PREFATORY NOTE.

I REGRET that the issue of the present volume has been somewhat delayed, partly by unlooked-for hindrances to the progress of the translators, partly by an illness which made it necessary for me to suspend for a time the work of revision. Mr. Bannerman has here completed his excellent version of the Commentary on the First Epistle; and the Commentary on the Second has been translated with skill and care by my young friend and former pupil, the Rev. David Hunter, of Kelso. I have revised both throughout in the interest of uniformity on the same principles as heretofore.

TO THE COMMENTARY ON THE SECOND EPISTLE.

SINCE the year 1862, in which the fourth edition of this Commentary was issued, the only exegetical work calling for mention on the Second Epistle to the Corinthians (except a Roman Catholic one) is that of von Hofmann. My relation to this work has already been indicated in the preface to the Commentary on the First Epistle; it could not be different in the exposition of the Second, and it will doubtless remain unaltered as regards the Pauline writings that are still to follow, as is apparent already in the case of the Epistle to the Galatians, my exposition of which I likewise am now issuing in a new edition.

The much-discussed questions of Introduction—whether between our two Epistles to the Corinthians there intervened a letter which has been lost, and whether the adversaries so sharply portrayed and severely censured by the apostle in the Second Epistle belonged to the Christ-party—have recently been handled afresh in special treatises with critical skill and acumen; and the general result, although with diversities in detail, points to an affirmative answer. After careful investigation I have found myself constrained to abide by the negative view; and I must still, as regards the second question, hold the Christine party to be the most innocent of the four, so that they are wrongly, in my judgment, made responsible for all the evil which Paul asserts of his opponents in the Second Epistle. I am at a loss to know, how so much that is bad can be brought into inward ethical connection with the simple confession ἐγὼ δὲ Χριστοῦ, without calling in the aid of hypotheses incapable of being proved; or how, moreover, Paul should not already in his First Epistle, which was followed up by the Second in the very same year, have discovered the thoroughly dangerous springs and movements of this party-tendency; or lastly, and most of all, how Clement of Rome, while recalling to the recollection of his readers the three other factions, should not even in a single word have mentioned the Christ-party, although in looking back on the past he could not but have had before his eyes the whole historical development of the fourfold division, and in particular the mischief for which the Christians were to blame, if there were in truth anything of the sort. I have not met with any real elucidation of these points among the acute supporters of the opposite view.

In wishing for this new edition a kindly circle of readers, not led astray either by the presupposition of the dogmatist or by the tendency to import and educe subjective ideas,—as I may be allowed to do all the more earnestly on account of the special difficulties that mark the present letter of the apostle,—I commit all work done for the science which applies itself soberly, faithfully, and devotedly to the service of the divine word—desiring and seeking nothing else than a sure historical understanding of that word—to the protection and the blessing of Him, who can do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask and understand. Under this protection we can do nothing against the truth, everything for the truth.

FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS

CHAPTER XIV.

VER. 7. Τοῖς φθόγοις] Lachm. reads τοῦ φθόγγου, with B, Clar. Germ. Tol. Ambrosiast. Too weakly attested; and after the preceding φωνὴν διδόντα (giving from itself) the change of the dative into the genitive (Vulgate, sonituum), and of the plural into the singular, was very natural. Neither ought we to read, instead of ζῶ (Elz. Lachm. Tisch.), the more weakly attested διδῶ (recommended by Griesb.), which is a repetition from the preceding διδόντα. — Ver. 10. ἐστίν] Lachm. Rück. Tisch. read εἰσίν, following A B D E F G \aleph , min. Clem. Dam. Theophyl. The singular is an emendation, in accordance with the neuter plural. — αὐτῶν] should be deleted, with Lachm. Rück. Tisch., according to preponderating testimony. A defining addition. — Ver. 13. Instead of διόπερ read διό, upon decisive evidence. — Ver. 15. δέ] is wanting both times in F G, min. Vulg. It. Sahid. Syr. Damasc. and Latin Fathers; the first time also in K, the second time also in B; hence Lachm. deletes only the second δέ. Probably Paul did not write either at all, and B contains merely the insertion which was first made in the first half of the verse. — Ver. 18. Elz. has μου after Θεῷ, which Reiche defends, in opposition to decisive evidence. Addition from i. 4; Rom. i. 8, al. There is preponderating testimony for γλώσση (Lachm. Rück. Tisch.) in place of γλώσσαις, as, indeed, in this chapter generally the authorities vary greatly in respect of the singular and plural designation of this charisma. In this passage the plural was inserted because they ascribed the knowledge of ever so many languages to the apostle. — λαλῶν] B D E F G \aleph , 17, 67 Copt. Syr. utr. Vulg. It. Oec. and Latin Fathers have λαλῶ (so Lachm. and Tisch.); of these, however, F G, Copt. Syr. utr. Vulg. It. and Latin Fathers have ὅτι before πάντων. L omits λαλῶν altogether (which Rück. prefers, as also D. Schulz and de Wette). The preponderance of attestation is manifestly in favour of λαλῶ, which is also to be regarded as the original. For the omission (A) is explained by the fact that the words from εὐχαριστῶ to γλώσσαις were viewed (in accordance with vv. 14-16) as belonging to each other. Other transcribers, who rightly saw in πάντων ὑμῶν κ.τ.λ. the ground of the εὐχαριστῶ, sought to help the construction, some of them by ὅτι, some by changing λαλῶ into λαλῶν. The latter was welcome also to those who saw in πάντων . . . λαλῶν, not the ground, but the mode of the εὐχαριστῶ, such as Reiche, Comm. crit. p. 271, who accordingly defends the Recepta.—Ver. 19. Elz. Tisch. read διὰ τοῦ νοῦς, running counter, it is true, to A B D E F G κ, vss. and Fathers, which have τῷ νοῖ (so Lachm. and Rück.), but still to be defended, because τῷ νοῖ has manifestly come in from ver. 15. The very old transcriber's error διὰ τὸν νόμον (without μου), which Marcion followed, tells likewise on the side of the Recepta.—Ver. 21. ἐτέροις] Lachm. Rück. read ἐτέρων, following A B κ, min. Rightly; the dative was written mechanically after ἐτερογλώσσοις and χεῖλεσιν.—Ver. 25. Elz. has καὶ οὕτω before τὰ κρυπτά, in opposition to greatly preponderating evidence. The result seemed to begin at this point, hence the subsequent καὶ οὕτω was taken in here and the οὕτω following was left out (so still Chrysostom). Afterwards this second οὕτω was restored again without deleting the first καὶ οὕτω.—Ver. 32. πνεύματα] D E F G and some min. vss. and Fathers have πνεῦμα. But πνεύματα seemed out of place, seeing that it is the Holy Spirit that impels the prophets.—Ver. 34. ὑμῶν, which is defended by Reiche and Tisch., is wanting in A B κ, min. vss. and Fathers (deleted by Lachm. and Rück.), but was very liable to be omitted from its being non-essential, and from the generality of the precept, and is to be retained on the ground of its old (as early as Syr.) and sufficient attestation.—ἐπιτέραπται] ἐπιτρέπεται has greatly preponderant authorities in its favour. Recommended by Griesb., adopted by Lachm. Rück. Tisch. Rightly; the sense of the perfect (permissum est) came more readily to the mind of the transcribers, both of itself and because of the prevalent reference to the law.—ὑποτάσσεσθαι] Lachm. Rück. read ὑποτασέσθωσαν, following A B κ, and some min. Copt. Bashm. Marcion, Damasc.; an interpretation.—Ver. 35. γυναικί] Elz. Scholz read γυναιζί, in opposition to A B κ* min. and several vss. and Fathers. The plural was introduced mechanically after the foregoing.—Ver. 37. εἰσὶν ἐντολαί] Many various readings. Among the best attested (by A B κ Copt. Aeth. Aug.) is ἐστὶν ἐντολή. So Lachm. But D* E* F G, codd. of It. Or. Hil. Ambrosiast. have simply ἐστίν; and this is the original (so Tisch.), to which ἐντολή was added, sometimes before and sometimes after, by way of supplement. The Recepta εἰσὶν ἐντολαί (defended by Reiche) arose out of the plural expression ἀ γράφῃ in the way of a similar gloss.—Ver. 38. ἀγνοεῖτω] ἀγνοεῖται occurs in A* (apparently) D* F G S* Copt. Clar. Germ. Or. So Lachm. and Rück.; Rinck also defends it. Other vss. and Fathers have ignorabitur. But in the scriptio continua an Ω might easily be left out from $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\tau\Omega\Omega\sigma\tau\epsilon$, and then it would be all the more natural to supplement wrongly the defective $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\tau$ by making it $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\tau\alpha\iota$, as it was well known that Paul is fond of a striking interchange between the active and passive of the same verb (viii. 2, 3, xiii. 12). One can hardly conceive any ground for $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\tau\alpha\iota$ being changed into the imperative, especially as the imperative gives a sense which seems not to be in keeping with apostolic strictness and authority. Offence taken at this might be the very occasion of $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\tau\omega$ being purposely altered into $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\tau\alpha\iota$.

CONTENTS.—(1) Regarding the higher value of prophecy in comparison with the gift of tongues, vv. 1–25. (2) Precepts regarding the application of the gifts of the Spirit in general, and of the two named in particular, vv. 26–33, with an appended remark on the silence of women, vv. 34, 35. (3) Corroboration of the precepts given, vv. 36–38, and reiteration of the main practical points, vv. 39, 40.

Ver. 1. $\Delta\acute{\iota}\omega\kappa\epsilon\tau\epsilon\ \tau.\ \acute{\alpha}\gamma\acute{\alpha}\pi\eta\nu$] pursue after love; asyndetic, but following with all the greater emphasis upon the praise of love, chap. xiii.; while the figurative $\delta\acute{\iota}\omega\kappa.$ (sectamini) corresponds to the conception of the way, xii. 31. Comp. Phil. iii. 12. And after Paul has thus established this normative principle as to seeking after the better gifts of the Spirit, he can now enter upon the latter themselves more in detail. — $\zeta\eta\lambda\omicron\upsilon\tau\epsilon\ \delta\grave{\epsilon}\ \kappa.\tau.\lambda.$] With this he joins on again to xii. 31, yet not so as to make the $\delta\acute{\epsilon}$ resumptive,—in which case $\delta\acute{\iota}\omega\kappa.\ \tau.\ \acute{\alpha}\gamma\acute{\alpha}\pi.$ would be left standing in an isolated position,—but in such a way that he sets over against the latter the $\zeta\eta\lambda\omicron\upsilon\nu\ \tau\grave{\alpha}\ \pi\nu.$ as what is to take place along with it. “Let the end which you pursue be love; in connection with which, however,—and upon that I will now enter more particularly,—you are not to omit your zealous seeking after the gifts of the Spirit, but to direct it especially to prophecy.” Comp. Chrysostom, Theodoret, and Theophylact. — $\tau\grave{\alpha}\ \pi\nu\epsilon\upsilon\mu\alpha\tau\iota\kappa\acute{\alpha}$] as in xii. 1, the gifts of the Spirit generally, not merely the glossolalia (Billroth, Ewald, comp. also Rückert), which first comes in at ver. 2, and that with a definite designation. $\text{Μᾶλλον δὲ ἵνα προφ.}$, which is not to be read as a subordinate clause (Hofmann), represents and defines more closely the phrase $\tau\grave{\alpha}\ \chi\alpha\rho\acute{\iota}\sigma\mu\alpha\tau\alpha\ \tau\grave{\alpha}\ \kappa\rho\epsilon\acute{\iota}\tau\tau\omicron\nu\alpha$, xii. 31.

Μᾶλλον does not simply compare the longing for prophetic gifts with that for the glossolalia,—which is only done in the following verses (in opposition to Hofmann),—but is to be explained: “in a higher degree, however, than for the other gifts of the Spirit, be zealous that ye may speak prophetically.” The ἵνα thus states the design of the ζηλοῦτε, which we must again mentally supply (comp. ver. 5).

Vv. 2, 3 give the ground of the μᾶλλον δὲ ἵνα προφ. by comparing prophecy with the glossolalia in particular, which was in such high repute among the Corinthians.—For he who speaks with the tongue (see on xii. 10) speaks not to men (does not with his discourse stand in the relation of communicating to men), but to God, who understands the Holy Spirit's deepest and most fervent movements in prayer (Rom. viii. 26 f.). Comp. ver. 28.—οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἀκούει] for no one hears it, has an ear for it. So too Porphyr. de Abst. iii. 22; Athen. ix. p. 383 A. What is not understood is as if it were not heard. Comp. Mark iv. 33; Gen. xi. 7, xlii. 43, and see ver. 16: τί λέγεις οὐκ οἶδε.¹ Wicseler, in 1838, took advantage of ἀκούει in support of his theory of the soft and inaudible character of the speaking with tongues, against which the very expression λαλεῖν, the whole context (see especially ver. 7 f.) and the analogy of the event of Pentecost, as well as Acts x. 46 and xix. 6, are conclusive. See also on xii. 10, xiii. 1. The emphatic οὐκ ἀνθρ. λαλεῖ, ἀλλὰ τ. Θεῷ militates against Fritzsche, Nov. opusc. pp. 327, 333, who takes οὐδεὶς γ. ἀκούει in a hyperbolic sense (“nam paucissimi intelligunt, cf. Joh. i. 10, 11”). No one understands it,—that is the rule, the exceptional case being only, of course, that some one gifted with the χάρισμα of interpretation is present; but in and of itself the speaking with tongues is of such a nature that no one understands it. Had Paul meant the speaking in foreign languages, he could all the less have laid down that rule, since, according to ver. 23, it was a possible case that all the members of the church should speak γλώσσαις, and consequently there would always be some present who would have understood the foreign language of an address.—πνεύματι δὲ λαλεῖ μυστ.] δέ—not the German “sondern” (Rückert)—is the however or on the other hand frequent after a negative statement (see Hartung, Partik. I. p. 172; Baeumlein,

p. 95). We are not to understand πνεύματι of the objective Holy Spirit, ver. 14 being against this, but of the higher spiritual nature of the man (different from the ψυχή). This, the seat of his self-consciousness, is filled in the inspired man by the Holy Spirit (Rom. viii. 16), which, according to the different degrees of inspiration, may either leave the reflective activity of the understanding (νοῦς, ver. 14) at work, or suspend it for the time during which this degree of inspiration continues. The latter is what is meant here, and πνεύματι λαλεῖν signifies, therefore, to speak through an activity of the higher organ of the inner life, which directly (without the medium of the νοῦς) apprehends and contemplates the divine; so that in πνεύματι is implied the exclusion of that discursive activity, which could, as in the case of prophecy, present clearly to itself in thought the movements and suggestions of the Holy Spirit, could work these out, connect them with things present, and communicate them to others in an intelligible way. — μυστήρια] secrets, namely, for the hearers, hence what was unintelligible, the sense of which was shut up from the audience. The mysterious character of the speaking with tongues did not consist in the things themselves (for the same subjects might be treated of by other speakers also), but in the mode of expression, which, as not being brought about and determined by the intellectual activity of the νοῦς, thereby lacked the condition connecting it with the intellectual activity of the hearer, for which it was only made ready by the interpretation. Comp. Delitzsch, Psychol. p. 362. — οἰκοδ. κ. παρακλ. κ. παραμ.] The first is the genus, the second and third are species of it:¹ edification (Christian perfection generally) and (and in particular) exhortation (comp. on Phil. ii. 1) and consolation. — παραμυθία, only here in the N. T., means address in general (Heindorf, Stallbaum, ad Plat. Phaed. p. 70 B), then comfort in particular; Plato, Ax. p. 365 A; Aeschin. Dial. Socr. ii. 3; Lucian, Mort. D. xv. 3; de Dea Syr. 22; Ael. V. H. xii. 1; Wisd. xix. 12. Comp. on παραμύθιον, Phil. ii. 1.

Ver. 4. Difference between the relations of the two in respect of the just mentioned οἰκοδομή. — ἑαυτόν] in so far, namely, as he not merely believes that he feels (Wetstein), but really does feel in himself the edifying influence of what he utters. This does not presuppose such an understanding of what he utters as could be communicated to others, but it does assume an impression on the whole of a devout and elevating, although mystical kind, experienced in his own spirit. — ἐκκλησι.] a church, without the article, an assembly.

Ver. 5. Δέ] ἐπειδὴ παρ' αὐτοῖς ἐλάλουν γλώσσαις πολλοὶ, ἵνα μὴ δόξῃ διὰ φθόνου κατασμικρύνειν τὰς γλώσσας, θέλω, φησὶ, πάντα κ.τ.λ., Theophylact. Comp. the δέ, xii. 31. — μάλλον δὲ κ.τ.λ.] rather, however, I wish that ye should speak prophetically. Note here the distinction between the accusative with the infinitive and ἵνα after θέλω (see on Luke vi. 31). The former puts the thing absolutely as object; the latter, as the design of the θέλω to be fulfilled by the readers (Nägelsbach on the Iliad, p. 62, ed. 3); so that it approaches the imperative force (Fritzsche, ad Matth. p. 839). — μεῖζων] preferable, of more worth, xiii. 13, because more useful for edification, vv. 6, 26. — ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ διερχμ.] the case being excepted, if he interpret (what has been spoken with tongues). ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ is a mixing up of two modes of expression, so that μὴ now seems pleonastic. Comp. xv. 2; 1 Tim. v. 19. Not a Hebraism (Grotius), but found also in the later Greek writers (Lucian, Dial. Mer. 1; Soloec. 7). See Wetstein; Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 459. — Regarding εἰ with the subjunctive, see on ix. 11. The subject to διερχμ. is not a τίς to be supplied (Flatt, comp. Ewald), but ὁ λαλῶν γλ. The passage shows (comp. ver. 13) that one and the same person might be endowed with glossolalia and interpretation.

Ver. 6. Νυνὶ δέ] But so, i.e. but in this condition of things, since, namely, prophecy is greater than the speaking with tongues when left without edifying interpretation, I, if I came to you as a speaker with tongues, would only then be useful to you when I united with it prophetic or doctrinal discourse. Hofmann is wrong in wishing to refer νυνὶ δέ to the main thought of ver. 5; in that case the second part of ver. 5 is all the more arbitrarily overlooked, seeing that the ἐὰν μὴ in ver. 6 is manifestly correlative to the ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ in ver. 5. Others take it otherwise. But the key to the interpretation which is in accordance with the context and logically correct lies in this, that the two uses of ἐάν are not co-ordinate (which was my own former view), so as in that way to give to the principal clause, τί ὑμᾶς ὠφελήσω, two parallel subordinate clauses (comp. on Matt. v. 18); but, on the contrary, that ἐάν μή, corresponding to the ἐκτὸς εἰ μή, ver. 5, is subordinated to the first ἐάν. Paul might, forsooth, instead of ἐάν μή . . . διδαχῇ have written simply: ἐάν μή ὑμῖν διερμηνεύσω. Instead of doing so, however, he specifies the two kinds of discourse in which he might give an interpretation of his speech in tongues, and says: If I shall have come to you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, if I shall not have spoken to you (for the sake, namely, of expounding my speech in tongues, ver. 5), either in revelation, etc. The apostle possessed the gift of glossolalia (ver. 18), but might also be his own διερμηνευτής, and might apply to the διερμηνεύειν the other apostolic charismata which belonged to him for teaching, prophecy, and διδαχή (xiii. 9; Acts xiii. 1). — ἡ ἐν ἀποκαλ. κ.τ.λ.] not four, but two charismatic modes of teaching are here designated — prophecy and didascalia. For the former, the condition is ἀποκάλυψις; for the latter, γνώσις. See Estius in loc. The prophet spoke in an extempore way what was unfolded and furnished to him by revelation of the Spirit; the teacher (if he did not simply deliver a λόγος σοφίας, xii. 8) developed the deep knowledge which he had acquired by investigation, in which he was himself active, but yet was empowered and guided by the Spirit. This twofold division is not at variance with xiii. 2, from which passage, on the contrary, it is plain that there belonged to prophecy γνώσις and ἀποκάλυψις, the latter of which was not included as a condition of the didascalia; so that the characteristic mark of distinction in prophecy is thus the ἀποκάλυψις. Comp. ver. 30. — ἐν denotes the inward (ἀποκαλ., γνωσ.) and outward (προφ., διδ.) form in which the λαλεῖν takes place. Comp. Matt. xiii. 3. — Note further the use of the first person, in which Paul comes forward himself with all the more convincing force in support of what he says.

Ver. 7. The uselessness of a discourse remaining in this way unintelligible is now shown by the analogy of musical instruments. — ὅμως] is paroxytone, and means nothing else than tamen (Vulgate), but is put first here and in Gal. iii. 15, although logically it ought to come in only before ἐὰν διαστολὴν κ.τ.λ.; hence it is to be explained as if the order was: τὰ ἄψυχα, καίπερ φων. διδόντα, εἴτε αὐλός, εἴτε κιθάρα, ὅμως, ἐὰν διαστολὴν τ. φθ. μὴ δῶ, πῶς γνωσθήσεται κ.τ.λ. It is rightly taken by Chr. F. Fritzsche, Nov. Opusc. p. 329. Comp. C. F. A. Fritzsche, Conject. I. p. 52: "instrumenta vitae expertia, etiamsi sonum edunt, tamen, nisi distincte sonent, qui dignoscas," etc. So Winer, also, at last (ed. 6; ed. 7, p. 515 [E. T. 693]), and, in like manner, Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 264 [E. T. 308]. To analyse it into τὰ ἄψυχα, καίπερ ἄψυχα, ὅμως φωνὴν διδόντα κ.τ.λ. (Winer formerly, comp. Rückert), brings out an antithetic relation which could not be calculated on from the context. For what is to be expressed is not that the instruments, although lifeless, nevertheless sound; but this, that the lifeless instruments, although they sound, nevertheless give out no intelligible melody, unless, etc. As regards the hyperbaton, common with classical writers also, by which ὅμως, instead of following the participle, goes before it,¹ see Matthiae, § 566, 3; Krüger, § lvi. 13. 3; Stallbaum, ad Plat. Rep. p. 495 D; Ast, Lex. Plat. II. p. 447; Jacobs, ad Del. epigr. p. 232. That ὅμως stands for ὁμοίως, and should be accented (comp. Lobeck, ad Soph. Aj. p. 480, ed. 2) ὁμῶς (Faber, Alberti, Wetstein, Hoogeveen, and others), is as erroneous (ὅμως means: equally, together) as Kypke's assertion that the paroxytone ὅμως means similiter. — διδόντα] giving forth, as Pind. Nem. v. 93; Judith xiv. 9. Φωνή is used of the voice of musical instruments in Ecclus. l. 16; Esdr. v. 64; 1 Macc. v. 31, al. Comp. Plat. Tim. p. 47 C; μουσική φωνή, Pol. iii. p. 397 A; Plut. Mor. p. 713 C; Eur. Tro. 127. — ἐὰν διαστολὴν κ.τ.λ.] If they (the ἄψυχα φωνὴν διδόντα) shall not have given a distinction to the sounds, if they shall have sounded without bringing out the sounds in definite, distinctive modulation. "Harmoniam autem ex intervallis sonorum nosse possumus," Cic. Tusc. i. 18. 41. Comp. Plat. Phileb. p. 7 C D, and Stallbaum in loc. — πῶς γνωσθήσ. τὸ αὐλ. κ.τ.λ.] how shall that be recognised which is played upon the flute or upon the cithern? i.e. how can it then possibly happen that one should recognise a definite piece of music (a melody) from the sounds of the flute or the cithern?

¹ Not always immediately before, as Hofmann opines that Paul must have written: τὰ ἄψυχα ὅμως φων. διδόντα. See Jacobs, l.c.; also Reisig, Enarr. Oed. Col. p. xlv. Comp., too, 4 Macc. xiii. 26.

One is none the wiser from them as to what is being played. The repetition of the article is quite correct: what is being played on the flute, or again, in the other supposed case, what is played upon the cithern. Rückert takes it as meaning, How is it possible to distinguish between flute and cithern? Inappropriate, in view of the essentially different character of the two instruments, and seeing that the question in the context (comp. ver. 9) is not as to distinguishing between the instruments, but as to understanding the melody.—It may be observed, further, that the analogy in ver. 7 would be unsuitable, if Paul had been thinking of foreign languages, since these would not have lacked the διαστολή of the sounds. This holds also in opposition to the view of the matter which makes it an utterance of glosses, as likewise in opposition to Wieseler's conception of a soft γένος γλωσσῶν, seeing that in ver. 7 it is not the strength of the sound, but its distinctness (comp. Wieseler himself in 1860, p. 114), in virtue of which it expresses a melody, which is the point of comparison.

Ver. 8. Confirmation of the negative implied in πῶς γνωσθήσεται κ.τ.λ., by another yet stronger example: for also in the case of, etc. The emphasis is upon σάλπιγξ, a trumpet, the simple sounds of which are assuredly far more easily intelligible as regards their meaning and design than those of flute and cithern. — ἄδηλον] unclear, uncertain, qui dignosci nequeat, Beza. “Unius tubae cantus alius ad alia vocat milites,” Bengel. Ver. 9. Inference from ver. 7 f.: accordingly, if you also, etc. — διὰ τῆς γλώσσης] for it was by means of the tongue that his readers brought forth so much unintelligible matter through their glossolalia. The ὑμεῖς διὰ τῆς γλώσσης speaking unintelligibly correspond to those instruments in vv. 7, 8; hence διὰ τ. γλ. is put immediately after ὑμεῖς, and before εἰάν (comp. vi. 4). — εὐσημον λόγον] an easily distinguishable discourse, the meaning of which comes plainly out by clear and distinct words and connection. Vv. 10, 11. Another example still to induce them to lay aside this way of speaking. — εἰ τύχοι] if it so happens, if it is really the case, i.e. perhaps, just as the mere absolute τυχόν also is employed (Isocr. Archid. 38; De pace, 60; Xen. Mem. vi. 1. 20, and Kühner in loc.). So in all the passages in Wetstein, Loesner, p. 293; Viger. ed. Herm. p. 301, which are usually adduced in support of what is assumed (by Rückert also) to be the meaning here: for example. The phrase has never this meaning, and merely its approximate sense can be so expressed,¹ and that always but very unexactly, in several passages (such as xv. 37; Lucian, Amor. 27). And in the present case this sense does not suit at all, partly because it would be very strange if Paul, after having already adduced flutes, citherns, and trumpets as examples, should now for the first time come out with a "for example," partly and chiefly because εἰ τύχοι is a defining addition, not to the thing itself (γένη φωνῶν), but to its quantity (to τοσαῦτα). Comp. Lucian, Icarom. 6: καὶ πολλάκις, εἰ τύχοι, μηδὲ ὅποσοι στάδιοι Μεγαρόθεν Ἀθήναζε εἰσιν, ἀκριβῶς ἐπιστάμενοι. Paul, namely, had conceived to himself under τοσαῦτα a number indefinite, indeed, but very great;² and he now takes away from this conception its demonstrative certainty by εἰ τύχοι: in so great multitude, perhaps, there are different languages in the world. Billroth, too, followed by Olshausen, takes εἰ τύχοι in itself rightly, but introduces an element of irony, inasmuch as he quite arbitrarily takes τοσαῦτα . . . καὶ οὐδέν for ὅσα . . . τοσαῦτα, and, in doing so, makes εἰ τύχοι even reach over to the second clause: "as many languages as there are, probably just so many have sense and significance." — On εἰ with the optative, expressing the mere conjecture, it may suffice to refer to Hermann, ad Viger. p. 902. — γένη φωνῶν] i.e. all sorts of different languages, each individual unit of which is a separate γένος φωνῶν. The opposite is φωνή μὴ πᾶσι, Gen. xi. 1. — οὐδέν] namely, γένος φωνῶν. Bleek renders it, contrary to the context: no rational being. For were the language spoken to me (τῆς φων.) ἄφωνος, and so unintelligible in itself, I could not in that case appear even as a barbarian to the speaker, because, in fact, what he spoke would be understood by no man. The barbarian (βαρβαρόφωνος, Herod. vii. 20, ix. 43) speaks only a foreign language, not one altogether devoid of meaning for others. — τὴν δύναμιν τῆς φωνῆς] the signification, the sense of the language (which is being spoken). Polyb. xx. 9. 11; Lucian, Nigr. 1, al. Comp. Herod. ii. 30; Plat. Euthyd. p. 286 C. — ἐν ἐμοί] with me, i.e. in my judgment. See Valckenaer, ad Eur. Hipp. 324; Pflugk, ad Eur. Hel. 996; Winer, pp. 362, 204 [E. T. 483, 273].

REMARK.—Paul has chosen φωνή to denote language, because in the whole section he has only the meaning tongue in his mind for γλῶσσα. To instruct his readers regarding the speaking with tongues, he uses the analogy of speaking languages. Hofmann resorts to the suggestion that Paul must have used φωνή here, because he would not have expressed what καὶ οὐδέν ἄφωνον was designed to convey by κ. οὐδέν ἄγλωσσον. That is incorrect; for ἄγλωσσον would have conveyed the very same thing (speechless, Poll. ii. 108; Soph. Trach. 1060; Pind. Nem. viii. 41) with the very same point (et nullum elingue), if he had used γλῶσσα instead of φωνή.

Ver. 12. Inference, which the readers have to draw from ver. 10 f. “Therefore (itaque), seeing, namely, that the unintelligible speaking is, according to ver. 10 f., something so absurd, seek ye also, since ye are indeed zealous after spirits, with a view to the edification of the church therein, that ye may have abundance.” The οὕτω κ. ὑμεῖς, which is repeated here, must be related to ver. 10 f., just as the οὕτω κ. ὑμεῖς in ver. 9 is to ver. 7 f., and may not therefore be made to refer to all that precedes it back as far as ver. 6 (Hofmann). As the former οὕτω κ. ὑμεῖς set forth an inference for warning, so the present one infers the requisite precept, and for both what in each case immediately precedes serves as the premiss. — Πρὸς τ. οἰκοδ. τ. ἐκκλησ. has the emphasis (in opposition to Hofmann). The absurdity referred to is meant to point the readers, with their zealous striving after gifts of the Spirit, to the right way, namely, that *with a view to the edification of the church*¹ they should seek after ever richer endowments. Consequently it is just as superfluous to isolate οὕτω κ. ὑμεῖς as a sentence by itself (τινές in Theophylact, Mosheim, Flatt, Heydenreich), which, moreover, would be quite unsuitable in respect of sense, as it is to assume a suppressed inference after ver. 11 (Estius, Rückert). — Καὶ ὑμεῖς] you too; for the Corinthians were in fact to form no exception from this general maxim, as in their striving after higher charismata, and especially after the gift of speaking with tongues, seemed, alas, to be the case! — ἐπεὶ ζηλωταὶ ἐστε πνευμ.] on which account you have all the more need of the right regulative! A pointed hint for the readers, the force of which they could doubtless feel for themselves. — πνευμάτων] the genitive of the object, to which the zealous striving relates. The plural expression is purposely chosen κατὰ τὸ φαινόμενον (comp. Hofmann) in keeping with the emulous doings at Corinth. For the specifically different manifestations, in which the manifold working of the One Spirit displayed itself, assumed indeed, in presence of such jealous seeking and striving, such an appearance to the eyes of the observer of this unseemly state of things, as though not one Spirit, but a plurality of spirits, differing in kind and importance, were the object of the rivalry. What were διαιρέσεις χαρισμάτων, and hence only different φανερώσεις τοῦ πνεύματος, presented themselves, as matters stood at Corinth, to the eye and pen of the apostle as διαίρέσεις πνευμάτων. Πνευμάτων, therefore, is just as far from standing for πνευματικῶν (Beza, Piscator, Storr, Flatt, and others) as it is from denoting the glossolalia (Heydenreich, Billroth).¹ To suppose a real plurality of spirits, after the analogy of the persons possessed by a number of evil spirits (see Hilgenfeld, p. 52 f.), so that a number of divine spirits would be meant, is at variance with the N. T. generally, and at variance with xii. 4, 7 ff. — ἵνα περισσ.] Οὐκ εἶπεν ἵνα κτήσῃσθε τὰ χαρίσματα, ἀλλ' ἵνα περισσεύητε, τοτέστιν ἵνα καὶ μετὰ δαψιλείας πολλῆς αὐτὰ ἔχητε· τοσοῦτον γὰρ ἀπέχω τοῦ μὴ βούλεσθαι ἔχειν ὑμᾶς αὐτὰ, ὅτι καὶ περισσεύειν ὑμᾶς ἐν αὐτοῖς βούλομαι, μόνον ἂν εἰς τὸ κοινῇ συμφέρον αὐτὰ μεταχειρίζητε, Chrysostom. — ἵνα] sets before us the object of the striving as its design, as at ver. 1, iv. 2. — What we are to conceive as the contents of the περισσεύειν (to have to the full, viii. 8; Phil. i. 9, iv. 12, al.) is self-evident, namely, what was previously meant by πνευμάτων, spiritual gifts.

Ver. 13. Προσευχέσθω ἵνα διερμ.] is taken by Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Castalio, Erasmus, Beza, Calvin, Grotius, Estius, Wetstein, Bengel, and others, including Flatt, Bleek, Rückert, Olshausen, Neander, Hofmann, in the sense of: let him pray for the gift of interpretation. But against this ver. 14 is decisive, where the προσεύχεσθαι, linked by γάρ to what precedes, must have the same reference with our προσεύχεσθαι in ver. 13. Bleek's objection, that we find εὐχαριστῶ in ver. 18 standing in a different reference than previously, does not hold good, since vv. 17 and 18 do not stand in direct logical connection (as vv. 12 and 14 do), but, on the contrary, with ver. 18 there begins a section of the discourse distinct from the preceding. Without taking ἵνα, with Luther, Vorstius, Wolf, Rosenmüller (comp. already Photius in Oecumenius), as meaning so that, the right translation is: let him pray in the design, in order to interpret (afterwards what has been prayed γλώσση). Comp. Billroth, David Schulz, Winer, de Wette, Osiander, Ch. F. Fritzsche, Ewald, Maier. The previous general λαλεῖν is thus represented here by προσεύχεσθαι, i.e. more precisely described as what it was, as address in prayer, see vv. 14–17. It is objected that ver. 27 militates against this view (see Rückert); that the person praying γλώσση could not have had that design, because he did not know whether the interpretation would be given to him (Hofmann). But our explanation does not in fact assume that every man who spoke with tongues was capable of interpreting; but, on the contrary, that Paul, in ver. 13, was thinking only of such speakers with tongues as possessed also the gift of interpretation (ver. 5). The apostle still leaves out of view the case in which the speaker was not also interpreter (ver. 28); hence we are not to take it with Ewald: “that people may interpret it.” The subject is the speaker himself (ver. 14 ff.), as in ver. 5.

Ver. 14. Justification of the precept προσευχ. ἵνα διερμ. — For if I pray with my tongue, my spirit prays, but my understanding is unfruitful. It is a thoroughly arbitrary and mistaken procedure to take the genitive relation in τὸ πνεῦμά μου otherwise than in ὁ νοῦς μου, and to explain the former, with Bleek, Billroth, Olshausen, Maier, and Chr. F. Fritzsche, following Chrysostom (τὸ χάρισμα τὸ δοθέν μοι καὶ κινεῖν τὴν γλῶσσαν), of the Spirit of God, in so far as He has laid hold of the man and speaks out of him. The Holy Spirit, although in the man, is never called the spirit of the man, and cannot be so called, just because He is different from the spirit of the man. See ii. 11; Rom. viii. 16, ix. 1. No; τὸ πνεῦμά μου is my spirit, i.e. my individual principle of higher life (comp. on ver. 2). If I pray with the tongue, this higher life-power in me, which plunges immediately (i.e. without the intervention of the discursive reflective faculty) into the feelings and intuitions of the divine, is called into activity, because it is filled and moved by the Holy Spirit as His receptive organ; but my understanding, my thinking faculty, furnishes nothing, ἄκαρπός ἐστι.¹ — νοῦς in contrast to πνεῦμα, which is the deeper basis of life, the “penetrable” (Bengel) of the νοῦς, is the reflective discursive power through which the making oneself intelligible to those without is effected, and without the co-operative action of which the human πνεῦμα cannot with such onesided development of its energy express the contents of its converse with the Divine Spirit

¹ Namely, to edify the church by the praying; see ver. 12. Chrysostom, Theophylact, Calvin, Estius, and others erroneously hold it to apply to one's own profit. Theodoret rightly remarks: καρπὸς τοῦ λίγοντος ἢ ἀφίλιμα τῶν ἀκούοντων.

But were we to think of foreign languages, that distinction and exclusion would not be appropriate, or would resolve themselves into a mere self-deception.

Comp. on x. 16; Matt. xiv. 19. — ἀναπληροῦν τ. τόπον τινός, to fill the place of any one, is not a Hebraism (פ' ד'ק'ק' א'ל'ק'), in the sense of in statu et conditione alicujus esse (see Buxtorf, Lex. Talm. p. 2001), but corresponds to the Greek expressions: πληροῦν τὴν χώραν, to occupy the place, ἀναπληροῦν τὴν ἔδραν (Plat. Tim. p. 79 B), and the like, so that τόπος is not to be taken in the abstract sense of position (in opposition to de Wette, Hofmann), but applies quite literally to the *place*¹ in the assembly. With this is improperly compared Josephus, Bell. v. 2. 5, where we have not τόπον, but τάξιν. And he who occupies the place of the layman is, according to the connection, every one in the assembly who is not endowed with glossolalia or its interpretation. Where he sits is, in this particular relation (be he himself even a prophet or teacher), the place of the layman. Paul speaks vividly, as if he saw the assembly before his mind's eye. Regarding ἰδιώτης (comp. 2 Cor. xi. 6), which, like our layman, obtains its definition from the context in each case, see on Acts iv. 13. — πῶς ἐρεῖ] how is it (reasonably) possible that he shall say.—The custom, arising out of the time-hallowed usage in connection with oaths, imprecations, vows, prayers, etc. (Num. v. 22; Deut. xxvii. 15 ff.; Neh. viii. 6, al.), that the audience at the close of a public prayer should express their assent, and their faith in its being heard, by amen, was introduced among the Christians from the synagogues (Buxt. Lex. Talm., sub voce אמן; Vitranga, de Synag. p. 1093; Schoettgen, Hor. p. 654 ff.; Wetstein), and has in this passage apostolic confirmation.² — τὸ ἀμήν] the amen to be pronounced by him. — ἐπὶ] to thy prayer, to which the amen is added. Vv. 18, 19. Confirmation by the apostle's own example of what has been said against the public speaking with tongues.—I thank God, more than you all speak I with the tongue, in a higher degree than you all I have this charisma. Such direct modes of expression, instead of a connecting ὅτι, occur likewise in Greek writers; see Stallbaum, ad Gorg. p. 460 A; Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 134; Kühner, § 760 a. Even the Recepta λαλῶν would have to be taken as stating the ground of the εὐχαρ. τῷ Θεῷ (comp.

There would thus result a declaration, the tenor of which hardly suits the character of the apostle, as indeed such an unconditionally expressed assertion could not be upheld by him. Μᾶλλον can only denote the greater measure of the endowment ; see already in Chrysostom. — ἐν ἐκκλ.] in the assembled church, opposite of private devotion. — θέλω ἤ] The preferential will (malle) is implied in the logical relation of the relative verbal notion to the particle, without there being any need of supplying μᾶλλον. belongs, with the rest, to the Scriptural quotation (LXX.: ὅτι λαλήσουσι τῷ λαῷ τούτῳ), and has here therefore no reference in the context. — The historical sense of the original text (in which Jehovah threatens to send foreign-speaking men, i.e. barbarians, upon the kingdom of Judah, etc.) is taken up typically by Paul in such a way that he, looking back from the phenomenon of the present upon that prophetic utterance, recognises in it the Christian glossolalia divinely foreshadowed, as regards its substance, namely, in the characteristic ἐν ἑτερογλώσσοις . . . ἑτέροις, and, as regards its destination, in καὶ οὐδ' οὕτως εἰσακ. — ἐν ἑτερογλώσσοις κ.τ.λ.] in peoples of another tongue (conceived of as organs of the visiting God, who speaks in their persons; hence ἐν, comp. 2 Cor. xiii. 3; Heb. i. 2) and in lips of others (ἑτέρων, see the critical remarks) will I speak to this nation. According to the original text, the reference is to people who speak a foreign language (the Assyrian, comp. xxxiii. 19), and to lips of foreigners (other than Israelites); but the similarity of the relation, which presents itself in the type and antitype, consists in the extraordinary phenomenon of the strange divine speaking, which becomes perceptible in the case of the type in the foreign language, in that of the antitype in the character of the glossolalia, so wholly different from ordinary intelligible speech. In virtue of this unintelligibility, the speaking in tongues also was for the hearers a speaking in strange tongues, and he who spoke was not one like-tongued, i.e. using the like language (ὁμόγλωσσος, Xen. Cyrop. i. 1. 5; Herod. i. 17, viii. 144; Lucian, Scyth. 3, de Salt. 64), but a strange-speaking man (ἑτερόγλωσσος, Polyb. xxiv. 9, 5; Strabo, viii. p. 333; Aq. Ps. cxiii. 1), and his lips a stranger's lips. What is in the original text: נִתְּנָה לָהֶם לִשָּׁנֹת, Paul renders more freely than the LXX. (διὰ γλώσσης ἑτέρας), and making it personal, by ἐν ἑτερογλώσσοις;¹ the Hebrew נִתְּנָה לָהֶם לִשָּׁנֹת, again (through stammerers of the lip, i.e. through men speaking unintelligibly, because in a strange tongue), tongues, Isa. xxviii. 11 f. is characteristic enough. But if Paul had this passage in his eye, he must have understood it of men speaking foreignly, not, as Ewald explains the prophetic words, of the language of the thunder and of terrible punishment.

he renders more correctly as regards the general sense than the LXX. (who have erroneously διὰ φανλισμὸν χειλέων, on account of mockery of the lips, comp. Hos. vii. 16) by ἐν χείλ. ἐτέρ., putting it, however, impersonally, and reversing the order of the two clauses. It may be added that it is clear from the parallel χείλεσιν that Paul conceived of γλῶσσα in ἑτερογλώσσους as "tongue," as ἡ^ν also is conceived of in the original text,—both as instrument of the λαλεῖν. The tongue is ἄγγελος λόγων, Eur. Suppl. 205. — τῷ λαῶ τούτῳ] applying in its historical meaning to the disobedient people of Israel, which, however, is a type of those who reject the Christian faith, represents therefore the latter in the view of the apostle. — Καὶ οὐδ' οὕτως] and not even so, dealt with by such a measure, will they hearken to me (obey me, Eccclus. iii. 6, xxxix. 3; and in classical writers). This second half of the passage is, for the demonstration, the main point. See ver. 22.

Ver. 22. "Ὡστε] Accordingly, namely, in accordance with this οὐδ' οὕτως εἰσακούσ. μου. — εἰς σημεῖον κ.τ.λ.] The phenomenon of the speaking with tongues is destined for a (divine) sign, not for the believers, but for the unbelievers, i.e. to make those to whom the glossolalia goes forth be recognised as unbelievers. This view alone corresponds to the express οὐδ' οὕτως εἰσακούσ. μου from which the inference is drawn, as well as to what is further inferred in ver. 23. At variance, on the other hand, with both stands the interpretation which has been the ordinary one since Chrysostom (and which has hitherto been my own), that the speaking with tongues is called a sign for the unbelievers, because it was intended to arrest and move them so that they should reflect and become believers. Equally unsuitable is it that Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, including Hofmann, only half carry out this traditional interpretation, and stop short at the impression of something astounding and amazing, whereby the γλῶσσαι are to be a σημεῖον to the unbelievers, which, moreover, in presence of φανλισμὸν χειλέων, which besides the LXX. has incorrectly, and therefore altered it in accordance with the parallel in the passage, διὰ γλ. ἱτίρας. We may infer consequently from our passage only thus much, that the glossolalia as regards its nature could be described in the way of application by ἐν ἑτερογλώσσους and ἐν χείλεσιν ἱτίρας λαλεῖν, but not that γλ. λαλ. and ἱτίρ. γλ. λαλ. were two current formulæ for denoting the speaking with tongues. Hence also we are not, with Hirzel in the Stud. u. Krit. 1840, p. 121 ff., to infer from this passage the originality of the designation ἱτίραις γλώσσαις λαλῶν.

the notion of a divine σημείον, could only appear as a means to an ulterior end. We must keep the οὐδ' οὕτως εἰσακούσ. μου sharply before us in order to determine accurately the notion of the σημείον κ.τ.λ. Billroth, moreover (comp. Beza, Vatablus, Calovius, Cornelius a Lapide, and others), is in error in holding that σημείον is a penal sign, or a sign of divine judgment; comp. also Hilgenfeld, p. 21; Rossteuscher, p. 77. This, in fact, is not at all implied in ver. 21, where, on the contrary, the glossolalia appears as a last extraordinary measure remaining likewise without result, which will at length make full exposure of the disobedience of the persons in question, but not as a sign of wrath. And had Paul thought of irae signum, he must have expressed the irae too, and, in fact, brought it emphatically forward.¹ Again Storr, Flatt, Baur, and Dav. Schulz (Geistesg. pp. 78, 176) are wrong in saying that the prevalence of the glossolalia in the church was a sign of their unbelief. This is unsuitable for this reason, that according to vv. 21, 23 we are to conceive as the ἄπιστοι not those who speak γλώσσαις, but those who are spoken to in γλ. — τοῖς ἀπίστοις] Dative of the reference in view, as is also τοῖς πιστεύουσιν. The conception of the ἄπιστοι, however, is, by virtue of this very antithesis (and see also vv. 23, 24), simply the non-believing, the unbelievers,—a conception which is neither to be softened down to that of non-genuine Christians or the like (Flatt, David Schulz), nor intensified to that of obstinate unbelievers, those wholly unsusceptible of faith, infideles privative (Neander, Billroth, Rückert). Hirzel in the Stud. u. Krit. 1840, p. 120 ff. (who is followed in substance by de Wette, Osiander, Maier, Engelmann, and see Bengel's hints of earlier date), understands by the ἀπίστοις those who do not wish to believe, and by the πιστεύουσιν those who wish to believe.² Comp. de Wette: "They are not heard by such as let themselves be moved thereby to believe, but by such as remain unbelieving." This is conclusively negated by the prevailing use of οἱ πιστεύοντες and οἱ ἄπιστοι,

² Hofmann also understands by τοῖς ἀπίστοις those indisposed to believe. As if Paul would not have known how to express this conception! Hofmann even conceives to which any such artificial pregnancy of meaning is quite alien (see immediately, vv. 23, 24). — ἡ δὲ προφητεία κ.τ.λ.] a contrast, which is not intended to be inferred from that passage of Scripture,—which in truth says nothing whatever about the προφητεύειν, —but the truth of which was self-evident to the readers in virtue of an argumentum e contrario. We are not, however, to supply the simple ἐστίν, so that the meaning would be: not to the unbelievers, but to the believers, is the prophetic address to be directed (my own view hitherto), but rather εἰς σημεῖόν ἐστιν, for Paul has not written ἐστιν at all, and therefore leaves the predicate of the first half of the verse to operate still in virtue of the antithesis. Consequently: prophecy is designed to be a sign not for the unbelievers, but for the believers, i.e. in order to make those to whom the prophetic address is directed known as believers; see ver. 24, where this statement of the apostle is verified by the fact that such as come into the Christian assembly as unbelievers, being won over by the overpowering impression of the prophetic addresses, submit themselves to Christianity and declare themselves believers. Erasmus, Grotius, and Bleek are wrong in holding that οὐ means non tantum. The negation is absolute, as in the preceding clause. Comp. Fritzsche, ad Matth. p. 784. According to Hirzel (de Wette and Osiander), the meaning here also is alleged to be: prophecy is given not for such as do not wish to believe, but for such as wish to believe.

Ver. 23. What, then, will be the effect of the speaking with tongues, which you all so much desire, upon ungifted persons or unbelievers? If such come into your church when you are assembled together, and get nothing else there to hear from any of you but glossolalia, so far will they be from declaring themselves as believers upon your speaking with tongues, that, on the contrary, they will declare you to be mad. — οὖν] draws an inference from ver. 22 in such a way that ver. 23 corresponds to the first, and ver. 24 f. to the second half of ver. 22. — πάντες] Paul does not suppose that all those two classes to be comprehended under τοῖς πιστεύουσιν, namely, those already standing in faith and those who are becoming believers, and holds that on this account Paul did not write τοῖς πιστοῖς. As if οἱ πιστεύοντες were not with the apostle quite the usual expression for the believers (i. 21; Rom. i. 16, iii. 22, x. 4; Gal. iii. 22; Eph. i. 19, al.), who are such, but not for those, or so as to include those, who are only becoming such. The πιστεύοντες are not at all different from the πιστοῖς (2 Cor. vi. 15; Eph. i. 1; Col. i. 2).

assembled speak together in a confused, tumultuous way (Cornelius a Lapide and others; comp. also Maier), but that all in succession hold glossolaliae, and only such,—not addresses of any other kind. For, if all spoke together and confusedly, even in the case of prophecy it could make no impression (ver. 24). — ἰδιῶται] is not to be understood otherwise than in ver. 16: Christians who are not endowed with glossolalia, or with the gift of understanding it. The context, however, shows by the foregoing ἐὰν . . . αὐτό that those meant are ungifted persons from any extraneous church, who come into the church at Corinth when in full assembly. Were the stranger who entered not an ungifted person, but one who himself spoke with tongues or interpreted, his judgment respecting the gift which he himself possessed or understood would, of course, not take the same form. All explanations which deviate from the meaning of the word in ver. 16 are on that very account to be rejected, such as not only that of most of the old interpreters, with Billroth and Chr. F. Fritzsche: “such as do not understand foreign languages,” but also that of Theodoret, David Schulz, Flatt, Olshausen (also Rückert, although with hesitation): “beginners in Christianity;” comp. Pelagius, Thomas, Estius: “nuper credentes, neophyti;” Melancthon: “rudis qui primum coepit catechismi doctrinam audire,” comp. Neander. Rückert suggests that Paul is supposing the case that the glossolalia should break out somewhere suddenly and for the first time, and there should then come in Christians who knew nothing of it and, not being present, had not been affected by the paroxysm, and non-Christians. But the suggestion is to be dismissed, because there is no mention of the “suddenly and for the first time,” which would in that case be the main thing. Hirzel and de Wette hold erroneously, because in opposition to ver. 16,¹ and not to be established even by 2 Cor. xi. 6, that the ἰδιῶται are non-Christians (so, too, Ulrich in the Stud. u. Krit. 1843, p. 420, and Hofmann), in which case they are in various arbitrary ways distinguished from the ἄπιστοι, namely, by Hirzel² asserting that the ἄπ. are heathen, the ἰδ.

Jews ; by de Wette, that the former were still more aloof from believing than the latter ; by Ulrich, that the ἰδ. were persons unacquainted with Christianity, the ἀπ. those acquainted with it indeed, but unbelieving and (Hofmann) hostile towards it. Not the ἰδιῶται, but the ἀπιστοί, are the non-Christians (who are never called ἰδ.), as in ver. 22. We may add that Grotius remarks rightly: "Solebant enim pagani" (and Jews also) "adire Christianorum ecclesias ad videnda quae ibi agebantur." Their admission (certainly not to the Agapae, however) was the less a matter for hesitation, since it might become a means of their conversion. Comp. generally, Harnack, Gemeindegottesd. p. 143 ff. — ὅτι μαίνεσθε] that you (Christians in Corinth) are foolish, and out of your senses, because, namely, you collectively and without exception carry on a kind of converse so unintelligible and meaningless for the hearers. Olshausen strangely holds that the verdict expressed is: "We see, doubtless, that you are possessed by a god ; but there is no prophet here ; we do not understand what the god says to us !" An unwarranted explaining away of the clear import of the word : μαίνεσθαι means insanire, just as in Acts xxvi. 24. The verdict of drunkenness passed by the unbelievers in Acts ii. 13 presents a remarkable analogy. — Observe, further: (1) Here ἰδιῶται is put first, and ἀπιστοί follows, because the ἰδιῶται, as Christians, and therefore acquainted with the uselessness and absurdity of the glossolalia without interpretation and to the exclusion of all other (intelligible) discourse, come here into the foreground,¹ and may and will be the first to pass the judgment ὅτι μαίνεσθε ; in ver. 24, on the contrary, ἀπιστος stands first, because conversion is spoken of, and hence "praecipue agitur de infideli ; idiota obiter additur ob rationem ejus non plane disparem" (Bengel). (2) In ver. 23, since Paul designs to cite the judgment in the form of an utterance (ἐρρῶσιν), which is most naturally conceived of by him as a mutual communication, the plural εἰσέλθωσι κ.τ.λ. presented itself with as much appropriateness as the singular εἰσέλθῃ κ.τ.λ. does in ver. 24, where the apostle wishes to depict specially the converting work, vv. 24, 25, in its course, which, from the nature of the case, is done most befittingly in an individualizing representation.

Arrested and humbled before God, they will declare themselves believers. — ἐὰν δὲ πάντες προφ.] is to be completed in accordance with ver. 23: ἐὰν δὲ συνέλθῃ ἡ ἐκκλ. ὅλη ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ κ. πάντες προφ. — ἰδιώτης] according to the context: one not prophetically gifted, and, indeed, coming likewise from an extraneous church. Ver. 26 ff. The theoretical part regarding the charismata is closed (vv. 1–25). There is now added as its sequel the regulative part regarding the proper application of the charismata, and (1) of the charismata in general (ver. 26); then, in particular, (2) of the glossolalia (vv. 27, 28); and (3) of the gift of prophecy (vv. 29–33). Upon this follows, as an appendix, (4) the prohibition of public speaking on the part of women (vv. 34–36). And by way of conclusion, (5) the assertion of apostolic authority for the whole teaching now given (vv. 37, 38); and (6) a summary repetition of the chief points (vv. 39, 40).

Ver. 26. Τί οὖν ἐστίν ;] as in ver. 15. — The apodosis begins with ἕκαστος, and πάντα on to γινέσθω is a sentence by itself. As often as you come together, every one (every one gifted with charismatic speech among you) has a psalm ready, i.e. he feels himself qualified and constrained to sing aloud such a spirit-given song. It is not, however, the glossolalic ψάλλειν which is meant, since afterwards γλῶσσαν ἔχει is specially mentioned in addition, but the intelligible singing of praise, which takes place with the νοῦς (comp. ver. 15). Comp. generally on Eph. v. 19. Grotius compares the improvised hymns of Deborah, Simeon, etc. — ἔχει is neither interrogative (Grotius) nor: he may have (David Schulz), nor are we to supply in thought with Locke, “ut moram ferre non possit;” but it simply expresses the state of the case: in promptu habet. Bengel rightly judges of the repetition of the ἔχει: “elegantè exprimit divisam donorum copiam.” — διδασχὴν] a doctrinal address. See on xii. 10, 28. — γλῶσσαν] a tongue, i.e. a spirit-tongue, which seeks utterance. The matter is so conceived and described as that not every one has the use of a tongue in the sense of the glossolalia, but only the man gifted with this charisma, in whom there is present for this purpose a tongue as the organ of the Spirit. — ἀποκάλυψιν] a revelation, which he wishes to utter by a prophetic address, comp. ver. 29 f. — ἐρμηνείαν] an interpretation, which he wishes to give of an address in a tongue already delivered. — The words ψάλλον to ἐρμ. ἔχει are the separate divisions of the ἕκαστος, as in i. 12. Then follows the general rule for all these charismata: all must be done for the furtherance of Christian perfection (of the church)! Observe how, according to this passage, public teaching was not restricted to one definite office. See Ritschl, althath. K. p. 350.

Ver. 27. After this general rule come now particular precepts: suppose that one wishes to speak with a tongue; comp. γλωσσαν ἔχει, ver. 26. There is no other εἴτε to correspond to this εἴτε (sive, Vulgate); but the plan of sentence first thought of and begun is so disturbed by the apodosis and ver. 28, that it is quite abandoned, and ver. 29, instead of commencing with a new εἴτε, is not even continued in hypothetic form at all. See Maetzner, ad Antiph. p. 194. Comp. Klotz, ad Devar. p. 538. According to Hofmann (who writes εἴ τε separately), τέ is annexive, namely, to πάντα π. οἰκ. γ. In that case εἴ τε would be: in like manner if (Hartung, Partik. I. p. 106 f.), which, however, would be logically suitable only on the supposition that γλώσσα did not already occur also in ver. 26. — κατὰ δύο κ.τ.λ.] sc. λαλείτωσαν (comp. 1 Pet. iv. 11), and this is to be taken declaratively (as in xi. 16): let him know that they should speak by two, or at most by three; in each assembly not more than two, or at most three, speakers with tongues should come forward. As to the supplying of λαλείτ., see Kühner, II. p. 603; Fritzsche, ad Rom. III. p. 65. — τὸ πλεῖστον] adverbially. See Matthiae, p. 1000. — Καὶ ἀνὰ μέρος, and that according to order, one after the other, not several together. See Valck. ad Phoen. 481; Schweigh. Lex. Polyb. p. 380. Doubtless—and this seems to have given occasion for this addition—the case had often occurred in Corinth, that those who spoke with tongues had so little controlled their impulse that several came to speak together. — Καὶ εἰς διερμ.] and let one (not several) give the interpretation, of that, namely, which the said two or three speakers with tongues have spoken in succession. Grotius puts it rightly: “unus aliquis, qui id donum habet,” and it is plain from vv. 5, 13 (in opposition to Ewald) that the speaker with tongues himself might also be the interpreter. Paul will not allow several interpreters to speak, because that would have been unnecessary, and would only have shortened the time for the more useful prophetic and other addresses.

Ver. 28. Should it be the case, however, that there is no interpreter present, let him be silent in the assembly. This comprises the double possibility that the speaker with tongues cannot himself interpret, and also that no other, who possesses the donum interpretandi, is present. Regarding εἶναι as equivalent to παρεῖναι, comp. on Mark viii. 1; Luke ii. 36. David Schulz understands ἦ as the simple copula: "if, however, he does not know how to make himself intelligible." But the interpretation might in fact be given also by another, who had the charisma of the ἐρμηνεία γλωσσῶν, xii. 10, 30. — συγ. ἐν ἐκκλ.] Paul takes for granted here — and how easily one can understand it, considering the intimate union subsisting among the Christians of those days! — that the members of the community mutually know each other as regards their special endowments. — ἐαυτῷ δὲ λαλ. κ. τ. θ.] in contrast to addresses given ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, and hence a characteristic designation of the private devotion carried on by means of glossolalic prayer, where his glossolalia avails for himself and God (ver. 2), not for others also as listeners. Comp. Epict. Diss. iv. 8. 17, and the similar passages in Wetstein. Others take it to mean: quietly in his thoughts (Theophylact, comp. Chrysostom, also Chr. F. Fritzsche), so that it remains on the footing of an inward intercourse between him and his God (Hofmann); which, however, is not in keeping with the essential mark of the λαλεῖν, this being uttered aloud, which belonged to the matter in hand.¹ Observe, further, how, even in this highest degree of inspired impulse to speak, a man could control his own will. Comp. ver. 32.

Ver. 29. Δέ] marks the transition to the rule regarding the prophets. — The ἀνὰ μέρος (ver. 27) is emphasized in a special way, ver. 30; yet Paul does not add a τὸ πλείστον here, thereby limiting the gift of prophecy less sharply, and tacitly also conceding a plurality of speakers, when the circumstances might perhaps involve an exception from the rule. Still we are not (with Hofmann) to read δύο ἢ τρεῖς as meaning "rather three than two." — Καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι διακρ.] and the other prophets, who do not take part in speaking, are to judge: whether, namely, what has been said proceeds really from the Spirit or not. We see from this that the charisma of judging the spirits was joined with that of prophecy, so that whoever could himself speak prophetically was qualified also for the διάκρισις; for οἱ ἄλλοι (comp. ἄλλω, ver. 30) cannot be taken (with Hofmann) universally, without restriction to the category of prophets, seeing that in fact the διάκρισις was no universal χάρισμα. The article is retrospective, so that it is defined by προφύηται. At the same time, however, it must not be overlooked that even such persons as were not themselves prophets might still be endowed with the διάκρισις (xii. 10), although not all were so.

Ver. 30. But two prophets were never to speak together. The order ought, on the contrary, to be this, that if a revelation shall have been imparted to another prophet (ἄλλῳ) while he sits listening, the first shall be silent (not simply soon cease, as Neander, Maier, and others would take it; comp., too, Hofmann) and let the second speak. Paul thus does not enjoin that the second shall wait until the first is finished, to which meaning Grotius, Storr, and Platt twist the words (comp. vv. 28, 34); on the contrary, he attaches more importance to the fresh undelayed outburst of prophetic inspiration, than to the further continuance of the address after the first outburst. — καθημ.] for the prophets spoke standing, Luke iv. 17. See Grotius in loc.

Ver. 31 f. Establishment of this precept by setting forth the possibility of its observance. The principal emphasis is laid upon δύνασθε, which is for this reason placed first (not upon πάντες, as Rückert holds), for in it lies the pith of the proof. Next to it πάντες has the emphasis. The sense is: "For in my ὁ πρῶτος σὺν. I am enjoining nothing which is impossible for you; on the contrary, it stands in your power that, one after another, you may all come to give a prophetic address," etc. — καθ' ἓνα] always one at once, singulativim. Acts xxi. 19; see Ast, Lex. Plat. I. p. 639 f.; Bernhardt, p. 240. The subject addressed in δύνασθε is the prophets in the church, not the members of the church generally (Hofmann), seeing that prophecy was a special *χάρισμα*¹ which did not belong to all (see xii. 29; Acts xiii. 1; Eph. iv. 11). The inspiration of the prophets does not compel them to speak on without a break, so as not to allow another to take speech at all or to speak alone, but it is in their power to cease when another begins, so that by degrees all may come to speak—not, of course, in the same assembly (ver. 29), but in successive meetings.—And this circumstance, that καθ' ἓνα πάντες προφητεύουσι, has for its design (ἵνα), that all the members of the church (which includes also other prophets along with the rest) may learn, etc., that none may remain without instruction and encouragement. For modes of prophetic inspiration, very different from each other in substance and form, will then find expression, whereby satisfaction will be given to the most different wants.—μανθάνωσι] what God has revealed to those speaking prophetically.—παρακλ.] be encouraged, aroused. Comp. παράκλησιν, ver. 3. Paul describes here the effects of prophecy from the theoretical (μανθ.) and practical (παρακαλ.) sides. The latter he had already stated more especially in ver. 3.

Ver. 32. The second part of the establishment of the precept (γάρ, ver. 31). And prophets' spirits are obedient to prophets. The indicative presents the normal relationship as it is, not as it ought to be (Olshausen and others).—πνεύματα προφ.] cannot be workings of the Divine Spirit in the prophets (Chrysostom, Erasmus, Estius, and others, including Flatt, comp. de Wette), nor does it mean the spirits which the prophets have received, so that the one πνεῦμα appears as if divided among them (Rückert), or created angelic spirits in the service of the Holy Spirit (Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. p. 307), or even actually several Holy Spirits (Hilgenfeld; see, however, on ver. 12); but (comp. the genitival relation, ver. 14) it is the prophets' own spirits, filled, however, by the Holy Spirit. Persons prophetically inspired are, as such, raised to a higher spiritual potency, and have prophets' spirits. Comp. Rev. xxii. 6, and Düsterdieck in loc. But their free-will is not thereby taken away, nor does the prophetic address become something involuntary, like a Bacchantic enthusiasm; no, prophets' spirits stand in obedience to prophets; he who is a prophet has the power of will over his spirit, which makes the ὁ πρῶτος σιγάτω in ver. 30¹ possible; ἐπὶ τοῖς προφήταις ἐστὶ τὸ σιγᾶν ἢ λαλεῖν, Theophylact. Comp. Hofmann in loc., and Schriftbew. I. p. 312. Others, again (Theophylact gives both interpretations alongside of each other), refer προφήταις to other prophets: τὸ ἐν σοι χάρισμα . . . ὑποτάσσεται τῷ χαρίσματι τοῦ ἐτέρου τοῦ κινήθέντος εἰς τὸ προφητεῦν, Theophylact. So Theodoret, Calvin, Calovius, Estius, Rosenmüller, and others, including Heydenreich, Bleek, Rückert, and Ritschl, altkath. K. p. 473. But if Paul had conceived of the prophet's becoming silent as conditioned by the will of another, and so objectively,—which the expression, taken simply in itself, might imply,—then plainly his admonition ὁ πρῶτος σιγᾷ would be entirely superfluous. He must, on the contrary, have conceived of it as conditioned subjectively by the will of the subjects themselves who spoke; and with this our view alone accords, which is found in as early expositors as Origen, Jerome, and Oecumenius. — The absence of the article in the case of all the three words depends upon the fact that the relation is conceived not in concreto, but generically. — Observe, further, the strict, measured form of expression, πνεύματα προφητῶν προφήταις, which is designed not simply for rhetorical emphasis, but for definiteness and clearness of meaning, separating the prophets' spirits from the subjects who have them. Αὐτοῖς would not have marked this so strongly.

Ver. 33. Establishment of ver. 32 on religious grounds. "For how could God have appointed it otherwise, seeing that by Him is produced not confusion (as would be the case if every prophet had to speak on involuntarily), but peace!" Comp. Rom. xv. 33, xvi. 20; Phil. iv. 9; 1 Thess. v. 23. The antithesis is correct, for the ἀκαταστασία would bring with it a jealous and unyielding disposition.

Ver. 34. Appendix to the regulative section regarding the gifts of the Spirit (vv. 26–33): directed against the public speaking of women. Corinthian women, with their freer mood inclined towards emancipation (comp. xi. 2 ff.), must have presumed on this. — ὡς ἐν πάσ. τ. ἐκκλ. τ. ἀγ.] is referred by the Fathers and most of the older expositors, Rückert, Osiander, Neander, Maier, to what precedes (comp. iv. 17, vii. 17, xi. 16). But since the preceding οὐ γὰρ . . . εἰρήνης is quite general, and hence contains no special point of reference for ὡς (for which reason this ὡς has been got rid of in various ways, and even διδάσκω has been added in some codd. and versions); since, on the other hand, the passage which follows offers this point of reference in the fact of its being a command for the Corinthians; and since ver. 36 manifestly glances back at the argument implied in ἐν π. τ. ἐκκλ. τ. ἀγ.,—therefore it is preferable to connect the clause with what follows, as is done by Cajetan and most modern expositors: As in all church assemblies of the saints, your women ought to be silent in the church assemblies. To place a comma, with Lachmann, before τῶν ἀγίων, puts an incongruous emphasis upon τῶν ἀγ. — Regarding the matter itself (1 Tim. ii. 11), comp. the parallels from Greek, Roman, and Rabbinical writers in Wetstein in loc.; Vitringa, Synag. p. 724; Schoettgen, Horae, p. 658. — οὐ γὰρ ἐπιτρέπεται] for it is (permanently) not allowed. To take ἐπιτρέπεσθαι as mandari (Reiche) would be linguistically correct in itself, but against the usage of the whole N. T. (comp. xvi. 7; 1 Tim. ii. 12). — ἀλλ' ὑποτάσσεσθαι] namely, is incumbent upon them, in accordance with a current Greek brevity of expression. Comp. 1 Tim. iv. 3; see Kühner, II. p. 604 f.; Dissen, ad Demosth. de Cor. p. 222 f. The ὑποτάσσεσθαι excludes, in Paul's view, the speaking in the assemblies, inasmuch as the latter appears to him as an act of uncomplying independence. — ὁ νόμος] Gen. iii. 16.

Ver. 35. Even questions for their instruction should not be brought forward by the women in the assemblies. — ἐν οἴκῳ] has the emphasis. At home, not in the assembly, they are to obtain for themselves by inquiry the desired instruction, and that from those to whom they, as women, are naturally referred, from their own husbands.

Ver. 36. The ἡ joins on to what is immediately before prescribed, not to the previous directions in general (de Wette, Osiander, et al.). "It is disgraceful for a woman to speak in public, unless, perhaps, you were the first or the only Christian church, in which cases then, doubtless, your custom would show that disgracefulness to be a mistake, and would authorize as becoming the speaking of women by way of an example for other churches!" μὴ τοίνυν τοῖς οἰκείοις ἀρκεῖσθε, ἀλλὰ ταῖς τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν νομοθεσίαις ἀκολουθεῖτε, Theodoret; but the point of the expression, as against the Corinthian haughtiness, is very palpable. — αἰσχρόν] ἐπειδὴ καλλωπίζεσθαι ἐντεῦθεν ἐνόμιζον ἐκ τοῦ φθέγγεσθαι δημοσίᾳ, πάλιν εἰς τὸ ἐναντίον περιάγει τὸν λόγον, Chrysostom. Comp. xi. 5 f. Paul is decided against all undue exaltation and assumption on the part of women in religious things, and it has been the occasion of much evil in the church.

Ver. 37. He now, after the digression regarding the women, adds the authority of Christ to the section upon the charismata, which has been already previously brought to a conclusion, but to which he looks back once more. — δοκεῖ] If any one bethinks himself (iii. 18, viii. 2, x. 12) to be a prophet, or spiritually gifted in any way, then let him also prove himself to be such by his recognising, etc. Not to acknowledge this would show him to be not a prophet or not inspired. — πνευματικός] quite general: "dotibus Sp. St. instructus;" not, as Billroth, David Schulz, Baur, and Wieseler would have it, equivalent to γλ. λαλῶν (comp. on xii. 1, xiv. 1). H is: or generally. Hofmann is wrong in saying that the ἦ is not suited for thus linking on a general statement. Why not? Comp. iv. 3; Luke xii. 11; Matt. xvi. 14. There is all the less reason for assuming, with Hofmann, that Paul uses the expression in the vaguer sense of one going even beyond the prophet, because he had found it so used in the letter from Corinth. — ἀ γράφω ὑμ.] refers to the whole section regarding the πνευματικοῖς. To refer it, as Billroth and Olshausen do, to the command that the women should keep silence, does not harmonize with the introduction εἴ τις . . . πνευματικός, and involves the awkwardness of only this intervening matter being thus confirmed with such solemnity, and the principal and far more important section not at all. — κυρίου ἐστίν (see the critical remarks): proceed from the Lord. In his communion of spirit with Christ, Paul was conscious that what he had been writing, from chap. x. onwards, regarding spiritual gifts and the right use of them, was the result not of his own meditation and desire, but of the working of Christ upon him—that he wrote as an interpreter Christi. There is thus no reason for making κυρίου refer to God (Grotius, Billroth, Olshausen), seeing that Christ had in fact given no rules regarding the charismata. Paul is affixing here the seal of apostolic authority, and upon that seal we must read Christ.

Ver. 38. Ἀγνοεῖ] namely, ἀ γράφω ὑμῶν, ὅτι κ.τ.λ., ver. 37. His not being willing to know, or the attitude of wrongly knowing (Hofmann), is not conveyed in the word, but is presupposed. — ἀγνοεῖτω] permissive, denotes the renunciation of all endeavours to instruct such an one who lets himself be puffed up. It is the opposite of the ἐπιγινώσκειν, ver. 37. Estius puts it well: "Sibi suaeque ignorantiae relinquendos esse censeo." Comp. xi. 16.

