 22, and p. 46), and so the translation runs $\delta\tau\iota\ \epsilon\lambda\tau\iota\ \alpha\gamma\alpha\theta\acute{o}\nu$ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔτι καλὸν αὐτοῦ. Y'nōbhēbh is rendered $\epsilon\upsilon\omega\delta\iota\acute{\alpha}\lambda\omega\nu$. LXX.

This passage is now generally admitted to be Messianic. It falls naturally into two sections. The coming of the King (ver. 9, 10); and the return of the exiles, their glorious victories over the Greeks, and their consequent peace and prosperity (ver. 11—17). Zion is now called on to rejoice in the approaching advent of her long-promised King. And what are His characteristics? He is Righteous (comp. Is. xxxii. 1, liii. 11, Jer. xxiii. 5, 6, &c.), but He is also “afflicted” (comp. Is. lii. 14—liii. 11, Ps. cx. 7), and yet “saved” (see Is. liii. 12, and comp. Ps. cx. 7 with Phil. ii. 7—9, comp. also Acts ii. 23, 24, Eph. i. 19—23, Rom. i. 4). He comes with no military pomp, with neither chariots nor horses, but unostentatiously riding upon a colt of an ass; for, this avoidance of vain display is a mark of the “Servant of YHVH,” who “shall not cry, nor lift up nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets” (Is. xlii. 2, comp. Matt. xii. 15—21). At that time the chariot shall be cut off from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem (comp. Mich. v. 9, rather than iv. 3 and Is. ii. 4), which seems to imply that the military power of the nation should have ceased, for He is to be a Prince of Peace, speaking peace to the nations, and establishing His spiritual kingdom (in description of which the old terms used of the territory promised to Israel, Ex. xxiii. 31, comp. Ps. lxxii. 8, Eccclus. xlv. 21 are applied) even to the ends of the earth. The prophecy was, doubtless, fulfilled by our Lord, when He rode into Jerusalem on (the day now called) Palm-Sunday. But He fulfilled it more in spirit than to the letter. That He did not fulfil it literally is sufficiently shown by the fact, that the King is here described as already “saved and afflicted,” whereas, in the case of our Lord, His entry into Jerusalem took place before His Passion and before He was “saved” by being “raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father” (Rom. vi. 4). But in spirit He most truly fulfilled it, generally by His whole life of humility, and in particular on that day by illustrating, both to friends and foes, by His symbolical act of riding into Jerusalem on an ass, that His kingdom is not of this world.

But this prophecy was not to be immediately fulfilled. The nation had yet severe sufferings to endure and triumphs to achieve, viz. in those struggles with the “sons of Greece,” which render the Maccabean period (b.c. 167—130) one of the most noble pages in Jewish history. Those, who still remained in the land of their exile, are exhorted to come forth (comp. ii. 7—13), confident in the help of the LORD of Hosts, who would wield the reunited Judah and Ephraim (comp. Is. xi. 13) as His weapons of war (comp. Jer. li. 20): He Himself will appear as their champion, with the rolling of the thunder as His war-trumpet, the forked lightning as His arrows, “the wild storm blowing from the southern desert, the resistless fury of His might.” And then, when they had fought the good fight, and not before, God promises “the flock His people” the blessings of peace (ver. 16, 17).

[It has been urged as an objection against the post-exilic authorship of this passage that "Ephraim" and "Jerusalem" are mentioned, as though Israel were still separated from Judah. But, on the contrary, Ephraim and Jerusalem are here strictly parallel terms, as are also "Judah" and "Ephraim" (ver. 13), where both are represented as equally opposed to the sons of Javan. The nation was now one (Ezek. xxvii. 22) and known by the names of "Israel" (xii. 1, Mal. i. 1, 5), "all the tribes of Israel" (ix. 1), also the "house of Judah" (x. 3, 6), "house of Joseph" and "Ephraim" (x. 6, 7), besides by those terms mentioned on p. 21. For, now that the "dead bones of the whole house of Israel" were revived (Ezek. xxvii. 11), and "my servant David" was about to be "King over them" (ver. 24), the prophecy of Ezekiel (ver. 16—22) was fulfilled, and the staves (tribes, shibh'ete) of Joseph and of Judah had become one in God's hand. Hence the interchangeable terms.]

שָׁאֵל, pathach (not chiriq) is the proper vowel for the first syllable

to the 2nd fem. sing., 2nd masc. plur. of the Imperative of verbs medial guttural, as בָּהֲרוּ, זַעְקוּ, שָׁעֲמוּ, רַחֲצוּ.

שָׁעֲרוּ; but אָהֲבוּ, because of the initial א, comp. אָהֲוּ. — הוֹזִיִּים means

"lightnings" (Job xxviii. 27, xxxviii. 25) which precede the rain.—

In um'far-géshem, Géshem the consequent, as is usual with two nouns in construction, qualifies the antecedent. Thus m'far-géshem denotes

"a pouring rain," so מֵיִן מֵיִן (Ps. xl. 3) means "the clayey mud";

in Job xxxvii. 6 we have גִּשְׁם מִמָּטָר, and then גִּשְׁם מִמְּרוֹת עֵינַי.—

Instead of להם one would have expected לכם "to you"; but a sudden change of person is most common in Hebrew, e.g. in Mal. ii. 15.—

לְאִישׁ means "for each one," i.e. "for every one" (comp. Gen. xlii. 45 and Zech. vii. 10, viii. 4, 17).

B'élh is taken as the absolute, καθ' ὄραν: and πρώϊμον καὶ is introduced before malqósh "latter rain," borrowing, probably, from Deut. xi. 14, Jer. v. 24.—Ch'zizim is rendered φαν-τασίας.

LXX.

2 For the idols have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have told false dreams; they comfort in vain: therefore	they went their way as a flock, they were troubled, because there was no shepherd.
--	--

הוּוּ יִשְׁקֶר, the 3rd plur. perf. הוּוּ being from הוּוה (see note on ix. 15) ought to have been accentuated on the last syllable, but it Verse 2. has been drawn back because the next word is accentuated with a great disjunctive accent of the first syllable. Observe in this verse the interchange of the Perfect and Imperf., merely for the sake of variety of sound.—יִנְחֲמוּן the Piel imperf. 3rd pers. plur. The ordinary form is יִנְחֲמוּ, in pause יִנְחֲמוּ; but, since here the verb ends in ך and the last syllable thus becomes closed, and having a long vowel must needs take the accent (Excurs. i. 8), we get יִנְחֲמוּן with metheg under the ך in accordance with Excurs. ii. A. 1. The form ending in ūn is shown by a comparison with the kindred languages to be older than the shortened form in ū. Hence it is incorrect to call this an additional nun (נון נוספת).—ענדה in the Qal, Niph'al, Pu'al and Hithpa'el is used in the sense of "to be afflicted."

T'rāphīm is variously rendered by LXX., here οἱ ἀποφθειγόμενοι, in Gen. xxxi. 19, 34, 35 by εἶδωλα.—For nās'ū ἐξηράνθησαν; but ed. Compl. reads ἐξηθσαν, which would represent the LXX. Hebr. well enough. For "shepherd" (rō'ēh) īaosis, reading rōphēh רִפָּה "healer."

The first two verses of this chapter seem to be closely connected with the last two of the preceding chapter. In x. 17 it is promised that corn and wine should make the youth of Israel to flourish. Here the people are exhorted to pray to the Lord to send the latter rain. It is probable, since the prophet mentions only the latter rain, that he was prophesying between the times of the former rains (Marcheshvan and Cislew), and the latter rains (Nisan). (For the months see p. 10.) Against the post-exilic origin of this passage, and of xiii. 2, it has been objected that, the mention of idols and false prophets harmonizes only with a time prior to the captivity. It is perfectly true that after the captivity idolatry was not, as it had been before, the crying sin of the nation. Still, even if the Prophet be not here reverting to sins of the past which had caused the exile, a reference to Ezr. ix. 1, 2, Neh. vi. 10—14, xiii. 23, 24, Mal. iii. 5, 2 Macc. xii. 40, Acts v. 36, 37, xiii. 6, Josephus, Bell. Jud. vi. 5, § 2, 3, will clearly show how suitable warnings against idolatry and witchcraft might be, even after the return from captivity. With this passage comp. Jer. xiv. 22.—"Because they had no shepherd" might mean "for want of a good monarch" (comp. Ezek. xxiv. 5, 8);

Remarks.
x. 1, 2.

3 Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds, and I punished the goats: for the LORD of hosts hath visited his flock the house of Judah, and hath made them as his goodly horse in the battle.

4 Out of him came forth the corner, out of him the nail, out of him the battle bow, out of him every oppressor together.

5 And they shall be as mighty men, which tread down their ene- but it cannot mean "because they had no native king"; for they did not go into captivity because they had no king, but on the contrary, they lost their king because they went into captivity. We think, therefore, that the paraphrase of the LXX. "because they had no healer," i.e. because the True Shepherd of Israel had ceased to guide and protect them, might possibly be defended.

Observe the change of tense from chārāh to ephqōd, which is simply, as we hold, for the sake of variety (comp. note on ver. 2).
 Verse 3. Constructions. The difference between pāqād 'āl "he punished," and pāqād followed by the acc. (as in Ex. iii. 16), is here very decidedly marked.

יְהִי is an adverb, "altogether." It occurs also in the simple form Verse 4. יְהִי, but when it has the suffix it is always יְהִי, or יְהִי. Possibly in an earlier stage of the language it was regularly declined. In support of this theory of original declension, we may remark that such words as לְבַד "alone" are actually declined לְבַדִּי, לְבַדִּי, לְבַדִּי, לְבַדִּי. Similarly in Arabic dhā means "this" and dhāka "this-there." This latter in old classical Arabic is declined, in speaking to one man, dhāka; to one woman, dhāki; to two persons, dhākumā; to several men, dhākum; to several women, dhākunna. But as a rule the simple undeclined form dhāka is used.

Pinnāh "corner" is read as pānāh "he turned," and rendered ἐπέ-LXX. βλεψε (so p'nōth (Mal. ii. 13) ἐπιβλέψαι).—Yāthēdh "nail," ἔραξε. We saw (ix. 12) that LXX. confound ת and מ, so perhaps they read יַמַּר, and understood it as יַעֲמִיד (comp. יַהֲלֵל = יַאֲהֵל Is. xiii. 20) a verb which is translated by the verb τάσσω (2 Chron. xxxi. 2). Milchāmāh ἐν θυμῷ reading מְלַחֲמָה, and taking מְלַ as equivalent to לְמֵן (xiv. 10), for מֵן in the sense of "on account of" (ii. 8).

בּוֹסִים is the pres. partic. of בּוֹס, from which we should expect Verse 5. בּוֹסִים, but we find also קוֹמִים (from קוֹם) 2 Kings xvi. 17, and (naturally enough) בּוֹשִׁים (from בּוֹשׁ not בּוֹשׂ) Ezek. xxxii. 30.

mies in the mire of the streets in the battle: and they shall fight, because the LORD is with them, and the riders on horses shall be confounded.

6 And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the LORD their God, and will hear them.

7 And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the LORD.

8 I will hiss for them, and gather

Since בּוֹם is elsewhere construed with a simple acc., it will be best here to render: "And they shall be like heroes trampling [their enemies] into the mire of the streets."—וְרוֹבִישׁוּ "and shall be ashamed (see notes on ix. 5 and 8).

וְהוֹשְׁבוֹתֵימָם is a fusion of הוֹשְׁבוֹתֵימָם "I will make them to dwell"

(Hiph. of יָשַׁב), and הִשְׁבוֹתֵימָם "I will make them return" Verse 6.

(Hiph. of שׁוּב ver. 10). The verb is probably intended to have the latter meaning. In Semitic languages the different forms of verbs are often confounded (see notes on ii. 17, iv. 10, ix. 5); nor are we free from such mistakes in English: thus people often say "he lay" for "he laid"; "he flew" for "he fled."—כַּאֲשֶׁר here means "as though" "quasi," as (Job x. 19) כַּאֲשֶׁר לֹא־הָיִיתִי "as though I had never been"; more usually it means "as" "sicut," or "when" "quum" "postquam."

רַחֲמֵימָם ἡγάπησα αὐτούς, comp. ἀγαπήσω τὴν οὐκ ἡγαπημένην (Hos. ii. 23 [25]); but Hos. i. 6 οὐκ ἠλεημένην.

LXX.

From שָׂמַח and שָׂמְחוּ we may observe that there are two forms of the Perfect of this verb, שָׂמַח and שָׂמַח (comp. p. 70). Verse 7.

In pause all forms from strong verbs take the accent on the second root-letter, unless a long vowel in a closed syllable at the end of the word draw it away (see on ver. 2). יִגַּל לָבָם "let their heart rejoice." Comp. the exclamation (Ps. xxii. 27) יְהִי לִבְנֵכֶם לְעֵד.

On the form אֲשַׂרְקָה see p. 6 and note on viii. 21. For this use of the verb comp. Is. v. 26, vii. 18.—וְרָבוּ כְמוֹ רָבוּ may mean "and they shall multiply as they did multiply [formerly]." Verse 8. see Ex. i. 12. Or, better, it is to be taken as an idiomatic expression them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased.

9 And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again.

10 I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them.

“they shall increase as they increase”—i. e. “they shall increase to any extent”; this latter is certainly the meaning of the expression in more modern Hebrew. For the promise comp. Jer. xxiii. 3, Ezek. xxxvi. 11.

Imperfects, which have pathach in the second syllable, change it into Verse 9. qāmāç before a suffix, as אֲרָעִים, אֲרָעִים. —Observe the doubling of the last root-letter in the plur. מְרַחֲקִים “distant places” (see note on i. 15). The sing. of our word is always מְרַחֵק with e in first syllable; but the plur. has also pathach in Is. xxxiii. 17, Jer. viii. 9 (see notes on vi. 1, ix. 5).—וְחָיו אִתָּךְ “and shall live with.” וְחָיו, the ך is pointed with qāmāç to prevent the concurrence of two accentuated syllables. This takes place here although hém has a disjunctive accent (Tiphchā), comp. (Job iv. 16) : דְּמַמָּה וְקוֹל אֲשַׁמֵּעַ, while more commonly a preceding disjunctive prevents the vāv from taking qāmāç, as ... וַיְהִי בְרֶדְר וַיֵּשׁׁ (Ex. ix. 24).

LXX. ἐκθρέψουσι τὰ τέκνα αὐτῶν, reading instead of chāyū, חָיו chīyū, the Pi'el.

לֹא יִמְצָא lit. “shall not be found,” meaning “there shall not be Verse 10. room enough,” comp. Josh. xvii. 16, where, however, רָדַר is the subject of the verb. Some take the verb here as impers., others understand מקום. In Qal מִצָּא לֵאמֹר means “to reach to” (Is. x. 10), then “to suffice” (Numb. xi. 22), comp. ικνέομαι and ικανός. (See also note on xi. 6.)

ὑπολειφθῆ taking yimmāçé somewhat in the sense of נִשְׂאָר, or
 LXX. נֹתַר “be left,” or of נִפְקַר (Numb. xxxi. 49), or נֶעְדַר (2 Sam. xvii. 22) “be missing,” or “left behind.”

11 And he shall pass through the sea with affliction, and shall smite the waves in the sea, and all the deeps of the river shall dry up: and the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart away.

12 And I will strengthen them in the LORD; and they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the LORD.

As far as the form of יִם is concerned, it might be the construct, e.g. יַם־פְּנִינֹת (Numb. xxxiv. 11), in fact the construct is Verse 11. more commonly יַם־ than יַם . But the def. art. here prefixed to it precludes this interpretation. We must, consequently, translate צָרָה as in apposition with יַם "through the trouble-sea" (comp. p. 44), the passage of the Red Sea being referred to as a symbol of other sufferings and deliverances.— הַיָּבֵשׁ is very usually construed with ב .— גְּלִיּוֹת must be taken as a second object, or "acc. of limitation."— וְהַבִּישׁוּן is intrans. see note on ix. 5.

For $\epsilon\nu\ \theta\alpha\lambda\acute{\alpha}\sigma\sigma\eta\ \sigma\tau\epsilon\nu\eta$ to be correct the Hebrew should be בַּיָּם הַצָּרָה . For $h\ddot{u}r\acute{a}d$ these translators give $\acute{\alpha}\phi\alpha\iota\rho\epsilon\theta\acute{\eta}\sigma\tau\alpha\iota$, and so (Ex. LXX. xxxiii. 5) $\acute{\alpha}\phi\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\sigma\theta\epsilon$ stands for $h\ddot{o}r\acute{e}d$.

On the metheg of $y\ddot{i}thhall\acute{a}c\ddot{u}$ see Excurs. II. B. 4. Observe that Hithpa'els and Hithpolels take $q\ddot{a}m\acute{a}q$ in pause, not $q\ddot{e}r\acute{e}$, Verse 12. e.g. הַתְּהַלֵּל (Prov. xxxi. 30), הַתְּכַנְנֶנּוּ (no $ga'y\ddot{a}$ Excurs. II. B. 4. 3). If the second root-letter be ח , the preceding vowel becomes seg\ddot{o}l, as יִתְנַחֵם (Deut. xxxii. 36).

$\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\kappa\alpha\upsilon\chi\acute{\eta}\sigma\omicron\nu\tau\alpha\iota$ for $y\ddot{i}thhall\acute{a}c\ddot{u}$, which they read $y\ddot{i}thhall\acute{a}l\ddot{u}$, ל being mis-read for ב , as in Hos. xiii. 13 בֵּן בִּן לֵא is rendered $\acute{o}\ \acute{v}\acute{i}\acute{o}\varsigma$ LXX. $\sigma\omicron\nu$, as though it were בְּנֵיכָה , i.e. בְּנֵיכָה for בְּנֵיךָ .

"The shepherds" (ver. 3) are the native rulers and spiritual guides (as in Jer. ii. 8, xvii. 16, xxiii. 1—4; Ezek. xxxiv. 2, &c.); and not foreign rulers and oppressors (as in Jer. vi. 3, 4, xxv. 34—38, xlix. 19). "The he-goats" are to be identified with "the shepherds," or perhaps rather to be regarded as leaders subordinate to them (comp. Ezek. xxxiv.) "Out of him" means probably "from Judah," i.e. the nation in general, or from Judah as the royal tribe; the latter supposition is hardly probable, however, since the Macca-beans were not of the tribe of Judah, but of Levi. Thus, apparently, "shepherd" is used here in a different sense to that in which it is used in the preceding verse. Similarly, noges is not used here in the same sense as in ix. 8. It can here mean only a "native ruler," or "one who will oppress" [or subdue] "the heathen."—"Corner-stone" denotes "a chieftain" (1 Sam. xiv. 38, Is. xix. 13, and so too "nail" (Is. xxii. 23).—The whole of this passage is closely connected with ix. 11—15, the verses ix. 16, 17, x. 1, 2 being only a slight digression.—Vers. 5—7 are parallel with ix. 13—15.—The expression "as though I had not rejected them" seems clearly to point to a time when the captivity had already taken place.—Ver. 8—12 have been looked on as decided evidence in favour of the pre-exilic origin of the passage. But, (1) the reference in ver. 11 to the passage of the Red Sea shows that, if we please, we may regard the other expressions as figurative, viz., that Egypt is mentioned merely as the typical oppressor of Israel (Hos. viii. 13, ix. 3), as the Exodus is ever looked on as the typical deliverance (e.g. Is. xi. 16); (2) Assyria may be mentioned rather than Babylon or Persia, because thither the ten tribes (Ephraim) had been carried away; or Assyria may actually mean Persia, as in post-captivity times the king of Persia is also often called the king of Babylon (e.g. Ezra vi. 22, 2 Kings xxiii. 29: Judith i. 7, ii. 1, Herod. i. 178—188); (3) it must not be forgotten that but a small portion of the nation had as yet returned under Zerubabel, and that viii. 8 (not to mention ii. 10—17) is quite as expressive of a restoration in the future as this passage, and yet the genuineness of neither ii. 10—17 nor of viii. 8 has ever been called in question (see Introduction).