Vv. 39, 40. Gathering up (ὥστε, "itaque, summa," Bengel) the main points of the whole discussion, and that (1) of its theoretical (ver. 39), and (2) of its regulative part (ver. 40). — Paul has aptly indicated the value of the glossolalia relatively to the prophetical gift by ζηλοῦτε (comp. ver. 12, xii. 31) and μὴ κωλύετε, without there being any ground, however, for inferring from this an attitude of hostility on the side of the Pauline party towards those who spoke with tongues (Baur, Rübiger, comp. at an earlier date Storr). — εὐσχημόνως] in a seemly way. (Rom. xiii. 13; 1 Thess. iv. 12), denoting ecclesiastical decorum. — κατὰ τάξιν] in accordance with order (see Wetstein), so that it is done at the right time, and in the right measure and limits. Comp. Clem. ad Cor. I. 40, also what Josephus, Bell. Jud. ii. 8. 5, says of the Essenes: οὔτε κραυγὴ ποτε τὸν οἶκον, οὔτε θόρυβος μολύνει, τὰς δὲ λαλίας ἐν τάξει παραχωροῦσιν ἀλλήλοις.

CHAPTER XV.

VER. 10. ἡ σὺν ἐμοί] Lachm. has merely σὺν ἐμοί, following B D* F G s^a Vulg. It. Or. Ambrosiast. Aug. Rightly; the article was inserted, doubtless, in some cases in a mere mechanical way after ἡ εἰς ἐμέ, but in others purposely, in order to have a thoroughly complete contrast to οὐκ ἐγώ, at the suggestion of dogmatic interest, which also produced the weakly attested reading ἡ ἐν ἐμοί. The ἡ is wanting also before εἰς ἐμέ in D* F G, Vulg. It. and Latin Fathers. But here there was nothing in the context to occasion the insertion, and the article could be dispensed with, and was thus overlooked.— Ver. 14. κενὴ καί] Elz., Scholz, Tisch. read κενὴ δὲ καί, against greatly preponderating testimony.— Ver. 19. ἐν Χριστῷ] stands before ἡλπιόντες in A B D* E F G s, min. Vulg. It. Goth. and several Fathers. So Lachm. Rück. Tisch. and rightly, for this position is not easier than that of the Recepta, and hence the great preponderance of the evidence is all the more decisive.— Ver. 20. After κεκοιμ. Elz. has ἐγένετο, against decisive evidence; a supplementary addition.— Ver. 21. ὁ θάνατος] The article is wanting in A B D* K s, Or. Dial. c. Marc. Cyr. Dam. al. Rightly deleted by Lachm. and Rück. From Rom. v. 12.— Ver. 24. Instead of the Recepta παραδῶ, which Reiche defends, B F G have παραδίδοι, and A D E s, min. Fathers παραδιδῶ; the former preferred by Lachm. and Tisch., the latter by Rück. Παραδιδῶ, or the παραδίδοι, which is likewise to be taken as a subjunctive form (there is no means of deciding between the two), is correct (see the exegetical remarks); ὅταν καταργήσῃ, however, made the aorist come very naturally to the transcribers, who did not apprehend the different relations of the two clauses.— Ver. 25.— ἂν before θῆ (in Elz. and Scholz) is omitted in preponderant authorities, and has come in from the LXX. Ps. cx. 1.— Ver. 29. αὐτῶν] Elz. reads τῶν νεκρῶν, against decisive evidence; a correct gloss.— Ver. 31. ὑμετέραν] A, min. Or. have ἡμετέραν. So Rück. But the former not being understood, the latter appeared to be required by ἦν ἔχω.— After καύχῃσιν Lachm. and Tisch. have ἀδελφοί, on the testimony of A B K s, min. vss. and Latin Fathers. Rightly; it is in keeping with the impassioned address, but was easily overlooked by the transcribers, since no new section of the address begins here (comp. on xi. 2).— Ver. 36. ἄφρον] Lachm.

Rück. Tisch. read ἄφρων, following A B D E G \aleph , min. The former is a correction.—Ver. 39. Before ἀνθρώπων Elz. has σάρξ again, which is deleted by Griesb. and the later editors, in accordance with decisive evidence.—ἰχθύων, ἄλλη δὲ πτηνῶν] A preponderance of authority—and this alone can decide here—has it in the inverse order πτηνῶν . . . ἰχθύων. So Rück., also Lachm. and Tisch., who, however, read σάρξ again before πτην., which has, it is true, important attestation, but is a mechanical addition. Paul repeated σάρξ in connection with the first kind of animals only, and so arranged his enumeration.—Ver. 44. ἔστι σῶμα κ.τ.λ.] εἰ ἔστιν σῶμα ψ., ἔστιν καὶ πνευματ. occurs in A B C D* F G \aleph , min., and several vss. and Fathers. Recommended by Griesb., adopted by Lachm. Rück. Tisch. And how easily the form of the preceding clauses might occasion the passing over of the εἰ, which, besides, was so exposed to omission from the way in which the following word begins (Εἰ ἔστιν).—Ver. 47. After ὁ δεύτερος ἄνθρ. Elz. and Scholz have ὁ κύριος, in opposition to B C D* E F G \aleph * 17, 67 and several vss. and Fathers. Suspected by Griesb., deleted by Lachm. Rück. Tisch. A gloss. See Reiche, Comm. crit. I. p. 294 ff.—Ver. 49. φορέσομεν] Lachm. reads φορέσωμεν, following A C D E F G K L \aleph , and many min. Copt. Slav. Vulg. It. Goth. Theodot. Or. (ed. de la Rue) Method. Bas. Chrys. Cyr. Macar. Epiph. Damasc. Ir. Tert. Cypr. Hilar. Zeno, Ambrosiast. Jer. Pel. al. A great preponderance of testimony! Nevertheless, the very ancient Recepta still retains the important attestation of B and many min. Syr. utr. Arr. Aeth. Arm. Or. ed. Theodoret; Occ. and Theophyl. give and explain both readings. The Recepta is to be retained, because it is necessary in the connection (see the exegetical remarks); the subjunctive is unsuitable, but was easily brought into the text from the fact that σάρξ κ. αἷμα in ver. 50 was taken in the ethical sense (see especially Chrys.); as in the physical sense, indeed, it would have stood in opposition to the doctrine of the “resurrectio carnis.” Φορέσομεν was first of all interpreted as hortative (which interpretation Theodoret felt it necessary expressly to reject), and then the hortative form of the verb was inserted in the text.—Ver. 50. κληρονομήτ] Lachm. reads κληρονομήσει, following C* D* F G, Vulg. It. and Latin Fathers. Occasioned by the similarity of sound of the preceding κληρονομήσαι.—Ver. 51.¹ πάντες μὲν . . . ἄλλαχ.] Lachm. reads πάντες [μὲν] κοιμηθ., οὗ πάντες δὲ ἄλλαχ. Altogether there are many variations, but all of them arose from the offence which was taken, in connection with the reading of the text, at the idea of Paul and his readers having all of them undergone death. The Recepta occurs in

Both the omission of the first part of the protasis (in *κ also) and the transposition of the two clauses are insufficiently attested, and are to be explained from the homoeoteleuta. — Ver. 55. νῆκος is put first and κένρον last by B C J κ, 17, 64, 71, Copt. But they are evidently transposed, after the LXX. in Hos. xiii. 14. — Instead of ᾗδῃ, B C D E F G J *κ 39, 67 and several vss. and Fathers have θάνατος again. So Lachm. Rück. Tisch.; and rightly, for ᾗδῃ has come in from the LXX.

CONTENTS.¹ — Disquisition on the resurrection of the dead, occasioned by the deniers of it in Corinth (ver. 12). That these deniers had been formerly Sadducees, and had brought forward again their Sadducean views in connection with Christianity (so recently Platt, following Heumann, Michaelis, Storr, Knapp; and comp. earlier, Calvin, and Lightfoot, Chron. p. 110) is not to be assumed, partly because, in general, Sadduceism and Christianity are too much antagonistic in their nature to mingle with each other, and also because in that case Paul could not have based his refutation upon the resurrection of Christ (Acts iv. 2). Nor is it more probable that the opponents had been Epicureans, for it is plain from vv. 32–34 that the Epicurean turn which they had taken was not the ground, but the consequence of their denial of the resurrection; as, indeed, Epicureanism in general is such an antichristian element that, supposing it had been the source of the denial, Paul would certainly have entered upon a discussion of its principles, in so far as they were opposed to faith in the resurrection. It is certain at the same time that the deniers were not Jewish Christians; for with them the belief in the Messiah stood in the most necessary connection with the belief in the resurrection; comp. Acts xxiii. 6. On the contrary, it must have been Gentile Christians (Baur, de Wette, van Hengel, Ewald, and many others) to whom the resurrection seemed impossible, and who therefore (vv. 35, 36) denied it. And it is probable, at all events, that they were persons of philosophical training (Beza, Grotius, Estius, and others, including Ziegler, theol. Abh. II. p. 35 f., Neander, Olshausen, Osiander; Rückert is undecided), because they must in asserting their thesis, ὅτι ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν οὐκ ἔστιν, have caused some sensation, which, in such a place as Corinth, is hardly conceivable on the part of men strangers to any degree of philosophical education and practice in dialectics; and because the anti-materialistic explanation of the matter, which Paul gives to combat the doubts of his opponents (ver. 35 ff.), makes it probable that the antagonism on the part of the sceptics was a spiritualistic one, i.e. an antagonism resting on the philosophic ground that the restoration of the matter of the body was impossible. That the apostle does not contend at the same time against the world's wisdom in general (a doubt expressed by de Wette) is the less strange, as he has to do now with a special subject, and has also already delivered a general polemic of this nature, chap. ii. 3. The small number, however, of men philosophically trained (i. 26) permits of no further inference than that the sceptics in question also were not numerous (τινές, ver. 12). In Athens, too (Acts xvii. 32), the resurrection of the dead was the stone of stumbling for philosophic culture; and how often has it been so since, and even to the present day!—But to which of the four parties in Corinth did these deniers belong? That they were not of the Petrine or Judaistic party is self-evident. Neither were they of the Christ-party (as Neander, Olshausen, Jäger, and Goldhorn hold them to have been), for Christ has so often and so distinctly taught the doctrine of resurrection of the body, that the denial of it would have been at the most palpable variance with the ἐγὼ Χριστοῦ εἶμι. Nor yet were they of the party of Paul, seeing that the doctrine of the resurrection was a most essential article of the Pauline Gospel. There remains, therefore, only the party of Apollos (so also Rübiger and Maier), some of whom having been converted, doubtless, only after the apostle had ceased to labour in Corinth, or having come thither subsequently from other quarters, may have found what he had taught in Corinth regarding the resurrection of the dead not compatible with their philosophical standpoint, and hence—being the more incited to it, perhaps, through party variance—altogether denied that there was a resurrection of the dead.¹ Only we must not take this to mean that the adherents of Apollos as such—their party as such—had denied the resurrection, and that accordingly this denial formed part of their party principles,² but only that the “some” (ver. 12) were preponderantly from the number of those who had attached themselves to Apollos and to the party named after him. Of the idea that the denial was a party matter, there is not only no trace whatever in the treatment of the subject, but it would also conflict with what is a necessary presupposition, namely, that the Christianity of the Apollos-party as such cannot have stood in such an essential and real contradiction in point of doctrine to that of Paul. We may add that the denial in question is not to be regarded as a theory, such as we find in 2 Tim. ii. 17 f., in the case of Hymenæus and Philetus, who understood the doctrine allegorically, and maintained that the resurrection had already taken place. So, following Chrysostom, Grotius, Usteri, Lehrbegr. p. 362, Billroth, and Olshausen. The whole elaborate treatment of the subject does not show the slightest trace of this (see, on the contrary, especially ver. 12), although the main aim in that case would have been to prove that the resurrection was not a thing past, but something future.

Vv. 1–11. Foundation for the following argument. The latter enlarges upon the resurrection itself as far as ver. 34, and then upon the manner of it from ver. 35 to ver. 54, after which triumph and exhortation, vv. 55–58, form the conclusion. — The certainty of the resurrection of Jesus was not doubted even by his opponents, who must otherwise have given up the whole historic basis of Christianity, and must have been treated by the apostle as apostates (comp. Ziegler, theol. Abh. II. p. 93; Knapp, Scr. var. arg. p. 316; Rübiger, p. 154 f.); for only in this way was that fact capable of serving him for a firm starting-point for his argument with the view of reducing the deniers ad absurdum. For this reason he sets forth the resurrection of Jesus in its certainty not polemically, but as a purely positive proposition.

¹ That they denied also the continued life of the spirit after death, which Calvin expressly leaves undecided, cannot be maintained, with Flatt and others, from passages such as vv. 19, 29, 30–32, 58. On the contrary, these passages show merely this, that Paul attached no value to the continued life of the souls in Hades, regarded in itself, and not ended by the resurrection. It was to him a vita non vitalis (comp. Kling in the Stud. u. Krit. 1839, p. 502), and the true everlasting ζωή was conditioned for him by the near Parousia and resurrection. This, at the same time, serves to correct what is asserted by Rückert and others, that in Paul's mind, as in that of the Jews and Pharisees, the ideas of continued existence and of resurrection were so blended into each other, that whoever denied the one seemed not to be capable of holding fast the other. According to Phil. i. 21, 23 (comp. also 2 Cor. v. 8; Acts vii. 59), Paul has the conviction that if he should die as a martyr, he would pass, not into Hades, but to Christ in heaven, into a blessed intermediate state until the resurrection of the body. See on Phil. 4c.

² Comp. also Krauss, p. 12.

Vv. 1, 2. Δέ] forming the transition to a new subject. There is no trace, however, of a question on the part of the Corinthians, to which Paul is giving the answer. — γνωρίζω] not, as is commonly held, equivalent to ὑπομνήσκω (Oecumenius), nor yet, as Rückert weakens the force of the word: I call your attention to; but: I make known to you (xii. 3; 2 Cor. viii. 1; Gal. i. 2; Eph. i. 9; Col. iv. 7, al.). It is, no doubt, in substance a reminding them of something already known, but the expression is more emphatic, more arousing, putting to shame a part of the readers, and accordant with the fundamental importance of what is now to be discussed. — τὸ εὐαγγ.] is not simply the tidings of the death and resurrection of Jesus (Heydenreich, Rückert, and others), but the Christian tidings of salvation generally, because there is here no limiting definition, and as is further in particular clear from ἐν πρώτοις in ver. 3. — ὁ καὶ παρελ. κ.τ.λ.] which you have also received. The thrice used καὶ denotes with ever increasing emphasis the element to be added¹ to the preceding one. — Regarding παρελ., comp. John i. 11; Phil. iv. 9; and regarding ἐστήκ., you stand, are firm, x. 12; Rom. v. 2; 2 Cor. i. 24; Eph. vi. 13; 1 Pet. v. 12; John viii. 44. — σώζεσθε] pictures as present the future, quite certain Messianic salvation. Comp. on i. 18. — τίνι λόγῳ . . . κατέχετε] condition to σώζεσθε, in which τίνι λόγῳ εὐηγγ. ὑμ. is put first for the sake of emphasis. Comp. vi. 4, xi. 14, xiv. 7, 9. Comp. also Plato, Pol. i. p. 347 D: πόλις ἀνδρῶν ἀγαθῶν εἰ γένοιτο, Parm. p. 136 A; Baruch iii. 13, as indeed in general it is common in the classics (Stallbaum, ad Plat. Phædr. p. 238 A) and in the N. T. (Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 334

[E. T. 390]) for such words as ought to follow the conjunctions to precede them for the sake of emphasis. Hence: through which (by means of faith in its contents) you also obtain salvation, if you hold fast with what word I preached it to you. Not without design does he add this condition to the σώζεσθε; for his readers were threatened with the danger of being led by the deniers of the resurrection to become untrue to the specific contents of his preaching. Others (including Bengel, Heydenreich, Billroth, van Hengel, Ewald) regard τίνι λόγῳ εὐηγγ. ὑμ. as a more precise definition to τὸ εὐαγγ. ὁ εὐηγγ. ὑμ. in accordance with the common form of attraction οἰδά σε τίς εἶ (Winer, p. 581 [E. T. 781]). Against this, however, it may be urged: (1) that the meaning: "I make known to you . . . if you still hold it fast," contains in the latter half (which is not to be transmuted, with van Hengel, into the sense: "si curae nobis cordique est quod nunc dico") a condition which stands in no logical relation to the first half; (2) that εἰ κατέχετε would be at variance with ἐν ᾧ καὶ ἐστήκατε; (3) that we should then have to assume for ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ εἰκὴ ἐπιστ. the inadmissible (see below) reference to κατέχετε. All these difficulties fall away with the above interpretation, according to which παρελάβετε expresses the historical act of reception; ἐστήκατε, the present faithfulness; σώζεσθε, the certain blessed future; and εἰ κατέχετε, the abiding condition to the attainment of this end; while ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ εἰκὴ ἐπιστ. in turn denotes the exaltation above every doubt in respect of the Messianic salvation really to be attained under this condition. — τίνι λόγῳ] not as in Acts x. 29, with what ground (Wetstein, Kypke, Heydenreich, and others, following Theodorus of Mopsuestia and Pelagius), which Osiander takes of scriptural ground; for παρέδωκα γὰρ ὑμ. κ.τ.λ., ver. 3, gives, in fact, not a ground, but the contents of the preaching. Hence also it does not refer to the "manner and method of the proclamation" (Neander), but means: through what word, i.e. preaching what. As regards τίνι, instead of a relative, see Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 216 [E. T. 251]. How different from the seductive discourses of the deniers had this λόγος of the apostle been! According to Hofmann, τίνι λόγῳ is meant to be interrogative, and that in the sense of "with what presupposition," while εἰ κατέχετε and εἰ μὴ εἰκὴ ἐπιστ. are the answer to it. Against this it may be urged: (1) that, since εἰ μὴ εἰκ. ἐπιστ. would be a second condition, Paul would have marked the connection in an intelligible way by καί (putting therefore either καί εἰ or καί by itself, but not simply εἰ); (2) that λόγος, in the sense of condition or presupposition, is foreign to the N. T. and peculiar to Herodotus, who, however, always expresses sub conditione by ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ; see Schweighäuser, Lex. Herod. II. p. 79 f. — εἰ κατέχετε] This implies not merely the not having forgotten; it is the believing firm retention, which does not let go the doctrine received—the continuance of the ἐστήκατε. Comp. Luke viii. 15; 1 Cor. xi. 2. And there is not so much an “aculeus ad pun-gendum” (Calvin) in this as an admonition of the danger. — ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ εἰκὴ ἐπίστ.] through which you are also saved, if you hold fast my word,—unless that ye have become believing in vain, without any result. Only in this case, inconceivable to the Christian consciousness (Beza aptly says: “argumentatur ab absurdo”), would ye, in spite of that holding fast, lose the σωτηρία. The words therefore imply the certainty of the σώζεσθαι to be expected under the condition of the κατέχειν. On εἰκὴ, comp. Gal. iii. 4, iv. 11; and regarding ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ, except if, see on xiv. 5; on ἐπίστ., comp. iii. 5; Rom. xiii. 11. To refer εἰκὴ to κατέχετε (Oecumenius, Theophylact, Theodoret, Luther, Calvin, Estius, and others, including Billroth and de Wette) is impracticable for this reason, that εἰ κατέχετε itself is a conditional clause, while to supply such an idea as κατέχετε δὲ πάντως (Theophylact) would be quite an arbitrary course.

Ver. 3 f. More precise explanation of the τίνι λόγῳ εὐηγγ. ὑμ. εἰ κατέχετε, by adducing those main points of that λόγος, which are of decisive importance for the further discussion which Paul now has in view. Hofmann’s interpretation of it as specifying the ground of the alleged condition and reservation in ver. 2, falls with his incorrect exposition of εἰ κατέχετε κ.τ.λ. — ἐν πρώτοις] neuter: in primis, chiefly, i.e. as doctrinal points of the first rank. Comp. Plato, Pol. p. 522 C: ὁ καὶ παντὶ ἐν πρώτοις ἀνάγκη μανθάνειν. To take it, with Chrysostom,¹ of the time (ἐξ ἀρχῆς), comp. Ecclus. iv. 17, Prov. xx. 21, runs counter

¹ Who is followed by van Hengel: “Recenset partem eorum, a quibus proponendis Corinthios docere inceptit.” So Hofmann also in substance. According to Chrysostom, Paul adduces the time as witness καὶ ὅτι ἰσχύτης ἦν αἰσχύνες, τοσούτων χρόνων τισθέντες νῦν μετατίθενται.

This in opposition also to Rückert's view of it as masculine: to you among the first (comp. 1 Macc. vi. 6; Ecclus. xlv. 20; Thuc. vii. 19. 4; Lucian, Paras. 49; Fritzsche, Quaest. Luc. p. 220), which is, moreover, historically untrue, unless with Rückert we arbitrarily supply "in Achaia." — δ καὶ παρέλαβον] This conveys the idea: which had been likewise communicated to me,—nothing therefore new or self-invented. From whom Paul had received the contents of vv. 3–5, he does not say; but for the very reason that he does not add an ἀπὸ τοῦ κυρίου, as in xi. 23, or words to like effect, and on account of the correlation in which παρέλαβον stands to παρέδωκα (comp. also δ καὶ παρέλάβετε, ver. 1), as well as on account of the reference extending to the simple historical statements in ver. 5 ff., we are not to supply: from Christ, through revelation (the common view since Chrysostom), but rather: through historical tradition, as it was living in the church (comp. van Hengel, Ewald, Hofmann). It is true, indeed, that he has that, which forms the inner relation of the ἀπέθανεν κ.τ.λ. and belongs to the inner substance of the gospel, from revelation (Gal. i. 12); but here it is the historical element which is predominantly present to his mind. — ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρτ. ἡμ.] on account of our sins, i.e. in order to expiate them, Rom. iii. 23–26; Gal. iii. 13 ff., al. The connection of the preposition with the abstract noun proves that Paul, in saying elsewhere ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν (comp. also Eph. v. 25: ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐκκλησίας), has not used the preposition in the sense of loco, not even in 2 Cor. v. 21; Gal. iii. 13. The idea of the satisfactio vicaria lies in the thing itself, not in the preposition. See on Rom. v. 6; Gal. i. 4; Eph. v. 2. It may be added that, except in this passage, the expression ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμ. occurs nowhere in the writings of Paul (not even in Gal. i. 4), although it does in the Epistle to the Hebrews, v. 1, 3 (?), ix. 7, x. 12. Christ's death and resurrection are the great facts of the redemptive work, borne witness to by the Scriptures; the burial (comp. Rom. vi. 4; Col. ii. 12; Acts xiii. 29), being the consequence of the one and the presupposition of the other, lies between as historical correlate of the corporeal reality of the resurrection, but not as a factor of the work of redemption, which as such would require to have been based upon Scripture testimony. — ἐγγγεται] not the aorist again; the being risen is the abiding state, which commenced with the ἐγερθῆναι. To reckon in Matthias (Chrysostom, Oecumenius, Theophylact, Bengel, and others) would make a needless prothysteron of the expression. It may be added that under the ὥφθη we are always to conceive of but one act of appearing, as is especially clear from ver. 8; hence we are not in connection with τοῖς δώδεκα to think of a combination of John xx. 19 ff. and 26 ff. (Osiander, van Hengel, and others), to which some have even added John xxi. That Paul narrates the series of appearances chronologically, should not have been questioned by Wieseler (Synopse der Evang. p. 420 f.), who assumes only an enumeration of the individual cases without order of time. It is implied necessarily in the words of historical continuation themselves (ἔπειτα ὡφθῆ), as well as in their relation to ἔσχατον πάντων, ver. 8. Comp. also vv. 23, 24, 46.

Ver. 6 exhibits a change in the construction—which does not continue further with ὅτι—but still belongs to the contents of the παρέδωκα and παρέλαβον down to ἀποστ. πᾶσιν (in opposition to Hofmann); for the point of view of the ὁ καὶ παρέλαβον reaches thus far, and it is only at ver. 8 that personal experience comes in instead of it. Nor is it to be inferred from the transition from the dependent to the independent construction (so frequent also, as we know, in Greek writers), which naturally corresponds with the concrete vividness of the representation, that Paul had not included this appearance and those which follow in his preaching at Corinth, but, on the contrary, was now communicating them to his readers as something new (van Hengel). Ver. 8 is especially opposed to this view, since Paul, in referring to the appearances of the Risen One, had certainly not been silent upon that made to himself (comp. ix. 1).—ἐπάνω] adverbial, not prepositional, Mark xiv. 5. Comp. ὑπέρ. Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 410. Τινές, referred to by Chrysostom, were mistaken in holding it to mean: above, over their heads. — πεντακοσ.] Consequently the number of the believers in general was already much greater than that of those who were assembled, Acts i. 15. The remarks to the contrary by Baur and Zeller, according to whom the small number 120 is plainly shown by our passage to be incorrect, are not conclusive, since the appearance here mentioned may, without any arbitrariness, be placed at so early a stage that many pilgrims to the Passover may be conceived as still present in Jerusalem when it took place, and among these many extraneous disciples of Jesus, especially Galileans. The 120 who assembled afterwards were the stock of the congregation of Jerusalem itself. Comp. on Acts i. 15. On the other hand, it is possible that the Lord appeared to the 500 brethren also in Galilee in an assembly of so many of His disciples there (Schleiermacher, Ewald). More precise evidence is wanting. Matt. xxviii. 16 ff. has nothing to do with our passage (in opposition to Lightfoot and Flatt), but applies only to the eleven. — ἐφάπαξ] not : once for all (Bretschneider, comp. Rom. vi. 10 ; Heb. vii. 27, ix. 12, x. 10), but, as it is usually understood : at once, simul (Luc. Dem. enc. 21). The former sense would need to be given by the context, which, however, from the largeness of the number, naturally suggests the latter. Van Hengel, too, wrongly insists upon the meaning semel, holding that this appearance took place only once, whereas ver. 5 applies to several appearances. The peculiar importance of this appearance lies precisely in the simul (Vulgate), ἀνύποπτος δὲ τῶν τοσούτων ἡ μαρτυρία, Theodoret. This ἐφάπαξ and the multitude of the spectators exclude all the more decidedly the idea of a visionary or ecstatic seeing, although some have ascribed all the appearances of the Risen One to this source (see especially, Holsten, zum Ev. des Paul. u. Petr. p. 65 ff.). Here we should have upwards of 500 visions occurring at the same time and place, the same in substance and form, and that, too, as psychological acts of the individual minds. — οἱ πλείους] the majority, x. 5. Luther gives it wrongly : “many still.” — μένουσιν] superstites sunt. Comp. on John xxi. 22 ; Phil. i. 25. Ἐχω μάρτυρας ἔτι ζώντας, Chrysostom. It may be added that the definite affirmation, οἱ πλείους μένουσιν, shows how earnestly the apostolic church concerned itself about the still surviving witnesses to the resurrection of Jesus, and how well it knew them.

Ver. 7. Both of these appearances also are otherwise unknown. — Ἰακώβω] The non-addition of any distinguishing epithet makes it more than probable that the person meant is he who was then the James κατ' ἐξοχήν, James the Just,¹ not one of the Twelve, but universally known as the brother of the Lord (see on ix. 4). Perhaps it was this appearance which made him become decided for the cause and service of his divine brother. Comp. Michaelis on our passage. The apocryphal narrative of the Evang. sec. Hebr. in Jerome, de vir. ill. 2, is, even as regards time, here irrelevant (in opposition to Grotius). — τοῖς ἀποστόλοις πᾶσιν] ἀπόστολοι, since it takes in James also (comp. Gal. i. 19), must stand here in a wider sense than τοῖς δώδεκα, but includes them along with others. In the Book of Acts, Barnabas, for instance, is called an apostle (xiv. 4, 14) ; and in 1 Thess. ii. 7, Timothy and Silvanus are comprehended under the conception ἀπόστολοι, of whom, of course, Timothy at least cannot be as yet included here. Chrysostom supposes the Seventy to be included. Comp. on xii. 28. In no case is it simply the Twelve again who are meant, whom Hofmann conceives to be designated here in their relation to the church. How arbitrary that is, and how superfluous such a designation would be! But πᾶσι stands decidedly opposed to it; Paul would have required to write εἶτα πάλιν τοῖς ἀποστ. Notice also the strict marking off of the original apostles by οἱ δώδεκα, an expression which Paul uses in no other place.

Ver. 8. Appearance at Damascus. Comp. ix. 1. — Regarding the adverbial ἔσχατον, comp. Plato, Gorg. p. 473 C; Soph. Oed. Col. 1547; Mark xii. 22 (Lachm.). It concludes the series of bodily appearances, and thereby separates these from later appearances in visions (Acts xviii. 9), or some other apocalyptic way. — πάντων] is not to be understood, as has been usually done, of all those in general to whom Christ appeared after His resurrection, but of all apostles, as is the most natural interpretation from the very foregoing τοῖς ἀποστ. πᾶσι, and is rendered certain by the τῷ ἑκτρώμ. with the article, which, according to ver. 9, denotes κατ' ἐξοχὴν the apostolic "abortion."¹ — The apostle's sense of the high privilege of being counted worthy to see the Risen One awakens in him his deep humility, which was always fostered by the painful consciousness of having once persecuted the church; he therefore expresses his strong sense of unworthiness by saying that he is, as it were (ὡσπερὲ, quasi, only here in the N. T., often in classic writers), τὸ ἑκτρώμα, the untimely foetus, Arist. Gener. An. iv. 5; LXX. Num. xii. 12; Job iii. 16; Eccles. vi. 3; Aq. Ps. lvii. 9. ¹ The "abortion" in the series of the apostles. Hofmann is wrong in making πάντων extend to the whole of the cases previously adduced. That would surely be a thing quite self-evident, namely, that in a series of cases following after each other, the last mentioned is just the last of all. No, πάντων is correlative to the preceding πᾶσιν, and the progress of thought is: "to the apostles all, last of all, however, to me also." Thereby Paul gives adequate expression to the deep humility with which he sees himself added to the circle of the apostles. Comp. ver. 9: ἀποστόλων, ἀπόστολοι, and then the retrospective πᾶν πάντων, ver. 10, also the ἐκείνοι, ver. 11. — Hofmann seems to take the ὡσπερὲ in the sense of ut decet; for he cites Klausen, *ad Aesch. word as Greek (for which the older Attic writers have ἄμβλωμα), Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 209. In opposition to Heydenreich and Schulthess (most recently in Keil and Tzschirner's Anal. I. 4, p. 212 f.), who interpret in a way which is linguistically erroneous (adopted, however, as early as by τινές in Theophylact), late-born, born afterwards in old age, see Fritzsche, l.c. The idea of being late-born, i.e. late in becoming an apostle, is conveyed in ἔσχατον πάντων, not in ἔκτρωμα. What Paul meant to indicate in a figurative way by τ. ἔκτρ. is clearly manifest from ver. 9, namely, that he was inferior to, and less worthy than, the rest of the apostles, in the proportion in which the abortive child stands behind that born mature.¹ Comp. Bengel: "Ut abortus non est dignus humano nomine, sic apostolus negat se dignum apostoli appellatione." See also Ignatius, ad Rom. 9. The distinct explanation which he gives himself in ver. 9 excludes all the other—some of them very odd—interpretations which have been given,² along with that of Hofmann: Paul designates himself so in contrast to those who, when Jesus appeared to them, were brethren (James too?) or apostles, and consequently had been "born as children of God into the life of the faith of Christ;" whereas with him the matter had not yet come to a full formation of Christ (Gal. iv. 19), as was the case with the rest. This artificial interpretation is all the more erroneous, seeing that Paul, when Christ appeared to him, had not yet made even the first approach to being a Christian embryo, but was the most determined opponent of the Lord, and was closely engaged in persecuting Him (Acts ix. 4); ὥσπ. τ. ἔκτρ. does not describe what Paul was then, when Christ appeared to him, but what he is since that time.—καὶ μοί] at the end, with the unaffected stamp of humility after the expressions of self-abasement put before.—Observe, further, that Paul places the appearance of the Risen One made to himself in the same series with the others, without mentioning the ascension which lay between.

² Among these must be placed Calvin's opinion (comp. Osiander): "Se comparat abortivo . . . subitae suae conversionis respectu," shared by Grotius and others, including Schrader. So, too, with the view of Baronius, Estius, Cornelius a Lapide, and others, that Paul describes himself as a supernumerary. And Wetstein even suggests: "Pseudopostoli videntur Paulo staturam exiguam objecisse, 2 Cor. x. 10."

Certainly, therefore, he did not regard the latter as the striking, epoch-making event, which it first appears in the narrative of the Book of Acts, forty days after the resurrection. See generally on Luke xxiv. 51, Remark. But observe also what stress Paul lays here and ix. 1 upon the outwardly manifested bodily appearance of the Lord, with which Gal. i. 15 does not in any way conflict.¹ 2 Cor. xii. 2 ff. is of a different tenor.

rection regarding the subject of ἐκοπίασα, not I however, but. Chrysostom says well: τῇ συνήθει κεκρημένος ταπεινοφροσύνη καὶ τοῦτο (that he laboured more, etc.) ταχέως παρέδραμε, καὶ τὸ πᾶν ἀνέθηκε τῷ θεῷ. Paul is conscious in himself that the relation of the efficacy of God's grace to his own personal agency is of such a kind, that what has just been stated belongs not to the latter, but to the former.¹ — ἡ χάρις τ. θεοῦ σὺν ἐμοί] sc. ἐκοπίασε περισσ. αὐτ. πάντ. Not I have laboured more, but the grace of God has done it with me (in efficient fellowship with me, comp. Mark xvi. 20). It is to be observed that the article before σὺν ἐμοί is not genuine (see the critical remarks), and so Paul does not disclaim for himself his own self-active share in bringing about the result, but knows that the intervention of the divine grace so outweighs his own activity, that to the alternative, whether he or grace has wrought such great things, he can only answer, as he has done: not I, but the grace of God with me. Were the article before σὺν ἐμοί genuine, the thought would not be: the grace has wrought it with me, but: *the grace, which is with me,*² has wrought it. But Beza's remark holds true for the case also of the article being omitted: "Paulum ita se ipsum facere gratiae administrum, ut illi omnia tribuat." There is no ground for thinking even remotely of a "not alone, but also," or the like (see Grotius, Flatt, and others).

¹ Augustine, De Grat. et lib. arb. 3, says: "Non ego autem, i.e. non solus, sed gratia Dei mecum; ac per hoc nec gratia Dei sola, nec ipse solus, sed gratia Dei cum illo." Therewith, however, the relation of the grace to the individuality, as Paul has expressed it by οὐκ ἐγὼ, ἀλλὰ, is entirely overlooked.

The inference rests upon the principle: "sublato genere tollitur et species" (Grotius). For Christ had also become a νεκρός, and was, as respects His human nature, not different from other men (ver. 21). Comp. Theodoret: σῶμα γὰρ καὶ ὁ δεσπότης εἶχε Χριστός. This in opposition to the fault which Rückert finds with the conclusion, that, if Christ be a being of higher nature, the Logos of God, etc., the laws of created men do not hold for Him. It is plain that the resurrection, as well as the death, related only to the human form of existence. The σῶμα of Christ (xi. 24; Rom. vii. 4), the σῶμα τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ (Col. i. 22; comp. Eph. ii. 15), was put to death and rose again, which would have been impossible, if ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν (bodily revivification of those bodily dead) in general were a chimera. Comp. Knapp, Scr. var. arg. p. 316; Usteri, p. 364 f.; van Hengel, p. 68 f. Calvin, following Chrysostom and Theodoret, grounds the apostle's conclusion thus: "quia enim non nisi nostra causa resurgere debuit: nulla ejus resurrectio foret, si nobis nihil prodesset." Comp. Erasmus, Paraphr. But according to this it would not follow from the ἀνάστασις νεκρ. οὐκ ἔστιν that Christ had not risen, but only that His resurrection had not fulfilled its aim. The idea, that Christ is ἀπαρχή of the resurrection, is not yet taken for granted here (as an axiom), but comes in for the first time at ver. 20 (in opposition to Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, including de Wette and Osiander), after the argument has already reached the result, that Christ cannot have remained in the grave, as would yet follow with logical certainty from the proposition: ἀνάστασις νεκρ. οὐκ ἔστιν. It is only when it comes to bring forward the ἀπαρχή, that the series of inferences celebrates its victory.

Ver. 14. Δέ] continues the series of inferences. Without the resurrection of Jesus, what are we with our preaching! what you with your faith! The former is then dealt with in ver. 15 f., the latter in vv. 17–19. — ἄρα] is the simple therefore, thus (rebus ita comparatis). See against Hartung's view, that it introduces the unexpected (this may be implied in the connection, but not in the particle), Klotz, ad Devar. p. 160 ff. — κενόν and κενή are put first with lively emphasis. — οὐκ ἐγγύ.] i.e. has remained in the grave. — κενόν] empty, i.e. without reality (Eph. v. 6; Col. ii. 8), without really existing contents, inasmuch, namely, as the redemption in Christ and its completion through the Messianic σωτηρία are the contents of the preaching; but this redemption has not taken place and the Messianic salvation is a chimera, if Christ has not risen. Comp. ver. 17; Rom. i. 4, iv. 25, viii. 34. — καί] also. If it holds of Christ that He is not risen, then it holds also of our preaching that it is empty. — ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν] your faith in Jesus as the Messiah,¹ ver. 11. Ver. 15. We should not, with Lachmann, place only a comma after ver. 14; for ver. 15 carries independently its full confirmation with it, and its awful thought comes out all the more impressively, when taken independently of what precedes it. The emphasis of the verse lies in the God-dishonouring ψευδομάρτυρ. τοῦ θεοῦ. In this phrase τοῦ θεοῦ must, in conformity with what follows, be genitivus objecti (not subjecti, as Billroth would make

Observe here (1) the identity of the category, in which Paul places the resurrection of Christ and the bodily resurrection of the dead; (2) the sacredness of the apostolic testimony for the former; (3) the fanatical self-deception, to which he would have been a victim, if the appearances of the Risen One had been psychological hallucinations, so that the whole transformation of Saul into Paul—nay, his whole Gospel—would rest upon this self-deception, and this self-deception upon a mental weakness which would be totally irreconcilable with his otherwise well-known strength and acuteness of intellect.

Solemnly now also the other conclusion from the οὐδὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγ., already expressed in ver. 14, is once more exhibited, but in such a way that its tragical form stands out still more awfully (ματαία and ἔτι ἐστὲ ἐν τ. ἀμ. ὕμ.), and has a new startling feature added to it by reference to the lot of the departed. — ματαία] vain, fruitless, put first with emphasis, as ἔτι is afterwards. Tit. iii. 9; Plato, Tim. p. 40 D, Legg. v. p. 735 B; Polyb. vi. 25. 6; 4 Macc. vi. 10). This, namely, has its character brought out in an awful manner by ἔτι ἐστὲ ἐν τ. ἁμ. ὑμ.: then ye are still in your sins—i.e. then ye are not yet set free from your (pre-Christian) sins, not yet delivered from the obligation of their guilt. For if Christ is not risen, then also the reconciliation with God and justification have not taken place; without His resurrection His death would not be a redemptive death.¹ Rom. iv. 25, and see on ver. 14. ² Κοιμᾶσθαι is the habitually used New Testament euphemism for dying (comp. vv. 6, 11, 30), and in no way justifies the unscriptural assumption of a sleep of the soul, in which Paul is held to have believed. See against this, Delitzsch, Psychol. p. 419 ff. In the euphemistic character of that expression, however, which classic writers also have (Jacobs, ad Del. epigr. viii. 2), lies the reason why he never uses it of the death of Christ. This was recognised as early as by Photius, who aptly remarks, Quaest. Amphiloeh. 187: ἐπὶ μὲν οὖν τοῦ Χριστοῦ θάνατον καλῶ, ἵνα τὸ πάθος πιστωσῇται· ἐπὶ δὲ ἡμῶν κοίμησιν, ἵνα τὴν ἰδύνην παραμυθῇται. in fact, died without expiation of their sins. That this does not mean: they have become annihilated (Menochius, Bengel, Heydenreich, and others), is clear from ἐτι ἐστὲ ἐν τ. ἀμ. ὑμ., of which, in respect of the dead, the ἀπώλεια in Hades is the consequence.

Ver. 19. Sad lot of the Christians (not simply of the apostles, as Grotius and Rosenmüller would have it), if this οἱ κοιμηθέντες ἐν Χ. ἀπώλονται turn out to be true! "If we are nothing more than such, as in this life have their hope in Christ,—not at the same time such, as even when κοιμηθέντες will hope in Christ,¹—then are we more wretched," etc. In other words: "If the hope of the future glory (this object of the Christian hope is obvious of itself, xiii. 13; Rom. v. 2), which the Christian during his temporal life places in Christ, comes to nought with this life, inasmuch as death transports him into a condition through which the Christian hope proves itself to be a delusion,—namely, into the condition of ἀπώλεια,—then are we Christians more wretched," etc.—The correct reading is εἰ ἐν τῇ ζ. ταύτῃ ἐν Χ. ἡλπ. ἐσμ. μόνον. See the critical remarks. In ἐν τ. ζωῇ ταύτῃ the main emphasis falls upon τῇ ζωῇ, as the opposite of κοιμηθέντες (comp. Rom. viii. 38; 1 Cor. iii. 22; Phil. i. 20; Luke xvi. 25), not upon ταύτῃ (so commonly); and μόνον belongs to the whole ἐν τ. ζ. τ. ἐν Χ. ἡλπιότες ἐσμέν, so that the adverb is put last for emphasis (Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. ii. 5. 14, ii. 6. 1), not simply to ἐν τ. ζ. ταύτῃ, as it is usually explained: "If we are such as only for this life ('dum hic vivimus,' Piscator) have placed their hope in Christ," Billroth. This trajection of μόνον would be in the highest degree violent and irrational. The perfect ἡλπιότες indicates the continued subsistence during this life of the hope cherished; 2 Cor. i. 10; 1 Tim. iv. 10, al. See Bernhardt, p. 378; Ast, ad Plat. Legg. p. 408. That the hope has an end with the present life, is not implied in the perfect (Hofmann), but in the whole statement from εἰ on to μόνον. The participle again with ἐσμέν does not stand for the tempus finitum, but the predicate is brought into peculiar relief (Kühner, II. p. 40), so that it is not said what we do, but what we are Rückert is wrong in connecting ἐν Χ. with μόνον (equivalent to ἐν μόνῳ τῷ Χ.): "If we in the course of this life have placed our whole confidence on Christ alone, have (at the end of our life) disdained every other ground of hope and despised every other source of happiness, and yet Christ is not risen . . . is able to perform nothing of what was promised; then are we the most unhappy," etc. Against this may be decisively urged both the position of μόνον and the wholly arbitrary way in which the conditioning main idea is supplied ("and if yet Christ is not risen"). According to Baur, what is meant to be said is: "if the whole contents of our life were the mere hoping," which, namely, never passes into fulfilment. But in that way a pregnancy of meaning is made to underlie the ἡλπιότες, which must have been at least indicated by the arrangement: εἰ ἡλπιότες μόνον ἐσμὲν κ.τ.λ. — ἐλεεινότεροι πάντ.] more worthy of compassion than all men, namely, who are in existence besides us Christians. In this connection of the condition until death with the disappointment after death would lie the ἐλεεινόν, the tragic nothingness of the Christian moral eudaemonism, which sees in Christ its historical basis and divine warrant. The unbelieving, on the contrary, live on carelessly and in the enjoyment of the moment. Comp. ver. 32, and see Calvin's exposition.

See on ver. 29. — νυνὶ δέ] jam vero, but now, as the case really stands. Comp. xiii. 13, xiv. 6, al. — ἀπαρχή τῶν κεκοιμ.] as first-fruits of those who have fallen asleep, predicative more precise definition to Χριστός, inasmuch as He is risen from the dead. Comp. as regards ἀπαρχή used of persons, xvi. 15; Rom. xvi. 5; Jas. i. 18; Plutarch, Thes. 16. The meaning is: “Christ is risen, so that thereby He has made the holy beginning of the general resurrection of those who have fallen asleep” (comp. ver. 23; Col. i. 18; Rev. i. 5; Clement, Cor. I. 24). Whether in connection with ἀπαρχή Paul was thinking precisely of a definite offering of first-fruits as the concrete foil to his conception (comp. Rom. xi. 16), in particular of the sheaves of the Paschal feast, Lev. xxiii. 10 (Bengel, Osiander, and others), must, since he indicates nothing more minutely, remain undecided. The genitive is partitive. See on Rom. viii. 23. — That by τῶν κεκοιμ. we are to understand believers, is to be inferred both from the word itself, which in the New Testament is always used only of the death of the saints, and also from the fellowship with Christ denoted by ἀπαρχή. And in truth what is conceived of is the totality of departed believers, including, therefore, those too who shall still fall asleep up to the Parousia, and then belong also to the κεκοιμήμενοι (the sleeping); see ver. 23. This does not exclude the fact that Christ is the raiser of the dead also for the unbelieving; He is not, however, their ἀπαρχή; but see on ver. 22. That those, moreover, who were raised before Christ and by Christ Himself (as Lazarus), also those raised by apostles, do not make the ἀπαρχή τῶν κεκοιμ. untrue, is clear from the consideration that no one previously was raised to immortal life (to ἀφθαρσία); while Enoch and Elias (Gen. v. 24; 2 Kings ii. 11) did not die at all. Christ thus remains πρῶτος ἐξ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν, Acts xxvi. 23. But the ἀπαρχή allows us to look from the dawn of the eschatological order of salvation, as having taken place already, to the certainty of its future completion. Luthardt says well: “The risen Christ is the beginning of the history of the end.”

Ver. 21. Assigning the ground for the characteristic ἀπαρχή τῶν κεκοιμ. “For since (seeing that indeed, i. 21 f., xiv. 16; Phil

ii. 26) through a man death is brought about, so also through a man is resurrection of the dead brought about." We must supply simply ἐστὶ; but the conclusion is not (Calvin and many others) e contrariis causis ad contrarios effectus, but, as is shown by the δι' ἀνθρώπου twice prefixed with emphasis: a causa mali effectus ad similem causam contrarii effectus. The evil which arose through a human author is by divine arrangement removed also through a human author. How these different effects are each brought about by a man, Paul assumes to be known to his readers from the instructions which he must have given them orally, but reminds them thereof by ver. 22. — θάνατος] of physical death, Rom. v. 12. — ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν] resurrection of dead persons, abstractly expressed, designates the matter ideally and in general. So also θάνατος without the article; see the critical remarks.

Ver. 22. More precise explanation confirmatory of ver. 21, so that the first δι' ἀνθρώπου is defined in concreto by ἐν τῷ Ἀδάμ, likewise θάνατος by πάντες ἀποθνήσκουσιν κ.τ.λ. — ἐν τῷ Ἀδάμ] In Adam it is causally established that all die, inasmuch as, namely, through Adam's sin death has penetrated to all, Rom. v. 12; to which statement only Christ Himself, who, as the sinless One, submitted Himself to death in free obedience toward the Father (Phil. ii. 8; Rom. v. 19), forms a self-evident exception. — ἐν τῷ Χ.] for in Christ lies the ground and cause, why at the final historical completion of His redemptive work the death which has come through Adam upon all shall be removed again, and all shall be made alive through the resurrection of the dead. In this way, therefore, certainly no one shall be made alive except in Christ,¹ but this will happen to all. Since πάντες, namely, is not to be restricted to the totality of believers, but to be taken quite generally (see below), there thus results more specially as the idea of the apostle: Christ, when He appears in His glory, is not simply the giver of life for His believing people; He makes them (through the resurrection, and relatively through the transformation, ver. 51) alive unto the eternal Messianic ζωή (Rom. viii. 11); but His life-giving power extends also to the other side, that is, to the unbelievers who must experience the necessary opposite of the completed redemption; these He awakes to the resurrection of condemnation. Paul thus agrees with John v. 28 f.; Matt. x. 28; and thus his declaration recorded in Acts xxiv. 15 finds its confirmation in our text (comp. on Phil. iii. 11). — πάντες ζωον.] which is to be understood not of the new principle of life introduced into the consciousness of humanity (Baur, neut. Theol. p. 198), but, according to the context and on account of the future, in the eschatological sense, is by most interpreters (including Flatt, Billroth, Rückert, Osiander, van Hengel, Maier, Ewald, Hofmann, Lechler, apost. Zeit. p. 145; Lutterbeck, II. p. 232 ff.) held to refer only to believers. But ἕκαστος, ver. 23, requires us to think of the resurrection of all (so also Olshausen, de Wette); for otherwise we should have to seek the πάντες collectively in the second class ἔπειτα οἱ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, so that οἱ τοῦ Χριστοῦ and the πάντες would cover each other, and there could be no mention at all of an ἕκαστος ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ τάγματι in reference to the πάντες. Accordingly we must not restrict ζωον. to blessed life, and perhaps explain (so de Wette, comp. also Neander in loc.; Messner, Lehre der Apost. p. 291 f.; Stroh, Christus d. Erstl. d. Entschlaf. 1866) its universality (πάντες) from the (not sanctioned by the N. T.) ἀποκατάστασις πάντων (comp. Weizel in the Stud. u. Krit. 1836, p. 978; Kern in the Tüb. Zeitschr. 1840, 3, p. 24). Neither must we so change the literal meaning, as to understand it only of the *destination*¹ of all to the blessed resurrection (J. Müller in the Stud. u. Krit. 1835, p. 751), or as even to add mentally the condition which holds universally for the partaking in salvation (Hofmann)—which alteration of what is said categorically into a hypothetical statement is sheer arbitrariness. On the contrary, ζωοποιηθ. (see also ver. 36), confronted with the quite universal assertion of the opponents that a resurrection of the dead is a non ens (vv. 12–16), is in and by itself indifferent (comp. Rom. iv. 17; 2 Kings v. 7; Neh. ix. 6; Theod. Isa. xxvi. 14; Lucian, V. H. i. 22), the abstract opposite of θάνατος (comp. ver. 36), in connection with which the concrete difference as regards the different subjects is left for the reader himself to infer. As early interpreters as Chrysostom, Ambrosiaster, and Theodoret have rightly understood πάντες ζωον. not simply of the blessed resurrection, but generally of bodily revivification, and without limiting or attaching conditions to the πάντες. It denotes all without exception, as is necessary from ver. 23, and in keeping with the quite universal πάντες of the first half of the verse. See, too, on ver. 24. In opposition to the error regarding the Apokatastasis, see generally Philippi, Glaubenslehre, III. p. 372 ff.; Martensen, Dogmat. § 286.

Ver. 23. Each, however, in his own division, sc. ζωοποιηθήσεται. — τάγμα] does not mean order of succession, but is a military word (division of the army, legion, Xen. Mem. iii. 1. 11, and see the passages in Wetstein and Schweighäuser, Lex. Polyb. p. 610 f.), so that Paul presents the different divisions of those that rise under the image of different troops of an army. In Clement also, Cor. i. 37, 41, this meaning should be retained. — ἀπαρχή Χριστός] as first-fruits Christ, namely, vivificatus est. What will ensue in connection with the ἀπαρχή, after the lapse of the period between it and the Parousia, belongs to the future. It would appear, therefore, as though ἀπαρχή X. were not pertinent here, where the design is to exhibit the order of the future resurrection (ver. 22). But Paul regards the resurrection of all, including Christ Himself, as one great connected process, only taking place in several acts, so that thus by far the greater part indeed belongs to the future, but, in order not simply to the completeness of the whole, but at the same time for the sure guarantee of what was to come, the ἀπαρχή also may not be left unmentioned. There is no ground for importing any further special design; in particular, Paul cannot have intended to counteract such conceptions, as that the whole τάγμα must forthwith be made alive along with its leader (von Zezschwitz), or to explain why those who have fallen asleep in Christ continue in death and do not arise immediately (Hofmann). For no reader could expect the actual resurrection of the dead before the Parousia; that was the postulate of the Christian hope.¹—We may note that, in using ἀπαρχή, Paul departs again from his military mode of conception as expressed in τάγμα; otherwise he would have written ἀρχός, ἀρχηγός, ἑπαρχος, κορυφαῖος, or something similar. — οἱ τοῦ Χριστοῦ] the Christians, Gal. v. 24; 1 Thess. iv. 16. — ἐν τῇ παρουσία αὐτοῦ] at His coming to set up the Messianic kingdom, Matt. xxiv. 3 ; 1 Thess. ii. 19, iii. 13, iv. 15 ; Jas. v. 7 f. ; 1 John ii. 28 ; 2 Pet. iii. 4. Paul accordingly describes the τάγμα which rises first after Christ Himself (as the ἀπαρχή) thus : thereafter shall the confessors of Christ be raised up at His Parousia. It is opposed to this—the only correct—meaning of the words to restrict οἱ τοῦ Χριστοῦ to the true Christians (οἱ πιστοὶ καὶ οἱ εὐδοκίμη-κότες, Chrysostom), and thereby to anticipate the judgment (2 Cor. v. 10 ; Rom. xiv. 10), or to include along with them the godly of the Old Testament, as Theodoret, and of late Maier, have done. Not less contrary to the words is it to explain away the Parousia, as van Hengel does : “ qui sectatores Christi fuerunt, quum ille hac in terra erat.” This is grammatically incorrect, for the article would have needed to be repeated ;¹ inappropriate as regards expression, for ἡ παρουσία τοῦ Χ. is in the whole New Testament the habitual technical designation of the last coming of Christ ; and lastly, missing the mark as to meaning, since it would yield only a non-essential, accidental difference as to the time of discipleship as the criterion of distinction (Matt. xx. 16). — ἔπειτα is simply thereafter, thereupon, looking back to the ἀπαρχή, not following next, as Hofmann would have it. The intervening period is the time running on to the Parousia. Hofmann inappropriately compares the use of the word in Soph. Ant. 611, where τὸ ἔπειτα occurs and denotes what follows immediately next ; see Schneidewiin on Soph. l.c. ; also Hermann in loc. : “ a quo proximum est cum eoque cohaeret.”

Ver. 24. Εἴτα τὸ τέλος] sc. ἔσται. Then shall the end be, namely, as is clear from the whole context, the end of the resurrection. Bengel puts it aptly : “ correlatum primitiarum” (comp. Matt. xxiv. 14, where τὸ τέλος is correlative with ἀρχή in ver. 8, also Mark xiii. 7, 9) ; although Christ is only the first-fruits of the believers, He is nevertheless at the same time the beginning of all. According to Paul, therefore, the order of the resurrection is this : (1) it has begun already with Christ Himself ; (2) at Christ's return to establish His kingdom the Christians shall be raised up ; (3) thereafter—how soon, however, or how long after the Parousia, is not said¹—sets in the last act of the resurrection, its close, which, as is now self-evident after what has gone before, applies to the non-Christians.² These too shall, it is plain, be judged (vi. 2, xi. 32), of which their resurrection is the necessary premiss (in opposition to Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 430 f.). Paul has thus conjoined the doctrine of Judaism regarding a two-fold resurrection (Bertholdt, Christol. pp. 176 ff., 203 ff.) with the Christian faith, in accordance with the example of Christ Himself (see on Luke xiv. 14; John v. 29). The majority of interpreters after Chrysostom (including Reiche, Ewald, Maier) understand τὸ τέλος of the end of the present age of the world,³ the final consummation (Weiss), the closing issue of things (Luthardt, v. d. letzten Dingen, p. 127), which includes also the resurrection of all men. In connection with this Rückert thinks (comp. Kling, p. 505) that εἴτα indicates the immediate following, one upon the other, of the ἀνάστασις and the τέλος; Olshausen, again, that Paul conceived the thousand years of the Messianic kingdom to come in between the Parousia and the τέλος, and the resurrection of the non-Christians to be joined together with the τέλος. But against the latter view it may be urged that, according to the constant doctrine of the New Testament (apart from Rev. xx.), with the Parousia there sets in the finis hujus sæculi, so that the Parousia itself is the terminal point of the pre-Messianic, and the commencing-point of the future, world-period (Matt. xxiv. 3, al.; Usteri, Lehrbegr. p. 344). Against the former view it may be decisively urged, that εἴτα τὸ τέλος in the assumed sense would be inappropriate here, where the order of the resurrection is stated and is begun with ἀπαρχή; further, that Paul would not have given, in any proper sense at all, the promised order of succession, whether we take πάντες, ver. 22, simply of believers or correctly of all in general. For in the former case there could be no mention at all of several τάγματα (see on ver. 22); and in the latter case Paul would have passed over in silence the very greatest τάγμα of all, that of those who died non-Christians. But how complete and self-consistent everything is, if ἀπαρχή is the beginning, ἔπειτα οἱ τοῦ Χριστοῦ the second act, and εἶτα τὸ τέλος the last act of the same transaction! So in substance among the old interpreters, Theodoret and Oecumenius, later Cajetan, Bengel, Jehne, de resurrect. carn. Alton 1788, p. 19; Heydenreich, Osiander, Grimm in the Stud. u. Krit. 1850, p. 784. In accordance with what has been said, we must reject also the view of Grotius and Billroth, that τὸ τέλος is the end of the kingdom of Christ (comp. Kahn, Dogm. I. p. 575); in connection with which Billroth leaves it undecided whether Paul conceived that there would be a thousand years' reign, but finds rightly that his conception is different from that of Rev. xx. 1 ff.¹ The same considerations militate against this view as against that of Rückert; moreover, τέλος requires its explanation not from what follows, but from what precedes it, with which it stands in the closest relation. This also in opposition to de Wette (so, too, Lechler, apost. u. nachapost. Zeitalter, p. 140; Neander in loc.), who understands the completion of the eschatological events (comp. Beza), so that the general resurrection would be included in the conception (comp. Theophylact: τὸ τέλος τῶν πάντων καὶ αὐτῆς τῆς ἀναστάσεως); similarly, therefore, as regards the latter point, with Luthardt and Olshausen. Theodoret is right, in accordance with the Pauline type of doctrine (comp. Matt. xiii. 39 f.), in remarking already at the preceding class (οἱ τοῖ X.): κατὰ τὸν τῆς συντελείας καιρόν. For the intervening period between the ἔπειτα and the εἶτα is by no means to be reckoned to the αἰὼν οὗτος, but to the αἰὼν μέλλον, of which it is the first stage in time and development; the absolute consummation is then the giving over of the kingdom, which is immediately preceded by the last act of the resurrection (τὸ τέλος). Hofmann (comp. also his Schriftbew. II. 2, p. 657) takes τὸ τέλος adverbially, and then the two clauses commencing with ὅταν as protases to ἔσχατος ἐχθρὸς καταργ. ὁ θάνατος, ver. 26, so that in this way δεῖ γὰρ αὐτὸν κ.τ.λ., ver. 25, falls to the second of those two protases as a reason assigned, inserted between it and the apodosis; consequently: then shall finally, when . . ., when . . ., the last enemy be brought to nought. This bringing to nought of death, he holds, includes the raising to life of such as, being ordained to life, did not belong to Christ during their bodily existence, and thus there is formed of these a second τάγμα, for the possibility of which Hofmann adduces Rom. ii. 15 f. But in what an involved and violent way are the simple, clear, and logically flowing sentences of the apostle thus folded and fenced in, and all for the purpose of getting out of them at last a second τάγμα, which, however, does not stand there at all, but is only inserted between the lines; and that, too, such a τάγμα as is entirely alien to the New Testament eschatology, and least of all can be established by Rom. ii. 15 f. (see in loc.) as even barely possible! And how unsuitable it is to treat ver. 25, although introduced with solemn words of Scripture, as a subordinate sentence of confirmation, making the chain of protases on to the final short principal sentence only the longer and clumsier! In this whole section withal Paul employs only sentences of short and simple construction, without any involved periods. It may be added that, from a linguistic point of view, there would be nothing to object against the adverbial interpretation of τὸ τέλος, considered solely in itself (comp. 1 Pet. iii. 8); but, after the two elements which have gone before, the substantive explanation is the only one which presents itself as accordant with the context; nay, the adverbial use would have here, as the whole exegetical history of the passage shows, only led the understanding astray.—ὅταν παραδιδῶ κ.τ.λ.] states with what τὸ τέλος will be contemporaneous: when he gives over the (Messianic) kingdom, etc. The church, or the fellowship of believers (van Hengel), is never designated by ἡ βασιλ., not even vi. 9 f.; Eph. v. 5; Col. i. 13, iv. 11; neither is it so here. The conception, on the contrary, is: the last act of Christ's Messianic rule consists in the close of the resurrection, namely, the raising up of the non-Christians;¹ this He performs when He is about to hand over the rule to God, after which the last-named wields the government Himself and immediately, and Christ's Messianic, and in particular His kingly office—the regency which had been entrusted to Him by God (Phil. ii. 9 f.)—is accomplished. It was a purely dogmatic (anti-Arian) explaining away of the clear meaning of the word to take παραδιδόναι as equivalent to κατορθοῦν (Chrysostom) or τελειοῦν (Theophylact); such, too, was the interpretation of Theodoret, Ambrosiaster, Cajetan, Estius, and others, including Storr and Flatt, according to which the giving over of the kingdom to the Father denotes the producing the result, that God shall be universally acknowledged as the supreme Ruler, even by those who did not wish to acknowledge Him as such. Hilary and Augustine (de Trin. i. 8) have another mode of explaining it away: what is meant is the bringing of the elect to the vision of God; similarly van Hengel (comp. Neander): Paul means to say, "Christum sectatores suos facturum peculium Dei, ut ei vivant;" and in like manner Beza, Heydenreich: we are to understand it of the presentation of the citizens of the kingdom, raised from the dead, before God. Another mode is that of Calovius, Bengel, Osiander, Reiche, al. (comp. also Gess, Pers. Chr. p. 280): it is only the form of the rule of Christ (namely, as the reconciler) that ceases then; the regnum gratiae ceases, and the regnum gloriae follows, which is what Luther's and Melancthon's exposition² also comes to in substance. No; Christ, although by His exaltation to the right hand of the Father He has become the σύνθρονος of God, is still only He who is invested with the sovereignty by the Father until all hostile powers are overcome (comp. Phil. ii. 9 ff.; Eph. i. 21; Acts ii. 33 ff.; Heb. i. 3, 13),¹ so that the absolute supreme sovereignty, which remains with the Father, is again immediately exercised after that end has been attained; the work of Christ is then completed; He gives up to the Father the Messianic administration of the kingdom, which has continued since His ascension.² The thought is similar in Pirke Elies. 11. "Nonus rex est Messias, qui reget ab extremitate una mundi ad alteram. Decimus Deus S. B.; tunc redibit regnum ad auctorem suum." We must not mix up the spiritual βασίλεια, John xviii. 37, here, where the subject is the exalted Lord.—τῷ θεῷ κ. πατρί] God, who is at the same time Father, namely, of Jesus Christ. Comp. Rom. xv. 6; 2 Cor. i. 3, xi. 31; Gal. i. 3; Eph. i. 3, v. 20; Col. i. 3; 1 Pet. i. 3; Jas. i. 27, iii. 9. Estius says rightly: "unus articulus utrumque complectens." See Matthiae, p. 714 f, and on Rom. xv. 6. That Paul, however, means by πατὴρ Χριστοῦ, not the supernatural bodily generation, but the metaphysical spiritual derivation, according to which Christ is κατὰ πνεῦμα ἀγιωσύνης the Son of God, see on Rom. i. 4.—But this giving over of the kingdom will not take place sooner than: ὅταν καταργήσῃ κ.τ.λ., when He shall have done away, etc. Observe the difference of meaning between ὅταν with the present (παράδιδῷ) and with the aorist (futur. exact.). See Matthiae, p. 1195. And this difference of tense shows of itself that of the two clauses introduced with ὅταν, this second one is subordinated to the first, and not co-ordinated with it (Hofmann). Hence, too, we have no καί or τέ with the second ὅταν. It is the familiar phenomenon of the double protasis, the one being dependent on the other (Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. i. 2. 35; Anab. iii. 2. 31).—πάντα ἀρχὴν . . . δύναμιν] every dominion and every power and might, is to be understood, as ver. 25 proves clearly, of all hostile powers, of all influences opposed to God, whose might Christ will bring to nought (καταργ., comp. ii. 6); consequently we may not explain it simply of demoniac powers (Chrysostom, Calovius, and others, including Heydenreich, Billroth, Usteri, Neander, Luthardt), nor refer it to worldly political powers as such (Grotius). In opposition to the context on account of τοὺς ἐχθρούς, ver. 25, Calvin interprets it (comp. Cajetanus): "potestates legitimas a Deo ordinatas;" and Olshausen understands all rule, good as well as bad, and even that of the Son also, to be meant. The subject of καταργ. must, it may be added, be the same with that of παραδιδῶ, consequently not God (Beza, Grotius, Bengel, Heydenreich, van Hengel, and others).

² Luther: Christ is now ruling through the word, not in visible public fashion, as we see the sun through a cloud. "There we see indeed the light, but not the sun itself; but when the clouds are gone, then we see both light and sun together in one and the same subsistence." Melancthon: "Offeret regnum patri, i.e. ostendet has actiones (namely, of the mediatorial office), completas esse, et deinde simul regnabit ut Deus, immediate divinitatem nobis ostendens."

Vv. 25–28. Establishment of the fact that Christ will not deliver up the kingdom until after the doing away of every dominion, etc. (vv. 25–27, down to πόδας αὐτοῦ), but that then this abdication will assuredly follow (vv. 27, 28).—For He must (it is necessary in accordance with the divine counsel) reign (wield the Messianic government) until, etc. The emphasis of the sentence as it advances falls on this until, etc. — ἄχρις οὗ κ.τ.λ.] words taken from Ps. cx. 1,—a Messianic psalm, according to Christ Himself (Matt. xxii. 43 f.),—which Paul does not quote, but appropriates for himself. The subject to θῆ is not God (so even Hofmann), but Christ (so Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, Neander, Ewald, Maier, comp. already Chrysostom), which is necessarily required by the preceding αὐτόν, and by καταργήσῃ in ver. 24, to which θῆ κ.τ.λ. corresponds.¹ Not till ver. 27 does God come in as the subject without violence and in harmony with the context. — ἄχρις οὗ indicates the terminus ad quem of the dominion of Christ, after which epoch this dominion will have ceased; see on ver. 24. The strange shifts which have been resorted to in order to maintain here the subsequent continuance of the rule of Christ (οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος was added to the Nicene Creed in opposition to Marcellus in the second Oecumenical Council), may be seen in Estius and Flatt. His kingdom continues, but not His regency, ver. 24. The seeming contradiction to Luke i. 33 (Dan. vii. 14) is got rid of by the consideration that the government of Christ lasts on into the αἰὼν μέλλον, and that after its being given over to the Father, the kingdom itself will have its highest and eternal completion (ver. 28); thus that prophecy receives its eschatological fulfilment.

¹ We are not, however, on this account to write πᾶσι αὐτοῦ instead of π. αὐτοῦ; the pronoun has proceeded from the standpoint of the writer.

Ver. 26. More precise definition of the ἄχρῖς οὖ, by specification of the enemy who is last of all to be brought to nought. As last enemy (whose removal is dealt with after all the others, so that then none is left remaining) is death done away (by Christ), inasmuch, namely, as after completion of the raising of the dead (of the non-Christians also, see on ver. 22) the might of death shall be taken away, and now there occurs no more any state of death, or any dying. The present sets it before us as realized. Olshausen imports arbitrarily the idea that in ἔσχατος there lies a reference not simply to the time of the victory, but also to the greatness of the resistance. To understand Satan (Heb. ii. 14) to be meant by θάνατος, with Usteri, Lehrbegr. p. 373, and others, following Pelagius, is without warrant from linguistic usage, and without ground from the context. As regards the personification of the death, which is done away, comp. Rev. xx. 14; Isa. xxv. 8.

Ver. 27. Πάντα γὰρ . . . αὐτοῦ] Proof that death also must be done away. This enemy cannot remain in subsistence, for otherwise God would not have all things, etc. The point of the proof lies in πάντα, as in Heb. ii. 8.—The words are those of Ps. viii. 7, which, as familiar to the reader (comp. on Rom. ix. 7; Gal. iii. 11), Paul makes his own, and in which he, laying out of account their historical sense, which refers to the rule of man over the earth, recognises, as is clear from ὅταν δὲ εἶπῃ κ.τ.λ., a typical declaration of God, which has its antitypical fulfilment in the completed rule of the Messiah (the δεύτερος ἄνθρωπος, ver. 47). Comp. Eph. i. 22; Heb. ii. 8.—The subject of ὑπέταξε (which expresses the subjection ordained by God in the word of God) is God, as was obvious of itself to the reader from the familiar passage of the psalm. If God has in that passage of Ps. viii. subjected all to the might of Christ, then death also must be subdued by Him; otherwise it is plain that one power would be excepted from that divine subjection of all things to Christ, and the πάντα would not be warranted.—ὅταν δὲ εἶπῃ κ.τ.λ.] δέ leading on, namely, to the confirmation of the giving over of the kingdom to God, for which proof is still to be adduced: "but, when He shall have said that the whole is subjected, then without doubt He will be excepted from this state of subjection, who has subjected the whole to Him." The subject of εἶπῃ is not ἡ γραφή (de Wette, al.), but neither is it Christ (Hofmann), but the same as with ὑπέταξεν, therefore God, whose word that passage of the psalm adduced is not as regards its historical connection, but is so simply as a word of Scripture. Comp. on vi. 16. The aorist εἶπη is to be taken regularly, not, with Luther and the majority of interpreters: when He says, but, like vv. 24, 28, as futurum exactum: dixerit (Irenaeus, Hilary). So, too, Hofmann rightly.¹ Comp. Luke vi. 26. Plato, Parm. p. 143 C; Ion. p. 535 B; also εἰπὼν, x. 28, xii. 15. The point of time of the quando, ὅταν, is that at which the now still unexecuted πάντα ὑπέταξεν shall be executed and completed; hence, also, not again the aorist, but the perfect ὑποτέτακται. The progress of the thought is therefore: "But when God, who in Ps. viii. 7 has ordained the ὑπόταξις, shall have once uttered the declaration, that it be accomplished—this ὑπόταξις." This form of presenting it was laid to the apostle's hand by the fact that he had just expressed himself in the words of a saying of Scripture (a saying of God). In Heb. i. 6 also the aorist is not to be understood as a present, but (πάλιν) as a futurum exactum. See Lünemann in loc. — δῆλον ὅτι] Adverbial, in the sense of manifestly, assuredly; therefore: it (namely, the πάντα ὑποτέτακται) will clearly take place with the exception of Him, who, etc. See regarding this use of δῆλον ὅτι, which has to be analysed by means of supplying the preceding predicate, Matthiae, p. 1494; Sturz, Lex. Xen. I. p. 661 f; Buttmann, ad Plat. Crit. p. 53 A (p. 106). According to Hofmann, δῆλον ὅτι is meant as, namely, as it is used likewise in Greek writers, and especially often in grammarians (not Gal. iii. 11); from δῆλον to πάντα is only an explanation interposed, after which the former ὅταν δὲ εἶπη κ.τ.λ. is shortly resumed by ὅταν δὲ ὑποταγῇ κ.τ.λ., ver. 28. See regarding δέ after parentheses or interruptions, Hartung, Partik. I. p. 172 f. But, in the first place, δῆλον ὅτι κ.τ.λ. is a very essential point, no mere parenthetical thought in the course of the argument; and, secondly, the resumption after so short and plain an intercalation would be alike uncalled for, and, through the change in the mode of expression (not again with εἶπη), obscure. — ἐκτὸς τοῦ ὑποτάξ.] i.e. with the exception of God; but Paul designates God as the subjecting subject: “quo clarius in oculos incurreret, rem loqui ipsam,” van Hengel.