CHAPTER XI.

הִלֵּל imperative of יָלַל (see the substantive in next verse). The singular imperative only occurs once again, viz. Jer. xlvi. 2, where it is הִלֵּל.—On the names of the trees consult the Dictionaries.—אִשֶׁר is here (as in Hos. xiv. 4, &c.) equivalent to כִּי "for"; in the latter part of the verse and in verse 3 we actually have כִּי (comp. note on viii. 20).—יַעַר הַבְּצִיר (q'rî) means "forest of the vintage," which does not give good sense. יַעַר הַבְּצִוֵּר (C^ethibh), taking bāçûr as a pass. partic., with the article exceptionally prefixed to the epithet only (see note on iv. 7), would mean "the inaccessible forest." Or, we might consider בְּצִוֵּר as a substantive (like פְּכוֹד), in which case the construction would be more regular, and the meaning the same; but the word bāçôr does not occur elsewhere.

3 There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled: a voice of the roaring of young lions; for the pride of Jordan is spoiled.

4 Thus saith the LORD my God; Feed the flock of the slaughter;

(p. 28).—אֲדָרְתָם, fem. nouns like מְלַחְמָה, יִבְשֶׁת, צִעֲרָת, Verse 3. Words. which have one syllable followed by הָ, תָ, or ת־, harden the ת in taking the suffixes, as מְלַחְמָתוֹ: and also nouns which consist only of two such syllables as the two last mentioned, as נִשְׁבָּתוֹ, נִשְׁבַּת; דַּעְתּוֹ, דַּעַת; דְּלָתוֹ, דְּלַת (2 Kings xii. 10)—instead of the Q^{ri} דְּלָתָה (Is. xxvi. 20), one would prefer the C^{thibh}, and read, as here (ver. 1), דְּלַתֵּיךְ.—"The Jordan" is never called the river Jordan, but simply הַיַּרְדֵּן "the descender" (on account of its physical peculiarities; comp. Stanley, Sinai and Palestine, London, 1875, p. 284). LXX. for Ya'ar habbāqōr gives ὁ δρυμὸς ὁ σὺμφυτος. שְׁאוֹן φύραγμα as in Jer. xii. 5.

These three verses are regarded by BLEEK as a prophecy of the campaign of Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria, against the allied forces of Syria under Rezin, and of Israel under Pekah. Very similar terms are certainly used by Isaiah in reference to the march of an army, viz. that of Sennacherib (2 Kings xix. 23, Is. xxxvii. 24). But the wording of Zech. xi. 1—3, which in some points reminds one of Jer. xxv. 34—36, is so vague, that, if it refer to an invasion at all, it would be equally applicable to any which came from the north, whether Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian, Greek, or Roman. Consequently, although we admit that it would make no perceptible difference to the interpretation of this chapter if this passage were removed, we do not feel that it contains any such internal evidence as would compel us to refer it to pre-exilian times.—Some have looked on these verses as descriptive of a storm bursting over the land from the north.—The Talmudic tradition (T. B. Yoma 39^b) is that the passage refers to the destruction of the Second Temple.—If we are to consider these verses as an integral portion of the chapter, we may say that ver. 1—3 announce in general terms (perhaps under the figure of a storm) the judgment that was coming on the land of Israel, while ver. 4—17 describe the causes which would ultimately bring about this visitation.

הַרְרָה see Excurs. II. A. 6, n.B.—With the expression Ḥōn hāh^o-rēgāh comp. (Ps. xliv. 23) צֵאן טְבַחָה and (Ps. lxxix. Verse 4. 11, cii. 21) בְּנֵי תְמוֹתָה.

5 Whose possessors slay them, and hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell them say, Blessed be the LORD; for I am rich: and their own shepherds pity them not.

6 For I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD: but, lo, I will deliver the men every one into his neighbour's hand, and into the hand of his king: and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them.

That קָנְיָהוּ is the plur. here is shown by the verb; but in Is. Verse 5. Words and Constructions. i. 3 בְּעֵלָיו is merely the honorific plural.—יִהְרֹגוּ. On the metheg see Excurs. II. A. 1 and 6 NOTE. The final n is the 3rd pers. fem. suff.—יִאֲשָׁמוּ. On the dagesh see Massoreth hamassoreth, ed. Ginsburg, p. 203. The meaning of the word here is “feel themselves guilty,” comp. Jer. ii. 3, l. 6, 7.—וְאֵעִשֶׂר has the א quiescent after pathach (as in לְאֲדָנִי); but וְאֵ stands for וְאֵי (not for וְאֵי as it does in וְאֵעִנָּה 1 Kings xi. 39, or as לֵא stands for לֵאֵי in לְאֲדָנִי). The strict parallel, therefore, is rather to be found in מִלְאֲכָתוֹ (which stands for the unused מִלְאֲכָתוֹ). The chiriq is merely written defectivè (comp. ver. 8): thus the regular form of the word would be וְאֵעִשִׂיר.—Observe the masc. suffix. of רַעִיָהֶם. The sing. לֹא יַחְמוֹל after this plur. denotes that “each one of them does not pity,” comp. (Ex. xxxi. 14) מַחֲלִיֵּיהָ מוֹת יוּמָת “those who profane it, each one shall certainly be put to death,” and the sing. yōmār after mōc^rrēhén of this verse.

Ló ye'shámū oú metemélonto. Ló yachmól “lēhém ouk épaschon ouðén èp' autóis (comp. Ezek. xvi. 5); but in the next verse Ló 'echmól is rendered correctly oú féisoμαi.

מִצָּן has in Qal, among other meanings, that of “to happen to (acc.),” e.g. Gen. xlv. 34; whence the Hiph. means “to cause to happen to (acc.),” Job xxxiv. 11. Again the Niph. means “to be present” (Gen. xix. 15); whence the Hiph. has the meaning (1) “to present” “to offer to (אָל),” (Lev. ix. 12); (2) and also “to cause to come to,” “to deliver up” into the hand (בִּיד), as here and in 2 Sam. iii. 8.—אִישׁ בִּידֵרְעָדוֹ “into the hands of one another”; similarly in the fem. we have (ver. 9) תֹּאכְלֶנָּה אִשָּׁה אֶת־בֶּשֶׂר רַעוּתָהּ “they (fem.) shall eat each other's flesh.” (Comp pp. 69, 70.)

Verse 6. Words and Constructions.

7 And I will feed the flock of slaughter, even you, O poor of the flock. And I took unto me two staves; the one I called Beauty, and the other I called Bands; and I fed the flock.

לְכֹן עֲנִי הַצֹּאן, the lācēn "therefore" cannot refer to the command of ver. 4, since the consequence of that command is already expressed by the ׀ at the beginning of the sentence (see note on viii. 19). The Lesser Massoreth says that לְכֹן stands for לְכֹן (E. V., see also p. 55) i. e. "for you O...", viz. for your protection (comp. ix. 3). Or it would be possible to take לְכֹן as for לְהֵבֵן "to establish" as לְמִרוֹת (Is. iii. 8) for לְהַמְרוֹת, לְאֹר (Job xxxiii. 30) for לְהַאֲוֹר Niph., and לְבִיא (Jer. xxxix. 7, 2 Chron. xxxi. 10) for לְהַבִּיא. If lācēn is here to have the sense of "therefore," it can refer only to the preceding clause; the meanings "truly" (Qimchi), or "yea verily" (Ewald) assigned to it are questionable. Now, עֲנִי הַצֹּאן might well after the analogy of צַעֲרֵי הַצֹּאן (Jer. xlix. 20, l. 45) mean, not "the afflicted ones of the flock," but "miserable flock." In this case lācēn would refer back to the words "flock of the slaughter." Thus, we might understand the clause: "Therefore (׀) I fed the flock destined for slaughter, (therefore a most miserable flock)."—But I am inclined (seeing that cēn "niyyē haççōn" recurs in ver. 11) to suppose that the words have been accidentally introduced here from that later passage; but before the time of the LXX., see below. On the metheg under וְאֶקְהַלִּי see Excurs. II. A. 2, and B. 4 Exception.—מִקְלוֹת maqloth (for maq-q'loth) is the ordinary plural of מִקֶּל (see Excurs. iv.): the qūph (as in many words) loses its dagesh on losing its vowel; but when it retains the vowel, it does not: as מִקְלָבִים (Ex. xii. 11).—Here we have אֶהְדֶּה the constr. form instead of אֶהְדֶּה the absol., comp. (Gen. xlviii. 22) שֶׁבִם אֶהְדֶּה, and 2 Sam. xvii. 22; but it may be a rare form of absol.

For לְכֹן עֲנִי הַצֹּאן eis tēn Xanaanítiv, reading לְכֹנְעֲנִי and omitting צֹאן. In ver. 11 they seem to have read לְכֹנְעֲנִי הַצֹּאן. LXX., &c. Νό'αμ κάλλος; Aq. and Symm. εὐπρέπεια.—Chōdbh'šm σχοίμισλα. The verbs are rendered by futures.

8 Three shepherds also I cut off in one month; and my soul loathed them, and their soul also abhorred me.

9 Then said I, I will not feed you: that that dieth, let it die; and that that is to be cut off, let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh of another.

10 And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with all the people.

11 And it was broken in that day: and so the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew that it was the word of the LORD.

The LORD Himself is the Shepherd of Israel (Is. xl. 11, Ezek. xxxiv. 11—16), and the ideal shepherd “my servant David” the Messiah (Ezek.

xi. 4—7.
Remarks.

xxxiv. 23, 24) is His representative. The Prophet is now commanded to personate God in this His office of Shepherd, and to feed (i.e. to protect and take care of His flock) the house of Israel, whom their foreign rulers (their owners, sellers, and shepherds) were grinding down, “for,” saith the LORD, “I will not pity the inhabitants of the world, but will set mankind one against the other (comp. Ezek. xxvi. 30, 33), and deliver each into the hand of his king, &c.,” i.e. He would cause the world to be smitten and broken up with wars and civil tumults: this flock, then, which was “in the world,” if it were not to be “taken out of the world,” would require special protection to “keep it from the evil” (John xvii. 15). Therefore the Prophet takes two staves “Favour” and “Binders” to symbolize God’s gracious protection of His people, and the union which would exist between Judah and Ephraim (Ezek. xxxvii. 16—22).

וְאַחֲרָיִךְ is only shortened in appearance, the long chūrāq is merely written defective.—אֶת שְׁלֹשֶׁת הָרֹעִים may mean “the three shepherds,” and especially so, since אֶת is prefixed; or simply “three shepherds,” as שְׁלֹשֶׁת הָרֹעִים (1 Sam.

xx. 21); or “three of the shepherds,” as חֲמִשָּׁת הַיְרִיעוֹת “five of the curtains” (Ex. xxvi. 3).—בָּחַל occurs only here, and in the C^othūth of Prov. xx. 21 (in the Pu’al), it seems here to mean “to loathe,” בָּחִיל in Syr. means “afflicted with nausea.” For Bāch^llāh LXX. give ἐπω-

This is one of the passages which by certain commentators have been looked on as conclusive proof of the pre-exilian origin of these chapters. We proceed to give a short résumé of the opinions which have been held with regard to it. "One month" has by (α) MAURER been held to be a literal month; (β) QIMCHI takes it to mean an indefinitely short period; (γ) VON HOFFMANN thinks that each day stands for seven years, 210 years in all; (δ) WRIGHT takes "each day for a year" (Ezek. iv. 6), and so understands a period of 30 years to be signified by "one month."—The meaning of the expression "the three shepherds" will, of course, depend on the view taken of the meaning of "one month." Thus (1) CYRIL considers that kings, priests, and prophets are meant, and PUSEY "priests, judges and lawyers," who having "delivered to the cross the Saviour were all taken away (α) in one month, Nisan, A.D. 33." But the rejection of the good shepherd is spoken of by the Prophet as posterior to the cutting off of the shepherds. (2) MAURER would interpret the three shepherds of Zechariah (son of Jeroboam II.), his murderer Shallum who reigned but a month, and a third unknown usurper whose downfall speedily took place. But Shallum was certainly murdered by Menahem (2 Kings xv. 10—14), and there is no room for a third unknown usurper. (3) HRTZIG would avoid the difficulty by rendering "I removed the three shepherds which were in one month" (in support of which construction he refers, and rightly, to such passages as Ex. xxxiv. 31, Is. xxiii. 17, Ezek. xxvi. 20), and takes them to be the kings Zechariah, Shallum and Menahem, who in about the space of one month sat upon the throne of Israel. But the difficulty is really so obviated. Shallum reigned actually "a month of days" (2 Kings xv. 13), and the events referred to occupied much longer. (3) VON HOFFMANN interprets them of the three empires, Babylonian, Medo-Persian and Macedonian, which lasted 215 years from the captivity to Babylon to the death of Alexander the Great. But it cannot be shown that "a day" is ever used to represent "seven years"; nor can the death of Alexander be said to have put an end to the Macedonian empire. (4) QIMCHI explains them as Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim and Zedekiah: (5) ABARBANEL as the three Maccabees, Judas, Jonathan and Simon, but, since the cutting off of the shepherds seems to be looked on by the Prophet as an act of kindness to the flock, which only made their ingratitude the more abominable, it seems better with WRIGHT to understand the 30 years [according to (δ) the "one month"] as those between B.C. 172 when Antiochus Epiphanes desecrated the Temple, and B.C. 141 when the three alien shepherds, Antiochus Epiphanes, Antiochus Eupator, and Demetrius I., were cut off, and the last trace of Syrian supremacy was removed by the expulsion of the Syrian garrison from its fortress in Jerusalem.—But the flock were not grateful for this protection, therefore the Prophet cuts asunder the staff "favour," to indicate that God would annul the covenant He had made with the nations in behalf of His people (Ezek. xxiv. 25—28). This was fulfilled in the troubles which overtook the nation, when they became corrupted, at the close of the Maccabean period.

xi. 8—11.
Remarks.

12 And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.

13 And the LORD said unto me,

Cast it unto the potter: a goodly price that I was prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.

הָבָה, plur. Imperative masc. from יָהַב. This verb is altogether

Verse 12.

anomalous in its conjugation and accentuation. It occurs only in the Imperative. We have הָב "give thou"

(Prov. xxx. 15), and with final הָב frequently, and accentuated mil'el thus הָבָה נִבְנֶה "come (age!) let us build" (Gen. xi. 4), הָבָה תָּמִים "give a perfect [lot]" (1 Sam. xiv. 41). The fem. occurs only once (Ruth iii. 15), הָבִי (mil'el), but the plur. is (as here) milra', הָבוּ מִקְנֵיכֶם (Gen. xlvii. 16).—חָרְלוֹ is the proper Pausal form of an Imperative which takes pathach under the second root-letter, as וְחָכְמוּ (Prov. viii. 33).—After numerals higher than ten, singular nouns are generally used, therefore we have כֶּסֶף "pieces of silver," but not always, e.g. כֶּסֶף שְׁלֹשִׁים שְׁקָלִים (Ex. xxi. 32).

יֹצֵר must mean "potter" (as in Is. xxix. 16, Ps. ii. 9). When

Verse 13.
Words.

followed by an acc. (as Zech. xii. 2) it retains its participial meaning of "former of."—הַיֹּצֵר may mean "the potter" or "a potter" (see note on i. 8).—אָרָר occurs only here, and in Amos ii. 8: in the latter passage it is equivalent to אֲדָרַת (xiii. 4, Josh. vii. 21, &c.) "a cloak." Here in accordance with the ordinary meaning of the Root (xi. 2, 3), it seems to signify "glory" "magnificence."—יָקָר elsewhere means "costliness," "honour," "magnificence," here it undoubtedly means "price." The verb יָקַר elsewhere means "to be precious" originally "to be heavy"; here to "be priced" or "apprized."—מֵעֲלֵיהֶם, this is the only instance we can cite of the use of מֵעַל to signify the agent after a passive; but מִן is not uncommon in this sense, e.g. (Ps. xxxvii. 23) מִי־מִי...בִּזְנוֹנִי. Mē'al generally means "from upon" (anglicè "from off"), or "from near." For this modification of its meaning, when applied to denote "by" of the agent, compare Latin a, &c.—וּאֲקָהָה, on the termination הָ see p. 6, and on the sīmān rāphēh, see Excurs. iv. 1 (ε)—ōthō in the singular, referring to the sum of thirty pieces of silver.

אֲדָר הַיָּקָר might be rendered “magnificence of the price!”; or taking the antecedent as qualifying the consequent, as in פָּרָא אָדָם (Gen. xvi. 12) “a man as untameable as an onager,” we may render it “the magnificent price!”—In either case the expression is ironical.—בֵּית means “into the House of” (without any need of a preposition), as is frequently the case, e.g. (Gen. xii. 15) בֵּית הָאִשָּׁה, comp. xliii. 18, &c.

“Cast it to the potter...by them.” LXX. has κάθες αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸ χωνευτήριον, καὶ σκέψομαι εἰ δόκιμόν ἐστιν, ὃν τρόπον ἔδοκιμάσθης ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν.—χωνευτήριον, since (1 Kings vii. 15) χωνευτήριον, since (1 Kings vii. 15) Versions and readings.

וַיִּצְר (= וַיִּצֵר) is rendered καὶ ἐχώνευσε, it is evident that the LXX. had our reading, but that they took γῶζέρ to mean, not the workman, but the vessel in which the metal is fused, as we say a “boiler,” “wine-cooler,” &c. Καὶ σκέψομαι εἰ δόκιμόν ἐστιν, reading וַיִּצְר הַיָּקָר. For Ἡγγῶζέρ Symm. also has τὸ χωνευτήριον; but Aq. ὁ πλάστης; Syr. “the treasury,” for in Aram. an initial y is sometimes read as א, so that (without any alteration of the consonants) they may have read ῶζέρ וַיִּצְר. (For an instance of the converse viz. of א read as y see LXX. of xiv. 5.) Three MSS. of Kennicott read אֶל-הָאִצְר, and five אֶל בֵּית הַיִּצְר, both readings being, doubtless, derived from the LXX.

Since maqlē is defined by the pron. suff. ī, shēnē, which agrees with it, takes by rule the definite article (see note on v. 6).— Verse 14.

אָחָה “brotherhood” is a ἀπαξ λεγόμενον. אָב and אָח are not from monosyl. roots, their third radicals become apparent in certain circumstances. Thus their constr. is אָבִי, אָחִי, and in Aram. the plur. of אָב is אָבְהֵן with the third root-letter ה (which is always interchangeable with ו and י) clearly indicated. In the case before us the third root-letter becomes ו, and we get אָחָה. The fem. אָחוֹת “a sister” stands for אָחוֹת, and in the plur. (with suff.) the third root-letter appears sometimes as y, e.g. (Job i. 4) אֲחִיתִּיהֶם. The same letters furnish another ãπ. λεγόμε. אֲחִוּתִי "my declaration" (Job xiii. 17), which is formed from חָוָה by means of a prosthetic א.—בֵּן...וְבֵן as in Gen. i. 7, another construction is בֵּין...לְ (ibid. ver. 6).

Vã'egdã' kai àpèrrupsa (as in ver. 10). Hã'àch'vãh tñv katãschesuv reading הֲאֲחִוּתִי. Cod. Alex. has διαθήκηγν, which appears LXX. to be a correction from the Hebrew.

The Prophet, still as God's representative, demands his hire of the flock. He receives the miserable sum of 30 pieces of silver (the price of a foreign slave (Ex. xxi. 32). This he is commanded to "cast to the potter." No satisfactory explanation of this phrase can be given. It may be that "to the potter with it" was a proverbial expression for throwing away anything worthless, but it cannot be proved that such was the case. WRIGHT holds that it was thrown to a potter as one of the lowest of the labouring classes. GROTIUS explains it as indicating that God did not value the 30 pieces more than broken potters. HENGSTENBERG, trying to show that this prophecy is a renewal of Jer. xviii. 1, xix. 4, in order to justify S. Matthew's quotation of it as from Jeremiah, maintains that "to the potter" means to an unclean place, since the potter of Jeremiah, he holds, had his pottery in the valley of ben Hinnom, which had been made an unclean place by Josiah. ΚΛΙΕΡΟΤΗ regards God as the Potter, comp. Jer. xviii. 6 sqq.—The citation in S. Matt. xxvii. 9 is evidently from memory, and a free paraphrase of the original. Though this prophecy may be said to have been fulfilled on every occasion of Israel's ingratitude towards their Protector, it was most signally fulfilled, when the chief priests offered the price of a slave for the betrayal of Him, in whose rejection the ingratitude of the nation culminated.—The breaking of the bond of brotherhood between Judah and Israel is represented as succeeding the rejection of the Good Shepherd. But, as that rejection was not one single act, but the sum of many such acts, so this disseverment of the union between Judah and Israel, while it had its commencement in the confusion which followed the cutting asunder of the staff "Binders" (see above), did not reach its climax until the time of those frightful civil contests, which marked the last winter of Jerusalem before it was taken by Titus (see Joseph. Bel. Jud. v.; Milman, Hist. Jews, Bk. xvi.); MAURER, HITZIG and EWALD consider the prophecy to refer to the rupture which took place between Israel and Judah, when Pekah (king of Israel) made an alliance with Rezin (king of Syria) and invaded Judah. But history gives no indication of any bond of union existing between Israel and Judah at that period.

Verse 15. אֲחִוּתִי is a ãπ. λεγόμε., elsewhere we have אֲחִיל "foolish":
Words. comp. אֲחִוּתִי (Lam. iv. 3) and אֲחִוּתִי (Prov. v. 9).

herd in the land, which shall not visit those that be cut off, neither shall seek the young one, nor heal that that is broken, nor feed that that standeth still: but he shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces.

17 Woe to the idol shepherd that leaveth the flock! the sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye: his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall be utterly darkened.

הנער. Ná'ar means a "youth," "young man," but is never used of the young of animals. Moreover the mention of the "young" of the flock would not be suitable here, since there would be no need to "seek them," for they would remain with their dams. Hitzig proposes to read נַעַר (for נַנְעַר) Niph. partic. of נַעַר "to shake out, scatter." The only objection to this is, that all the other participles are in the fem., and this would be masc. Perhaps the explanation of Gesenius is the best, viz. that נַעַר is an abstract substantive meaning "scattering," and used for the concrete "that which is scattered" (comp. note on vi. 10).—נַצְבָּהּ the fem. partic. Niph. denotes "standing firmly," comp. הַבֵּל כָּל הָאָדָם נָצַב (Ps. xxxix. 6).—Y^calcél, the Pilpel of כָּוַל, denotes here (as in Gen. xlv. 11) to "provide with sustenance."—Uphar^sēhén is fem., the sing. being פָּרְסָהּ, elsewhere the plur. is פָּרְסוֹת, whence we conclude that the a under the פ is a "Light vowel" (Excurs. I. 5), and the sh^vā under ר consequently moving.—Y^{ph}hāréq "tear off" or "in pieces."

Hanná'ar rightly τὸ ἔσκοπισμένον. Y^calcél κατεσθύνη, somewhat similarly it is rendered Ps. cxi. 6 (Heb. cxii. 5) οἰκονομήσει, "will guide his words with discretion" (Prayer-Book Version). LXX.

On hōy see note on ii. 11.—רַעִי must mean "my shepherd," if we take אֱלִיל as an adj. "useless": because the latter has the definite article (see note on ver. 13). But if we take אֱלִיל as a substantive "uselessness" (comp. Job xiii. 4, רַפְּאֵי אֱלִיל "physicians of uselessness"), it will be the constr., with the old case ending (see p. 11). From the consideration that the expression "my shepherd" recurs in xiii. 7, we prefer the former interpretation. On the form עֵינַי עֹבֵי see p. 11.—עֵינַי יְמִין (1 Sam. xi. 2) means "eye of the right

οἱ ποιμαίνοντες taking the ἶ of ῥοῦῖ as equivalent to the plur. termination īm, comp. p. 61, and Obad. ver. 12, where, reading LXX. nocrē for noc’rō, they render ἀλλοτριών.

The “foolish shepherd” seems to denote all the misrulers of Israel from the decline of the glories of the Maccabean period to the time when they willingly proclaimed “we have no king but Cæsar.”

According to Ewald’s theory, chap. xiii. 7—9 is misplaced, and should come after xi. 17. The passage would then run: “Woe to my useless shepherd, that forsaketh the flock! A sword [shall descend] upon his arm, and upon his right eye. His arm shall utterly wither, and his right eye shall be utterly dimmed. Sword! awake! against my shepherd, and against a man, my fellow (‘tis the utterance of YHVH Ḥ’bhā’ōth). Smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered..... (8) And it shall be in all the land..... (9) ... And they shall say: YHVH is my God.” If this be the true connection, the “third part,” which was to be tried and refined, can only be referred to those Jews who embraced the pure religion of Christ, and to those who, laying aside for ever the idolatry of their ancestors, devoted themselves thenceforth to the study of the Law.

Massá d’bhár Adōnáy (see ix. 1).—על “concerning,” not here, Verse 1. “against” like the כּ of ix. 1.—Shāmāyim is the object Words and Constructions. after the active partic. nōtēh, and therefore nōtēh is in the absol. form (not in the constr. נִטָּה). In such a case we are at liberty to use the definite article before the partic. e.g. הַנִּטָּה כִּרְךָ שְׁמַיִם (Is. xl. 22), even if the object take the form of a pron. suff. as הָעֵשׂוּ (Job xl. 19) “He who made him.”—Yōçér (see notes on xi. 13).

Hinnēh ānōcī is more emphatic than simple הִנְנִי. Sām the present partic. used as a prophetic tense, parallel with אֲשֶׁם (ver. 3), see p. 36.—Sāph “a bowl” (Ex. xii. 22) makes in plur. סָפִים (Jer. lii. 19), סָפֹת (1 Kings vii. 50), comp. צַד “side,” plur. צָרִים. With sáph rá'al comp. כּוֹס הַתְּרִיעָה (Is. li. 17, 22).—Several interpretations of עַל-יְדוּרָה have been proposed. On the whole it seems best to refer the expression to the word ra'al in the former clause, and to render the second clause: "And also on Judah [shall fall this reeling] during the siege [which is to take place] against Jerusalem." Others would refer to the opening words of the chapter, and explain "And also concerning Judah [is this burden of the word of the LORD]." The rendering of the E. V. cannot be supported; that of the margin "and also against Judah [shall he be which] shall be in siege against Jerusalem," requires too much to be supplied. The explanation of Ewald "And also upon Judah shall it be [incumbent to be occupied] in the siege against Jerusalem," is grammatically correct, as he shows from the expression עֲלֵיהֶם בְּמַלְאָנָה (1 Chron. ix. 33) "upon them it was incumbent to be occupied in the work." And, if we could understand by it that Judah was to be co-operating with (not against) Jerusalem in the siege (see ver. 5), this translation would have much to recommend it. No infin. לְהוֹיֹת, or לְהִלָּחֵם, is required, any more than an infin. is wanted in the passage cited from Chronicles.

The word sáph besides the meaning of "bowl," has that of "thresh-old" (e. g. Judg. xix. 27), hence the rendering of the LXX.

ὡς πρόθυμα σαλευόμενα, and of the Syr. "a gate of fear." LXX. &c.
In the last half-verse they understand 'al as én, a certain support for which rendering might be found in such expressions as that of vii. 4 (see notes). The ב of Bammāzōb they seem to take as the so-called Beth essentialis; καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ ἔσται περιοχὴ ἐπὶ Ἱερουσαλὴμ.

observe that the Infin. absol. Qal is often used to emphasize a finite verb in a different voice, e.g. Niph. here and (Ex. xxi. 28) סָקַל יִסְקָל, comp. Job vi. 2; Pu'al, Gen. xxxvii. 33; Hoph. (Lev. xx. 9, 10, &c.).

λίθον καταπατούμενον...πᾶς ὁ καταπατῶν, since there is a great similarity between the pronunciation of ע and *ר*¹, it seems that the LXX. took the stem עמם as equivalent to רמם.—For sārôt yissārēt they give ἐμπαίζων ἐμπαίζεται, it is possible that they may have read שָׂרַק, which is used of “hissing in mockery,” Zeph. ii. 5, (LXX. iii. 1 συριεῖ).

Timmāhōn “astonishment,” “terror” occurs only here and once in the constr. (Deut. xxviii. 28) וּבַתְמָהוֹן לֵב, the verb is Verse 4. There are two forms of such words in ōn, one disyllabic as הֲשִׁבֹן, and the other, like those of this verse, trisyllabic, comp. הֲגִיין. These latter, in construct and with suffix, seem usually to revert to the other (disyllabic) form, thus we have (Is. lvii. 8) זְכָרוֹנָה zic-rō-nēc, (Lam. iii. 62) הֲגִינָם heg-yōnām, and constr. חֲזִיין chez-yōn, הֲרִיאין dir-ōn. 7 The LORD also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah.

τοὺς κατοικ. κ.τ.λ. seems to have understood אֲמָצָא as equivalent to אֲמָצָא, and the singular as used for the plural. Three MSS. do give אֲמָצָא. The Targum seems (as frequently) to combine two meanings, viz. that of Rt. מִצָּא, and of Rt. אֲמִין, and paraphrases "salvation hath been found for the inhabitants of Jerusalem" (reading לְיוֹשְׁבֵי לְיוֹשְׁבֵי). Syr. paraphrases "the inhabitants of Jerusalem have been stronger than we." Arab. "We shall find for us," after LXX.

On the metheg of כִּיּוֹר see Excurs. II. B. 9.—עָמִיר (Jer. ix. 21, Amos ii. 13, Mic. iv. 12) = עָמִיר "sheaf." The qadmā Verse 6. Words. over the א of אֲעִלָּו stands for metheg (Excurs. II. A. 9, N.B.). Since the ō of šmōl is read with the m, the š is not read, but retained (sometimes) merely because an older form of the word was sam-šōl.—סָבִיב adv. "round about" as in Gen. xxiii. 17, such adverbs were originally substantives in the acc.—Tachtēhā, lit. "under herself," i.e. "in her place" (comp. note on vi. 12).

In translating כִּיּוֹר by δαλόν (which is their rendering of אֲוִר in iii. 2), some suppose the LXX. to have taken the Hebr. word LXX. as used by metonymy for the wood burnt therein. But the rend. may be due to a confusion of letters.—Tachtēhā is rendered καθ' εἰρηγήν.

On the metheg under lō thigdāl see Excurs. II. A. 1, and for that under bēth-Dāvid see Excurs. II. A. 5. Dāvid is usually spelt כִּיּוֹר (without yūd) in the earlier books. Verse 7. Words.

Bārīshōnāh καθὼς ἀπ' ἀρχῆς. Five MSS. are said to read כְּבָרֵאשׁוֹנָה, but none of Baer's MSS. give this reading. The LXX. LXX. rendering is, probably, quoad sensum, and the prefix כ a later gloss.

The expression “as God,” or “as Gods,” being thought too strong, LXX. paraphrased it by ὡς οἶκος Θεοῦ, comp. a similar proceeding in ver. 10 and xiii. 3.

Verse 9.

The verb בָּקַשׁ baqqēsh is used of God only here, and in Ex. iv. 24.

These chapters xii.—xiv. are marked off as a distinct section by the recurrence of the expression “Burden of the word of the LORD” (comp. ix. 1, Mal. i. 1). No argument against the post-exilian origin of these chapters can be based on the frequent use of the terms “Judah and Jerusalem,” neither is it true that the author of these last chapters “nowhere mentions Israel,” as verse 1 is distinctly addressed to “Israel.” “Israel” (Zech. xii. 1, Mal. i. 1, 5, ii. 11, 16, Ezr. ix. 1, 4, 15, xi. 10, &c.) is a term constantly used in post-exilian times for the Jewish nation, and as parallel with “Judah and Jerusalem” (Zech. xii.—xiv. passim, Mal. ii. 11, iii. 4): so too “all the tribes of Israel” (Zech. ix. 1). Comp. “Ephraim” ix. 10, 13, x. 7, “Joseph” (x. 6), and “Judah” (ix. 8, 13, x. 3, 6), and “Jacob” (Mal. iii. 6, ii. 12) and see p. 21. All these were to a certain extent interchangeable terms in post-exilian times; but “Jerusalem” or “inhabitants of Jerusalem” is used especially of the inhabitants of the metropolis, as distinguished from the rest of the nation, just as a Parisian is distinguished from a Frenchman. PRESSEL considers the prophecy to refer to the repulse of Sennacherib from the walls of Jerusalem. Against this theory it has been rightly urged, that in the days of Hezekiah, when the royal house was foremost in the ranks of religious reformation, it would be strange that a prophet should speak of the house of David as concerned in the martyrdom of one of God’s prophets. MAURER places the date of chap. xii.—xiv. between the death of Josiah (xii. 11), and the capture of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans. Chap. xii.—xiii. 6 he supposes to have been written in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, when the prophet expected that the enemy would be driven from the gates of Jerusalem; xiii. 7—xiv. 21, after the battle of Carchemish, when darker fears intruded themselves upon his mind.—But there is a very strong objection against referring xii. 1—xiii. 6 to a time prior to the captivity. For how can we imagine a prophet at the time, when the house of David was the reigning dynasty, making use of such an expression as “that the glory of the house of David and of the inhabitants of Jerusalem may not be magnified over Judah”? We agree, therefore, with WRIGHT in supposing (at any rate) xii. 1—9 to refer to the period between the restoration from the captivity, and the coming of our Lord, when many nations, “Idumæans, Philistines, Arabians, Ammonites, Tyrians, Syrians, and Greeks made various attempts against the Jewish people and against Jerusalem. They are sometimes successful for a short time, but never for any lengthened period. Their attempts were always foiled, often with great loss to themselves, sometimes to their utter ruin.” It must be remembered, too, that after the time of Zerubbabel the house of David fell into comparative obscurity, and that the great leaders the Maccabees were of the tribe of Levi, and not of the house of David.

LXX. καὶ ἐπιβλέψονται πρὸς μὲ ἀνθ' ὧν κατορχήσαντο. Perhaps they read רָקַר which means to “leap” (this is the reading of one of Kennicott’s MSS.); but more probably they took ^{Verse 10.} רָקַר in the figurative sense of “insulting,” as נָקַב “to pierce” is used of “cursing.” Calvin in his Comm. on S. John took this view of the Hebr. verb, and said “metaphorice hic accipitur confixio pro continua irritatione”; but this sense of the verb is not supported by usage. Besides this passage and xiii. 3, the word occurs only in Numb. xxv. 8, Judg. ix. 54, 1 Sam. xxxi. 4, 1 Chron. x. 4, Is. xiii. 15, Jer. xxxvii. 10, li. 4, Lam. iv. 9, in all of which (except perhaps Jer. xxxvii. 10, where at any rate it means “severely wounded”) it denotes “to thrust through” so as to kill. The only passage which could be cited to justify a figurative meaning of the word is Prov. xii. 18, where the substantive madq’rôth is used, יֵשׁ בֹּטָה כְּמַדְקָרוֹת הָרֵב “ [the words of] an idler-talker are sometimes like sword-thrusts: but the speech of the wise is healing.” But there, the gnomic nature of the composition, and the use of the comparative כְּ, prepare one for the figurative use of the word. Such is not the case here.—Aq. σὺν ᾧ ἐξέκέντησαν (but then he gives σὺν for the ēth of Gen. i. 1!). Theodotion καὶ ἐπιβλέψονται πρὸς μὲ εἰς ὃν ἐξέκέντησαν. Syr. and Vulg. “et aspicient ad me quem confixerunt.” All the ancient versions, as we see, read אָלִי, not אֲלִי

(which is however the reading of some MSS., though the great majority, and all the best, read אֱלֹהִים). S. John xix. 37 and Rev. i. 7 cannot be looked on as positive evidence in favour of the reading אֱלֹהִים, because, not the actual words, but merely the sense of the passage seems to be given in those two places. The reading אֱלֹהִים has, however, been supported by Kennicott, Ewald, Geiger, Bunsen. For hayyāchīd LXX. ἀγαπητῶ, either translating ad sensum, or reading הַדִּירָה.

If we are to interpret this verse as it stands, we must certainly understand “the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem” as the subject of the verbs v’hibbitu “and they shall look,” and daqaru “they pierced,” or rather “thrust-through.” So we cannot with RASHI understand the verse to mean, that Israel will look [unto God] in mourning for those slain by the Chaldeans; nor with IBN EZRA, that all the nations will look unto God to see what He will do to them on account of their having slain the Messiah, son of Joseph (comp. T. B. Succah 52^a): for (apart from the question of the subject of the verbs), as QMCHI most sensibly remarks, if Messiah son of Joseph be referred to here (and we may add, in Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. also) why is he not mentioned? Retaining the reading of the Text elav “unto me,” some interpret the verb daqaru figuratively “they pierced,” i.e. “contemned.” The Person might be God Himself, or the Prophet (who seems to have personified the Rejected Shepherd in ch. xi.) looked on as identified (HIRZIG) for the moment with Him that sent him. But surely, such a rendering of daqaru (even supposing it to be admissible, which we do not think to be the case) is too weak to account for the strong expressions which follow, “and they shall mourn over him as with the mourning for an only son, &c.,” which can only refer to the case of some one actually slain. We must therefore reject this interpretation of daqaru. If, on the other hand, we take it as meaning “they thrust-through,” the first person “unto me” presents great difficulties. For it cannot be referred to God Himself, as that would, as Ewald says, “introduce into the Old Testament the absurd notion that persons will bitterly lament over Yahvé (YHVH) as over one that is dead.” Nor can it be explained, primarily, of the two-fold nature of Christ, as that is a notion which could never have suggested itself to a Jew of Zechariah’s time. Nor can it be interpreted of the Prophet as representing Him who sent him, for no mention is made of the slaying of such a person, nor is any hint dropped of such a thing even in xi. 13. EWALD would read elav “unto him,” and says “we can only say, that at that time a distinguished martyr in the cause of Jerusalem and the house of David and the true religion may have fallen shortly before without receiving the just acknowledgment of the capital, and there may be here reference to him.” But this “distinguished martyr” exists only in the imagination of the commentator. As we see no way of interpreting this passage in its present context, so, at least, as to have been understood by the prophet's hearers, we propose to place it after xiii. 3. See Remarks, p. 114—117.

CHAPTER XIII.

IN that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness.

2 And it shall come to pass in

DESERTION OF IDOLATRY. ZEAL NOT ACCORDING TO KNOWLEDGE.
SLAYING OF THE PROPHET. CONSEQUENT MOURNING.

There is, no doubt, a reference here to Numb. xix. 9 לְמִי נִדְּחָה

חַטָּאת הוּא "for water of purification, a means of removing sin is it." Chattáth means "sin," "offering for sin," "means of removing sin" (comp. the use of the verb תִּתְהַטֵּא Ps. li. 9, "thou shalt cleanse me," and יִתְהַטֵּא Numb. xix. 12, "he shall cleanse himself").