Ver. 28. What Paul had just presented in the, as it were, poetically elevated form ὅταν δὲ εἶπη κ.τ.λ., he now sums up in the way of simple statement by ὅταν δὲ ὑποταγῇ κ.τ.λ., in order to make the further element in his demonstration follow in accordance with the δῆλον ὅτι κ.τ.λ. — καὶ αὐτός] the Son Himself also shall be subjected,¹ not of course against His will, but as willingly yielding compliance to the expiry of His government. The Son wills what the Father wills; His undertaking is now completed—the becoming subject is His “last duty” (Ewald). Here, too, especially by the older interpreters, a great deal of dogmatic theology has been imported, in order to make the apostle not teach—what, in truth, he does teach with the greatest distinctness—that there is a cessation of the rule of Christ. The commonest expedient (so Augustine, de Trin. i. 8, and Jerome, adv. Pelag. i. 6, and the majority of the older expositors) is that Christ according to His human nature is meant, in connection with which Estius and Flatt take ὑποταγ. as: it will become right manifest that, etc. Ambrosiaster, Athanasius, and Theodoret even explained it, like Χριστός in xii. 12, of the corpus Christi mysticum, the church. Chrysostom also imports the idea (comp. Theophylact and Photius in Oecumenius) that Paul is describing τὴν πολλὴν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ὁμόνοιαν. — ἵνα ἡ ὁ θεὸς τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν] aim not of ὑποτάξαντι αὐτ. τ. π. (Hofmann), but of αὐτὸς ὁ υἱὸς ὑποταγῇ. κ.τ.λ., which is indeed the main point in the progress of the argument, the addition of its final aim now placing the reader at the great copestone of the whole development of the history of salvation. The object aimed at in the Son's becoming subject under God is the absolute sovereignty of God: “in order that God may be the all in them all,” i.e. in order that God may be the only and the immediate all-determining principle in the inner life of all the members of the kingdom hitherto reigned over by Christ.¹ Not as though the hitherto continued rule of Christ had hindered the attainment of this end (as Hofmann objects), but it has served this end as its final destination, the complete fulfilment of which is the complete "glory of God the Father" (Phil. ii. 11) to eternity. "Significatur hic novum quiddam, sed idem summum ac perenne . . . ; hic finis et apex ; ultra ne apostolus quidem quo eat habet," Bengel. According to Billroth, this expresses the realization of the identity of the finite and the infinite spirit, which, however, is unbiblical.² See in opposition to the pantheistic misunderstanding of the passage, J. Müller, v. d. Sünde, I. p. 158 f. Olshausen (following older interpreters in Wolf) and de Wette (comp. Weizel and Kern, also Scholten in the Tüb. Jahrb. 1840, 3, p. 24) find here the doctrine of restoration favoured also by Neander, so that ἐν παντί would apply to all creatures, in whom God shall be the all-determining One. But that would involve the conversion even of the demons and of Satan, as well as the cessation of the pains of hell, which is quite contrary to the doctrine of the New Testament, and in particular to Paul's doctrine of predestination. The fact was overlooked that ἐν παντί refers to the members of the kingdom hitherto ruled over by Christ, to whom the condemned, who on the contrary are outside of this kingdom, do not belong, and that the continuance of the condemnation is not done away even with the subjugation of Satan, since, on the contrary, the latter himself by his subjugation falls under condemnation. See, moreover, against the interpretation of restoration, on ver. 22, and Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 431 ; Georgii in the Tüb. Jahrb. 1845, 1, p. 24 ; van Hengel in loc. — ἐν παντί] is just as necessarily masculine as in Col. iii. 11. The context demands this by the correlation with αὐτὸς ὁ υἱὸς κ.τ.λ., for up to this last consummation the Son is the regulating governing principle in all, but now gives over His kingdom to the Father, and becomes Himself subject to the Father, so that then the latter is the all-ruling One in all, and no one apart from Him in any. This in opposition to Hofmann, who takes ἐν πᾶσιν as neuter, of the world, namely, with regard to which God will constitute the entire contents of its being in such a way as to make it wholly the created manifestation of His nature; the new heaven and the new earth, 2 Pet. iii. 13, is only another expression, he holds, for the same thing. This introduction of the palingenesis of the universe, which is quite remote from the point here, is a consequence of the incorrect reference of ἵνα (see above). Moreover, if the meaning was to be: "All in the all," πᾶσι would require the retrospective article, which πάντα has in ver. 27 and ver. 28a. See a number of examples of πάντα and τὰ πάντα ἔστι in the specified sense in Wetstein, Locella, ad Xen. Eph. p. 209. Comp. on Col. iii. 11, and Hermann, ad Viger. p. 727.

Ver. 29.¹ Ἐπεὶ] for, if there is nothing in this eschatological development onward to the end, when God will be all in all, what shall those do, i.e. how absurdly in that case will those act, who have themselves baptized for the dead? Then plainly the result, which they aim at, is a chimera! Usually interpreters have referred ἐπεὶ back to ver. 20, and regarded what lies between as a digression; Olshausen is more moderate, considering only vv. 25–28 in that light, so also de Wette; Rückert, again, holds that Paul had perhaps rested from writing for a little after ver. 28, and had had the sentence "the dead arise" in his mind, but had not expressed it. Pure and superfluous arbitrariness; as always, so here too, ἐπεὶ points to what has immediately preceded. But, of course, in this connection the final absolute sovereignty of God is conceived as conditioned by the resurrection of the dead, which, after all that had been previously said from ver. 20 onwards, presented itself to every reader as a thing self-evident. Hofmann makes ἐπεὶ refer to the whole paragraph beginning with ἀπαρχὴ Χριστός, as that is construed by him, down to ver. 26, to which vv. 27, 28 have attached themselves as confirming the final abolition of death. But see on vv. 24, 27. —

Upon the words which follow all possible acuteness has been brought into play, in order just to make the apostle not say that which he says. — τί ποιήσουσιν] makes palpable the senselessness, which would characterize the procedure in the case assumed by ἐπεὶ. The future is that of the general proposition,¹ and applies to every baptism of this kind which should occur. Every such baptism will be without all meaning, if the deniers of the resurrection are in the right. Grotius: "quid efficient" (comp. Flatt). But that a baptism of such a kind effected anything, was assuredly a thought foreign to the apostle. He wished to point out the subjective absurdity of the procedure in the case assumed. The interpretation: "nescient quid agendum sit" (van Hengel) does not suit the connection, into which Ewald also imports too much: "are they to think, that they have cherished faith and hope in vain?" — ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν] The article is generic. Every baptism which, as the case occurs, is undertaken for a dead person, is a baptism for the dead, namely, as regards the category. It must have been something not wholly unusual in the apostolic church, familiarity with which on the part of the readers is here taken for granted, that persons had themselves baptized once more for the benefit of (ὑπὲρ) people who had died unbaptized but already believing, in the persuasion that this would be counted to them as their own baptism, and thus as the supplement of their conversion to Christ which had already taken place inwardly, and that they would on this account all the more certainly be raised up with the Christians at the Parousia, and made partakers of the eternal Messianic salvation.² This custom propagated and maintained itself afterwards only among heretical sects, in particular among the Cerinthians (Epiphanius, Haer. xxviii. 7) and among the Marcionites (Chrysostom; comp., moreover, generally Tertullian, de resurr. 48, adv. Marc. v. 10).³ Among the great multitude of interpretations (Calovius, even in his time, counts up twenty-three), this is the only one which is presented to us by the words. Ambrosiaster first took them so;¹ among the later interpreters, Anselm, Erasmus, Zeger, Cameron, Calixtus, Grotius, al.; and recently, Augusti, Denkwürdigk. IV. p. 119; Winer, p. 165 [E. T. 219]; Billroth, Rückert, de Wette, Maier, Neander, Grimm, Holtzmann (Judenth. u. Christenth. p. 741), also Kling and Paret (in Ewald's Jahrb. IX. p. 247 f.), both of which latter writers call to their aid, on the ground, it is true, of xi. 30, the assumption of a pestilence having then prevailed in Corinth. The usual objection, that Paul would not have employed for his purpose at all, or at least not without adding some censure, such an abuse founded on the belief in a magical power of baptism (see especially, Calvin in loc.), is not conclusive, for Paul may be arguing ex concessio, and hence may allow the relation of the matter to evangelical truth to remain undetermined in the meantime, seeing that it does not belong to the proper subject of his present discourse. The abuse in question must afterwards have been condemned by apostolic teachers (hence it maintained itself only among heretics), and no doubt Paul too aided in the work of its removal. For to assume, with Baumgarten-Crusius (Dogmengesch. II. p. 313), that he himself had never at all disapproved of the βαπτίζεσθαι ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, or to place, with Rückert, the vicarious baptism in the same line with the vicarious death of Christ, is to stand in the very teeth of the fundamental doctrine of the Pauline gospel—that of faith as the subjective ethical “causa medians” of salvation. For the rest, Rückert says well: “Usurpari ab eo morem, qui ceteroqui displiceret, ad errorem, in quo impugnando versabatur, radicitus evellendum, ipsius autem reprehendendi aliud tempus expectari.”

Tertullian does not name the Marcionites, but quotes the explanation of our text as applying to the vicarious baptism, without approving of it.

1 “In tantum stabilem et ratam vult ostendere resurrectionem mortuorum, ut exemplum det eorum, qui tam securi erant de futura resurrectione, ut etiam pro mortuis baptizarentur, si quem mors praevenisset, timeutes ne aut male aut non resurgeret, qui baptizatus non fuerat. . . . Exemplo hoc non factum illorum probat, sed fidem fixam in resurrectione ostendit.”

The silent disapproval of the apostle is brought in by Erasmus in his Paraphrase: "Fidem probo, factum non probo; nam ut ridiculum est, existimare mortuo succurri baptismo alieno, ita recte credunt resurrectionem futuram." Epiphanius, Haer. 28, explains it of the baptism of the clinici, of the catechumens on their deathbed, who πρὸ τῆς τελευτῆς λουτροῦ καταξιούνται. So Calvin, although giving it along with another interpretation equally opposed to the meaning of the words; also Flacius, Estius, al. But how can ὑπὲρ τ. νεκρ. mean jamjam morituri (Estius)! or how can the rendering "ut mortuis, non vivis prosit" (Calvin) lead any one to guess that the "baptismus clinicorum" was intended, even supposing that it had been already customary at that time!¹ Chrysostom, too, runs counter to the words: ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, τουτέστι τῶν σωμάτων, καὶ γὰρ ἐπὶ τοῦτο βαπτίζῃ, τοῦ νεκροῦ σώματος ἀνάστασιν πιστεύων. Paul, he holds, has in view the article in the baptismal creed (which, however, certainly belongs only to a later time): "I believe in a resurrection of the dead." So, too, on the whole, Pelagius, Oecumenius, Photius, Theophylact, Melancthon ("profitentes de mortuis"), Cornelius a Lapide, Er. Schmid, and others; and somewhat to the same effect also Wetstein. Comp. yet earlier, Tertullian: "pro mortuis tingi pro corporibus est tingi." Theodoret gives it a different turn, but likewise imports a meaning, making the reference to be to the dead body: ὁ βαπτιζόμενος, φησι, τῷ δεσπότῃ συνθάπτεται, ἵνα τοῦ θανάτου κοινωνήσας καὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως γένηται κοινωνός· εἰ δὲ νεκρόν ἐστι τὸ σῶμα, καὶ οὐκ ἀνίσταται, τί δὴ ποτε καὶ βαπτίζεται. Luther's explanation, adopted again recently by Ewald and others, that "to confirm the resurrection, the Christians had themselves baptized over the graves of the dead" (so Glass and many of the older Lutherans; Calovius leaves us to choose between this view and that of Ambrosiaster), has against it, apart even from the fact that ὑπὲρ with the genitive in the local sense of over is foreign to the New Testament, the following considerations: (1) that there is a lack of any historical trace in the apostolic period of the custom of baptizing over graves, such as of martyrs (for Eusebius, H. E. iv. 15, is not speaking of baptism), often as churches were built, as is well known, in later times over the graves of saints; (2) that we can see no reason why just the baptism at such places should be brought forward, and not the regarding of these spots as consecrated generally; (3) that to mark out the burial-places of pious persons who had fallen asleep, would have been in no way anything absurd even without the belief in a resurrection. And lastly, baptism took place at that time not in fonts or vessels of that kind, which could be set over graves, but in rivers and other natural supplies of water. Other interpreters, following Pelagius, refer ὑπὲρ τ. νεκρ. to Christ, taking βαπτ. in some cases of the baptism with water (Olearius, Schrader, Lange, Elwert); in others, of the baptism with blood (Al. Morus, Lightfoot). τῶν νεκρ. would thus be the plural of the category (see on Matt. ii. 20). But, putting aside the consideration that Christ cannot be designated as νεκρός (not even according to the view of the opponents), the baptism with water did not take place ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ,¹ but εἰς Χριστόν; and the baptism with blood would have required to be forcibly indicated by the preceding context, or by the addition of some defining clause. "For the benefit of the dead" remains the right interpretation. Olshausen holds this also, but expounds it to this effect, that the baptism took place for the good of the dead, inasmuch as a certain number, a πλήρωμα of believers, is requisite, which must first be fully made up before the Parousia and the resurrection can follow. But this idea must be implied in the connection; what reader could divine it? Olshausen himself feels this, and therefore proposes to render, "who have themselves baptized instead of the members removed from the church by death." So, too, in substance Isenberg (whose idea, however, is that of a militia Christi which has to be recruited), and among the older interpreters Clericus on Hammond, Deyling, Obs. II. p. 519, ed. 3, and Döderlein, Instit. I. p. 409. But in that case ὑπὲρ τ. νεκρ. would be something not at all essential and probative for the connection, since it is plain that every entrance of new believers into the church makes up for the departure of Christians who have died, but in this relation has nothing to do with the resurrection of the latter. This at the same time in opposition to van Hengel's interpretation, about which he himself, however, has doubts: for the honour of deceased Christians, "quos exteri vituperare vel despicere soleant." According to Diestelmann, ὑπὲρ τ. ν. is for the sake of the dead, and means: in order hereafter united with them in the resurrection to enter into the kingdom of Christ; while the νεκροί are Christ and those fallen asleep in Him.¹ But it is decisive against this view, first, that there is thus comprised in the simple preposition, an extent of meaning which the reader could not discover in it without more precise indication; secondly, that every baptism whatsoever would be also in this assumed sense a βαπτίζεσθαι ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, whereby therefore nothing distinctive would be said here, such as one could not but expect after the quite singular expression; thirdly, that Christ cannot be taken as included among the νεκροί, seeing that the resurrection of the Lord which had taken place was not the subject of the denial of resurrection here combated, but its denial is attributed by Paul to his opponents only per consequentiam, ver. 13. According to Köster, those are meant who have themselves baptized for the sake of their Christian friends who have fallen asleep, i.e. out of yearning after them, in order to remain in connection with them, and to become partakers with them of the resurrection and eternal life. But in this way also a significance is imported into the simple ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, which there is nothing whatever to suggest, and which would have been easily conveyed, at least by some such addition as συγγενῶν καὶ φίλων. According to Linder, the βαπτιζόμενοι and the νεκροί are held to be even the same persons, so that the meaning would be: if they do not rise (in gratiam cinerum), which, however, the article of itself forbids; merely ὑπὲρ νεκρῶν (νεκρ. would be in fact qualitative) must have been made use of, and even in that case it would be a poetical mode of expression, which no reader would have had any clue to help him to unriddle. Similarly, but with a still more arbitrary importing of meaning, Otto holds that οἱ βαπτιζόμε. are the deniers of the resurrection, who had themselves baptized in order (which is said, according to him, ironically) to become dead instead of living men. Most of all does Hofmann twist and misinterpret the whole passage (comp. also his Schriftbew. II. 2, p. 199 f.), punctuating it thus: ἐπεὶ τί ποιήσ. οἱ βαπτ. ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, εἰ ὅλως νεκρ. οὐκ ἐγείρονται; τί καὶ βαπτίζονται; ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν τί καὶ ἡμεῖς κινδυνεύομεν; the thought being: “If those, who by means of sin lie in death, become subject in their sins to an utter death from which there is no rising, then will those, who have themselves baptized, find no reason in their Christian status to do anything for them, that may help them out of the death in which they lie;” nay, why do they then have themselves baptized? and why do we risk our lives for them? Ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρ. thus belongs to τί ποιήσ.; the ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν, placed for emphasis at the head of the last question, applies to the βαπτιζόμενοι. Every point in this interpretation is incorrect; for (1) to do something for others, i.e. for their good, is an absolute duty, independent of the question whether there be a resurrection or not. (2) But to do something which will help them out of death, is not in the passage at all, but is imported into it. (3) Those who can and should do something for others are the Christians; these, however, cannot have been designated so strangely as by οἱ βαπτιζόμενοι, but must have been called in an intelligible way οἱ πιστεύσαντες perhaps, or at least οἱ βαπτισθέντες. (4) The νεκροί can only, in accordance with the context, be simply the dead, i.e. those who have died, as through the whole chapter from ver. 12 to ver. 52. (5) To give to ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν another reference than ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, is just as violent a shift as the severance of either of the two from βαπτίζεσθαι, in connection with which they are symmetrically requisite for more precise definition, and are so placed. And when (6) ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν is actually made to mean “in order to induce them to receive baptism,” this just crowns the arbitrariness of inserting between the lines what the apostle, according to the connection, could neither say nor think. Moreover, ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν could not have the emphasis, but only the ἡμεῖς introduced with καί, like the βαπτίζ. previously introduced with καί. — εἰ ὅλως νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρ.] Parallel to the conditional clause to be supplied in connection with ἐπεὶ. For Paul conceives of the resurrection of the dead as being so necessarily connected with the completion of the Messianic kingdom that the denial of the one is also the denial of the other. If universally (as v. 1) dead persons cannot be raised up, why do they have themselves baptized also for them? since plainly, in that case, they would have nothing at all to do for the dead. See, generally, on Rom. viii. 24; Pflugk, ad Hec. 515; Baeumlein, Partik. p. 152. This "also" betokens the (entirely useless) superinduced character of the proceeding. To refer εἰ ἐγείρ. still to what precedes (Luther and many others, the texts of Elzevir, Griesbach, Scholz; not Beza) mars the parallelism; the addition of the conditional clause to ἐπεὶ would have nothing objectionable in itself (in opposition to van Hengel), Plato, Prot. p. 318 B; Xen. Anab. vi. 1. 30, vii. 6. 22; 4 Macc. viii. 8.

Ver. 30. How preposterously we also are acting in that supposed case! — καί] does not, as some fancy, determine the meaning of the preceding βαπτ. to be that of a baptism of suffering, but it adds a new subject, whose conduct would likewise be aimless. — ἡμεῖς] I and my compeers, we apostolic preachers of the gospel, we apostles and our companions. Paul then, in ver. 31 f., adduces himself, his own fortunes, in an individualizing way as a proof. The argument is, indeed, only for the continuance of the spirit (comp. Cicero, Tusc. i. 15); but this, when hoped for as blessedness, has with Paul the resurrection as its necessary condition.

Ver. 31. Ἀποθνήσκω] I am occupied with dying, am a mori-bundus. See Bernhardt, p. 370, and van Hengel. Strong way of denoting the deadly peril with which he sees himself encompassed daily. Comp. 2 Cor. iv. 11, xi. 23; Rom. viii. 36, and the parallel passages in Wetstein. The perfect, as in Eur. Hec. 431, would have been still stronger. — νή] a very frequent term of asseveration in classical writers (in the New Testament only here), always with the accusative of the person or thing by which the asseveration is made (Kühner, II. p. 396). By your boasting, which I have in Christ, i.e. as truly as I boast myself of you in my fellowship with Christ, in the service of Christ. Comp. Rom. xv. 17. The boasting, which takes place on the part of the apostle, is conceived of by him as a moral activity, which belongs to him. Comp. the opposite μομφὴν ἔχειν, μέμψιν ἔχειν, and the like, Ellendt, Lex. Soph. I. p. 732. — ὑμετέραν] is to be understood objectively (Matthiae, p. 1032; Mätzner, ad Antiph. p. 221; Kühner, II. § 627, A. 6). Comp. xi. 24; Rom. xi. 31. The expression brings out more strongly the reference to the person (as truly as ye are the subject of my boasting). The Corinthians, whose subsistence as a church is an apostolic boast for Paul, can testify to himself what deadly perils are connected with his apostolic work. He thus guards himself against every suspicion of exaggeration and bragging. The asseveration does not serve to introduce what follows (Hofmann), since that does not come in again as an assertive declaration, but in a conditional form.

Ver. 32. Something of a special nature after the general statement in ver. 31. — If I after the manner of men have fought with beasts in Ephesus, what is the profit (arising therefrom) to me? — κατὰ ἄνθρωπον] has the principal emphasis, so that it contains the element, from which follows the negative involved in the question of the apodosis: "then it is profitless for me." And the connection yields from this apodosis as the meaning of κατὰ ἄνθρωπον: after the manner of ordinary men, i.e. not in divine striving and hoping, but only in the interest of temporal reward, gain, glory, and the like, whereby the common, unenlightened man is wont to be moved to undertake great risks. If Paul has fought in such a spirit, then he has reaped nothing from it, for he καθ' ἡμέραν ἀποθνήσκει. The many varying explanations¹ may be seen in Poole's Synopsis. Against Rückert, who explains it: "according to human ability, with the exertion of the highest power," it may be decisively urged that κατὰ ἄνθρ. in all passages does not denote what is human per excellentiam. If, therefore, the context here required that κατὰ ἄνθρ. should express the measure of power (which reference, however, lies quite remote), then we must explain it as: with ordinary human power, without divine power. According to Rückert's view, moreover, κατὰ ἄνθρ. would not be at all the principal element of the protasis, which, however, from its position it must necessarily be. Interpretations such as exempli causa (Semler, Rosenmüller, Heydenreich), or ut hominum more loquar (Estius), are impossible, since λέγω or λαλῶ does not stand along with it. The conjecture was hazarded: κατὰ ἀνθρώπων (Scaliger). — ἐθριομάχησα] θηριομαχεῖν, to fight with wild beasts (Diod. iii. 42; Artem. ii. 54, v. 49), is here a significant figurative description of the fight with strong and

See also Valckenaer, p. 332. Paul takes for granted that his readers were acquainted with what he describes in such strong language, as he might assume, moreover, that they would of themselves understand his expression figuratively, since they knew, in fact, his privilege of Roman citizenship, which excluded a condemnation ad bestias, ad leonem. His lost letter also may have already given them more detailed information. Notwithstanding, many interpreters, such as Ambrosiaster, Theodoret, Cajetan, Erasmus, Luther, Calvin, Cornelius a Lapide, Lightfoot, Wolf, and others, including Flatt and Billroth, have explained this of an actual fight with beasts, out of which he had been wonderfully delivered.¹ It is objected as regards the privilege of a Roman citizen (see in particular Flatt), that Paul was in point of fact scourged, etc., Acts xvi. 22 f. But in Acts, i.e., Paul did not appeal to his right of citizenship, but made it known only after he had suffered scourging and imprisonment, whereupon he was forthwith set free, ver. 37 ff. Before he was thrown to the beasts, however, he would, in accordance with his duty, have appealed to his right of citizenship, and thereby have been protected. And would

Luke in the Acts of the Apostles have left unmentioned an incident so entirely unique, which, among all the wonderful deliverances of the apostle, would have been the most wonderful? Would not Paul himself have named it with the rest in 2 Cor. xi. 23 ff., and Clement in 1 Cor. 5?—Upon the non-literal interpretation,¹ however, it cannot be proved whether a single event, and if so, which, is meant. Many of the older expositors think, with Pelagius, Oecumenius, and Theophylact, of the uproar of Demetrius in Acts xix. But in connection with that Paul himself was not at all in danger; moreover, we must assume, in accordance with Acts xx. 1, that he wrote before the uproar. Perhaps he means no single event at all, but the whole heavy conflict which he had had to wage in Ephesus up to that time with exasperated Jewish antagonists, and of which he speaks in Acts xx. 19: μετὰ . . . δακρύων κ. πειρασμῶν κ.τ.λ.—τί μοι τὸ ὄφελος;² what does it profit me? The article denotes the definite profit, conceived as result. The self-evident answer is: nothing! Comp. ix. 17. As the gain, however, which he gets from his fight waged κατὰ ἄνθρωπον, he has in view not temporal results, founding of churches and the like, but the future glory, which is conditioned by the resurrection of the dead (comp. Phil. iii. 10, 11); hence he continues: εἰ νεκροὶ κ.τ.λ.—εἰ νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρ.] is referred by the majority of the old interpreters (not Chrysostom and Theophylact, but from Pelagius and Theodoret onwards) to the preceding. It would then be a second conditional clause to τί μοι τὸ ὄφελος (see on xiv. 6); but it is far more suitable to the symmetry in the relation of the clauses (comp. ver. 29) to connect it with what follows (Beza, Bengel, Griesbach, and later expositors). For the rest, it is to be observed that εἰ νεκρ. οὐκ ἐγείρ. corresponds to the thought indicated by κατὰ ἄνθρ. as being in correlative objective relation to it; further, that Paul has not put an οὖν or even a γάρ after εἰ, but has written asyndetically, and so in all the more vivid and telling a manner; likewise, that for the apostle moral life is necessarily based on the belief in eternal redemption, without which belief—and thus as resting simply on the abstract postulate of duty—it cannot in truth subsist at all; lastly, that the form of a challenge is precisely fitted to display the moral absurdity of the premiss in a very glaring light, which is further intensified by the fact that Paul states the dangerous consequence of the earthly eudaemonism, which τῇ γαστρὶ μετρεῖ καὶ τοῖς αἰσχίστοις τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν (Dem. 324, 24) in set words of Scripture (comp. Chrysostom), LXX. Isa. xxii. 13. Analogies to this Epicurean maxim from profane writers, such as Euripides, Alcest. 798, may be seen in Wetstein; Jacobs, Del. epigr. vii. 28; Dissen, ad Pindar. p. 500; comp. Theocr. xiii. 4. — It is not implied, however, in αὖριον γὰρ ἀποθνήσκ. that εἰ νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγ. includes the denial of life after death absolutely (Flatt, Rückert, al.), but Paul conceives of death as the translation of the soul into Hades (comp., however, on Phil. i. 25 f., Remark), from which the translation of the righteous (to be found in Paradise) into the eternal Messianic life is only possible through the resurrection.

Ver. 33 f. The immoral consequence of the denial of the resurrection (ver. 32) gives occasion to the apostle now in conclusion to place over against that Epicurean maxim yet a word of moral warning, in order thereby to express that the church should not be led astray, i.e. be seduced into immorality (πλανᾶσθε, passive, see on vi. 9), by its intercourse with those deniers who were in its bosom (τινὲς ἐν ὑμῖν, ver. 12; comp. ver. 34). — φθείρουσιν κ.τ.λ.] justification of the admonition μὴ πλανᾶσθε. The words (forming an Iambic trimeter acatalectic¹) are from the Thais of the comic poet Menander (see his Fragmenta, ed. Meineke, p. 75); although it still remains a question whether Paul really recognised them as an utterance of this comic poet (as a Μενάνδρειος φωνή, Lucian, Am. 43), or only generally as a common Hellenic saying, which, just as such, may have been taken up by that poet also. The latter is probable from the proverbial character of the words, and in the absence of any indication whatsoever that they are the words of another.

The τινές are those spoken of in ver. 12, not, as Billroth arbitrarily assumes, only a small portion of them. The nature of their unbelief in the resurrection is apprehended as in Matt. xxii. 29. REMARK on vv. 32-34.—Billroth, followed by Olshausen, is too hasty in inferring from ver. 32 that the opponents of a resurrection would themselves have abhorred the maxim φάγωμεν κ.τ.λ. Paul assumes of his readers generally that they abhorred that maxim as anti-Christian; but the τινές among them, who denied the resurrection, must, according to the warning and exhortation vv. 33, 34, have been already carried away in consequence of this denial to a frivolous tendency of life; otherwise Paul could not warn against being led away by their immoral companionship (ver. 33). Nay, several others even must already have become shaken in their moral principles through the evil influence of the τινές; else Paul could not give the exhortations which he does in ver. 34. For that, in ver. 33f., he is not warning against mistaking and neglecting of saving truths, as Hofmann thinks, but against corruption of wholesome habits, consequently against immorality, is certain from ἡθῆ in the words of Menander, and from μὴ ἁμαρτ.; hence, also, the danger of going astray is not to be conceived of as having arisen through intercourse with heathen fellow-countrymen (Hofmann), but through association with those τινές in the church, who had become morally careless by reason of the denial of the resurrection. This is demanded by the whole connection. The τινές were sick members of the church-body, whom Paul desires to keep from further diffusion of the evil, alike in faith and in life.

Ver. 35. The discussion on the point, that the dead arise, is now closed. But now begins the discussion regarding the nature of the future bodies. This is the second, the special part of the apology, directed, namely, against the grounds upon which they disputed the resurrection. — ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ τις] but, notwithstanding of my arguments hitherto adduced, some one will say. Comp. Jas. ii. 18. "Objicit in adversa persona quod doctrinae resurrectionis contra-

The δέ places πῶς and ποίῳ δὲ σώματι in such a parallel relation (see Hartung, Partik. I. p. 168 f.; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 362) that it does not, indeed, mean or again (Hofmann), but sets over against the πῶς that which is intended to be properly the scope of the question: but (I mean) with what kind of a body do they come? Then from ver. 36 onward there follows the answer to the question, which has been thus more precisely formulated. — ἔρχονται] namely, to those still alive at the Parousia, 1 Thess. iv. 16 f. The presents ἐγείρ. and ἔρχ. bring what is in itself future vividly before us as a present object of contemplation. Comp. Dissen, ad Pind. Nem. iv. 39. So the same tense may bring the past also before us as present (Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 253). Erasmus puts it happily: "actio rei declaratur absque significatione temporis."

in order to become alive in the springing germ, so must the body decay in the earth in order to become alive in the resurrection-body arising out of it at the resurrection of the dead. That it is not simply the necessity of dying to attain the resurrection-life (van Hengel; comp. Rückert and Holsten, z. Ev. d. Paul. u. Petr. p. 374) which is depicted, is clear from this, that in the explanation of the resurrection the being sown necessarily represents the burial, and consequently the ἀποθανεῖν of the seed-corn, because it follows after the being sown, must correspond to the decay of the body.

Ver. 37. Καὶ ὃ σπείρεις] And what thou sowest,—not the body, which is to be, sowest thou. Ὁ σπείρεις makes the attention rest upon itself first in general, independently of what follows, which forms a complete sentence by itself. See on Matt. vii. 24, x. 14; Luke xxi. 6. What shall spring out of the grain, the plant, Paul calls τὸ σῶμα τὸ γενησόμεν, because he has it before his mind as the analogue of the resurrection-body. The emphasis, however, lies upon τὸ γενησ. — γυμνὸν κόκκον] a naked grain, which is not yet clothed, as it were, with a plant-body (see what follows). Comp. 2 Cor. v. 3. To this future plant-body corresponds the future resurrection-body with which that, which is buried and decays, is clothed. That it is not the soul or the πνεῦμα of the departed which corresponds to the γυμνὸς κόκκος (Holsten), is shown by ὃ σπείρεις; comp. with ver. 42 ff. — εἰ τύχοι σίτου] it may be of wheat. Here, too, εἰ τύχοι does not mean, for example, but, if it so happens (that thou art just sowing wheat). Ver. 38. Ὁ δὲ θεός] setting over against the σὺ ὃ σπείρεις, ver. 36, what is done on God's part with the seed which on man's part is sowed. — ἡθέλ.] has willed. It denotes the (already at the creation) completed act of the divine volition as embodied in the laws of nature. — καὶ] and indeed, as iii. 5. — The diversity of the (peculiar, ἰδίου) organisms, which God bestows upon—i.e. causes to spring forth out of—the different seeds sown, while preserving the identity of the kinds, exposes all the more the folly of the question: ποίῳ δὲ σώματι ἔρχονται, in so far as it was meant to support the denial of the resurrection. As if God, who gives such varied plant-bodies to the sown grains, each according to its kind, could not also give new resurrection-bodies to the buried dead! How foolish to think that the same body which is buried (as e.g. the Pharisees conceived of the matter) must come forth again, if there is a resurrection! Every stalk of wheat, etc., refutes thee!

Vv. 39-41. In order to make it conceivable that the same body need not come forth again, further reference is now made to the manifold diversity of organic forms in nature; so also faith in the resurrection cannot be bound up with the assumption of the sameness of the present and the future bodily organism. Very diverse are, namely: (1) the kinds of animal flesh (ver. 39); (2) the heavenly and earthly bodies (ver. 40); and (3) the lustre of the sun, of the moon, and of the stars (ver. 41). — σὰρξ κτηνῶν] flesh of cattle, i.e. not quadrupedum generally (so de Wette and Osiander, following older interpreters), but also not simply jumentorum (van Hengel), but pecorum (Vulgate), which are kept for household use and for burden-bearing; Plato, Crit. p. 109 B; Herod. ii. 41; Xen. Anab. iii. 1. 19, iv. 7. 17; Luke x. 34; Acts xxiii. 24. — σώματα ἐπουράνια] heavenly bodies, i.e. bodies to be found in heaven. Comp. on John iii. 12; Phil. ii. 10. The bodies of the angels are meant by this (Matt. xxii. 30; Luke xx. 36; Phil. l.c.). So, too, de Wette.¹ Were we to understand by these words, as is usually done (so, among others, Hofmann; Hahn, Theol. d. N. Test. I. p. 265; Delitzsch, Psychol. p. 66; Philippi, Glaubensl. II. p. 292 f.), the heavenly bodies (sun, moon, and stars), we should be attributing to the apostle either our modern use of language, or the non-biblical mode of regarding the stars as living beings (see Galen, de usu part. 17 in Wetstein²), which is not to be proved even from Job xxxviii. 7. The same holds in opposition to Billroth, who understands the words as meaning heavenly organisms generally and indefinitely, from which sun, moon, and stars are then named by way of example. Sun, moon, and stars are not comprehended at all under σώματα ἐπουρ., and are first adduced in ver. 41 as a third analogue, and that simply in reference to their manifold δόξα. The whole connection requires that σώματα should be bodies as actual organs of life, not inorganic things and materials; as, for instance, stones (Lucian, vitt. auct. 25), water (Stob. fl. app. ii. 3), and material things generally (Plato, Polit. p. 288 D) are designated in Greek writers—not, however, in the New Testament—by σῶμα. Had Paul meant heavenly bodies in the modern sense, he would in that case, by describing them as bodies, have committed a μετάβασις εἰς ἄλλο γένος; whereas, on the contrary, the bodies of the angels, especially when we consider the similarity of those who are raised up to the angels, which was taught by Jesus Himself, were essentially included as relevant to the subject in the list of the diversities of bodily organization here enumerated (in opposition to Hofmann's objection). He then, ver. 41, brings forward in addition the heavenly bodies only in respect of the diversity—not of their bodies, but—of the lustre of their light. — σώματα ἐπὶ γαίᾳ] bodies to be found on earth, that is, the bodies of men and beasts. — Both kinds of bodies, the heavenly and earthly, are of different sorts of peculiar glory,—the former encompassed with a heavenly radiancy (Matt. xxviii. 3; Acts xii. 7, al.), the latter manifesting strength, grace, beauty, skilful construction, and the like in their outward appearance. Notice that in ver. 40 ἐτέρα is used, because the subjects are of specifically different kinds and qualities. It is otherwise in ver. 41, comp. ver. 39. — Ver. 41. Sun-lustre is one thing, and moon-lustre another, and lustre of stars another (i.e. another than solar and lunar lustre). Paul uses, however, ἀστέρων, not ἀστέρος, because the stars too among themselves have not one and the same lustre; hence he adds by way of explanation: for star differs from star in lustre. Διαφέρει is thus simply differt (Vulgate), not excellit (Matt. vi. 26, x. 31, xii. 12), which the context does not suggest. Regarding ἐν with διαφέρει, comp. Plato, Pol. viii. p. 568 A; Dem. 291, 17; Bremi, ad Isocr. I. p. 169. The accusative or dative of more precise definition is more usual (Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 394). The design of ver. 4 is not to allude to the different degrees of glory of the bodies of the saints (Chrysostom, Oecumenius, Theodoret, Calovius, Estius, al.), which is neither indicated in what precedes nor adverted to in the application ver. 42 ff., and hence has no foundation in the context; but Calvin rightly remarks: “Non disputat, qualis futura sit conditionis differentia inter sanctos post resurrectionem, sed quid nunc differant corpora nostra ab iis, quae olim recipiemus . . . ac si diceret: nihil in resurrectione futurum doceo, quod non subjectum sit jam omnium oculis." Comp. also Krauss.—Generally, let us beware of forcing upon the individual points in vv. 39-41 different individual references also,¹ contrary to the application which the apostle himself makes in vv. 42-44.

² Chrysostom and Theophylact (comp. also Theodoret) go entirely astray, supposing that σώμ. ἐπουρ. denotes the pious, and σώμ. ἐπίγειον the godless, in spite of the δόξα which is attributed to both.

Vv. 42-44. Application of the passage from ver. 36 (σπείρεται) on to ver. 41. — οὕτω καὶ ἡ ἀνάστασις τ. νεκρ.] sc. ἐστι. So does it hold also with the resurrection of the dead, in so far, namely, as the resurrection-body will be quite otherwise constituted than the present body.²—It is sown in corruption, etc. What is sown and raised up, is self-evident, and is also distinctly said in ver. 44, on occasion being given by the adjectival form of expression, into which the discourse there passes. — On σπείρεται, the remark of Grotius is sufficient: "cum posset dicere sepelitur, maluit dicere seritur, ut magis insisteret similitudini supra sumtae de grano." The apostle falls back on the image of the matter already familiar to the readers, because it must have by this time become clear to them in general from this image, that a reproduction of the present body at the resurrection was not to be thought of. The fact, again, that the image of sowing had already gone before in this sense,—in the sense of interment,—excludes as contrary to the text, not only van Hengel's interpretation, according to which σπείρεται is held to apply to generation and man is to be conceived as the subject, but also Hofmann's view, that the sowing is the giving up of the body to death, without reference to the point whether it be laid in the earth or not. The sowing is man's act, but the ἐσπείρεται God's act, quite corresponding to the antithesis of σύ, ver. 36, and ὁ δὲ θεός, ver. 38. — ἐν φθορᾷ] in corruption,

² It is to be observed that Paul, in his whole discussion regarding the nature of the future bodies, has in view only those of the first resurrection (see on ver. 23), leaving quite out of account the bodies of those who shall belong to the second resurrection, and consequently to the τίλοι, ver. 24. He has in fact to do with believers, with future sharers in the resurrection of the righteous (comp. on Phil. iii. 11), whose resurrection-hope was being assailed.

i.e. in the condition of decay, is the body when it is buried.¹ Of a wholly different nature, however, will be the new body which raises itself at the resurrection-summons (ver. 52 f.) out of the buried one (as the plant out of the seed-corn); it is raised in the condition of incorruptibility. Comp. vv. 50, 52. — ἐν ἀτιμίᾳ] in the condition of dishonour. Chrysostom (τί γὰρ εἰδεχθέσθαι νεκροῦ διαρρύντος;), Theodoret, Theophylact, Oecumenius, Beza, Grotius, al., including Billroth, have rightly understood this of the foeditas cadaveris; for σπείρεται represents the act of burial. Erasmus, Calvin, Vorstius, Estius, Rosenmüller, al., including Flatt (comp. Rückert), hold that it refers to the “ante mortem miseriis et foeditatibus obnoxium esse,” Estius. So also de Wette (comp. Osiander and Hofmann) in reference to all the three points, which, according to these expositors, are meant to designate the nature of the living body as regards its organization, or at least to include it (comp. Maier) in their scope. But this mode of conception, according to which the definition of state characterizes the earthly body generally according to its nature, not specially according to the condition in which it is at its interment, comes in only at the fourth point with σῶμα ψυχικόν in virtue of the change in the form of expression which is adopted on that very account. From the way in which Paul has expressed the first three points, he desires to state in what condition that which is being sown is at its sowing; in what condition, therefore, the body to be buried is, when it is being buried. This, too, in opposition to Ewald's view: “even the best Christians move now in corruption, in outward dishonour before the world,” etc. — ἐν δόξῃ] refers to the state of outward glory, which will be peculiar to the resurrection-bodies; ver. 40. It is the σύμμορφον εἶναι τῷ σώματι τῆς δόξης Χριστοῦ, Phil. iii. 21. — ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ] not: “variis morbis et periculis obnoxium,” Rosenmüller and others, comp. Rückert (weakness); for it refers to the already dead body (σπείρεται), but: in the condition of powerlessness, inasmuch as all ability, all ἰσχύς (Soph. Oed. Col. 616), all σθένος of the limbs (Pindar, Nem. v. 72, x. 90) has vanished from the dead body. Chrysostom, Oecumenius, Theodoret, Theophylact, al., narrow the reference too much in an arbitrary way, applying it simply to the inability to withstand corruption. 'Εν ἄσθ. is not a superfluous (de Wette), but a characteristic mark which specifically distinguishes the dead from the living body. — ἐν δυνάμει] in the condition of strength: the resurrection body will be endowed with fulness of strength for life and activity. What Grotius adds: "cum sensibus multis, quos nunc non intelligimus," is perhaps true in itself, but is not conveyed in ἐν δυνάμει.—Instead of adducing one by one further qualities of the body as buried, with their opposites in the resurrection-body, Paul sums up by naming in addition that which conditions those other qualities, the specific fundamental nature of the present body which is buried, and of the future one which is raised: σπείρεται σῶμα ψυχικόν, ἐγείρ. σ. πνευματικόν, i.e. there is sown a psychological body, etc. This is not opposed to the identity of the body, but the one which rises is quite differently qualified; there is buried a ψυχικόν, there rises a πνευματικόν. That is the new ποιότης τοῦ σώματος in which the risen man comes (ver. 35); but the expression, which sets forth the difference as two subjects, is stronger and more significant than if we should take it with Hofmann: it is sown as a psychological body, etc.—The body which is buried is ψυχικόν, inasmuch as the ψυχή, this power of the sensuous and perishable life (comp. on ii. 14), was its life-principle and the determining element of its whole nature (consisting of flesh and blood, ver. 50). The ψυχή had in it, as Oecumenius and Theophylact say, τὸ κύρος κ. τὴν ἡγεμονίαν. The resurrection-body, however, will be πνευματικόν, i.e. not an ethereal body (Origen, comp. Chrysostom),¹ which the antithesis of ψυχικόν forbids; but a spiritual body, inasmuch as the πνεῦμα, the power of the supersensuous, eternal life (the true, imperishable ζωή), in which the Holy Spirit carries on the work of regeneration and sanctification (Rom. viii. 16, 17), will be its life-principle and the determining element of its whole nature. In the earthly body the ψυχή, not the πνεῦμα, is that which conditions its constitution and its qualities, so that it is framed as the organ of the ψυχή;² in the resurrection-body the reverse is the case; the πνεῦμα, for whose life-activity it is the adequate organ, conditions its nature, and the ψυχή has ceased to be, as formerly, the ruling and determining element. We are not, however, on this account to assume, with Rückert, that Paul conceived the soul as not continuing to subsist for ever,—a conception which would do away with the essential completeness and thereby with the identity of the human being. On the contrary, he has conceived of the πνεῦμα in the risen bodies as the absolutely dominant element, to which the psychical powers and activities shall be completely subordinated. The whole predicates of the resurrection-body, contrasted with the properties of the present body, are united in the likeness to the angels, which Jesus affirms of the risen, Matt. xxii. 30, Luke xx. 36, and in their being fashioned like unto the glorified body of Christ, as is promised by Paul, vv. 48, 49; Phil. iii. 21. How far the doctrine of Paul is exalted above the assertion by the Rabbins of the (quite crass) identity of the resurrection-body with the present one, may be seen from the citations in Wetstein on ver. 36, and in Eisenmenger, entdeckt. Judenth. II. p. 938 f. — εἰ ἔστι σῶμα ψυχ., ἔστι καὶ κ.τ.λ.] logical confirmation of the σῶμα πνευματ. just mentioned. It is to be shown, namely, that it is not an air-drawn fancy to speak of the future existence of a σῶμα πνευματικόν: If it is true that there is a psychical body, then there is also a spiritual body, then such a body cannot be a non-ens—according to the mutually conditioning relations of the antitheses. The emphasis lies on the twice - prefixed ἔστι, existit (comp. the Rabbinical היה in Schoettgen, Hor. p. 670). The logical correctness of the sentence, again, depends upon the presupposition (ver. 42 f.) that the present and the future body stand in the relation of counterparts to each other. If, therefore, there exists a psychical body (and that is the present one), then a pneumatic body also must be no mere idea, but really existent (and that is the resurrection-body).

¹ Or as Zeller in the theol. Jahrb. 1852, p. 297, would have it: "a body composed of spirit," the πνεῦμα being conceived as material. Comp. Holsten, zum Ev. d. Paul. u. Petr. p. 72: "out of heavenly light-material."

Ver. 45. Scriptural confirmation for the εἰ ἔστι σῶμα ψ. κ.τ.λ. — οὕτω] so, i.e. in this sense, corresponding to what has been said above, it stands written also, etc. The passage is from Gen. ii. 7 according to the LXX. (κ. ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρ. εἰς ψ. ζ.), but with the addition of the more precisely explanatory words πρῶτος and

Ἀδάμ. The citation extends only to ζῶσαν; the ὁ ἔσχατος κ.τ.λ. that follow are words of the apostle, in which he gives an explanation of his οὕτω by calling attention, namely, to the opposite nature of the last Adam, as that to which the Scripture likewise pointed by its description of the first Adam, in virtue of the typical relation of Adam to Christ. He joins on these words of his own, however, immediately to the passage of Scripture, in order to indicate that the ὁ ἔσχατος . . . ζωοποιοῦν follows as necessarily from it according to its typical reference, as if the words had been expressed along with it.¹ He thus gives expression to the inference which is tacitly contained in the statement, by adding forthwith this self-evident conclusion as if belonging also to the passage of Scripture, because posited for it by the inner necessity of the antithesis. When others, such as Billroth and Rückert, assume that ὁ ἔσχατος κ.τ.λ. is meant really to be a part of the Scripture-quotation, they in that case charge the apostle with having made the half of the citation himself and given it out as being Bible words; but assuredly no instance is to be found of such an arbitrary procedure, however freely he handles passages from the Old Testament elsewhere. And would the readers, seeing that ἐγένετο . . . ζῶσαν is such a universally known statement, have been able to recognise in ὁ ἔσχατος κ.τ.λ. Bible words? According to Hofmann, οὕτω καὶ γέγρ. is a completed sentence, which only states that the distinction between two kinds of human body is scriptural. In order to demonstrate this scripturalness the apostle then applies the passage Gen. ii. 7. But against this it may be urged, first, that Paul is wont in general to use the γέγραπται for citing passages of Scripture; secondly, that the reader could all the less think here of another use of the word, since in reality at the moment a passage of Scripture, and that a universally familiar one, is joined on directly and without a particle (such as γάρ) to lead the thoughts aright in another direction. — ἐγένετο] by his creation, by means of the animation through God's breath. — εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν] שָׁמַח לְנֶפֶשׁ, comp. He is called, however, and is the last Adam in reference to the first Adam, whose antitype He is as the head and the beginner of the new humanity justified and redeemed through Him; but at the same time in reference also to the fact, that after Him no other is to follow with an Adamite vocation. Apart from this latter reference, He may be called also the second Adam. Comp. ver. 47. — εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποι.] unto a life-giving spirit-being, sc. ἐγένετο. It is thereby expressed that the body of Christ became a σῶμα πνευματικόν. But what is the point of time, at which Christ εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοπ. ἐγένετο? Not as a created being, as one of the heavenly forms in the divine retinue before His mission (Holsten), nor yet in His incarnation,² whether we may supply mentally a Deitate (Beza, comp. too Rübiger, Christol. Paul. p. 35; Baur, Delitzsch, al.), or take refuge in the communicatio hypostatica (Calovius and others); for during his earthly life Christ had a ψυχικόν σῶμα (only without sin, Rom. viii. 3), which ate, drank, slept, consisted of flesh and blood, suffered, died, etc. The one correct answer in accordance with the context, since the point in hand has regard to the resurrection (and see especially ver. 44), can only be: after His death (comp. Hellwag in the Tübing. theol. Jahrb. 1848, 2, p. 240; Ernesti, Urspr. d. Sünde, II. p. 122 ff.; Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 314), and indeed through His resurrection, Christ became εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοπ. The body, doubtless, of the Risen One before His ascension (hence the Socinians think here of the latter event; so, too, J. Müller and Maier) consisted still of flesh and blood, still ate, drank, etc.; but it was immortal, and so changed (see Remark appended to Luke xxiv. 51) that it already appears as πνευματικόν, although it was only at the ascension that it entered upon its completion in that respect, and consequently into its δόξα as the σῶμα τῆς δόξης (Phil. iii. 21). The event producing the change, therefore, is the resurrection; in virtue of this, the last Adam, who shall appear only at the Parousia in the whole efficiency of His life-power (ver. 47), became (ἐγένετο) εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποιούν,¹ and that through God, who raised Him up. — ζωοποιούν] οὐκ εἶπεν εἰς πνεῦμα ζῶν, ἀλλὰ ζωοποιούν τὸ μείζον εἰπών, Theophylact. The connection shows what ζωή is meant in ζωοποιούν, namely, the resurrection-life, which Christ, who has become πνεῦμα ζωοπ., works at His Parousia. Comp. ver. 22; Phil. iii. 21; Col. iii. 4; 1 Thess. iv. 16; John v. 21 ff. This limitation of the reference of ζωοποιούν, made in accordance with the context, shows that we have not here an argument proving too much (in opposition to Baur, neut. Theol. p. 197).

Ver. 46. After it has been stated and confirmed from Scripture in vv. 44, 45 that there exists not simply a psychical, but also a spiritual body, it is now further shown that the latter cannot precede the former, but that the reverse must be the case. “Nevertheless the pneumatic is not first, but the psychical; afterwards the pneumatic.” We are not, with the majority of the older commentators (also Flatt, Osiander, Hofmann), to supply σῶμα (which the context does not even suggest); but Paul states quite generally the law of development,² that the pneumatic appears later than the psychical, a gradation from lower to higher forms, which goes through the whole creation. This general statement he then proves: λαβὼν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς; Eccles. iii. 20, xii. 7; 1 Macc. ii. 63. That the article (John iii. 31) was not required with γῆς (in opposition to van Hengel, who, on account of the lacking article, explains it, terrenus sc. terram sapiens; and then χοϊκός; humilia spirans) is clear not only in general (see Winer, p. 114 [E. T. 149]), but also from passages such as Wisd. xv. 8, xvii. 1; Ecclus. xxxvi. 10, xl. 11. It may be added, that since, by the words ἐκ γῆς χοϊκός, Adam's body is characterized as ψυχικὸν σῶμα, as in ver. 45, and the psychical corporeity, again, taken purely in itself (without the intervention of a modifying relation), includes mortality (ver. 44), it is clear that Paul regards Adam as created mortal, but so that he would have become immortal, and would have continued free from death, if he had not sinned. The protoplasts are accordingly in his eyes such as under an assumed condition potuerunt non mori, which, however, through the non-fulfilment of this condition, i.e. through the Fall, came to nothing; so that now death, and that as a penalty, came to be a reality,—a view which agrees alike with his own doctrinal statement, Rom. v. 12,¹ and also with Genesis. For had the protoplasts not sinned, they would, according to Genesis, have remained in Paradise, and would have become immortal (Gen. iii. 22) through the enjoyment of the tree of life (Gen. ii. 9), which God had not forbidden to them (Gen. ii. 16, 17). But they were driven out of Paradise, before they had yet eaten of this tree (Gen. iii. 22); and so, certainly, according to Genesis also, through sin came death into the world as the penalty appointed for them by God (ii. 17). Comp. Augustin, De pecc. meritis et remiss. i. 5: "ipsum mortale non est factum mortuum nisi propter peccatum;" see, too, Ernesti, l.c. p. 248 f.; Ewald, Jahrb. II. p. 153 f. — ἐξ οὐρανοῦ] of heavenly derivation. This applies to the glorification of the body of Christ,²

Comp. Gen. ii. 7, χεῖρ

² Hence Gess (v. d. Person Chr. p. 75) very irrelevantly objects to the reference to the body of Christ, that that body was not from heaven, but from the seed of David. Delitzsch (Psychol. p. 334 ff.), by referring ἐξ οὐρανοῦ back to the incarnation, which is contrary to the context, mixes up things that differ. Beyschlag (comp. also his originating from heaven, i.e. wrought by God (comp. 2 Cor. v. 2), in which glorified body He is in heaven, and will appear at His Parousia (comp. Phil. iii. 20). Comp. on ver. 45. According to de Wette (comp. also Beyschlag in the Stud. u. Krit. 1860, p. 437 f., and Christol. pp. 228, 242), it applies to the whole personality of Jesus, "which, through its preponderating spirituality, has also a spiritual body," or to the heavenly origin characterizing the nature of the whole person (Beyschlag). But the above-given definite reference is the only one which corresponds, in accordance with the text, to the contrast of ἐκ γῆς χοϊκός, which applies to the formation of Adam's body, as well as to the whole point of the development (σῶμα πνευματικόν). Van Hengel is wrong in seeking to conclude from the absence of the article here also, that the heavenly dignity of Jesus is meant. Comp. 2 Cor. v. 2; Gal. i. 8. Paul has the article before οὐράνιος or οὐρανόι, after ἐκ or ἀπό, only in 1 Thess. i. 10.—No predicate in the second clause corresponds to the χοϊκός of the first half of the verse,¹ because the material of the glorified body of Christ transcends alike conception and expression.

Ver. 48. Application to our present and future bodily nature. We are to supply simply ἐστί and εἰσί. — ὁ χοϊκός] Adam. — οἱ χοικοί] all Adam's posterity, as such, in so far as they have the same material nature with their first father. This common nature is the psychical corporeity. — ὁ ἐπουράνιος] He who is in heaven (comp. the frequent ἐπουράνιοι θεοί in Homer; Matt. xviii. 35; Phil. ii. 10; 2 Macc. iii. 39; see also on ver. 40), i.e. Christ; not, however, as the heavenly archetype of humanity, as which He was pre-existent in God (Beyschlag), but as the exalted to heaven, Phil. ii. 9; Eph. iv. 8 ff. — οἱ ἐπουράνιοι] These are the risen Christians, inasmuch as they shall be citizens of the heavenly commonwealth, Phil. iii. 20; Heb. xii. 22; 2 Tim. iv. 18. The common nature of the ἐπουράνιος and the ἐπουράνιοι is the pneumatic body. Comp. Phil. iii. 21. Instead of referring the twofold resemblance in kind to the nature of the body, Hofmann makes it refer to the nature of the life,—on the one side, sinfulness and nothingness; on the other side, holiness and glory. But the matter is thus turned to its ethical side, which Paul cannot have in view here in accordance with the whole connection, which has to do only with the twofold bodily condition—that belonging to the first, and that to the last Adam. This also in opposition to van Hengel.

Christol. p. 226) finds in our text a heavenly humanity of Christ (human pre-existence); but the connection and the contrast lead us only to the heaven-derived body of the risen and exalted One. Comp., too, Hofmann and J. Müller, v. d. Sünde, p. 412, ed. 5; Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 315 f.

Ver. 49. The Recepta φορέσομεν is to be retained (see the critical remarks), for which van Hengel, too, decides, although taking τ. εἰκόνα in the moral sense. An exhortation (φορέσωμεν, defended by Hofmann) lies all the more remote from the connection, seeing that Paul proceeds in his development of the subject with καί, and it is certainly not the ethical, but the physical conception of εἰκόν which is prepared for by what precedes (see still τοιούτοι, ver. 48); also in what follows, ver. 50, it is not an ethical, but a physiological relation which is expressed. Beza says well, in opposition to the reading φορέσωμεν and its interpretation: “Hoc plane est detortum, quum res ipsa clamet, Paulum in proposito argumento pergere.” What, namely, was already contained in ver. 48, he now expresses in a yet more definite and concrete way (hence, too, passing over into the first person), bringing out with much emphasis the full meaning of the weighty statement, thus: And as we have borne (before the Parousia) the image of the earthly (of Adam),—i.e. the psychical body which makes us appear as like in kind to Adam,—so shall we (after the Parousia) bear also the image of the heavenly (of Christ), i.e. the pneumatic body. Paul transfers himself and his readers to the turning-point of the Parousia, from which the aorist dates backward in the αἰὼν οὗτος, and the future forward in the αἰὼν μέλλον.—To extend the “we” to all men (Krauss) is forbidden by the whole context, and would presuppose the idea of the ἀποκατάστασις πάντων.—Regarding φορεῖν, the continuous φέρειν, see on Rom. xiii. 4.

REMARK.—Adopting the reading φορέσωμεν, we should not, with Bengel, import the idea of a promise, but take it as hortative, with Chrysostom, Theophylact, Erasmus, al., including Hofmann, so that εἰκόν would fall to be understood ethically. Εἰκόνα δὲ χοῦ τοῦ φαιύλας πράξεις λέγει· εἰκόνα δὲ τοῦ ἐπουρανίου τὰς ἀγαθὰς, Theophylact. In connection with this Hofmann takes καθώς argumentatively

(comp. on Phil. i. 7, ii. 12): "seeing that we have borne . . . so must we now also be willing to bear . . ." But that καθώς is the ordinary as of comparison, is shown by the two comparative clauses in ver. 48, and by the annexing of the καθώς to them by the simple καί, which continues the comparison in the way of assertion. Moreover, φορέσωμεν would, in fact, not mean, "we must be willing to bear," but, "let us bear"

Ver. 50. The discussion regarding the nature of the resurrection body is now closed with a negative axiom, which serves to confirm the φορέσωμεν τ. εἰκ. τ. ἐπουρ.¹ But this (in order to add yet this general statement in confirmation of what has just been said) I assure you of. Comp. vii. 29. The sense of a concession (for the spiritualistic opponents, so Usteri, Billroth, Olshausen) is imported into the context and the simple φημί. According to van Hengel, Paul writes to obviate a misapprehension; his readers were not to think that the φορέσωμεν κ. τ. εἰκόνα τοῦ ἐπουρανίου consisted in the fellowship of the flesh and blood, which Christ had before and after His resurrection. But there was no occasion presented for such an opinion, since the Christian belief was assured that the heavenly Christ has a glorified body (Phil. iii. 21). Hofmann (following Beza) refers τοῦτο to what precedes, and takes ὅτι as introducing the ground, why the apostle has uttered vv. 46-49. But this ground is of a positive nature, and does not lie in the merely negative thought ver. 50, but much deeper, namely, in the Scriptural (ver. 45) relation of the bodily condition of the earthly and of the heavenly Adam. — σὰρξ κ. αἷμα] i.e. the bodily nature which we have in this temporal life, the chief constituents of which are flesh and blood,² the latter as the seat of life. Τὴν θνητὴν φύσιν καλεῖ ἀδύνατον δὲ ταύτην ἐτι θνητὴν οἶσαν τῆς ἐπουρανίου βασιλείας τυχεῖν, Theodoret. Comp. vi. 13. Σ. κ. αἷμα is just as little to be taken in the ethical sense, which σάρξ by itself elsewhere has, as is φθορά afterwards (in opposition to Chrysostom, Theophylact, al.). — οὐδέ] and not, still dependent upon ὅτι. This second half of the verse forms with the first a parallelism, in which the first clause names the concrete matters, and the second one the general class (the categories in question), to which the former belong. The φθορά, i.e. according to the context (comp. ver. 42), the corruption (and to this category flesh and blood belong, which fall a prey to corruption), inherits not the incorruptibility, to the realm of which belong the relations of the Messianic kingdom, and in particular the glorified body of the sharers in the kingdom. The abstract nouns instead of τὸ φθαρτόν and τὸ ἀφθαρτόν have a certain solemnity. Comp. Dissen, ad Pind. p. 476: "Sublimitatem et πάθος adjuvant abstracta sic posita pro concretis." Regarding κληρονομ. of the entrance upon the Messianic possession, comp. vi. 9; Gal. iii. 29. The present sets what is sure and certain before us as present.

² It is not to the body as such that participation in the Messianic kingdom is denied, but to the present body consisting of flesh and blood. Jerome says well: "alia carnis, alia corporis definitio est; omnis caro est corpus, non omne corpus est caro." In harmony with our passage we should have to read in the third article [of the "Apostles' Creed"] "resurrection of the body," instead of "resurrection of the flesh." The conception "glorified flesh" is for the apostle a contradictio in adjecto, which cannot even be justified from his doctrine of the Lord's Supper.

Ver. 51. After Paul has with the weighty axiom in ver. 50 disposed of the question ποιῶ δὲ σώματι ἔρχονται, which he has been discussing since ver. 35, a new point, which has likewise a right withal not to be left untouched in this connection, however mysterious it is, now presents itself for elucidation, namely, what shall happen in the case of those who shall be yet alive at the Parousia. This last, as it were, appended part of his discussion begins without transition in a direct and lively way (ἰδοῦ), designated too as μυστήριον, as dogma reconditum, the knowledge of which Paul is conscious that he possesses by ἀποκάλυψις.¹ See on Rom. xi. 25. — πάντες μὲν οὐ κοιμ. κ.τ.λ.] is held by the commentators to mean: we shall indeed not all die, but all shall be changed. They either assume a transposition of the negation (so the majority of the older expositors, following Chrysostom, also Heydenreich, Flatt, Osiander, Reiche, and van Hengel); or they hold that Paul had ἀλλαγ., upon which all the emphasis lies, already in his mind in connection with the first πάντες: "We all—shall not indeed die until then, but notwithstanding—all shall be changed," Billroth, whom Olshausen, de Wette, Maier, follow; or (so Rückert) the meaning is: die indeed we shall not all, etc., so that, according to this view, in pure Greek it would be said: κοιμηθησόμεθα πάντες μὲν οὐ.¹ Three makeshifts, contrary to the construction, and without proof or precedent, in order to bring out a meaning assumed beforehand to be necessary, but which is incorrect, for Paul after ver. 52 can only have applied ἀλλαγησόμεθα to those still living at the Parousia, and not, as according to that assumed meaning must be the case, to those already dead. The result of this is, at the same time, that the subject of οὐ κοιμ. and ἀλλαγ. must be Paul himself, and the whole of those who, like him, shall yet witness the Parousia (comp. 1 Thess. iv. 17: ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες), as could not but be clear to the reader from ἀλλαγ. Hence we must interpret strictly according to the order of the words: we shall indeed all not sleep (i.e. shall not have to go through the experience of dying at the Parousia, in order to become sharers in the resurrection body, but shall remain alive then), *but shall, doubtless, all be changed.*² Regarding the subject-matter, comp. ver. 53; 1 Thess. iv. 15, 17. This interpretation alone, according to which οὐ, in conformity with the quite ordinary use of it (comp. immediately οὐ δύναται, ver. 50), changes the conception of the word before which it stands into its opposite (Baeumlein, Partik. p. 278), is not merely verbally correct, but also in keeping with the character of a μυστήριον; while, according to the usual way of taking it, the first half at least contains nothing at all mysterious, but something superfluous and self-evident. Our interpretation is adopted and defended by Winer since his fifth edition (p. 517, ed. 7 [E. T. 695]), comp. Ewald and Kling;³ but it is contested by Fritzsche, de conform. Lachm. p. 38; Reiche, Commentar. crit.; de

¹ Comp. Hofmann's earlier interpretation (in the Schriftbew. II. 2, p. 654): "Collectively we shall not sleep, but we shall be changed collectively." Now (heil. Schr. d. N. T.) the same writer follows Lachmann's reading, which, however, he punctuates thus: πάντες μὲν κοιμηθησόμεθα οὐ, πάντες δὲ ἀλλαγ., whereby, on the one hand, the universality of the dying is denied, whereas on the other the universality of the change is affirmed. Against this interpretation, apart from the critical objections, it may be urged, as regards the sense, that ἀλλαγ. cannot be predicated of the dead along with the rest (see ver. 52), and as regards linguistic usage again, that to place the οὐ after the conceptions negated by it (Baeumlein, Partik. p. 307 f.) is foreign throughout to the New Testament, often as there was opportunity for placing it so.

³ Comp. also Holtzmann, Judenh. u. Christenth. p. 505.

Wette, van Hengel, Hofmann, Hoelemann, neue Bibelstud. p. 276 ff., who, it may be added, looks upon the passage as regards text and interpretation as a "still uncertain" one, but decidedly denies that there is here or in 1 Thess. iv. an expectation of the Parousia as nigh at hand. The objections raised against our view are insufficient; for (a) something absurd would result from it only on the supposition of the subject being all Christians or Paul and all his readers; (b) to make πάντες refer to the whole category of those among whom Paul reckoned himself, that is, to all who should still live to see the Parousia, of whom the apostle says that they shall not attain to the new body by the path of death, is not only not inadmissible, but is established in accordance with the context by the predicate ἀλλαγησ., which does not include the process of the resurrection (ver. 52); (c) the LXX. Num. xxiii. 13 cannot be used to support the reference of οὐ to πάντες, for in the words of that passage: πάντας δὲ οὐ μὴ ἴδῃς, the well-known use of οὐ μὴ testifies irrefragably in favour of the connection of the negation, not with πάντας, but directly with the verb. Equally unavailable is the LXX. Josh. xi. 13, where by πᾶσας τὰς πόλεις τὰς κεχωματισμένας οὐκ ἐνέπρησεν it is declared of the whole of the hill-cities that Israel left them unburnt, so that the negation thus belongs to the verb alongside of which it stands. In Eccus. xvii. 30 also the words οὐ δύναται (it is impossible) belong to each other; in John iii. 16, vi. 29, again, the mode of expression is quite of another kind (in opposition to Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 106 [E. T. 121]). In our text the repetition of πάντες ought to have sufficed of itself to prevent misapprehension of the plain meaning: all we shall at the return of the Lord, in order to our entering glorified into His kingdom, not need first to fall asleep, but shall all be changed living (ver. 52), so that our ψυχικὸν σῶμα shall become a πνευματικόν.

Ver. 52. Ἐν ἀτόμῳ, ἐν ῥιπή ὀφθ.] A double, because a thoroughly designed and extremely exact description of the suddenness of the ἀλλαγησ., which is meant wholly to exclude even the possibility of those still alive having first, perhaps, to die at the Parousia, in order to come into the resurrection-life. — ἄτομον, what is indivisible, an atom (Plato, Soph. p. 229 D), is here a little indivisible point of time. ἐν ἀτόμῳ ἐν ῥιπήματι, Hesychius. Comp. ἐν αὐλοῖς, Pindar, Ol. v. 45. Paul might also have written: ἀπὸ . . . σάλπιγγος, Polyb. iv. 13. 1. Regarding the subject-matter, comp. 1 Thess. iv. 16, and Lünemann and Ewald on that passage. The last trumpet is that sounding at the final moment of this age of the world. It does not conflict with this statement, if we suppose that Paul conceived the second resurrection also (ver. 24) to take place with trumpet-sound, for ἐσχ. has its temporal reference in αἰὼν οὗτος. De Wette (so, too, in the form of a suggestion, Vatablus; and comp. previously, Theodoret of Mopsuestia) thinks of the last among several trumpet-signals, against which, however, is the simple, not more precisely defined σαλπίζει γάρ which follows. This, too, in opposition to Osiander, van Hengel, Maier, and Hofmann. To understand, with Olshausen, who follows older expositors (τινές even already in Theophylact), the seventh trumpet, Rev. viii. 9, with which, along with the trumpets of Jericho, Hofmann also compares it, is to place it on the same level with the visions of the Revelation, for doing which we have no ground, since in 1 Thess. too, i.e., only one trumpet is mentioned, and that one taken for granted as well known. It is true that the Rabbins also taught that God will sound the trumpet seven times, and that in such a way that the resurrection will develop itself in seven acts;¹ but this conception, too, was foreign to the apostle, seeing that he represents the rising as an instantaneous event without breaks of development. It may be added, that the trumpet of the Parousia (see, already, Matt. xxiv. 31) is not to be explained away, either with Wolf and others: "cum signa apparebunt judicii jam celebrandi," or, with Olshausen (comp. Maier), of a startling work of the Spirit, arousing mankind for a great end. Comp., too, Theophylact, who understands by the σάλπιγξ the κέλευσμα and νεῦμα of God τὸ διὰ πάντων φθάνον; as in substance also Usteri, p. 356, Billroth, Neander, Hofmann.² As regards the phrase in itself, we might compare the Homeric ἀμφὶ δὲ σάλπιγξεν μέγας οὐρανός, Π. xxi. 388, where the thunder (as signal for the onset) is meant. But the connection gives us no right whatever to assume a non-literal, imaginative representation. On the contrary, Paul has in fact carried with him the conception of the resurrection-trumpet (resting upon Ex. xix. 16) from the popular sphere of conception, attested also in Matt. l.c. (comp. 4 Esdr. vi. 24), into his Christian sphere,¹ as he then himself adds forthwith by way of confirmation and with solemn emphasis: σαλπύσει γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead (the Christians who have already died up to that time) shall be raised incorruptible, and we (who are still alive then) shall be changed. The paratactic expression (instead of ὅτε γάρ, or some other such form of subordination) should of itself have been sufficient to prevent the divesting the σαλπ. γάρ. of its emphasis by regarding it simply as an introduction to what follows in connection with ἐν τ. ἐσχ. σάλπ. (Hofmann); comp. Kühner, § 720, 4; Winer, p. 585 [E. T. 785]. A special attention is to be given to the σαλπύσ. Instead of ἡμεῖς ἀλλαγ., Paul might have written οἱ ζῶντες ἀλλαγῇσονται; but from his persuasion that he should live to see the Parousia, he includes himself with the rest.² Comp. on ver. 51. Van Hengel is wrong in referring οἱ νεκροί to those now (when Paul wrote) already dead, and ἡμεῖς to those now still alive, of whom a part will then be also dead; ἀλλαγ. can apply only to the change of the living. — σαλπύσει (sc. ὁ σαλπιγκτής) has become in its use just as impersonal as ὕει, νίφει, αἰ. See Elmsl. ad Heracl. 830; Kühner, II. p. 36, and ad Xen. Anab. i. 2. 17. The form σαλπύσω instead of σαλπύξω is later Greek. See Lobeck, ad Phrygn. p. 191. which will be the signal of the advent of Christ. Osiander holds that the victory over the last enemy (vv. 25, 27) is pointed at. According to de Wette, it is generally the apocalyptic figure for solemn, divinely-effected catastrophes.

¹ The recognition of this form of conception by no means implies that a dogma is to be made out of it.