Similarly niddáh, while it means especially that sort of ceremonial uncleanness, which requires separation (Lev. xii. 2, &c.), denotes also "the removal of this uncleanness." So we may here correctly render the words l'chattáth ul'niddáh "for the removal of sin and uncleanness." Elsewhere the word is חַטָּאת in the absol., and חַטָּאת in the constr.; but here all authorities read חַטָּאת.

Māqōr πᾶς τόπος, reading מִקוֹם, and taking, apparently, the undefined substantive as meaning "every place."—In rendering l'chattáth by eis tēn metakínēsin, they appear to have taken לְחַטָּאת as the Infin. Hiph. of נָטָה (לְהַטֹּת).—Niddáh χωρισμόν, reverting to the primary meaning of the root.

that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered: and also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land.

3 And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy, then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live; for thou speakest lies in the name of the LORD: and his father and his mother that begat him shall thrust him through when he prophesieth.

the singl., if it occurred, would be ‘āzābh. As a singular in the sense of “idol” we have עֲצָב in use (Is. xlvi. 5).

עֲצָב and עֲצָבִים “trouble” make in plur. ‘āzābhīm, e.g. לָחֵם הָעֲצָבִים (Ps. cxxvii. 2) “bread earned by much toil.” The expression rū^{ch} hattum’āh “the unclean spirit,” which occurs here only, is the origin, doubtless, of the common N.T. expression τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἀκάθαρτον.—וַיַּעֲבִיר in the sense of “removing,” comp. (2 Chron. xv. 8) וַיַּעֲבִיר הַשְּׁקִינִיּוֹת “and he removed the abominations.” LXX. understand “The prophets” correctly as ψευδοπροφήτας.

“even they who bare him,” is added for emphasis. —וַיִּדְרְקוּהוּ ud^oqārūhū, the rū is long, merely defectively written (comp. xi. 5); the word means “and they shall thrust him through,” comp. וַיִּדְרְקוּ אֶת-שְׁנֵיהֶם “and he thrust them both through” (Numb. xxv. 8).—B^ohinnābh^o‘ē might mean “in his act of prophesying,” but “because of his prophesying” is better, comp. בְּהִשָּׁעֵנְךָ “because of thy leaning on” (2 Chron. xvi. 7).

ud^oqārūhū καὶ συμποδοῦσιν αὐτόν, translating euphemistically, as in LXX. xii. 10 they give for the same verb κατωρχήσαντο.

Here we propose to read chap. xii. 10—14. We admit that we have no authority for so doing, either of MSS., versions, or commentators. Two considerations have suggested to us this rearrangement of the text: (1) We are unable to discover any intelligible meaning which the words "and they shall look on me (or him) whom they thrust through," in the place in which they now stand in the Hebrew Text, could have conveyed to the Prophet's hearers, and even to us of the present day they seem enigmatical words suddenly introduced without the idea of "thrusting through" having been supplied by the context: (2) If we place them after ch. xiii. 3, in which the "thrusting through" of a son is distinctly mentioned, the words which commentators have taxed their ingenuity in vain to explain, will convey the simplest and most obvious sense. In a section, in which the phrase "on that day," "and it shall come to pass on that day," occurs so often, it is easy to imagine that a confusion of order may have arisen in early times. If our conjecture (and it is but a conjecture) be correct, the whole passage will run as follows:

(iii. 1) In that day shall be a fountain opened, for the house of David and for the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for [removal of] sin and of uncleanness.—(2) And it shall be in that day ('tis the utterance of YHVH Q'ba'oth) I will cut off the names of the idols from the land, and they shall not be remembered any more; and the [false] prophets and the unclean spirit will I cause to pass away from the land. (3) And it shall be, when a man shall prophesy, then they shall say to him, his father and his mother, they that bare him, "Thou shalt not live, because thou hast spoken lies in the name of YHVH;" and they shall thrust him through, his father and his mother, they that bare him, on account of his prophesying. (xii. 10) Then will I pour out upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and supplication, and they shall look on him, even him whom they thrust through, and they shall mourn over him, as the mourning for an only son, and they shall make bitter mourning over him, as one mourneth bitterly for a first-born. In that day... (14)...and their wives apart.

When, in the blindness of fanaticism, these people should have been led to commit such a crime, as that mentioned xiii. 3, then God would have pity on them, and pour out on them the spirit of grace and supplication, &c. The reader will perceive, that the application of the expression "and they shall look on him whom they thrust through" to our Lord (John xix. 34, 37, Rev. i. 7) is even more appropriate, if the words be taken as we have proposed, than if they were left in their present context. For the passage, as we propose to read it, depicts a Prophet, and a true Prophet, rejected by his own people as a false prophet, and slain by them. What more appropriate passage could be cited relative to our Lord? We must not, however, any more than in xi. 12, 13, confine the application of the prophecy to this single fulfilment, though it is certainly by far the most remarkable and important one.

On the accentuation of v'shàphactá see notes on i. 3. Chén seems to denote here "Divine favour," i. e. "grace." Tàchⁿnūnīm "earnest supplication" as the result of chén (but I.XX. οἰκτιροῦν).—וְהִבִּיטוּ אֵלַי "And they shall look on me"; but we prefer to read אֵלָיו "on him" (see pp. 112, 115).—הִבִּיט אֵל, among other meanings, has that of "to contemplate" as (Ps. cii. 20) מִן הַשָּׁמַיִם וְאֵל זֶה אֲבִיט אֵל עֵינַי וְנִבְּחָה רוּחַ (Is. lxvi. 2) אֵל אֶרֶץ הַבְּיֹרָה. The nature of the feelings of the contemplator is decided by the context. Here they are, evidently, those of compunction. For the construction אֵלָיו (ו) אֵת אֲשֶׁר-דָּקְרוּ "unto me (or him), viz. him whom they thrust through," compare (Jer. xxxviii. 9) לְרַמְדָּהּ הַנְּבִיא "to Jeremiah the prophet, him whom they cast into the pit."—Hayyāchād, the article is generic, and may be best rendered into English by "a"; in Amos viii. 10 we have כְּאֵבֶל יְחִיד (where also the next clause contains a derivative of מָרַר).—V'hāmēr is the Infin. Absol. Hiph. and may be taken as used emphatically, for וְהִמָּרַר יְמֵיָיו (but see note on vii. 5). In the Hiph. this verb is nowhere else used of "mourning bitterly," but in the Pi'el is so used (Is. xxii. 4) אֲמָרָר בְּבִכִי.—C'hāmēr is the Infin. Construct lit. "as the mourning bitterly for."—We can hardly take v'sàph'dhū 'alāv to mean they shall mourn over it (ea de re), viz. the crime committed, as that would materially weaken the force of the expressions which follow, "over an only son," "over a first-born."

Hadadrimmon "is a city," says Jerome, "near Jezreel, now called Maximianopolis, in the field of Mageddon, where the good king Josiah was (mortally) wounded in battle (2 Chron. xxxv. 22—25) with Pharaoh-necho." According to Assyriologists, Hadar-Ramman is the proper pronunciation of this word. The fact that a place in the tribe of Issachar was at the time of these prophecies known by an Assyrian name is an additional link in the chain of evidence, which proves them to be of post-exilian origin. The mourning for Josiah became, no doubt, proverbial for a great national mourning.

H^dadadrimmōn is rendered ῥοῶνος "of a plantation of pomegranates," by way of conjecture (rimmōn means pomegranate).
LXX. M^giddōn is rendered ἐκκοπτομένον, by reverting to the meaning of the root גָּדַד, comp. (Dan. iv. 11) gōddū, ἐκκόψατε.

Mishpāchōth mishpāchōth "each family"; for the repetition of the substantive to denote "each single," compare עֵדֶר עֵדֶר "each flock by itself" (Gen. xxxii. 17); the plur. however is not generally used in this manner, but comp. Ezek. xxiv. 6

4 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision, when he hath prophesied; neither shall they wear a rough garment to deceive:

(2 Kings iii. 16, Joel iv. 14, Ex. viii. 10, Gen. xiv. 10 are instances of quite a different use of the repetition of substantives).—L'bhād is often used without suffix (e. g. Ex. xxvi. 9). Comp. note on x. 4.

“Nathan,” not the prophet, but the son of David (2 Sam. v. 14). He represents a subordinate branch of the house of Judah. Remarks.

The patronymic from Simeon is הַשְּׂמַעֲנִי (Numb. xxv. 14, Josh. xxi. 4), while that from Shemei is שְׂמַעִי (Numb. ii. 12). With the construction מִשְׂפַּחַת הַשְּׂמַעִי comp. מ' הַחֲנֻכִּי, &c. (Numb. xxvi. 5, 6, 12, 13, &c.). Chap. xii. 13.
Words, etc.

This Shemei seems to be of the house of Gershon (Numb. iii. 17) a subordinate house of Levi; not the Benjaminite (2 Sam. xvi. 5). Observe the particularization of ver. 12, 13, and the generalization of ver. 14. Remarks.
This seems to point to the general, and yet particular nature of the mourning. For the fulfilment in reference to the Crucifixion see Luke xxiii. 48, Acts ii. 37—41.

FALSE PROPHETS DISCLAIM THE GIFT OF PROPHECY.

With regard to the form of Chazzāyōn with suffixes see note on xii. 4.—B'hinnābh'ōthō = b'hinnāble'ō of ver. 3. This form with final ת is formed after the analogy of such Infinitives as מְלֵאוֹת, שְׁנָאוֹת, קְרָאוֹת, הִטְאוֹת, מְלֵאוֹת. This is the only instance of a Niph. Infin. in ת from a verb quiescent ל"א.—On the construction of lābhāsh see note on iii. 3.—On addereh see note on ii. 13.—L'mā'an construed with the Infin. construct. is common, compare Amos ii. 7 לִמְעַן הַלֵּל, Deut. xxix. 18, Jer. vii. 10, &c.

καὶ ἐνδύσονται δέπνιν τριχίνην, omitting ל"א. ἀνθ' ὧν ἐψεύσαντο is simply a mistranslation. LXX.

5 But he shall say, I am no prophet, I am an husbandman; for man taught me to keep cattle from my youth.

6 And one shall say unto him,

What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.

It must be observed that אִישׁ is here, by no means, used to denote a man of importance, as it is when opposed to אָדָם (Ps. xlix. 3). It simply means "an individual:" for, though ādām occurs in the next clause, it cannot be said to be opposed to īsh. Similarly our Prophet uses גִּבּוֹר gēbher, with no special significance, in ver. 7. 'ōbhéd "dāmāh "an agriculturist," as in Gen. iv. 2.—הִקְנִיָהּ (on the sīmām rāphéh see Excurs. iv.). The verb קָנָה in the Qal means to "originate," "acquire," "possess," but since it occurs nowhere else in the Hiph., there is great difficulty in determining its exact force in this passage. Some take it as a stronger Qal "to purchase"; others "to sell" (as לָוָה in Qal is "to borrow," in Hiph. "to lend," and Aram. z'bán "to buy," Pa'el zabbén "to sell"). Others, taking it as a denominative from mignéh "possession," deduce the same meaning "to buy." Qimchi makes it a denominative from mignéh in the sense of "a flock," and understands it as "made me a herdsman." Whatever be the exact meaning of the word (LXX. ἐγέννησέ με), it is clear that the person accused of assuming prophetic powers disavows all such assumption, and claims to be looked on as a simple rustic. Aq. ἔταξέ με, Symm. ἐμέρισέ με, Theod. ἔδειξέ με. On n'urīm see note on ix. 17.

בֵּין יָדַי "between thy hands" is an expression which presents great difficulty. Rosenmüller, comparing בֵּין הַרְחִבּוֹת

Verse 6.

(Prov. xxvi. 13) with בֵּתוֹךְ רַחֲבוֹת (xxii. 13), would render it in manibus tuis. Possibly this may be the meaning. But, since בֵּין זְרַעֲיוֹ (2 Kings ix. 24) certainly means "in the body," our expression may be taken here to denote "on the chest." (Comp. Bén 'énécā Deut. vi. 8, and my Fragment of T. B. Psachim, p. 74, note 4. The expression "between thy hands" in Arab. means simply "before thee," لَفْنِي; but that meaning is not suitable here; neither is it a Hebrew usage.) Béth denotes "in the house of," comp. Gen. xxiv. 23.—V'āmār "and one will say," i.e. the other will reply, is wrongly rendered by the LXX. καὶ ἐρῶ.

7 Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith the LORD of hosts: smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered: and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones.

The "rough garment" was the ordinary dress of the prophets. If one who was not a prophet wore it, it caused him to be taken for such, and was therefore worn "to deceive." The words of ver. 5 are very similar to those of Amos vii. 14, 15; but the purport of the two passages is very different. Amos declares that though he was a herdsman and had never been brought up as a prophet, still he had received a divine mission, which he intended to perform in spite of Jeroboam II., and Amaziah priest of Bethel. But here the false prophet, when accused of exercising the functions of a prophet, utterly denies the charge. The wounds which he is accused of having inflicted on himself (in idolatrous worship 1 Kings xviii. 28, Jer. xvii. 5, xviii. 37), he asserts to have been inflicted on him by others "in the house of his friends." ROSENMÜLLER understands that he confesses to have been punished in his parents' house for false prophecies. HENGSTENBERG thinks that he acknowledges, with shame, that he had been so wounded in the house of his friends, i. e. in the idol temples. WRIGHT says that perhaps he may have suggested that these wounds were received by him on the occasion of some carousal with boon companions.

SHEPHERD SMITTEN. FLOCK SCATTERED.

On the accentuation of 'urî see notes on ix. 9, p. 84.—'amîthî "my fellow" is a word which occurs only here, and in Leviticus. There it occurs only with the suffixes ך and ם. It seems to be a subst. of the form of גִּיּוּרִית, גִּיּוּרִית (ix. 15, in plur.) &c., and to denote "fellowship" "neighbourship" in the abstract, and then to be used (as in Lev.) for the concrete (comp. notes on vi. 10, xi. 16). According to the first meaning gêbher would be here the constr. and the expression would mean "the man of my fellowship." According to the second (and current use of the word) 'amîthî would be in apposition with gêbher, and we should render "a man my fellow."—Hac "smite thou" is in the masc., although 'urî agrees correctly with chêrebh in the fem.—וְתִפְּצוּן "that may be scattered." (On this verb see note on i. 17.) The forms of the 3rd pers. fem. plur. Imperf. in ך, instead of ך, are common; e.g. תִּשְׁבֹּן (Ezek. xvi. 55), תִּירָאן (Ex. i. 17), תִּמְצָאן (Deut. xxi. 21), תִּקְרָאן (Numb. xxv. 2), תִּשְׁקִין (Gen. xix. 33).—On the accentuation of vâh'slôbbhōthî see note on i. 3.—The participle צַעְרִים does not occur elsewhere: it can scarcely be taken as equivalent

8 And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the LORD, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein.

9 And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The LORD is my God.

to צְעִירִים "little ones" (Judg. vi. 15, Ps. cxix. 141): it seems rather to denote "those who make themselves small," "the humble ones." The expression "to turn the hand back upon" is often used to denote anger (Amos i. 8, Ps. lxxxii. 15); but sometimes it signifies loving chastisement (Is. i. 25), and such appears to be its meaning here.

To arrive at τοὺς ποιμένας μου LXX. must have read rō'áy instead of rō'á. For ^a*māthē* they give πολίτην μου. The verb ^h*phūzēnā* LXX. they considered as active, and rendered ἐκπάσατε; and to make hac correspond with this, they rendered it also by the plur. πατάξατε (Matt. xxvi. 31 πατάξω).—Haççð^a*rēm* τοὺς μικρούς.

פִּי-שְׁנַיִם (on the metheg see Excurs. II. A. 3) denotes "a double portion" (Gen. xliii. 34), comp. מְנַה אֶחָת אַפִּים (1 Sam. i. 5): here by the expression hashsh'lishēth, in the second half-verse, it is shown to mean "two thirds."—Bāh "in it," the flock (çhn).—The verb גָּוַע "to die," like חוּר (: יְחֹרֵי Is. xxix. 22), has the medial ך as a strong consonant, and not quiescent as in קוּם.

V'hēbhēthē should be so accentuated, as Baer edits; not v'hēbhēthē (see note on i. 3). With the latter accentuation the verb Verse 9. must be looked on as the Prophetic Perfect.—The verb Qārā' is construed with כּ in the sense of "calling upon" the Name of God &c. (Gen. iv. 26), or of Baal (1 Kings xviii. 26).—āmārtī (on the placing of the accent pashtā see page 16) is the Perfect, which preceded, and followed by Futures, may be used as a Future even without vāv convers. comp. (Is. xiii. 10) וְנִסְלִיחֵם לֹא יִהְיוּ אֲרָם : חֶשֶׁךְ הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ בְּצֵאתוֹ וַיִּרַח לֹא-יִגִּיהַ אֲרוֹ : LXX. καὶ ἔρω.

WRIGHT objects to Ewald's theory that these verses form a sequel to chap. xi., that "the removal of foolish shepherds could only be a blessing to the flock, while the removal of the shepherd is here represented as utterly disastrous." But since in xiii. 7—9, the figure of the shepherd and his flock is evidently intended to suggest the notion of a leader and his army, and the death of the leader, even when incompetent, would involve the scattering of the army (this very figure is used by Micaiah in foretelling the death of the wicked Ahab, 1 Kings xxii. 17), this objection does not seem to us conclusive. But, if we are to reject this suggestion of Ewald, or if we are not to regard this passage as a distinct prophecy by itself (see Introduction), "the shepherd" can only mean some prophet of the LORD, who on account of the sins of the people should be taken away by a violent death. After his death a remnant were to be purified and saved. Ver. 7 is quoted by our Lord (Matt. xxvi. 31, Mark xiv. 27).

Remarks.
Chap. xiii. 7—9.

Similar euphemisms are to be found in the Q^{ri} of 2 Kings xviii. 27, Is. xxxvi. 12, Deut. xxviii. 27, 1 Sam. v. 6, 9, 12, vi. 4, 5. ‘Al-p’nē “over against,” as (Judg. xvi. 3) ‘al-p’nē Chebhrōn “opposite Hebron.”—Miqqēdem “towards (or in) the East,” and so, probably, Gen. ii. 8: comp. note on iv. 3, and the expression mēcheçyō, which follows.—Cheçyō denotes here, not “half” (Ex. xxiv. 16, and in the second half of our verse), but “middle” (Judg. xvi. 3) בַּחֲצֵי הַלַּיְלָה “at midnight”: thus mēcheçyō denotes “in its midst.”—מִזְרַחָה וְיָמָה the vāv is pointed with qāmāç, because the latter word is accentuated on the first syllable (without intervening disjunctive accent): comp. (Gen. xiii. 14) : צַפְנָה וְנִגְבָּה וְקִרְמָה וְיָמָה (see also xxviii. 14); similarly תְּרוֹ וְבָרוֹ (Gen. i. 2) and וְהָב וְנִסְפָּה (1 Kings x. 22), which rule ל follows in Gen. i. 6 : בֵּין מַיִם לְמַיִם.

The form גֵּיָא as the absolute occurs in Numb. xxi. 20, Deut. iii. 29, iv. 46, 1 Sam. xvii. 3, Jer. ii. 23, Neh. ii. 13, 15, iii. 13, 1 Chron. iv. 39, 2 Chron. xxvi. 9; and, dropping the א, in the form גֵּי Deut. xxxiv. 6, Josh. xiii. 11, Mic. i. 4; and even גֵּיָא Is. xl. 4. And here only as Absolute in the form *גֵּיָא*¹, which (collaterally with גֵּי) is the ordinary form of the construct (as in the next verse). This form of the absolute is not without parallel: thus we have לַיְלָה distinctly absol. at the end of Is. xxi. 11; בְּחַיִל כָּבֵד “with a great host” (2 Kings xviii. 17)².—The expression “the Mount of Olives” occurs

¹ This seems to be merely a variation of pronunciation. In illustration of the tendency of ay to be pronounced as ē (ä) observe that Arab bayna (בֵּין) is pronounced bēna, and the Syr. suffix ayca as ēca, and that in modern Greek ai is pronounced ē aīma ēma (with a very slight aspiration).

² בֵּית גְּדוֹל (2 Kings xxv. 9) is not included, since it might mean “great-man’s house.” The expression חֵמֶת רַבָּה (absol. חֵמֶת) in Amos vi. 2 is not sufficient ground on which to found a statement that the constr. can be used with an epithet, since the word is a proper name, and the expression may be parallel with חֵמֶת צוּבָה (2 Chron. viii. 3).

5 And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the LORD my God shall come, and all the saints with thee.

here only in the O. T.; for other designations of that hill see 2 Sam. xv. 30, 1 Kings xi. 7, 2 Kings xxiii. 13, Ezek. xi. 23.

Gē' g'dōlāh m'ōd χάος μέγα σφόδρα.—Umāsh καὶ κλιεῖ, by which word they render also כוּם (Ps. xlv. 6), and נָטַשׁ (1 Sam. iv. 2). LXX.

Nūs followed by the acc. can only mean “to flee to”; the translation of Luther vor solchem Thal is inadmissible. For an instance of the construction found here comp. (Ps. xi. 1) נָדָו הֲרַכְם צְפוּר Verse 5.

The expression אֶל-אֲצִל is difficult. In 1 Chron. viii. 38 we find אֲצִל as the Pausal form of אֲצִל (as pathach is found often in Pause for çerē, e.g. וַיֵּלֶךְ Gen. xxiv. 61 &c.). Supposing, then, that the preposition אֲצִל is the constr. of אֲצִל (as is probable, comp. גְּזֹל, Ezek. xviii. 18, as the constr. of גְּזֹל, el-āçāl would mean “to nigh,” “to very near.” Āçāl would in this case be used independently (as an adverb), as we have shown (ii. 12) that achār is used. The Prophet turns abruptly from speaking of God “ubhā...lōhāy,” to addressing Him “immāc”: for a similar abrupt transition compare (Song of Songs i. 1) “yish-shāqēnī...cē-ṭōbhēm dōdēcā miyyāin.”

נִסְתָּם occurs three times in this verse. According to the Western punctuation it is read נִסְתָּם (see above), but the Oriental reading is וְנִסְתָּם: “and the valley of my mountains shall be closed up” in the first case, and נִסְתָּם in the two other cases: so, too, the Targum and Rashi, and Ibn Ezra. LXX. in all three cases (Symm. and Hex.-Syr. in the first two) read nistām, and render the passage: καὶ φραχθήσεται ἡ φάραγξ τῶν ὀρέων μου, καὶ ἐγκολληθήσεται φάραγξ ὀρέων ἕως Ἰασόδ, καὶ ἐμφραχθήσεται καθὼς ἐνεφράγη ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τοῦ συσσεισμοῦ κ.τ.λ.—The word ΙΑΣΟΔ is merely a corruption of ΙΑΣΟΔ (אֲצִל); some copies of the Hex.-Syr. give Ἀσσήλ. Observe that the transliteration of אֲצִל by Iasoal (reading אֲ as ya) is just the converse be clear, nor dark :

of the process by which the Syr. gets אֶצֶר out of יוֹצֵר (xi. 13). Ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις is merely a free translation of mipp'né.—οἱ ἄγιοι μετ' αὐτοῦ, for q'dōshím 'immāc. One of Baer's MSS. notes that some correct MSS. read קִדְשׁוֹ עִמּוֹ; but, the Massóreth states that קִדְשׁוֹ occurs only in Deut. xxxiii. 3, Ps. xxxiv. 10, and, therefore, q'dōsháv must be looked on as only an emendation. As for עִמּוֹ, it is easy to see how עִמּוֹ might have been written עִמְּוֹ, and that read as עִמְּךָ; but still, the transition from the third to the second Person is so thoroughly in accordance with usage, that one cannot see any reason for doubting the correctness of the reading עִמְּךָ.

The earthquake in the days of Uzziah is nowhere mentioned by the sacred historians, and the account given of it by Josephus (Antiq. ix. 10 § 4) must be looked on as apocryphal. Still, so great and lasting was the impression made by that event on the popular mind, that it formed an era from which events were dated (Amos i. 1), and is here referred to as a well-known catastrophe. It has been argued that this reference to the earthquake fixes the date of this prophecy to a time shortly after that event. But, as reasonably might it be argued, that an author who used the expression "they fell to a man, as they did at Thermopylæ," had written shortly after b.c. 480!

The C'ḥóbbh is יִקְרֹת יְקָאוֹן (for there is no occasion, with Gesen., to invent a Niph. of קָפָא). The verb is in the masc. although its nominative is fem. comp. חֲזוֹת קָפָה. Verse 6. Words, etc. חֲזוֹת קָפָה (Is. xxi. 2). In Job xxxi. 26 yāqār is applied to the Moon, יִדּוּ יְקָר הַלַּיְלָה "the moon, sailing resplendent." So here y'qāróth seems to denote "the resplendent heavenly bodies." The definite article is omitted before y'qāróth (as it is before כּוֹכְבִים "the stars" ten times, against nine times in which it is expressed). The verb is that found in Ex. xv. 8 קָפְאוּ תְהִלַּת בְּלָבִים "the depths became consolidated in the midst of the sea." The meaning, then, of y'qāróth yiqpā'án seems to be "the splendid (heavenly bodies) will contract their splendour," i. e. will wane.—The Q'ri' gives the ἀπ. λεγόμενον (of the form of timmāhón &c. xii. 4) "and consolidation," "coagulation." And the meaning of y'qāróth v'qippā'ón is perhaps "[there will be] intense-brightness, and then waning," comp. (Job iv. 16) דממה וקול אשמע " [there was] silence, and then a voice I heard." But the first word would perhaps be better pointed יְקָרוֹת "cold" (of the form of קְדָרוֹת "darkness" Is. 1. 3), Rt. יקר being taken as equivalent to Rt. קרר "to be cold." Some would read a vāv instead of the first yūid thus וְקָרוֹת וּקְפָאוֹן and render "but cold and coagulation," making the first vāv adversative. The C^othēbh appears to us the better reading.

LXX. take יְקָרוֹת וּקְפָאוֹן וְהָיָה יוֹם אֶחָד as one clause, and render καὶ ψύχος (Cod. Alex.) καὶ πάγος ἔσται μίαν ἡμέραν. Versions. The reading ψύχη (Cod. Vat.) is a manifest error. On the rendering ψύχος see above.—πάγος (both Targ. and Syr. agree with LXX. in the rendering ψύχος καὶ πάγος) is given as the translation of קְפָאוֹן from two considerations, (1) it is parallel with the assumed meaning of יְקָרוֹת, (2) קפא is used (see above) of the consolidation of water: since then, the only natural mode of consolidating water, is by frost, it was surmised that qippā'ōn meant "frost."

Ydm-echād denotes "a unique day," comp. (Ezek. vii. 5) רעה אחת רעה הנה באה "an evil, a unique evil, lo! is coming."—רוֹא is emphatic.—L'ēth "at the time of" (Gen. viii. 11, &c.), on the metheg with l'ēth-ērebh see Excurs. II. A. 5.

רוֹא is expanded into καὶ ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνη. For v^hāyāh l'ēth-ērebh simply καὶ πρὸς ἑσπέραν. LXX.

קְדָמוֹנִי denote "eastern" (as in Ezek. x. 19); but it also has the meaning of "ancient" (comp. the meanings of קָדֵם). In Ezek. xlvii. 8 we find also a fem. קְדָמוֹנָה which presupposes a masc. qadmōn (comp. note on xi. 15). On the fixed-metheg on hā'āch^orōn, and the absence of ordinary-metheg, see Excurs. II. A. 9.—Haqqadmōnē LXX. τὴν πρώτην: hā'āch^orōn τὴν ἑσχάτην: in accordance with the primary meanings of the words (comp. LXX. Joel ii. 20).—For "in Winter" they give ἐν ἔαρι "in Spring."

9 And the LORD shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one LORD, and his name one.

10 All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem: and it shall be lifted up, and inhabited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's wine-presses.

It is a disputed point among grammarians whether such forms as ^{Verse 10.} ^{Words, etc.} יָסוּב, יָדַם, יָקַר, יָתַם, from verbs with the second root-letter doubled, are to be regarded as Qal, or Niph.—Baer, here and in Is. xxxiii. 9, edits כַּעֲרֵבָה without the def. article; but the Cod. Petropol. reads כֶּ. We prefer this latter reading “like the plain,” viz. that now called Al-Ghor, which extends with some interruptions from the slopes of Hermon to the Elamitic gulf of the Red Sea. If we read כֶּ, we must suppose that ‘Arābāh’ was already regarded as a proper name (comp. note on vii. 14). Négebh “to the south of” as (Josh. xi. 2) נָגַב כְּנָרוֹת “to the south of Cin-róth.”—וְרֵאמָה is an anomalous 3rd pers. fem. sing. Qal from רָוַם. A variant is וְרֵאמָה, which is after the analogy of וְקָאֵם (Joel ii. 6), comp. רָאֵשׁ “poor” (Prov. x. 4, xiii. 23).—L'mish-shá'ar, the prefix לְמִן denotes “from,” of place as here (comp. Job xxxvi. 3), or of time as (2 Sam. vii. 19).—Shá'ar hâ-rishôn on the article see p. 44.—Migdâl stands for mimmigdâl, or l'mimmigdâl, the min, or l'min, being understood from לְמִשְׁעַר, or מִגְבַּע, which precede. Some MSS. read מִמְגְדָל (comp. i. 4).—Yiq'bhé, the constr. plur. occurs here only, but it is regularly formed from יָקַב.

κυκλῶν agreeing, one would suppose, with Κύριος of the preceding LXX. verse. This rendering of יָסוּב is defensible (though inappropriate). For an imperfect is often used to describe the state or condition of a person (like the participle, see notes on iii. 1, v. 1), especially for the sake of variety, e.g. (Is. xl. 30) נִתְּן לִיעָף כָּה וְלֵאיוֹן תַּעֲלֶה xiv. 18). καὶ τὴν ἔρημον, as a free translation, “compassing all the earth, as (it will) the desert,” i.e. “all the earth and the desert.”—Ῥαμά, taking רֵאמָה as a Proper Name, which however is always spelt רֵמָה.—καὶ ἕως τοῦ πύργου, they carry on ‘ad from ‘ad shá'ar happinním, instead of min, as we do.

11 And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited.

12 And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem; Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from the LORD shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbour, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour.

Baer edits (not הָרֵם but) הָרֵם, this is the pointing of the word in every other passage, whether in the sense of “net,” or of “ban.” Some MSS. read הָרַב “sword” (comp. p. 64). The rendering of the Targ. קַטְלָא cannot be said to be conclusively in favour of this latter reading: since “slaughter” may be only a paraphrase of “ban”; LXX. has correctly ἀνάθεμα.

עַל צָבָא comp. Numb. xxxi. 7, &c.—הָמָק is the Infin. of מָקַק, it may be taken as the Infin. Absol. used emphatically with the omission of the finite verb (comp. xii. 11); or it may be construct, and be explanatory “and this shall be the plague, &c.” viz. “the rotting of,” comp. the second הָמָר in xii. 11.—The suffix of b'sārô is distributive, and refers to each of “all the nations,” or to each individual of them. The clause v'hû 'ôméd 'al-ragláv denotes the state in which he shall be, when overtaken by the plague (comp. p. 46). הַמְּקַנָּה is the Fut. Niph. 3rd pers. plur. for הַמְּקַנָּה, comp. Niph. of תַּצְלִינָה צַלַּל (2 Kings xxi. 13, Jer. xix. 3); the form הַתְּצַלִּינָה (1 Sam. iii. 11) is Hiphil.

For V'hû 'ôméd êstḡkótov, this is correct enough quoad sensum: the participle agrees with the persons understood in the preceding avtón.

וְהִחִיבוּ אִישׁ יָד רֵעֵו “And they shall seize each other by the hand,” to grapple together. Hèch'zîq is generally construed with ב before יָד; but compare יָד-עֵנִי... לֹא הִחִיבָהּ (Ezek. xvi. 49). Some MSS. read here בִּיד.—V'‘àl'tháh... ‘al “and shall [rise i. e.] be lifted up against.”

14 And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance.

15 And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague.

16 And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles.

LXX V^oal'thāh...al... is freely rendered και συμπλακῆσεται... πρὸς...

After the verb נָלַחַם the preposition בְּ generally means "against"

Verse 14. (e.g. Ex. i. 10); but it also, after the same verb, denotes the place at which the battle takes place, e.g. (Ex. xvii. 8) וַיִּלָּחֶם עִם-וְיִשְׂרָאֵל בְּרֶפְדִּים "and fought with Israel at Rephidim" (comp. Judg. v. 19, 2 Chron. xxxv. 20, 22). The context shows that the latter is the meaning here.—The monosyllable רֶב when ל is prefixed to it always takes the euphonic qāmāç, except once (Est. x. 3) where róbh is in constr. לְרֹב אַחֵיו. For the expression לְרֹב מְאֹד (comp. 2 Chr. iv. 18, ix. 9) "in great abundance."

LXX. has correctly ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ.—καὶ συνάξει, reading, with LXX. different vowels, v^oásáf instead of v^oussáf.

The order of the clauses of this verse is inverted, we should have expected וְכַמְנַפָּה הַזֹּאת כֵּן תִּהְיֶה וְגו'. Observe that after Verse 15. all this string of substantives we have not יְהוּ (or תִּהְיֶה) agreeing with בְּהֵמָה but simply יְהִי, comp. (Is. lxiv. 10) בֵּית קִדְשֵׁנוּ יִהְיֶה. —Whether מְחַנּוֹת or מְחַנִּים be used, as the plur. of מְחַנָּה, it is masc. as here, but the sing. is fem. in Gen. xxxii. 9, Ps. xxvii. 3.

וְהָיָה...וְעָלוּ "and it shall be...that they shall go up," comp. (Lev. v. 15) וְהָיָה...וְהִתְנַפְּחָה "and it shall be...that he shall confess"; similarly in the past (1 Sam. xi. 11) וַיְהִי הַנְּשֹׂאִים וַיִּפְצְצוּ "and it came to pass that those who were left were scattered."—

18 And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain; there shall be the plague, wherewith the LORD will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.

בִּשְׁנָה (comp. also Is. lxvi. 23).—On the first metheg of l'hîshtàch^ovôth see Excurs. II. B. 3.—Mélec is, doubtless, the absol., and in apposition to YHVH Q^obhà^oth: so LXX. correctly τῶ βασιλεῖ Κυρίῳ.

The reason why the Feast of Tabernacles is specified seems to be as follows. Passover is indeed the chief festival (see Memorbook of Nürnberg, p. 20), but then it is a distinctly Jewish festival in commemoration of the Exodus. The Feast of Weeks again, as the festival of the Giving of the Law, is distinctly Jewish. But the Feast of Tabernacles, being the “Feast of Ingathering,” when they rejoice over those things which are provided for the animal nature of man, would be a Festival in which the Nations of the World could rejoice and praise the Giver, as well as the Israelite (see also Introduction). Remarks.

אִשֶׁר means “whosoever.” The ך of v^ol^o introduces the apodosis, comp. (Gen. xlv. 9) אִשֶׁר יִמָּצָא אֹתוֹ מֵעַבְדֵיךָ וְיָמָת “with whomsoever of thy servants it shall be found; he shall die.” Verse 17. Constructions. מֵאֵת “out of” as (Josh. xxi. 16) תֵּשַׁע מֵאֵת שְׁנֵי הַשְּׁבִטִים הָאֵלֶּה “nine [cities] out of these two tribes.”

For לֹא יִהְיֶה הַגִּשְׁם עֲלֵיהֶם וְלֹא יִהְיֶה הַגִּשְׁם לָהֶם LXX. give καὶ οὗτοι ἐκείνοις προστεθῆσονται: Köhler supposes they read וְלֹא יִהְיֶה הַגִּשְׁם עֲלֵיהֶם; but, seeing that the Septuagint translators were somewhat acquainted with more modern Hebrew, I should say that they read וְלֹא יִהְיֶה הַגִּשְׁם עֲלֵיהֶם (or more probably simple וְעֲלֵיהֶם) lit. “and to them shall be the-making-to-approach-of-the-others”: heggésh would be an Hiphilic substantive of the form of heqqésh “comparison.” LXX.

בָּאָה is the pres. partic. fem. Qal of בָּאוּ, as (Gen. xxix. 6) ...הָנָה בָּאָה “behold his daughter...coming”; but בָּאָה is the 3rd pers. fem. sing. Perf. Qal, as (ver. 9) וְרָחֵל בָּאָה “and Rachel came.” Verse 18. Constructions.

The words can only be rendered “And if the family of Egypt go not up, and cometh not,” the participle being used instead of תָּבֵא merely for the sake of variety of sound. We cannot see that there can be any greater objection to this construction, than to the following (Ezek. xxxix. 8) הַגָּז הַנָּה בָּאֵה וְנִהְיֶתָה "Lo! it cometh, and shall certainly take place." (The E. V. of Ezek. takes bā'āh, as bā'āh the perfect, in which case it would have been accented בָּאֵה (see page 16). LXX. understands the phrase correctly ἐὰν...μη ἀναβῆ μνηδὲ ἔλθη. Von Hofmann has suggested the reading וְלֹא־אָבָה "then it shall thirst," from the expression תִּלְאָבוֹת אֶרֶץ (Hos. xiii. 5).—וְלֹא עֲלֵיהֶם, some would supply yih'yéh haggāshem from the preceding verse, and render "then upon them shall not be rain." The objection to this interpretation is, that in this case we should require zōth (as in the next verse) before ih'yéh; "This shall be the plague, &c." The rendering "will, then, there not fall upon them the plague, &c.?" (Hitzig, Bunsen and Lange) is better. Here ׀ introduces the apodosis (comp. ver. 16, iii. 7), and לֹא is interrogative nonne? as, certainly, (Ex. viii. 22) ... הֲיִן נִוּבַח וְלֹא יִסְקְלֵנוּ "If we slay...will, then, they not stone us?"

 simply, omitting לֹא; two Hebr. MSS. omit לֹא, and four Versions and Variants omit וְלֹא. We think it quite possible that the לֹא may have crept into the text from the וְלֹא which precedes, or from the עֲלֵיהֶם וְלֹא of the preceding verse. Certainly "Then upon them shall be the plague, with which, &c." is the simplest construction, and affords the best sense.—Some MSS. and many Edd. read col between eth and haggōyīm, but it seems to have crept in from אֶת-כָּל-הָעַמִּים (ver. 12), comp. xii. 2. 3.

Chattāth is the constr. of chattāth (see note on xiii. 1). It may mean here "sin," or "punishment" (comp. the frequent use of עוֹן).

מִצְלֹת "bells" is a ἀπ. λεγό. but comp. מִצְלֵתִים (1 Chron. xiii. 18):
 Verse 20. LXX. τὸ ἐπὶ τὸν χαλινόν, which is well enough quoad sensum. Both words come from the root of תִּצְלֵנָה "shall tingle," see note on LINESS UNTO THE LORD ; and the pots in the LORD's house shall be like the bowls before the altar.