² As in 1 Thess. iv. 15 ff., to which passage, however, this one does not stand in the relation of a further advance of development, or more thorough liberation from Rabbinical reminiscences (Krauss, p. 172); for the two passages agree in substance, and they supplement each other. The incapacity, too, of the flesh for inheriting the kingdom forms the necessary presupposition for 1 Thess. iv. 17. And the restoration of all is not taught even in our passage, ver. 54 f., where the final shout of triumph of the redeemed (ver. 26 f.) is heard.

The first corrector of \aleph has rightly restored it. — γενήσεται] shall come to pass (in respect of its contents) the word, i.e. it shall become actual,—the written word shall become fact. Hofmann wrongly takes it: Men shall then say so, as it stands written. Where a λόγος or ῥῆμα goes forth, i.e. is spoken, there stands along with it the preposition of direction (as John x. 35, Luke iii. 2, and frequently; comp. Gen. xv. 1, al.), or whence the word comes (as Jer. xxvi. 1), or through whom it goes forth (from God; as Hagg. i. 3). It may be added, that they are not things simultaneous which are announced in the protasis and apodosis (as Hofmann objects); but when that which is spoken of in the protasis shall have taken place, then, because from this time forward no one shall fall any more under the power of death, shall that be realized, etc. This is the happy consequence of that,—the complete victory of the life, which will link itself to that change which shall thus take place in the twinkling of an eye, as to its signal and prelude. — ὁ λόγος] effatum, oraculum, 1 Macc. vii. 16; Plato, Phaedr. p. 275 B; Pindar, Pyth. iv. 105. See Hermann, Diss. de Orph. p. 821. — Since the personified θάνατος is, according to the context, bodily death and nothing more, this passage also (comp. ver. 26) is of no avail for the establishment of the doctrine of restoration (in opposition to Olshausen). Comp. on vv. 22, 28. The passages from the Rabbins, who likewise, upon the ground of Isa. l.c., teach : “in diebus ejus (Messiae) Deus S. B. deglutiet mortem,” may be seen in Wetstein.

Ver. 55. Exulting exclamation of joy from the apostle (comp. as to πού, Rom. iii. 27 ; 1 Cor. i. 20), who transfers himself into that blessed future of the γενήσεται κ.τ.λ., ver. 54,² and breaks out, as it were, into an ἐπινίκιον. In doing so, he makes words from the LXX. Hos. xiii. 14 his own, with free alteration. This great freedom in availing himself of the passage almost solely in respect of the assonance of the words, and the whole lyrical cast of the outburst, make it less likely that ver. 55 is still part of the quotation (the common view ; but see, in opposition to it, van Hengel). — τὸ κέντρον] Paul images to himself death as a beast with a deadly sting (a scorpion, or the like). Billroth, following Schoettgen, thinks of a goad, which death uses in order to cultivate its field. But this conception is not in the least recalled by the context. Olshausen, too, is wrong in holding that τὸ κέντρον denotes that which elicits the forthputting of strength : “sin awakens the sleeping strength of death, and the law, again, that of sin." Then, plainly, τὸ κέντρον τοῦ θανάτου, ver. 56, would be that which stings death, which is impossible according to ver. 55! — In the second question, according to the Recepta ποῦ σου, ἄδη κ.τ.λ., the (personified) Hades is looked upon as having lost the victory; for it has not only had, in virtue of the resurrection of the bodies, to render up the souls of the departed which lay under its power, but it receives no other souls into its power any more. According to the reading: ποῦ σου, θάνατε κ.τ.λ. (see the critical remarks), the new element, which comes as a climax, is brought forward in τὸ νίκος by way of addition, after a bold repetition of the same address; so that, putting aside the interrogative form, the meaning of the triumphant outburst is: Thou death stingest no more, for no one dies henceforth; thou death hast lost the victory, for the power of eternal life has won it over thee.

² So, rightly, Chrysostom and Theophylact. According to van Hengel, Paul is speaking of the present life, namely, of the joy of hope. But it is just the boldness of the flight of thought which is the most Pauline feature in our passage. The κέντρον also is taken in too weak a sense by van Hengel, namely, in that of only a hurting, not a deadly sting, by which, in his view, the terrors of death are meant.

Ver. 56 f., still retaining the conception of the κέντρον and the νίκος, points, by way of happy conclusion (not as introduction to the admonition which follows, as Hofmann would have it), to the firm dogmatic ground upon which this certainty of future victory rests in a connected view of the gospel. "Seeing that death slays through sin (Rom. v. 12), and sin, again, is powerful through the law (Rom. vii. 7 ff.), it is thus certain that God gives us the victory over death through Jesus Christ." Christ, that is to say, has indeed blotted out sin through His ἰλαστήριον, has risen for our righteousness' sake; and has thus withdrawn us from the curse of the law, and withdrawn us by His Spirit from its power to stir up and promote sin (Rom. viii. 1 ff.). In this proof set forth by the apostle, the summary of his whole gospel is contained. The form, however, is not argumentative, but, in correspondence with the elevated and emotional tone of the passage, such that shadow and light are placed beside each other, but with the light breaking forth after the darkness, as in Rom. vii. 25, in the shape of a cry of thanksgiving. — τῷ διδόντι] present; for this future victory of life over death is for us sure and certain.

Ver. 58. Closing admonition, drawn in the way of inference by ὥστε from τῷ διδόντι ἡμῖν τὸ νίκος διὰ κ.τ.λ. "Therefore—because you are sure of the victory—be steadfast," etc. The εἰδότες κ.τ.λ., which glances back upon that sure νίκος, testifies in favour of this reference of ὥστε; hence we have no adequate ground for referring ὥστε to the whole section (de Wette, van Hengel, al.), nay, even for making it extend to the whole Epistle (Hofmann). — ἐδραῖοι, ἀμετακίν.] Comp. Col. i. 23. To conceive of the readers as ethical athletes (Beza), is not suggested by the context. What is expressed is Christian perseverance in general, under the figure of standing firm, comp. vii. 37 (opposite: σαλεύεσθαι, comp. Theodoret), in connection with which, again, ἀμετακίν. presents the perseverance more precisely as unseduceableness, both being in opposition to the possible seductions through the deniers of the resurrection. Comp. on ἀμετακίν., Plato, Ep. vii. p. 343 A; Dion. And they labour therein, each according to his different calling, by the active fulfilment of His will as servants of the Lord (xii. 5). The three points, ἐδραῖοι, ἀμετακ., περισσ. κ.τ.λ., form a climax. — εἰδότες] since ye know (comp. Rom. v. 3; 2 Cor. i. 7, iv. 14); it introduces the motive, so significant in this connection, to follow the περισσ. ἐν τ. ἐ. τ. κ.; ὁ κόπος ὑμῶν, your painstaking labour, which is devoted to the ἔργον τ. κυρίου. — κενός] in vain, i.e. without result. Comp. ver. 10; 1 Thess. iii. 5. So would the labour be, if there were no resurrection and no victorious consummation of eternal life, because then the blessed reward of the labour would remain unattained, namely, the salvation of the Messianic kingdom which is destined for the labourer. Rom. ii. 7; 2 Tim. ii. 12; Jas. i. 12, al. — ἐν κυρίῳ] is not to be connected with ὁ κόπος ὑμ., but with οὐκ ἔστι κενός. It depends upon Christ, that your labour is not fruitless; for in Him the resurrection (ver. 22) and the Messianic σωτηρία have their causal basis, vv. 17–19; Acts iv. 12; Rom. v. 9 f., vi. 22, 23, x. 9, al.

Vv. 1–9. Regarding the collection for Jerusalem; doubtless (comp. vii. 1, viii. 1, xii. 1) occasioned by a question in the Corinthian letter.

Ver. 1. The construction may be: ὥσπερ περὶ τῆς λογ. διέτ. ταῖς ἐκκλ. τῆς Γαλ., οὕτω κ.τ.λ. Comp. 2 Cor. ix. 1; also 1 Cor. xii. 1. Still περὶ . . . ἀγίους may also be taken by itself (de Wette and others), comp. ver. 12, vii. 1, viii. 1. We cannot, indeed, decide, but the latter is more in harmony with the inartificial movement of the epistolary style. — λογ(α) συλλογῇ, Suidas, comp. Hesychius. Without example elsewhere save in the Fathers. — εἰς τοὺς ἀγίους] i.e. εἰς τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῶν ἀγίων τῶν ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ, Rom. xv. 26. This detail, however, was obvious of itself to the readers; the assumption that οἱ ἅγιοι by itself denoted the mother church (Hofmann)¹ is neither necessary nor capable of proof; they are the ἀγιοι who are known; the readers were acquainted with the fact, for whom the apostle made the collection. — The poverty of the church at Jerusalem explains itself in part from the community of goods which had formerly² subsisted there (see on Acts ii. 44 f.). This poverty itself, along with the high interest excited by what was in truth the mother church of the whole of Christendom, as well as Gal. ii. 10, and generally Paul's love for his people (Rom. ix. 3), which made sacrifices with joy, form a sufficient explanation of his great zeal in their support, and of his delivering over the sums raised in person, notwithstanding of the dangers which he saw before him. Rückert's view (comp. also Olshausen), that Paul desired to appease the minds of the Jewish Christians there which were embittered against him, before he journeyed into the west, has no trace whatever of its existence either in the Acts or the Epistles. See, on the contrary, Acts xxi. 17–24. Rückert even asserts that such a reason alone could justify him in undertaking so perilous a journey. But see Acts xx. 22–24. — τῆς Γαλατ.] whether from Ephesus by messengers, or in person on the journey mentioned in Acts xviii. 23 (Osiander, Neander, Wieseler), or by letter (so Ewald), must be left undecided. In the Epistle to the Galatians preserved to us there is no mention of this collection; for Gal. ii. 10 is of general import, although it is the basis of the apostolic διατάσσειν, as well as the special warrant for it. For the rest, Bengel aptly says: "Galatarum exemplum Corinthiis, Corinthiorum exemplum Macedonibus, et Macedonum Romanis proponit, 2 Cor. ix. 2; Rom. xv. 26. Magna exemplorum vis." But a proof, too, how Paul sought to foster the community of life and effort in his churches (comp. Lechler, p. 364 f.), and how the appointed mode of doing so had already approved itself.

Ver. 2. Κατὰ μίαν σαββάτου] on each first day of the week. A Hebraism very common in the New Testament, in accordance with the Jewish custom of designating the days of the week by

² The community of goods cannot by this time have subsisted any longer; otherwise it could not have been said, Rom. i. c., τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῶν ἁγίων. See Acts iv. 34.

שני בשבת, אחר בשבת, etc. Lightfoot, Hor. ad Matth. xxviii. 1. The singular of σαββ. also means week, as in Mark xvi. 9; Luke xviii. 12. — It does not, indeed, follow from this passage in itself that the Sunday was already observed at that time by assemblies for the worship of God, although this is to be assumed from other indications (see regarding this on Acts xx. 7); for παρ' ἐαυτῷ τιθέτω cannot refer to the laying down of money in the assembly (Estius, Bengel, Mosheim, al.); but no doubt it does show that to the Christian consciousness it was a holy day in whose consecration the appropriateness of such works of love was felt, τὰ γὰρ ἀπόρρητα ἀγαθὰ καὶ ἡ ρίζα καὶ ἡ ἀρχὴ τῆς ζωῆς ἡμετέρας ἐν ταύτῃ γέγονεν, Chrysostom. — παρ' ἐαυτῷ τιθέτω κ.τ.λ.] *let him lay up in store at home whatever (quodcunque) he succeeds in, i.e. if he has success in anything, let him lay it up (i.e. what has been gained thereby), comp. expressions such as in John xii. 5; Matt. xix. 21, etc. Comp. Herod. vi. 73: Κλεομένει εὐδῶθη τὸ πρῆγμα. Ecclus. xi. 16, xxxviii. 14, xli. 1; Tobit iv. 19; 3 John 2. To supply θησαυρίζειν after εὐδῶ. (Hofmann) is superfluous. Explanations such as quod ei placuerit (Vulgate,¹ Erasmus, Paraphr., Luther, al.), and that of Billroth and Rückert, following older interpreters: what is possible for him without burdening himself, are not in accordance with the literal sense of εὐδῶ (see on Rom. i. 10). παρ' ἐαυτῷ: at home, chez lui, see on Luke xxiv. 12. Loesner, Obs. p. 297. θησαυρίζων: "paulatim cumulum aliquem faciens," Grotius. — ἵνα μὴ κ.τ.λ.] in order that gatherings be not made, when I shall have come. The collection was to be then so far already made, that every one would only have to produce what he had already gathered together week by week out of his profits in trade. By this whole injunction Paul doubtless had in view both the enlargement and the acceleration in due season of the collection.*

Ver. 3. Οὓς ἐὰν δοκιμ.] whomsoever you shall consider fit. Paul thus makes the appointment of the persons who were to bring the money dependent upon the choice of his readers; hence Grotius observes: "Vide, quomodo vir tantus nullam suspicioni rimam aperire voluerit." It is possible, however, that he had never thought of that; for it was quite natural for him, with his fine practical tact, not to anticipate the givers as respects the transmission of their gifts. — δι' ἐπιστολῶν] by means of letters, by my giving them letters along with them to express their mission. Comp. Winer, p. 356 [E. T. 476]. The plural might denote the category (by way of letter), and thus only one letter be meant (Heumann); but there is nothing to compel us to depart from the plural sense, for Paul very reasonably might design to write different letters to several persons at Jerusalem.¹ Δι' ἐπιστ. is to be connected with what follows (Chrysostom, Theophylact, and the majority of modern expositors), and it is put first, because Paul has already in his mind the other possible alternative, that he himself may make the journey. The majority of the older editors (except Er. Schmid), also Beza, Calvin, Estius, al., connect it with δοκιμ.: “quos Hierosolymitanis per epistolas commendaveritis,” Wetstein. But in that case the πέμψω would surely be somewhat meaningless! No; the bearers of the collection are to be chosen by the givers; but it is Paul, as the originator and apostolically commissioned steward (Gal. ii. 10) of the collection, who sends the money. — τὴν χάριν ὑμ.] your love-gift, beneficium. Ver. 4. In case, however, of it (what is being spoken of, i.e. the result of the collection) being worthy that I too should journey (to Jerusalem),² then they shall journey with me. The genitive τοῦ πορεύεσθαι depends upon ἄξιον. Comp. Fritzsche, ad Matth. p. 845; Winer, p. 304 [E. T. 408]. — Paul makes his own journeying thither dependent upon the issue of the collection, not, of course, for the sake of safety in its conveyance, nor yet because, in the event of a considerable sum being realized, he desired to be independent in connection with the application of it, but—which alone results from ἄξιον without arbitrariness—because a scanty sum would have been disproportionate to an extraordinary mission. Consideration for the decorum attaching to the apostolic rank underlies his procedure, not the prudential motive: “in order, on this opportunity, to fulfil his purpose of going to Jerusalem (Acts xix. 21), and to prepare for himself there a good reception” (de Wette), or in order by this journey to heal the breach between the Jewish and Gentile Christians (Baur). Bengel says well: “Justa aestimatio sui non est superbia.” At the same time, he will not undertake this charge alone; see 2 Cor. viii. 20.

² It is clear from καὶ μοι πορ. that he will not make the journey at any rate (Hofmann), but that he makes it dependent on the above-named circumstance whether he also shall journey thither. What a strange state of things, too, would be the result, if he were resolved to journey at any rate, but the messengers, in the event of the collection proving a small one, were to make the journey not in his company, but alone! Paul assuredly did not contemplate anything so paltry.

Ver. 5 f. His arrival, which had not hitherto been specifically determined, is now defined by him as respects its time. — ὅταν Μακεδ. διέλθω] According to 2 Cor. i. 15, it had previously been his plan to proceed from Ephesus by Corinth to Macedonia, from Macedonia again back to Corinth, and then onward to Jerusalem. This plan, however, he has altered (see 2 Cor. i. 15, 23 ff.), and he now intends to journey first through Macedonia, and then to Corinth, where he thinks perhaps (τυχόν) to spend some time, or even to winter. In the second Epistle, too, we see him actually engaged on this journey in Macedonia (2 Cor. ii. 13, viii. 1, ix. 2, 4), and upon the way to Corinth (ii. 1, xii. 14, xiii. 1, al.). Acts xx. 1, 2, agrees with this. — Μακεδ. γὰρ διέρχ.] is not a parenthesis, but the Μακεδ. put first corresponds to the πρὸς ὑμᾶς δέ which follows, and the διέρχομαι to the παραμενῶ: for Macedonia I journey through (without halting), but with you will I perhaps remain. The present διέρχ. designates the future as present in conception, i.e. conceived as quite certain. From the erroneous rendering: I am on my journey through Macedonia, arose the erroneous statement in the subscription, that the letter was written from Philippi. — παραμενῶ] he remained three months, Acts xx. 2. — ἵνα ὑμεῖς κ.τ.λ.] ὑμεῖς has the emphasis. Were Paul to remain in another church, others would give him the escort; there is something kindly both in ἵνα and in ὑμεῖς, the unprompted thoughtfulness of love. — τυχόν] forsan, only here in the New Testament, very common in Greek writers. — οὐ] As Luke x. 1. Bornemann, Schol. in loc.; Kühner, II. p. 318.

Whither his thoughts, however, were generally turned at that time, see Acts xix. 21.

Ver. 7. For it is not my will to see you now in passing. Since he does not say πάλιν ἐν παρ., but ἄρτι ἐν παρ., no inference can be drawn from this passage to decide the question (see Introduction to 2 Cor. § 2) whether Paul had been already twice in Corinth before writing our Epistle to the Corinthians (in opposition to Schrader, Neander, Wieseler, Otto); but he says simply: it is not his will now to visit the Corinthians only as a passing traveller, which leaves it quite undecided whether he has already previously visited them once ἐν παρόδῳ (so, too, Hofmann) or not. In order rightly to understand the passage, observe that the ὑμᾶς, which is put first on that account, has the emphasis, in contrast to the Macedonians. The Corinthians, in the journey which he is now about to make, are to have the advantage over the Macedonians, whom he will only see in journeying through, ver. 5.¹ According to Billroth and others, the thought is meant to be, that he will not now see them, as he had formerly intended, on his journey through (to Macedonia). But in that case he would have written: ἄρτι γὰρ οὐ θέλω κ.τ.λ. Regarding ἐν παρόδῳ, comp. Thuc. i. 126. 7, v. 4. 5, vii. 2. 3; Polyb. v. 68. 8; Lucian, *D. Vv. 8, 9. Paul now mentions the duration of his present stay in Ephesus, and the reason of it. — τῆς πεντηκ.] is the immediately impending festival of Pentecost. See Introduction, § 3. Nothing can be inferred from our text, which contains simply a statement of time, in support of a Christian celebration of this festival as already by this time subsisting. — θύρα γάρ μοι κ.τ.λ.] The figurative expression (comp. latter epithet, however, powerful, corresponds not to the figure but to the matter, and even to that only in so far as it is conceived of as immediately connected with the opened θύρα,—a want of congruity in the animated and versatile mode of representation (comp. Plato, Phaedr. p. 245 A: Μουσῶν ἐπὶ ποιητικὰς θύρας ἀφίκεται) which occasioned the reading ἐναργής, evidens (Vulgate, Itala, Pelagius, Ambrosiaster, Beda), which occurs in Philem. 6, and is approved by Beza, Grotius, Bos, and Clericus. Vv. 10, 11. Recommendation of Timothy (iv. 17) to be well received and escorted back. He is not the bearer of our Epistle (Bleek), but journeyed through Macedonia (Acts xix. 22), and must arrive in Corinth later than the Epistle. — ἐὰν δὲ ἔλθῃ] if, indeed, he shall have come. Rückert holds that ὅταν would have been more correct. Either one or other was correct, just according to the conception of the writer. He conceives of the arrival of Timothy as conditioned by the circumstances, and therefore places it under the hypothetical, not under the temporal (ὅταν), point of view. — ἵνα κ.τ.λ.] design of the βλέπετε: be careful, in order that he, etc. Paul might also have written negatively: βλέπετε, μὴ ἐν φόβῳ (ii. 3), or ἵνα μὴ ἐ. φ. (2 John 8), etc. The positive expression, however, demands more; his going out and in among the readers is to be free from fear. Comp. on γίνεσθαι with the adverb of the mode of the going out and in, Herod. i. 8, ix. 109; Plut. Alex. 69, Demetr. 11, Mor. p. 127 A; also Plato, Prot. 325 B; Tobit vii. 9, 11; 1 Macc. viii. 29. They are so to conduct themselves towards him that he shall not be intimidated among them. This peculiar ἀφόβως, as well as the reason assigned which follows τὸ γὰρ ἔργον κ.τ.λ., and the conclusion again drawn from it: μὴ τις οὖν αὐτ. ἐξουθενήσῃ, make it probable that Paul has in view not the ill-will of his own opponents, which his friend might encounter (Osiander, Neander), with which the τὸ γὰρ . . . ὡς καὶ ἐγώ does not well agree, but the youth of Timothy (1 Tim. iv. 12), on account of which, in a church to some extent of a high-minded tendency, he might easily be not held in full respect, slighted and intimidated. So already

Chrysostom and the majority of interpreters. The conjecture that Timothy was of a timid nature (de Wette) is without a trace of historical support, and is superfluous. Regarding τὸ ἔργ. τοῦ κυρ., see on xv. 58. — ἐν εἰρήνῃ] is not to be explained from the formula: πορεύεσθαι ἐν εἰρήνῃ (so Calvin: "salvum ab omni noxa," comp. Beza, Flatt, Maier), since, on the contrary, the context would lead us to think, in accordance with ἀφόβως and μή τις ἐξουθ., of a peaceful escort, a προπέμπειν in peace and concord, χωρὶς μάχης κ. φιλονεικίας (Chrysostom, Theophylact). Flatt and Hofmann refer ἐν εἰρ. to what follows (that he may come to me safely and without danger). But the subsequent reason assigned contains nothing referable to ἐν εἰρήνῃ, which must have been the case, had it been so emphatically put first. Besides, the escort to be given was not for protection, but in testimony of love and reverence. — ἵνα ἔλθῃ πρὸς με] There is implied, namely, in προπέμψατε κ.τ.λ., with its aim as here defined: "in order that he may come (back) to me," the admonition not to detain him too long in Corinth—for Paul is expecting him. — μετὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν] Several others, therefore, besides Erastus (Acts xix. 22), had journeyed with Timothy.¹

Perhaps they had expressly besought that Apollos might be sent to them. — πολλὰ is intensive, as in ver. 19, and often in Greek writers. — μετὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν] These are the Corinthian Christians, who journeyed back from Ephesus to Corinth with this Epistle. See ver. 17. Here also the words are not to be joined with παρεκάλεσα (Hofmann), but with ἵνα ἔλθῃ κ.τ.λ., beside which they stand. — καὶ πάντως κ.τ.λ.] And the will was wholly (out and out) lacking ("sermo quasi impersonalis," Bengel) in order to come now, comp. ¹ To refer it to ἰνδιχ.: I with the brethren who are here (Bengel and de Wette undecidedly, older interpreters in Calovius, and again Hofmann), has the analogy of ver. 12 against it. It was usual that several should be sent together on such missions.

Rom. i. 13. — ὅταν εὐκαιρῇ.] So soon as he shall have found a convenient time for it. Regarding the lateness of the word in Greek, see Lobeck, ad Phryg. p. 125.

REMARK.—It follows from this passage that Apollos, who by this time must have been again (Acts xviii. 24 ff.) in Ephesus,¹ was neither a faction-maker nor at variance with Paul, for Paul himself plainly regarded his going to Corinth as a thing advantageous and to be desired. Hence, too, the refusal of Apollos is not to be explained from fear of adding new fuel to the party heats, but simply from the contents of the ὅταν εὐκαιρῇ. He must have found hindrances for the present in the relations of his work, by which he saw himself detained from the desired journey until a more convenient time, so that he did not yield even to the advice of the apostle. The text tells us nothing further; but the Corinthians themselves might learn more details from the bearers of the Epistle. Van Hengel (Gave d. talen. p. 111 f.) brings the refusal into a too arbitrarily assumed connection with the Corinthian misuse of the glossolalia.

Ver. 13 f. In conclusion of the whole Epistle, and without connection or reference to what has immediately preceded, there is now added a concise exhortation which compresses closely together, in five imperatives following each other asyndetically, the whole sum of the Christian calling, upon which are then to follow some personal commendations and greetings, as well as, lastly, the proper closing greeting and the benediction. — The γρηγορεῖτε summons to Christian foresight and soberness, without which steadfastness in the faith (στήκ. ἐν τ. πίστ.) is not possible; ἀνδρίζεσθε and κραταιοῦσθε, again, to the manly ("muliebris enim omnis inconstantia," Pelagius) and vigorous resistance against all dangers, without which that steadfastness cannot continue. — ἀνδρίζεσθαι] to bear oneself manfully, to be manly in bearing and action; only here in the New Testament, but often in classic writers, see Wetstein, and in the LXX. The verbal form occurs in the LXX. and Apocrypha; not in Greek writers, who say κρατύνεσθαι. — ἐν ἀγάπῃ] as in the life-sphere of the whole Christian dispositions and action, chap. xiii., and, in particular, of mutual edification, viii. 1.

Vv. 15–18. Commendation of the three Corinthian delegates who had brought to the apostle the letter of the church; first of all (ver. 15 f.) and chiefly, of Stephanas (i. 16) and his house. The special expression which Paul gives (ver. 16) to the commendation of Stephanas must have been grounded in some antagonism unknown to us, which the man had to lament in his work for the church. — παρακαλῶ] The question is, Whether the exhortation itself begins at once with οἴδατε (so that the latter would be imperative), or only with ἵνα, so that οἴδατε would be indicative, and the passage ending with ἐαυτούς would put forward the motive in the first place? The latter is the ordinary view and the only correct one, for οἴδατε as an imperative form (instead of ἴστε) cannot be pointed out (in opposition to Erasmus, Wolf, Heydenreich); on the supposition of its being imperative, εἰδέναι would require to be taken as in 1 Thess. v. 12 (“ut jubeat agnosci bene meritos,” Erasmus); on the view of its being indicative, it is the simple know. The construction is the ordinary attraction οἰδὰ σε τίς εἶ, and οἴδατε . . . ἐαυτούς is an auxiliary thought which interrupts the construction (comp. Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 34 b). — ἀπαρχὴ τῆς Ἀχ.] i.e. the first family which had accepted Christianity in Achaia; the holy first-fruits of the land, in so far as it was destined to become, and was in process of becoming, Christian. Comp. here pointed to. Perhaps Stephanas devoted himself also especially to journeys, embassies, execution of special commissions, and the like; his wife, to the care of the poor and sick. — τοῖς ἁγίοις is an appropriating dative to διακ. See, already, Raphel, Xenoph. in loc.; Bernhardt, p. 88. By οἱ ἅγιοι are meant the Christians, as in ver. 1; not, however, the mother church at Jerusalem (Hofmann). A reference to prosecuting the collection (in connection with which people had, it is supposed, been refractory towards Stephanas) lies wholly remote from the words. — καὶ ὑμεῖς] You too. The καί finds its reference, according to the context, in what goes before: εἰς διακ. τ. ἁγ. ἔταξ. ἑαυτ. Wetstein is right, therefore, in saying: "illi vobis ministrant; æquum est, ut vos illis vicissim honorem exhibeatis" (rather: obsequamini). — ὑποτάσσ.] namely, to their proposals, exhortations, etc. Ewald and Ritschl regard Stephanas as one of the overseers of the church; a relation which, however, would have required a more precise and definite designation than the general and qualitative τοῖς τοιούτοις. See, besides, on i. 17. — τοῖς τοιούτοις] to those who are so affected, indicates, in a generalizing way, the category to which Stephanas and his house belong. This generalization, by which the injunction of obedience towards the concrete persons comes out in a less strict and immediate form, but in which it is still implied, is a delicacy of expression. — τῷ συνεργ.] The reference of the συν is given by the context from τοῖς τοιούτοις; hence: who works with them, i.e. in fellowship with them, which presupposes harmony in the spirit and purport of the work. Comp. Chrysostom. While Rückert leaves us our choice between three supplements contrary to the context: τῷ θεῷ (iv. 9), ἐμοί (so Erasmus), and ὑμῶν (2 Cor. i. 24), Hofmann adds a fourth arbitrary supplement: helpful to increase the kingdom of God. This design is of course taken for granted of itself, but does not explain the συν. — καὶ κοπιῶντι] and takes pains (therein), gives himself trouble about it. Comp. xv. 10, iv. 12; Gal. iv. 11; Rom. xvi. 6.

Vv. 17, 18. Regarding Fortunatus (probably not different from the person named in Clem. 1 Cor. 59) and Achaicus no particulars are known. They are not to be included (as de Wette would have it) in the family of Stephanas, which has been spoken of already. Grotius holds them to be Chloe's people; but see on i. 11. — ὅτι τὸ ὑμέτερον ὑστέρημα αὐτοὶ ἀνεπλ.] because they for their part have supplied your lack (your absence). Comp. on Phil. ii. 30. ῥμέτ. is thus taken objectively (comp. xv. 31): the lack of your presence; and ὑμέτ. and αὐτοί (see the critical remarks) have the emphasis. Observe how courtceously the expression: the want of you (of your presence), is chosen. Hofmann, on the contrary, misses this delicate touch by taking it as: what was lacking in you, in this respect, namely, that you could not appear with me in person. With still less delicacy Grotius, who adduces in his support 2 Cor. ix. 12: "quod vos omnes facere oportuit, id illi fecerunt; certiorum me fecere de vestris morbis." He is followed by Rückert, who founds wrongly upon Phil. ii. 30: "what should have been done by you, that have they done," inasmuch, namely, as they had given him joy, which had not been done by the Corinthians. But we must not decide here by passages from other Epistles, since linguistically both renderings alike may be correct, but simply by the connection, according to which the men as ambassadors from the Corinthians were the compensation to the apostle for the lack of the presence of the latter. Comp. Chrysostom. — ἀνέπαυσαν γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] reason assigned for the preceding τὸ ὑστέρημα αὐτ. ἀνεπλ.¹ Regarding the phrase, comp. 2 Cor. vii. 13; Philem. 7, 20. — καὶ τὸ ὑμῶν] for they have refreshed (by their arrival here, and the communications and assurances connected therewith, comp. 2 Cor. vii. 13) my spirit and yours. The latter, inasmuch as they had come not in their own name, but as representatives of the whole church; their meeting therefore with Paul could not but be refreshing to the consciousness of the whole church. As they by their presence provided for Paul the joy of ἀνάπαυσις, so they provided it also for the church, which through them had entered into this fellowship with the apostle, and thus owed to them the refreshment which it could not but experience in the consciousness of this living intercourse of love with Paul brought about through these men. Comp. Chrysostom: οὐ Παύλῳ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐκείνοις αὐτοὺς χαρισισμένους δέκνυνσι τῷ τὴν πόλιν ἅπασαν ἐν αὐτοῖς περιφέρειν. Paul thus expresses not simply reciprocity in general,—that which is presupposed where there is good-will (de Wette),—but the relation implied in the representation of the church by their delegates,—a relation, therefore, which for the latter, in virtue of their acceptance of the embassy, was one of merit. There lies here, also, in the addition of this second pronoun, a tender delicacy (comp. on i. 2), which the readers acquainted with the manner of the apostle could well appreciate. Grotius makes the reference to be to the assurances of Paul's love which those men had brought with them to the Corinthians. But τὸ ὑμῶν also, like τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα, must refer to the time of the presence of the delegates with Paul. — ἐπιγινώσκετε] Attention to the compound verb: recognise them rightly (comp. on xiii 12), should of itself have sufficed to prevent alterations of the sense of the word (such as: prize them highly, so Theophylact, Grotius, Flatt, Neander, and others). The high esteem is the consequence of the ἐπιγιν. — τοὺς τοιούτους] as in ver. 16.

Ver. 19 f. Τῆς Ἀσίας] in the narrower sense, comprehending the western coastlands of Asia Minor (see on Acts ii. 9), where Ephesus also lay. From the latter, at least, Paul was charged with a greeting, but in the assurance of a like loving fellowship on the part also of the other Asiatic churches, with which he was in intercourse from Ephesus, he widens it. — ἐν κυρίῳ] marks the Christian character of the greeting, inasmuch as it was given with the feeling of living and moving in Christ. Comp. on Rom. xvi. 22. The ἐν κυρ., which is here added, is taken for granted by the reader in the case of the other greetings also. But here precisely it is expressed, because this greeting is a specially fervent one; hence also πολλά (much, comp. ver. 12). — σὺν τῇ κατ' οἶκον αὐτ. ἐκκλ.] Aquila and Prisca (Priscilla), who had gone from Corinth (see on Acts xviii. 2) to Ephesus (Acts xviii. 18, 26), had therefore given their dwelling here too, as afterwards at Rome (Rom. xvi. 3 f.), for the assembly of a portion of the Christians in the place. Comp. on Rom. l.c. Probably Paul also lodged with them, so that the old addition: παρ' οἷς καὶ ξενίζομαι (D E F G, Vulg., etc.), contains a true statement. — οἱ ἀδελφοὶ πάντες] the whole of the members of the Ephesian church—these, still, separately and personally, although already included collectively in the first greeting. — ἐν φιλ. ἀγ.] by means of a holy kiss. See on Rom. xvi. 16; 2 Cor. xiii. 12; 1 Thess. v. 26. It is the kiss which was the token of Christian, brotherly love (1 Pet. v. 14), and thus had the specific character of Christian consecration. Comp. Constit. apost. ii. 57. 12, viii. 5. 5: τὸ ἐν κυρίῳ φίλημα. More special considerations, such as that of the absence of hypocrisy (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact), are imported. They are to greet each other, mutually (not from Paul), with the holy kiss after the reading of the Epistle in the assembly, and thereby manifest their brotherly love to each other respectively.¹ Comp. on Rom. xvi. 16.

Vv. 21–24. Conclusion added with his own hand in token, according to 2 Thess. iii. 17, comp. ii. 2, that the Epistle, though not written with his own hand, was his Epistle. Comp. Col. iv. 18. — ὁ ἀσπασμός] is the greeting κατ' ἐξοχήν, the final salutation to the church. Nothing is to be supplied; on the contrary, Paul writes these words, and there is the greeting. — Παύλου] in apposition to ἐμῇ. See Kühner, II. p. 145. — In ver. 22, looking back once more, as it were involuntarily, upon the many degenerate forms of Christian life, and the discords at Corinth, he adds an apostolic utterance of judgment, full of terrible solemnity, against all those who could not but feel that it struck at them. — οὐ φιλεῖ τ. κύρ.] is without love to Christ. So he designates those Christians, who, like so many at Corinth, by factiousness, self-seeking, strife, a carnal life, etc., practically denied their love to Christ (John xiv. 23). That the curse applied to them, as long as they were impenitent, is self-evident. Comp. 2 Cor. vii. 10. — Observe that the more sensuous word φιλεῖν is nowhere used by Paul in those Epistles which are undoubtedly his (comp., however, Tit. iii. 15), except in this passage so full of emotion; elsewhere he uses ἀγαπᾶν (Eph. vi. 24). — ἦτω ἀνάθ.] i.e. then let him be one devoted to destruction (to the eternal ἀπώλεια). See on Rom. ix. 3; Gal. i. 8. — μαρπαναθά] energetic reference to the Parousia, at which that ἦτω ἀνάθ. shall be realized. The word is the Aramaic מָרְנָא מָרְנָא, i.e. our Lord is come, by which, however, not the coming in the flesh is meant, as Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Jerome, Erasmus, Castalio, al., assume,² but, in accordance with the context (see previously ἥτω ἀνάθ.), the eschatological coming to judgment. Paul sees the near and certain Parousia as if already begun (see on this use of the Hebrew praeterite, Ewald, Lehrb. 135. 3), and exclaims, like a prophet beholding it in vision: Our Lord is here! But it is not a form of putting under ban (see Lightfoot, Hor. p. 260), as indeed it does not occur in the Rabbinical writings; Luther (comp. Calvin) has without any warrant made it into Maharam Motha (which would be מחרם מוֹתָא, maledictus ad mortem). According to Hofmann, μαρναθά is meant to be equivalent to מִרְאֲנָתָהּ, Thou art the Lord, whereby the thought is expressed: "He will prove Himself in them to be Lord." But how needless is this wholly novel and far less characteristic interpretation! The traditional interpretation,¹ on the other hand, places the punishment of the judgment directly before our eyes. Why, we may ask further, did Paul use the Aramaean expression? We do not know. Perhaps there was implied in it some reminiscence from the time of the apostle's presence among them, unknown to us, but carrying weight for his readers; perhaps it was only the prompting of momentary indignation, that, after the sentence of judgment already pronounced (ἥτω ἀνάθεμα), "rei gravitate commotus, quasi sibi non satisfecisset" (Calvin), he desired to clothe in truly solemn language the threatening reference to the Parousia yet to be added by μαρναθά, instead of saying ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν ἦκει. That there was a reference, however, in the Aramaean expression to the Petrine party who understood Hebrew, is not to be assumed (in opposition to Hofmann), as the general εἴ τις οὐ φιλεῖ τ. κύριον shows of itself. The two Aramaean words were doubtless enough intelligible generally in the mixed church, which contained so much of the Jewish element. Had the Maranatha, however, been as it were the mysterious watchword in the world of that time (Ewald), there

² Paul, they hold, means thereby to say: "Quod superfluum sit adversus eum (Christum) odiis pertinacibus contendere, quem venisse jam constet," Jerome, Ep. 137 ad Marcell.; or: he means thereby to put them to shame, because they still continued in their sins after the Lord had shown such condescension, Chrysostom; or,

"quandoquidem aversatur eum, a quo solo poterat consequi salutem, et venisse negat quem constat venisse magno bono credentium, sed magno malo incredulorum," Erasmus, Paraphr.; or, "quod si quis eum non amat, frustra alium expectat," Castalio.

¹ Even those codd. which have written the word in a divided way, have the division not μαρ αναθα, but μαραν αθα. So already B. And the versions, too (those which do not with the Vulgate retain it untranslated), translate according to this division; so already the Peshito: Dominus noster venit. Cod. It. g.: in adventu Domini.

would be in all probability more traces of it to be found in the New Testament. This also in opposition to Bengel. The view of Chrysostom and Theophylact is singularly absurd: Paul wished by the Aramaean to cross the conceit of the Corinthians in the Hellenic language and wisdom. Billroth, followed by Rückert, holds that he had added something in Aramaic also, in order to accredit yet more strongly the authenticity of the Epistle, but that this had afterwards been written by the transcribers in Greek letters. But the assumption that he had not written μαρναθά in Greek letters, although it has passed over so into all Greek MSS. of the text, is equally arbitrary with the presupposition that he had thought such an extraordinary and peculiar mode of attestation to be needful precisely in the case of this Epistle, which was already sufficiently accredited without it by the bearers. — Ver. 23. The grace of the Lord, etc., sc. εἰη, the apostle's most common closing wish in an epistle, Rom. xvi. 20, 24; Gal. vi. 18; Phil. iv. 23; 1 Thess. v. 28; 2 Thess. iii. 18; Philem. 25. — Ver. 24. My love, etc., sc. ἔστι: his heart impels him still to add this assurance at the very end, all the more because the divisions, immoralities, and disorders in the church had forced from him such severe rebukes and, even now, such corrective appeals. He loves them, and loves them all. If taken as optative (Luther, Estius, Ewald), it would be less suitably an indirect admonition, namely, that they might so conduct themselves that, etc. — ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ] Christ is his whole life-sphere; in it he loves also. His love has thus the distinctively Christian character, in contrast to all κοσμικὴ ἀγάπη (Theophylact).

SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS.

§ 1.—OCCASION, AIM, AND CONTENTS OF THE EPISTLE.¹

BEFORE the composition of our first Epistle, Paul had sent Timothy to Corinth (1 Cor. iv. 17); he assumed, in regard to him, that he would arrive there later than the Epistle (1 Cor. xvi. 10 f.), and he might therefore expect from him accounts of the impression which it made, and its result. Certainly Timothy is again with Paul, while he is composing the second Epistle (2 Cor. i. 1); but there is no mention of news brought by him. Hence Eichhorn was of opinion (also Rübiger and Hofmann) that he had again left Corinth even before the arrival of our first Epistle in that city; others, however (Ziegler, Bertholdt, Neander, Credner, Rückert, de Wette, Reuss, Maier), assumed that he had not come to Corinth at all, but had returned from Macedonia, where he had made too long a stay, to Ephesus (Acts xix. 22).² But against the latter view may be urged the fact that, according to 1 Cor. iv. 17, Timothy was quite distinctly delegated to Corinth, i.e. was commissioned to visit Corinth from Macedonia (comp.

² Chap. xii. 17, 18 is also quoted in confirmation of this view; for, it is said, if Timothy had come to Corinth, Paul could not but have mentioned him here. See especially, Rückert, p. 409. But Paul may, during the time when he was not at Corinth himself, have sent to the church there many a one whom he does not here name. He names only the last, Titus. Besides, Timothy was in fact joint-writer of our Epistle.

Acts xix. 22); hence we are not justified in believing that he left this apostolic mission unfulfilled, or that Paul himself had cancelled it, otherwise we should necessarily expect the apostle in this second Epistle to have explained to his readers why Timothy did not come, especially as the anti-Pauline party would not have failed to turn the non-appearance of Timothy to account for their hostile ends (comp. i. 17). Eichhorn's opinion presupposes that the bearers of the first letter lingered on the journey (1 Cor. xvi. 17), which there is the less ground to assume as these men presumably had no other aim than to return from Ephesus to Corinth. In opposition to the opinions that Timothy did not get so far as Corinth, or that he left it again prematurely, compare, in general, Klöpper, p. 4 ff. It must therefore be held that Paul had received from Timothy news of the impression which the former Epistle had made. The fact that he makes no mention of this is explained from the circumstance that, in i. 1, Timothy himself appears as joint-sender of the Epistle; whence not only was it obvious to the reader that Timothy on his return had made communications to the apostle, but it would have been unbecoming and awkward if Paul had said that he had received from Timothy accounts of the result of his Epistle. For these accounts, viz. those of the first impression made by the letter, must have been by no means tranquillizing for Paul (ii. 12, vii. 5 ff.). It is true that in Phil. ii. 19 the joint-sender of the letter is named as a third person, but there the state of the case is quite different (in opposition to Hofmann), namely, a special recommendation of Timothy, just as the relation of the apostle himself to the church in Philippi with which he was so affectionately intimate was very diverse from that in which he stood to the Corinthians.

But besides Timothy, Titus also at a later period brought to the apostle, who meanwhile had travelled by way of Troas to Macedonia, intelligence of the result of his letter (ii. 12, vii. 5 ff.). Paul had delegated the latter to Corinth after our first Epistle,¹

¹ Schrader, indeed (l. pp. 137, 262), and Billroth, to whose view Rückert also inclines, have assumed that Titus was sent to Corinth before our first Epistle, perhaps with the one now lost, and on account of the matter of the collection, and that he was therefore in that city when our first Epistle arrived there. But in that case Paul would have mentioned Titus in his first Epistle (especially xvi. 1 ff.), just as he and after Timothy had again arrived in Ephesus from the journey mentioned in 1 Cor. xvi. 10 f., comp. iv. 17; and it is natural that from Titus he should have received further (as also more tranquillizing) intelligence than from Timothy, because the former came later to Corinth.

The occasion of our Epistle, which Titus was to bear (viii. 6), was therefore given by the accounts which first of all Timothy, but mainly Titus, had brought regarding the effect produced by the previous letter on the dispositions and relations of the Corinthian church.

REMARK.—The special object that Paul had in sending Titus to Corinth we do not know; for viii. 6 does not refer to this journey (see vv. 23, 24), but to the later, second journey, in which this Epistle itself was entrusted to him. The supposition of Eichhorn, Bertholdt, Neander, de Wette, and some others, that the apostle had despatched Titus out of anxiety about the impression which his first Epistle might make on the Corinthians, is a conjecture which receives some probability from ii. 12, vii. 5 ff., especially if we suppose that, before Titus was sent off, Timothy had returned with very disquieting news. Bleek (in the Stud. u. Krit. 1830, p. 625 ff., and in his Introduction) supposes, and Credner (Einleit. I. 2, p. 371), Olshausen, Neander, Hilgenfeld (Zeitschr. 1864, p. 167), Beyschlag (in the Stud. u. Krit. 1865, p. 253), and Klöpffer (l.c. p. 3 ff.) agree with him, that Paul, after Timothy's return, sent to the Corinthians by Titus a letter of very strong reproof (which is now lost). But our first Epistle contained enough—especially after Timothy had already brought with him disquieting news—to excite in Paul apprehensions regarding the severity of his letter (i. 15 ff., iii. 2, 3, iv. 8, 18–21, v. 1 ff., vi. 8, xi. 17 ff., al.), enough to be used by the evil-disposed in bringing a charge of boastfulness (ii. 16, iv. 1 ff., ix., xiv. 18, xv. 8, 10, al.); while the second Epistle contains nothing which required Bleek's supposition to explain it, as will appear at such passages as ii. 3, 4 ff., vii. 8, 11, 14, al.; see in general, in opposition to Bleek's hypothesis, Müller, de tribus Pauli itineribus, p. 34 ff.; Wurm, in the Tüb.

mentions Timothy; and at least a greeting to him would not have been forgotten. Billroth thinks that Paul had probably already in the lost Epistle said enough in recommendation of Titus. But does this make a greeting in the Epistle that follows superfluous? Rückert says that the bearers of our first Epistle had perhaps brought with them a special letter to Titus, or instructions by word of mouth, which, however, is a mere conjecture to which he is constrained to resort. Müller also, De trib. Pauli itineribus Corinth. susceptis, Bas. 1831, agrees with Schrader, without, however, admitting the loss of an Epistle, at 1 Cor. v. 9.

Zeitschr. 1833, 1, p. 66 ff.; Wieseler, Chronol. des apost. Zeitalt. p. 366 ff.; Baur, Hofmann, and others. According to Ewald, as he has more precisely defined and modified (Sendschr. des Ap. Paulus, p. 224 ff.¹) his earlier hypothetical arrangement (Jahrb. II. p. 227 f.), the position of things in Corinth after our first Epistle had in part been aggravated, especially by a Petrine opponent of Paul from Jerusalem; Paul had got information of this from Timothy on his return and otherwise, and had himself made a short journey from Ephesus to Corinth in order to restore harmony to the church; after his departure, being calumniated and slandered anew (especially by a member of very high repute), he then sent from Ephesus a very severe letter by Titus to Corinth; and this letter, which has not been preserved to us, brought the church to bethink itself, as he learned from Titus, who joined him in Macedonia. On this account, and also because there still remained various evils to be rectified, he at last wrote our second Epistle to the Corinthians, and had it sent likewise by means of Titus. A supposition of this kind is necessary, if the person mentioned in ii. 5 ff. cannot be the one guilty of incest in 1 Cor. v. But see on ii. 5-11; and for the supposed intermediate journey to Corinth, see § 2, remark.

The aim of the Epistle is stated by Paul himself at xiii. 10, viz. to put the church before his arrival in person into that frame of mind, which it was necessary that he should find, in order that he might thereupon set to work among them, not with stern corrective authority, but for their edification. But in order to attain this aim, he had to make it his chief task to elucidate, confirm, and vindicate his apostolic authority, which, in consequence of his former letter, had been assailed still more vehemently, openly, and influentially by opponents. For, if that were regained, his whole influence would be regained; if the church were again confirmed on this point, and the opposition defeated, every hindrance to his successful personal labour amongst them would be removed. With the establishment of his apostolic character and reputation he is therefore chiefly occupied in the whole Epistle; everything else is only subordinate, including a detailed appeal respecting the collection.

As to contents, the whole falls, after the salutation and introduction, into three parts: I. Paul sets forth his apostolic character and course of life, and interweaves with it affectionate outpourings of his heart over the impression produced by his former letter,—an ingenious apology, closing with expressions of praise and confidence,¹ chap. i.—vii. II. Regarding the collection, chap. viii. ix. III. Polemical assertion of his apostolic dignity against its opponents, with some irritation, and even not without sarcasm and bitterness, but forcible and triumphant. Conclusion.

REMARK 1.—The excitement and varied play of emotion with which Paul wrote this letter, probably also in haste, certainly make the expression not seldom obscure and the sentences less flexible, but only heighten our admiration of the great delicacy, skill, and power with which this outpouring of Paul's spirit and heart, possessing as a defence of himself a high and peculiar interest, flows and gushes on, till finally, in the last part, wave on wave overwhelms the hostile resistance. In reference to this, Erasmus aptly says, in the dedication of his Paraphr.: "Sudatur ab eruditissimis viris in explicandis poetarum ac rhetorum consiliis, at in hoc rhetore longe plus sudoris est, ut deprehendas quid agat, quo tendat, quid vetet; adeo stropharum plenus est undique, absit invidia verbis. Tanta vafricies est, non credas eundem hominem loqui. Nunc ut limpidus quidam fons sensim ebullit, mox torrentis in morem ingenti fragore devolvitur, multa obiter secum rapiens, nunc placide leniterque fluit, nunc late, velut in lacum diffusus, exspatiatur. Rursum alicubi se condit, ac diverso loco subitus emicat, cum visum est, miris Maeandris nunc has nunc illas lambit ripas, aliquoties procul digressus, reciprocato flexu in sese redit."²

REMARK 2.—The opponents specially combated from chap. x. onwards, were at any rate Judaists (xi. 22; Rübiger, p. 191 ff.; Neander), and therefore, from a party point of view, to be reckoned as belonging to the Petrine section. It is only the Petrine, and not the Christine party (Schenkel, Goldhorn, Kniewel, Baur, de Wette, Thiersch, Osiander, Beyschlag, Hilgenfeld, Klöpper), that suits the character of disputing, directly and specially, the apostolic authority of Paul, whether we regard the Christines as a party by themselves, or, with Baur (see on 1 Cor. i. 12), as part of the Petrines.

REMARK 3.—The division of the Epistle into two halves, separate in point of time, so that the part up to vii. 1 was written before the arrival of Titus, and the part from vii. 2 onwards after it (Wieseler, p. 356 ff.), cannot be justified either exegetically or psychologically on the ground of vii. 6; while, on the ground of ii. 12-14, it can only be regarded as exegetically inadmissible.

² We may confidently apply to our Epistle what Dionysius, De admir. vi dic. in Dem. 3, says of Demosthenes' mode of speaking, which he calls: μεγαλοπρσιῇ, λιτῇ, περιττῇ, ἀπίρρτον· ἱξηλλαγμίνην, συνήθη· πανηγυρικῇ, ἀλκθινῇ· αὐστηρᾶν, ἰλαρὰν· εὐντοσον, ἀνιμίνην· ἠδίαν, πικρὰν· ἠδικῇ, παθητικῇ.

§ 2.—PLACE, TIME, GENUINENESS AND UNITY.

When Paul wrote this letter, he was no longer in Ephesus (i. 8), but had already arrived by way of Troas in Macedonia (ii. 13, vii. 5, viii. 1, ix. 2, comp. Acts xx. 1), where Titus, whom he had already expected with longing in Troas (ii. 12), returned to him. A more precise specification of the place (the subscriptions in B and in many later codd., also in the Peshito, name Philippi) cannot be made good. The date of composition appears to be the same year, 58 (yet not before the month Tisri, see on viii. 10), in which, shortly before Easter, he had written our First Epistle, and after Pentecost had left Ephesus (see Intro. to 1 Cor. § 3). Paul at that time intended to come to Corinth for the third time, as he actually did soon after his letter to his readers (Acts xx. 2).

REMARK.—From ii. 1, xii. 14, 21, xiii. 1, 2, it follows of necessity that Paul, before he wrote his Epistles to the Corinthians, had been in Corinth, not once only, on the occasion when he founded the church (as Reiche in his Comment. crit. seeks again to establish), but twice. For in xiii. 1, τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι cannot mean, "I am now on the point of coming for the third time:" hence also xiii. 2 must be understood of a second visit which had already taken place; in ii. 1 and xii. 21, ἐν λύπῃ and ταπεινώσει (which latter is to be connected with πάλιν) cannot refer to the first visit; and finally, in xii. 14, τρίτον must belong to ἔλθεῖν, not to ἐτοίμως ἔχω, as is made certain by the context (see the commentary on these passages). With justice, therefore, has this view been maintained, after Chrysostom, Oecumenius, and Theophylact, by Erasmus, Baronius, Mill, Michaelis, and others, and recently by Schrader, Bleek (in the Stud. u. Krit. 1830, p. 614 ff.), Müller (Diss. de trib. Pauli itineribus Corinthum, etc., Basil. 1831), Schott (Erört. einiger wicht. chronol. Punkte, p. 51 ff.), Schneckenburger (Beitr. p. 166), Wurm, Anger (rat. temp. p. 70 ff.), Billroth, Credner, Olshausen, Rückert, Wieseler, Reuss, Osiander, Hofmann, and others. See the commentary in opposition to the explaining away of these passages, according to which "the third journey of Paul to Corinth is a fiction" (Lange, apost. Zeitalt. I. p. 199; comp. Baur in the theol. Jahrb. 1850, 2, p. 139 ff., and in his Paulus, I. p. 339 ff., ed. 2). But it cannot be definitely decided whether the second journey to Corinth is to be placed in the time of the three years' stay at Ephesus (Schrader, Billroth, Olshausen, Rückert, Wieseler, Reuss, and Hofmann; Bleek is also inclined to this), or whether it is to be considered only as the return from a longer excursion during the eighteen months' stay in Corinth (Baronius, Michaelis, Schmidt, Schott, Anger; favoured by Bleek; comp. Neander on ii. 1); for ἵνα δευτέραν χάριν ἔχητε, in i. 15, testifies neither for nor against either of these views (see on this passage). Still by that very circumstance the latter view loses its support, and has, besides, against it the point that, as the first and third journeys were special journeys to Corinth, so also his second journey, to which he refers by τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι, and the like, is most naturally to be regarded as a special journey, and not as a mere return from a wider excursion. See, moreover, Wieseler, p. 239. The proposal to place the second journey to Corinth between our first and a lost Epistle which preceded our second (Ewald, see § 1), finds, apart altogether from the lost letter being an hypothesis, no sufficient confirmation in the passages concerned, ii. 1, xii. 14, xiii. 1 f., and has i. 23 (οὐκίτι) against it; comp. 1 Cor. xvi. 5 ff. and 2 Cor. i. 15 f.

The genuineness of our Epistle (see, after less certain indications in the apostolic Fathers and Justin, Irenaeus, Hacr. ii. 7. 1, iv. 28. 3; Athenagoras, de resurr. p. 61, ed. Col.; Clement, Strom. iv. p. 514, ed. Sylb.; Tertullian, de pudic. 13) is as internally certain and as unanimously attested and undisputed as that of the first; in fact, we need hardly notice, even historically, the strange theory invented by Bolten and Bertholdt, that it was translated (by Timothy) from the Aramaic.

The unity of the Epistle has been contested by Semler and Weber; while it has been most arbitrarily cut up into three letters by Weisse (see his Beitr. u. Krit. d. Paul. Br., edited by Sulze, p. 9). Semler (see Keggemann, praes. Semler, de duplici ep. ad Rom. append., Hal. 1767, and Semler, Paraphr. 1776) cuts it up into the following three letters: (1) chap. i. viii., Rom. xvi., and 2 Cor. xiii. 11–13; (2) x. 1–xiii. 10; (3) chap. ix., as a special leaf which was intended, not for Corinth, but for the Christians in Achaia. In opposition to this, see Gabler, de capp. ult. ix.–xiii. poster. ep. P. ad Cor. ab eadem haud separand., Gött. 1782. Weber (de numero epp. P. ad Cor. rectius constituendo, 1798) was of opinion that there were originally two letters:—(1) chap. i.–ix. and xiii.

11-13; (2) chap. x. 1-xiii. 10. Similarly, also, von Greeve (in Royards de altera P. ad Cor. ep., Traj. ad Rhen. 1818), who, however, considers as the first letter only chap. i.-viii. In opposition to these attempts at dismemberment may be urged not only the whole body of the critical witnesses, but also the certainty that the abruptness of chap. ix. is only apparent, and that the contrasting tone of chap. x.-xiii. is easily explained¹ by the altered mood of the apostle.—With regard to the originality of vi. 14-vii. 1, see on vi. 12, remark.

¹ Hug, Einl. II. § 108, says very pertinently: "Who would on that account break up the speech of Demosthenes pro Corona into two parts, because in the more general vindication calm and caution prevail; whereas, in heaping shame and castigation on the informer, in the parallel between him and Aeschines, words of bitter mockery gush forth impetuously like a thunder-shower."

The latter is defended most thoroughly by Reiche, Comment. crit. I. p. 318 ff. But the former, sufficiently attested, appears to be the original, in so far as from it the rise of the others is easily and naturally explained. An immediate transition was made from the first παρακλ. to the second; the intermediate words were left out, and brought in again afterwards at wrong places, so that the corruption of the text proceeded thus:—1. Original form of ver. 6 as in Griesb. 2. First corruption: εἴτε δὲ θλιβόμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως, τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ὑπομ. τῶν αὐτῶν παθημ. ὧν κ. ἡμεῖς πάσχομεν· καὶ ἡ ἐλπίς ἡμῶν βεβαία ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν. 3. Erroneous restoration: εἴτε δὲ θλιβόμεθα . . . ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν· εἴτε παρακαλούμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλ. This alteration was the more natural, as the two definitions δι' αὐτοῦ and δι' ἡμῶν might seem not to accord. The liturgical reference of the ἀμήν does not appear a sufficient occasion for the insertion of διό, nor for the change from ἐν αὐτῷ into δι' αὐτοῦ, particularly after the ἐν αὐτῷ which went before and was left unglossed. This in opposition to Fritzsche, de conform. Lachm. p. 56, and Reiche, Comment. crit. I. 331 ff.

Vv. 1, 2. Address and greeting. — διὰ θελ. Θεοῦ] See on 1 Cor. i. 1. — καὶ Τιμόθ.] His relation to this Epistle is the same as that of Sosthenes to the first Epistle: he appears, not as amanuensis, but as (subordinate) joint-sender of it. See on 1 Cor. i. 1. — ὁ ἀδελφ.] as at 1 Cor. i. 1. — σὺν τοῖς ἀγίοις πᾶσι κ.τ.λ.] Grotius: "Voluit P. exempla hujus epistolae mitti ad alias in Achaia ecclesias." So also Rosenmüller, Emmerling, and others. But, in that case, would not Paul have rather written σὺν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις πάσαις? Comp. Gal. i. 2. And are the contents of the Epistle suited for an encyclical destination? No; he means, in agreement with 1 Cor. i. 2, the Christians living outside of Corinth, scattered through Achaia, who attached themselves to the church-community in Corinth, which must therefore have been the sole seat of a church—the metropolis of the Christians in the province. The state of matters in Galatia was different. — Under Achaia we must, according to the sense then attached to it, understand Hellas and Peloponnesus. This province and that of Macedonia comprehended all Greece. See on Acts xviii. 12. — Ver. 2. See on Rom. i. 7.

Vv. 3-11. A conciliatory introduction,—an effusion of affectionate emotion (comp. Eph. i. 3) out of the fulness of special and still recent experience. There is no hint of a set purpose in it; and it is an arbitrary supposition, whether the purpose be found in an excuse for the delay of his journey (Chrysostom, Theophylact), or in a confirmation of his apostolic standing (Beza, comp. Calovius, Mosheim), or in an attestation of the old love, which Paul presupposes also on the part of the readers (Billroth), and at the same time in a slight alienation which had been suggested by his sufferings (Osiander).

Ver. 3. Ὁ Θεὸς κ. πατ. κ.τ.λ.] God, who is at the same time father of Jesus Christ. See on 1 Cor. xv. 24; Rom. xv. 6. Against the connection of τοῦ κυρίου κ.τ.λ. also with ὁ Θεός (Hofmann), see on Eph. i. 3. — ὁ πατὴρ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν אֲבִי הַרַחֲמִים, i.e. the Father, whose fatherly frame of mind and disposition is compassionateness,—the compassionate Father (μάλιστα ἰδίου Θεοῦ καὶ ἐξαίρετον καὶ τῇ φύσει συγκεκληρωμένον, Chrysostom). Comp. on 1 Cor. ii. 8 and Eph. i. 17. It is the qualitative genitive, such as we find in the language of the Greek poets (Seidl. ad Electr. 651; Herm. ad Viger. p. 890 f.). Rückert (comp. before him Theodoret) takes it as the genitivus effecti: "The Father from whom all compassion comes" (comp. xiii. 11; Rom. xv. 5, 13, al.). But, since οἰκτιρμοί (comp. Plato, Polit. p. 305 B) is the subjective compassion (Tittm. Synon. 69 f.), it would have to be explained: "The Father who works in us compassion, sympathy," and this sense would be altogether unsuitable to the connection. On the contrary, τῶν οἰκτιρμ. is the specific quality of the Father, which dwells in Him just as the Father of Christ, and in consequence of which He is also Θεὸς πάσης παρακλ.; and this genitive is that of the effect which issues from the Merciful One: "The compassionate Father and God who worketh every consolation." This rendering, differing from that of the first genitive, is demanded by ver. 4 (in opposition to Hofmann); comp. vii. 6; Rom. xv. 5. As to οἰκτιρμοί, see on Rom. xii. 1. Observe that the characteristic appellation of God in this passage is an artless outflow of the experience, which was still fresh in the pious heart of the apostle, vv. 8--10.

Ver. 4. Ἡμᾶς] Where Paul in this Epistle does not mean himself exclusively, but wishes to include Timothy also (or others, according to the context), although often only as quite subordinate, he speaks in the plural. He does not express himself communicative, but in the singular, where he gives utterance to his own personal conviction or, in general, to anything concerning himself individually (vv. 13, 15, 17, 23, ii. 1--10, 12, 13, vii. 4, 7 ff., al.). Hence the frequent interchange between the singular and plural forms of expression.¹—Chrysostom already gives the force of the present παρακαλῶν correctly: ὅτι οὐχ ἅπαξ, οὐδὲ δις, ἀλλὰ διηνεκῶς τοῦτο ποιεῖ . . . διὸ εἶπεν ὁ παρακαλῶν, οὐχ ὁ παρακαλέσας. — ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ θλίψει] concerning all our affliction. The collective sufferings are regarded as one whole. Afterwards, on the other hand, ἐν πάσῃ θλ.: in every affliction. ἐπὶ marks the ethical foundation, i.e. here the cause, on account of which. See Matthiae, p. 1373. Comp. 2 Macc. vii. 5 f.; Deut. xxxii. 36. According to Rück., παρακαλ.

denotes the delivering, and hence he takes ἐπί of the circumstances: in. See Matthiae, p. 1370. But throughout the passage παρακ. means to comfort; and it is quite an open question, how the comforting takes place, whether by calming or by delivering. God did both in the apostle's case. — εἰς τὸ δύνασθαι κ.τ.λ.] in order that we may be able, etc. For he, who for himself received comfort from God, is by his experience placed in the position of being able to comfort others. And how important was this teleological view of his own sorrows for the apostolic calling! "Omnia sua P. ad utilitatem ecclesiae refert," Grotius. — τοὺς ἐν πάσῃ θλίψει] is erroneously and arbitrarily taken as equivalent to πάντας τοὺς ἐν θλίψει (see Emmerling, Flatt, Rückert). It means: those to be found in every trouble, the all-distressed; not: those to be found in whatever sort of trouble (Hofmann), but ἐν παντὶ θλιβόμενοι, iv. 8, vii. 5. — διὰ τῆς παρακλ. κ.τ.λ.] i.e. through communication of our own comfort, which we experience from God. This more precise determination of the sense is demanded both by the preceding mention of the purpose εἰς τὸ δύνασθαι κ.τ.λ., and by the αὐτοί. Olshausen, it is true, holds that Paul conceives the comfort to be a real power of the Spirit, which may again be conveyed to others by the receiver. But there is no analogy in the whole N. T. for this conception; for Matt. x. 13 is merely a concrete illustration of the efficacy or non-efficacy of the εἰρήνη ὑμῖν. — ἤς] Attracted, as in Eph. i. 6, iv. 1, because one can say παράκλησιν παρακαλεῖν. See Gieseler in Rosenmüller, Repert. II. p. 124; Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 247 [E. T. 287]. The attracted genitive instead of the dative in other cases is very rare. See Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. ii. 2. 5. — αὐτοί] ipsi, for our own selves, in contrast to the others to be comforted.

Ver. 5. Ground assigned for the ἡς παρακαλούμεθα αὐτοὶ ὑπὸ τ. Θεοῦ. — περισσεύει εἰς ἡμᾶς] is abundant in relation to us, i.e. it is imparted to us above measure, in a very high degree. Comp. Rom. v. 15. — τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ] are not the sufferings for Christ's sake (so Pelagius and most), which cannot be expressed by the simple genitive, but the sufferings of Christ (Winer, Billroth, Olshausen, Neander, Ewald, Hofmann), in so far as every one who suffers for the gospel suffers the same in category as Christ suffered. Comp. Matt. xx. 22; Phil. iii. 10; Col. i. 24; Heb. xiii. 13; 1 Pet. iv. 13. See also on Rom. viii. 17. Hence

Cornelius a Lapide, Leun, and Rückert render correctly in substance: “quales passus est Christus.” But Chrysostom, Theophylact, Oecumenius, Beza, Calovius, and others are wrong, who render: “the sufferings, which Christ endures in His members ;” comp. de Wette and Osiander. For the conception of a Christ continuing to suffer in His members is nowhere found in the N. T., not even in Acts ix. 4, and is contrary to the idea of His exaltation. See on Col. i. 24. — διὰ τοῦ Χ.] through His indwelling by means of the Spirit. See Rom. viii. 9, 10; Eph. iii. 17; Col. i. 29, al.

Vv. 6, 7. Δεῖ] leading on to the gain, which the two, this affliction and this comforting, bring to the readers.—Be it that we are afflicted, we are afflicted for the sake of YOUR consolation and salvation; it redounds to this, that you are to be comforted and advanced in the attainment of Messianic salvation. In how far? According to Erasmus, Calvin, Estius, Calovius, Wetstein, and many, including Rosenmüller, Flatt, Emmerling, Reiche: through the example of the apostle in his confidence toward God, etc. But the context has as little of this as of what is imported by Billroth and Olshausen: “in so far as I suffer in the service of the gospel, through which comfort and salvation come to you;” so also Hofmann. Rückert, without ground, gives up all attempt at explanation. Paul himself has given the explanation in ver. 4 by εἰς τὸ δύνασθαι ἡμᾶς παρακαλεῖν κ.τ.λ. Hence the sense of the definition of the aim ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλ. κ. σωτ.: “in order that we may be enabled to comfort you, when ye come into affliction, and to further your salvation.” For this end we are put in a position by experience of suffering, as well as by that, which is its other side, by our experience of comfort in the school of suffering (εἴτε παρακαλούμεθα κ.τ.λ.). — ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμ. παρακλ. τῆς ἐνεργ. κ.τ.λ.] i.e. in order to be able to give you the comfort, which is efficacious, etc. Paul does not again add κ. σωτηρίας here, because he has still to append to παρακλήσεως a more precise and detailed explanation, after which it was impracticable to bring in καὶ σωτηρίας; and it could be left out all the more readily, as it did not belong essentially to the representation. — τῆς ἐνεργουμ. ἐν ὑπομ. κ.τ.λ.] which is efficacious in patient endurance of the same sufferings, which we also suffer. ἐνεργουμ., as in the whole N. T. (iv. 12; Rom. vii. 5; Gal. v. 6; Eph. iii. 20;

Col. i. 29 ; 1 Thess. ii. 13 ; 2 Thess. ii. 7 ; Jas. v. 16), is middle, not passive (3 Esdr. ii. 20 ; Polyb. i. 13. 5, ix. 12. 3), as it is here erroneously taken by Oecumenius, Theophylact, Castalio, Piscator, Calvin, Grotius, Estius, and others, including Rosenmüller, Emmerling, Billroth, Rückert, Ewald.¹ For the distinction between active (personal efficacy) and middle in Paul, see Winer, p. 242 [E. T. 323]. — ἐν ὑπομονῇ] denotes that by virtue of providing which the παράκλησις is efficacious. It is therefore the working of the Christian παράκλησις, which we experience when ἡ θλίψις ὑπομονὴν κατεργάζεται, Rom. v. 3. — τῶν αὐτῶν παθημάτων, ὧν κ.τ.λ.] in so far, namely, as they are likewise sufferings of Christ. The sufferings appointed to the readers are meant, which do not differ in kind from the sufferings of Paul (and Timothy) (ὧν κ. ἡμεῖς πάσχομεν). Billroth, Olshausen, Neander understand the sufferings of the apostle himself, in so far as these were jointly felt by all believers as their own in virtue of their fellowship of love with him. Compare Chrysostom on ver. 7, also de Wette, who refers it partly to the foreboding, partly to the sympathetic joint-suffering. But, then, Paul would have been utterly illogical in placing the καί before ἡμεῖς; for it would, in fact, be sufferings which the readers also had suffered (with Paul through their loving sympathy). How erroneous this exposition is, is shown, besides, by ver. 4. It does not appear from this passage, we may add, that at that time the Corinthians had otherwise to endure affliction for the gospel's sake. Paul has rather in view the case of such affliction occurring in the future, as the following καὶ ἡ ἐλπὶς κ.τ.λ. proves. Comp. on xiii. 11. — καὶ ἡ ἐλπ. ἡμ. βεβ. ὑπ. ὑμ.] is not to be placed in a parenthesis, with Griesbach and others, since εἰδότες is connected not with πάσχομεν, but with ἡ ἐλπὶς ἡμῶν. The contents of ver. 6, namely, is not the expression of a present experience undergone by the readers, but the expression of good hope as to the readers for the future, that what is said by εἴτε δὲ θλιβόμεθα . . . πάσχομεν will be verified in their case in afflictions which would come on them for Christ's sake, so that they would in that case obtain from the apostle, out of his experience of suffering and consolation, the comfort which through patience is efficacious in such sufferings. Therefore he continues: and our hope is firm on account of you. ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν does not belong either simply to ἡ ἐλπ. ὑμ., or simply to βεβαία (Billroth), but to the whole thought of ἡ ἐλπ. ὑμ. βεβ. On ὑπέρ, comp. Polyb. xi. 20. 6, xiv. 1. 5, and the contrary expression φοβεῖσθαι ὑπέρ τινος, propter aliquem in metu esse. — εἰδότες] refers, according to a common anacolouthon, to ἡ ἐλπίς ἡμ., in which ἡμεῖς is the logical subject.¹ See Stallbaum, ad Apol. p. 21 C, Phaedr. p. 241 D, Phaedo, p. 81 A; Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 49. Comp. on Eph. iv. 2; Col. ii. 2. It introduces the certainly on which rests the hope just expressed: for we know that you, as you are sharers of the sufferings, are sharers also of the consolation. To have a share in the sufferings, and also in the consolation, to be excepted neither from the one nor from the other, is the appointed lot of the Christian. Paul knows this in regard to his readers, and he grounds on it the firm hope for them, that if they shall have their share in bearing sufferings, they will in that case not lack the effectual consolation; to impart which consolation he is himself qualified (ver. 4) and destined (ver. 6) by his own experience of suffering and consolation. Accordingly, κοινωνοὶ κ.τ.λ. is contextually not to be explained of an ideal, sympathetic communion, and that in the sufferings and consolation of Paul (ὥσπερ γὰρ τὰ παθήματα τὰ ἡμέτερα ὑμέτερα εἶναι νομίζετε, οὕτω καὶ τὴν παράκλησιν τὴν ἡμετέραν ὑμετέραν, Chrysostom. Comp. Theodoret, Grotius, Billroth, Olshausen, and others), but τὰ παθήματα and ἡ παράκλησις are to be taken generically. In both kinds of experience the Christian has a share; he must suffer; but he is not excluded from the consolation, on the contrary, he partakes also in it.

Vv. 8–11. Out of his own (and Timothy's) experience of suffering and comfort, Paul now informs his readers of something special which had lately befallen the two in Asia. The fact in itself he assumes as known to them, but he desires to bring to their knowledge the consoling help of God in it. There is nothing to indicate a reference to an utterance of the church (Hofmann) concerning the event.

¹ With Lachmann's reading it is referred by Reiche and Ewald to the Corinthians (ὑμῶν): since you know, etc.

Ver. 8. Οὐ γ. θέλ. ὑμ. ἀγν.] See on Rom. i. 13, xi. 25; 1 Cor. xii. 1; 1 Thess. iv. 13. — ὑπὲρ τῆς θλίψ.] regarding (de) the affliction, concerning the same. See Bernhardy, p. 244; Kühner, II. § 547, 2. — ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ] as in 1 Cor. xvi. 19. What particular affliction is meant, and at what place it happened, we do not know. The readers, who must have known it, may have learnt it from Titus or otherwise. Perhaps it was the ἀντικείμενοι πολλοί, 1 Cor. xvi. 9, who had prepared for him the extraordinary trial. The tumult of Demetrius in Ephesus, Acts xix. 23 ff. (Theodoret, Calvin, Estius, Cornelius a Lapide, Michaelis, Vater, Schrader, Olshausen, Osiander, Ewald, and others), is not to be thought of, since Paul was not in personal danger there, Acts xix. 30, and immediately after the tumult set out on his journey to Greece, Acts xx. 1. Heumann, Emmerling, Rückert, Bisping, suggest a severe illness. Against this it may be urged that, according to ver. 5, it must have been a πάθημα τοῦ Χριστοῦ (for the special experience must be held as included under the general one previously spoken of), as well as that Paul speaks in the plural. Both grounds tell at the same time against Hofmann, who thinks of the shipwreck, xi. 25, to which, in fact, ἐν τ. Ἀσίᾳ, ver. 8, is not suitable, even if we ventured to make a mere stranding on the coast out of the incident. Besides, the reading ῥύεται, ver. 10, militates against this. — ὅτι καθ' ὑπερβ. κ.τ.λ.] that we were burdened to the uttermost beyond strength, a statement of that which, in regard to the affliction mentioned, is not to be withheld from the readers. καθ' ὑπερβολὴν defines the degree of ἔβαρ. ὑπὲρ δύναμ. See Fritzsche, Diss. I. p. 1 f. ("ut calamitates vires meas egregie superarent"). The view which regards the two expressions as co-ordinate (Chrysostom, Luther, Calvin, Estius, and many, including Flatt, Rückert, Osiander, Hofmann): so heavy that it went beyond our ability, would place alongside of each other the objective greatness of the suffering and its disproportion to the subjectivity (see de Wette): still the position of ἔβαρ., as well as the want of a καί before ὑπέρ, is more favourable to the view which takes ἔβαρ. ὑπ. δύν. together; and this is also confirmed by the subjectivity of the following ὥστε ἔξαπορ. κ.τ.λ. The suffering made itself palpable to him as a πειρασμός οὐκ ἀνθρώπινος (1 Cor. x. 13). Rückert, moreover, has no ground for thinking that ἐβαρήθ. is inappropriately used of persecutions, attempts to murder, and the like, and that ὑπὲρ δύναμιν is also opposed to it. βαρύς, βαρέω, and βαρύνω are used of all troubles by which we feel ourselves burdened. See the passages from Homer in Duncan, Lex., ed. Rost, p. 202; comp. Plat. Crit. p. 43 C; Soph. Trach. 151; Theocr. xvii. 61, and expressions like βαρύμοχος, βαρύποτος, βαρυνεuths, βαρυδαίμων, and the like. — ὥστε ἔξαπορ. κ.τ.λ.] so that we became quite perplexed even (καί) in regard to life, placed in the highest perplexity even with regard to the preservation of our life. ἐκ strengthens the simple verb, iv. 8. Polyb. i. 62. 1, iii. 47. 9, 48. 4. The genitive (τοῦ ζῆν) is the usual case in Greek with ἀπορεῖν, in the sense of having lack of something; seldom is it found in the sense of being perplexed about something (Dem. 1380, 4; Plat. Conv. p. 193 E).

Ver. 9. Ἀλλά] is the simple but, the contrast of the negation contained in ἔξαπορηθῆναι, which contrast, nevertheless, no longer depends on ὥστε: the independent position makes it all the weightier. There is therefore the less ground for taking ἀλλά as nay indeed, with Hofmann, and making it point to the following clause of purpose, whereby the chief clause αὐτοὶ κ.τ.λ. would be arbitrarily forced into a position logically subordinate—viz., “if we ourselves, etc., it was to serve to the end, that we,” etc. — αὐτοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς] for our own selves in our own consciousness—i.e. apart from what might take place from without, through divine interference, to cause a change in our position. This certainty in their own heart, however, could not but exclude all self-confidence; hence ἵνα μὴ πεποιθότες κ.τ.λ. — ἀπόκριμα] not equivalent to κατάκριμα (so most, following Hesychius), but to responsum (Vulgate, Billroth), the award, decision. Comp. ἀποκρισις. So in Suidas (see Wetstein) and Josephus, Antt. xiv. 17 (in Kypke). Chrysostom says well: τὴν ψῆφον, τὴν κρίσιν, τὴν προσδοκίαν τοιαύτην γὰρ ἡφίει τὰ πράγματα φωνήν τοιαύτην ἀποκρισιν ἐδίδον τὰ συμβάντα, ὅτι ἀποθανούμεθα πάντως.—As to ἐσχῆκ., observe the perfect habuimus, which represents the situation as present. Comp. on Rom. v. 2. — ἵνα μὴ κ.τ.λ.] divinely appointed aim of the αὐτοὶ . . . ἐσχῆκαμεν. Comp. 1 Cor. i. 15. — τῷ ἐγείροντι τοὺς νεκρ.] is to be referred not only to the future awaking of the dead, but to the awaking of the dead in general, as that which is exclusively God's doing. This characteristic of God is the ground of the confidence. For the awaker of the dead must also be able to rescue from the danger of death (ver. 10). Comp. Rom. iv. 17; Heb. xi. 19. See on Rom. l.c. "Mira natura fidei in summis difficultatibus nullum exitum habere visis," Bengel. Hence Paul, in spite of the human ἐξαπορηθῆναι, ver. 8, could yet say of himself, iv. 8: οὐκ ἐξαπορούμενοι.

Ver. 10. Result of this confidence, as well as the hope grounded thereon for the future. — ἐκ τηλικ. θανάτου] out of so great death. Paul realizes to himself the special so mighty death-power which had threatened him (and Timothy), and by the expression ῥύεσθαι ἐκ θανάτου (see examples in Wetstein, p. 178) makes death appear as a hostile power by which he had been encompassed. Θάνατος does not signify peril of death (as most say, even Emmerling and Flatt), but it represents that sense. Comp. xi. 23. — καὶ ῥύεται] The θλίψις, which had been survived in Asia, therefore still continued in its after-effects, which even extended over to Macedonia (perhaps by continued plots against their lives), and Paul and Timothy were still continuing¹ to experience the rescuing power of God. — ἡλπικαμεν] have set our hope. See Herm. ad Viger. p. 748; Kühner, II. p. 71; comp. 1 Cor. xv. 19; 1 Tim. v. 5, vi. 17; John vi. 45. — ὅτι κ. ἔτι ῥύσεται] that he will rescue (us) even further, namely, ἐκ τηλικ. θανάτου, in the continuing danger from the Asiatic enemies which was still to be apprehended in the future. In the fact that Paul speaks of a present, nay, of a future rescue, Rückert finds a support for his opinion regarding a dangerous illness (not yet fully overcome); see on ver. 8. But could no machinations pass over from Asia to Macedonia? and could not these be recognised by Paul as the more dangerous, in so far as they were more secret? Comp. Acts xx. 3.

Ver. 11. A trustful and conciliatory mention of the inter-

cessions of the readers. This is regarded as not so much conditioning (Erasmus, Rosenmüller, Rückert, and others), as rather furthering the καὶ ἔτι ῥύσεται: "he will also still save us, since ye also are helpful together for us," etc. On the idea of the efficacy of intercession, comp. especially Phil. i. 19; Rom. xv. 30 f.—The reference of the συν in συννποουργ. is to the apostle's own work of prayer, with which that of the readers is joined by way of help: similar help on the part of other churches is just hinted by the καὶ before ὑμῶν. — ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν] on our behalf. A transposition for τῇ δεήσει ὑπὲρ ἡμ. would indeed be grammatically possible (Bernhardy, p. 461), but is in the highest degree superfluous (in opposition to Erasmus, Grotius, Schulz, Rosenmüller). — ἵνα ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. κ.τ.λ.] divinely-appointed aim of the συννποουργ. κ.τ.λ. The correlations are to be noted: 1. ἐκ πολλῶν προσώπ. and τὸ εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρι.; 2. διὰ πολλῶν and ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν; 3. χάρισμα and εὐχαριστηθῇ. Accordingly, there stand parallel to one another ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. and then διὰ πολλῶν; as also τὸ εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρισμα and then ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν. Hence, it is to be connected and taken thus: that from many countenances for the gift of grace made to us thanks may be rendered by means of many on our behalf. Paul means that the thanksgiving for his (and Timothy's) rescue (i.e. *τὸ εἰς ἡμ. χάρι.*¹) is not to be offered to God by himself (and Timothy) alone, but that it is to be a rendering of thanks made for him by many through the mediation of many. The many are the same in ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. as in διὰ πολλῶν; but there they are conceived of as those who give thanks, and in διὰ π. as those who have been the procuring means of the thanksgiving, in so far as through their prayer they have aided in obtaining the apostle's rescue.² πρόσωπον, according to the use of the later Greek (see Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 380; Schweigh., Lex. Polyb. p. 540; Wahl, Clav. Apocr. p. 430), is taken as person by Luther and most others (already in codd. of the Italic version). But it is nowhere used thus in the N. T., not even in passages like Jude 16; and, if Paul had had person in mind, there would have been no motive for choosing ἐκ instead of ὑπό. Hence we must abide by the literal signification, countenance (Billroth, Ewald, Osiander, Hofmann): the expression ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. is pictorial, for on the merry countenance the feeling of gratitude is displayed (Prov. xv. 30); it is mirrored therein, and goes out from it and upward to God in the utterance of thanksgiving. Fritzsche, ad Rom. III. p. 53, in the same way rightly joins ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. as well as διὰ πολλ. with εὐχαρ., but he takes ἐκ πολλ. πρ. of those who have besought the rescue and have thereby become the causers of the thanksgiving, and διὰ πολλῶν of the thankgivers themselves. So also Neander. But by this view justice is not done to the mediating sense of διά, and the pictorial reference of προσώπων (see above) can, according to the text, be found only in the act of thanksgiving itself. It is obvious from what has already been said, that neither can διὰ πολλ. be joined to τὸ εἰς ἡμ. χάρισμα (Theophylact and others, Billroth, Olshausen, Osiander, Kling), nor can ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. be connected with τὸ εἰς ἡμ. χάρ. as if it stood: τὸ ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρισμα (Ambrosiaster, Valla, Beza, Calvin, Grotius, Estius, and many others, including Flatt, Fritzsche, Diss., Rückert, de Wette). Only on our view does the simple construction, as given by the order of the words, remain without dislocation, and the meaning of the words themselves uninjured. Whether, further, in ἐκ πολλ. προσώπ. the πολλῶν is masculine (Hofmann and Vulgate, "ex multorum facie") or neuter, cannot be decided. — ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν] on our behalf, superfluous in itself, but suitable to the fulness of the representation.—The time in which the thanksgiving is to happen is after the beginning of the ῥύσεται, not on the last day (Ewald).—The passive expression εὐχαριστεῖσθαι (comp. Hipp. Ep. p. 1284, 31) is conceived like ἀχαριστεῖσθαι (Polyb. xxiii. 11. 8), to experience ingratitude, to be recompensed with ingratitude. Comp. Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 130 [E. T. 148].

Ver. 12. The apostle now begins the vindication of himself, at first in reference to the purity of his walk in general (ver. 12), then in reference to his honesty in writing (vv. 13, 14), and afterwards specially in reference to the changing of his plans for the journey (vv. 15-24). — γάρ] Ground assigned for the confidence uttered in ver. 11, that the readers would help him by their intercession in the manner denoted: for we boast, according to the witness of our conscience, to have made ourselves worthy of your help. — καύχῃσις is not equivalent to καύχημα, materies gloriandi (so most, but in no passage rightly, see on Rom. iv. 2), but we should interpret: For this our boasting (which is contained in ver. 11) is the testimony which our conscience furnishes that we, etc. In other words: This our boasting is nothing else than the expression of the testimony of our conscience, that, etc.; hence no αἰσχύνεσθαι ἀπὸ καυχήσεως (Isa. xii. 13) can take place. The contents of this testimony (ὅτι κ.τ.λ.) shows how very much the καύχῃσις of Paul is a καυχᾶσθαι ἐν κυρίῳ (1 Cor. i. 31). Accordingly, αὕτη is to be taken together with ἡ καύχῃσις ἡμῶν (comp. 1 Cor. viii. 9: ἡ ἐξουσία ὑμῶν αὕτη); τὸ μαρτύριον κ.τ.λ. is the predicate, which is introduced by ἐστί, and ὅτι κ.τ.λ. is the contents of the testimony. By the plain simplicity of this explanation we obviously exclude the view that αὕτη is preparative, and that it is to be referred either to τὸ μαρτύριον (Luther and most), or, more harshly, with Hofmann, to ὅτι κ.τ.λ., because in that case τὸ μαρτύριον κ.τ.λ. is made an interpolated apposition. — ἐν ἀγιότητι (see the critical remarks) καὶ εἰλικρ. Θεοῦ] Θεοῦ is not used superlatively, as Emmerling would still take it. Further, it neither denotes what is well-pleasing to God (Schulz, Rosenmüller, Flatt, Rückert, Reiche), nor what avails before God (Calvin, Beza, Estius, Billroth, and others, following Theophylact), nor what is like God (Pelagius), nor the God-like (Osiander), which is God's manner (Hofmann), but the moral holiness and purity established by God through the influence of the divine grace, as the following οὐκ ἐν σοφ. σαρκ., ἀλλ' ἐν χάριτι Θεοῦ proves.¹ So also Olshausen, de Wette, Kling, Neander, Winer, p. 221 [E. T. 296]. Comp. δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ, Rom. i. 17, εἰρήνη Θεοῦ, Phil. iv. 7, and the like. The rare word ἀγιότης is found also in 2 Macc. xv. 2; Heb.

xii. 10; Schol. Arist. Thesm. 301. Regarding εἰλικρ., see on 1 Cor. v. 8. Stallbaum, ad Plat. Phaed. p. 66 A. — οὐκ ἐν σοφ. σαρκ. ἀλλ' ἐν χάρι. Θεοῦ] is not to be placed in a parenthesis, for it is parallel to the previous ἐν ἀγιότ. κ. εἰλικρ. Θεοῦ, and gives negative and positive information about it. The σοφία σαρκ. is the merely human wisdom, the wisdom which is not the work of the divine influence (of the Holy Spirit), but of human nature itself unenlightened and unimproved, guided by the sinful lust in the σάρξ. See on 1 Cor. i. 26. — ἐν χάριτι Θεοῦ] is not to be explained of miracles (Chrysostom), nor yet with Grotius: "cum multis donis spiritualibus," but without any limitation of the influence of the divine grace, under which Paul lived and worked. — The thrice repeated use of ἐν denotes the spiritual element in which his course of life moved (Eph. ii. 3; 2 Pet. ii. 18). — ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ] i.e. among profane humanity. This serves by contrast to make the holiness of his walk and conversation more prominent. Comp. Phil. ii. 15. — πρὸς ὑμᾶς] denotes the direction of his association, in intercourse with you. See Bernhardt, p. 265. More than with others, he had established such a relation with the Corinthians (hence περισσοτ.).

Ver. 13 f. In order to vindicate the apparently vainglorious (ver. 10) περισσ. δὲ πρ. ὑμᾶς (ver. 12), in so far as it might be suspected as not honourably meant, he asserts his candour in writing, which must have been assailed by his opponents (comp. x. 10), who probably maintained, "His letters to us are not the expression of his genuine inmost opinion!" — For nothing else do we write to you than what you (in our letters) read or also understand; i.e. in our letters to you we do not hide or disguise our genuine opinion, but it agrees exactly with what the reading of the same, or your acquaintance with our mode of thinking and character, says to you. Comp. Theodoret. On γράφειν in its reference to the sense of what is written, comp. 1 Cor. v. 11. According to de Wette, the sense amounts to the thought: "I cannot do otherwise, I must write thus." But Paul is making an appeal to the readers. — ἀλλ' ἢ] praeterquam, nisi. For examples in which the previous negative sentence has also ἄλλος, see Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 45; Heindorf, ad Prot. p. 354 B; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 36 f.; Baeumlein, Partik. p. 5. The mode of expression depends on a blending of the two constructions—οὐκ ἄλλα . . . ἀλλά and οὐκ ἄλλα . . . ἤ; Stallbaum, ad Plat. Phaed. p. 81 B; Kühner, II. p. 438. — ἂ ἀναγινώσχετε, ἡ κ. ἐπιγ.] This latter ἡ is in no connection with the former, in which case it could not but have stood ἂ ἡ ἀναγ., ἡ καὶ ἐπιγ. This in opposition to Fritzsche's way of taking it: "neque enim alia ad vos perscribimus, quam aut ea . . . aut ea, quae," etc. ἀναγινώσκειν is to read, as it is usually in the Attic authors, and always in the N. T., not to understand, as Calvin, Estius, Storr,¹ following the Peshito, wish to take it, though it has this meaning often in classical Greek (Hom. Il. xiii. 734, Od. xxi. 205, xxii. 206; Xen. Anab. v. 8. 6; Pind. Isthm. ii. 35; Herodian, vii. 7; comp. also Prayer of Manass. 12). — ἡ καὶ ἐπιγ.] or also (without communication by letter) understand. Wetstein imports arbitrarily: "vel si alicubi haereat, post secundam aut tertiam lectionem, attento animo factam, sit intellecturus." Rückert: "and doubtless also understand." Quite against ἡ καὶ, which stands also opposed to the view of Hofmann: Paul wishes to say that he does not write in such a way, that they might understand something else than he means in his words. In this case we should have had καὶ only, since ἡ καὶ points to something else than to the reading, with which what he has written agrees.—The assimilation of the expressions ἀναγιν. and ἐπιγιν. (comp. iii. 2) cannot be imitated in German, but in Latin approximately: legitis aut etiam intelligitis. Comp. on Acts viii. 30; Plat. Ep. II. p. 312 D. — ἐλπίζω δὲ κ.τ.λ.] The object to ἐπιγινώσσεσθε is ὅτι καύχημα ὑμῶν ἐσμεν κ.τ.λ., and καθὼς καὶ ἐπεγν. ἡμ. ἀπὸ μέρ. is an inserted clause: "I hope, however, that you will understand even to the end,—as you have understood us in part,—that we are your boast," etc. We might also consider ὅτι καύχημα κ.τ.λ. as a nearer object to ἐπέγνωντε ὑμᾶς (Estius, Rosenmüller, Billroth, Rückert, de Wette); but, since in this way ἐπιγινώσσεσθε remains without an object (Billroth supplies: "that I think the same as I write;" comp. Rückert; Osiander: "all my doing and suffering in its purity"), the above mode of connection is easier and simpler. Ambrosiaster, Luther, Grotius, and others, also Olshausen (Osiander doubtfully), take ὅτι as for, stating the ground for καθὼς κ. ἐπέγν. ἡμ. ἀπὸ μέρ.

¹ Calvin thinks ἀναγιν. and ἐπιγιν. are distinguished as agnoscere and recognoscere. So, on the whole, Storr also. But Estius makes the difference: "et recognoscitis antiqua, et insuper etiam cognoscitis recentia."

But in that case the accurate, logical connection is still more wanting, since from the general καύχημα ὑμῶν ἐσμεν κ.τ.λ. no inference to the ἐπέγνωτε ἡμᾶς restricted by ἀπὸ μέρους is warranted; the reason assigned would not be suitable to ἀπὸ μέρους. The connection which runs on simply is unnecessarily broken up by Ewald holding ver. 13 and ver. 14 on to μέρους as a parenthesis, so that ὅτι, ver. 14 (that), joins on again to ver. 12. — ἕως τέλους] does not mean till my death (Hofmann), but till the end, i.e. till the ceasing of this world, till the Parousia. Comp. 1 Cor. i. 8, xv. 51 f.; Heb. iii. 6. — Ver. 14. καθὼς κ. ἐπέγν. ἡμᾶς compares the future, regarding which Paul hopes, with the past, regarding which he knows. And therefore he adds a limitation in keeping with the truth, ἀπὸ μέρους (comp. Rom. xi. 25); for not all the Corinthians had thus understood him. Hofmann, quite against the usage of the language, takes ἀπὸ μέρους of time, inasmuch as the apostle's intercourse with them up to the present was only a part of what he had to live with them. In that case Paul would have written ἕως ἄρτι in contrast to ἕως τέλους. Calvin, Estius, and Emmerling refer it to the degree of knowledge, quodammodo (comp. ii. 5), with which Paul reproaches the readers, ὡς μὴ παντελῶς ἀπωσαμένους τὰς κατ' αὐτοῦ γεγενημένας διαβολάς, Theodoret. But a purpose of reproach is quite foreign to the connection; and certainly the readers to whom ἐπέγνωτε applies had not only understood him quodammodo, but wholly and decidedly, that, etc. Billroth thinks that Paul wishes to mark his cordial love, which till now he could only have shown them in part. Comp. Chrysostom, according to whom ἀπὸ μέρους is added from modesty; also Theophylact, according to whom Paul is thinking of the imperfect exhibition of his virtue. But how could the readers conjecture this! — ὅτι καύχημα κ.τ.λ.] that we redound for glory (i.e. for the object of καυχᾶσθαι) to you, even as you to us on the day of the Parousia. It will be to your honour on that day that you have had us as teachers, and it will be to our honour that we have had you as disciples. Comp. 1 Thess. ii. 19 f.; 1 Phil. ii. 16. With how much winning tact the addition κάθαπερ κ. ὑμεῖς ἡμῶν suppresses all appearance of self-exaltation! ὡς μαθηταῖς ὁμοτίμοις διαλεγόμενος οὕτως ἐξισάζει τὸν λόγον, Chrysostom. — ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τ. κυρ. Ἰησοῦ] belongs to the whole ὅτι καύχημα . . . ὑμεῖς ἡμῶν, not, as Rückert arbitrarily thinks, to καθάπερ κ. ὑμ. ἡμῶν merely (so Grotius, Calovius, and others); nor yet, as Hofmann would have it, primarily to καύχ. ὑμῶν ἔσμεν.

Vv. 15, 16. Καὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πεποιθ.] and by means of this confidence, viz. ὅτι ἕως τέλους ἐπιγν. κ.τ.λ. in vv. 13, 14. πεποίθεις (iii. 4, viii. 22, x. 2; Eph. iii. 12; Phil. iii. 4; Joseph. Bell. i. 3. 1) is later Greek. See Eustathius, ad Od. iii. p. 114, 41; Thom. Mag. p. 717; Lobeck, ad Phrygn. p. 294 f. — ἐβουλόμην] Paul entertained the plan for his journey, set down in ver. 16, before the composition of our first Epistle, and he had communicated it to the Corinthians (whether in the first now lost letter, or otherwise, we know not). But before or during the composition of our first Epistle he altered this plan (as we know from 1 Cor. xvi. 5) to this extent, that he was not now to go first to Corinth, then to Macedonia, and from thence back to Corinth again (ver. 16), but through Macedonia to Corinth. The plan of travel, 1 Cor. xvi. 5, was accordingly not the first (Baur; comp. Lange, apost. Zeitalt. I. p. 200 f.), but the one already altered, which alteration was ascribed to the apostle as indecision. This is intelligible enough from the antagonistic irritation of their minds, and does not require us to presuppose an expression in the alleged intermediate Epistle (Klöpffer, p. 21 f.). Chrysostom, Theodoret, and Oecumenius make the apostle say: I had, when I wrote to you 1 Cor. xvi. 5, the unexpressed intention to arrive still earlier than I promised, and to reach you even sooner (immediately on the journey towards Macedonia). Quite a mistaken view, since such a mere thought would not have been known to his opponents, and no excuse for his fickleness could therefore have been engrafted on it. — πρότερον] belongs to πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλθεῖν:¹ I intended to come to you first of all,—not, as I afterwards altered my plan, to the Macedonians first, and then from them to you. Beza, Grotius, Bengel, and others, including Rosenmüller and Rückert, connect πρότ. and ἐβουλ., which, however, on the one hand is opposed to the sense (for Paul cannot say, “I intended formerly to come to you,” since his intention is still the same), and on the other would not accord with ἵνα δευτ. χάρ. ἔχ.;

¹ The position of πρότερον, immediately after ἐβουλ. (Lachmann, Tischendorf, Rückert), which has preponderating evidence, and is therefore to be preferred, makes no difference in this respect.

for not the πρότερον ἐβουλόμην, but the πρότερον πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλθεῖν, was to bring in its train a δευτέρα χάρις. — ἵνα δευτέραν χάριν ἔχητε] δευτέραν corresponds ingeniously to the πρότερον: in order that you might have a second benefit of grace. By χάριν is meant a divine bestowal of grace, with which Paul knew his coming to be connected for the church; for to whatever place he came in his official capacity, he came as the impartor of divine χάρις, Rom. i. 11; comp. xv. 29. Chrysostom, Oecumenius, and others, including Kypke, Emmerling, Flatt, and Bleek (in the Stud. u. Krit. 1830, p. 622), hold that χάρις is equivalent to χάρα (and hence this is actually the reading of B L, some min., and Theodoret). Certainly χάρις also means pleasure, joy, and is, as in Tob. vii. 18, the opposite of λύπη (Eur. Hel. 661, and more frequently in Pindar; see Duncan, Lex., ed. Rost, p. 1191; also in Plato, Ast. Lex. III. p. 538), but never in the N. T. This sense, besides, would be unsuitable to the apostle's delicate and modest style of expression elsewhere. Nor, again, is a benefit on the part of the apostle meant (Grotius, Rosenmüller, Schrader, Billroth, comp. also Hofmann), because the expression is only in keeping with his affection and humility (comp. 1 Cor. xv. 10) if a divine display of grace is meant. The comparison with 1 Cor. xvi. 3 is therefore not to the point, because there a χάρις is named, of which the readers were givers. But what does he mean by δευτέραν χάριν? Many answer with Estius: “ut ex secundo meo adventu secundam acciperetis gratiam, qui dudum accepistis primam, quando primum istuc veniens ad fidem vos converti.” Comp. Pelagius, Calvin, Wolf, Mosheim, Bengel, Emmerling. But against this it may be urged: (1) historically, that Paul certainly had been already twice in Corinth before our two Epistles (see Introduct. § 2); and (2) from the connection, that the δευτέρα χάρις in this sense can by no means appear as an aim conditioned by the πρότερον; for even a later coming would have had a δευτέρα χάρις in this sense as its result. This second reason is decisive, even if, with Schott, Erörterung, etc., p. 58 ff., and Anger, rat. temp. p. 72 f., we were to set aside the former by the supposition: “apostolum intra annum illum cum dimidio, quem, quum primum Corinthi esset, ibi transegit, per breve aliquod temporis spatium in regiones vicinas discessisse; sic enim si res se habuit, Paulus, etsi bis ad Corinthios venerat, ita ut in secunda, quam iis misit, epistola adventum tertium polliceri posset: tamen, quoniam per totum illud intervallum Corinthi potissimum docuerat, simile beneficium, quod in itinere seriore in eos collocaturus erat, jure secundum appellavit," Anger, l.c. p. 73. The right solution results from ver. 16, which is appended by the exegetical καί, viz., that the δευτέρα χάρις appears as setting in through the πάλιν ἀπὸ Μακεδ. ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς. Paul had intended on his projected journey to visit Corinth twice, and had therefore proposed to himself to come to the Corinthians first of all (not first to the Macedonians), in order that they in this event might have a second χάρις on his return from Macedonia (the first χάρις they were to have on his journey thither). From this it is at once obvious: (1) how superfluous is the linguistically incorrect supposition that δευτέραν is here equivalent to διπλὴν, as Bleek and Neander, following Chrysostom and Theodoret,¹ take it; (2) how erroneous is the opinion of Rückert, that ἵνα δευτ. χάριν ἔχητε is put in a wrong place, and should properly only come behind ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ver. 16. No; according to the exegetical καί, ver. 16, δι' ὑμῶν ἀπελθεῖν εἰς Μακεδ. serves to give exact and clear information as parallel to the πρότερον πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλθεῖν, and then καὶ πάλιν ἀπὸ Μακ. ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς as parallel to the ἵνα δευτέρ. χάριν ἔχητε. Comp. Baur, I. p. 338, ed. 2.

Ver. 17. Wishing this therefore (according to what has just been said), did I then behave thoughtlessly? Was this proposal of mine made without duly taking thought for its execution? μήτι supposes a negative answer, as always, in which case ἄρα (meaning: as the matter stands) makes no alteration, such as the suggesting, perhaps, a thought of possible affirmation. Such a sense, as it were, of a mere tentative nature feeling its way, which is foreign here, could only be suggested by the context, and would have nothing to do with ἄρα (in opposition to Hartung, whom Hofmann follows). See Klotz, ad Devar. p. 176 f. — τῇ ἐλαφρίᾳ] The article marks the thoughtlessness not as that with which the apostle was reproached by the Corinthians (Billroth, Olshausen, Rückert, de Wette), which he must have indicated more precisely, in order that it might be so understood, but thoughtlessness as such in general, in abstracto: have I then made myself guilty of thoughtlessness? ἐλαφρία belongs to the substantives in -ρια formed late from adjectives in -ρος. See Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 343. For the ethical sense (wantonness), comp. Schol. Aristoph. Av. 195, and ἐλαφρός in Polyb. vi. 56. 11; ἐλαφρόνους, Phocylides in Stob. Flor. app. iii. 7. — ἡ ἀ βουλεύομαι, κατὰ σάρκα βουλεύομαι] ἡ is not aut (Billroth, Rückert, Osiander, Hofmann, after the Vulgate and most expositors), but an; for without any interrogation the relation of the two sentences is: My proposal was not thoughtless, unless it should be the case that I form my resolves κατὰ σάρκα. See Hartung, II. p. 61. — Mark the difference between ἐχρησάμην as aorist (historical event) and βουλεύομαι as present (behaviour generally). — κατὰ σάρκα] according to the flesh, after the standard of the σάρξ, i.e. so that I let myself be guided by the impulses of human nature sinfully determined, Gal. v. 16 ff. — ἵνα ἢ παρ' ἐμοὶ τὸ ναὶ ναὶ καὶ τὸ οὐ οὐ] By ἵνα is expressed simply the immoral purpose, which would be connected with the βουλεύεσθαι κατὰ σάρκα; in order that with me there may be the Yea, yea, and Nay, nay, i.e. in order that with me affirmation and denial may exist together; that I, according as the case stands, may assent to the fleshly impulse, and in turn renounce it; to-day yea, and to-morrow nay, or yea and nay as it were in one breath. Billroth errs in thinking that in this explanation καὶ must be taken as also. That it means and, is proved by vv. 18, 19. The duplication of the ναί and οὐ strengthens the picture of the untrustworthy man who affirms just as fervently as he afterwards denies. Failing to discern this, Grotius and Estius wished to prefer the reading of the Vulgate, τὸ ναὶ καὶ τὸ οὐ, which has very weak attestation. The article marks the ναὶ ναί and the οὐ οὐ as well-known and solemn formulae of affirmative and negative asseveration (as they were also in Jewish usage; see Wetstein, ad Matth. v. 37). Comp. on ναὶ ναί, Soph. O. C. 1743. As to the main point, namely, that the ναὶ ναί and the οὐ οὐ are taken as the subject of ἢ, this explanation has the support of Erasmus, Beza, Calvin, Estius (though conjecturing ἵνα μὴ instead of ἵνα), Cornelius a Lapide, Grotius, Mill, Wolf, and others; also of Rosenmüller, Enmerling, Flatt, Schrader, Rückert, de Wette, Osiander,

Neander, Maier, and others; even Olshausen, who, however, sets up for vaí and oũ the "peculiar" signification (assumed without any instance of its being so used) of "truth" and "falsehood." The diplosiasmus vaí vaí and oũ oũ is not without reason (as Billroth and Hofmann object), but quite accords with the passionate excitement of the moral consciousness; whereas afterwards, in ver. 18, where his words go on quietly with a glance towards the faithful God, the bare vaí καί oũ is quite in its place. Note, further, that the simple expression of the coexistence of the yea and nay (to which Hofmann objects) is more striking, than if Paul had given a more precise explanation of the maxims of yea and nay. The readers knew him, and even his evil-wishers could not but know that he was no yea-and-nay man. Others consider the second vaí and the second oũ as predicates, so that a wholly opposite sense is made out of the words: in order that with me the Yea may be yea, and the Nay be nay, i.e. in order that I may stubbornly carry through what I have proposed to myself. Comp. Jas. v. 12. So Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Oecumenius, Erasmus, Castalio, Bengel, and others, and recently Billroth; Winer, p. 429 [E. T. 576], gives no decision. The context, however, before ("levitatis et inconstantiae, non autem pertinaciae crimen hic a se depellere studet," Estius) and after (vv. 18, 19), is decisive against this view. Hofmann imports into παρ' ἐμοί a contrast to παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ, so that the idea would be: to assent to or refuse anything on grounds taken from one's own self, without reservation, because purely as an expression of self-will, with which Jas. iv. 13 is compared.¹ Such a contrast could not but be based upon what went before, in itself as well as in the sense assumed. Besides, to this pretended emphasis on παρ' ἐμοί the order ὅνα παρ' ἐμοὶ ἦ would have been suitable; and the idea of speaking no absolute yea or nay, would have demanded not καί but ἦ between the vaí and the oũ. And was Paul, then, the man in whose resolves "the yea is always meant with the reservation of a nay"? Luther's translation (comp. Ambrosiaster and Erasmus) comes back to the result, that the mark of interrogation is placed after κατὰ σ. βουλ., and in that case there is supplied nequaquam, of which negation ὅνα κ.τ.λ. specifies the purpose. This is intolerably arbitrary. Regarding the erroneous translation of the Peshito (Grotius agrees with it), which distorts the meaning from misconception, see Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 2.

Ver. 18. *But according to His faithfulness, God causes our speech to you to be not yea and nay, not untrustworthy.*¹ The δέ introduces the contrast (yea rather) to the state of things denied in the preceding question (Baeumlein, Partik. p. 95); and ὅτι is equivalent to εἰς ἐκείνο, ὅτι, like John ii. 18, ix. 17, xi. 51; 1 Cor. i. 26, al.: Faithful is God in reference to this, that our speech, etc., i.e. God shows Himself faithful by this, that, etc. Beza, Calvin, and others, including Flatt, Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, Neander, Ewald, Hofmann, take πιστὸς ὁ Θεός as an asseveration: proh Dei fidem! Against all linguistic usage, for the ζῶ ἐγὼ . . . ὅτι (see on Rom. xiv. 11), which is compared, is a habitual formula of swearing, which the πιστὸς ὁ Θεός, very frequent with the apostle (1 Cor. i. 9, x. 13; 1 Thess. v. 24; 2 Thess. iii. 3; 1 John i. 9), is not. Nor can we compare xi. 10, where a subjective state of things is asserted as a guarantee of what is uttered. — ὁ λόγος ἡμῶν] is by most understood of the preaching of the gospel, according to which Paul thus, against the suspicion of untruthfulness in his resolves and assurances, puts forward the truthfulness of his preaching,—in which there lies a moral argument a majori ad minus; for the opinion of Hofmann, that Paul means to say that his preaching stands in a different position from the conditioned quality of his yea and nay, falls with his view of ver. 17. From ver. 19, however, it appears to be beyond doubt that the usual explanation of λόγος, of the preaching, not in general of the apostle's speech (Rückert), or of that unfulfilled promise (Erasmus in the Annot.), is the right one. Olshausen mixes up the two explanations.

Vv. 19–22. Paul furnishes grounds in ver. 19 f. for the assurance he had given in ver. 18; then refers his veracity to the steadfastness bestowed on him by God, ver. 21 f.; and finally, ver. 23, makes protestations as to the reason why he had not yet come to Corinth.

Ver. 19. Ὁ γὰρ τοῦ Θεοῦ υἱός] or, as Lachmann, Rückert,

and Tischendorf, following preponderating testimony, have it rightly: ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ γὰρ υἱός (γὰρ in the fourth place; see Fritzsche, Quaest. Luc. p. 100; Ellendt, Lex. Soph. I. p. 339; Hermann, ad Philoct. 1437), marks the τοῦ Θεοῦ as emphatic, in order to make what is to be said of Christ, οὐκ ἐγένετο ναὶ κ. οὐ, felt at once in its divine certainty. To be God's Son and yet ναὶ κ. οὐ would be a contradiction. In the whole ὁ . . . Ἰ. Χ. there lies a solemn, sacred emphasis. — ὁ ἐν ὑμῖν δι' ἡμῶν κηρυχθείς] reminds the readers of the first preaching of Christ among them, of which Paul could not but remind them, if they were to become perfectly conscious, from their experience from the beginning, that Christ had not become ναὶ κ. οὐ. But in order to make this first preaching come home to them with the whole personal weight of the preachers, he adds, in just consciousness of the services rendered by himself and his companions as compared with the later workers, a more precise definition of the δι' ἡμῶν, with more weighty circumstantiality: δι' ἐμοῦ κ. Σιλουανοῦ κ. Τιμοθέου. For the two latter had been his helpers in his first labours in Corinth. See Acts xviii. 5. From this it is obvious why he has not named others, as Apollos, but simply these (Calvin thinks, that these had been most calumniated); hence also there is no need to suppose any intention of making his assurance more credible (Chrysostom, Theophylact, and many others). A side glance at the Christ preached by Judaistic opponents (xi. 4) is here quite foreign to the connection (in opposition to Klöpper, p. 86 f.). — Σιλουανοῦ] Universally so with Paul (1 Thess. i. 1; 2 Thess. i. 1); also in 1 Pet. v. 12. In the Acts of the Apostles only the shortened name Σίλας appears. Silvanus is here placed before Timothy, because he was an older apostolic helper than the latter. See Acts xv. 22 ff. — οὐκ ἐγένετο ναὶ κ. οὐ] He has not become affirmation and negation, has not showed Himself as untrustworthy, as one who affirms and also denies (the fulfilment of the divine promises, ver. 20), as one who had exhibited such contradiction in himself. This Paul says of Christ Himself, in so far as in the personal objective Christ, by means of His appearance and His whole work, the ναὶ in reference to the divine promises, the affirmation of their fulfilment, is given as a matter of fact. Wrongly most expositors (comp. Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact) understand Χριστός as doctrina de

Christo ("our gospel of Christ is not changeable, sometimes one thing, sometimes another, but it remains ever the same"), an interpretation here specially precluded by verses 20 and 21. This may be urged also against the similar interpretation of Hofmann, that, with the very fact that Christ has come to the readers through preaching, there has gone forth a Yea (the affirmation of all divine promises), without any intervention of Nay. Olshausen and Rückert take it rightly of Christ Himself; but the former puts in place of the simple meaning of the word the thought not quite in keeping: "Christ is the absolute truth, affirmation pure and simple; in Him is the real fulfilment of the divine promises; in Him negation is entirely wanting;" and the latter arbitrarily limits ἐγένετο merely to the experience of the Corinthians ("among you He has not shown Himself untrustworthy"). Paul, however, uses the words οὐκ ἐγένετο ναὶ κ. οὐ of Christ in general, and by ὁ ἐν ὑμῖν . . . Τιμοθ. directs the attention of the Corinthians to the recognition of the truth on their part and out of their own experience. — ἀλλὰ ναὶ ἐν αὐτῷ γέγονεν] of the two only the former, i.e. affirmation (that the divine promises are fulfilled and shall be fulfilled) is established in Him: in Christ is actually given the yea, that, etc. In the perfect γέγονεν (different from the previous aorist ἐγένετο) is implied the continuance of what has happened. Comp. on Col. i. 16; John i. 3. Grotius, in opposition to the context (see ver. 20), referred ναὶ ἐν αὐτῷ γέγ. to the miracles, by which Christ confirmed the apostolic preaching. And Beza awkwardly, and, on account of ver. 20, erroneously, took ἐν αὐτῷ of God, whose Son is "constantissima Patris veritas."

Ver. 20. A more precise explanation and confirmation of ναὶ ἐν αὐτῷ γέγονεν, running on to the end of the verse. Hence ὅσαι . . . ἀμήν is not to be put in a parenthesis, as Griesbach, Scholz, and Ewald.—τὸ ναὶ and τὸ ἀμήν cannot be synonymous, as most of the older commentators take them ("repetit, ut ipsa repetitione rem magis confirmet," Estius), for this is rendered impossible by the correct reading διὸ κ. δι' αὐτοῦ τὸ ἀμήν (see the critical remarks). Rather must the former be the cause (διό) of the latter. And here the expression τὸ ἀμήν is without doubt to be explained from the custom in worship, that in public prayer a general Amen was said as certifying the general

assurance of faith as to its being heard (see on 1 Cor. xiv. 16). Accordingly τὸ ναί and τὸ ἀμήν are here to be distinguished in this way; τὸ ναί, as in the whole context, denotes the certainty objectively given (comp. on that point, Rom. xv. 8), and τὸ ἀμήν, the certainty subjectively existing, the certainty of faith. Consequently: for, as many promises of God as there are (in the O. T.), in Him is the yea (in Christ is given the objective guarantee of their fulfilment); therefore through Him also the Amen takes place, therefore it comes to pass through Christ, that the Amen is said to God's promises; i.e. therefore also to Christ, to His work and merit, without which we should want this certainty, is due the subjective certainty of the divine promises, the faith in their fulfilment. Billroth, indeed (and in the main, de Wette), thinks the conception to be this: that the preachers of the gospel say the Amen through their preaching, so that τὸ ναί refers to the living working of God in Christ, in whom He fulfils His promises, and τὸ ἀμήν to the faithful and steadfast preaching of these deeds of God. But the saying of Amen expressed the assurance of faith, and was done by all; hence τὸ ἀμήν would be in the highest degree unsuitable for denoting the praedicatio. Finally, Rückert is quite arbitrary when he says that τὸ ναί relates to the fulfilment of the prophecies wrought by the appearing of Christ Himself, and τὸ ἀμήν to the erection of the church, which had grown out of that appearing.—The article before ναί and ἀμήν denotes the definite Yea and Amen, which relate to the ἐπαγγελίαι Θεοῦ and belong to them. The article was not used before in ver. 19, because no definite reference of the yea was yet specified.—τῷ Θεῷ πρὸς δόξαν δι' ἡμῶν] a teleological definition to δι' αὐτοῦ τὸ ἀμήν with the emphatic prefixing of τῷ Θεῷ: to God's honour through us, i.e. what redounds to the glorifying of God (viii. 19) through us.—δι' ἡμῶν] nostro ministerio (Grotius), in so far, namely, as the ministry of the gospel-preachers brings about the Amen, the assurance of faith in God's promises, Rom. x. 14.

Ver. 21 f. Δέ] not specifying the ground of τῷ Θεῷ πρὸς δόξαν (Grotius), nor confirming the assurance that he had preached without wavering (Billroth), but continuative. Paul has just, with δι' ἡμῶν, pointed to the blessed result which his working (and that of his companions) is bringing about, namely, that the Amen of faith is said to all God's promises to the glory of God. But now he wishes to indicate also the inner divine life-principle, on which this working and its result are based, namely, the Christian steadfastness, which is due to no other than to God Himself. — On the construction, comp. v. 5; hence Billroth (whom Olshausen follows) has incorrectly taken ὁ δὲ βεβαιῶν . . . Θεός as subject, and ὁ καὶ σφραγ. κ.τ.λ. as predicate. It is to be translated: “And He who makes us steadfast with you toward Christ, after He has also anointed us, is God; who also,” etc. Since the anointing precedes the βεβαιῶν, and is its foundation, and Paul has not written ὁ δὲ χρίσας ἡμᾶς καὶ βεβαιῶν κ.τ.λ., it is not to be regarded with the expositors as qui autem confirmat et unxit, but καὶ χρίσας ἡμᾶς is to be taken as a definition subordinate to the βεβαιῶν, and καὶ as the also of the corresponding relation; otherwise, there would be a hysteron-proteron, which there is no ground for supposing. — εἰς Χριστόν] in relation to Christ, so that we remain unshakenly faithful to Christ. Chrysostom well says: ὁ μὴ ἐᾶν ἡμᾶς παρασλεύεσθαι ἐκ τῆς πίστεως τῆς εἰς τ. Χριστόν. The explanation: into Christ (Billroth, Olshausen) has against it the present participle. For the believers are already in Christ; their continued confirmation (βεβ., see on 1 Cor. i. 6) therefore could not but take place in Christo, Col. ii. 7, not in Christum. — σὺν ὑμῖν] Paul adds, in order not to appear as if he were denying to the readers the βεβαιώσις εἰς Χριστόν. Estius says aptly: “ut eos in hac sua defensione benevolos habeat.” This agrees with the whole tone of the context; but there is not, as Rückert conjectures, a side-glance at those who had held the apostle to be a wavering reed. — χρίσας ἡμᾶς] here, without σὺν ὑμῖν, is a figurative way of denoting the consecration to office (Luke iv. 18; Acts iv. 27, x. 38; Heb. i. 9), i.e. to the office of teacher of the gospel, without, however, pressing the expression so far as Chrysostom and Theophylact: ὁμοῦ προφήτας καὶ ἱερεῖς κ. βασιλέας ἐργασάμενος. Whether, however, did Paul conceive the consecration as effected by the call (Billroth, Olshausen, Rückert) or by the communication of the Spirit (Calvin, Grotius, Estius, Osiander, and many others, following the ancient expositors)? Ver. 22 is not opposed to the latter view (see below); and since the call to the office is, in point of fact, something quite different from the consecration, χρίσας is certainly to be referred to the holy consecration of the Spirit (comp. Acts x. 38). Comp., further, 1 John ii. 20, 27, and

Düsterdieck on 1 John i. p. 355. An allusion to Χριστόν (Bengel, Osiander, Hofmann, and others) would not be certain, even if there stood καὶ χρίσας καὶ ἡμᾶς, because Χριστόν is not used appellatively, but purely as a proper name. An anointing of Christ (as at Luke iv. 18; Acts iv. 27, x. 38; Heb. i. 9) is as little mentioned by Paul as by John. If, however, it had been here in his mind, in order to compare with it the consecration of the ἡμεῖς, he could not but have added σὺν αὐτῷ, or some similar more precise definition of the relation intended, to make himself intelligible; comp. the idea of the συζωοποιεῖν σὺν Χριστῷ, and the like. — ὁ καὶ σφραγισ. ὑμᾶς κ.τ.λ.] is argumentative. How could He leave us in the lurch unconfirmed, He, who has also sealed us, etc.! How would He come into contradiction with Himself! This σφραγισ. ὑμᾶς does not present the same thing, as was just expressed by χρίσας ἡμ., in another figurative form; but by means of καὶ it adds an accessory new element,¹ namely, the Messianic sealing conferred, although likewise through the Holy Spirit (see the sequel), apart from the anointing, i.e. the inner confirmation of the Messianic σωτηρία. Comp. on Eph. i. 13, iv. 30. It is not added to what the sealing objectively relates (to the Messianic salvation), because it is regarded as a familiar notion, well known in its reference. — καὶ δοὺς κ.τ.λ.] is exegetical of ὁ σφραγισάμ. ἡμᾶς, Winer, p. 407 [E. T. 545]. — τὸν ἀρράβωνα τοῦ πνεύματος] Comp. v. 5. The genitive is the genitive of apposition, as 1 Cor. v. 8: the earnest-money, which consists in the Spirit. ἀρράβων (also with the Romans arrhabo or arra) is properly ἡ ἐπὶ ταῖς ὥναις παρὰ τῶν ὠνουμένων διδομένη προκαταβολὴ ὑπὲρ ἀσφαλείας, Etym. M.; Aristot. Pol. i. 4. 5; Lucian, Rhet. prae. 17, 18. Then it is a figurative expression for the notion guarantee. See in general Wetstein, and especially Kypke, Obs. II. p. 239 f. For what the Holy Spirit is guarantee, Paul does not say, but he presupposes it as an obvious fact in the consciousness of the readers, just as he did with σφραγισάμ. The Holy Spirit is in the heart as an earnest-money given for a guarantee of a future possession, the pledge of the future Messianic salvation. Comp. v. 5; Eph. i. 14. How? see Rom. viii. 2, 10 f., v. 5, viii. 15 ff.; Gal. iv. 6 f.; Eph. v. 19. In ἀρράβ., therefore, the climax τῶν

Ver. 23. After Paul has vindicated himself (vv. 16–22) from the suspicion of fickleness and negligence raised against him on account of his changing the plan of his journey, he proceeds in an elevated tone to give, with the assurance of an oath (xi. 31 ; Rom. i. 9 ; Gal. i. 20), the reason why he had not come to Corinth. — ἐγὼ δέ] Hitherto he has spoken communicative, not talking of himself exclusively. Now, however, to express his own self-determination, he continues : but I for my own part, etc.—For examples of ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸν Θεὸν μάρτυρα, see Wetstein. Comp. Hom. Il. xxii. 254. It expresses the moral reference of the invocation, and belongs to ἐπικαλ., in which act Paul has in view that he thereby stakes the salvation (Heb. x. 39 ; 1 Pet. i. 9 ; Jas. i. 21) or ruin of his soul (Rom. ii. 9). Comp. the second commandment. — φειδόμενος ὑμ.] exercising forbearance towards you. This was implied in the very fact of his not coming. Had he come, it must have been ἐν ῥαβδῷ, 1 Cor. iv. 21. Comp. ii. 1. — οὐκέτι] not again, as would have accorded with my former plan, ver. 16. But since this former plan is altered already in 1 Cor. xvi. 5 f., the ἔτι in οὐκέτι must refer to a visit preceding our first Epistle. — εἰς Κόρινθον] “elegantè pro ad vos in sermone potestatem ostendente,” Bengel.

Ver. 24. Guarding against a possible misunderstanding of φειδόμενος. Theodoret says aptly : τοῦτο δὲ ὡς ὑφορμοῦν τέθεικεν ; for the expression φειδόμενος might be interpreted as a pretension to lordship over faith. — οὐχ ὅτι] is equivalent to οὐκ ἐρῶ, ὅτι. See on John vi. 46, and Tyrwhitt, ad Arist. Poet. p. 128. — κυριεύομεν κ.τ.λ.] The apostle knows that no lordship over faith belongs to him ; how the faith in Christ is to be shaped among the churches as respects contents, vital activity, etc., he has not to command, as if he were lord over it, but only to teach, to rouse, and entreat (v. 20) thereto, to promote it by praise or blame, etc. The order κυρ. ὑμῶν τ. πίστ. depends on the form of conception: we do not lord it over you as to faith. Comp. on John xi. 32, and Stallbaum, ad Plat. Symp. p. 117 A, Rep. p. 518 C. This prefixing of the pronoun occurs very often in the N. T.; hence it was the more preposterous to supply a ἐνεκα before τῆς πίστ. (Erasmus, Calvin, Estius, Flatt, and others). — ἀλλὰ συνεργοί] but (it is implied in my φειδόμενος ὑμῶν) that we are joint helpers of your joy, that it is our business to be helpful to you, so that you rejoice. To this destined aim an earlier coming would have been opposed, because it would have caused grief (ii. 1). The συν in συνεργοί refers to the union of the helping efficacy with the working of the Corinthians themselves. Contrary to the context, Grotius suggests: “cum Deo et Christo,” which Osiander also imports. The χαρά is not to be taken of the joy of blessedness (Grotius and others), but of the joy of the church over the improvement and the success of the Christian life amongst them. Only this agrees with the context, for the want of this success had been the cause of Paul’s formerly coming ἐν λύπῃ to the Corinthians, and of the necessity for his coming again ἐν ῥάβδῳ (1 Cor. iv. 21). — τῇ γὰρ πίστει ἐστήκατε] for in respect to faith ye stand; the point of faith, in respect to which you are firm and stedfast, is not now under discussion. Note the emphatic placing of τῇ πίστ. first. Theophylact well says: οὐκ οὖν ἐν τούτοις (τοῖς κατὰ πίστιν) εἶχον τι μέμψασθαι ὑμᾶς· ἐν ἄλλοις δὲ ἐσαλεύεσθε. On the dative of more precise definition, comp. Polyb. xxi. 9. 3; Rom. iv. 19, 20; Gal. v. 1 (Elzevir). It does not mean per fidem, Rom. xi. 20, as Bengel and Hofmann hold (through faith you have an independent and firm bearing), in which case we should have for ἐστήκ. a very vague and indefinite conception; but it is, in substance, not different from ἐν τῇ πίστει, 1 Cor. xvi. 13.

The *Recepta*¹ is evidently a transposition to connect πάλιν with ἐλθεῖν, because it was supposed that Paul had been only once in Corinth. — Ver. 2. ἐστὶν after τίς is wanting in A B C \aleph , Copt. But how easily might εἰ be dropped before εἰς (so in 80), and then be variously replaced (109: ὥς)! — Ver. 10. ὁ κεχάρισμαι, εἰ τι κεχάρισμαι] So A B C F G \aleph , min. Vulg. It. Damasc. Jer. Ambrosiast. Pacian. Pel. Griesb. Scholz, Lachm. Rück. Tisch. But Elz. has εἰ τι κεχάρισμαι, ᾧ κεχάρισμαι, defended by Reiche. This reading arose from the Codd., which read (evidently in accordance with the previous ᾧ) ᾧ κεχάρισμαι, εἴ τι κεχάρισμαι (so still D E, 31, 37). The repetition of κεχάρισμαι caused the εἴ τι κεχ. to be left out;² afterwards it was restored at a wrong place. — Ver. 16. Before θανάτου and before ζωῆς there stands ἐκ in A B C \aleph , min. Copt. Aeth. Clem. Or. and other Fathers. Rightly; the ἐκ seemed contrary to the sense, and was therefore omitted. Accepted by Lachm. and Tisch., rejected by Reiche. — Ver. 17. οἱ πολλοί] D E F G L, min. and some versions and Fathers have οἱ λοιποί, which Mill favoured, Griesbach recommended, and Reiche defended. But οἱ πολλοί has preponderating evidence; λοιποί was a modifying gloss, and displaced the other. — κατενώπιον] κατέναντι, as well as the omission of the following article, has preponderating attestation, and hence, with Lachm. and Rück., it is to be preferred.

Vv. 1-4. Continuation of what was begun in i. 23.

Ver. 1. Ἐκρίνα δὲ ἐμὰντῶ τοῦτο] δέ is the usual μεταβατικόν, which leads on from the assurance given by Paul in i. 23, to the thought that he in his own interest (ἐμὰντῶ, dativus commodi; for see ver. 2) was not willing to come again to them ἐν λύπῃ. — The interpretation apud me (Vulgate, Luther, Beza, and many others) would require παρ' ἐμὰντῶ or ἐν ἐμ. (1 Cor. vii. 37, xi. 13). Paul, by means of ἐμὰντῶ, gives to the matter an ingenious, affectionate turn, regarding the truth of which, however, there is no doubt. — ἔκρινα] I determined, as 1 Cor. ii. 2, vii. 27. As to the emphatically preparatory τοῦτο with following infinitive accompanied by the article, comp. on Rom. xiv. 13, and Krüger, § li. 7. 4. — πάλιν] belongs to ἐν λύπῃ πρὸς ὑμ. ἐλθεῖν, taken together, so that Paul had once already (namely, on his second arrival) come to the Corinthians ἐν λύπῃ. The connection with ἐλθεῖν merely (Pelagius, Primasius, Theodoret, and the most; also Flatt, Baur, Reiche), a consequence of the error that Paul before our Epistles had been only once in Corinth,¹ is improbable even with the Recepta (the more suitable order of the words would be: τὸ μὴ ἐν λύπῃ πάλιν ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς), but is impossible both with our reading and with that of Tischendorf (see the critical remarks), unless we quite arbitrarily suppose, with Grotius (comp. also Reiche), a trajectio, or, with Baur, I. p. 342, an inaccuracy of epistolary style. — ἐν λύπῃ] provided with affliction (Bernhardy, p. 109; comp. Rom. xv. 29), bringing affliction with me, i.e. afflicting you. This explanation (Theodoret, Calvin, Grotius, and others, including Ewald) is, indeed, held by Hofmann to be impossible in itself, but is required by the following εἰ γὰρ ἐγὼ λυπῶ ὑμᾶς. Hence Billroth and Hofmann, following Chrysostom and many others, are wrong in thinking that the apostle's own sadness is meant; and so also Bengel, Olshausen, Rückert, de Wette, Reiche,

Neander, following Ambrosiaster, and others, who think that it is also included. That it is not meant at all, is shown by φειδόμενος, i. 23, and by the coupling of what follows with γάρ. Comp. ἐν ῥάβδῳ, 1 Cor. iv. 21. The apparent difficulty, that Paul in our first Epistle makes no mention whatever of the fact and manner of his former visit to Corinth when he caused affliction, is obviated by the consideration that only after our first Epistle was the change of plan used to the apostle's disadvantage, and that only now was he thereby compelled to mention the earlier arrival which had been made ἐν λύπῃ. Hence this passage is not a proof for the assumption of a journey to Corinth between our two Epistles (see the Introd.).

Ver. 2. As reason for his undertaking not to come to his readers again ἐν λύπῃ, Paul states that he on his own part could not in this case hope to find any joy among them. Comp. ver. 3. For if I afflict you, who is there also to give me joy, except him who is afflicted by me?—i.e., if I on my part (ἐγώ is emphatic¹) make you afflicted, then results the contradiction that the very one who is afflicted by me is the one who should give me joy. Against this view Billroth and Rückert object that εἰ μὴ . . . ἐμοῦ is superfluous, and even in the way. No; it discloses the absurdity of the case conditioned by εἰ ἐγὼ λυπῶ ὑμᾶς. Pelagius, Bengel, and others, including Billroth, render: who yet so much gladdens me as he who lets himself be afflicted by me (which is a sign of amendment)? Comp. Chrysostom, and Theodoret, Erasmus, and others. So also Olshausen, who sees here an indirect warning to take the former censure more to heart. But against this perversion of ὁ λυπούμενος in a middle sense, we may decisively urge:—(1) that the sense of ver. 2 would not stand in any relation to ver. 1 as furnishing a reason for it; and (2) the οὐχ ἵνα λυπηθῇτε in ver. 4. Rückert sees in εἰ . . . ὑμᾶς an aposiopesis; then begins a new question, which contains the reason why he may not afflict them, because it would be unloving, nay, ungrateful, to afflict those who cause him so much joy. Hence the meaning, touchingly expressed, is: "I might not come to you afflicting you; for if I had done so, I should have afflicted those very ones who give me joy: this would have been unloving on my part." This is all the more arbitrary, since, logically at least, it must have stood in the converse order : καὶ τίς ἐστὶν ὁ λυπούμενος ἐξ ἐμοῦ εἰ μὴ ὁ εὐφραίνων με. Hofmann holds still more arbitrarily and oddly that εἰ γάρ is elliptical protasis, and ἐγὼ λυπῶ ὑμᾶς apodosis: if I come to you again in affliction, I make you afflicted, and who is there then who gladdens me, except him whom affliction coming from me befalls? The well-known omission of the verb in the protasis after εἰ is, in fact, a usage of quite another nature (see Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 213; Stallbaum, ad Plat. Rep. p. 497; Krüger, § lxxv. 5. 11). Besides, this subtlety falls with Hofmann's view of ver. 1. — καί] also, expresses after the conditional clause the simultaneousness of what is contained in the apodosis, consequently without the interrogative form: there is also no one, etc. See Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 130 f.; Buttmann, neut. Gramm. p. 311 [E. T. 362]. — ὁ λυπούμενος] does not mean the incestuous person (so, against the entire connection, Beza, Calovius, Cornelius a Lapide, Heumann); but the singular of the participle with the article denotes the one who gives joy, as such, in abstracto. Comp. 1 Pet. iii. 13, al.; Xen. Cyr. ii. 2. 20, al. Paul might have written τίνας εἰσὶν οἱ κ.τ.λ., but he was not under necessity of doing so. — ἐξ ἐμοῦ] source of the λυπεῖσθαι. See Bernhardy, p. 227; Schoem. ad Is. p. 348; Winer, p. 345 [E. T. 460]. Comp. ἀφ' ὧν, ver. 3; but ἐξ is "quiddam penitius," Bengel.

Ver. 3 appends what Paul had done in consequence of the state of things mentioned in ver. 1 f.: And I have written (not reserved till I could communicate orally) this very thing, i.e. exactly what I have written, in order not, when I shall have come, to have affliction, etc. — ἔγραψα] placed first with emphasis, corresponds to the following ἐλθών, and does not at all refer to the present Epistle (Chrysostom and his followers, Grotius, and others, including Olshausen), against which opinion vv. 4, 9 are decisive, but to our first Epistle, the contents of which in reference to this point are rendered present by τοῦτο αὐτό; as indeed οὗτος is used often of what is well known, which is pointed to as if it were lying before one (Kühner, II. p. 325). That Paul is thinking of the passages of censure and rebuke in the first Epistle (especially of chap. v.¹), results from the context, and suffices for its explanation, so that the reference to a lost letter sent along with Titus

(Bleek, Neander, Ewald, Klöpper; see Introd. § 1) is not required. With Theodoret, Erasmus, Morus, Flatt, Rückert, Hofmann,¹ to take τοῦτο αὐτό as in 2 Pet. i. 5, for this very reason, cannot in itself be objected to (Bernhardy, p. 130; Kühner, § 549, A. 2; Ast, ad Plat. Leg. p. 214; and see on Gal. ii. 10 and on Phil. i. 6); but here, where Paul has just written in ver. 1 τοῦτο as the accusative of the object, and afterwards in ver. 9 expresses the sense for this reason by εἰς τοῦτο, there is no ground for it in the context. — ἵνα μὴ κ.τ.λ.] Since his arrival was at that time still impending, and Paul consequently denotes by ἵνα . . . ἔχω a purpose still continuing in the present, the subjunctive ἔχω (or σχῶ, as Lachmann, Rückert, and Tischendorf read, following A B N*, Chrysostom, Theophylact, Oecumenius) after the preterite ἔγραψα is quite accurate (Matthiae, p. 1180); and Rückert is wrong when he takes ἐλθὼν hypothetically (if I had come), and refers σχῶ to the past. In that case, Paul could not but have used the optative. — ἀφ' ὧν] ἀπὸ τούτων, ἀφ' ὧν. See Bornem. Schol. in Luc. p. 2. — ἀπό, on the part of. Χαίρειν does not elsewhere occur with ἀπό, but εὐφραίνεσθαι is similarly joined with ἀπό, Xen. Hier. iv. 6; Judith xii. 20. — ἔδει] The imperfect indicates what properly (in the nature of the relation) ought to be, but what, in the case contemplated of the λύπην ἔχω, is not. See Matthiae, p. 1138 f. — πεποιθὼς κ.τ.λ.] subjective reason assigned for the specified purpose of the ἔγραψα: since I cherish the confidence towards you all, etc. Paul therefore says that, in order that he might find no affliction when present among them, he has communicated the matter by letter, because he is convinced that they would find their own joy in his joy (which, in the present instance, could not but be produced by the doing away of the existing evils according to the instructions of his letter). — ἐπί] of the direction of the confidence towards the readers. Comp. 2 Thess. iii. 4; Matt. xxvii. 43; Ps. cxxiv. 1. In classical authors usually with the dative, as i. 9. — πάντας ὑμᾶς] This, in spite of the anti-Pauline part of the church, is the language of the love which πάντα πιστεύει, πάντα ἐλπίζει, 1 Cor. xiii. 7. "Quodsi Pauli opiniononi judicioque non respondeant Corinthii, indigne eum frustrantur," Calvin.

Ver. 4. Reason assigned for the πεποιθώς κ.τ.λ. For if I in writing the Epistle had not had that confidence, the Epistle would not have caused me so much grief and so many tears. In the very contrast of this confidence with the necessity of having to write in such a manner lay the great pain.—ἐκ and διὰ vividly represent the origin of the letter as a going forth and a pressing through: out of much affliction and anxiety of heart I wrote to you through many tears. And this Paul might say, even if he had not himself held the pen.—θλίψις and συνοχή (anxiety, Luke xxi. 25: not so among the Greeks, but see Schleusner, Theo. V. p. 212) do not refer to outward, but to inward suffering, as both are defined by καρδίας. Rückert concludes from the calm tone of the first Epistle that Paul "had from prudent consideration known how to impose such restraint on his state of feeling, that the Epistle might not reflect any faithful picture of it." But this would have been cunning dissimulation, not in keeping with the apostle's character. No; it was just his specially tender care for the Corinthians which on the one hand increased his pain that he needed to write such rebukes, and on the other hand did not allow his vehement emotion to emerge in that Epistle; hence we must not say that the quiet character of our first Epistle is not psychologically in keeping with the utterance of this passage. In particular, 1 Cor. v. might have caused the apostle anxiety and tears enough, without our needing to suppose an intermediate letter (see on ver. 3).—δακρύνων] Comp. Acts xx. 19, 31. Calvin aptly says: "mollitiem testantur, sed magis heroicam, quam fuerit illa ferrea Stoicorum durities."—οὐχ ἵνα λυπηθῆτε, ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ.] This added explanation regarding the purpose of his letter, to him so painful, is intended also to corroborate the πεποιθώς κ.τ.λ., of which he has given assurance.—τὴν ἀγάπην] placed first for emphasis.—περισσοτ.] ἡ (εἰς) τοὺς ἄλλους μαθητάς, Theophylact, who, following Chrysostom, also directs attention to the winning tenderness of the words (καταγλυκαίνει δὲ τὸν λόγον βουλόμενος ἐπισπάσασθαι αὐτούς). Comp. i. 12. The love of the apostle for his churches has along with its universality its various degrees, just as the love of a father for his children. The Philippians also were specially dear to him.

Vv. 5-11. Digression regarding the pardon to be granted to the incestuous person.—That the incestuous person is meant, as even Klöpfer maintains in spite of his assumption of a lost intermediate letter, is denied by Tertullian (de Pudicitia, 13) simply for dogmatic-ascetic reasons. The exclusion, which Paul demanded in the first Epistle, v. 13, left open the possibility of a return to the communion of the church by the path of suitable penitence and expiation; as may be gathered also from 1 Cor. v. 5, where the apostle's threat of the higher excommunication, of the giving over to Satan, contemplates in this punishment the conversion and saving of the offender, and consequently shows clearly that in the apostle's eyes the penal procedure of the church, even in the case of so grave a sin, was of a paedagogic nature in reference to the person of the evil-doer. The penance of the latter, however, as well as that of the whole church on his account (vii. 7 ff.), may have really been so deeply and keenly manifested, that Paul, in accordance with the now changed state of things, might express himself in such a mild, conciliatory way as he does here. And there is no sufficient ground in the passage for the assumption of an intermediate letter, or that there is here meant, not the unchaste person, but a slanderer rebuked by Paul in this intermediate letter (see Intro. § 1). Besides, the mild, soft tone of the present passage, if it referred to such a personal opponent, would not be in keeping with the quite different way in which, from chap. x. onwards, he pours forth his apostolic zeal against his personal opponents and slanderers.

Ver. 5. "To cause grief among you was not my intention (ver. 4); he, however, who has (really) caused grief has not grieved me." In other words: "I did not wish to grieve you; one of you, however, has with his afflicting influence, not affected me, but," etc. Olshausen connects ver. 5 with ver. 3: "if, however, any one formerly has awakened grief." But how arbitrary it is to leap over the natural reference to the immediately preceding λυπηθήτε! And if the "formerly" made the contrast, it must have been somehow expressed.—In the hypothetical εἰ, as in the indefinite τις, there lies a delicate, tender forbearance. — οὐκ ἐμὲ λελύπηκεν, ἀλλ' Paul does not say οὐ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καί, because as concerns the relation of the matter to himself he wishes absolutely to deny that he is the injured party. He could do this, because he did not belong to the church, and he wishes to leave wholly out of view his position as apostle and founder of the church in the interest of love and pardon. Olshausen thinks that he wishes indirectly to refute the erroneous position of some (impenitent) Corinthians towards the incident with the incestuous person; that many, namely, had lamented much to the apostle about the solicitude which that unhappy person had caused to him; and that, in order to make these turn from him to themselves, he says that the question is not about him, but about them, that they should look to their own pain. But of this alleged direction to occupy themselves with their own pain, there is nothing whatever in what follows; and the apostle would have set forth in more precise terms a rebuke so weighty; it was not at all fitting here, where the touched heart beats only with mildness and forgiveness. — λελύπηκεν] Bengel says aptly: “contristatum habet.” — ἀλλ’ ἀπὸ μέρους κ.τ.λ.] but in part, that I may not burden him (with greater guilt), you all. ἀπὸ μέρους, which Paul adds φειδόμενος αὐτοῦ (Chrysostom), softens the thought in λελύπηκεν πάντας ὑμᾶς, while it expresses that the grief is only in a partial degree, not wholly and fully (as on the one immediately concerned), inflicted on all, i.e. on the whole church by means of moral sympathy; only quodammodo (see Fritzsche, Diss. I. p. 16 ff.), therefore, are the readers all affected by that grief as sharers in it. The ἵνα μὴ ἐπιβαρῶ (sc. αὐτόν) contains the purpose, for which he had added the softening limitation ἀπὸ μέρους. Beza, Calvin (in the Commentary), Calovius, Hammond, Homberg, Wolf, Estius, and others, following Chrysostom, agree with this punctuation and explanation; also Emmerling, Fritzsche, Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, Neander, Ewald. Yet Rübiger explains it as if Paul had written σχεδόν instead of ἀπὸ μέρους. But others read ἵνα μὴ ἐπιβ. πάντας ὑμ. together: he has not grieved me (alone and truly), but only in part (consequently you also); in order that I may not lay something to the charge of you all; for, if he had grieved me alone, you would all have been indifferent towards the crime. So Thomas, Lyra, Luther, Castalio, Zeger, Bengel, Wetstein, and others, including Flatt. Incorrectly, because οὐκ ἐμέ and ἀλλ’ ἀπὸ μέρους cannot be antitheses. Mosheim and Billroth separate πάντας and ὑμᾶς: he has not grieved me, but in part, that I may not accuse all, you; for I will not be unjust, and give you all the

blame of having been indifferent towards that crime. At variance with the words ; for, according to these, with this punctuation those whom Paul accuses (ἐπιβαρεῖ) must appear to be not those indifferent, but those grieved by the incest. Olshausen also follows this punctuation, but finds in ἀπὸ μέρους, ἵνα μὴ ἐπιβ. πάντας a delicate irony (comp. also Michaelis, who, however, follows our punctuation), in so far as Paul would have held it as the highest praise of the Corinthians, if he could have said : he has grieved you without exception. Since he could not have said this, he wittily turns his words in this way : he has not grieved me, but, as regards a part, you, in order that I may not burden you all with this care. But this very wit and irony are quite foreign to the mild tone and the conciliatory disposition of this part of the Epistle. Hofmann takes οὐκ ἐμὲ λελύπ. as a question, after which there comes in with ἀλλά the contrast (nevertheless) which continues over ver. 5 and includes ver. 6 ; in this case ἀπὸ μέρους is temporal in meaning (yet "firstly is enough") ; and ἵνα μὴ ἐπιβαρῶ πάντας ὑμᾶς, which is to be taken together, is meant to say that the apostle, if he expressed himself dissatisfied with what had been done by the majority, would burden the whole church with the pain of knowing that one of their members was under the ban of sin which remained unforgiven on the part of the apostle ; lastly, the ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων stands in opposition to a minority, which had wished to go beyond the punishment decreed, a minority which is included in πάντας. But all this involved explanation is inadmissible, partly because the blunt question οὐκ ἐμὲ λελύπ., bringing forward so nakedly a sense of personal injury, would be sadly out of unison with the shrewdly conciliatory tone of the whole context ; partly because ἀπὸ μέρους, taken of time, is as linguistically incorrect as at i. 14, and would also furnish the indelicate thought of a ἱκανότης with reservation, and till something further ; partly because the complexity of thought, which is said to lie in ἐπιβαρῶ, is just imported into it ; partly because the supposition that the minority of the church would have gone still further in the punishment than the resolution of the majority went, is without all ground, nay, is in the highest degree improbable after the reproach of too great indulgence, 1 Cor. v.—On ἐπιβαρεῖν, comp. 1 Thess. ii. 9 ; 2 Thess. iii. 8 ; Dion. Hal. iv. 9, viii. 73 ; Appian, B. C. iv. 31. Comp. βάρος of the burden of a feeling of guilt, Gal. vi. 2.