21 Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the LORD of hosts; and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein: and in that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the LORD of hosts.

ver. 12 [thus, whatever may be the case in English, in Hebr. the words tingle and tinkle are the same, viz. צלל].—Observe hāyāh in the sing. masc. (comp. note on ver. 15); but here, since the verb precedes its nominative, it has no need to agree with it: e. g. (Is. xviii. 5) יִרְדֵּה נֶצְחָה, (Gen. i. 14) יְהִי מֵאֲרֹת.—Šīr in the sing. denotes “a pot” (masc. Jer. i. 13, fem. Ezek. xxiv. 6), its plur. is סִירוֹת (Ex. xxxviii. 3); in Amos iv. 2 sīrōth perhaps means “hooks.” But סִירִים means “thorns,” e. g. (Eccles. vii. 6) כְּקוֹל הַסִּירִים תַּחַת הַסִּיר “like the crackling of thorns under a pot” (comp. Ps. lviii. 10).

Mehēm “of them,” i. e. “some of them,” as many as may be required: comp. (Gen. xxviii. 11) וַיִּקַּח מֵאַבְנֵי הַמָּקוֹם “and he took some of the stones of the place.”—כְּנַעֲנִי is used in the signification of “merchant” (Job xl. 30, Prov. xxxi. 24), and so the word is understood here by Aquila, and the Chaldee Paraphrase (Targum), followed by Hitzig, Maurer &c.

Verse 21.

If this be the meaning, the reference must be to traders who sold pots, cattle, &c., for the sacrifices (comp. John ii. 14—16, Matt. xxi. 12, 13). But, though there probably were such in the Temple at this time, it cannot be actually proved that there were. VON HOFMANN understands by Canaanite the Gibeonites and Nethinim, who were employed in the menial services of the Temple. THEODORET, LUTHER, EWALD take it as denoting notorious sinners, devoted to destruction, as were the Canaanites of old. PÆSSEL, combining two interpretations, understands by Canaanite, those who traffic in holy things, and the ungodly and profane. But, it seems best on the whole, to suppose that the prophet, having referred above to the Egyptians, fell naturally into the use of the word “Canaanite” (since they were also the enemies of Israel in days of old), and that he meant by it nothing more than “heathen,” “infidel.”

Remarks.

We almost agree with DE WETTE that this chapter defies all historical explanation. If we attempt to interpret it of the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldæans, we are met by the following difficulties. (1) Though ver. 1, 2 were only too literally fulfilled on that, and on other occasions, ver. 3—5 were certainly not fulfilled, for God made no demonstration at that time on behalf of his people. (2) While other pre-exilian prophets foretell clearly the deportation, and subsequent return of the people, our prophet mentions neither deportation nor return, but merely speaks of Jerusalem being inhabited in safety (ver. 10—11). But, if it refer to events after the Captivity, what can those events be? It might perhaps refer to the taking of Jerusalem by Ptolemy, a successor of Alexander, in B. C. 321; or more probably to its pillage by Antiochus Epiphanes in B. C. 167. In this latter case, the language of ver. 3—5 might be looked on as prophetic, in a highly figurative manner, of the deliverance of Israel by God through the instrumentality of the Maccabees: ver. 8, 9 might represent the revival of pure and undefiled religion in those days, and ver. 10 and 11 the peaceful prosperity of that period; but still, we could not in reference to the Maccabean era give any satisfactory account of ver. 16—21. We cannot possibly with EUSEBIUS, CYRIL, and THEODORET refer the prophecy directly to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans (A. D. 70). For, admitting the truth of Eichhorn's remark "prophets threaten with no people, and promise nothing of any, till the people itself is come on the scene and into relation with their people," one cannot imagine that at a time when the Greeks were only just come into prominence in connection with the East, the Prophet should speak of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, when Rome was but as yet only an insignificant city, gradually asserting its superiority over the Latin peoples, and still troubled with the dissensions between Patricians and Plebeians. Further, the description of what took place on that occasion, as given by Josephus (Bel. Jud. vi. 9 § 2), which is a direct contradiction of the promises ver. 2—6, 12—15, precludes such an interpretation. The above considerations are independent of any hypothesis as to the authorship of the chapter.—We are compelled therefore to interpret the chapter wholly in a figurative and Messianic sense. The Prophet, to whom were known the traditions of the prophetic schools concerning the times which were to precede the Messianic era, foretells the grievous troubles of "that day." Speaking in the language of the Psalms of the Theophany (xcvi—xcix) he represents God as revealing Himself for the protection of His people. The day of the Messiah is to be one of great Spiritual Knowledge: Jerusalem is to be inhabited in security: not only is the wealth of all nations to flow thereunto, but the nations themselves are come and do homage to The King, the Lord of Hosts, in Jerusalem. As for those that come not up, on them will fall the direst punishments. In "that day" (he does not imply that the Law of Moses shall be literally re-established, still less that it shall be abrogated, but) there shall be such a diffusion of the knowledge of God, that there shall be a general elevation of everything in sanctity מעלה יתרה בקדש, so that the very bells of the horses shall be engraven with the significant inscription, of the $\zeta\zeta$ of the High Priest קדש ליהוה (Qódesh lAdónáy), and idolatry and unbelief shall all but entirely pass away.—The whole scene, which he depicts, is ideal. To some extent it may be said to have been fulfilled in the Christian Church. But the full consummation of “that day” will not take place, until (1 Cor. xv. 28) “God shall be all in all,” and the voice of the Angel shall proclaim (Rev. xi. 15):

ΕΓΕΝΟΝΤΟ ΑΙ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΙΑΙ ΤΟΥ ΚΟΣΜΟΥ

EXCURSUS I.

RULES FOR SYLLABLE-DIVIDING IN BIBLICAL HEBREW.

1. Every vowelless consonant has a *sh^eva*¹ either expressed or understood. If a word end in a single vowelless consonant the sh^eva is not written, thus כַּל, or before maqeph כַּלְדָּעִיר. If such a vowelless consonant be preceded by a quiescent consonant some editors give it without a sh^eva, others (as Baer) with sh^eva, thus וּבָאתַּ or וּבָאתְּ (Mic. iv. 10), וְהִדְקוֹת or וְהִדְקוֹתְּ (ver. 13).

2. A sh^eva must be either moving or quiescent. The sh^eva under a letter which begins a syllable is called moving, all others are quiescent.

3. Every compound sh^eva (ֿֿֿ, ֿֿֿֿ, ֿֿֿֿֿ) is moving. Every simple sh^eva (ֿֿ) under any of the letters אדחזע is quiescent; except the sh^eva of הֿ and הֿ in verbs הִיָּה and הִיָּה, which is always moving as in לְהִיָּת (see Excurs. II. A. 7).

4. (a) When two sh^evas fall together in the midst of a word, the first is quiescent, and the second moving, as יִקְטֹלוּ yiq-!lū.

(β) A dagesh forte in a vowelless consonant always produces two sh^evas [the one quiescent and the other moving, in accordance with (a)]. Thus the dagesh forte in the פ of מִפְּנֵיכֶם produces a quiescent sh^eva under the first p, and a moving sh^eva under the second, so that the syllables are mip-p^enē-cēm (standing for min-p^enē-cēm).

5. (a) It would be impossible to pronounce two successive consonants both bearing moving sh^eva. Consequently, if in the process of altering the vocalization of a word, as it passes from one grammatical form to another, two moving sh^evas would fall together, the first is changed into a short vowel. Such a vowel is called a Light (by others a Slight vowel), in Hebr. תְּנוּעָה קְלָה. E.g. if the prefix בְּ be put to a word beginning with a consonant bearing simple moving sh'va, the sh'va of בְּ becomes a *Light chiriq*¹.

(β) It follows, of course, from this rule, that a sh'va after a Light vowel is always moving.

N.B. When the conjunction וְ becomes וּ it is but a Light vowel (though, when it occurs before a labial bearing a vowel, we use that term in a somewhat extended sense). For grammatical purposes this וּ is not looked on as a long vowel (see Excurs. II. A. 1 NOTE). In prosody (which is not native to Hebrew, but borrowed from the Arabic) it is at times looked on as a sh'va, so that אֲוִי may have the same value in metre as אֲוִי. The case of the conjunction וּ is the only one in which a word can begin with a vowel in Hebrew. But the exception is more apparent than real, for u merely stands for va, va, or vi.

6. (α) A syllable that ends in a consonant with sh'va either expressed, or understood (see rules 1 and 4), is called closed. A syllable that does not end in a consonant with sh'va (expressed or understood) is called open.

(β) When a consonant is *quiescent*², no sh'va is understood with it. Consequently an open syllable may end, either in a simple vowel long, or short (see rule 9), or in a vowel with quiescent consonant (or consonants), such as: אַ־, הַ־; אֲ־, אִ־ (in אֲהִי); אֲ־, אִ־, הַ־, וֹ־; אֲ־, אִ־; אֲ־, אִ־, וֹ־; אֲ־, אִ־, וֹ־, אֲ־, אִ־, וֹ־; אֲ־, אִ־, וֹ־.

¹ In order to avoid the frequent use of the words "long" and "short," I vocalize most of the names of the vowels in such a manner as to indicate the sounds which they represent. Thus qā-māç (ā); pathach (a); çerē (ē); but segōl (e); shūrūç (ū); but qibbuç (s'phāthāim) which means "gathering together of the lips" (i); chiriq (i); chiriq (i); chōlem (ō); qomoç (o). Some of these words are barbarous in form, but the system has the virtue of being practical.

² The beginner may need to be reminded that אֲ and אִ are never quiescent, but always strong gutturals. The only verbs which ought to be called verbs אִהֲ are those which end in הִ, in which this h is a strong consonant retained (but, of course, without the mappiq) when followed by another letter, thus from אִהֲנִי "shone" (Is. ix. 1), we have אִהֲנִי nog-hām "their light" (Joel ii. 10). Verbs which end in quiescent הִ like אִהֲ, should be termed (as they are by Jewish grammarians) אִהֲ לְהִ "with quiescent hē as the 3rd root-letter." It must be remembered, too, that אִ־ אִ־ ay ay at the end of a word is always a closed syllable (but see Excurs. III. 1, p. 149).

7. (a) If a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter have a dagesh lene, then it is certain that this letter begins a syllable, as מַלְכִי mal-cī “my king.”

Except (1) in the 2nd pers. sing. fem. Perf. of verbs with three strong consonants, such as פָּקַד, which gives פָּקַדְתָּ pā-qádt, this is but a shortened form of פָּקַדְתִּי pā-qád-ti. (2) In the apoc. Imperf. of certain verbs quiescent הָיָה, of which the second root-letter is a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh, as וַיִּבֶה vayyēbh “and he wept,” וַיִּיחַד vayyīchad “and he rejoiced.” The full forms of these Imperfects would be יִבְהֶה and יִחְדֶה with the second root-letter hard, consequently in the apoc. form the hard pronunciation of the letter is retained.

(β) But the converse is not true (viz. that if a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter have no dagesh it cannot begin a syllable). For, if the syllable preceding it, either in the same word, or sometimes in the preceding word (see Excurs. III. A. 2), be open (see rule 6), then even an un-dagesh-ed B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter may begin a new syllable. E.g. נֹבְחָה נֹבְחָה nō-bhḏhāh (Jon. i. 14), וַאֲרָנִי va-dhōnāy (Zech. ix. 14), כָּהֵן תְּהִיָּה Cāhōh thic-heh (xi. 17).

(γ) But a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter cannot be without Dagesh lene when preceded by a quiescent sh^cva.

Except (1) in the names of the two Towns יְקָתָאֵל Yoq-th^cēl (Judg. xv. 38), יְקָדָם Yoq-dh^cām (ver. 56). (2) In some anomalous formations such as יְרָתוֹ yar-cāthō (Gen. xlix. 13), יְקָבֶה yiq-bhécā “thy winepress” (Deut. xv. 14, xvi. 13), see Excurs. III. B. 3, N.B. To these it is possible that we ought to add Infinitives Qal with suffixes beginning with a vowel, such as פָּקַדְתִּי (Amos iii. 14) “my visiting,” which may be pronounced poq-dhī; but it is possible that the sh^cva is moving, and that the word should be pronounced poq^cdhī (see rule 9). There are but three instances of such an Infin. with dagesh in the 3rd root letter, viz. הֹפְעִי hophcī (Gen. xix. 21), נֹגְפֹ noggpō (Ex. xii. 27), עֹצְבִי oḥbī (1 Chron. iv. 10), see Fragment of T. B. Psachim p. 95, note 36.

8. A long vowel in a closed syllable (see rule 6) must have the tone accent, or metheg (see Excurs. II. 5), as קָטַנְתִּי qātōntī, אָנָּה ānnā “O I pray.” Therefore, if the tone be moved from a long vowel it must be (a) shortened as יַבְלַתִּי yācōltī, יַבְלַתִּי y^c-col-tīv, יֵלֶע yēlec, וַיֵּלֶע vayyēlec; or (β) it must take Fixed metheg, as בֵּית־אֲבִיךָ bēth-ābhīc (Gen. xxiv. 23), מְבַרְךָ m^cbhārèc (Is. lxvi. 3), see Excurs. II. A. 4. (3). (γ).

9. A short vowel may stand in a closed syllable, either accentuated or unaccentuated.

A short vowel may also stand in an open syllable: (α) with accent, as q'talānī "he killed me," nā-chal "a valley" (for the older Semitic form nacht), bā-yith (for bayt), hēreph (for harph), yī-gel (for yagl), shāmá-'at (for the older shāmá'-ti); (β) in the case of Light vowels whether without metheg as ma-l'cé, or with metheg as a-sh'ré, chè-sh'cath (Ps. xviii. 12), à-m'róth (xii. 9), sho-m'réní (xvi. 1); (γ) when the said short vowel is attached to the consonant immediately preceding the consonant bearing the moving sh'va which always precedes the suff. cém and cén as d'bhār'cém, tò-ra-th'cém; (δ) in the case of the def. art., or he interrog., prefixed to a monosyllable beginning with a guttural as ha-hú, h'et ha-'éth, ha-chépheç; (ε) with metheg in the 3rd syllable from the tone (Excurs. II. A. 1) as qò-dāshím and (Excurs. II. B. 1) là-m'nacé'ch; (ζ) anomalously when metheg is on the syllable next before the tone, see Excurs. II. A. 4 NOTE; and C. 4.

EXCURSUS II.

ON METHEG¹.

A small vertical line placed under a letter, in order to show that the voice should dwell slightly on that letter in pronunciation, is called metheg, מֵתֵג, mà'ríc, or ga'yā.

There are three kinds of Metheg: A, Light Metheg (מתג קל): B, Heavy Metheg (מתג כבד): C, Orthophonic Metheg (מתג לתקון): הַקְרִיָּאָה.

A.

Light Metheg is of two kinds: I. Ordinary (פשוט pāshút), and II. Fixed (תמוך tāmúç).

A. I. ORDINARY METHEG.

1. Ordinary metheg must (unless the intervention of some other rule prevent it) be placed (α) under a consonant bearing a long vowel third from the tone-syllable (both inclusive); or (β) any such short vowel, provided it be not followed by a consonant bearing sh'va or dagesh forte. E.g. (α) chârâshîm, hârîshônîm, Pêtîphâr, hâr'hâtîm, vâ'ômâr; (β) hâchillâm, mûsabbôth (Ex. xxviii. 11), umîhartêm, yâhar'gûn (Zech. xi. 4).

NOTE. Rule A. II. 9 forms an exception to this rule, thus we have הָאֲבִיִּים hâ'ôc'vîm (not hâ'ôc'vîm).

The conjunction וְ does not take this metheg, thus we have וַיִּמְאַלֵּהוּ Gen. v. 4 (comp. xii. 1, iii. 10, xi. 4).

Words joined by maqeph are, of course, treated as one word, thus we have כֹּה-אָמַר (Zech. i. 16), לֹא-נִשְׂאָה (ii. 4), בְּמַהֲרָה־בָּה (ii. 1).

2. (α) If the third syllable from the tone be disqualified from taking this metheg, but the fourth be not disqualified, then this fourth syllable takes the ordinary metheg, as תִּנְאֻלֵּי-עֶלְיוֹ (Zech. i. 4), מַעֲלֵי־כֶם (Zech. i. 4), תִּנְאֻלֵּי-עֶלְיוֹ (Deut. xvi. 3).

(β) If the fourth be also disqualified, then the fifth may take it, as מִהֲתַחְנוֹת (Ezk. xlii. 5), פָּרֶס-וּמְרִי (Est. i. 18).

(γ) If both the third and fifth be qualified, they will both take it, as הָאֲשֵׁר־יֵאָלֵי (Numb. xxvi. 31).

(δ) The fourth and fifth may also both take ordinary metheg, as לֹא-יִעֲבְרוּ-בָהּ.

(ϵ) If both the third and fourth be qualified, only the third takes it, as לִירֵדֵי־שָׁלִים (Zech. i. 14, 16).

3. If a word ending in accentuated יִ, יָ, יוֹ, or הֶ, be joined by maqeph to a word beginning with a consonant with sh'va and accentuated on the first syllable, the consonant bearing the said \bar{i} , or \bar{o} , will take metheg: as כִּי-לִבְרֶק (2 Kings xii. 8), מִי-לֶךְ (Gen. xix. 12), וּמְרִיא־וְצֹאן (1 Kings i. 19), אֶז-בְּבוֹר (Numb. xviii. 17), שְׁלֹמֶה-בְּנֵי (1 Chron. xxviii. 9).

A. II. FIXED MATHĒG.

Fixed mathĕg is so called, because nothing short of a change in the form of the word can move it from its place. Thus in rule 9 it will be seen, that Fixed mathĕg interferes with Ordinary mathĕg, but that the reverse is not the case.

4. Fixed mathĕg is used,

(a) To distinguish a long vowel from a short one (in cases where the orthographic sign renders the case doubtful) before a consonant bearing a sh'va in the syllable next before the tone, and to ensure that the said sh'va be read moving.

(1) To distinguish qāmāç from qomoç, as אֲכָלָה ¹ăc'láh "she ate," but אֹכֵלָה ¹oeláh "eat thou" (Gen. xxvii. 29), or "to eat" (1 Sam. i. 9). (Comp. also, with mathĕg Lam. i. 7, Zech. ix. 22, Deut. xv. 9, and without mathĕg 2 Chron. vi. 42, Ps. lxix. 19, Ex. xxxvi. 2.) מִימַתִּי ¹himmat'tí (Zech. ii. 11), בִּשְׂמַת ¹Bâš'máth not Bosmath (Gen. xxxvi. 3), יָדָהּ ¹yâd'cá, הָרַבֵּשׁ ¹hâr'cúsh (xiv. 21).

(2) Chîrîq written defectivè from short chîrîq, as יִרְאוּ ¹yîr'û "they fear" (2 Kings xvii. 28) = יִירָאוּ (Ps. xxxiii. 8), distinguished from יִרְאוּ ¹yîr'û (Ex. xvi. 32) "they see" (without mathĕg); so too יִשְׁנוּ ¹yîsh'nû "they sleep" (Prov. iv. 16), but יִשְׁנִי ¹yîsh'nî "they will change"; and again צִקְלָהּ ¹çîq'lâh (Josh. xv. 31) = צִיקְלָהּ ¹çîq'lâh (1 Chron. xii. 1. 20), and יִשְׁמְךָ ¹yîš'm'cá (Gen. xlviii. 20).

(3) Qibbuç written defectivè for shûrûq as יִנְבְּטִי ¹inb'tî (Gen. xxxi. 19), נִבְּלָהּ ¹nîb'lâh (Deut. xii. 20), נִאֲמַרְיָהּ ¹na'mar'yâh (Zech. i. 4).

(β) To ensure a sh'va being read moving after an evidently long vowel, as in בֵּיתְךָ ¹bêth'cá, מֵתְךָ ¹mêth'cá, יִירָאוּ ¹yîr'au (supra), תִּצְאוּ ¹tîç'au, נִרְדָּהּ ¹nîr'dâh, רֹשְׁךָ ¹rôsh'cá, אֶרְחַת ¹êr'châth, וַיִּנְיֹמְרָא ¹vayyînom'râ, גִּרְשׁוֹם ¹gîr'shôm, יוֹדְעִים ¹yôd'e'im.