Ver. 6. Ἰκανόν] something sufficient is, etc. Regarding this substantive use of the neuter of the predicate adjective, see Matthiae, p. 982; Kühner, II. p. 45. Comp. Matt. vi. 34. — τῷ τοιούτῳ] for one of such a nature; how forbearing it is here that no more definite designation is given! — ἡ ἐπιτιμία αὐτῇ] this punishment. What it was, every reader knew. Comp. on ver. 3. ἡ ἐπιτιμία (which in classic writers denotes the franchise of a citizen, Demosthenes, 230, 10, al.), in the signification poena, like the Greek τὸ ἐπιτίμιον (Dem. 915, 1; 939, 27, al.), ἡ ἐπιτίμησις (Wisd. xii. 26), and τὸ ἐπιτίμημα (Inscript.), occurs only here in the N. T., but elsewhere also in Wisd. iii. 10, in ecclesiastical writers, and in acts of councils (not in Philo). It is not merely objuratio (Vulgate; comp. Beza, Calvin, and others). — ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων] which by the majority (of the church) has been assigned to him. That the presbyterium is not meant (Augustine, Beza, Grotius, Valesius, and others), is shown by the article. There is a further question here, whether the excommunication enjoined by Paul, 1 Cor. v., was carried out or not (Beza, Calvin, Morus, Rückert, Hofmann). Most assume the former, so that they refer ικανόν to the sufficient duration of the excommunication.¹ But an accomplished full excommunication is not to be assumed on account of the very ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων; but it is probable that the majority of the church members, in consequence of the ἐξάρατε τὸν πονηρόν (1 Cor. v. 13; comp. ver. 2), had considered the sinner as one excommunicated, and had given up all fellowship with him. By this the majority had for the present sufficiently complied with the expressed will of the apostle. To the minority there may have belonged partly the most lax in morals, and partly also opponents of the apostle, the latter resisting him on principle.—Rückert, however, supported by Baur and Rübiger, regards Paul's judgment ικανόν κ.τ.λ., as a prudent turn given to the matter, by which, in order to avoid an open rupture, he represents what would have happened even without his will to be his own wish. But what justifies any one in attributing to him conduct so untruthful? The real and great repentance of the sinner (ver. 7) induced the apostle to overlook the incompleteness in carrying out his orders for excommunication, and now from real sincere conviction to pronounce the ἰκανόν and desire his pardon. Comp. above on vv. 5-11. Had Paul not been really convinced that the repentance of the evil-doer had already begun (as even Lipsius, Rechtfertigungsl. p. 183, is inclined to suppose), he would here have pursued a policy of church-discipline quite at variance with his character. Calvin judges very rightly of this passage: "Locus diligenter observandus; docet enim, qua aequitate et clementia temperanda sit disciplina ecclesiae, ne rigor modum excedat. Severitate opus est, ne impunitate (quae peccandi illecebra merito vocatur) mali reddantur audaciores; sed rursus, quia periculum est, ne is qui castigatur animum despondeat, hic adhibenda est moderatio, nempe ut ecclesia, simulatque resipiscentiam illius certo cognoverit, ad dandam veniam sit parata."

Ver. 7. So that you, on the contrary, rather (potius) pardon and comfort. This is the consequence which ensued, connected with the utterance of ἰκανόν κ.τ.λ. Hence the notion of δεῖν (Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 754; Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. ii. 2. 1) is not here to be supplied, as Billroth and Olshausen wish, following the older commentators. It is not said what ought to happen, but what, according to the apostle's conception, ensued as a necessary and essential consequence of the ἰκανόν κ.τ.λ. (Kühner, II. p. 564). The χαρίσασθαι, however, is not at variance with the reference to the adulterer (because forgiveness belongs to God — Bleek, Neander), for what is here spoken of in a general way is only the pardon, which the church imparts in reference to the offence produced in it, the pardon of Christian brethren (Eph. iv. 32; Col. iii. 20). — τῇ περισσοτέρᾳ λύπῃ through the higher degree of affliction, which, namely, would be the consequence of the refusal of pardon, and certainly of the eventual complete excommunication. — καταποθῇ Comp. 1 Cor. xv. 54; 1 Pet. v. 8. This being swallowed up is explained by some, of dying (Grotius, according to his view of an illness of the sinner), by others, of suicide, or of apostasy from Christianity (the latter is held by Theodoret, Pelagius, and others, also Flatt; Kypke and Stolz, following Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, leave a choice between the two); or as conveying a hint that the λύπη bordering on despair might drive him into the world, and he might be devoured by its prince (Olshausen). The latter point: "by the prince of the world," is quite arbitrarily imported. The sadness (conceived as a hostile animal) is what swallows up. The context gives nothing more precise than the notion: to be brought by the sadness to despair, to the abandoning of all hope and of all striving after the Christian salvation.¹ Comp. on κατατρίβειν in the sense of destroying, Jacobs, Animadv. in Athen. p. 315.

Ver. 8. Κυρῶσαι εἰς αὐτ. ἀγάπ.] to resolve in reference to him love—i.e. through a resolution of the church to determine regarding him, that he be regarded and treated as an object of Christian brotherly love. On κυροῦν, of a resolution valid in law, comp. Herodotus, vi. 86, 126; Thuc. viii. 69; Polyb. i. 11. 3, i. 17. 1; Diod. Sic. ii. 9; Gal. iii. 15; Gen. xxiii. 20; 4 Macc. vii. 9. See Blomfield, ad Aesch. Prom. Gloss. 70, and Pers. 232. Here also (comp. on ver. 6) Rückert again finds a prudent measure of the apostle, whereby the form, if not also the thing (the apostolic approval), is saved. A diplomacy, which would be the opposite of i. 13.

Ver. 9. Vv. 9 and 10 are not to be placed in a parenthesis, nor ver. 9 alone (Flatt); but the discourse proceeds without interruption. Ver. 9, namely, begins to furnish grounds for the κυρῶσαι εἰς αὐτὸν ἀγάπην, and, first of all, from the aim of the former Epistle, which aim (in reference to the relation to the incestuous person in the case of most of them at least) was attained, so that now nothing on this point stood in the way of the κυρῶσαι κ.τ.λ. "Correcta enim eorum segnitie nihil jam obstabat, quominus hominem prostratum et jacentem sua mansuetudine erigerent," Calvin. — εἰς τοῦτο] points to the following ἵνα κ.τ.λ., comp. ver. 1. It is: for this end in order that, etc. — καὶ ἔγραψα is not to be translated as if it stood: καὶ γὰρ εἰς τοῦτο ἔγραψα (Flatt, following the older commentators), but as, rightly, in the Vulgate: "ideo enim et scripsi." The καί, however, cannot be intended to mark the agreement with the present admonition (Hofmann), because Paul does not quote what he had written; but it opposes the written to the oral communication (comp. vii. 12), and rests on the conception: I have not confined myself merely to oral directions (through your returning delegates), but—what should bind you all the more to observance—I have also written. This ἔγραψα, however, does not apply to the present Epistle (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Erasmus, Menochius, Wolf, Bengel, Heumann, Schulz, Morus, Olshausen, and others), but, as the whole context shows (comp. vv. 3, 4), to our first Epistle.¹—τὴν δοκιμὴν ὑμ.] your tried quality (viii. 2, ix. 13, xiii. 3; Rom. v. 4; Phil. ii. 22),—i.e. here, according to the following epexegetis, εἰ εἰς πάντα ὑπήκ. ἔστε: your assured submissiveness to me. The aim here stated of the first Epistle was, among its several aims (comp. vv. 3, 4), the very one, which presented itself here from the point of view of the connection.—εἰς πάντα] in reference to everything, in every respect, therefore also in regard to my punitive measure against the incestuous man. Comp. phrases such as εἰς πάντα πρῶτον εἶναι (Plato, Charm. p. 158 A), and the like; εἰς πάντα is here emphatic.

Ver. 10. A second motive for the κυρῶσαι εἰς αὐτὸν ἀγάπ. And to whomsoever (in order to hold before you yet another motive) you give pardon as to anything, to him I also give pardon. Δέ, accordingly, is the simple μεταβατικόν. Rückert wishes to supply a μέν before γάρ in ver. 9, so that ver. 9 and ver. 10 together may give the sense: "It was, indeed, my wish to find perfect obedience among you; but since you are willing to pardon him, I too am willing." But here, too, this supplement is altogether groundless; nay, in this very case, where ver. 9 is referred by γάρ to what goes before, the express marking of the mutual relation of the two clauses would have been logically necessary, and hence μέν must have been used. Further, the meaning contained in Rückert's explanation would express an indifference and accommodation so strangely at variance with the apostolic authority, that the apostle would only have been thereby lowered in the eyes of his readers.—ὃ δέ τι χαρίζεσθε, καὶ ἐγὼ] general assurance (and this general expression remains also in the reason assigned that follows), to which the present special case is subordinated. The reader knew to whom the ὅς and to what the τί were to be applied.—καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ κ.τ.λ.] Reason assigned for what was just said. "For this circumstance, that I also pardon him to whom you pardon anything, rests on reciprocity: what also I on my part have pardoned, if I have pardoned anything, I have pardoned with a regard to you"—i.e. in order that my forgiveness may be followed by yours. This definite meaning of δι' ὑμᾶς (not the general: for your benefit, as Flatt, de Wette, Osiander, and many others have it) is, according to the context, demanded by ὃ τι χαρ., καὶ ἐγώ, in virtue of the logical relation of the clause containing the reason to this assurance. Paul, however, has not again written the present χαρίζομαι, but κεχάρισμαι, because he wishes to hold before his readers his own example, consequently his own precedent already set in the pardon in question. Between this κεχάρισμαι, however, and the χαρίζομαι to be supplied after καὶ ἐγώ, there is no logical contradiction. For in ὃ δέ τι χαρίζεσθε the act of the sinner is considered as an offence to the church; as such, the church is to forgive it, and then the apostle will also forgive it: but in καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ ὁ κεχάρισμαι it is conceived as a vexation to the apostle; as such, Paul has forgiven it, and that δι' ὑμᾶς, for the sake of the church, in order that it too may now give free course to the pardon which the offence produced in it needed.¹ To this thoughtful combination of the various references of the act, and to the placable spirit by which the representation is pervaded, the intervening clause εἴ τι κεχάρισμαι corresponds, which is by no means intended to make the act of pardon problematical (de Wette), or to designate it only as eventual, turning on the supposition of the church granting forgiveness (Billroth), but contains a delicate reference back to ver. 5, in this sense, namely: if—seeing that the sinner, according to ver. 5, has not properly grieved me, but you—that which I designate as κεχάρισμαι is really this; for the having pardoned presupposes the pardoner to be the injured party, which Paul, however, ver. 5, denied himself to be.—Against all versions, Fathers and expositors, Rückert has taken κεχάρισμαι passively² of the pardoning grace which Paul experienced through his conversion. The sense would thus be: "for whatever I have got pardoned, if I have got anything pardoned, I have got it pardoned for your sakes (in order as apostle of the Gentiles to lead you to salvation)." See my third edition. This exposition is incorrect, partly because there is nothing in the text to suggest an allusion to the apostle's conversion; partly because this pardoning grace was to him so firm and certain, and, in fact, the whole psychological basis of his working, that he could not, even in the most humble reminiscence of his pre-Christian conduct (comp. 1 Cor. xv. 9, 10), have presented it as problematical by εἴ τι κεχάρισμαι; partly because with this problematical inserted clause the very ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ (explained by Rückert: "on the countenance of Christ beaming with God's grace") would be at variance. — ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ] i.e. in conspectu Christi, comp. Prov. viii. 30, Eccclus. xxxii. 4, denotes the having pardoned, in so far as it has taken place δι' ὑμᾶς, in its fullest purity and truth. It has taken place in presence of Christ, so that He was witness of it. Interpretations at variance with the words are: in Christ's stead (Vulgate, Ambrosiaster, Luther, Calovius, Wetstein, and others): by Christ, as an oath (Emmerling), and others. Hofmann, who without reason maintains that according to our view it must have run ὡς ἐν προσώπῳ Χ., attaches the words to what follows, so that they would precede the ἵνα by way of emphasis, like τ. ἀγάπην, ver. 4 (see on Rom. xi. 31), and the meaning would be: Christ should not be obliged to be a spectator of how Satan deprives His church of one of its members. This interpretation could only be justified if we were in any way by the context prepared for the ἐν προσώπῳ Χ., thus taken as a specially tragic feature of the devil's guile. Besides, the thought that the devil injures the church under the eyes of Christ, would be nowhere else expressed. — Observe, further, how, according to this passage, the penitence of the sinner, just as much as the removal of the offence to the church, is the aim of church-discipline, and hence its initiation and cessation are to be measured accordingly; but the Roman Catholic doctrine of indulgence¹ is at variance with this.

² This passive use would in itself be correct as to language. See Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. i. 2. 10. The transitive use, however, is the more usual one, as at Gal. lii. 18; Acts xxvii. 24.

Ver. 11. Aim of this pardon imparted δι' ὑμᾶς: that we might not be overreached, etc. A being overreached by Satan, the enemy of Christ and of Christianity, would be the result if that pardon were refused to the sinner, and thereby his καταποθῆναι τῇ περισσοτέρᾳ λύπῃ were brought about; for thereby Satan would get a member of the church into his power, and thus derive advantage to our loss. On the passive πλεονεκτεῖσθαι, comp. Dem. 1035, 26. The subject is Paul and the Corinthian church.—οὐ γὰρ αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ.] “By Satan, I say, for his thoughts (what he puts forward as product of his νοῦς; comp. on iii. 14, iv. 4, x. 5, xi. 3) are not unknown to us.” νοήματα ἀγνοοῦμεν forms a paronomasia. These thoughts: 1 Pet. v. 8; Eph. vi. 11. The discerning of them in the individual case is spiritual prudence, which we have in the possession of the νοῦς of Christ (1 Cor. ii. 16).

Vv. 12, 13. Since Paul, by mentioning the mood in which he had written his former Epistle (ver. 4), was led on to discuss the case of the conscious sinner and the pardon to be bestowed on him (vv. 5–11), he has only now to carry on the historical thread which he had begun in vv. 4 and 5.¹ There he had said with what great grief he wrote our first Epistle. Now, he tells how, even after his departure from Ephesus, this disquieting anxiety about his readers did not leave him, but urged him on from Troas to Macedonia without halting. This he introduces by δέ, which after the end of the section, vv. 5–11, joins on again to ver. 4 (Hartung, Partik. I. p. 173; Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 21). Billroth attempts to connect it with what immediately precedes: “His designs are not unknown to us; all the more I had no rest.” Against this may be urged, not that ἀλλά must have stood instead of δέ, as Rückert thinks (see Hartung, l.c. I. p. 171 f.; Baeumlein, Partik. p. 95); but rather that between the emphatically prefixed οὐ γὰρ αὐτοῦ, ver. 11, and ἐλθὼν δέ, no logical relation of contrast exists.—εἰς τὴν Τρωάδα] from Ephesus on the journey which was to take him through Macedonia to Corinth. 1 Cor. xvi. 5–9.—εἰς τὸ εὐαγγ. τοῦ Χ.] Aim of the *ἐλθ. εἰς τ. He might, indeed, have come to Troas without wishing to preach, perhaps only as a traveller passing through it. All the more groundless is the involved connection of the εἰς τ. εὐαγγ. with

Therefore he continues : But thanks be to God, etc., placing first not χάρις, as in most cases (viii. 16, ix. 15), but τῷ Θεῷ, because, in very contrast to his own weakness, the helping God, whom he has to thank, comes into his mind. Calvin and Bengel. Against the context ; for, after the description of the anxiety and disquiet, the utterance of thanks must relate to the release from this state (comp. Rom. vii. 24 f.). The apostle, however, in the fulness of his gratitude to God, includes (and thereby makes known) his special experience of the guidance of divine grace at that time in the general thanksgiving for the latter, as he experiences it always in his calling. This also in opposition to Hofmann, who abides by the general nature of the thanksgiving, and that in contrast to the declaration that the apostle did not preach in Troas in spite of the good opportunity found there. — τῷ πάντοτε θριαμβεύοντι ἡμᾶς] given rightly by the Vulgate: "qui semper triumphat nos," is taken by many older expositors (Luther, Beza, Estius, Grotius, and others), and by some more recent (Emmerling, Flatt, Rückert, Olshausen, Osiander): who makes us always triumph.¹ It is certainly a current Greek custom to give to neuter verbs a factitive construction and meaning. See in general, Matthiae, p. 1104, 944; Fritzsche, ad Matth. p. 250; Bähr, ad Ctes. p. 132; Lobeck, ad Aj. 40, 869. Comp. from the N. The suitableness of the sense cannot be denied, but the actual usage is against it; for θριαμβεύειν τινά has never that assumed factitive sense, but always means triumphare de aliquo, to conduct, to present any one in triumph; so that the accusative is never the triumphing subject, but always the object of the triumph, as Plut. Thes. et Rom. 4: βασιλεῖς ἐθριάμβευσε καὶ ἡγεμόνας, also Plut. Mor. p. 318 B, θριαμβ. νίκην. Quite similar is the Latin triumphare aliquem. See in general, Wetstein; Kypke, II. p. 243. Comp. also Hofmann on the passage. Paul himself follows this usage, see Col. ii. 15. We are thus the less authorized to depart from it. Hence it is to be translated: who always triumphs over us (apostolic teachers)—i.e.

¹ To this also the expositions of Chrysostom and Theophylact ultimately amount. The latter says: ἡμᾶς οὖν ὁ Θεὸς μετὰ τῶν κατὰ τοῦ διαβόλου τροπαίων περιφανίς ποιῶ. So in substance Chrysa. Comp. Ambrosiaster, Anselm, and others.

who does not cease to represent us as his vanquished before all the world, as a triumpher celebrates his victories. In this figurative aspect Paul considers himself and his like as conquered by God through their conversion to Christ. And after this victory of God his triumph now consists in all that those conquered by their conversion effect as servants and instruments of God for the Messianic kingdom in the world; it is by the results of apostolic activity that God continually, as if in triumph, shows Himself to the eyes of all as the victor, to whom His conquered are subject and serviceable. For the concrete instance before us, this perpetual triumph of God exhibited itself in the happy result which He wrought in Corinth through the apostle's letter (as Paul learned in Macedonia through Titus, vii. 6). Note further, how naturally with Paul this very conception of his working, as a continual triumph of God over him, might proceed from the painful remembrance of his earlier persecution of the church of God, and how at the same time this whole conception is an expression of the same humility, in which he, 1 Cor. xv. 10, gives to God alone the glory of his working. Jerome, ad Hedib. 11, translates rightly: triumphat nos or de nobis, but quite alters the sense of the word again by the interpretation: "triumphum suum agit per nos." Theodoret does not do justice to the notion of the triumph, when he merely explains it: ὅς σοφῶς τὰ καθ' ἡμᾶς πρυτανεύων τῇδε κάκεισε περιάγει δήλους ἡμᾶς ἅπασιν ἀποφαινών. Wetstein is more exact, but also takes the element of leading about, and not that of celebrating the victory, as the point of comparison: "Deus nos tanquam in triumpho circumducit, ut non maneamus in loco, aut in alium proficiscamur pro lubito nostro, sed ut placet sapientissimo moderatori. Quem Damasci vicit, non Romae et semel, sed per totum terrarum orbem, quamdiu vivit, in triumpho ducit." Comp. Krause, Opusc. p. 125 f. The conception of antiquity, according to which the θριαμβευόμενος is necessarily the conquered, is quite abandoned by Calvin,¹ Elsner, Bengel: "qui triumpho nos ostendit, non ut victos, sed ut victoriae suae ministros." So also de Wette, and substantially Ewald: comp. Erasmus, Annot. — ἐν Χριστῷ] Christ is the element in which that constant triumph of God takes place: no fact in which that consists has its sphere out of Christ: each is of specifically Christian quality. — The following καὶ τ. ὁσμὴν κ.τ.λ. declares what God effects through this His triumphing. That αὐτοῦ refers not to God (so usually, as also Hofmann, following the Vulgate), but to Christ (Bengel, Osiander), is shown by ver. 15. The genitive τῆς γνώσεως αὐτοῦ is the genitive of apposition (comp. i. 22), so that the knowledge of Christ is symbolized as an odour which God everywhere makes manifest through the apostolic working, inasmuch as He by that means brings it to pass that the knowledge of Christ everywhere exhibits and communicates its nature and its efficacy. How does Paul come upon this image? Through the conception of the triumph; for such an event took place amid perfumes of incense: hence to assume no connection between the two images (Osiander) is arbitrary. To think of ointments (Oecumenius, Grotius), or of these as included (Chrysostom, Theophylact, Beza¹), is alien to the first image; and it is as alien to suppose that a closed vessel, filled with perfume, is meant, and that the φανεροῦντι points to the opening of the same (Hofmann). Observe, moreover, that by δι' ἡμῶν (since the ἡμεῖς are those conducted in the triumph, οἱ θριαμβευόμενοι) the thing itself finds its way into the image, and by this the latter loses in congruity.

Ver. 15 f. Further confirmatory development of the previous καὶ τ. ὁσμὴν κ.τ.λ., in which, however, Paul does not keep to the continuity of the figure, but, with his versatility of view, now represents the apostolic teachers themselves as odour. — Χριστοῦ εὐωδία] may mean a perfume produced by Christ, or one filled with Christ, breathing of Christ. The latter (Calvin, Estius, Bengel, Rückert, Osiander, and most expositors; comp. also Hofmann) corresponds better with the previous ὁσμὴ τῆς γνώσεως αὐτοῦ, and is more in keeping with the emphasis which the prefixed Χριστοῦ has, because otherwise the εὐωδία would remain quite undefined as regards its essential quality. The sense of the figurative expression is: for our working stands in the specific relation to God, as a perfume breathing of Christ. The image itself is considered by most (comp. Ritschl in the Jahrb. für d. Th. 1863, p. 258) as borrowed from the sacrificial fragrance (so also Billroth, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Osiander, Ewald), on which account appeal is made to the well-known ὁσμὴ εὐωδίας of the LXX., יִחַיִּי יִחַיִּי, Lev. i. 9, 13, 17, al. But as Paul, wherever else he uses the image of sacrifice, marks it distinctly, as Eph. v. 2, Phil. iv. 18, and in the present passage the statedly used ὁσμὴ εὐωδίας does not stand at all, it is more probable that he was not thinking of an odour of sacrifice (which several, like Billroth, Ewald, Ritschl, find already in ὁσμὴ, ver. 14), but of the odours of incense that accompanied the triumphal procession; these are to God a fragrance, redolent to Him of Christ. That in this is symbolized the relation of the acceptableness to God of the apostolic working, is seen from the very word chosen, εὐωδία, which Hofmann misconstrues by explaining τῷ θεῷ to God's service. — καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλ.] and among those, who are incurring eternal death; comp. iv. 3. See on 1 Cor. i. 18. Grotius strangely wishes to supply here κακωδία ex vi contrarii. It is, in fact, the relation to God that is spoken of, according to which the working of the apostle is to Him εὐωδία, whether the odour be exhaled among σωζόμενοι or ἀπολλυμένοι. Comp. Chrysostom. To take ἐν in the sense of operative on (Osiander) anticipates what follows. Comp. iv. 3. — Ver. 16 specifies now the different relation of this odour to the two classes. Paul, however, does not again use εὐωδία, but the in itself indifferent ὁσμὴ, because the former would be unsuitable for the first half, while the latter suits both halves. — ἐκ θανάτου εἰς θάνατον] an odour, which arises from death and produces death. The source, namely, of the odour is Christ, and He, according to the idea of the λίθος τοῦ προσκόμματος (Rom. ix. 33; 1 Pet. ii. 8; Acts iv. 11), is for those who refuse the faith the author of eternal death.¹ For them, therefore, in accordance with their inward attitude towards Him, Christ, the source of the odour, i.e. of the apostolic activity, is death, and also the effect is death, though

Christ in Himself is and works eternal life. Comp. Matt. xxi. 44 : Luke ii. 34. Hence Christ, by means of the κρίσις which He brings with Him, is the source respectively of death and life, according as His preaching is accepted by one to salvation, is rejected by another to destruction. In the latter case the blame of Christ's being θάνατος, although he is, as respects His nature and destination, ζωή, lies on the side of man in his resistance and stubbornness. Comp. 1 Cor. i. 23, also John ix. 39, iii. 18 f., xii. 48. "Semper ergo distinguendum est proprium evangelii officium ab accidentali (ut ita loquar), quod hominum pravitati imputandum est, qua fit, ut vita illis vertatur in mortem," Calvin. Comp. Düsterdieck on 1 John, I. p. 166. This, at the same time, in opposition to Rückert, who objects that the apostolic activity and preaching can in no way be regarded as proceeding from θάνατος, and who therefore prefers the Recepta,¹ in which Reiche and Neander agree. Gregory of Nyssa remarks aptly in Oecumenius: κατὰ τὴν προσοῦσαν ἐκάστῳ διάθεσιν ἡ ζωοποιὸς ἐγένετο, ἡ θανατηφόρος ἡ εὐπνοία. Quite similar forms of expression are found in the Rabbins, who often speak of an aroma (אָרומָה, see Buxt. Lex. Talm. p. 1494 ; L. Cappellus on the passage), or odor vitae and mortis, see in Wetstein and Schoettgen. — καὶ πρὸς ταῦτα τίς ἱκανός ;] This no longer depends on the ὅτι of ver. 15 (Hofmann), a connection to which the interrogatory form would be so thoroughly unsuitable that no reader could have lighted on it ; but after Paul has expressed the great, decisive efficacy of his calling, there comes into his mind the crowd of disingenuous teachers as a contrast to that exalted destination of the office, and with the quickly interjected καί he hence asks with emotion : And who is for this (i.e. for the work symbolized in vv. 15 and 16) fit ? Who is qualified for this ? The τίς is intentionally pushed towards the end of the question, in order to arrest reflection at the important πρὸς ταῦτα, and then to bring in the question itself by surprise. Comp. Herod. v. 33 : σοὶ δὲ καὶ τούτοις τοῖσι πράγμασι τί ἔστι ; Plat. Conv. p. 204 D :

¹ According to the Recepta, which Hofmann also follows, ὁσμὴ ζωῆς is life-giving odour, and ὁσμὴ θανάτου is deadly odour ; ὡς θάνατος and ὡς ζ. would then be solemn additions of the final result, which actually ensues from the life-giving deadly power of the odour. According to Hofmann, the genitives are intended to mean : in which they get to smell of death and of life respectively. But comp. expressions like ἄρτος ζ. ζωῆς, φῶς ζ. ζωῆς, λόγος ζωῆς, ῥήματα ζωῆς.

Ver. 17. The answer to the foregoing question is not to be supplied, so that it should be conceived as negative (εἰ δὲ μὴ ἱκανοί, χάριτος τὸ γινόμενον, Chrysostom, Neander, Hofmann, and others), but it is given, though indirectly, in ver. 17 itself, inasmuch as the expression introduced by γάρ readily suggests to the reader the conclusion, that the subjects of ἐσμεν, i.e. Paul and his like, are the ἱκανοί, and that the πολλοί are not so. See Klotz, ad Devar. p. 240; Baeumlein, Partik. p. 83. If Paul had wished to convey in his question the negative statement, "No one is capable of this," he could not but have added a limiting ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ or the like (comp. iii. 5), in order to place the reader in the right point of view. — οἱ πολλοί] the known many, the anti-Pauline teachers.¹ Comp. xi. 13; Phil. iii. 18. See on οἱ πολλοί "de certis quibusdam et definitis multis," Ellendt, Lex. Soph. II. p. 603; comp. also Rom. xii. 5. To understand by it the majority of the Christian teachers in general, is to throw a shadow on the apostolic church, which its history as known to us at least does not justify. — καπηλεύοντες] belongs to ἐσμέν. The verb means (1) to carry on the business of a κάπηλος, a retailer, particularly a vintner; (2) to negotiate; (3) to practise usury with anything (τι), in particular, by adulteration, since the κάπηλοι adulterated the wine (LXX. Isa. i. 22), and in general, had an evil reputation for cheating (κάπηλα τεχνήματα, Aesch. Fragm. 328 D). In this sense the word is also used by the Greeks of intellectual objects, as Plato, Protag. p. 313 D: οἱ τὰ μαθήματα . . . καπηλεύοντες. Comp. Lucian, Hermot. 59: φιλόσοφοι ἀποδίδονται τὰ μαθήματα ὥσπερ οἱ κάπηλοι, κερασάμενοί γε οἱ πολλοὶ καὶ δολώσαντες καὶ κακομετροῦντες. Philostr. 16: τὴν σοφίαν καπηλεύειν. So also here: comp. the opposite ἐξ εἰλικρ. and iv. 2. Hence: we practise no deceitful usury with the word of God, as those do, who, with selfish intention, dress up what they preach as the word of God palatably and as people wish to hear it, and for that end τὰ αὐτῶν ἀναμυγνύουσι τοῖς θεοῖς, Chrysostom. Comp. 2 Pet.

ii. 3. Such are named in Ignat. Trall. (interpol.) 6, comp. 10, χριστέμποροι, and are described as τὸν ἰὸν προσπλέκοντες τῆς πλάνης τῇ γλυκεῖᾳ προσηγορίᾳ. — ἀλλ' ὥς ἐξ εἰλικρ.] but we speak (λαλοῦμεν) as one speaks from sincerity of mind (which has no dealings with adulteration), so that what we speak proceeds from an honest heart and thought. Comp. i. 12. ὥς is as in John i. 14. On ἐκ, compare John iii. 31, viii. 44; 1 John iv. 5. — ἀλλ' ὥς ἐκ θεοῦ] but as one speaks from God (who is in the speaker), as θεόπνευστος. Comp. Matt. x. 20; 1 Cor. xiv. 25; 2 Cor. v. 20. The ἀλλά is repeated in the lively climax of the thought. Comp. vii. 11, and see on 1 Cor. vi. 11. Rückert strangely wishes to connect it with τὸν λόγον, and to supply ὄντα. So also Estius ("tanquam profectum et acceptum a Deo"), Emmerling, and others. That is, in fact, impossible after ἀλλ' ὥς ἐξ εἰλικρ. — κατέναντι θεοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ] Since neither ἀλλά nor ὥς is repeated before κατέναντι, Paul himself indicates the connection and division: "but as from sincerity, but as from God, we speak before God in Christ," so that the commas after the twice-occurring θεοῦ are, with Lachmann and Tischendorf, to be deleted. This in opposition to the opinion cherished also by Hofmann, that κατέναντι θεοῦ and ἐν Χριστῷ are two modal definitions of λαλοῦμεν, running parallel with the foregoing points. — κατέναντι θεοῦ] before God, with the consciousness of having Him present as witness. Comp. Rom. iv. 17. — ἐν Χριστῷ] can neither mean Christi nomine (Grotius, comp. Luther, Estius, Calovius, Zachariae, Heumann, Schulz, Rosenmüller), nor de Christo (Beza, Cornelius a Lapide, Morus, Flatt), nor secundum Christum (Calvin), but it is the habitually employed expression in Christo. We speak in Christo, in so far as Christ is the sphere in which our speaking moves. Comp. xii. 19; Rom. ix. 1. In Him we live and move with our speaking, οὐδὲν τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ σοφίᾳ ἀλλὰ τῇ παρ' ἐκείνου δυνάμει ἐνηχούμενοι, Chrysostom.

CONTENTS.¹—This, again, is no recommendation of self; for we need no letters of recommendation, since you yourselves are our letter of recommendation in the higher sense (vv. 1–3). But with this confidence we wish to ascribe our ability not to ourselves, but to God, who has made us able as servants of the new covenant, far exalted over the old covenant (vv. 4–6). How glorious is this service compared with the service of Moses (vv. 7–11)! Hence we discharge it boldly, not like Moses with his veil over his face (vv. 12, 13). By this veil the Jews were hardened; for up to the present time they do not discern that the old covenant has ceased (vv. 14, 15). But when they are converted to Christ, they will come to unhindered discernment; we Christians, in fact, all behold without hindrance the glory of Christ, and become ourselves partakers of it (vv. 16–18).

Ver. 1. Ἀρχόμεθα] namely, through what was said in ii. 17, regarding which Paul foresaw that his opponents would describe it as the beginning of another recommendation of himself. It is interrogative, not to be taken, with Hofmann, who then reads ἡ μή, as an affirmation, in which case a logical relation to the question that follows could only be brought out by importing something.² — πάλιν] belongs to ἐαυτ. συνιστ., and refers to experiences, through which Paul must have passed already before, certainly also in respect to his last Epistle (1 Cor. i.–iv., v., ix., xiv. 17, al.), when the charge was made: ἐαυτὸν συνιστάνει! As to the reason why he regards the ἐαυτὸν συνιστάνειν to be such a reproach, see x. 18. — In the plural he in this chapter includes also Timothy, as is clear from expressions such as immediately occur in ver. 2, ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμ., and ver. 6, ἡμᾶς διακόνους. — συνιστάνειν] as at Rom. xvi. 1. Hence ἐπιστολαὶ συστατικαὶ or γράμματα συστατικά (Arrian. Epict. ii. 3. 1; Diog. L. v. 18, viii. 87), letters of recommendation. Regarding their use in the ancient Christian church, see Suicer, Theol. II. p. 1194; Dought. Anal. II. p. 120. — εἰ μὴ κ.τ.λ.] nisi, i.e. unless it possibly be, that, etc. Only if this exigency takes place with us, can that ἄρχονται πάλιν ἑαυτοὺς συνιστάνειν be asserted of us. Such epistolary recommendations, indeed, we should not have, and hence we should have to resort to self-praise! The expression is ironical in character, and contains an answer to that question, which reveals its absurdity. Comp. Xen. Mem. i. 2. 8. Hence εἰ is not to be taken, with Reiche, as siquidem or quia, and μή as negating the χρήζομεν (as if it were εἰ οὐ χρήζ.). — ὥς τινες] as some people (comp. 1 Cor. iv. 18, xv. 12; Gal. i. 7), certainly a side-glance at anti-Pauline teachers, who had brought to the Corinthians letters of recommendation, either from teachers of repute, or from churches,¹ and had obtained similar letters from Corinth at their departure thence. — πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἣ ἐξ ὑμῶν] In the former case, it might be thought that we wished to supply this need by recommendation of ourselves; in the latter case (ἣ ἐξ ὑμῶν), that we, by our self-recommendation, wished to corrupt your judgment, and to induce you to recommend us to others. Both would be absurd, but this is just in keeping with the irony.

Ver. 2 f. This ironical excitement, ver. 1, is succeeded by earnestness and pathos. Paul, as conscious of his deserts in regard to the Corinthians as he is faithful to his Christian humility (see ver. 3), gives a skilful explanation of the thought contained in ver. 1: we need no letters of introduction either to you or from you. — ἡ ἐπιστολὴ ἡμῶν] i.e. the letter (the letter of recommendation) which we have, have to show, namely, as well to you as from you

That we should understand both, is required by ver. 1, and to this vv. 2 and 3 are admirably suited, since what is said in them represents every letter of recommendation as well to the Corinthians as from them as superfluous. This in opposition to Flatt, Rückert, Osiander, and others, who are of opinion that Paul has reference merely to his previous ἐξ ὑμῶν, and (Rückert) that the πρὸς ὑμᾶς has been said only to hit his opponents. — ὑμεῖς ἐστε] in so far, namely, as your conversion, and your whole Christian being and life, is our work, redounding to our commendation. Comp. 1 Cor. ix. 2. — ἐγγεγραμμ. ἐν ταῖς καρδ. ἡμ.] A more precise definition of the manner of the ἐπιστολὴ ἡμῶν: inscribed in our hearts. This is the mode—adapted to the image—of conveying the thought: since we have in our own consciousness the certainty of being recommended to you by yourselves and to others by you. That you yourselves are our recommendation (to yourselves and to others) our own hearts tell us, and it is known by all. Paul did not write ὑμῶν, as K and a few cursives, also the Ethiopic, have the reading, which Olearius, Emmerling, Flatt, and especially Rinck (Lucubr. crit. p. 160), recommend to our adoption: for in that case there would result an incongruity in the figurative conception, since the Corinthians themselves are the letter. Besides, there were so many malevolents in the church. But the apostle's own good consciousness was, as it were, the tablet on which this living Epistle of the Corinthians stood, and that had to be left unassailed even by the most malevolent. Of the love (comp. vii. 3; Phil. i. 7) of which Chrysostom and others explain ἐν τ. καρδ. ἡμ. (comp. Wetstein: “quam tenero vos amore prosequar, omnes norunt”), there is no mention in the whole context. Emmerling is wrong, however, also in saying that ἐγγεγρ. ἐν τ. καρδ. ἡμ. is equivalent to the mere nobis inscriptae, i.e. quas ubique nobiscum gestamus, ut cognosci et legi ab omnibus possint. Just because what is written stands within in the consciousness, ἐν ταῖς καρδ. ἡμ.¹ is used. — The plural is neither to be explained, with Billroth, from the analogy of σπλάγχνα (without such usage existing), nor to be considered with Rückert and de Wette as occasioned by the plural of the speaking person (to whom, however, the plural hearts would not be suitable), but Paul writes in name of himself and of Timothy. Comp. also iv. 6, vii 3, and see Calvin, who, however, in an arbitrary way (see i. 1) includes Silvanus also (i. 19). — γνωσκομένη κ.τ.λ.] This appears to contradict the previous words, according to which the Epistle is written ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν; hence Fritzsche, Diss. I. p. 19 f. (Billroth follows him), says that Paul “nonnulla adjicere, in quibus Corinthiorum potius, quam epistolae, cum qua eos comparat, memor esse videatur.” But he rather presents the thing as it is, and hence cannot otherwise delineate the image of the Epistle in which he presents it, than as it corresponds to the thing. In so far, namely, as Paul and Timothy have in their hearts the certainty of being recommended by the Corinthians themselves, these are a letter of recommendation which stands inscribed in the hearts of those teachers; and yet, since from the whole phenomenon of the Christian life of the church it cannot remain unknown to any one that the Corinthians redound to the commendation of Paul and Timothy, and how they do so, this letter is known as what it is, and *read*¹ by all men. The Epistle has therefore in fact the two qualities, which in a letter proper would be contradictory, and the image is not confounded with the thing, but is adapted to the thing. Rückert, who likewise (see above) finds for ἐν τ. καρδ. the reference to the apostle's love, explains it: “In his heart they stand written . . . and where he himself arrives, there he, as it were, reads out this writing, when from a loving heart gives forth tidings everywhere, what a prosperous church the Lord has gathered to Himself in Corinth.” Comp. Chrysostom. But in that case the πάντες would not in fact be the readers—as yet they ought to be according to ὑπὸ πάντων ἀνθρ.—but Paul; and the thing would resolve itself into a self-recommendation, which is yet held to be disclaimed in ver. 1.

Ver. 3. Φανερούμενοι] attaches itself in construction to ὑμεῖς ἐστε, to which it furnishes a more precise definition, and that in elucidative reference to what has just been said γνωσκομένη . . . ἀνθρώπων: since you are being manifested to be an epistle of Christ, i.e. since it does not remain hid, but becomes (continually) clear to every one that you, etc. Comp. on the construction, 1 John ii. 19. — ἐπιστολὴ Χριστοῦ] genitivus auctoris (not of the contents—in opposition to Chrysostom, Oecumenius, Theophylact): a letter composed (dictated) by Christ. Fritzsche, l.c. p. 23, takes the genitive as possessive, so that the sense without figure would be: homines Christiani estis. But in what follows the whole origin of the Epistle is very accurately set forth, and should the author not be mentioned—not in that case be placed in front? Theodoret already gives the right view.—ἐπιστολή is here not again specially letter of recommendation (ver. 2), but letter in general; for through the characteristic: “you are an epistle of Christ, drawn up by us,” etc., the statement above: “you are our letter of recommendation,” is to be elucidated and made good.—In the following διακονηθεῖσα . . . σαρκίναις Paul presents himself and Timothy as the writers of the epistle of Christ (διακον. ὑφ’ ἡμ.), the Holy Spirit as the means of writing in lieu of ink, and human hearts, i.e. according to the context, the hearts of the Corinthians, as the material which is written upon. For Christ was the author of their Christian condition; Paul and Timothy were His instruments for their conversion, and by their ministry the Holy Spirit became operative in the hearts of the readers. In so far the Corinthians, in their Christian character, are as it were a letter which Christ has caused to be written, through Paul and Timothy, by means of the Holy Spirit in their hearts. On the passive expression διακονηθ. ὑφ’ ἡμ., comp. viii. 19 f.; Mark x. 45; note also the change of the tenses: διακονηθ. and ἐγγεγραμμ. (the epistle is there ready); likewise the designation of the Holy Spirit as πνεῦμα θεοῦ ζῶντος, comp. ver. 6. We may add that Paul has not mixed up heterogeneous traits of the figure of a letter begun in ver. 2 (Rückert and others), but here, too, he carries out this figure, as it corresponds to the thing to be figured thereby. The single incongruity is οὐκ ἐν πλαξὶ λιθίναις, in which he has not retained the conception of a letter (which is written on tablets of paper), but has thought generally of a writing to be read. Since, however, he has conceived of such writing as divinely composed (see above, πνεύματι θεοῦ ζῶντος), of which nature was the law of Sinai, the usual supposition is right, that he has been induced to express himself thus by the remembrance of the tables of the law (Heb. ix. 4; comp. Jer. xxxi. 31-33); for we have no reason to deny that the subsequent mention of them (ver. 7) was even now floating before his mind. Fritzsche, indeed, thinks that "accommodate ad nonnulla V. T. loca (Prov. iii. 3, vii. 3) cordis notionem per tabulas cordis expressurus erat, quibus tabulis carnis nihil tam commode quam tabulas lapideas opponere potuerit." But he might quite as suitably have chosen an antithesis corresponding to the figure of a letter (2 John 12; 2 Tim. iv. 13); hence it is rather to be supposed that he came to use the expression tabulae cordis, just because he had before his mind the idea of the tables of the law. — The antitheses in our passage are intended to bring out that here an epistle is composed in quite another and higher sense than an ordinary letter (which one brings into existence μέλανι σπείρων διὰ καλάμου, Plato, Phaedr. p. 276 C)—a writing, which is not to be compared even with the Mosaic tables of the law. But the purpose of a contrast with the legalism of his opponents (Klöpfer) is not conveyed in the context. — That there is a special purpose in the use of σαρκίναις as opposed to λιθίναις, cannot be doubted after the previous antitheses. It must imply the notion of something better (comp. Ezek. xi. 19, xxxvi. 26), namely, the thought of the living receptivity and susceptibility: δεκτικὰς τοῦ λόγου (Theophylact, Calvin, Stolz, Flatt, de Wette, Osiander, Ewald, and others). The distinctive sense of σαρκινός is correctly noted by Erasmus: "ut materiam intelligas, non qualitatem." Comp. on 1 Cor. iii. 1. Καρδίας is also the genitive of material, and the contrast would have been sufficiently denoted by ἀλλ' ἐν πλαξὶ καρδίας: it is, however, expressed more concretely and vividly by the added σαρκίναις: in fleshy tablets of the heart.

Ver. 4. Πειροίθησιν is emphatic, and therefore precedes (otherwise in i. 15); confidence, however, of such a kind as is indicated in vv. 2, 3; for there Paul has expressed a lofty self-consciousness. Hence there is no reason for seeking a reference to something earlier instead of to what immediately precedes, and for connecting it with ii. 17 (Grotius and others, including de Wette; comp. Rückert), or with ii. 14-17, as Hofmann has done in consequence of his taking ἀρχόμεθα in ver. 1 as not interrogative. Brief and apt is Luther's gloss: "Confidence, that we have prepared you to form the epistle."—διὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ] through Christ, who brings it about in us: for in his official capacity Paul knows himself to be under the constant influence of Christ, without which he would not have that confidence. Theodoret says well: τοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦτο ἡμῖν δεδωκός τὸ θάρσος. — πρὸς τὸν θεόν] in relation to God, as bringing about the successful results of the apostolic activity. It denotes the religious direction, in which he has such confidence (comp. Rom. iv. 2, v. 1), not the validity before God (de Wette).

Ver. 5. Now comes the caveat, for which ver. 4 has prepared the way,—the guarding against the possible objection, that Paul considered himself (and Timothy) as originator of the ability for apostolic working. οὐχ ὅτι is therefore not to be taken as equivalent to ὅτι οὐχ (Mosheim, Schulz, Emmerling), nor is πέποιθα to be supplied again after οὐχ (Emmerling); but we have here the quite common use of οὐχ ὅτι for οὐκ ἐρῶ, ὅτι. See on i. 24. Rückert finds in οὐχ ὅτι κ.τ.λ. a reason assigned for the πρὸς τὸν θεόν, or an explanation of it: "In thus speaking, I would not have it thought that," etc. But if in πρὸς τ. θεόν there was meant to be conveyed the same idea as was further explained in ver. 5, Paul would have expressed himself quite illogically, and in explaining or assigning a reason for it he must have written ὅτι οὐχ. No; the course of thought is: "With this πεποιθήσις, however, I do not wish to be misunderstood or misconstrued: I do not mean by it, that we are of ourselves sufficient," etc. With this connection πρὸς τὸν θεόν is not at variance; for by it God was not yet meant as author of the adequate ability (ver. 5 shows this very point), but as producer of the result. — λογίσασθαι τι] to judge anything (censere). The context furnishes the more precise definition which Paul had in view. Vv. 2–4, 6. He denies, namely, that of himself he possesses the ability to settle in his judgment the means and ways, and, in general, the mode of discharging his apostolic duties. If he has just been speaking in vv. 2–4 with so much confidence of his prosperous and successful labour in Corinth, yet it is by no means his own ability, but the divine empowering, which enables him to determine by his own judgment anything regarding the discharge of his vocation. Accordingly, we can neither approve the meaning arbitrarily given to τι, aliquid praeclari (Emmerling; van Hengel, Annot. p. 219), nor agree with Hofmann, who, in consistency with his reference of πεποιθήσις to ii. 14–17, makes the apostle guard against the misconception that this, his πεποιθησις, rests on ideas which he forms for himself—on an estimate of his official working, according to a standard elaborated by his own mind. Even apart from that erroneous reference of the πεποίθησις, the very expression ικανοί would be unsuitable to the meaning adopted by Hofmann, and instead of it a notion of presumption would rather have been in place; the prominence given to ικανότης by its being used thrice can only concern the ability which regulates the official labour itself. The dogmatic exposition, disregarding the context, finds here the entire inability of the natural man for all good. See Augustine, de dono persever. 13, contra Pelag. 8; Calvin: “non poterat magis hominem nudare omni bono.” Comp. Beza, Calovius, and others, including Olshausen. The reference also of the words to the doctrinal contents of the preaching, which was not derived from his own reflection (Theodoret, Grotius, de Wette, Neander, and others), is not suggested by the connection, and is forbidden by the fact that ἀφ’ ἐαυτῶν does not belong to λογίσασθε at all (see below). This also in opposition to Osiander, who finds the meaning: “not human, but divine thoughts lie at the root of the whole of my official work.” — ἀφ’ ἐαυτῶν] has its assured place after λογίσ. τι (see the critical remarks). The contrast that follows (ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ) decides what it belongs to in sense,—namely, not to λογίσασθαί τι, but to ικανοί ἐσμεν,—so that ικανοί ἐσμεν λογίσασθαί τι is to be considered as going together, as one idea. Mistaking this, Rückert thinks that either Paul has placed the words wrongly, or the order given by B C 8 (see the critical remarks) must be preferred. — On ἀφ’ ἐαυτοῦ, from one's own means, nemine suppeditante, see Wetstein. — ὡς ἐξ ἐαυτῶν] sc. ικανοὶ ὄντες λογίσ. τι, a more precise definition of the ἀφ’ ἐαυτ. inserted on purpose (making the notice thoroughly exhaustive). The proceeding from (ἀπό) is still more definitely marked as causal procession (ἐκ): as from ourselves, i.e. as if our ability to judge anything had its origin from ourselves. Wolf arbitrarily refers ἀπό to the will, and ἐξ to the power; and Rückert wrongly connects ἐξ ἐαυτ. with λογίσ. τί; it is in fact parallel to ἀφ’ ἐαυτ. Paul is conscious of the ικανὸν εἶναι λογίσασθαί τι, and ascribes it to himself; but he denies that he has this ικανότης of himself, or from himself. — ἡ ικανότης ἡμῶν] sc. λογίσασθαί τι. — Rückert finds in our passage, especially in ἀφ’ ἐαυτῶν, an allusion to some utterances, unknown to us, of opponents, which, however, cannot be proved from x. 7, and is quite a superfluous hypothesis.

Ver. 6. Ὅς καὶ ἰκάνωσεν ἡμᾶς] ὅς, he who, in the sense of οὗτος γάρ. See Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. i. 2. 64; van Hengel, Annot. 220. And καὶ is the also of the corresponding relation (Baeumlein, Partik. p. 152), so that there is expressed the agreement between what is contained in the relative clause and what was said before: who also (qui idem, comp. Klotz, ad Devar. p. 636) has made us capable (ἀρκοῦσαν ἐχωρήγησε δύναμιν, Theodoret) as ministers, etc. According to Bengel, Rückert (comp. also de Wette, Oslander, Hofmann), the sense is: "that God has bestowed on him not only the ability mentioned in ver. 5, but also the more comprehensive one of a διάκονος κ.τ.λ." But in that case the words must have stood thus: ὅς καὶ διακόνους καὶνῆς διαθήκης ἰκάνωσεν ἡμᾶς. The notion of ἰκανότης is thrice put in front with the same emphasis. Of ἰκανόω (Col. i. 12) only the passive, in the sense of to have enough, occurs in the (later) Greek writers, such as Dion. Hal. ii. 74, and in the LXX. — διακόνους καὶνῆς διαθήκ.] as ministers of a new covenant (comp. Eph. iii. 7; Col. i. 23; 2 Cor. xi. 15; Luke i. 2), i.e. to be such as serve a new covenant, as devote to it their activity. Καὶν. διαθ., without the article, is conceived qualitatively. The new covenant (Heb. xii. 24) of God with men, which is meant, is—in contrast to the one founded by Moses—that established by Christ, in which the fulfilling of the law is no longer defined as the condition of salvation, but faith on the atonement in Christ, 1 Cor. xi. 25; Rom. x. 5 ff.; Gal. iv. 24 ff.; Matt. xxvi. 28. — οὐ γράμματος, ἀλλὰ πνεύμ.] is since Heumann usually (also by Billroth, Rückert, Ewald) regarded as governed by καὶνῆς διαθήκης (Rückert, "of a covenant, which offers not γράμμα, but πνεῦμα"), but without reason, since the sequel, by ἡ διακονία τοῦ θανάτου and ἡ διακ. τοῦ πνεύματος (vv. 7, 8), rather points to the fact that Paul has conceived οὐ γρ. ἀλλὰ πν. as dependent on διακόνους (so also de Wette, Neander, Oslander, Hofmann), as an appositional more precise definition to the καὶνῆς διαθήκης: to be ministers not of letter (which we would be as ministers of the old covenant), but of spirit. Γράμμα characterizes the Mosaic covenant according to the specific manner in which it occurs and subsists, for it is established and fixed in writing (by means of the written letter), and thereby—although it is divine, yet without bringing with it and communicating any principle of inward vital efficacy—settled as obligatory. On the other hand, πνεῦμα characterizes the Christian covenant, in so far as its distinctive and essential mode of existence consists in this, that the divine living power of the Holy Spirit is at work in it; through this, and not through a written instrument, it subsists and fulfils itself. Comp. Rom. ii. 29, vii. 6; Heb. x. 29, viii. 7 ff. Not letter therefore, but spirit, is that to which the teachers of the gospel minister, the power, whose influence is advanced by their labours;¹ οὐ γὰρ τὰ παλαιὰ τοῦ νόμου προσφέρομεν γράμματα, ἀλλὰ τὴν καινὴν τοῦ πνεύματος δωρεάν, Theodoret. It is true that the law also is in its nature πνευματικός (see on Rom. vii. 14), and its λόγια are ζῶντα (see on Acts vii. 38), but it is misused by the power of sin in man to his destruction, because it does not furnish the spirit which breaks this power. — τὸ γὰρ γράμμα ἀποκτείνει, τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ] specifies quite simply the reason, why God has made them capable of ministering not to the letter, but to the spirit. It is therefore quite unnecessary to presuppose, with Fritzsche, Billroth, and Rückert, a suppressed intermediate thought (namely, that the new covenant is far more excellent). We may add that the γάρ does not extend also to what follows (vv. 7, 8), so as to make the sentence τὸ γράμμα κ.τ.λ. merely introductory to the sequel, and the whole a vindication of the apostle's referring his capacity of judgment to God. This view of Hofmann is connected with his interpretation of λογίσι. τι, ver. 5, and has besides against it the fact, that the weighty antithesis τὸ γ. γράμμα κ.τ.λ. is neither adapted to be a mere introductory thought, nor betokened as being such, the more especially as it contains completely in itself the ground establishing what immediately precedes, and with ver. 7 a new discussion begins, which runs on to the end of the chapter without a break. — ἀποκτείνει] does not refer to the physical death (Käuffer, ζωὴ αἰών. p. 75), in so far as that is the consequence of sin (Rom. v. 12), and sin is occasioned and furthered by the law (Rom. vii. 9 ff., vi. 23; 1 Cor. xv. 56, al.). Against this interpretation it is decisive that according to Rom. v. 12 ff. (see in loc.) bodily death is the consequence, extending to all, of Adam's sin, and has, since Adam, reigned over all even before the law. Nor yet are we to understand spiritual (Billroth), ethical (de Wette, Krummel), or spiritual and bodily death (Rückert), or the mere sensus mortis (Bengel, comp. Neander), but according to Rom. vi. 21, 23, vii. 5, 9, 10, 11, 13, 24, eternal death,¹ the opposite of the eternal life, which, by means of the Holy Spirit becoming operative in the heart through the gospel, is brought about for man who is liable to eternal death (Rom. viii. 2, 6, 10, 11)—which here (comp. John vi. 63) is expressed by τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ, comp. on ii. 16. How far the law works eternal death, is shown from Rom. vii. 5, 7 ff.; comp. 1 Cor. xv. 56. Through its prohibitions, namely, it becomes for the power of sin in man the occasion of awakening evil desire, and therewith transgression sets in and the imputing of it for condemnation, whereby man is liable to eternal death, and that by means of the curse of the law which heaps up sin and produces the divine anger, see on ver. 9; Gal. iii. 10. Comp. Rom. iv. 15, v. 20. After Chrysostom and his followers (also Ambrosiaster), Grotius explains it as. "morte violenta punit peccatores," and Fritzsche: "lex supplicia sumit." This is to be rejected, because in this way the law would not be the very thing that kills, but only that which determines death as a punishment; and consequently no corresponding contrast to ζωοποιεῖ would result. Finally, we can only consider as historically remarkable the interpretation of Origen regarding the literal and mystical sense of Scripture, the former of which is injurious, the latter conducive, to salvation. Something similar is still to be found in Krause and Royaards. Against the visionaries, who referred γράμμα to the outward and πνεῦμα to the inward word, see Calovius.

Ver. 7. Δεῖ] leads on to a setting forth of the great glory of the Christian ministry, which is proved from the splendour of the ministry of Moses by a conclusion a minori ad majus.¹ — ἡ διακονία τοῦ θανάτου] i.e. the ministry conducing to the rule of death; for τὸ γράμμα ἀποκτείνει, ver. 6. It is not the law itself that is meant, but the ministry of Moses, which he accomplished by bringing down to the people the tables of the law from Sinai. Rückert erroneously thinks that the whole ministry of the Levitical priesthood is meant, against which what follows is clearly decisive. The reason assigned by Rückert, that Moses as μεσίτης τῆς παλ. διαθήκης can only be treated as on a parallel with Christ, and not with the apostles, is not valid, since in the context the prevailing conception is not that of μεσίτης but that of διάκονος, and as such Moses is certainly parallel to the ministers of the new covenant. — ἐν γράμμασιν ἐντετυπ. λίθοις] A comma is not to be put after γράμμ. (Luther, Beza, Piscator, Estius, and others, including Schrader and Ewald), which would require the repetition of the article before ἐν γρ., and would make the sentence drag; but it is: which was imprinted on stones by means of letters. The death-promoting ministry of Moses was really graven on stones, in so far as the Decalogue engraven on the two tables was actually the ministerial document of Moses, as it were the registration of his office. In this case ἐν γράμμασιν is not something of an idle addition (in opposition to de Wette, who defends the reading ἐν γράμματι, and attaches it to τοῦ θανάτου), but in fact an element emphatically prefixed, in keeping with the process of argument a minori, and depicting the inferior unspiritual character. Rückert (forced by his reference to the service of the Levitical priesthood) erroneously thinks that Paul means not only the tables of the law, but the whole Pentateuch, and that he has been not quite so exact in his use of the expression (ἐντετυπ. λίθοις!). — ἐγενήθη ἐν δόξῃ] took place in splendour, was surrounded by splendour, full of splendour, see Buttmann, neut. Gram. p. 284 [E. T. 330]. Bengel says rightly: “nacta est gloriam; γίνομαι fio, et εἶμι sum, ver. 8. differunt.” Comp. Fritzsche in Fritzschor.

Opusc. p. 284. It relates to the external radiance, which in the intercourse with God on Sinai passed from the divine glory (Ex. xxiv. 16) to the countenance of Moses, so that he descended from the mountain with his face shining (Ex. xxxiv. 29 ff.). For a Rabbinical fiction that this splendour was from the light created at the beginning of things, see Eisenmenger, Entdeckt. Judenth. I. p. 369 f. Others (Vatablus, and more recently, Flatt, Billroth, Rückert) take ἐν δόξῃ, not of that glorious radiance, but of grandeur, glory in general. So also de Wette and Hofmann. But this is opposed to the context, for in what follows it is not merely a visible proof of the δόξα which is adduced (as Rückert thinks), or a concrete representation of it (Hofmann), but the high degree (ὥστε) of the very δόξα which is meant by ἐγενήθη ἐν δόξῃ. It is said, indeed, that ver. 8, where the glory spoken of is no external one, does not admit of our reference. But even in ver. 8 the δόξα is an external glory (see on ver. 8); and further, we have here an argument a minori ad majus, in which every reader was historically aware that the minus, the δόξα of Moses, was an external one, while as to the majus, the δόξα of the ministry of the N. T., it was self-evident that it is before the Parousia merely something ideal, a spiritual possession, and only becomes also an external reality after the Parousia (and to this ver. 8 applies). — ὥστε μὴ δύνασθαι κ.τ.λ.] Philo gives the same account, Vit. Mos. p. 665 A; Ex. xxxiv. has only: ἐφοβήθησαν ἐγγίσει αὐτῷ, which was more precisely explained by that statement. — διὰ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ πρ. αὐτ.] would have been in itself superfluous, but with the addition τὴν καταργ. strengthening the conclusion it has a solemn emphasis. Philo, l.c., calls this δόξα: ἡλιοειδὲς φέγγος. — τὴν καταργουμένην] “Claritas illa vultus Mosis transitoria erat et modici temporis,” Estius. Ex. l.c. gives us no express information of this; but ver. 13 clearly shows that Paul regarded the radiance which Moses brought down from his converse with God as only temporary and gradually ceasing, which, indeed, is self-evident and correctly inferred from the renewal of the radiance on each occasion. In this passing away of that lustre,—which even during its passing away was yet so great that the Israelites could not gaze fixedly on him,—Paul undoubtedly (in opposition to Hofmann) found a type of the ceasing of the Mosaic ministry (ver. 13); but in our present passage this is only hinted at in a preliminary way by the historical addition τ. καταργ., without the latter ceasing to belong to the historical narration. Hence the participle is not to be taken, with Vulgate, Luther, Calvin, and others, including Rückert, in a purely present sense: "which yet ceases," nor in the sense of transient (Ewald), but as the imperfect participle; the transitory, which was in the act of passing away.

Ver. 8. The ministry dedicated to the Holy Spirit, i.e. forming the medium of His operation (the teaching ministry of the gospel), is as such the specific opposite of the διακονία τοῦ θανάτου ἐν γράμμασιν ἐντετυπ. λίθοις, ver. 7. In τοῦ πνεύματος are contained the elements of contrast. See ver. 6. — ἔσται] is, not the future of the inference (Billroth, Hofmann, and the older commentators); nor does it refer to the advancing steady development (Oslander), but rather to the gloria futuri seculi. Comp. on ver. 12, where the δόξα—which is therefore not to be understood, as it usually is, of inner elevation and dignity—appears as the object of the ἐλπίς. We cannot therefore say with Bengel: "loquitur ex prospectu V. T. in Novum," but: loquitur ex prospectu præsentis seculi in futurum.

Ver. 9. Grounding, simply by a characteristic change of the predicates (κατακρ. and δικαιουσύν.), of what was said in vv. 7, 8. Comp. Rom. v. 18, 19. — ἡ διακονία τῆς κατακρίσ.] the ministry, which is the medium of condemnation. For the ministry of Moses, which communicated the Decalogue, promoted through the law sin (Rom. vii. 9 ff.), whose power it became (1 Cor. xv. 56), and thus realized the divine curse against the transgressors of the law (Gal. iii. 20). Comp. on ver. 6. The article denoted the well-known, solemn condemnation, Deut. xxvii. 26. — δόξα] sc. ἐστί, for the former ἐγενήθη ἐν δόξῃ is realised as present, regarded as present. Comp., subsequently, the present περισσεύει. The substantive δόξα (it refers, as in ver. 7, to that external glory) stands as predicate in the sense of ἔνδοξος, denoting the notion of the adjective more strongly, according to a current usage in Greek. Ver. 10. A more precise grounding of the previous πολλῷ μᾶλλον περισσεύει κ.τ.λ. by the highest climax of this relation. For even (καὶ γάρ) that which is glorious is without glory in this point by reason of the superabundant glory. — οὐ δεδοξασται] The chief element is prefixed, and combined into one idea (Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 122; Baeuml. p. 278): gloria destitutum est. The perfect denotes the continuance of what had taken place; Kühner, II. p. 70. — τὸ δεδοξασμένον] is referred to the Mosaic religious economy by Emmerling and Olshausen, following older expositors, quite against the context. Most refer it to the ministry of Moses, which had been made glorious through the radiance on his countenance, vv. 7–9. But see below. — ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει] in this respect (ix. 3; 1 Pet. iv. 16; Col. ii. 16; often in Greek authors), is joined with τὸ δεδοξασμένον by Fritzsche, l.c. p. 31 (also de Wette and Ewald): “quod collustratum fuit hac parte h. e. ita, ut per splendorem, qui in Mosis facie conspiciabatur, illustre redderetur.” But on the one hand—supposing that τὸ δεδοξασμ. denotes the ministry of Moses—the ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει so taken would be an utterly superfluous addition, since the reader would already have had full information in accordance with the context through τὸ δεδοξασμ. having the article; on the other hand, we should expect τούτῳ to point to something said just before, which, however, is not the case, since we must go back as far as ver. 7. If, again, with Ewald, we take ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει as “in all that is Jewish, apart from what is Christian,” and refer it to the then still subsisting state of the temple, synagogue, etc., how enigmatically Paul would have expressed himself, without any hint of his meaning in the context! Following Chrysostom

(κατὰ τὸν τῆς συγκρίσεως λόγον) and Theodoret (ἀποβλέπων εἰς τούτους, namely, to the ministers of the N. T.), most commentators (including Billroth, Olshausen, Osiander, Hofmann) join it with οὐ δεδοξ., so that it would indicate the reference in which the sentence οὐ δεδοξ. τὸ δεδοξ. holds good (see Hofmann), and consequently would have the meaning: "over against the office of Moses." But how utterly superfluous, and in fact cumbrous, would this ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρ. be if so taken, especially seeing that there still follows ἔνεκεν τ. ὑπερβ. δοξ., which serves to throw light upon the relation asserted! How surprising would this amplification be at this very point, where the comparison is carried to the highest pitch, and the representation is so forcibly and pithily begun by the oxymoron οὐ δεδοξ. τὸ δεδοξ.! Rückert (following Flatt) connects also with οὐ δεδοξασται, but explains it: in this respect, that is, in so far as the first διακονία was the διακονία τῆς κατακρίσεως. At variance with the connection. For not in so far as the Mosaic διακονία ministered to condemnation and death, is its splendour darkened, but in so far as its splendour is outshone by a far greater splendour,—that of the διακονία of the N. T. Besides, if the assumed reference of ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει were to be held correct, the κατάκρισις would necessarily be the principal element (predicate) in what precedes, not merely an attributive definition of the subject. On the whole, the following explanation, against which none but quite irrelevant objections¹ are made, seems to be the right one: ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει is certainly to be connected with οὐ δεδοξασται; τὸ δεδοξασμένον, however, is not to be taken as a designation of the Mosaic διακονία in concreto, but signifies that which is glorified generally, in abstracto; so that, in addition to the οὐ δεδοξασται said of it, there is also given with ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει the reference to the particular concrete thing of which the apostle is speaking, the reference to the ministry of Moses, namely, thus: "for in this respect, i.e. in respect of the relation of glory in which the Mosaic διακονία stands to the Christian (ver. 9), it is even the case that what is glorified is unglorified." Analogously, the δόξα of the moon, for instance, is no δόξα, when the δόξα of the sun beams forth (1 Cor. xv. 14). — ἔνεκεν τῆς ὑπερβαλλ. δόξης] by reason of (Stallbaum, ad Plat. Rep. p. 329 B) the superabundant glory, which obscures the δεδοξασμένον, exhibits its δόξα as relatively no δόξα. This applies to the future glory of the N. T. διακονία, setting in at the αἰὼν μέλλον, but already conceived as present.

Ver. 11. A justification of the foregoing expression τῆς ὑπερβαλλ. δόξης by a general proposition, the application of which in conformity with the connection is left to the reader, and the truth of which in this connection lies in the idea of the completion, which the facts of salvation in the O. T. have to find in the kingdom of God. "For if that which ceases is glorious, much more is that which abides glorious." — τὸ καταργούμενον] that which is in the act of passing away. This the reader was to apply to the διακονία of Moses¹ spoken of in vv. 7-10, in so far, namely, as this ministry is in the course of its abolition through the preaching of the gospel by means of the διακονία τῆς δικαιοσύνης. Moses ceases to be lawgiver, when the gospel is preached; for see Rom. x. 4. That this is the application intended by Paul, is confirmed by the contrast τὸ μένον, which the reader was to apply to the teaching ministration of the N. T. (not to the Christian religion, as Emmerling and Flatt, following older commentators, think), in so far, namely, as that ministration is not abolished, but continues on to the Parousia (whereupon its glory sets in). Fritzsche is of opinion that the διακονία of Moses is τὸ καταργούμενον for the reason: "quod ejus fulgor muneris Christiani gloria superatur, et ita sane καταργεῖται, nullus redditur." But in that case the subject of καταργεῖται would in fact be the splendour, not the διακονία itself. This applies at the same time in opposition to Billroth, who refers τὸ καταργ. to the lustre of Moses' office on each occasion soon disappearing, which is impossible on account of διὰ δόξης. — διὰ δόξης] sc. ἐστι. διὰ expresses the situation, condition, and so is a circumlocution for the adjective. Stallbaum, ad Plat. Phileb. p. 192; Bernhardt, p. 235; Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 138. ἐν δόξῃ (ver. 7) is not different in sense; but the supposition of Estius, Billroth, Olshausen, Osiander,

Neander, Hofmann, that διὰ indicates only what is transient, and ἐν what is abiding, is mere fancy. Paul is fond of varying the prepositions in designating the same relation. Comp. Rom. iii. 30, v. 10, xv. 2; Gal. ii. 16; Philem. 5. Comp. also Kühner, II. p. 319.