(γ) When a word ends in a syllable with çērē and the accent is drawn back to the preceding syllable, but it is still wished to retain the çērē in the last syllable, a Fixed Metheg (called in this case הַעֲמָדָה Ha^amādāh, i.e. Conservative Metheg) is used, as וַיְבִי (Hos. xiv. 10), וַיִּצַח (Gen. iv. 16).

NOTE. Had the use of this metheg been confined to such cases it would have been of inestimable value. But unfortunately it is sometimes used with pretonic short qomoç. Thus we have עֲמָדָה ‘amōdh‘cā (Obad. ver. 11), where the grammatical consideration that the word comes from ‘mōd, taken with the fact that the Cod. Petrop. reads o, proves that ־ is here certainly qomoç not qāmāç. So שֹׁמְרֵנִי shom‘rēnī (Ps. xvi. 1) compared with שֹׁמְרֵי (xxv. 20) and שֹׁפְטֵי (xxvi. 1), and so too הַקִּרְבָּן haqqōr‘bhān (Ezek. xl. 43), Cod. Petrop. haqqorban.

Again, Ordinary metheg (in the place third from the tone, Rule 1) is as compatible with qomoç, as with qāmāç, thus קְדָשִׁי (Ezek. xlv. 13) is qōdāsháy (not qādāsháy), as may be seen from the pointing of קְדָשִׁים in the same verse, and the vocalization of Cod. Petrop., which is godāsháy. While on the other hand שְׂרָשִׁי (which is from shōresh, as qōdāsháy is from qōdesh) is given by Cod. Petrop. (Jer. xvii. 8, Hos. xiv. 6) as shārāshāv, and אֲהֹלֵי (Jer. xlix. 29) as āholēhām, and even אֲהֹלֵי (Zech. xii. 7) as āholé, and פְּעֻלָּה (Hab. iii. 2) as pā‘ol‘cā. With these variations of pronunciation we may compare רֹאשׁ rōsh plur. רֹאשִׁים rāshīm; the Ashkenazic pronunciation of qāmāç as aw or o, and the Sephardic as ā; the pronunciation of עָמָה by Western Syrians as ‘amō, and by Easterns as ‘ammā. Taking these phenomena in conjunction with the fact that both systems of vocalization use the qāmāç-sign with sh‘va to represent qomoç, we come to the conclusion that, at the time (or times) of the stereotyping of a traditional pronunciation by the writing of vowel-signs, qāmāç and qomoç were much alike in sound. Thus qāmāç would appear to have had the sound, not of the a in father, nor of that in call, nor yet of the oa in coal, but rather an intermediate sound such as of the o in the Fr. mode, or in the Romaic γεγονότων yeghonóton. The qomoç would represent the same sound, only *short*¹.

5. Fixed metheg is also used to enable a long vowel to remain in a closed syllable, when it has not the tone, as עֵץ־הַגֶּן, בְּלִמְשֵׁאֲצָר. לַעֲת־עֶרֶב. To this place belongs that much-disputed word בְּתִיִּם, בְּתִיִּם. The use of metheg in this case would of itself not be sufficient to guarantee the pronunciation of the ־ as \bar{a} (see NOTE on the preceding page). But, the fact that the ־ must have arisen from ־ as in אֵן for אִן, and דִּתִּין (Gen. xxxvii. 17) and דִּתִּין (2 Kings vi. 13), would predispose one to conclude that the ־ means \bar{a} . While the fact that Cod. Petrop. distinctly reads it as qāmāç is decisive (see in Is. iii. 14, v. 9). Three important facts are to be learnt from the Cod. Petrop. punctuation of the word, (1) the ־ is qāmāç, (2) the ת is hard, (3) the ת is not doubled (in other words the dagesh in it is lene), thus the word is not bāttīm or bottīm, but bātīm (comp. the Syr. bātē). This case of an unaccentuated qāmāç before a B^oGaDC^oFaTh letter with dagesh lene is, I believe, unique. Another case of the use of this metheg is in אֲנִי ānnā "O I pray," the Cod. Petrop. however does not double the nūn but reads ānā (Is. xxxviii. 3). [According to Codex Petropolitanus the word is mi^oel in Jon. iv. 2 ānāh.]

6. Fixed metheg is always placed with the vowel preceding the consonant which bears a compound sh^ova, whether the vowel agree with that in the compound sh^ova as יְעֹמֵר; or not, as שְׂמֵעָה (Ps.

¹ If the student think it strange that there should be a difference of opinion about the pronunciation of a vowel in Hebrew, he is reminded that we have similar difficulties in English: thus "cough" is by some pronounced kawf, and by others kōff; "coffee," kawfy and kōffy; "laugh," lāf and lāff. With regard to the vowel \bar{a} we will here give a few facts (kindly communicated to us by Mr Eirikr Magnússon). Swedish \bar{a} is sounded like English aw but deeply guttural. The etymol. equivalent in Danish is aa, which has the same sound as the Swedish \bar{a} without the guttural element, and so is more like the English \bar{o} . The Icelandic equivalent is \acute{a} , pronounced almost like ow in now. Let us take a few examples showing how these sounds tend at times to \bar{a} , and at others to \bar{o} . Thus Germ. mahl (māl), Ice. mál (mowl), Dan. maal (möl), Swed. mål (mawl).—Ice. ár (owr), Dan. aare (ore), Swed. år (awr), Engl. oar.—Germ. Thor (tör), Dan. daare (döre), Swed. dåre (dawre), Ice. dári (dowry).—Germ. Lohn (lön), Dan. laan (lön), Swed. lån (lawn), Ice. lán (lown).

xxxix. 19), וְמַתְּרֵי-יָרִים (Job xvii. 9), comp. Gen. xxi. 6, ii. 12, xxvii. 25.

NOTE. Sometimes we have a syllable which, according to Rule 1, would take Ordinary metheg, and, according to Rule 6, would take Fixed metheg; in such a case the Metheg is Fixed metheg, e.g. הַעֲשִׂירִי (Gen. viii. 5), אֲרֻדָּה-נָא (xviii. 21).

In Zech. xiii. 4 we have the anomalous formation בְּהִנְבְּאוֹתָו in which the Ordinary metheg is used in accordance with Rule 1; but the regular form בְּהִנְבְּאוֹ (ver. 3) has Fixed metheg, in accordance with Rule 4. (1).

In such a form as צִעְקִים the Fixed metheg is placed in accordance with both 4. β. and 6.

When such a form as יַעֲמֹד becomes יַעֲמֹדוּ the metheg becomes the Ordinary metheg (Rule 1), or when מַעֲלָל becomes מַעֲלָלֵיכֶם the Ordinary metheg is placed in accordance with Rule 2.

7. All forms of the verbs hāyāh "he was," and chāyāh "he lived," which have הָ or חָ, take Fixed metheg with the preceding letter: thus לִהְיֶה, וְחִיָּה "and live thou" (Gen. xx. 7), so יִחְיֶה (Gen. i. 29), nîh'yéthā (Deut. xxvii. 9), vèh'yéh "and be thou" (Gen. xii. 12), vîch'yú "and live ye" (xlii. 18).

8. (α) Two Fixed methegs may be placed on a word without any intervening vowel, as וְאֲבִרְכָה (Gen. xii. 3), וְלִהְיֶתְךָ (Deut. xxvi. 19).

(β) A Fixed metheg may be placed immediately before an Ordinary metheg, as לְאֲרִינֵיהֶם, וְהִקְמַתִּי.

9. (α) An Ordinary metheg may precede a Fixed metheg, if at least one syllable intervene, thus וְאֲשַׁתְּחֹה (Nah. iii. 19), וְהִקְמַתִּי.

(β) If no syllable intervene the Ordinary metheg is omitted, thus הָאֲכָלִים (not hà'òc'lim), יַאֲמְנוּ yè'àm'nū (not yè'àm'nū). Similarly הָאֲחֵרוֹן (xiv. 8), הָאֲחֹה (Zech. xi. 14), לֹא-עֲבֹרָה (Nah. iii. 19).

לְאִי־דִיהָ (ver. 6) with no Ordinary metheg with the first syllable, because the next syllable has Fixed metheg.

N.B. Light metheg (Ordinary, or Fixed) may sometimes become a conjunctive accent. Hence the syllable which bears a light metheg may be called the semi-tone-syllable. This change may take place if the word bearing the metheg has a disjunctive accent, and be immediately preceded by a word with a disjunctive accent. E.g. וְדָאֵרִם (Gen. iv. 1), comp. Zech. i. 1, 6, 7, vii. 6, 14, xii. 6, 10, xiv. 2, 21, Hos. xi. 6, Joel i. 17, ii. 2, Obad. 20, Jon. i. 4, &c.

Some of the effects to this semi-tonic value of Light metheg will be seen by a reference to B. 2. (β) and 3^a , and III. B. 5.

B.

HEAVY METHEG.

1. Heavy metheg stands with the Article הַ (or the prefixes בַּ, כַּ, לְ), when it stands before a consonant with sh'va from which the dagesh forte has been omitted: e.g. הַמִּלֵּדָת (Gen. xxxviii. 28): and that even before a Fixed metheg, as הַמְתַּעֲבִים (Mic. iii. 9), הַמְשֻׁרְתִּים (1 Chr. xxvii. 1).

EXCEPTIONS. (a) When the said initial consonant of the word is י', then metheg does not stand with the הַ of the deft. art., as הַיְאוּרִים (Ex. viii. 1).

(β) Nor on the syllable immediately before the tone, as הַמְעַט (Numb. xxxv. 8).

(γ) Immediately after ordinary metheg, heavy metheg cannot stand, e.g. בְּאֵר־הַמִּשְׁנָע (2 Kings ix. 11 in correct copies), where הַ has no heavy metheg because it is immediately preceded by the ordinary metheg, which stands in accordance with A. i. 2. (a).

2. Heavy metheg is placed, as a rule, with הַ interrogative (when pointed with full pathach). It is (in the prose books) usually to the right, instead of the left of the vowel (chiefly for the purpose of distinguishing the interrogative he from the definite article). Thus הַמֶּכֶּפֶר (Gen. xviii. 17), הַאֵלֶּךְ (Ex. ii. 7).

EXCEPTIONS. This metheg is not placed (a) when the letter after the ה is י, e.g. הַיְדֵעֶתֶם (Gen. xxix. 5).

(β) Nor on the syllable immediately preceding the tone, or the semi-tone (see A. II. 9, N.B.), e.g. הַאֵף (Gen. xviii. 24), הַלְעוּלָמִים (Ps. lxxvii. 8).

N.B. In הַאֲמֵת (Gen. xlii. 16) the metheg is of course Fixed metheg (A. 6).

(γ) Nor if a dagesh be put in the letter which follows ה, as הַבְּצֵעֶקְתָּהּ (Gen. xviii. 21), הַיִּיטֵב (Lev. x. 19); comp. Numb. xiii. 19, 20, Is. xxvii. 7, Job xxiii. 5; or, as it is sometimes, even in ה, as הַרְאִיתֶם (1 Sam. x. 24, 2 Kings vi. 32).

3—4. CASES DEPENDENT ON THE PRESENCE OF A DISJUNCTIVE ACCENT.

3. If a word have a disjunctive accent, and the tone-syllable begin with a consonant bearing moving sh'va, and the third syllable from the tone contain ā, ē, ī, ū or י "and" followed by a consonant with sh'va, expressed or understood (see Excurs. I. 1 and 4. β), then this vowel third from the tone will take Heavy metheg: e.g. וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ (Gen. iii. 8), עַל־מַחֲבֹת (Lev. vi. 14).

EXCEPTION. If the pre-tonic syllable have a long vowel with Fixed metheg (according to A. 4. a (1), or β (1)), and is not followed by a consonant with a compound sh'va, then the said short third vowel from the tone does not take metheg; e.g. מִשְׁבְּרֶךְ (Ex. vii. 28), וַיֹּאמְרוּ (Gen. xi. 3), לְרִצּוֹנְכֶם (Lev. xix. 5).

If this long vowel be ō, then even when it is followed by a consonant with compound sh'va, the said third vowel from the tone does not take metheg, as הַשְּׂאֵבֶת (Gen. xxiv. 11), עַד־בְּאֵף (xix. 22).

But if, in this last case, the compound sh'va be under the first of two like consonants, then the original rule holds good, as וַיִּרְפָּצְנוּ (Hab. iii. 6).

3^a. Since the Light metheg has a certain accent value (see A. 9, N.B.), if the word have a disjunctive accent, and the third syllable from the one bearing light metheg conform with all the above conditions, it will take Heavy metheg, e. g. : מִמְּחֵשְׁבוֹתֵיכֶם (Is. lv. 9). Comp. Ps. xviii. 45, 2 Kings v. 18.

N.B. Of course all the conditions must be fulfilled or the metheg will not be placed in the case of 3 and 3^a. Thus, if the word have a conjunctive accent, or if the tone (or semi-tone) syllable do not begin with a moving sh'va, or if the third syllable therefrom do not contain ā, ē, ī, ū, or u "and," the Heavy metheg is not placed.

4. If a word with a disjunctive accent, have in the pre-tonic syllable ā or ē, and the third syllable before the tone-syllable have ē, ī, ū, or י "and" followed by sh'va expressed or understood, this last mentioned syllable will take Heavy metheg: e. g. הַמְתַּרְפֶּכֶת (Gen. iii. 24), קִרְמַת־עֲדָן (iv. 16), וְנִשְׁמַת־מִי (Job xxvi. 4), מִשְׁנֵה־כֶּסֶף (Gen. xliiii. 15), וְסַחֲר־כֹּוֹשׁ (Is. xlv. 14), אֲשֶׁר־כִּנְעָנִים (Obad. ver. 20). See further under C. 3.

N.B. As in 3 and 3^a, all three conditions must be simultaneously observed or the Heavy metheg will not be placed.

EXCEPTION. Although migrā'-qōdesh has ā, not ā, in the pre-tonic syllable, it always takes Heavy metheg, when accentuated with Pashtā, e. g. מִקְרָא־קֹדֶשׁ (Lev. xxiii. 21, 27).

4^a. If, in words which would otherwise come under rules 3 or 4, the syllable fourth from the tone-syllable take Ordinary Light metheg (in accordance with A. 2. a) then the Heavy metheg is dropped from the following syllable, e. g. וְאִשְׁתַּחֲוָה (Gen. xxiv. 48), וְאִתְאַבְּלָה (Neh. i. 4), וְאִתְחַנַּן (Deut. iii. 23).

5. With a disjunctive accent the words זרעכם זרעך take heavy metheg under the ך, e.g. זרעך (Gen. iii. 15), זרעכם (Lev. xxvi. 16).— But not with a conjunctive accent, e.g. זרעך (Gen. xvii. 9). Or if the word have such a prefix as will take Heavy metheg (according to rule 3) then the ך takes none, e.g. את-זרעך (xxvi. 4).

6. The word וידי if accentuated with Pashtā, or if joined to the next word by maqqeph, or וידי if joined to the next word by maqqeph, takes Heavy metheg under the ך, thus וידי (Gen. iv. 8), וידי-לו (xii. 15), וידי-אשת (v. 6).

7. (α) If the Imperf. singl. Qal of a regular verb be joined to the next word by maqqeph, and the ō of the last syllable be changed into o, then the first syllable of the Imperf. takes Heavy metheg, as יקטל-עני (Job xxiv. 14); comp. Is. xlii. 1, Ps. cxxi. 8, Prov. iv. 4, Job iii. 5, Zech. ix. 2, 3. But the rule is not always observed, e.g. Gen. iii. 16, iv. 7, xli. 12 (ed. Baer).

(β) The rule holds good also with the Infin., with prefix ל, as לישבר-אכל (Gen. xliii. 22); but neither is it consistently observed in this case, comp. Joel ii. 17.

(γ) When the long ō is retained, it takes, of course, Fixed metheg (A. 5) and there is no Heavy metheg, as תתרוך-זית (Mic. vi. 15). [N.B. The metheg of : תשתה-יין of that verse is in accordance with B. 4.]

NOTE. A few words take an anomalous metheg, e.g. ùl'yishmā'él (Gen. xvii. 20), mìn-haṣṣādēh (xxx. 16), 'al-hammizbē'ch (Ex. xxix. 21), èth-yisrā'él (Numb. xxi. 23), èth-hā'āy (Josh. x. 1), èl-haṣṣādēh (2 Kings iv. 39), mīccol-hamm'qōmōth (Ezr. i. 4), umigdālīm (2 Chron. xiv. 6), all accentuated with Zarqā; comp. mìn-haggōyīm (Ps. cvi. 47) with 'olehv'yōrēd (Baer).

HEAVY METHEG WITH SH^{va}.

8. If a word begin with a consonant bearing simple sh^{va}, and be accentuated with Gershayim (^α), or Pazer (^β), without a conjunctive accent immediately preceding, and there be at least two vowels between the ך and the tone-syllable, then, if the first syllable have not already

Ordinary light metheg the $\dot{\text{}}$ will take Heavy metheg, e.g. וְאֶת־פִּתְרֹסִים (Gen. x. 14), כְּבִל־הַדְּבָרִים (Deut. ix. 10).

But in Jer. xxxv. 1 the v of v'col-chēlō does not take Heavy metheg, because the preceding word is accentuated with munach, comp. Ezek. xx. 40.

And the v of v'amartā (Ezek. xvi. 3) does not take Heavy metheg, because the 'ā has already ordinary metheg.

9. This *sh'va-ga'yā*¹ also stands on words beginning with a consonant with simple sh'va, (a) when accentuated with Dargā ($\bar{\text{}}$) as a duplicate conjunctive before R'bī'ā' ($\dot{\text{}}$) as וְשִׁלְמִים הֵם אֲתָנוּ (Gen. xxxiv. 21); (β) with Qadmā ($\dot{\text{}}$) as duplicate conjunctive before Pashtā ($\dot{\text{}}$) or T'bīr ($\bar{\text{}}$) as וְחִלַּת מִצֵּה אַחַת (Numb. vi. 19), וְחִלַּת לֶחֶם שֶׁמֶן (Ex. xxix. 23); (γ) with Mūnāch ($\bar{\text{}}$) as triplicate conjunctive before T'lishā g'dōlāh ($\bar{\text{}}$ on the first letter), or T'lishā q'tannāh ($\bar{\text{}}$ on the last letter) e.g. בְּהִנִּיחַ יי אֱלֹהֶיךָ לָךְ (Deut. xxv. 19), וְקִרְאֵת בְּמִגְלָה אִשְׁר־כָּתַבְתָּ מִפִּי (Jer. xxxvi. 6).

N.B. In all these cases given in 9 there must be at least one vowel between the sh'va and the tone-syllable: also the syllable beginning with the consonant with sh'va must not carry the Ordinary Light-metheg, or the sh'va-ga'yā will fall away, e.g. Deut. xxiv. 9; but the Fixed Light-metheg does not prevent the presence of sh'va-ga'yā, e.g. Numb. iv. 14.

ORTHOPHONIC METHEG.

1. (a)—If a word, accentuated with a conjunctive accent, end in pathach 'Ayin and be miš'el, or end in 'Ayin with furtive-pathach and be miš'ra, and the following syllable be accentuated, then the final y takes orthophonic metheg, to prevent its being slurred over in pronunciation: as יִלְעֵ קֹדֶשׁ (Prov. xx. 25), לְשִׁמְעֵ לִי (Lev. xxvi. 21).

(β) Or, if a word ending in pathach 'Ayin be joined by maqpeh to a word beginning with 'Ayin, as תִּשְׁע־עֵשְׂרֵה (Gen. xi. 25).

¹ There are several additional rules for placing sh'va-ga'yā in the books of Job, Proverbs and Psalms (in which the system of accentuation is different); but they need not be mentioned here.

2. If a word, accentuated with a conjunctive accent, end in (α) pathach and a guttural, or (β) pathach and rēsh, or (γ) in āh, and be mil'el; or (δ) end in a guttural with furtive pathach and be mil'ra; then, if the second word begins with a similar (not necessarily a like) letter, the final letter of the first word will take orthophonic metheg: as (α) זָבַח הַשְׁלָמִים (Lev. iv. 26), (β) צָרַר רוּחַ (Hos. iv. 19), (γ) פָּרְנָה אָרַם (Gen. xxviii. 2), (δ) גָּבִיעַ הַכֶּסֶף (xliv. 2).

3. If a word ending in a guttural preceded by pathach be joined by maqeph to the next word in such a way as to come under Rule B. 4, then in addition to the Heavy metheg, the guttural will take orthophonic metheg: as נִפְחֵלְנוּ (Gen. xxxiv. 16), נִשְׁפַּעְלִי (xxiv. 7).

4. Orthophonic metheg is sometimes used with a pre-tonic short vowel, to ensure the sh'va, which follows, being read moving either (α) regularly, or (β) irregularly, or (γ) in a pronunciation altogether anomalous; e.g. (α) אֲשֵׁרִי (in some Codd. even אִשְׁרִי) āsh'rē, סִבְבֵי sibh'cē (Is. x. 34), עֲרֹבֹת ār'bhōth (Numb. xxxi. 12), חֲרֹבֹת chār'bhōth (Josh. v. 2), מִשְׁבּוּ mish'cū (Ex. xii. 21), חֲסָדַי chās'dhé, דָּרְכָי dār'ché (Is. lxiii. 7, Jer. xii. 16), אֲרֵבָאֵל ār'bhē'l (Hos. x. 14), וַיַּיְתֵּדוּ vayyith-yà-tdhū (Numb. i. 18), רִדְפוּ rìdh'phū (Ps. lxxi. 11).—(β) עֲלוֹן āl'vān (Gen. xxxvi. 23), עֲלוֹהַ āl'vāh (ver. 40), הִתְעִיבוּ hith'ēbhū (Ps. xiv. 1), הֲרַחֵק hār'chīq (cii. 2), אַבְחָר ēb'chār (Job xxix. 25, cp. Ps. lxv. 5, lxviii. 24, Prov. xxx. 17, Job xxxix. 18), תִּדְרֹשׁ tadh'shē (Gen. i. 11) [שִׁבְמָה Sibh'māh, Numb. xxxii. 38, Is. xvi. 8, 9: this word ought, perhaps, rather to come under the rule A. 4, a. 2], לִשְׁכֹּת lish'cōth.—(γ) שְׂרִשׁוֹת shār'shōth (Ex. xxviii. 22) for שְׂרִשְׁרוֹת (ver. 14), סִלְכָה Sāl'cāh (Deut. iii. 10), פָּרְדָּר pār'dōd (Is. liv. 12).

NOTE.—In the instances given under (β) the metheg seems to perform the duty of the so-called dagesh dirimens, as in הֲצִפִּינוּ haçç'phīnō, or haçç'phīnō (Ex. ii. 3), מִקְדָּשׁ miqq'dāsh, or miq'dāsh (xv. 17). It would be perhaps better to call it heterophonic metheg.

EXCURSUS III.

DAGESH IN THE FIRST LETTER OF A WORD.

A.

B^cGaDC^cPhaTh Letters.

1. If a word beginning with a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter be preceded by a word ending in a non-quietescent consonant, the B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter takes dagesh lene, as עֵץ פְּרִי.

EXCEPTIONS. To this rule there are only three exceptions, viz.

אֲדֹנָי בָּם (Ps. lxxviii. 18), where, perhaps, the word is exceptionally pronounced Adonái, instead of Adonáy; קוֹרְתָוּ (Is. xxxiv. 11) where the word is, perhaps, pronounced qau (cow), not qav; and שָׁלֹו בָהּ (Ezek. xxiii. 42) where the word is, perhaps, pronounced shálevu not shálév.

2. But if a word beginning with a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter be preceded by a word ending in a long vowel, or quietescent letter, and bearing a conjunctive accent, the B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter is r^hpháiyáth (without dagesh), thus (Hos. ii. 5) וּשְׁמַתִּיהָ כַּמְדָּבָר (iv. 4) כַּמְרִיבֵי לֶהָן.

EXCEPTIONS. If the second word begin with פֶּבֶב, פֶּבֶב, פֶּבֶב, פֶּבֶב, or פֶּבֶב, the פֶּ or פֶּ takes dagesh lene, as (Jud. i. 14) וַיְהִי פְּבוּאָה comp. Gen. xlv. 27, Is. lix. 21, Josh. viii. 24.

But if the first of these letters have a full vowel, rule 2 still holds good, thus כַּהֲנֵי בְּמוֹת (1 Kings xiii. 33).

N.B. Rule A. 2 gives way before B. 4 (a), except in the cases of the prefixes בֶּ and כֶּ; it also yields to B. 4 (β), and B. 4 (γ) EXCEPTIONS.

3. (a) Also if such a word be preceded by a word ending in a long vowel, or quietescent letter, and bearing a disjunctive accent, the initial

B^rGaDC^oPhuTh letter still takes dagesh lene, as ואתה תישופנו (Gen. iii. 15).

(β) Or if the accent be conjunctive, but P^osiq be placed between the two words, as נת ורדו (Amos vi. 2, cf. viii. 9, &c.).

B.

Dagesh Conjunctionis.

1. If a word ending in ה־ be joined by maqpeph to a word accented on the first syllable, the first letter of the latter word takes dagesh conjunctionis, as (Hos. vi. 4) אעשה־לך, (viii. 7) יעשה־קמח, (2 Sam. vii. 13) יבנה־בית, (Prov. xv. 1) מענה־רד.

2. When וְ or מִ is prefixed to a word by maqpeph, the first letter of the word takes dagesh conjunctionis, wherever the accent may fall, as מִה־זאת (Gen. xii. 18), מִה־נורא (xxviii. 16), וְזֶה־מִזִּבְחֶךָ (1 Chr. xxii. 1).

3. If a word end in ה־..., and its last syllable begin with a consonant bearing moving sh'va and it be joined by maqpeph to a word accented on the first syllable, the first letter of the second word takes dagesh conjunctionis, as אֲזַבְחָהּ־לְךָ (Jon. ii. 10), סִמְאֵה־פִלַּת (2 Kings vii. 1), שְׁלַח־ה־לּוֹ (Ezek. xvii. 6).

N.B. But if the last syllable do not begin with a consonant bearing moving sh'va, there is no dagesh conjunctionis, e.g. וּפְנֵה־ רָדָךְ (Mal. iii. 1), נִגְדֵה־נָא (Ps. cxvi. 18). Neither is there after an Infin. or Impert. Qal with final he, e.g. וּלְדַבְּקֵה־בּוֹ (Deut. xi. 22), שְׁמַע־לִי (Job xxxii. 10).

4. The first letter of a word accented on the first syllable takes dagesh conjunctionis under the following conditions :

(a) If it be preceded by a word ending in ה־, ה־ or ה־, accented with a conjunctive accent on the penultimate, provided the penultimate be the proper tone-syllable of the word, as עֲשִׂיתָ זֹאת

(Gen. iii. 14), בְּאֶרֶץ שֶׁבַע (xlv. 1), לְמַעַן רֹאשׁ (Ezr. ix. 6), אֵלֶּה לָךְ (Gen. xxxiii. 5), וְשִׁמְתָּ שֵׁמוֹ (Neh. ix. 7).

EXCEPTIONS. The prefixes בּוֹ with simple sh'va do not take this dagesh, e.g. יִדְעֶתִיךָ בְּשֵׁם (Ex. xxxiii. 12), נְהִיִּיתָ לָעַם (Deut. xxvii. 9).

But לָךְ always takes this dagesh, thus הָלִילָה לָךְ (Gen. xviii. 25): and after the analogy of l'ca we have in Ps. xix. 3 וְלִילָה לְלִילָה.

(β) If the accent of the former word be drawn back to the penultimate, which would otherwise have had Fixed metheg (in accordance with Excurs. II. A. 4), as יִלְרָה בֵּן (Gen. xix. 38), נִירְשָׁה-לָנוּ (Ps. lxxxiii. 13).

(γ) But if the accent thus drawn back be on a syllable which could not take metheg, no dagesh conjunctionis is used, as שָׂרָה טֹב (Ezek. xvii. 8), חָרָה לָךְ (Gen. iv. 6).

EXCEPTIONS. Imperfects and Participles of verbs quiescent לָה are an exception to (γ), thus וּמִזֹּרָה שֶׁקָּרַר (Hab. ii. 18), עֵשָׂה פְּרִי (Gen. i. 11), יִנְקָה רַע (Prov. xi. 21).

(δ) If it be joined by maqeph to a preceding word ending in ה־ or ה־ with metheg on the preceding syllable (in accordance with Excurs. II. A. 1, NOTE) as יִלְרָה-לוֹ (Gen. xxi. 3), קָבָה-לִי (Numb. xx. 11), בּוֹנֵה-בַיִת (2 Chron. ii. 3), עֵשָׂה-פְּרִי (Gen. i. 12).

5. Rule 4 (a) holds good when the second word has not the tone, but merely the semi-tone (see Excurs. II. A. 9, N.B.) on the first syllable, as אֵלֶּה יַעֲקֹב וְעֵשָׂתָּ סָרְתִּיו (Ex. xxvii. 3), שְׁמָה קָבְרוּ (Gen. xxix. 31), (Is. xlv. 21).

EXCEPTION. But a B^cGaDC^cPhaTh letter does not take dagesh in these circumstances, thus אֵלֶּה תּוֹלְדוֹת (Gen. ii. 4), לְמָה

תַּעֲמֹד (xxiv. 31), פַּעֲלֹתַי בְּיָמַי (Ps. xlv. 2). [Except two, כָּמֹנָה בְּאֵלִים (Ex. xv. 11), וַיִּשְׁיֹמָה תֵּל-עוֹלָם, (Job viii. 29).]

N.B. From the foregoing rules it will be understood that if the latter of two words have neither the tone nor semi-tone on the first syllable, or if the former end in any open syllable except ā, āh, or eh, then the dagesh conjunctionis is not used, e.g. בִּרְכָתָ בְּרִיךְ (Numb. xxiii. 11), עֵשֶׂה פֶּלֶא (Ezek. xv. 11), לֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל (ver. 21), עֵשֶׂתִי כֵן (Neh. v. 15).

6. But, if the first word be mil'el and end in ū, and the next word begin with a sibilant or liquid, and an accentuated syllable, dagesh conjunctionis is used, as קָוְמוֹ צִאֵן (Gen. xix. 14), וַיִּחַלּוּ מַעַט (Hos. viii. 10). Also לֹא and לֵא take dagesh after וַיֹּאמְרוּ in Gen. xix. 2, Judg. xviii. 19, 1 Sam. viii. 19, Esth. vi. 13.

Delitzsch¹ gives 17 exceptions to the above rules, confirmed by the Massóreth, viz. Ex. xv. 1, 21, xv. 11, 13, 16, Deut. xxxii. 6, 15, Is. liv. 12, Jer. xx. 9, Ps. lxxvii. 16, xciv. 12, cxviii. 5, 18, Job v. 27, Dan. iii. 2, 3, v. 11.

C.

Orthophonic Dagesh.

1. When a word ending with a liquid, is joined by maggeph or a conjunctive accent to a word beginning with the same liquid, the initial liquid of the latter word should take orthophonic dagesh, as אִם-מִחוּשׁ (Gen. xiv. 23), עַל-לֵב (xxxiv. 3), בֶּן-נֹנִן (Ex. xxxiii. 11), וְנִעַלְמָם מִמֶּנּוּ (Lev. v. 2), וְהִיבֵל לִבְבָל (Ezr. vi. 5).

2. (a) When לֹא לוֹ come together (as Gen. xxxviii. 9, Hab. i. 6, ii. 6, Prov. xxv. 17), or לוֹ לֹא (as Deut. xxxii. 5), לֹא takes dagesh.

(β) Whenever לֵאמֹר is preceded by the word מִשָּׁה with a conjunctive accent, the ל takes dagesh (e.g. Ex. vi. 10, 29, xiii. 1, xiv. 1).

gessatione, in his Preface to Baer's edition of the Text of Proverbs.

EXCURSUS IV.

SOME OF THE USES OF SIMAN RAPHEH.

Siman rapheh (a small horizontal line placed over a letter to show that it has no dagesh) is abundantly used in some MSS. and Edd., and in others hardly at all. In none is it used uniformly.

1. It is used to indicate the intentional omission of a grammatical DAGESH FORTE, (a) after the def. art. as הַיְקוֹם (Gen. vii. 4)—but Baer omits it in ver. 23—to show that the yūd is not dageshed as it is in הַיְעוּצָה (Is. xiv. 26): so too frequently with מַ, as הַמְעַשְׂקָה (Is. xxiii. 12), לַמְנִי (lxv. 11).—(β) After he interrog. as הַיְזָבְחִים (Amos v. 25).—(γ) After min as מִקְצָה (Gen. xlvi. 21), comp. vi. 16, xxv. 23.—(δ) In the middle of Pi'elistic (or dageshed) forms, as וַיִּקְנָאוּ (Gen. xxvi. 14), עוֹרִים (Is. xlii. 16), so בְּקִשְׁרוֹ (Hos. vii. 10), but וּבְקִישׁוֹ (v. 15), הַמְקַלְלוֹת from maqḡel, but on the contrary מִמְסָאוֹ (Jon. iii. 6), comp. Is. xiv. 10, &c., from cissē'.—(ε) With other dageshed forms such as וְאַקְהָה (Gen. xviii. 5), וַיִּחְקֶנּוּ (Job xix. 24), הַתְּצִוּוּ (Is. xxii. 10); תְּאַמְנֶה for tē'āmān-nāh (Is. lx. 4), וּמִשְׂאֵת (Amos v. 11), and וַיִּשְׂאוּ (Jon. i. 15).—(ζ) To avoid the doubling of a letter before an anomalous dagesh lene as מִשְׂתִּים (Jon. iv. 11), comp. Zech. iv. 12.—(η) To show, in cases where a quiescent yūd or aleph is omitted after segōl, that the following letter is not to be doubled, as תְּכַלְנֶה (Job xvii. 5), comp. Mic. iii. 12, Zech. i. 17, v. 9.—(θ) To mark the omission of the dagesh forte in the objective suffix écā, as וַיִּרְדֵּי (Is. xxxviii. 19), comp. lviii. 8, Job v. 19, Obad. ver. 3, Prov. iii. 3, xxix. 17.

2. Siman Raphéh is also used : (a) to mark the anomalous omission of DAGESH LENE after a quiescent sh^eva, as יִפְנֹֿשֶׁךְ (Gen. xxxii. 18), יִרְכָּתוּ (xlvi. 13), יִקְבֹּךְ (Deut. xv. 4), but xvi. 13 without the siman raphéh, and so too בְּגָדוּ big-dhó (Hag. ii. 12, Prov. xx. 16), but נְגַדְהֶֿנָּא neg-dhāh-nā (Ps. cxvi. 18), where the omission of dagesh conjunct in the nūn shows that in such cases the sh^eva is quiescent (see III. B. 3, N. B.), מַרְבְּדִים mar-bhaddím (Prov. vii. 16, xxxi. 22).—(β) Or after a moving sh^eva as סְרַגֹּן, see also examples in II. C. 4.—(γ) To emphasize the correct omission of a dagesh lene, as חֲסִדִי (Is. lv. 3), as contrasted with the anomalous חֲסִי (which in our present texts is found in Lam. iii. 22, 2 Chron. vi. 42), comp. Gen. xix. 33, Ps. xviii. 13, xlv. 9, lxxvi. 4, יִלְרֶתֶךָ (cx. 3), בְּנַפְלִי (Job iv. 13), קִשְׁתֹּתַי (Is. v. 28), qash'thóthāv (see close of Excurs. II.), not qashtóthāv, תִּשְׁנֵנִי (xvii. 11).

3. Siman Raphéh is often used (a) to show that the letter after shūrūq written defectivè (◌◌) is not to be doubled, as אֱלִי (Gen. xxiv. 39), בַּעֲלַת (xx. 3), עֲגֹת (xviii. 16), מִצֶּקֶ (Job xi. 15); comp. Is. xv. 4, xlix. 20, Mic. iv. 3, Zech. i. 13, Gen. xxxi. 26, &c.; מְדַשְׁתִּי (Is. xxi. 10), הַיְשִׁים (Gen. xlvi. 22), and so often to distinguish between roots of the form of קוּם and סַבַּב; such is the case also in שָׁמוּ (Ps. xlv. 11), מִמָּה (lx. 4). Or, to prevent the doubling of a letter after chīrīq written defectivè, as סַעֲפִיָּה (Is. xvii. 6), הַחֲמִשִּׁי (Zech. vii. 3). (β) To distinguish between conjugations, as וַיִּמָּח (Gen. vii. 23) to show that it is Qal, not Niphal, קָבַצוּ (Joel ii. 16), שְׁלַחוּ (Gen. xlii. 16), הִזְקֵנוּ (Is. xxxv. 4) as being Impert. Qal, not Perf. Pi'el. (γ) To distinguish between like words, e. g. אָנָּה “whither” (Zech. xvi. 8) and even אָנָּה (Ps. cxxxix. 7) as differing from אָנָּא, "I pray"; between לָמָּה mil'ra, and לָמָּה mil'el "why"; to distinguish בְּרַחֲמֵי (Ps. xxvi. 2) as being from Rt. bāchán, and not the infin. of chānán; the subst. אֲמָצָה āmṣāh (Zech. xii. 5) from the Imperative Pi'el; מִנְלָם (Job xv. 29) to show that מ is not the prep. מִן; יָתְנוּ (Hos. viii. 10) to show that the root is not nāthán. (δ) To prevent the involuntary doubling of a consonant after an accentuated short vowel, as הַתְּתַנִּי (Job vii. 14); Zech. xiii. 5, Ps. xxx. 4, xxxi. 9, cxxxix. 1, Job ix. 19, xli. 3; יִגְשׁוּ (ver. 8), עֵשָׂה (Is. li. 13), קִרְבָּנָה (Gen. xli. 21); תּוֹרָה "thy dove" (Ps. lxxiv. 19) as distinguished from תּוֹרָה "she will teach thee"; or even after a long vowel as וְאִתְּנָה (xxxii. 6).—In Gen. i. 6 לָמִים to show that the qāmāç is merely euphonic.

4. Siman Raphēh is also used with final hē, (α) to show that though soft it is equivalent to ה as בָּהָּ as בָּהָּ עֹונָה (Numb. xv. 31); (β) to show that the hē is really quiescent (and not equivalent to ה) Zech. iv. 7, or to show that it is equivalent to א, Zech. ix. 8. Comp. Is. xviii. 5, xxi. 3, xxii. 17, 18, xxx. 32, lxxv. 18, Job xxxi. 22, xxxix. 13, Hos. ii. 13, ix. 10, Amos i. 11, Hab. iii. 11, Zeph. ii. 14, Prov. xii. 28, xxi. 22, &c.

5. To indicate that the initial letter of a word is purposely without dagesh, and that the rules given in Excurs. III. have not been overlooked.

From the foregoing examples it will be seen that (as in the case of metheg, and the sign for qamaç) the utility of Siman raphēh is much impaired by its being used for diametrically opposite purposes.