Ver. 12. Ἐχοντες οὖν τοιαύτ. ἐλπ.] οὖν, accordingly, namely, after what has just been said πολλῷ μᾶλλον τὸ μένον ἐν δόξῃ, sc. ἐστὶ. Since the ἐλπίς has its object necessarily in the future, and not yet in the present (Rom. viii. 24), τοιαύτη ἐλπίς cannot denote the consciousness of the abiding glory of his office, which Paul possesses (Hofmann; comp. Erasmus and others), but it must be the apostle's great hope,—a hope based on the future of the Messiah's kingdom—that the ministry of the gospel would not fail at the Parousia of its glory far surpassing the δέξα of the ministry of Moses. This will be the glorious, superabundant reward of the labour of Christ's δοῦλοι, as promised by their Master (Luke xxii. 29 ff.; John xiv. 3; Matt. xxv. 14 ff., al.). Comp. 1 Cor. iii. 14, iv. 5; 2 Cor. i. 14; Phil. ii. 16; 1 Thess. ii. 19 f. It is the ἄφθαρτος στέφανος of the faithful labour in teaching, 1 Cor. ix. 25 ff.; 2 Tim. iv. 8; 1 Pet. v. 4. The reference to the contents of the teaching (Emmerling: "tale munus quum habeam tantorum honorum spem ostendens"), to which Rückert is also inclined, is opposed to the words used and to the context. As little are we to assume, with Neander, an equalization of the ἐλπίς with the πεποίθις, ver. 4, and a linking on of the thought to ver. 4. — πολλῇ παρρησίᾳ χρώμ.] denotes the frank unreservedness and openness towards those with whom the teacher has to do: μετ' ἐλευθερίας πανταχοῦ φθεγγόμεθα, οὐδὲν ἀποκρυπτόμενοι, οὐδὲν ὑποστελλόμενοι, οὐδὲν ὑφορώμενοι, ἀλλὰ σαφῶς λέγοντες, Chrysostom. The evidentia (Beza, comp. Mosheim) or perspicuitas (Castalio) belongs to this, but does not exhaust the idea. On χρώμ. παρρησ., comp. Plato, Ep. 8, p. 354 A; Phaedr. p. 240 E; χρώμ. is utimur, not utamur (Erasmus).

Ver. 13. A negative amplification of the πολλῇ παρρησίᾳ χρώμεθα by comparison with the opposite conduct of Moses. — καὶ οὐ] sc. τίθμεν κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τὸ πρόσωπον ἡμῶν, according to the Greek way of putting the verb, which is common to the principal and subordinate clause, in the subordinate clause, and adapting it to the subject of that clause. See Heindorf, ad Gorg.

p. 592 A; Winer, p. 542 [E. T. 728]; Kühner, II. p. 609. The meaning of the allegorical language is: "and we do not go to work veiling ourselves (dissembling), as Moses did, veiling his countenance, that the Israelites might not," etc. See Ex. xxxiv. 33-35. — πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἀτενίσαι κ.τ.λ.] the purpose, which Moses had in veiling his radiant face while he spoke to the people: the people were not (as they would otherwise have done) to fix their gaze on the τέλος τοῦ καταργουμένου (see below). In order to free Moses from a dissimulation, Wolf explained it: "ut indicaretur eos non posse intueri," which, however, is not conveyed in the words, and is not to be supported by Luke xviii. 1; and Schulz and Flatt, following older commentators, explain that πρὸς κ.τ.λ. means so that, etc., which, however, is wrong both as to the usage of the words (comp. Fritzsche, ad Matth. v. 28, p. 231) and as to the connection of ideas, since the πολλῇ παρρ. χρ. of ver. 12 presupposes the intentional character of the opposite procedure. The latter remark applies also in opposition to de Wette (comp. before him, Beza and Calvin), who takes πρὸς κ.τ.λ. not of the intention, but of the divine aim, according to the well-known Biblical teleology, in which the result is regarded as aimed at by God, Isa. vi. 9; Matt. xiii. 11 ff.; Luke viii. 10. In this way a conscious concealment on the part of Moses is removed; but without sufficient ground, since that concealment must not have been regarded by Paul as immoral ("fraudulenter," Fritzsche), and with his reverence for the holy lawgiver and prophet cannot have been so regarded, but rather, in keeping with the preparatory destination of the Mosaic system, as a paedagogic measure which Moses adopted according to God's command, but the purpose of which falls away with the emergence of that which is abiding, i.e. of the ministry of the gospel (Gal. iv. 1 ff.). Finally, the argument of usage is also against de Wette, for in the N. T. by the telic πρὸς τό and infinitive there is never expressed the objective, divinely-arranged aim (which is denoted by ἵνα and ὅπως), but always the subjective purpose, which one has in an action (Matt. v. 28, vi. 1, xiii. 30, xxiii. 5; Mark xiii. 22; Eph. vi. 11; 1 Thess. ii. 9; 2 Thess. iii. 8; Jas. iii. 3, Elzevir; also Matt. xxvi. 12). The point of comparison is the "tecte agere" (Fritzsche), which was done by Moses with the purpose specified through the veiling of his face (not through the figures in which he veiled the truth, as de Wette, following Mosheim, imports), but is not done by the teachers of the gospel, since they go to work in their ministry freely and frankly (ver. 12). The context furnishes nothing further than this, not even what Hofmann finds in the *κ. οὐ καθαρ. Μ. κ.τ.λ.*¹ As little are we to suppose arbitrarily, with Klöpfer, that Paul had in mind not so much Moses himself as his successors (?), the Judaists. — εἰς τὸ τέλος τοῦ καταργ.] τὸ τέλος, by its very connection with τοῦ καταργ., is fixed to the meaning end, and not final aim (Osiander) or completion;² and τοῦ καταργ. must be the same as was meant by τὸ καταργούμενον in the application intended by Paul of the general proposition in ver. 11. Consequently it cannot be masculine (Luther, Vatablus; even Rückert is not disinclined to this view), nor can it denote the Mosaic religion, the end of which is Christ (Rom. x. 4), as, following Chrysostom, Theodoret, and Theophylact, most expositors, including Flatt and Osiander, think, against which, however, even Moses' own prophecy (Deut. xviii. 15), according to the Messianic interpretation then universal, would militate; but it must be the ministry of Moses, which is passing away, see on ver. 11. The Israelites were not intended, in Paul's opinion, at that time to contemplate the end of this ministry, which was to cease through the ministry of the gospel; therefore Moses veiled his face.³ By what means (according to the apostle's view), if Moses had not veiled himself, they would have seen the end of his office, is apparent from ver. 7, namely, by the disappearance of the splendour, the departure of which would have typically presented to them the termination of the διακονία of Moses.¹ But not on this account are we to explain (with the scholiast in Matthaei and others, including Stolz, Billroth, Olshausen, de Wette, Ewald,² Hofmann) τὸ καταργ. of the transient splendour itself (ver. 7), which is forbidden by ver. 11, and would be a confusion of the type and antitype.

² So Isenberg in the Luther. Zeitschr. 1867, p. 240 ff., who, regarding τοῦ καταργ. as the genitive of apposition, brings out the sense: "the transitory office of the O. T. as the completion, after which no other institution could be expected." Thus there is ascribed to Moses exactly the opposite of what the simple words say; Paul would have written something like εἰς τὸ καταργούμενον ὡς τὸ τέλος. The genitive of apposition would here give the meaningless thought: "the end, which is the transitory."

Vv. 14–18. Sad contrast which the procedure of the preachers of the gospel indicated in vv. 12, 13—so wholly different from the procedure of Moses—meets with in the hardening of Israel. How far off are they to this day from divine freedom! how altogether different, however (ver. 18), it is with us Christians!

Ver. 14. 'Αλλ' ἐπωρώθη κ.τ.λ.] This ἀλλά does not refer to the thought implied in the previous πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἀτενίσαι κ.τ.λ., that the Jews did not contemplate the end of the Mosaic ministry, for this was made impossible to them, in fact, by Moses himself and according to his own intention. What Billroth imports into ἀλλά is therefore also unsuitable: "but instead there were hardened," etc. Flatt, Rückert, de Wette, Hofmann (comp. also Olshausen) take the connection rightly, that over against the utterance treating of the holders of the apostolic office, ver. 12 f., stands that which speaks of Israel. Accordingly ἀλλά is at, nevertheless. — ἐπωρώθη] Paul does not here say by whom this certainly passive (in opposition to Theodoret) hardness of heart³ has been caused. It may be conceived as produced by God (Rom. xi. ff., comp. John xii. 39 f.; Acts xxviii. 26) just as well as by the devil (iv. 4, comp. Matt. xiii. 19), these two ways of regarding it not being contradictory

¹ It might be objected to our whole explanation, that, if Moses had not veiled himself, the people would still not have read the end of the Mosaic ministry from the departing splendour (Billroth), nay, that Moses himself did not find anything of the kind in it. But we have not here a supplement of the account in Ex. xxxiv. (Krummel), but a rabbinic-allegorical exposition (שׁרר) of the circumstances, which as such is withdrawn from historical criticism, but nevertheless is in accordance with the striking aim which the apostle has in view. This aim was to make the σκιώσιν of the stewardship of the gospel-ministry conspicuous by contrast, like the light by shadow.

² Who explains it as if not eis τὸ τέλος τοῦ καταργ., but simply eis τὸ καταργούμενον, were used. Ewald conceives the disappearance of the splendour as ensuing gradually during the age, and finally at the death of Moses, as Grotius also on ver. 7 represents it.

³ πωρώσθαι means to be made hard (from the substantive σῶρος), not to be blinded, as Schleusner (Theo. IV. p. 541) and others, following the Fathers, and also Hofmann would take it, since there is no trace at all of the use among the Greeks of an adjective to each other. The aorist denotes the hardness of heart which set in later after their intercourse with Moses, but in connection with the insight then rendered impossible to them. Πεπώρωται would have meant something else. On νοήματα, thoughts, the products of the νοῦς, of the exercise of the theoretic and practical reason, which, through the hardness of heart, become inaccessible to, and insusceptible of, the perception of the divine, comp. on Phil. iv. 7. — ἄχρι γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] A proof, in accordance with experience, for what was just said ἐπωρώθη κ.τ.λ. — τὸ αὐτὸ κάλυμμα ἐπὶ κ.τ.λ.] The same veil is, of course, to be understood, not of material identity, but symbolically of the likeness of the spiritual hindrance. Without figure the meaning is: the same incapacity for recognising the end of the Mosaic ministry, which was produced among them then by the veil of Moses, remains with them to this day when the Old Covenant is read. — ἐπὶ τῇ ἀναγνώσει] Paul conceives the public reading of the O. T. every Sabbath (Acts xv. 21) as overlaid with the veil hindering knowledge; still we need not assume, with Wolf, Michaelis, Semler, and others, a reference to the תורה (see Lakemacher, Obs. III. p. 209 ff.) with which the Jews veiled themselves at the reading of the law and at prayer, because otherwise Paul must have made the veil fall on the countenances of the Jews, and not on the public reading. But he has conceived to himself the matter so, that the public reading takes place under the veil enwrapping this act, so that in this reading the Jews remain shut out from insight into the new covenant. Vv. 13 and 15 preclude us from abandoning the local signification of ἐπί, on. The explanation, "when there is public reading" (Hofmann), confuses the meaning with the sensuous, but in relation to the context appropriate, form of presenting it. — τῆς παλ. διαθήκης] For when the law of Moses is publicly read, παρίς, blind, which the Etymol. Gud. and Suidas quote. The Greeks have ἄπρος, blindness, and ἄπρος, blind, but not παρίς. And if the LXX. translate הקטן, Job vii. 7, by παροῦνται, and Zech. xi. 17 by ἐκτυφλοῦνται (to which Hofmann makes appeal), this proves nothing in favour of that explanation of παροῦνται, since the LXX. very often, with exegetical freedom, render the same word differently according to the context. We may add that Hofmann irrelevantly compares Lucian, Amor. 46, where ἄπροι does not mean blind at all, but has its fundamental meaning maimed. The passage in Lucian means: "To whom are the glances of the eyes so blind (τυφλοί), and the thoughts of the understanding so lame (ἄπροι)!" Here ἄπροι is a figurative expression for weakness.

there is read the old covenant (comp. on ver. 6) therein set forth. This is the contents of the public reading. Comp. ver. 15 : ἀναγιώσκειται Μωϋσῆς. Ἡ παλ. διαθ. does not mean the books of the O. T., as is here usually supposed. — μὴ ἀνακαλυπτόμενον, ὅτι ἐν Χ. καταργεῖται] These words in themselves admit of two explanations; the first refers the participle and καταργεῖται to τὸ κάλυμμα, and takes ὅτι in the sense of because, as specifying the ground of the μὴ ἀνακαλ. (so most of the older expositors, and recently Fritzsche, Billroth, Schrader, Olshausen, de Wette, Neander, Hofmann, comp. Ewald): without being uncovered, because it is annihilated in Christ (the veil), but Christ is not preached to them. On ἀνακαλύπτειν κάλυμμα, to uncover a veil, comp. LXX. Deut. xii. 30 : οὐκ ἀνακαλύψαι συγκάλυμμα τοῦ πατρός. But against this view (α) καταργεῖται seems decisive, which, according to the context (see vv. 11, 13), cannot apply to the taking away of the veil, but only to the abolition of the Mosaic ministry, or according to the connection of ver. 14, to the abolition of the old covenant, which is the object of the Mosaic ministry (comp. also Rom. iii. 31; Eph. ii. 15); and hence Paul, ver. 16, does not use καταργεῖται of the removal of the veil, but περιαιρεῖται, which signifies the same thing as ἀνακαλύπτεται. (β) If μὴ ἀνακαλυπτόμενον were to refer to τὸ αὐτὸ κάλυμμα, then κάλυμμα in the contrast introduced by ἀλλά in ver. 15 would necessarily be the same veil, of which μὴ ἀνακαλύπτ. would be here said, and Paul must therefore at ver. 15 have written τὸ κάλυμμα with the article. Hence the second method of explanation¹ is to be preferred, according to which the participle is taken absolutely, and ὅτι as that, while καταργεῖται is referred to the παλ. διαθήκη, thus: *while it is not disclosed (unveiled),*² it remains hidden from the Jews, that in Christ the old covenant is done away, that in Christ—in His appearance and in His work—the abolition of the Old Covenant takes place (Rom. x. 4; Col. ii. 14). The whole is thus a more precise practical definition of the previous τὸ αὐτὸ κάλυμμα . . . μένει. This absolute appositional use of the neuter participle (to be regarded as accusative, though viewed by Hermann and others as nominative) is a current Greek idiom in impersonal phrases. See Hermann, ad Viger. p. 769; Bernhardt, p. 471; Krüger, § lvi. 9. 5; Maetzner, ad Antiph. p. 176. Hence Rückert is without reason in referring μὴ ἀνακαλύπτ. to τὸ κάλυμμα, and yet understanding ὅτι as that and καταργεῖται of the Old Covenant, whereby the unwarranted importation of a thought becomes necessary, namely, to this effect: "the same veil rests on the reading of the O. T. and is not uplifted, so that it (the people) might perceive that it (the O. T.) has its end in Christ." Luther's translation (comp. Erasmus, Beza, and Heumann) follows the reading ὅ,τι (Elzevir), which Scholz also has again taken up. This ὅ,τι would have to be explained as quippe quod (velamen), and would give from the nature of the veil (Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. ii. 1. 30) the information why it remains unlifted,—an interpretation, however, which would only be compatible with the first view given above, and even with that would be unnecessary. — καταργεῖται] present; for the fact, that in Christ the Old Covenant is abolished, is laid down in theoretical form as an article of faith, as a truth which remains veiled from the Jews so long as they are not converted to Christ (ver. 16).

Ver. 15. 'ΑΛΛ'] opposite of the μὴ ἀνακαλ., ὅτι ἐν Χ. καταργ., but no longer connected with γάρ, ver. 14 (Hofmann), since the apostle does not again mean the particular veil (that of Moses) to which the confirmatory clause introduced with γάρ, ver. 14, referred. It is not disclosed, that, etc.; till to-day, on the contrary, there lies a veil, etc.; till to-day, whenever (ἄν, in whatsoever case) Moses is publicly read, their insight (comp. previously ἐπωρώθη, etc.) is hindered and prevented. The figurative expression does not again represent the veil of Moses, for otherwise τὸ κάλυμμα must necessarily (in opposition to Hofmann) have been used, but generally a veil, and that one placed over (ἐπί with acc.) the heart (here regarded as the centre of the practical intelligence, comp. iv. 6; Rom. i. 21; and see on Eph. i. 18; Krumm, de not. psych. P. p. 50; Delitzsch, Psychol. p. 248 f.; Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. I. p. 460) of the hearers. The impersonal μὴ ἀνακαλυπτόμ. of ver. 14 induced the apostle very naturally and with logical suitableness, not to use again in the contrast of ver. 15, with its emphatic stress laid on the point ἕως σήμερον, that historical image of the veil of Moses, but to express the conception generally of a veil hindering perception (lying on the heart). The same thing, therefore, is expressed in two forms of one figure; the first form gives the figure historically (the veil of Moses on the ἀνάγνωσις τ. παλ. διαθ.); the second form, apart from that historical reference, gives it as moulded by the apostle's own vivid imagination (a veil upon the heart at the public reading). Fritzsche (comp. Al. Morus in Wolf) assumes that Paul imagines to himself two veils, one on the public reading of the Old Covenant, the other on the hearers' own hearts, by which he wishes to mark the high degree of their inaptitude for perceiving. But, in order to be understood, and in keeping with a state of things so peculiar, he must have brought this out definitely and emphatically, and have at least written in ver. 15: 'Ἄλλ' . . . Μωϋσῆς, καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν καρδίαν αὐτῶν κάλυμμα κεῖται. — ἡνίκα] at the hour when, quando, after Hom. Od. xxii. 198 frequent in the classic writers, but in the N. T. only here and at ver. 16. Often used in the Apocrypha and the LXX. also at Ex. xxxiv. 34; and perhaps the word was suggested by the recollection of this passage.—On ἀναγινώσκ. Μωϋσ. comp. Acts xv. 21.

Ver. 16. When, however, it shall have turned to the Lord, shall have come to believe on Christ, the veil, which lies on their heart (ver. 15), is taken away; i.e., when Moses is read before them, it will no longer remain unperceived by them that the Old Covenant ceases in Christ. The subject to ἐπιστρέψῃ is ἡ καρδία αὐτῶν, ver. 15 (Luther in the gloss, Beza, Grotius, Bengel, and several others, including Billroth, Olshausen, de Wette, Hofmann), not ὁ Ἰσραὴλ (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Pelagius, Erasmus, and many others, including Osiander), nor Μωϋσῆς (Calvin, Estius¹), nor the general τίς (Origen, Storr, Flatt).—The common supposition, that in ver. 16 there is an allegorical reference to Moses, who, returning from the people to God, conversed unveiled with God (Ex. xxxiv. 34), is in itself probable from the context, and is confirmed even by the choice of the words (Ex. l.c.: ἡνίκα δ' ἂν εἰσεπορεύετο Μ. ἔναντι κυρίου . . . περιηρέετο τὸ κάλυμμα), though the same veil with which Moses was veiled (τὸ αὐτὸ κάλ., ver. 14) is no longer spoken of, but a veil on the hearts of the Jews. — ἡνίκα with ἂν and the subjunctive aorist¹ denotes: then, when it shall have turned (Luther wrongly: when it turned itself), and that as something conceived, thought of, not as an unconditioned fact. The πρὸς κύριον, however, does not affirm: to God, who is now revealed in the Lord (Hofmann), but, in simple accordance with ἐν Χριστῷ of ver. 15: to Christ. The conversion of Israel which Paul has in view is, now that it is wholly relegated to the experience of the future, the conversion as a whole, Rom. xi. 25. It was, however, obvious of itself that what is affirmed finds its application to all individual cases which had already occurred and were still to be expected. — περιαιρ. has the emphasis, both of its important position at the head of the clause (removed is the veil) and of the future realized as present. The passive is all the more to be retained, seeing that the subject of ἐπιστρ. is the heart; the sense of self-liberation (Hofmann) may not be imported on account of Ex. xxxiv. 34. The conversion and deliverance of Israel is God's work. See ver. 17 and Rom. xi. 26 f. The compound corresponds to the conception of the veil covering the heart round about. Comp. Plato, Polit. p. 288 E: δέρματα σωμάτων περιαιρούσα, Dem. 125, 26: περιεῖλε τὰ τεῖχη, 802, 5: περιηρηται τοὺς στεφάνους, Judith x. 3: τὸν σάκκον, Bar. iv. 34, vi. 58; Acts xxvii. 40.

Ver. 17. Remark giving information regarding what is asserted in ver. 16. — δέ, [the German] aber, appends not something of contrast, i.e. to Moses, who is the letter (Hofmann), but a clause elucidating what was just said, περιαιρ. τὸ κάλ.,² equivalent to namely. See Hermann, ad Viger. p. 845; Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 167. Rückert (comp. de Wette) is of a different opinion, holding that there is here a continued chain of reasoning, so that Paul in vv.

² Bengel aptly says: "Particula autem ostendit, hoc versu declarari præcedentem. Conversio fit ad Dominum ut spiritum." Theodoret rightly furnishes the definition of the δέ as making the transition to an explanation by the intermediate question: τίς δι' αὐτοῦ πρὸς δὲ δι' ἀποβλήψαι,

16, 17 means to say: "When the people of Israel shall have turned to the Lord, then will the κάλυμμα be taken from it; and when this shall have happened, it will also attain the freedom (from the yoke of the law) which is at present wanting to it." But, because in that case the ἐλευθερία would be a more important point than the taking away of the veil, ver. 18 must have referred back not to the latter, but to the former. Seeing, however, that ver. 18 refers back to the taking away of the veil, it is clear that ver. 17 is only an accessory sentence, which is intended to remove every doubt regarding the περιαίρεται τὸ κάλυμμα.¹ Besides, if Rückert were right, Paul would have continued his discourse illogically; the logical continuation would have been, ver. 17: οὐδὲ περιαιρεῖται τὸ κάλυμμα, τὸ πνεῦμα κυρίου ἐστίν· οὐδὲ τὸ πν. κυρ. κ.τ.λ. — ὁ δὲ κύριος τὸ πνεῦμα ἐστίν] ὁ κύριος is subject, not (as Chrysostom, Theodoret, Oecumenius, Theophylact, Estius, Schulz held, partly in the interest of opposition to Arianism) predicate, which would be possible in itself, but cannot be from the connection with ver. 16.² The words, however, cannot mean: Dominus significat Spiritum (Wetstein), because previously the conversion to Christ, to the actual personal Christ, was spoken of; they can only mean: the Lord, however, is the Spirit, i.e. the Lord, however, to whom the heart is converted (note the article) is not different from the (Holy) Spirit, who is received, namely, in conversion, and (see what follows) is the divine life-power that makes free. That this was meant not of hypostatical identity, but according to the dynamical oeconomic point of view, that the fellowship of Christ, into which we enter through conversion, is the fellowship of the Holy Spirit, was obvious of itself to the believing consciousness of the readers, and is also put beyond doubt by the following τὸ πνεῦμα κυρίου. And Christ is the Spirit in so far as at conversion, and generally in the whole arrangements of salvation, He communicates Himself in the Holy Spirit, and this Spirit is His Spirit, the living principle of the influence and indwell-

ing of Christ,—certainly the living ground of life in the church, and the spirit of its life (Hofmann), but as such just the Holy Spirit, in whom the Lord reveals Himself as present and savingly active. The same thought is contained in Rom. viii. 9–11, as is clear especially from vv. 10, 11, where Χριστός and τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ ἐγείραντος Ἰησοῦν and πνεῦμα Χριστοῦ (ver. 9) appear to be identical as the indwelling principle of the Christian being and life, so that there must necessarily lie at the bottom of it the idea: Χριστὸς τὸ πνεῦμα ἐστὶ. Comp. Gal. ii. 20, iv. 6, Phil. i. 19, Acts xx. 28, along with Eph. iv. 11. As respects His immanence, therefore, in His people, Christ is the Spirit. Comp. also Krummel, l.c. p. 97, who rightly remarks that, if Christ calls Himself the light, the way, the truth, etc., all this is included in the proposition: “the Lord is the Spirit.” Fritzsche, Dissert. I. p. 42, takes it: Dominus est ita Sp. St. perfusus, ut totus quasi τὸ πνεῦμα sit. So also Rückert, who nevertheless (following Erasmus and Beza) believes it necessary to explain the article before πνεῦμα by retrospective reference to vv. 6, 8.¹ But in that case the whole expression would be reduced to a mere quasi, with which the further inference οὐ δὲ τὸ πνεῦμα κυρίου would not be logically in accord; besides, according to analogy of Scripture elsewhere, it cannot be said of the exalted Christ (and yet it is He that is meant), “Spiritu sancto perfusus est,” or “Spiritu gaudet divino,” an expression which can only belong to Christ in His earthly state (Luke i. 35; Mark i. 10; Acts i. 2; x. 38); whereas the glorified Christ is the sender of the Spirit, the possessor and disposer (comp. also Rev. iii. 1, iv. 5, v. 6), and therefore Lord of the Spirit, ver. 18. The weakened interpretation: “Christ, however, imparts the Spirit” (Piscator, L. Cappellus, Scultetus, and others, including Emmerling and Flatt), is at variance with the words, and is not to be supported by passages like John xiv. 6, since in these the predicates are not concretes but abstracts. In keeping with the view and the expression in the present passage are those Johannine passages in which Christ promises the communication of the Spirit to the disciples as His own return (John xiv. 18, al.). Others have departed from the simple sense of the words "Christ is the Spirit," either by importing into τὸ πνεῦμα another meaning than that of the Holy Spirit, or by not taking ὁ κύριος to signify the personal Christ. The former course is inadmissible, partly on account of the following οὐ δὲ τὸ πνεῦμα κυρίου, partly because the absolute τὸ πνεῦμα admits of no other meaning whatever than the habitual one; the latter is made impossible by ver. 16. Among those adhering to the former view are Morus: "Quum Dominum dico, intelligo illam divinitus datam religionis scientiam;" Erasmus and Calvin: "that τὸ πνεῦμα is the spirit of the law, which only becomes viva et vivifica, si a Christo inspiretur, whereby the spirit comes to the body;" also Olshausen: "the Lord now is just the Spirit, of which there was mention above" (ver. 6); by this is to be understood the spiritual institute, the economy of the Spirit; Christ, namely, fills His church with Himself; hence it is itself Christ. Comp. Ewald, according to whom Christ is designated, in contrast to the letter and compulsion of law, as the Spirit absolutely (just as God is, John iv. 24). Similarly Neander. To this class belongs also the interpretation of Baur, which, in spite of the article in τὸ πνεῦμα, amounts to this, that Christ in His substantial existence is spirit, i.e. an immaterial substance composed of light; ¹ comp. his neut. Theol. p. 187 f. See, on the contrary, Rübiger, Christol. Paul. p. 36 f.; Krummel, l.c. p. 79 ff. Among the adherents of the second mode of interpretation are Vorstius, Mosheim, Bolten: "ὁ κύριος is the doctrine of Jesus;" also Billroth, who recognises as its meaning: "in the kingdom of the Lord the Spirit rules; the essence of Christianity is the Spirit of the Lord, which He confers on His own." For many other erroneous interpretations (among which is included that of Estius, Calovius, and others, who refer ὁ κύριος to God, and so explain the words of the divinity of the Holy Spirit), see Pole and Wolf. — ἐλευθερία] spiritual freedom in general, without special limitation.¹ To have a veil on the heart (see ver. 15), and to be spiritually free, are opposite; hence the statement περιαιρείται τὸ κάλυμμα, ver. 16, obtains elucidation by our ἐλευθερία. The veil on the heart hinders the spiritual activity, and makes it fettered; where, therefore, there is freedom, the veil must be away; but freedom must have its seat, where the Spirit of the Lord is, which Spirit carries on and governs all the thinking and willing, and removes all barriers external to its sway. That Paul has regard (Erasmus, Beza, Grotius, Bengel, Fritzsche) to the conception that the veil is an outward sign of subjection (1 Cor. xi. 10), is to be denied all the more, seeing that here what is spoken of is not a covering of the head (which would be the sign of a foreign ἐξουσία), as 1 Cor. l.c., but a veiling of the heart, ver. 15.

¹ Quite erroneously, since no reader could hit on this retrospective reference, and also the following τὸ πνεῦμα κυρίου is said without any such reference. Paul, if he wished to express himself so as to be surely intelligible, could not do otherwise than put the article; for, if he had written ὁ δὲ κύριος πνεῦμα ἐστὶ, he might have given rise to quite another understanding than he wished to express, namely: the Lord is spirit, a spiritual being, as John iv. 24, πνεῦμα ὁ Θεός,—a possible misinterpretation, which is rejected already by Chrysostom. Comp. 1 Cor. xv. 45. We may add that τὸ πνεῦμα is to be explained simply according to hallowed usage of the Holy Spirit, not, as Lipsius (Rechtfertigungsl. p. 167) unreasonably presses the article, “the whole full πνεῦμα.” So also Ernesti, Uspr. d. Sünde, I. p. 222.

Ver. 18. The ἐλευθερία just mentioned is now further confirmed on an appeal to experience as in triumph, by setting forth the (free, unrestricted) relation of all Christians to the glory of Christ. The δέ is the simple μεταβατικόν, and forms the transition from the thing (ἐλευθερία) to the persons, in whom the thing presents itself in definite form. For the freedom of him who has the Spirit of the Lord forms the contents of ver. 18, and not simply the thought: "we, however, bear this Spirit of the Lord in us."² Flatt and Rückert are quite arbitrary in attaching it to ver. 14. — ἡμεῖς] refers to the Christians in general, as the connection, the added πάντες, and what is affirmed of ἡμεῖς, clearly prove. Erasmus, Cajetan, Estius, Bengel, Michaelis, Nösselt, Stolz, Rosenmüller are wrong in thinking that it refers merely to the apostles and teachers. — The emphasis is not on πάντες (in which Theodoret, Theophylact, Bengel find a contrast to the one Moses), but on ἡμεῖς, in contrast to the Jews, "qui fidei carent oculis," Erasmus. — ἀνακεκαλ. προσώπῳ] with unveiled countenance; for through our conversion to Christ our formerly confined and fettered spiritual intuition (knowledge) became free and unconfined, ver. 16. After vv. 15, 16 we should expect ἀνακεκαλυμμένη καρδιά; but Paul changes the figure, because he wishes here to represent the persons not as hearing (as in ver. 15) but as seeing, and therewith his conception has manifestly returned to the history of Moses, who appeared before God with the veil removed, Ex. xxxiv. 34. Next to the subject ἡμεῖς, moreover, the emphasis lies on ἀνακεκαλ. προσώπῳ: "But we all, with unveiled countenance beholding the glory of the Lord in the mirror, become transformed to the same glory." For if the beholding of the glory presented in the mirror should take place with covered face, the reflection of this glory ("speculi autem est lumen repercutere," Emmerling) could not operate on the beholders to render them glorious, as, indeed, also in the case of Moses it was the unveiled countenance that received the radiation of the divine glory. — τὴν δόξαν κυρίου] said quite without limit of the whole glory of the exalted Christ.¹ It is the divine, in so far as Christ is the bearer and reflection of the divine glory (Col. i. 15, ii. 9; John xvii. 5; Heb. i. 3); but κυρίου does not (in opposition to Calvin and Estius) apply to God, on account of vv. 16, 17.—κατοπτριζόμενοι] beholding in the mirror. For we behold the glory of Christ in the mirror, inasmuch as we see not immediately its objective reality, which will only be the case in the future kingdom of God (John xvii. 24; 1 John iii. 2; Col. iii. 3 f.; Rom. viii. 17 f.), but only its representation in the gospel; for the gospel is τὸ εὐαγγ. τῆς δόξης τοῦ Χριστοῦ, iv. 4, consequently, as it were, the mirror, in which the glory of Christ gives itself to be seen and shines in its very image to the eye of faith; hence the believing heart (Osiander), which is rather the organ of beholding, cannot be conceived as the mirror. Hunnius aptly remarks that Paul is saying, "nos non ad modum Judaeorum caecutire, sed relecta facie gloriam Domini in evangelii speculo relucentem intueri."

Comp. 1 Cor. xiii. 12, where likewise the gospel is conceived of as a mirror, as respects, however, the still imperfect vision which it brings about. κατοπτρίζω in the active means to mirror, i.e. to show in the mirror (Plut. Mor. p. 894 D); but in the middle it means among the Greeks to look into, to behold oneself in a mirror. To this head belong Athen. xv. p. 687 C, and all the passages in Wetstein, also Artemidorus, ii. 7, which passage is erroneously adduced by Wolf and others for the meaning: "to see in the mirror." But this latter signification, which is that occurring in the passage now before us, is unquestionably found in Philo (Loesner, Obs. p. 304). See especially Alleg. p. 79 E: μηδὲ κατοπτρισαίμην ἐν ἄλλῳ τινὶ τὴν σὴν ιδέαν ἢ ἐν σοὶ τῷ θεῷ. Pelagius ("contemplamur"), Grotius,¹ Rückert, and others quite give up the conception of a mirror, and retain only the notion of beholding; but this is mere caprice, which quite overlooks as well the correct position of the case to which the word aptly corresponds, as also the reference which the following εἰκόνα has to the conception of the mirror. Chrysostom and his successors, Luther, Calovius, Bengel, and others, including Billroth and Olshausen, think that κατοπτρίζεσθαι means to reflect, to beam back the lustre, so that, in parallel with Moses, the glory of Christ is beaming; ἡ καθαρὰ καρδιά τῆς θείας δόξης οἷόν τι ἐκμαγεῖον καὶ κάτοπτρον γίνεται, Theodoret. Comp. Erasmus, Paraphr., and Luther's gloss: "as the mirror catches an image, so our heart catches the knowledge of Christ." But at variance with the usage of the language, for the middle never has this meaning; and at variance with the context, for ἀνακεκαλ. προσώπῳ must, according to vv. 14–17, refer to the conception of free and unhindered seeing.—τὴν αὐτὴν εἰκόνα μεταμορφ.] we become transformed to the same image, i.e. become so transformed that the same image which we see in the mirror—the image of the glory of Christ—presents itself on us, i.e. as regards the substantial meaning: we are so transformed that we become like to the glorified Christ. Now, seeing that this transformation appears as caused by and contemporaneous with ἀνακεκ. προσ. τ. δόξ. κ. κατοπτρ., consequently not as a future sudden act (like the transfiguration at the Parousia, 1 Cor. xv. 51 f.; comp. Phil. iii. 21), but as something at present in the course of development, it can only be the spiritual transformation to the very likeness of the glorified Christ¹ that is meant (comp. 2 Pet. i. 4; Gal. iv. 19, ii. 20), and not the future δόξα (Grotius, Fritzsche, Olshausen would have it included). Against this latter may be urged also the subsequent καθάπερ ἀπὸ κυρίου πνεύματος, which has its reference precisely to the spiritual transformation, that takes place in the present αἰὼν, and the sequel of which is the future Messianic glory to which we are called (1 Thess. ii. 12; Rom. viii. 30); so that the present spiritual process, the καινότης ζωῆς (Rom. vi. 4) and πνεύματος (Rom. vii. 6)—the spiritual being risen with and living with Christ (Rom. vi. 5 ff.)—experiences at the Parousia also the corresponding outward συνδοξασθῆναι with Christ, and is thus completed, Col. iii. 4. — τὴν αὐτὴν εἰκόνα] is not to be explained either by supplying κατά or εἰς, or by quoting the analogy of παρακαλεῖσθαι παράκλησιν and the like (Hofmann), but the construction of μεταμορφοῦν with the accusative is formed quite like the commonly occurring combination of μεταβάλλειν with the accusative in the sense: to assume a shape through alteration or transmutation undergone. See Stallbaum, ad Plat. Rep. p. 424 C. The passive turn given to it, in which the accusative remains unaltered (Krüger, § lii. 4. 6; Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 164 [E. T. 190]), yields therefore the sense: we are so transformed, that we get thereby the same image. — ἀπὸ δόξης εἰς δόξαν] i.e. so that this transformation issues from glory (viz. from the glory of Christ beheld in the mirror and reflected on us), and has glory as its result (namely, our glory, see above). Comp. ii. 16, also Rom. i. 17. So in the main the Greek Fathers (yet referring ἀπὸ δόξης, according to their view of ἀπὸ κυρίου πνεύματος, to the glory of the Holy Spirit), Vatablus, Bengel, Fritzsche, Billroth, and others, also Hofmann. But most expositors (including Flatt, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Osiander, Ewald) explain it of ascending to ever higher (and at length highest, 1 Cor. xv. 51 ff.) glory. way, however, the correlation of this ἀπό with the following (ἀπὸ κυρ. πν.) is neglected, although for ἀπὸ . . . εἰς expressions like ἀπὸ θαλάσσης εἰς θάλασσαν (Xen. Hell. i. 3. 4) might be compared. — καθάπερ ἀπὸ κυρίου πνεύματος] so as from the Lord of the Spirit, people, namely, are transformed, μεταμόρφωσις γίνεται. In this there lies a confirmation of the asserted τῇ αὐτῇ . . . δόξαν. Erasmus rightly observes: “ὥς hic non sonat similitudinem sed congruentiam.” Comp. ii. 17; John i. 14, al. Lord of the Spirit (the words are rightly so connected by “neoterici quidam” in Estius, Emmerling, Vater, Fritzsche, Billroth, Olshausen, de Wette, Ewald, Osiander, Kling, Krummel; comp. however, also at an earlier date, Erasmus, Annot.) is Christ, in so far as the operation of the Holy Spirit depends on Christ; for the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Christ (ver. 17; Rom. viii. 9 f.; Gal. iv. 6), in so far as Christ Himself rules through the Spirit in the hearts (Rom. viii. 10; Gal. ii. 20; Eph. iii. 16 f.); the sending of the Spirit¹ is brought about through Christ (Tit. iii. 6), and by His operations service is done to Christ (1 Cor. xii. 5). Here, too, the relation of subordination in the divine Trinity is most distinctly expressed.² Why, however, is Christ here named κύριος πνεύματος? Because that spiritual metamorphosis, which proceeds from Christ, cannot take place otherwise than by the influence of the Holy Spirit on us. The explanations: a Domini spiritu (Syriac, Vulgate, Augustine, Theophylact, Pelagius, Erasmus, Castalio, Calvin, Grotius, Bengel, and others, including Schrader and Hofmann) and a Domino spiritu, i.e. a Domino qui est spiritus (Chrysostom: ὅρα πῶς καὶ ἐνταῦθα τὸ πνεῦμα κύριον καλεῖ, Theodoret, Valla, Luther, Beza, Calovius, Wolf, Estius, and several others, including Flatt and Neander³), agree, indeed, with the

¹ The sender himself is, according to Paul, not Christ, but God, 1 Cor. ii. 12, vi. 19; 2 Cor. i. 22; Gal. iv. 6; 1 Thess. iv. 8; Tit. iii. 6. According to John (xv. 26, xvi. 7), Christ also sends the Spirit, though not independently, but in the way of interceding with the Father (xiv. 16); comp. also Acts ii. 23. Hence there is no contradiction between Paul and John.

² The qualitative interpretation of the genitive, like πατὴρ οἰκτιρμ., i. 3 (de Wette, “whose whole character or whole efficacy is spirit”), is inadmissible, because πνεῦμα, in accordance with the context, must be the Holy Spirit as respects the notion of subsistence (the person of the Spirit).

CONTENTS.—Continuation of the theme begun in iii. 12 f. (vv.
1–6); relation of the external state, so full of suffering, to the glory of the office (vv. 7–18).

Ver. 1. Διὰ τοῦτο] Paul now reverts, it is true, to what had been begun in iii. 12 f., but had, owing to the comparison with Moses and the discussion thence arising about the hardening of the Jews and the freedom contrasted with it (iii. 14–18), remained without further elucidation, but reverts in such a way that he attaches it to what immediately precedes by διὰ τοῦτο. Therefore, since the Christians are so highly privileged as was specified in iii. 17, 18, we become, in the possession of the office, which ministers to this Christian freedom and glorification . . . not dejected. — καθὼς ἦλθῃ.] a modal definition, full of humility (comp. 1 Cor. xv. 10, vii. 25), to ἔχοντες τ. διακ. ταύτ.: “having this ministry in accordance with the (divine) mercy imparted to us.” The important practical bearing of this addition is aptly indicated by Bengel: “Misericordia Dei, per quam ministerium accipitur, facit strenuos et sinceros.” — οὐκ ἐκκακοῦμεν] Lachmann, Tischendorf, and Rückert, following A B D* F G κ, read ἐγκακοῦμεν (comp. ver. 16; Luke xviii. 1; Gal. vi. 9; Eph. iii. 13; 2 Thess. iii. 13). But this appears to be a correction, since only ἐγκακεῖν, and not ἐκκακεῖν (which is here the reading of C D E K L), occurs for certain out of the N. T. and the Fathers and ancient lexicographers. Polyb. iv. 19. 10; Theodotion, Prov. iii. 11, Symmachus, Gen. xxvii. 46; Num. xxi. 5; Isa. vii. 16. Comp. ἐγκάκησις, Symmachus, Ps. cxix. 143. Probably ἐκκακεῖν was at that time only in oral use, and came first through Paul and Luke into the language of ecclesiastical writings. It means, however, to become cowardly, to lose courage. Hesychius, ἡδημόνησεν ἐξεκάκησεν; Suidas, ἐξεκάκησα ἀπηγόρευσα. The contrast in ver. 2 is not adverse to this signification; for the becoming dejected through any kind of difficulties (with Pelagius, Theodoret, Oecumenius, Beza, and others, to think only of sufferings is arbitrary) leads easily to κρυπτὰ τῆς αἰσχύνης, while bold, brave, unweakened courage disdains such things. Comp. the demeanour of Luther. Hence Rückert is mistaken in holding that, for the sake of the contrast, we must assume the general signification: to abandon oneself to badness, a signification which cannot elsewhere be made good for ἐγκακ. or for ἐκκακ. (in Polybius, iv. 19. 10, ἐνεκάκησαν means, “they were lazy”). Chrysostom is in substance correct: οὐ καταπίπτομεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ χαίρομεν καὶ παρρησιαζόμεθα. The opposite is the preservation of the holy ἀνδρεία (1 Cor. xvi. 13).

Ver. 2. Contrast to οὐκ ἱκκακούμεν in reference to antagonistic teachers. — ἀπειπάμεθα] we have renounced, we have put away from us. Comp. This is to be left quite general: “All that one, because he is ashamed of it, does not permit to become manifest,” but, on the contrary, κρυφῇ καλύπτει καρδιά (Soph. Antig. 1239); ἂ κρύπτειν δεῖ καὶ συσκιάζειν αἰσχυνομένους καὶ ἐρυθριῶντας, Chrysostom. All special limitations, such as to secret plans and intrigues (Beza, Grotius, and others, including Emmerling and Billroth), or to the disfiguring (Calvin) or hiding (de Wette) of the truth, or to secret fear of men (Ewald), or to hidden, disgraceful arts of fleshly wisdom (Neander), or to secret means and ways to which the preacher of Christianity, who is ashamed of Christianity, has recourse (Hofmann), or even to circumcision (Theodoret), or to promises not made good (Chrysostom), or to a hypocritical habit (Theophylact), or even to obscenities voluptates (Estius, Krebs), are without warrant; for Paul proceeds from the general to the particular, so that it is only in what follows, when referring more pointedly to his opponents, that he adduces particular forms of the κρυπτὰ τῆς αἰσχύνης. — μὴ περιπ. κ.τ.λ.] so that we walk not, etc. The apostle means his demeanour in the ministry. — δολοῦντες τ. λόγον τ. θεοῦ] adulterating the word of God. Lucian, Herm. 59; LXX. The objective interpretation, disgrace, Phil. iii. 19 (“which brings disgrace,” de Wette; Osiander, “shameful secrecy”), would make it necessary to import the thought: “if it becomes manifest,” Zeger: “quae manifestata probro sunt perpetranti.” words, a clearly presented object of knowledge. The contrast gives a special occasion here for designating the contents of the gospel by ἡ ἀλήθεια. On the subject-matter, comp. Rom. i. 16. — συνιστῶντες ἑαυτούς] The emphasis of the contrast lay in τῇ φανερ. τ. ἀλ.; but, on the contrary, through nothing else than through the proclamation of the truth commending ourselves. But even in this "commending ourselves" there clearly lies a contrasting reference to the antagonistic teachers, who accused the apostle of self-praise (iii. 1), but on their part not merely by letters of recommendation, but even by intrigues (ἐν πανουργίᾳ, xi. 3, xii. 16; Eph. iv. 14; Luke xx. 23) and by adulteration of the gospel (δολοῦντες τὸν λόγ. τ. θεοῦ) sought to make themselves honoured and beloved among others. Comp. 1 Thess. ii. 3, 4. Overlooking this, Rückert recommends for συνιστ. the general meaning of laying down, setting forth, proving (Rom. v. 8). — πρὸς πᾶσαν συνείδ. ἀνθρώπ.] πρὸς used of the ethical direction. The essential meaning is, indeed, not different from πρὸς τὴν συνείδησιν πάντων τῶν ἀνθρώπων (for which it is often taken, even by Rückert), but it is otherwise conceived, namely: "to every human conscience." Comp. Rom. ii. 9. Note how Paul here ascribes to every man the capacity of moral judgment, and thus also the knowledge of the moral law as the propositio major of the inference of conscience. If now, however, refractory minds, through perverted moral judgment or moral stubbornness, were unwilling to recognise this de facto self-recommendation made uniformly and without προσωποληψία, the matter remained the same on the part of the apostle; hence it is not, with Grotius, to be explained only of the "bonae conscientiae," against the meaning of the words. — ἐνώπ. τοῦ θεοῦ] applies to συνιστῶντες . . . ἀνθρώπων: so that this our self-recommendation is made in God's presence. This denotes the highest sincerity and honesty in the subjectivity of the person acting, who knows that God (τὸν τοῦ συνειδότος ἐπόπτην, Theodoret) is present as eye-witness. Comp. ii. 17, vii. 12; Gal. i. 20.

Ver. 3. Against the assertion just made, ἀλλὰ τῇ φανερώσει τῆς ἀληθείας . . . θεοῦ, it might be objected: "and yet your gospel is κεκαλυμμένον! is by so many not at all known as the ἀλήθεια!" Wherefore Paul continues, "even if that were the case, still it is so only with regard to the ἀπολλύμενοι whom the devil has blinded, and hence cannot be urged against the former assertion." — εἰ δὲ καὶ ἔστι κεκαλ.] In this admission the placing of ἔστι before κεκαλ. conveys the meaning: but if even it is the case that, etc. The figurative κεκαλ. was suggested by the still fresh remembrance of iii. 14. — τὸ εὐαγγ. ἡμῶν] the gospel preached by us, the Pauline gospel. — ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλύμ.] i.e. among those who (for certain) are liable to eternal ἀπώλεια. See on ii. 15; 1 Cor. i. 18. ἐν is not nota dativi (Flatt), nor yet quod attinet ad (Bengel), but inter, in their circle. Rückert takes it: in their hearts, on account of iii. 15. So also Osiander. But against the analogy of ii. 15; besides, according to iii. 15, it is the heart of the ἀπολλύμενοι, and not the gospel, which must be represented as the veiled subject. It has not at all reached the hearts of the persons concerned.

Ver. 4. A statement to establish the ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλύμ. ἔστι κεκαλ., so that ἐν οἷς is equivalent to ὅτι ἐν τούτοις (comp. on iii. 6): in whom the devil has made blind, i.e. incapable of the perception of the truth, the thoughts of the unbelieving (νοήματα, as in iii. 14¹). It is his work to make the unbelieving blind, as respects the bringing forward their power of thought to confront the light of the gospel; and this his characteristic ἔργον he has carried out in the ἀπολλύμενοι; in their souls he has succeeded in his devilish work of blinding the thoughts of the unbelieving. Observe, accordingly, that the conception of the ἀπολλύμενοι is a narrower one than that of the ἄπιστοι. Not with all ἄπιστοι does the devil gain in presence of the preaching of the gospel his object of blinding them and making them ἀπολλύμενοι; many so comport themselves towards this preaching that they become believing and σωζόμενοι (1 Cor. xiv. 24 f.; Acts xiii. 48, ii. 40, 47; Matt. xiii. 8, 23). Hence τῶν ἀπίστων is neither aimless (the objection of Hofmann), nor is it, with Rückert, to be referred to a negligence of expression, so that Paul would, in order to round off the sentence and to make his opinion quite clearly prominent, that the ἀπολλύμενοι are the ἄπιστοι, have appended the appositional clause ungrammatically and tautologically. Fritzsche, whom Billroth follows, takes τῶν ἀπίστ. proleptically: "hoc effectu ut nullam haberent fidem." But the proleptic use of adjectives (see on 1 Cor. i. 8) is nowhere found with the genitive of an adjective used substantively; it must have run ἐτύφλωσε τὰ νοήματα ἄπιστα.¹ Comp. 1 Thess. iii. 13; Phil. iii. 21. Quite arbitrarily, most of the older expositors (also Grotius, Wolf, Emmerling, Flatt) explain it in such a way that τῶν ἀπίστων fills the place of an apposition to ἐν οἷς. In that case it must have run: ἐν τοῖς ἀπίστοις (see, especially, Bornemann, Schol. in Luc. p. 173). According to Ewald, Paul has inserted the addition τῶν ἀπίστ., as if he meant thereby merely to say: "the Gentile thoughts," because the Jews regarded the Gentiles only as the unbelievers. But such a reference would have needed all the more a precise indication, as the reader had to find in τοῖς ἀπολλυμ. Gentiles and Jews, consequently in τῶν ἀπίστ. no special reference to the Gentile character. According to Hofmann, ἐν οἷς is intended to be the domain within which, etc., and this domain is in view of the preaching of the apostle the Gentile one, in which there has taken place that which this relative clause asserts of the unbelieving. To this the context is opposed, which gives no justification whatever for limiting the ἀπολλύμενοι to the sphere of the Gentile world; they form, in general, a contrast to the σωζόμενοι, as also at ii. 15, i. 18, and to the ἡμεῖς πάντες, iii. 18, who are just the σωζόμενοι. Finally, it is to be observed as a mere historical point, that Irenaeus (Haer. iv. 48), Origen, Tertullian (contra Marc. iv. 11), Chrysostom, Augustine (c. advers. leg. ii. 7. 8), Oecumenius, Theodoret, Theophylact (also Knatchbull), with a view to oppose the dualism of the Marcionites and Manichaeans, joined τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου with τῶν ἀπίστων (infidelium hujus saeculi). — ὁ θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτ.] the God of this (running on till the Parousia) period. On the subject-matter, comp. John viii. 44, xii. 31, xiv. 30; Eph. ii. 2, vi. 12; 2 Thess. ii. 9 f. The devil, as ruling principle, is called god. Comp. Phil. iii. 19. ¹ According to Fritzsche, the unbelief appears as effect of the blinding, consequently as a refusal of belief, as ἀπίθεια. In our view, it appears as defectus fidei and the devil steps in with his blinding, and makes out of the ἄπιστοι the υἱὸς τῆς ἀπειθείας (Eph. v. 6; Col. iii. 6). As regards the contents of the thought, therefore, the two views are not contradictory.

p. 827, where he is called the strange god and the other god. There is not something ironical in the expression here (Olshausen), for that would be quite alien to the connection; on the contrary, with the utmost earnestness the great anti-Christian power of the devil is intended to be made palpably evident. Comp. Bengel. — εἰς τὸ μὴ αὐγάζσαι κ.τ.λ.] Purpose of the devil: in order that the illumination should not shine, etc. For that which illumines does not shine for the blinded.¹ Hence it is quite unnecessary to explain αὐγάζσαι, to see, or to have an eye upon (Luther, Grotius, Emmerling, Rückert, Ewald, Hofmann), which signification (more exactly, to direct the light of the eyes to anything) undoubtedly occurs in Greek poets (Soph. Phil. 217; Eur. Rhes. 793; more frequently in the middle, as Iliad, xxii. 458; Elmsley, ad Bacch. 596; Jacobs, ad Anthol. VIII. p. 338), but is foreign even to the LXX. (Lev. xiii. 25 f., 28, 39, xiv. 56). Besides, the simple αὐγάζειν does not occur in the classic writers with the neuter meaning fulgere (though the compounds καταυγάζειν and διαυγάζειν, which are the readings of several uncials, do so occur), but only in the active sense: irradiate, illumine, as e.g. Eur. Hec. 637. — φωτισμός] illumining, is found in Sextus Empiricus, 522. 9; Plut. Mor. 920 D; more often in the LXX., in Aquila, Theodotion, and Symmachus. Without figure, the meaning is: in order that the enlightening truth of the gospel might not be known and appropriated by them. — τῆς δόξης τοῦ Χριστοῦ] The glory of the exalted Christ (comp. iii. 18) is here denoted as the contents of the Messianic preaching; elsewhere (1 Cor. i. 18) it is the word of the cross. Both meanings are used according to the requirement of the context, and both rightly (Rom. iv. 25, v. 10, al.); for the δόξα is the consequence of the death of the cross, by which it was conditioned (Phil. ii. 6 ff.; Rom. viii. 34, al.; Luke xxiv. 26; often in John), and it conditions the future completion of the work of the cross (Phil. ii. 10 f.; Rom. viii. 34; Heb. vii. 25; 1 Cor. xv.; Col. iii. 3 f.). — ὅς ἐστιν εἰκὼν τ. θεοῦ] for Christ in the state of His exaltation² is again, as He was before His incarnation (comp. John xvii. 5), fully ἐν μορφῇ θεοῦ and ἴσα θεῷ (Phil. ii. 6), hence in His glorified corporeality (Phil. iii. 21) the visible image of the invisible God. See on Col. i. 15; comp. Heb. i. 3. It is true that in the state of His humiliation He had likewise the divine δόξα, which He possessed κατὰ πνεῦμα ἀγιοσύνης (Rom. i. 4), which also, as bearer of the divine grace and truth (John i. 14), and through His miracles (John ii. 11), He made known (John xiv. 9); but its working and revelation were limited by His humiliation to man's estate, and He had divested Himself of the divine appearance (Phil. ii. 7 f.) till in the end, furnished through His resurrection with the mighty attestation of His divine sonship (Rom. i. 4), He entered, through His elevation to the right hand of God, into the full communion of the glory of the Father, in which He is now the God-man, the very image and reflection of God, and will one day come to execute judgment and to establish the kingdom.—Aim of the addition: “hinc satis intelligi potest, quanta sit gloria Christi,” Bengel; it is the highest and holiest of all, and of the knowledge of it Satan deprives those whom he blinds!

Ver. 5. What his gospel (τὸ εὐαγγ. ἡμῶν) proclaimed, he has just described as that which is most glorious and sublime, namely, the δόξα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅς ἐστιν κ.τ.λ. And that nothing else than this is the lofty contents of his preaching, he now establishes, and that under an antithetic point of view, which (comp. iii. 1) takes into account hostile calumny. This antithetic aim so fully justifies the reference of the γάρ to what immediately precedes, and the emphasis laid on Χριστ. Ἰησ. as κύριον, as well as the contents of ver. 6, so obviously confirms it, that we have no warrant for going back with γάρ to iii. 1, even if we include vv. 3–5 (Hofmann). — ἐαυτοῦς κηρύσσ.] In virtue of the contrast that follows (Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. iv. 8. 25), κυρίου might be supplied (de Wette and others, also my own view hitherto), and with this i. 24 might be compared. But since it was self-evident that he did not preach himself as Lord, and this could not be attributed to him even by his opponents, however much they may have accused him of selfish conduct, it is better (comp. Hofmann) to let the expression retain its quite general character: not ourselves, not our own persons, their insight, standing, repute, and other interests, do we make the contents and aim of our preaching. — κύριον] as Lord. In this lies the whole great con-fessional contents of his preaching, which absolutely excludes all desire for self-assertion; comp. Phil. ii. 11; 1 Cor. xii. 3. This κύριον also is to be left quite in its generality,¹ so that the following ὑμῶν has no joint reference to it (Hofmann).—διὰ Ἰησοῦν] This it is by which the relation of service to the readers (δούλους ὑμῶν) is conditioned. For on His account, not irrespectively of Him, we are your servants. Comp. 1 Cor. iv. 1. To do the will of Jesus, and to carry on His work—this it is which determines us to be your servants, i.e. to do our labour for your service; only in this respect, in this relation of service to you, do we preach ourselves, which, therefore, is something quite different from the ἐαυτ. κηρυσσ. before denied.

Ver. 6. Confirmation of the above, and not simply of the concluding words of ver. 5 (ἐαυτοὺς δὲ δούλους κ.τ.λ.), but of the entire ver. 5. For it is God who has bestowed on us such enlightenment, and for such behoof as is declared in ver. 6; how should we not be far exalted above the preaching of ourselves instead of Christ as the Lord, and how could we proclaim ourselves otherwise than simply in the relation of serviceableness to you, serviceableness for Christ's sake!—"For God, who bade light shine out of darkness, it is who caused it to shine in our hearts, in order that we should make the knowledge of the divine glory give light in the presence of Christ." Apart from this figurative clothing, the sense is: For it is God, the creator of light, who bestowed on us the spiritual light communicated to us, not that we might retain it for ourselves without further communication, but that we should convey the knowledge of the divine glory to others in making this knowledge manifest to them in Christ, whom we teach them to know. As to the construction, ὅς is not to be taken as equivalent to οὗτος (Vorstius, Mosheim, Morus, Rosenmüller, Schrader; comp. Theodoret and Luther), nor is ὅς to be deleted (Rückert hesitates between the two), but ἐστὶ is to be supplied, and supplied before ὅς ἐλαμψεν (so, rightly, most of the commentators²), not immediately after ὁ θεός (Valla, Erasmus, Vatablus, Estius, Bengel, Vater, Ewald), because it is only with ὅς ἐλαμψεν that the important idea is introduced, and because Paul has written ὅς and not ὁς καί. On account of the ὅς κ.τ.λ. that follows it is impossible, with Hofmann, to regard the sentence $\delta\tau\iota\ \acute{\omicron}\ \theta\epsilon\acute{\omicron}\varsigma$ as far as $\lambda\acute{\alpha}\mu\psi\alpha\iota$ ("for it is God who . . . has bidden to shine") as a complete and perfect sentence. — $\acute{\omicron}\ \epsilon\iota\pi\acute{\omega}\nu\ \acute{\epsilon}\kappa\ \sigma\acute{\kappa}\acute{\omicron}\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma\ \phi\acute{\omega}\varsigma\ \lambda\acute{\alpha}\mu\psi\alpha\iota$] qui jussit, etc. Reminiscence of Gen. i. 3,¹ in order to prepare for the following $\delta\varsigma\ \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\alpha\mu\psi\epsilon\nu\ \kappa.\tau.\lambda.$, which is meant to appear as analogous to the physical working of God in the creation. "Saepe comparantur beneficia creationis veteris et novae," Grotius. The emergence of the light of the holy truth in Christ from amid the sinful darkness of untruth (Hofmann) is not as yet spoken of; this spiritual fact only finds its expression in what follows, and has here merely the way prepared for it by the corresponding physical creation of light. — $\acute{\epsilon}\kappa$ may doubtless mean immediately after (Emmerling), see Heindorf, ad Prot. p. 463; Jacobs, ad Ael. p. 464; but in the N. T. it does not so occur, and here "forth out of darkness" is far more in keeping with graphic vividness, for such is the position of the matter when what is dark becomes lighted up; comp. LXX. Job xxxvii. 15. — $\delta\varsigma\ \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\alpha\mu\psi\epsilon\nu\ \acute{\epsilon}\nu\ \tau.\ \kappa\alpha\rho\delta.\ \acute{\eta}\mu.$] This $\delta\varsigma$ cannot be referred to Christ, with Hofmann, who compares irrelevantly Heb. v. 7 (where Christ is in fact the chief subject of what immediately precedes), but it applies to God. Whether $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\alpha\mu\psi\epsilon\nu$ is intransitive (Chrysostom and most expositors): he shone, which would have to be explained from the idea of the indwelling of God by means of the Holy Spirit (John xiv. 23; 1 Cor. iii. 16, xiv. 25), or whether it is factitive: who made it (namely, $\phi\acute{\omega}\varsigma$) shine (Grotius, Bengel, Emmerling, Fritzsche), as $\acute{\alpha}\nu\alpha\tau\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\epsilon\nu$ is used in Matt. v. 45, and even $\lambda\acute{\alpha}\mu\psi\epsilon\nu$ in the poets (Eur. Phoen. 226, and the passages in Matthiae, p. 944; Jacobs, ad Anthol. VI. p. 58, VII. p. 378, VIII. p. 199; ad Del. Epigr. p. 62; Lobeck, ad Adj. p. 94, ed. 2), is decided from the context by the preceding physical analogy, which makes the factitive sense in keeping with the $\epsilon\iota\pi\acute{\omega}\nu\ \lambda\acute{\alpha}\mu\psi\alpha\iota$ most probable. If the progress of thought had been: "who himself shone" (Chrysostom, Theodoret), the text must have run, $\delta\varsigma\ \alpha\upsilon\tau\acute{\omicron}\varsigma\ \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\alpha\mu\psi\epsilon\nu$. God has wrought in the hearts of the apostolic teachers, spiritually creating light, just as physically as at the creation He called light out of the darkness. Hofmann, in consequence of his referring $\acute{\omicron}\varsigma$ to Christ, wrongly explains it: "within them has been repeated that which took place in the world when Christ appeared in it." On the point itself in reference to Paul, see Gal. i. 16. — πρὸς φωτισμὸν κ.τ.λ.] for the purpose of lighting (ver. 4), etc., equivalent to πρὸς τὸ φωτίζειν τὴν γνώσιν κ.τ.λ., in order that there may lighten, etc., by which is set forth the thought: "in order that the knowledge of the divine glory may be conveyed and diffused from us to others through the preaching of Christ." For if the knowledge remains undiffused, it has not the nature of a thing that lightens, whose light is received by the eyes of men. — ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ] belongs to πρὸς φωτισμὸν, but cannot be explained in persona Christi, i.e. in nomine Christi, as Estius explains it after the Latin Fathers, but it specifies where the knowledge of the divine glory is to lighten: in the presence of Christ. For Christ is εἰκὼν τοῦ θεοῦ, and Christians see unveiled the glory of Christ, iii. 18. He, therefore, who converts others to Christ makes the knowledge of the divine glory become clear-shining to them, and that in the countenance of the Lord, which is beheld in the gospel as the reflection of the divine glory, so that in this seen countenance that clear-shining knowledge has the source of its light (as it were, its focus). Probably there is in ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ a reminiscence of iii. 7. The connection of ἐν προσώπῳ Χρ. with πρὸς φωτισμὸν has been justly recognised by Estius, and established as the only right one by Fritzsche (Dissert. II. p. 170, and ad Rom. I. p. 188), whom Billroth follows, for the usual way of connecting it with τῆς δόξης τ. θεοῦ (comp. also Hofmann: "the glory of God visible in Christ") would of necessity require τῆς repeated after θεοῦ, since δόξα is not a verbal substantive like φωτισμός, and consequently, without repeating the article, Paul would necessarily have written τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ δόξης ἐν προσωπ. Χρ. (see Krüger, §§ 50, 9, 9, and 8). The objection of de Wette against our view—an objection raised substantially by Hofmann also—that the γνώσις is the subjective possession of the apostle, and cannot therefore become light-giving in the face of Christ, leaves out of consideration the fact that the γνώσις is objectivised. Conveyed through preaching, the γνώσις of the divine glory gives light (it would not give light otherwise), and its light-giving has its seat and source of issue on the countenance of Christ, because it is this, the glory of which is brought to view in the mirror of preaching (iii. 18).—Note, further, how there is something clumsy but majestic in the entire mode of expression, πρὸς . . . Χριστοῦ, especially in the accumulation of the four genitives, as in ver. 4.

Ver. 7 ff. The apostle now (on to ver. 10) turns to the relation which the outward position, seemingly quite incongruous, bears to so glorious a calling. This pertained to the completeness of his Apologia, and to him—even without special attacks of opponents on this side—it thus most naturally suggested itself! We must put aside the supposition that his opponents had reproached him with his bodily weakness and persecutions (see, especially, Calvin, Estius, Mosheim, Flatt, Emmerling) as testimonies against genuine apostleship, since such a reproach, which must have affected not him only, but the apostolic teachers in general, is in itself quite improbable, and no trace of it is found in the whole of the following section. Still this section also is certainly not without indirect polemic bearing; for Paul, owing to the peculiarity of his apostolic character, had borne and suffered far more than the rival Judaistic teachers; and hence there was in the relation of his afflictions to his working quite a peculiar holy triumph for him over his foes. Compare the noble effusion in xii. 23 ff.

Ver. 7. Δέ] merely carrying on the train of thought: Now to compare our outward position with this high vocation, we have, etc. — τὸν θησαυρὸν τοῦτον] is referred either, in accordance with ver. 6, to the light kindled by God in the heart (Grotius, Flatt, Rückert, and others), or to the ministerium evangelii (Calvin, Estius, Bengel, Emmerling, and others). According to ver. 6, the inward divine enlightening (πρὸς φωτισμὸν κ.τ.λ.) is meant, and this definition of aim (πρὸς φωτ.) embraces in itself the ministerium evang. — ἐν ὀστράκinois σκεύεσιν] in vessels of clay. Contrast with θησαυρὸν, because, for such a treasure, some more costly and lasting vessel seems suitable. Comp. the opposite in Arrian, Epict. iii. 9: χρυσᾷ σκεύη, ὀστράκινον δὲ λόγον. We may add that Paul, who, in fact, speaks here not of himself alone (observe the plur. σκεύεσιν, and ver. 6, καρδίαις), wishes not to affirm some special weakness of himself, but to say generally: Though we have so glorious a trust, yet is our body, the outward organ of our working, subject to the lot of being easily destructible. Following Chrysostom, Theophylact, and Theodoret, most commentators have rightly found in σκεύεσιν a figurative designation of the body; while Billroth and Rückert, following Estius, Calovius, Wolf, and others, understand the whole personality. Against the latter view we may urge as well the characteristic ὁσπρακίνοις, which can refer only to the corporeal part (comp. Gen. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 47), as also ver. 16 and v. 1 ff. For examples of the use of *ὁσπράκινον σκεῦος*¹ for the easily destructible corporeality (as Artemidorus, vi. 25: θάνατον μὲν γὰρ εἰκότως ἐσήμαινε τῇ γυναικὶ τὸ εἶναι ἐν ὁσπρακίνοις σκεύει), see Wetstein.—ἵνα ἡ ὑπερβολὴ κ.τ.λ.] The design of God in this, namely, in order that the abundant fulness of power, which comes to be applied, namely, in our ministry working πρὸς φωτισμὸν κ.τ.λ., ver. 6, in spite of all sufferings and persecutions (see what follows), may appear as the property of God, and not as proceeding from us. The context furnishes that special reference of the ὑπερβολὴ τῆς δυνάμ. The opposite of the conception of ὑπερβολὴ is ἔλλειψις (Plato, Protag. 356 A, Def. p. 415 A, al.).—καὶ μὴ ἐξ ἡμῶν] καὶ μὴ ἡμεῖς νομιζόμεθα κατορθοῦν ἐξ ἑαυτῶν τι, ἀλλὰ πάντες οἱ ὁρῶντες τοῦ θεοῦ λέγωσιν εἶναι τὸ πᾶν, Theophylact.—The ἡ is to be taken logice of the being, which presents itself to cognition; as often with Paul (Rom. iii. 26, 4, 19, vii. 13). Rückert denies this, but comes back himself to the same view by giving the meaning thus: God wishes to be the One, and to be recognised as such, who alone, etc. The explanation of Tertullian, the Vulgate, Estius, according to which τῆς δυνάμ. is connected with τοῦ θεοῦ, is against the order of the word.

Paul here varies the mode of presentation, since the contrast does not again negative an action of enemies. Lydius (Agonistic. sacr. 24, p. 84 ff.), Hammond, and Olshausen think that we have here the figure of a foot-race, in which the runner overtaken ἐγκαταλείπεται (see the passages in Lydius); but the figure would be unsuitable, since the runners have a common goal (1 Cor. ix. 24). Hostile persecution in general is meant. Ver. 10. Extreme concentration of all suffering, as of all victory through the power of God. In this πάντοτε, corresponding to the ἐν παντί of ver. 8 and the αἰεί of ver. 11, is with great emphasis placed first. The νέκρωσις is the putting to death, like the classic θανάτωσις (Thucyd. v. 9. 7). In this case the context decides whether it is to be taken in a literal or, as in Rom. iv. 19, in a figurative sense. Comp. Astrampsychus in Suidas: νεκρὸς ὁρῶν νέκρωσιν ἔχεις πραγμάτων, Porphy. de Abstin. iv. p. 418; Aret. pp. 23, 48; also ἀπονέκρωσις in Arrian, Epict. i. 5. Here it stands, as ver. 11 proves, in a literal sense: At all times we bear about the putting to death of Jesus in our body, i.e. at all times, in our apostolic movements, our body is exposed to the same putting to death which Jesus suffered, i.e. to violent deprivation of life for the gospel's sake. The constant supreme danger of this death, and the constant actual persecutions and maltreatments, make the νέκρωσις τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, in the conception of the sufferer as of the observer, appear as something clinging to the body of the person concerned, which he carries about with it, although, till the final actual martyrdom, it remains incomplete and, in so far, resting on a prolepsis of the conception. On the subject-matter, comp. Rom. viii. 35 f.; 1 Cor. xv. 31; Phil. iii. 10. The gen. τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, however, is not to be taken as propter Jesum (Vatablus and others, including Emmerling), nor ad exemplum Christi (Grotius, Flatt), but quite as in τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, i. 5; and it is altogether arbitrary to understand anything more special than the great danger to life generally involved in the continual persecutions and afflictions (xi. 23 ff.),—as e.g. Eichhorn takes it to refer to wounds received in the apostolic ministry (Gal. vi. 17), and Rückert, here again (see on i. 8), to the alleged sickness, from which Paul had not yet fully recovered. The right view is already given in Chrysostom: οἱ θάνατοι οἱ καθημερινοὶ, δι' ὧν καὶ ἡ ἀνάστασις ἐδείκνυτο. Comp. Pelagius. But τ. νέκρωσιν is chosen (not τ. θάνατον), because Paul has in mind the course of events leading to the death suffered by Jesus, which is mirrored in his own sufferings for Christ's sake. — ἵνα καὶ ἡ ζωὴ κ.τ.λ. in order that also the life of Jesus, etc. This is the blessed relation supervening according to God's purpose. Just as, namely, the continual sufferings and peril of death appear as the νέκρωσις of Jesus in the body of those persecuted, so, in keeping with that view, their rescued life appears as the same ζωή, which, in the case of Jesus, followed after His dying, through the resurrection from death (Rom. v. 10). The victorious surmounting of the sufferings and perils of death, from which one emerges saved as regards the body, is, according to the analogy of the conception of the νέκρωσις τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, resurrection; and thus there becomes manifest, in the body of him that is rescued, the same life which Jesus entered on at His bodily resurrection. If, with Chrysostom, Cajetan, Estius, Mosheim, and others (comp. Flatt and also Hofmann), we should regard the preservation and rescuing as evinced the effectual operation of the bodily glorified Jesus, there would be unnecessarily introduced a different position of matters in the two parts of the verse; as the νέκρωσις itself is thought of in the one case, we must in the other also understand the ζῶῃ itself (not an effect of it). According to de Wette and Osiander, the thought of the apostle is, that in his ineradicable energy of spirit in suffering there is revealed Christ's power of suffering, in virtue of which He has risen and lives for ever; comp. Beza. In that case a moral revelation of life would be meant, and to this ἐν τῷ σώματι ἡμῶν (comp. ver. 11) would not be suitable. — Notice, further, how, in ver. 10 f., Paul names only the name Ἰησοῦς, and how repeatedly he uses it. "Singulariter sensit dulcedinem ejus," Bengel. As bearer of the dying and living of the Lord in his body, he has before his eyes and in his heart, with the deepest feeling of fellowship, the concrete human manifestation, Jesus. Even the exalted One is, and remains to him, Jesus. A contrast between the earthly Jesus and the heavenly Christ, for whom the former is again deprived of life (Holsten), is, as the clause of purpose shows, not to be thought of.

Ver. 11. An elucidation, and therewith a confirmation of ver. 10. — ἀεί (comp. vi. 10) is distinguished from πάντοτε as respects the form of the conception, just as always or continually from at all times. Comp. the classical ἀεί διὰ βίου, Heindorf, ad Plat. Phaed. p. 75 D; also the Homeric οἱ ἀεί θεοί. — ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες] brings out, by way of contrast, the ἀεί εἰς θάνατον παραδιδόμεθα: we who live, so that in this way the constant devotion to death looks all the more tragic, since the living appear as liable to constant dying. We are continuously the living prey of death! The reference of Grotius, "qui nondum ex hac vita excessimus, ut multi jam Christianorum," is alien to the context. Further, it can neither mean: as long as we live (Calvin, Beza by way of suggestion, Mosheim, Zachariae, Flatt, de Wette), nor: who still, in spite of perils of death, remain ever in life (Estius, Bengel, Rückert), which latter would anticipate the clause of aim, ἵνα κ.τ.λ. In accordance with his view of ver. 10, Osiander (comp. Bisping) takes it of the spiritual life in the power of faith. — παραδιδόμ.] by the persecutors, ver. 8 f. — ἐν τῇ θνητῇ σαρκὶ ἡμ.] designation of the σῶμα (ver. 10) as respects its material weakness and transitoriness, whereby the φανερωθῆναι of the ζῶῃ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ is meant to be rendered palpable by means of the contrast. In ἐν τῷ σώματι, ver. 10, and ἐν τῇ θνητῇ σαρκί, ver. 11, there is a climax of the terms used. Rückert thinks, wrongly, that the expression would be highly unsuitable, if in what precedes he were speaking of nothing but persecutions. It was in fact the mortal σάρξ, which might so easily have succumbed to such afflictions as are described, e.g., in xi. 23 ff. — ἵνα καὶ κ.τ.λ.] an emphatic repetition of the clause of aim contained in ver. 10, with a still stronger prominence given to the element there denoted by ἐν τῷ σώματι ἡμῶν, on account of which ἐν τ. θν. σαρκὶ ἡμῶν is here placed at the end. There is implied in it a triumph. Comp. on the thought of vv. 10, 11, Ignatius, Magnes. 6 : ἐὰν μὴ αὐθαιρέτως ἔχωμεν τὸ ἀποθανεῖν εἰς τὸ αὐτοῦ (Christ's) πάθος, τὸ ζῆν αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἡμῖν.

Ver. 12. An inference from ver. 11 ; hence the meaning can be no other than : Accordingly, since we are continually exposed to death, it is death whose working clings to us ; but since the revelation of the life of Jesus in us goes to benefit you through our work in our vocation, the power opposed to death, life, is that which exercises its working on you. ὁ θάνατος and ἡ ζωή can, according to vv. 10 and 11, be nothing else than the bodily death and the bodily life, both conceived of as personal powers, and consequently the life not as existent in Jesus (Hofmann). It was death to which Paul and those like him were ever given up, and it was life which, in spite of all deadly perils, retained the victory and remained preserved. And this victorious power of life, presenting in His servants the life of the risen Lord, was active (comp. Phil. i. 22, 24) through the continuance thereby rendered possible of the apostolic working among the Christians, and especially among the Corinthians (ἐν ὑμῖν), although they were not affected in like manner by that working of death. Estius (following Lombard) and Grotius (comp. Olshausen) take ἐνεργ. passively : “ in nobis . . . mors agitur et exercetur . . . ut vicissim . . . per nostra pericula nostramque quotidianam mortem vobis gignitur, augetur, perficitur vita spiritualis ” (Estius). But in the N. T. ἐνεργ. never occurs in a passive sense (see on i. 6), and according to vv. 10, 11, ἡ ζωή cannot be vita spiritualis, as even Osiander (comp. Ewald) here again interprets it. Calvin, Menochius, and Michaelis find in it something ironical : we are in continual deadly peril, while you are in comfort. Comp. Chrysostom, who, however, does not expressly signalize the ironical character of the passage. On ζῆν, vita frui, see Jacobs, ad Anthol. X. p. 70 ; comp. ζῆν καὶ εἶναι, Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 239. But the context gives no suggestion whatever of irony or of any such reference of ἡ ζωὴ (ὁμοίως δὲ ἐν ἀνέσει, τὴν ἐκ τούτων τῶν κινδύνων καρπούμενοι ζωὴν, Chrysostom). As foreign to it is Rückert's view, which refers the first half of the verse to Paul's alleged sickness, and the second half to the state of health of the Corinthians, which, as Paul had recently learned through Titus, had considerably improved after a sickness that had been prevalent (1 Cor. xi. 30).—We may add that the first clause is set down without μέν, because Paul purposely avoids paving the way for the contrast, in order thereupon to bring it forward by way of surprise. "Infert particula δέ novam rem cum aliqua oppositione," Klotz, ad Devar. p. 356.

Ver. 13. A remark giving information (δέ, see on iii. 17) on ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν. For through the πιστεύομεν, διὸ καὶ λαλοῦμεν, is that very ἡ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἐνεργεῖται rendered possible and brought about. The connection of ideas is frequently taken thus: "Though death works in us and life in you, we have yet the certain confidence that we too will partake of the life." Comp. Estius, Flatt, Rückert. But in that case the relation of the two verses, 13 and 14, would be logically inverted, and the participial clause in ver. 14 would be made the principal clause; Paul must logically have written: "Because, however, we have the same spirit of faith, which David expresses in the words, etc., we know," etc. According to Olshausen, Paul wishes to represent the thought that his career, so full of suffering, is a source of life to the Corinthians, as a living certainty wrought in him from above. But apart from the erroneous explanation of ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν, on which this is based (see on ver. 12), the very fact—the ἡ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἐνεργεῖται—was something consonant to experience, and hence Paul in ver. 13 gives nothing else than an elucidation consonant to experience. According to de Wette (comp. before him, Erasmus, Paraphr., who inserts the intermediate thought: nec tamen ob id nos poenitet evangelii), the course of thought is: "But this working of death hinders us not from preaching the gospel boldly, since the hope of the resurrection strengthens us." In this way, however, he arbitrarily passes over the immediately preceding thought, ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν, to which, nevertheless, ver. 13 supplies an appropriate elucidation. According to Hofmann, Paul brings in a modification of the contrast contained in ver. 12, when he says that he has, while death works in him, still the same spirit as exists in those in whom life works. But there is no hint of this retrospective reference of τὸ αὐτό (which would have required a σὺν ὑμῖν or something similar); and not even the thought in itself would be suitable, since his being in possession of the same spirit which his disciples, in whom his life was in fact at work, possessed, would be self-evident, and not a special point to be brought into prominence and asserted by the apostle. This also in opposition to Erasmus, Estius, Bengel, Schrader, and others, who explain τὸ αὐτό: the same spirit, which you have. — τὸ αὐτὸ πνεῦμα τῆς πίστεως] i.e. the same Holy Spirit working faith, not: the believing frame of mind (de Wette, comp. also Lipsius, Rechtfertigungsl. p. 176), which is not the meaning of πνεῦμα in Rom. viii. 15, xi. 8; 1 Cor. iv. 21; Gal. vi. 1; Eph. i. 17. τὸ αὐτό is the same which is made known in the following saying of Scripture, consequently the same as the Psalmist had. With this hero of faith the apostle knows himself to be on an equality in faith.¹ The πίστις which the Spirit works was with the Psalmist trust in God, with Paul faith in the salvation in Christ; with both, therefore, the same fundamental disposition of pious confidence on God's promise (Heb. i. 11). — κατὰ τὸ γεγραπ.] in conformity, in agreement with what is written. This belongs to καὶ ἡμεῖς πιστεύομεν, for if it belonged to ἔχοντες (Calvin, Beza, de Wette, Ewald, and many others), αὐτό would be superfluous. — ἐπίστευσα, διὸ ἐλάλησα] I have become a believer, therefore have I let myself be heard, Ps. cxvi. 10, after the LXX., in which the translation of עָרַבְתִּי בִּי אֱמוּנָה is incorrect, but might be retained by Paul, all the more seeing that in the original is contained the idea that the speaking proceeded from faith² (I trusted, for I spoke). — καὶ ἡμεῖς] we too, like the Psalmist. Hofmann, on the other hand, in accordance with his inappropriate view of τὸ αὐτὸ πνεῦμα τ. π., understands it: "in common with those, who have the same spirit." — διὸ καὶ λαλοῦμεν] on which account we also let ourselves be heard, are not silent, but preach the gospel. Through this it happens that ἡ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἐνεργεῖται. See on ver. 12. The καί before λαλ. is the also of the relation corresponding (to the πιστεύομεν).

Ver. 14. Encouraging assurance accompanying this λαλοῦμεν (not its contents); since we are certain that, etc. Comp. Rom. v. 3; 1 Cor. xv. 58. — ὁ ἐγείρας τ. κ. Ἰησ.] Comp. on 1 Cor. vi. 14; Rom. viii. 11. This designation of God contains the ground of faith for the conviction about to be expressed. — καὶ ἡμᾶς σὺν Ἰησοῦ ἐγερεῖ κ. παραστ. σὺν ὑμῖν] This is usually understood of the actual resurrection from the dead, and of the presenting before the judgment-seat of Christ. And this view is the right one, partly because it alone is in keeping with the definite expressions, partly because it is in the highest degree suitable to the connection, when Paul here at the close of what he says regarding his sufferings and perils of death expresses the certainty of the last and supreme consummation as the deepest ground of his all-defying courage of faith. This amid all afflictions is his καυχᾶσθαι ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τῆς δόξης τοῦ θεοῦ, Rom. v. 2. Paul, indeed, expected that he himself and most of his readers would live to see the Parousia (1 Cor. xv. 51 f., i. 8, xi. 26; 2 Cor. i. 13 f.); but the possibility of meeting death in the deadly persecutions was always and even now before his mind (1 Cor. xv. 31 f.; 2 Cor. i. 8, v. 18; Phil. i. 20 f., ii. 17; Acts xx. 25, 38); and out of this case conceived as possible, which subsequently he for the time being even posits as a certainty (see on Acts xx. 25), he expresses here in presence of his eventual death his triumphant consciousness ὅτι ὁ ἐγείρας κ.τ.λ. Hence there is no ground for explaining it, with Beza (who, however, again abandoned this view), Calixtus ("suscitabit a morte sc. illa quotidiana"), Schulz, Rückert, Neander, of the resurrection in a figurative sense, viz. of the overcoming the constant perils of death (vv. 10–12), which, it is held, is a resurrection with Jesus, in so far as through it there arises a fellowship of destiny with the risen Christ. This interpretation is not demanded by the correct reading σὺν Ἰησοῦ, as if this σύν (comp. Rom. vi. 4, 8; Eph. ii. 5 f.) presupposed the spiritual meaning. It is true that the raising of the dead takes place διὰ Ἰησοῦ, and has its basis ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ (1 Cor. xv. 21, 22); but Christians may be also conceived and designated as one day becoming raised with Jesus, since they are members of Christ, and Christ is the ἀπαρχή (1 Cor. xv. 23) of all who rise from the dead. The believer, in virtue of his connection with the Lord, knows himself already in his temporal life as risen with Christ (see on Col. ii. 12, iii. 1), and what he thus knows in faith emerges at the last day into objective completion and outward reality. — καὶ παραστήσει σὺν ὑμῖν] and will present us together with you. This is taken, according to the previously rejected figurative sense of ἐγερεῖ, to refer to the presentation of the conquerors over deadly perils, or even in the sense: “and will bring us together again with you” (Neander, Rückert). But, according to the context, after the mention of the resurrection, it obviously denotes the presentation before the judgment-seat of Christ (v. 10; Rom. xiv. 10; Col. i. 22; Eph. v. 27; Luke xxi. 36), where the righteous receive the eternal δόξα (2 Tim. iv. 8). With Christ they have suffered; with Him they have risen; and now before the throne of the Lord their συνδοξασθῆναι (Rom. viii. 15) sets in, which must be the blessed result of their presentation before the Judge. Hence Hofmann is wrong in thinking that there is no allusion to the judgment-seat of Christ in παραστ. Comp. on Col. i. 22. In the certainty of this last consummation Paul has the deepest ground of encouragement for his undaunted working, and the presentiment of such a glorious consummation is made still sweeter to him by the glance at the fellowship of love with his Corinthians, together with whom he will reach the blessed goal unto eternal union. Comp. 1 Thess. ii. 19. Hence: σὺν ὑμῖν, which is an essential part of the inward certainty expressed by εἰδότες κ.τ.λ., which gives him high encouragement. We may add that the ὑμεῖς will be partly those risen, partly those changed alive (1 Cor. xv. 51 ff.; 1 Thess. iv. 14 ff.).

Ver. 15. Σὺν ὑμῖν, which he has just used, is now made good in such a way as to win their hearts. “With you, I say, for all of it is for your sake;” there is nothing of all that we have to suffer and that we do, which is not related to your advantage. Comp. 2 Tim. ii. 10. ἐστὶ simply is to be supplied; but πάντα sums up what is contained in vv. 7–13 (not merely ver. 12 f.). Christ’s death and resurrection, to which Chrysostom, Theodoret, and Grotius make reference, did not form the subject-matter of the preceding context. — ἵνα ἡ χάρις πλεονάσασα κ.τ.λ.] in order that the grace, i.e. not only the divine grace consisting in the reception of the spirit of faith (Hofmann), but that which is at work in all our victorious suffering and labouring, increased by the increasing number, i.e. after it has grown in extent and influence through the increasing number of those who beyond ourselves have become partakers in it, may make the thanksgiving, which pertains to it, abundant (may produce it in an exceedingly high degree) to the honour of God. There is a similar thought in i. 11; but in the present passage the thanksgiving is, in accordance with ver. 14, conceived as on the day of judgment. Note the correlation of χάρις and εὐχαριστίαν, as well as the climax: πλεονάσασα διὰ τῶν πλειόνων and περισσεύση (1 Thess. iii. 12). On περισσεύειν τι, comp. ix. 8; Eph. i. 8; 1 Thess. iii. 12.—This is the construction adopted by Chrysostom (?), the Vulgate, Ewald, and others, including Rückert and Olshausen, who, however, refer διὰ τῶν πλειόνων to the intercession of the Corinthians, which is not at all suggested by the context. Divergent constructions are: (1) “in order that the grace, since it has become so exceeding rich, may contribute richly to the glory of God on account of the thanksgiving of the increasing number,” Billroth, following Erasmus, Luther, Castalio, Beza, Calvin, Estius, Grotius, Bengel, Rosenmüller, Krause, Flatt, Osiander, and others. So, in the main, Hofmann also: (2) in order that the grace, since it has shown itself so richly, may, through the increasing number, make the thanksgiving abundant to the honour of God. So Emmerling, de Wette, Neander. Both are possible; but since διὰ with the accusative would express the conception, for the sake of, here unsuitable, the former construction would lead us to expect διὰ with the genitive instead of διὰ τ. πλ. τὴν εὐχαρ.¹ (comp. i. 11, ix. 12); and with both we fail to find in πλεονάσασα a more precise definition of that by which the grace has become more abundant, a thing not directly involved in the connection (as in Rom. vi. 1). Besides, both are less in keeping with the symmetry of the discourse, which, in structure and expression, is carefully chosen and terse—features seen also in the collocation: “increased through the increasing number.” These πλειόνες are those who have been converted by the apostolic ministry, and in particular those advanced in the Christian life, who were just individualized by δι' ὑμᾶς.

Ver. 16. Διό] namely, on account of the certainty expressed in ver. 14 (partly elucidated in ver. 15), in significant keeping with εἰδότες, and hence not to be referred back to the faith of the preachers, ver. 13 (Hofmann). — οὐκ ἑκκακ.] as ver. 1. The opposite of ἑκκακ. is: our inward man, i.e. our morally self-conscious personality, with the thinking and willing νοῦς and the life-principle of the πνεῦμα (see on Rom. vii. 22; Eph. iii. 16; comp. 1 Pet. iii. 4), is renewed from day to day, i.e. it receives through the gracious efficacy of the divine Spirit continually new vigour and elevation, τῇ πίστει, τῇ ἐλπίδι, τῇ προθυμίᾳ, Chrysostom. But with this there is also the admission: even if our outward man, our phenomenal existence, our visible bodily nature, whose immediate condition of life is the ψυχή, is destroyed, i.e. is in process of being wasted away, of being swept off, namely, through the continual sufferings and persecutions, μαστιζόμενος, ἐλαυνόμενος, μυρία πύσχων δεινά, Chrysostom. For though the continual life-rescues reveal the life of Jesus in the body of the apostle (ver. 11), yet there cannot thereby be done away the gradually destructive physical influence of suffering on the bodily nature. There is here a noble testimony to the consciousness of a continuous independence of the development of spiritual life on the passivity of the body; but the view of Billroth, who finds in ἀνακαίν. the growth of the infinite, the true resurrection, is just as un-Pauline as is the opinion of an inward invisible body (Menken), or even of a corporeality of the soul (Tertullian). On the point whether the inward man includes in itself the germ of the resurrection of the body (Osiander), the N. T. says nothing. Rückert diverges wholly from the usual interpretation, and thinks that διὸ οὐκ ἑκκακ. is only an accessory, half parenthetical inference from what precedes, and that a new train of thought does not begin till ἀλλ': "I have that hope, and hence do not become despondent. But even if I did not possess it, supposing even that my outward man is actually dissolved," etc. Against this it may be urged that οὐκ ἑκκακοῦμεν, ἀλλ' κ.τ.λ. could not but present itself obviously to every reader as closely connected (we faint not, but), and that the whole interpretation is a consequence of Rückert's erroneous exposition of ver. 14. Hence Neander also gives a similar interpretation, but hesitatingly.—On διαφθείρεται, comp Plato, Alc. i. p. 135 A: διαφθαρήναι τὸ σῶμα. — The ἀλλ' (at, on the contrary) in the apodosis, after a concessive conditional sentence, introduces with emphasis the opposite compensating relation; see Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 374; Nägelsbach on the Iliad, p. 43, ed. 2; Baeumlein, Partik. p. 11. — ὁ ἔσωθεν] the inward, inner man. Instead of ἀνακαινούν, the Greeks have only ἀνακαινίζειν (Heb. iv. 6), but the simple form is also classical.—The confession εἰ καὶ ὁ ἔξω κ.τ.λ. became a watchword of the martyrs. Comp. an eternal weight (growth) of glory. In this—and how exuberant is the deeply emotional form of expression itself!—lies the measureless force and the measureless success of the κατεργάζεταιαι. If, with Rückert, we sought to find in this an adverbial definition to αἰώνιον βάρος (Rom. vii. 13), it could only refer to αἰώνιον, and the notion of αἰώνιος would make this appear as unsuitable. Rückert is further wrong in thinking that the expression does not seem to admit of a precise verbal explanation. But on καθ' ὑπερβ. see i. 8; Rom. vii. 13; 1 Cor. xii. 31; Gal. i. 13; 4 Macc. iii. 18; Bernhardt, p. 241; and on εἰς ὑπερβ. comp. passages like x. 15; Luke xiii. 11; Eur. Hipp. 939; Lucian, *D. There is contained, however, in *βάρος*¹ the quantitative greatness of the δόξα; comp. βάρος πλούτου, Plut. Alex. 48; Eur. Iph. 419; Soph. Ajax. 130, and Lobeck thereon. It is similar to the German phrase “eine schwere Menge.” — κατεργάζεταιαι ἡμῖν brings about for us. The δόξα is conceived as requital for the θλίψις (Matt. v. 12; Luke xvi. 25; Rom. viii. 17; 2 Tim. ii. 12, 13), and in so far as its effect, the production of which is developed in the present suffering. It is not merely a spiritual and moral δόξα that is meant (Rückert, who irrelevantly appeals to Rom. iii. 23), but the whole glory, the aggregate glorious condition in the Messiah's kingdom, Rom. viii. 17, 18 ff.; Matt. xiii. 43. — μὴ σκοποῦντ. ἡμ. κ.τ.λ.] since we do not direct our aim to that which is seen, i.e. since we have not in view, as the goal of our striving (Phil. ii. 4), the visible goods, enjoyments, etc., which belong to the pre-Messianic period (τὰ ἐπίγεια, Phil. iii. 19); comp. Rom. viii. 25. Billroth wrongly understands the resurrection-bodies to be meant, which must have been derived from what precedes, and may not be inferred from v. 1. The participle is taken as conditioning by Calvin, Rückert, Ewald, Hofmann: it being presupposed that we, etc.; comp. Chrysostom:

¹ βάρος is not distinguished from ἔγρος by the latter having always the idea of burden (Tittmann, Synon. p. 158). The notion of weight is always contained in βάρος, and in ἔγρος that of bulk. The idea of burdensomeness is in both words given solely by the context. ἀν τῶν ὁρωμένων ἀπαγάγωμεν ἑαυτούς. The μή would accord with this interpretation, but does not require it; see Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 301 f. [E. T. 351]. The former sense, specifying the reason, is not only more appropriate in general to the ideal apostolic way of regarding the Christian life (Rom. v. 3-5, viii. 1, 9, 25; 2 Cor. iv. 18), but it is also recommended by the fact that Paul himself is meant first of all in ἡμῶν. On the more strongly emphatic genitive absolute (instead of μὴ σκοποῦσι τὰ βλεπ.), even after the governing clause, comp. With the Greeks, however, the repetition of the subject (ἡμῶν) is rare; comp. Thuc. iii. 22. 1. — τὰ μὴ βλεπόμενα] Paul did not write τὰ οὐ βλεπόμενα, because the goods and enjoyments of the Messianic kingdom are to appear from the subjective standpoint of the ἡμεῖς as something not seen.¹ See Hermann, ad Viger. p. 807; Kühner, II. § 715. 3. CHAPTER V.

VER. 3. εἴγε] Lachm. reads εἴπερ, following B D E F G 17, 80, and τινές in Chrys. One of the two is hardly a grammatical correction, but simply an involuntary alteration of the copyists. Hence the preponderance of testimony is decisive, and that in favour of εἴγε, which has the support of C K L & among the uncials, and of almost all the cursives, as well as the strong weight of all the Greek Fathers. (The testimony of the vss. and Latin Fathers is not available here.) — ἐνδυσάμενοι] ἐκδυσάμενοι is found in D* F G, Ar. pol. It. codd. in Chrys. and Oec. Ambrosiast. Tert. Paulin. Primas. Ambros. Marcion. Preferred by Mill,¹ Seml. Michael. Ernesti, Schott, Schneckenb. Reiche, Osiander, and others. Recommended by Griesb.; not adopted, but declared decidedly as correct, by Rück., comp. also Kling in the Stud. u. Krit. 1839, p. 511; adopted by Tisch. But ἐκδυσ. is an old alteration, arising from the fact that ἰνδυσ., οὐ γυμνοί were not regarded as contrasts, and hence the former was found inappropriate and unintelligible. Lachm. and Ewald also defend the Recepta ἰνδυσ. — Ver. 4. After σκήνει Rück. reads τοῦτο, following D E F G min. and several vss. and Fathers. A defining addition. — Ver. 5. ὁ δούς] ὁ καὶ δούς is read by Elz. Scholz, Tisch. against B C D* F G &* min. and several vss. and Fathers. But comp. i. 22. — Ver. 10. κακόν] φαῦλον, favoured by Griesb., adopted by Tisch., is here (it is otherwise in Rom. ix. 11) too weakly attested (only by C and & among the uncials). — Ver. 12. οὐ] Elz. Scholz, Tisch. have οὐ γάρ, but against preponderating evidence. Addition for the sake of connection. — καὶ οὐ] Lachm. reads καὶ μὴ ἐν. But μὴ is only in B & and some cursives, Theodoret; while ἐν is found in B D* F G & and some cursives, Copt. Syr. Vulg. It. Clem. Ambrosiast. Pel., so that μὴ and ἐν have not equal attestation. μὴ is an emendation, and ἐν supplementary. — Ver. 15. εἰ εἴς] Lachm. Rück. read εἴς, following far preponderating testimony. εἰ was inserted for the sake of a connection assumed to be wanting. — Ver. 16. εἰ δὲ καί] B D* &* 17, 39 have only εἰ καί. So Lachm.

Rück. $\delta\acute{\epsilon}$ is only added by way of connection, just as the change of order $\kappa\alpha\iota\ \epsilon\iota$ in F G, Vulg., It. and Latin Fathers has been made for the sake of the connection, but likewise testifies to the non-genuineness of $\delta\acute{\epsilon}$. — Ver. 17. $\tau\acute{\alpha}\ \pi\acute{\alpha}\nu\tau\alpha$] is wanting in important authorities. Deleted by Lachm. and Rück. But how easily it may have been passed over on account of the following $\tau\acute{\alpha}\ \delta\epsilon\ \pi\acute{\alpha}\nu\tau\alpha$! Some versions omit the latter. — Ver. 21. $\gamma\acute{\alpha}\rho$] is, according to preponderating testimony, to be deleted, with Lachm. Rück. and Tisch. Instead of $\gamma\iota\nu\acute{\omega}\mu\iota$, $\gamma\epsilon\nu\acute{\omega}\mu\iota$ should be read, with Lachm. and Tisch., following B C D E K L \aleph , min. Or. Chrys. al. These witnesses are decisive; F and G also suggest the aor.

Vv. 1–10. Still a continuation of what precedes (see on iv. 7).

Ver. 1. $\Gamma\acute{\alpha}\rho$] gives a reason for iv. 17. For if we were not certain that, etc., ver. 1, we could not maintain that our temporal tribulation works for us an eternal weight of glory. — $\omicron\acute{\iota}\delta\alpha\mu\epsilon\nu$] is here not the general it is known (Rom. ii. 2, iii. 19, vii. 14, viii. 28), but Paul is speaking (with the inclusion also of Timothy) of himself, as in the whole context. He is certain of this. Comp. Job xix. 25. — $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\alpha}\nu\ \eta\ \acute{\epsilon}\pi\acute{\iota}\gamma\epsilon\iota\omicron\varsigma\ \eta\mu\acute{\omega}\nu\ \kappa\tau\lambda.$] in case our earthly house of the tent (our present body) shall have been broken up (comp. Polyb. vi. 40; 2 Esdr. v. 12). Paul here supposes the case, the actual occurrence of which, however, is left quite indefinite by $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\alpha}\nu$, of his not living to see the Parousia. It is true that he was convinced for himself that he would live to see it (1 Cor. xv. 51), but the opposite still remained to him a possible case, and he posits it here (comp. on iv. 14) as dependent on emergent circumstances and with an eye to the future decision. This correct view of the use of $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\alpha}\nu$ (see Hermann, ad Viger. pp. 822, 834 f.; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 453) is sufficient to set aside the supposition that it is here equivalent to $\kappa\acute{\alpha}\nu$, etiamsi (Grotius, Mosheim, Schulz, Rosenmüller, also Schneckenburger, Beitr. p. 125), which is not the case even in passages such as Mark viii. 36; 1 Cor. iv. 15, xiii. 1–3; 2 Cor. xii. 6. — $\acute{\epsilon}\pi\acute{\iota}\gamma\epsilon\iota\omicron\varsigma$] earthly, i.e. to be found on earth. Comp. 1 Cor. xv. 40; Phil. ii. 10, iii. 19; Jas. iii. 15; John iii. 12. But the special notion of transitoriness only comes to be added through the characteristic $\tau\omicron\upsilon\ \sigma\kappa\acute{\eta}\nu\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$, and is not specially implied in $\acute{\epsilon}\pi\acute{\iota}\gamma\epsilon\iota\omicron\varsigma$ (in opposition to Flatt and many others), for the present body is as $\acute{\epsilon}\pi\acute{\iota}\gamma\epsilon\iota\omicron\varsigma$, in contrast to the heavenly things, in a general sense temporal. — $\eta\ \omicron\iota\kappa\acute{\iota}\alpha\ \tau\omicron\upsilon\ \sigma\kappa\acute{\eta}\nu\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$] is to be taken as one conception: the house, which consists in the (known) tent, the tent-house. It is wrongly translated domum corporis by Mosheim and Kypke (Rückert also hesitates as to this). For frequently as the profane authors, especially the Pythagoreans and Platonists, designate the body by σκήνος (Grotius in loc.; Alberti, Obs. p. 360; Dougltaeus, Anal. II. p. 122 f.; Jacobs, ad Anthol. XII. p. 30), and seem withal to have quite abandoned the conception of the tent (see the passages in Wetstein, and Kypke, II. p. 250), still that conception always lies at the root of the usage, and remains the significant element of the expression. Comp. Etym. M.: σκήνος καὶ τὸ σῶμα παρὰ τὸ σκηνῶμα καὶ σκηνήν εἶναι τῆς ψυχῆς, ὅλον οἰκητήριον. And since Paul nowhere else uses σκήνος of the body, and was led in quite a special way by the figure of οἰκία to do so here, we must keep by the literal meaning of σκήνος, tent, by which is set forth the merely temporary destiny of the earthly body. Comp. 2 Pet. i. 13, 14; Isa. xxxviii. 12; Wisd. ix. 15, and Grimm in loc. Chrysostom: εἰπὼν οἰκίαν σκήνους καὶ τὸ εὐδιάλυτον καὶ πρόσκαιρον δείξας ἐκτεῦθεν, ἀντέθηκε τὴν αἰωνίαν. There is nothing to indicate a particular allusion, such as to the dwellings of the Israelites in the wilderness (Schneckenburger, comp. Rückert), or even to the tabernacle (Olshausen).—On the two genitives of different reference dependent on one noun, see Winer, p. 180 [E. T. 239]; and in Latin, Kühner, ad Cic. Tusc. ii. 15. 35.—οἰκοδομὴν ἐκ θεοῦ a building proceeding from God, furnished to us by God, by which is meant the resurrection-body. The earthly body also is from God (1 Cor. xii. 18, 24), but the resurrection-body will be in a special creative sense (1 Cor. xv. 38) one, not indeed that has proceeded from God,¹ but that is given by God. Note also the contrast of the transient (ἡ οἰκία τοῦ σκην.) and the abiding (οἰκοδομή) in the two bodies. ἐκ θεοῦ is to be attached to οἰκοδ., not to be connected with ἔχομεν, by which a heterogeneous contrast would be introduced (according to Hofmann, with the earthly body, “which is made each individual’s own within the self-propagation of the human race”). The present tense, ἔχομεν, is the present of the point of time in which that καταλυθῇ shall have taken place. Then he who has died has, from the moment of the state of death having set in, instead of the destroyed body, the body proceeding from God, not yet indeed as a real possession, but as an ideal possession, undoubtedly to be realized at the (near) Parousia. Before this realization he has it in heaven (ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς belongs to ἔχομεν), just because the possession is still ideal and proleptic; at the Parousia the resurrection-body will be given to him from heaven (comp. ver. 2) by God, and till then it appears as a possession which is preserved for him for a time in heaven with a view to being imparted in future—like an estate belonging to him (comp. the idea ἔχειν θησαυρὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ, Matt. xix. 21; Mark x. 21; Luke xviii. 22) which God, the future giver, keeps for him in heaven. For a like conception of the eternal ζωή in general, see Col. iii. 3 f.; comp. Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 375. The whole of this interpretation is confirmed by τὸ οἰκητήρ. ἡμ. τὸ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, ver. 2, which is correlative to the ἔχομεν . . . ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, ver. 1, in which, however, ἐν does not again occur, but ἐκ, because in ver. 2 τὸ οἰκητήριον . . . ἐπενδύσασθαι expresses the time of the realization of that possession described in ver. 1. As accordingly ἔχομεν expresses more than the mere expectancy ("in the event of our death we do not wholly perish, but have at the resurrection a spiritual body to expect," Billroth), it is not to be transformed into accipiemus (Pelagius: "sumemus"), with Emmerling, Flatt, and many of the older expositors, nor is it to be said, with de Wette (comp. Weizel in the Stud. u. Krit. 1836, p. 967; also Baur, II. p. 292 f., ed. 2; and Delitzsch, Psychol. p. 435 f.), that Paul has overlapped the middle state between death and resurrection, or has let it fall into the background on account of its shortness (Osiander). The ἔχειν takes place already from the moment of death and during the continuance of the intervening state, not simply from the resurrection. Photius, Anselm, Thomas, Lyra, and others,¹ including Calovius, Wolf, Morus, Rosenmüller, Hofmann, compare John xiv. 2, and on account of the present tense refer this οἰκοδομή to the glorious place of abode of the blessed spirits with God after death on to the resurrection. So also Usteri, Lehrbegr. p. 359 (comp. Schneckenburger, l.c.), explains it of a life in heaven immediately after death. But against such a view it may be decisively urged that οἰκία in the two parts of the verse must necessarily have the same reference (namely, to the body); hence also we cannot, with Ewald and Hofmann, think of the heavenly Jerusalem, Gal. iv. 25 f., Heb. xii. 22, and of the heavenly commonwealth, Phil. iii. 20. See, on the other hand, τὸ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, ver. 2, on which Bengel rightly remarks: "itaque hoc domicilium non est coelum ipsum."¹ But because the οἰκία is ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, we can as little think of a pneumatic bodily organ of the intermediate state (Flatt, Auberlen in the Stud. u. Krit. 1852, p. 709, Neander), of which the N. T. gives no teaching or even hint whatever. Rückert explains it, yet with much vacillation, of the immediate sequence of the exit out of the old and entrance on the new body; but this is against 1 Cor. xv. 51-53, according to which the transfiguration of those who live to see the Parousia appears not as investiture with a new body after a previous κατάλυσις of the old, but as a sudden transformation without destruction. This also in opposition to Olshausen, who likewise seems to understand it of the transfiguration of the living. — ἀχειροποίητον] This epithet, denoting the supernatural origin, suits indeed only the figure (Mark xiv. 58; Acts vii. 48), and not the thing in itself;² yet it occurred to the apostle the more naturally, and he could use it with the less scruple and without impropriety, seeing that he had just before represented the earthly body under the figure of a σκῆνος, consequently of an οἰκία χειροποίητος, so that now, by virtue of contrast, the heavenly body stood before his eyes as an οἰκία ἀχειροποίητος. Conversely, an adjective may, without incongruity, correspond to the thing itself and not to the figure, as in 1 Cor. xvi. 9. — ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς] belongs to ἔχομεν; see above.—Lastly, it is to be observed that in the two halves of the verse (1) ἐκ θεοῦ and ἐν τοῖς οὐραν. correspond with ἐπίγειος, and (2) ἀχειροπ. and αἰώνιον with τοῦ σκηνους.

² "Metaphoricus sensus in talibus spectatur, non primarius," Dissen, ad Pind. Pyth. iv. 158.

Ver. 2. Confirmation of the certainty expressed in ver. 1, not an explanation why he should precisely mention the fact that he has such comfort in the prospect of death (Hofmann)—as if, instead of οἶδαμεν, λέγομεν or some similar verbum declarandi had preceded. — καὶ γάρ] does not here any more than elsewhere mean merely for (see, on the other hand, Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 138), but it means for also, so that καί is connected with ἐν τούτῳ. Previously, namely, the case was supposed: ἐὰν . . . καταλυθῇ; to which this καὶ γάρ ἐν τούτῳ now corresponds, so that the train of thought is: “we know that, in case our present body shall have one day been destroyed, we have a body in heaven; for if this were not so, we should not already in the present body be sighing after the being clothed upon with the heavenly.”¹ This longing is an inward assurance of the fact that, if our earthly house, etc. — καὶ γάρ ἐν τούτῳ] The emphasis is on ἐν: for also in this. Not merely perhaps after the κατάλυσις supposed as possible (ver. 1) shall we long for the heavenly body, but already now, while we are not yet out of the earthly body but are still in it, we are sighing to be clothed upon with the heavenly. This is proved to be the right interpretation by the parallel in ver. 4, where our ἐν is represented by οἱ ὄντες ἐν. On καί, also, in the sense of already or already also, see Hartung, l.c. p. 135; Stallbaum, ad Plat. Gorg. p. 467 B; Fritzsche, ad Lucian. p. 5 ff. With τούτῳ, according to the supposition of Grotius and others, including Fritzsche and Schrader, σώματι is to be mentally supplied, so that, as is often the case in the classic writers, the pronoun is referred to a word which was contained only as regards the sense in what preceded. See Fritzsche, Diss. I. p. 47; Hermann, ad Viger. p. 714; Seidler, ad Eur. El. 582. Rückert wrongly thinks that Paul in that case must have written ἐν αὐτῷ. This prevalent phenomenon of language applies, in fact, equally in the case of all demonstrative and relative pronouns; see the passages in Matthiae, p. 978 f. Seeing, however, that the following τὸ οἰκητήριον ἡμ. τὸ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ proves that Paul also, in ἐν τούτῳ, was regarding the body under the figure of a dwelling, and seeing that he himself in ver. 4 has expressly written τῷ σκῆνι instead of τούτῳ, the supplying of τῷ σκῆνι is to be preferred (so Beza and others, including Olshausen, Osiander, Neander, Ewald¹). Others take ἐν τούτῳ as propterea (see on John xvi. 20; Acts xxiv. 16), and refer it partly to what was said in ver. 1, as Hofmann: "on account of the death in prospect" (comp. Estius, Flatt, Lechler, p. 138), or Delitzsch, p. 436: "in such position of the case;" partly to what follows, which would be the epexegetis of it (Erasmus, Usteri, Billroth, the latter with hesitation). So also Rückert: in this respect. But the parallel of ver. 4 is decidedly against all these views, even apart from the fact that that over which we sigh is in Greek given by ἐπί with the dative or by the accusative, and hence Hofmann's view in particular would have required ἐπὶ τούτῳ or τοῦτο. — τὸ οἰκητήριον . . . ἐπιποθοῦντες contains the reason of the sighing: because we long for, etc. Paul himself gives further particulars in ver. 4. Hofmann wrongly thinks that Paul explains his sighing from the fact, that his longing applies to that clothing upon, instead of which death sets in. The latter point is purely imported in consequence of his erroneous explanation of ἐν τούτῳ. It is the sighing of the longing to experience the last change by means of the being clothed upon with the future body. This longing to be clothed upon with the heavenly body (not, as Bengel and many of the older expositors would have it: with the glory of the transfigured soul, to which view Hofmann also comes in the end, since he thinks of the eternal light in which God dwells and Christ with Him lives) extorts the sighs. Against the reference of ἐπενδύσθ. to an organ of the intermediate state, see on ver. 3, Remark. According to Fritzsche, the participle is only a continuation of the discourse by attaching another thought: "in hoc corpore male nos habentes suspiramus et coeleste superinduere gestimus." But in that case no logical reference would be furnished for καί; besides, it seems unwarrantable to supply male nos habentes, since Paul himself has added quite another participle; and in general, wherever the participle seems only to continue the discourse, there exists such a relation of the participle to the verb, as forms logically a basis for the participial connection. Comp. Eph. v. 16. According to Schneckenburger, στενάζομεν ἐπιποθοῦντες stands for ἐπιποθοῦμεν στενάζοντες, so that the chief fact is expressed by the participle (Nägelsbach on the Iliad, pp. 234, 280, ed. 3; Seidler, ad Eur. Iph. T. 1411; Matthiae, p. 1295 f.). An arbitrary suggestion, against the usage of the N. T., which is different even in the passages quoted by Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 275 [E. T. 320], and to be rejected also on account of ver. 4, στενάζομεν βαρούμ. — The distinction between οἰκία and οἰκητήριον is rightly noted by Bengel: "οἰκία est quiddam magis absolutum, οἰκητήριον respicit incolam," house—habitation (Jude 6; Eur. Or. 1114; Plut. Mor. p. 602 D; 2 Macc. xi. 2, 3, ii. 15). — τὸ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ] that which proceeds from heaven; for it is ἐκ θεοῦ, ver. 1. God furnishes from heaven the resurrection-body (1 Cor. xv. 38) through Christ (Phil. iii. 21), in the case of the dead, by means of raising, in the case of the living, by means of transforming (1 Cor. xv. 51). The latter is what is thought of in the present passage. — ἐπενδύσασθαι] With this Paul passes to another but kindred figure, namely, that of a robe, as also among the Rabbins (Schoettgen, Hor. p. 693) and the Neo-Platonists (Gataker, ad Anton. p. 351; Bos, Exercit. p. 60; Schneckenburger, Beitr. p. 127) the body is frequently represented as the robe of the soul. See also Jacobs, ad Anthol. XII. p. 239. But he does not simply say ἐνδύσασθαι, but ἐπενδύσασθαι, to put on over (which is not to be taken with Schneckenburger of the succession; see, on the contrary, Plut. Pelop. 11: ἐσθῆτας ἐπενδεδυμένοι γυναικείας τοῖς θώραξι, Herod. i. 195: ἐπὶ τοῦτον ἄλλον εἰρίνεον κιθῶνα ἐπενδύνει), because the longing under discussion is directed to the living to see the Parousia and the becoming transformed alive. This transformation in the living body, however, is in so far an ἐπενδύσασθαι, as this denotes the acquisition of a new body with negation of the previous death (the ἐκδύσασθαι). This is not at variance with 1 Cor. xv. 53, where the simple ἐνδύσασθαι is used of the same transformation; for in that passage τὸ φθαρτὸν τοῦτο is the subject which puts on, and, consequently, τὸ φθαρτὸν τοῦτο ἐνδύεται is quite equivalent to ἐπενδυόμεθα, because in the latter case, as at the present passage, the self-conscious Ego¹ is the subject. — Regarding ἐπιποθεῖν, in which ἐπί does not make the meaning stronger (ardenter cupere), as it is usually taken, but only indicates the direction of the longing (πόθον ἔχειν ἐπὶ τι), see Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 30 f.

Ver. 3. After ver. 2 a comma only is to be placed, for ver. 3 contains a supplementary definition to what precedes (comp. Hartung, Partikell. I. pp. 391, 395 f.), inasmuch as the presupposition is stated under which the ἐπενδύσασθαι ἐπιποθοῦμεν takes place: in the presupposition, namely, that we shall be found also clothed, not naked, i.e. that we shall be met with at the Parousia really clothed with a body, and not bodiless. The apostle's view is that, while Christ at the Parousia descends from heaven, the Christians already dead first rise, then those still alive are transformed, whereupon both are then caught away into the higher region of the air (εἰς ἀέρα) to meet the Lord, so that they thus at their meeting with the Lord shall be found not bodiless (οὐ γυμνοί), but clothed with a corporeal covering¹ (ἐνδυσάμενοι). See 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17, and Lünemann's note thereon. This belief is here laid down as certainty by εἶγε κ.τ.λ., and as such it conditions and justifies the longing desire expressed in ver. 2, which, on the contrary, would be vain and empty dreaming, if that belief were erroneous, i.e. if we at the Parousia should be found as mere spirits without corporeality; so that thus those still living, instead of being transformed, would have to die, in order to appear as spirits before the descending Christ. We cannot fail to see in the words an incidental reference to those of the Corinthians who denied the resurrection, and without the thought of them Paul would have had no occasion for adding ver. 3; but the reference is such, as takes for granted that the deniers are set aside and the denied fact is certain. As the whole of this explanation is quite in keeping with the context and the conceptions of the apostle, so is it with the words, regarding which, however, it is to be observed that the certainty of what is posited by εἶγε, if namely, is not implied in this particle by itself (in opposition to Hermann's canon, ad Viger. p. 834), but in the connection of the conception and discourse. Comp. on Eph. iii. 2, Gal. iii. 4, and Baeumlein, Partik. p. 64 f. On καί, also, in the sense of really, see Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 132; and on εἶγε καί, comp. Xen. Mem. iii. 6. 13. The participle ἐνδυσάμενοι refers, however, to the act of clothing previous to the εὔρεθυσόμεθα, so that the aorist is quite in its right place (in opposition to Hofmann's objection, that the perfect is required); and finally, the asyndeton ἐνδυσάμ., οὐ γυμνοί makes the contrasts come into more vivid prominence, like γάλα, οὐ βρῶμα, 1 Cor. iii. 2; Rom. ii. 29; 1 Thess. ii. 17, and often; comp. ver. 7. See Kühner, II. p. 461; Fritzsche, ad Marc. p. 31; Hermann, ad Viger. p. 887. — The most current exposition on the part of others is: "Si nos iste dies deprehendet cum corpore, non exutos a corpore, si erimus inter mutandos, non inter mortuos," Grotius. So, following Tertullian (de Resurr. 41, though he reads ἐκδυσ.), Cajetanus, Castalio, Estius, Wolf, Bengel, Mosheim, Emmerling, Schrader, Rinck, and others, and, in the main, Billroth also, who, however, decides in favour of the reading εἶπερ, and deletes the comma after ἐνδυσάμ.: "which (i.e. the being clothed upon) takes place, if we shall be found (on the day of the Lord) otherwise than already once clothed (with the earthly body), not naked (like the souls of the dead)," so that ἐνδυσάμ. οὐ γυμνοί εὔρ. together would be: utpote jam semel induti non nudi inveniemur. Against that common explanation, which J. Müller, von der Sünde, II. p. 422 f., ed. 5, also follows with the reading εἶπερ, the aorist participle is decisive (it must have been ἐνδεδυμένοι).¹ Billroth, however, quite arbitrarily imports the already once, and, what could be more unnecessary, nay, vapid, than to give a reason for οὐ γυμνοί by means of ἐνδυσάμ. in the assumed sense: since we indeed have already once received a body! which would mean nothing else than: since we indeed are not born bodiless. Against Billroth, besides, see Reiche, p. 357 f. According to Fritzsche, Diss. I. p. 55 ff., ἐνδυσάμ. is held to be in essential meaning equivalent to ἐπενδυσάμ.: "Superinduere (immortale corpus vivi ad nos recipere) volumus, quandoquidem (quod certo scimus et satis constat, εἵγε) etiam superinduti (immortali corpore) non nudi sc. hoc immortalis corpore, sumus futuri h. e. quandoquidem vel sic ad regni Mess. ἀφθαρσίαν pervenimus." But while the ἐπενδυσάμενοι may be included as a species among the ἐνδυσάμενοι, as opposed to the γυμνοί, they cannot be meant exclusively. Besides, the thought: "since we too clothed upon will not be without the immortal body," would be without logical import, because the superinduere is just the assumption of the future body, with which we attain to the ἀφθαρσία of the Messianic kingdom. According to de Wette, Paul says: "if, namely, also (in reality) clothed, we shall be found not naked (bodiless), i.e. as we then certainly presuppose that that heavenly habitation will be also a body." So, in the main, Lechler, Apost. u. nachapost. Zeitalt. p. 138 f., Ernesti, Urspr. d. Sünde, I. p. 118, the latter taking εἶγε καί as although indeed. But the whole explanation is absurd, since the ἐνδύσις could not at all be conceived as at the same time its opposite, as γυμνότης; and had Paul wished to lay emphasis on the fact that the clothing would be none other than with a body (which, however, was quite obvious of itself), he must have used not the simple γυμνοί (not the simple opposite of ἐνδυσάμ.), but along with it the more precise definition with which he was concerned, something, therefore, like οὐ σώματος γυμνοί (Plato, Crat. p. 403 B, and the passages in Wetstein and Loesner). According to Delitzsch, l.c. p. 436, εἶ καί is taken as although, and ἐνδυσάμ. as contrast of ἐπενδυσάμ., so that there results as the meaning: though, indeed, we too, having acquired the heavenly body by means of clothing (not clothing over), shall be found not naked. As if this were not quite obvious of itself! When clothed, one certainly is not naked! no matter whether we have drawn the robe on or over. Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, and Oecumenius take ἐνδυσάμ. as equivalent to σώμα ἀφθαρτον λαβόντες, but γυμνοί as equivalent to γυμνοὶ δόξης, for the resurrection is common to all, but not the δόξα. So also Usteri, Lchrbeogr. p. 392 f.: "We long after being clothed upon, which event, however, is desirable for us only under the condition or presupposition that we, though clothed, shall not be found naked in another sense," namely, denuded of the garland which we should have gained. Here also we may place Olshausen (comp. Pelagius, Anselm, Calvin, Calovius, and others), who takes οὐ γυμνοί as exegetical of ἐνδυσάμ., and interprets the two thus: if we, namely, are found also clothed with the robe of righteousness, not denuded of it. Comp. also Osiander, who thinks of the spiritual ornament of justification and sanctification; further, Hofmann on the passage and in his Schriftbew. II. 2, p. 473, who, putting a comma after εἶγε ("if we, namely, in consequence of the fact that we also have put on, shall be found not naked"), understands ἐνδυσάμενοι as a designation of the Christian status (the having put on Christ), which one must have in order not to stand forth naked and, therefore, unfitted for being clothed over. But where in the text is there any suggestion of a garland, a robe, an ornament of righteousness, a putting on of Christ (Gal. iii. 27; Rom. xiii. 14), or of the Christian status (1 Thess. v. 8; Eph. vi. 14, iv. 24; Col. iii. 10), or anything else, which does not mean simply the clothing with the future body? Olshausen, indeed, is of opinion that there lies in καί a hint of a transition to another figure; but without reason, as is at once shown by what follows; and with equal justice any change in the figure at our pleasure might be admitted! This also in opposition to Ewald's interpretation: "if we at least being also clothed (after we have had ourselves clothed, i.e. raised again) be found not naked, namely, guilty, like Adam and Eve, Gen. iii. 11." This would point to the resurrection of the wicked, Rev. xx. 12–15; if we belonged to these, we should certainly not have the putting on of glorification to hope for. But such a reference was just as remote from the mind of the apostle, who is speaking of himself and those like him, as the idea of Adam and Eve, of whom Beza also thinks in γυμνοί, must, in the absence of more precise indication, have remained utterly remote from the mind of the reader.

REMARK.—Whether the reading ἐκδυσ. or ἐνδυσ. be adopted, it is not to be explained of an interim body between death and resurrection (Flatt, p. 69; Schneckenburger, l.c. p. 130; Schott; Auberlen in the Stud. u. Krit. 1852, p. 709; Martensen, § 276; Nitzsch, Göschel, Rinck, and others, including Reiche,¹ l.c.), of which conception there is no trace in the New Testament;¹ but rather, since γυμνοί can only refer to the lack of a body: if we, namely, even in the case that we shall be unclothed (shall have died before the Parousia), shall be found not naked (bodiless), in which the idea would be implied: assuming, namely, that we in every case, even in the event of our having died before the Parousia, will not appear before Christ without a body; hence the wish of attaining the new body without previous death is all the better founded (ἐπενδύσασθαι). Similarly Rückert. Kling (in the Stud. u. Krit. 1839, p. 511) takes it inaccurately: "although we, even if an unclothing has ensued, will not be found bare," by which Paul is held to say: "even if the severing process of death has ensued, yet the believers will not appear bodiless on the day of the Lord, since God gives them the resurrection-body."² The error of this view lies in although. No doubt Kling, with Lachmann, reads εἴπερ. But even this never means quamvis (not even in 1 Cor. viii. 5), and the Homeric use of εἴπερ in the sense: if also nevertheless, if even ever so much (Odys. i. 167; Il. i. 81, and Nägelsbach's note thereon, p. 43, ed. 3), especially with a negative apodosis (see Hartung, I. p. 339; Kühner, II. p. 562), passed neither into the Attic writers nor into the N. T.

Ver. 4. An explanation defining more precisely, and therewith giving a reason for (γάρ), ver. 3, after a frequent practice of the apostle. Comp. iv. 10, 11. In this καί, even, serves to emphasize the οἱ ὄντες ἐν τ. σκ., just as with ἐν τούτῳ in ver. 2. — The ἐν τούτῳ of ver. 2 is here more precisely defined by οἱ ὄντες ἐν τῷ σκῆνῃ, in which οἱ ὄντες is prefixed with emphasis: for even as those who are still in the tent, i.e. for even as those whose sojourn in the tent is not yet at an end; already while we are still in possession of the bodily life, which duration of time is opposed to the moment of the possible κατάλυσις τοῦ σκηνῶν, when the tent is left, and when the longing and sighing after the new body would be still stronger; comp. on ver. 2. From the very position of the καί Hofmann is wrong in making its emphasis fall on βαρούμενοι, which extorts sighs from us, and then taking οἱ ὄντες ἐν τ. σκ. in antithetic reference to what is afterwards affirmed of these subjects, since they prefer to remain in the earthly life (comp. οἱ ζῶντες, iv. 11). The οἱ ὄντες ἐν τ. σκ. can only, in fact, be the same as the ἐν τούτῳ of ver. 2, which, however, Hofmann has already wrongly understood in another way; the two expressions explain one another. — τῷ σκῆνῃ] The article expresses the tent which is defined by the connection (the body). — βαρούμενοι] definition assigning a reason for στενάξ.: inasmuch as we are depressed; not, however, propter calamitates (i. 8), as Piscator, Emmerling, Schneckenburger, Fritzsche suppose without any ground in the context, but the cause of the pressure which extorts the sighs is expressed by the following ἐφ' ᾧ οὐ θέλομεν κ.τ.λ., so that βαρούμενοι, ἐφ' ᾧ οὐ θέλομεν κ.τ.λ. is a more precise explanation of the τὸ οἰκητήριον . . . ἐπιποθοῦντες of ver. 2. — ἐφ' ᾧ] i.e. ἐπὶ τούτῳ ὅτι, propterea quod, as Rom. v. 12; see on that passage. Comp. here particularly θυμὸν βαρύνειν ἐπὶ τινι, Pind. Pyth. i. 162 f.; στενάξειν ἐπὶ τινι, Soph. El. 1291; Xen. Cyr. iv. 3. 3: δακνόμενος ἐπὶ τούτοις. We feel ourselves as oppressed by a burden, because we are not willing, i.e. have an antipathy, to unclot, etc. The oppressive part of this οὐ θέλομεν ἐκδύσασθαι, ἀλλ' ἐπενδύσασθαι lies in the ever present possibility of the ἐκδύσασθαι. Emmerling and Fritzsche take ἐφ' ᾧ as quare (see Elsner, ad Rom. v. 12; Matthiae, p. 1373): "Nam in hoc corpore ad calamitates valde ingemisco (καὶ . . . γὰρ βαρυν.) et propter hanc ipsam malorum molem (ἐφ' ᾧ) nolo quidem, ut haec propulsetur, mortem oppetere (ἐκδυσ.)," etc. But there is nothing of the malorum moles in the context: and if we should wish, as the context allowed, with Osiander and older commentators, to refer βαρούμ. to the pressure which the body as such (the σκῆνος) causes to us by its onus peccati et crucis (comp. Wisd. ix. 15), and then to explain ἐφ' α' : and in order to get rid of this pressure ; this would be at variance with the parallel in ver. 2, according to which the sighing must appear to be caused by the special longing (which in ver. 4 is, by way of more precise definition, designated as an oppressing one), not by another pressure.¹ This, at the same time, in opposition to Usteri and Schneckenburger, who take it as whereupon (comp. Kühner, II. p. 298). According to Beza, it means in quo, sc. tabernaculo, and, according to Flatt, even although. At variance with linguistic usage. Ewald, taking βαρούμ. of the burden of the whole earthly existence, explains it : "in so far as we wish not to be unclothed, and so set forth as naked and guilty and cast into hell, but to be clothed over." Against this it may be urged that ἐφ' α' does not mean quatenus (ἐφ' ὅσον), and that the interpretation of "being unclothed" in the sense of rum fieri is not grounded in the text ; see on ver. 3. — θέλομεν] Out of this we are not, with Grotius, Emmerling, and others, to make malumus ; otherwise ἡ must have stood instead of ἀλλά, 1 Cor. xiv. 19. The οὐ θέλει is the nolle, the not being willing (Baeumlein, Partik. p. 278 ; Ameis on Hom. Od. ii. 274), of the disinclination of natural feeling. — ἀλλ'] sc. θέλομεν. — ἵνα καταποθῇ κ.τ.λ.] We wish to be clothed over, in order that, in this desired case, what is mortal in us may be swallowed up (may be annihilated, comp. 1 Cor. xiv. 54) by life, i.e. by the new, immortal power of life which is imparted to us in the moment of the change (of the ἐπενδύσασθαι). "Ὡσπερ ἀνίσχον τὸ φῶς φροῦδον τὸ σκότος ποιεῖ, οὕτως ἡ ἀνώλεθρος ζωὴ τὴν φθορὰν ἀφανίζει, Theodoret.

REMARK.—There is not fear of death in this utterance of the apostle, but rather the shrinking from death, that pertains to human nature—the shrinking from the process of death as a painful one. His wish was not to die first before the Parousia and then to be raised up, but to be transformed alive ; and what man, to whom the nearness of the Parousia was so certain, could have wished otherwise? His courage in confronting death, which was no Stoical contempt of death, remained untouched by it.

Ver. 5. Δε] not antithetic (Hofmann), but continuative; this wish is no groundless longing, but we are placed by God in a position for the longed-for change which swallows up death. Now He who has made us ready for this very thing is God. — εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο] for this very behalf, for this very thing, Rom. ix. 17, xiii. 6; Eph. vi. 18, 22; Col. iv. 8. According to the context, it cannot apply to anything else than to the ἐπενδύσασθαι, whereby the mortal will be swallowed up of life. For this precisely Paul knew his individuality to be disposed by God, namely (see what follows) through the Holy Spirit, in the possession of which he had the divine guarantee that at the Parousia he should see his mortal part swallowed up of life, and consequently should not be amongst those liable to eternal destruction. In this way the usual reference of αὐτὸ τοῦτο to the eternal glory is to be limited more exactly in accordance with the context; comp. also Maier. Bengel wrongly refers it to the sighing, pointing to Rom. viii. 23.¹ But how inappropriate this is to the context! And how unsuitable in that case would be the description of the Holy Spirit as ἀρραβών, since, according to Bengel, He is to be conceived as “suspiria operans”! Quite as unsuitable is the reference of κατεργ. to the creation (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Beza, and others, also Schneckenburger), which has no place here even as the beginning of the preparation indicated (in opposition to Ewald); Rückert remains undecided. — ὁ δὸς ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ.] predicative more precise definition of the previous ὁ δὲ κατεργ. ἡμᾶς . . . θεός; He who (quippe qui) has given to us the Spirit as earnest; see on i. 22. As earnest, namely, of the fact that we shall not fail to be clothed upon with the heavenly body at the Parousia (which Paul was convinced he would live to see). Comp. Rom. viii. 11, and the Remark thereon. The usual reference of τ. ἀρῥαβ.: arrham futurae gloriae, is here too general for the context. The view of Hofmann regarding ὁ δὸς ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ., that the possession of the Spirit, etc., cancels the distinction between being unclothed and being clothed over, and takes away the natural shrinking from death, falls with his explanation of κατεργασ. ἡμ. εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο; see the Remark.

¹ This reference has been in substance repeated by Hofmann (comp. also his Schriftbew. II. 2, p. 475 f.). In place of his former misinterpretation, according to which he took κατεργάζεσθαι as to work down, break the spirit (see, in opposition to this, my third edition, p. 115, Remark), he has substituted the other erroneous explanation, that κατεργάζεσθαι is to be held as “to bring one to the point of doing something,” that εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο applies to the disinclination to being unclothed, and that the means by which God brings us to the point of not wishing to be unclothed is obviously the terribleness of death. The last point is purely imported, and the whole explanation is excluded by its very inconsistency with the language used in the passage. For κατεργάζεσθαι means, with Greek writers, to bring one to something, but always only in the sense to prevail on one for something for which we wish to get him, to win him for one's ends, whether this be effected by persuasion or by other influence directed to the end. So also Judg. xvi. 16; Xen. Mem. ii. 3. 11. Our expression to work on a person is similar. Comp. also Xen. Mem. ii. 3. 16; Herod. vii. 6 (κατεργάσασθαι καὶ ἀνίπναι), ix. 108; Strabo, x. 5, p. 483 (ταῖσι κατεργάζονται). In the N. T. the word never means anything else than to set at work, bring about, and in this sense it occurs frequently in Paul. Nor is it otherwise used here.

Ver. 6. The resulting effect of ver. 5 on the apostle's tone of mind. — Estius (comp. Erasmus, Annot.) rightly saw that the participle does not stand for the finite verb (as Flatt still holds, with most of the older commentators), but that ver. 6 is an anacoluthon, as the construction is quite broken off by ver. 7, but the thought is taken up again with θαρρῶμεν δέ in ver. 8. See Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 43 ff.; Winer, p. 533 [E. T. 717 f.]; Buttmann, neut. Gram. p. 252 [E. T. 292]. We must therefore not treat ver. 7 (Beza and others), nor even vv. 7 and 8 (Olshausen, Ewald), as a parenthesis. Paul intended to write: θαρρῶντες οὖν πάντοτε καὶ εἰδότες . . . κυρίου, εὐδοκοῦμεν μᾶλλον κ.τ.λ., but was carried away from this by the intervening thought of ver. 7, and accordingly wrote as he has done. Comp. on ver. 8. Hofmann's opinion, that θαρρῶμεν δὲ κ.τ.λ. is apodosis to the participial protasis θαρρῶντες οὖν κ.τ.λ., would only be grammatically tenable (comp. on Acts xiii. 45) if there were no δέ in ver. 8. This δέ, as is always the case with δέ of the apodosis, even in the examples in Hartung, I. p. 186, would be adversative (on the contrary), which is not suitable here, and is not to be logically supported by the added κ. εὐδοκ. μᾶλλον (see on ver. 8). — θαρρῶντες] in all afflictions, iv. 17. — πάντοτε] In no time of trouble does Paul know himself deserted by this confident courage, iv. 8 ff., vi. 4 ff. — καὶ εἰδότες κ.τ.λ.] This likewise follows from ver. 5, and likewise serves as ground for the εὐδοκοῦμεν κ.τ.λ. of ver. 8; hence it is not, with Calvin, to be explained: quia scimus (as giving a reason for the θαρρῶντες), nor with Estius, Rosenmüller, Emmerling, Flatt, Olshausen, in a limiting sense: while we yet, or although we know. — ἐνδημοῦντες ἐν τῷ σώμ.] being at home in the body, i.e. while the body is the place of our home. The body is here also conceived as οἶκλα (not civitas, as Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, and others hold), and that an οἶκλα out of which we have not yet migrated, Erasmus: "quamdiu domi sumus in hoc corporis habitaculo." For in respect to the future eternal home with Christ (1 Thess. iv. 17; Phil. i. 23, iii. 20; Heb. xi. 13, xiii. 14), the temporary home in the earthly body is a sojourn abroad, an ἐκδημῖα, which keeps us at a distance from Christ. On ἀπὸ τ. κυρ., comp. Rom. ix. 3; Ameis on Hom. Od. xiv. 525, appendix.

Ver. 7. Reason assigned for the ἐνδημοῦντες . . . κυρίου. For through faith we walk, etc.; faith is the sphere through which we walk, i.e. faith is the element through which our earthly life moves. If we walked διὰ εἶδους, seeing that this presupposes the being together with Christ, we should not be ἐκδημοῦντες ἀπὸ τοῦ κυρίου. The object of faith we must from the whole connection conceive to be the Lord in His glory, whose real form (τὸ εἶδος) we shall only have before us when we are with Him. Comp. Rom. viii. 17; 1 Thess. iv. 17; John xvii. 24; 1 Pet. i. 8, al. — διὰ πίστεως] quite in accordance with the Greek phrase διὰ δικαιοσύνης λέγειν. Comp. περιπατεῖν διὰ τοῦ φῶτος, Rev. xxi. 24, and the classical expressions πορεύεσθαι διὰ τῶν ἡδονῶν and the like; see, in general, Valckenaer, ad Phoeniss. 402; Heindorf, ad Protag. p. 323 A; Hermann, ad Oed. Col. 905; Bernhardt, p. 235. — οὐ διὰ εἶδους] i.e. not so, that we are surrounded by the appearance, not so, that we have before us Christ, the Exalted One, in His real appearance and form, i.e. in His visible δόξα, and that this glorious εἶδος shines round us in our walk. Comp. John xvii. 24, and the πρόσωπον πρὸς πρόσωπον, 1 Cor. xiii. 12. εἶδος never means, as it is mostly explained, vision (not even in Num. xii. 8), but always species. The Vulgate renders rightly: per speciem. See Luke iii. 22, ix. 29; John v. 37; 1 Thess. v. 22; Duncan, Lex., ed. Rost, p. 333; Ast, Lex. Plat. I. p. 607 f.; Tittmann, Synon. p. 119, who, however, with the assent of Lipsius (Rechtfertigungsl. p. 100), wrongly takes it: externa rerum specie captum vivere, so that the meaning would be: "Vita nostra immortali illa spe, non harum rerum vana specie regitur." According to this view, different objects would quite arbitrarily be assumed for πίστις and εἶδος; and further, where Paul specifies with περιπατεῖν that by which it is defined, he uses as a prepositional expression not διὰ, but κατὰ (Rom. viii. 4, xiv. 15, al.), or renders palpable the manner of the walking by ἐν (iv. 2; Rom. vi. 4, al.), or characterizes it by the dative, as xii. 18; Gal. v. 16. These reasons tell also in opposition to Hofmann, who explains διὰ of the walk, which has its quality from faith, etc., and εἶδος of an outward form of the walker himself, in which the latter presents himself as visible.—Regarding the relation of the διὰ πίστεως to the διὰ εἶδους, observe that in the temporal life we have the πίστις, and not the εἶδος, while in the future world through the Parousia there is added to the πίστις also the εἶδος, but the former does not thereby cease, it rather remains eternal (1 Cor. xiii. 13).

Ver. 8. But we have good courage and are well pleased, etc. With this Paul resumes the thought of ver. 6, and carries it on, yet without keeping to the construction there begun. The idea of the θαρρόμεν must in this resumption be the same as that of the θαρρόντες in ver. 6, namely, the idea of confident courage in suffering. This in opposition to Hofmann, who takes θαρρόντες rightly of courage in suffering, but θαρρόμεν of courage in death, making the infinitive ἐκδημῆσαι depend also on θαρρόμεν (see below). — δέ, no doubt, links on again the discourse interrupted by the parenthesis (Hermann, ad Viger. p. 847; Pflugk, ad Eurip. Hec. 1211; Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 21), which may also happen, where no δέ has preceded (Klotz, ad Devar. p. 377); since, however, θαρρόντες is not repeated here, we must suppose that Paul has quite dropped the plan of the discourse begun in ver. 6 and broken off by ver. 7, and returns by the way of contrast to what was said in ver. 6. Accordingly there occurs an adversative reference to the previous διὰ πιστ. περιπατοῦμεν, οὐ διὰ εἶδους, in so far as this state of things as to the course of his temporal life does not make the apostle at all discontented and discouraged, but, on the contrary, leaves his θαρρεῖν, already expressed in ver. 6, quite untouched, and makes his desire tend rather towards being from home, etc. Comp. Hartung, I. p. 173. 2; Klotz, l.c. Thus there is a logical reason why Paul has not written οὖν. Comp.

on Eph. ii. 4. — On εὐδοκεῖν in the sense of being pleased, of placet mihi, comp. 1 Cor. i. 21; Gal. i. 15; Col. i. 19; 1 Thess. ii. 8; Fritzsche, ad Rom. II. p. 370. — ἐκδημῆσαι ἐκ τοῦ σώματος] to be-from-home out of the body, is not to be understood of the change at the Parousia (Kaeuffer, ζωή αἰών., p. 80 f.), but, in accordance with the context, must be the opposite of ἐνδημοῦντες ἐν τῷ σώματι, ver. 6; consequently in substance not different from ἐκδύσασθαι, ver. 4. Hence the only right interpretation is the usual one of dying, in consequence of which we are-from-home out of the body. Comp. Phil. i. 23; Plato, Phaed. p. 67, B, C. The infinitive is dependent only on εὐδοκοῦμεν, not also on θαρρόμεν (Hofmann), since θαρρεῖν with the infinitive means to venture something, to undertake to do something, which would not suit here (comp. Xen. Cyr. viii. 8. 6; Herodian, ii. 10. 13),—even apart from the fact that this use of θαρρεῖν (equivalent to τολμᾶν) is foreign to the N. T. and rare even among Greek writers. The εὐδοκοῦμεν κ.τ.λ. is something greater than the θαρρόμεν. This passage stands to ver. 4, where Paul has expressed the desire not to die but to be transformed alive, in the relation not of contradiction, but of climax; the shrinking from the process of dying is, through the consideration contained in ver. 5 and in the feeling of the courage which it gives (ver. 6), now overcome, and in place of it there has now come the inclination rather (μᾶλλον) to see the present relation of ἐνδημεῖν ἐν τῷ σώματι and ἐκδημεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ κυρίου (ver. 6) reversed, rather,¹ therefore, ἐκδημῆσαι ἐκ τοῦ σώματος καὶ ἐνδημῆσαι πρὸς τὸν κύριον, which will take place through death, if this should be appointed to him in his apostolic conflicts and sufferings (iv. 7 ff.), for in that case his spirit, having migrated from his body, will not, separated from Christ, come into Hades, but will be at home with the Lord in heaven—a state the blessedness of which will later, at the day of the Parousia, receive the consummation of glory. The certainty of coming by martyrdom into heaven to Christ is consequently not to be regarded as a certainty only apprehended subsequently by Paul. See Phil. i. 26, Remark.

Ver. 9. Therefore, because we εὐδοκούμεν κ.τ.λ., ver. 8, we exert ourselves also. Bengel: "ut assequamur quod optamus." — φιλοτιμ.] denotes the striving, in which the end aimed at is regarded as a matter of honour. See on Rom. xv. 20. Bengel well says: "haec una ambitio legitima." But there is no hint of a contrast with the "honour-coveting courage of the heathen in dying" (Hofmann). — εἴτε ἐνδημοῦντες, εἴτε ἐκδημοῦντες] is either connected with φιλοτιμ. (Calvin and others, including Billroth, Rückert, de Wette, Ewald, Osiander) or with εὐάρεστοι αὐτῷ εἶναι (so Chrysostom and many others, including Castalio, Beza, Estius, Grotius, Bengel, Emmerling, Flatt, Hofmann). The decision must depend upon the explanation. Chrysostom, Calvin, and others, including Flatt and Billroth, supply with ἐνδημ.: πρὸς τὸν κύριον, and with ἐκδημ.: ἀπὸ τοῦ κυρίου. In that case it must be connected with εὐάρεστοι αὐτῷ εἶναι (Chrysostom: τὸ γὰρ ζητούμενον τοῦτό ἐστί φησιν ἂν τε ἐκεῖ ὤμεν, ἂν τε ἐνταῦθα, κατὰ γνώμην αὐτοῦ ζῆν), not with φιλοτιμούμεθα (Calvin: Paul says, "tam mortuis quam vivis hoc inesse studium"); for they who are at home with Christ are well-pleasing to Him, and, according to Rom. vi. 7, Paul cannot say of them that they strive to be so. The striving refers merely to the earthly life, and one strives to be well-pleasing to the Lord as ἐκδημῶν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, not as ἐνδημῶν πρὸς αὐτόν. For in the case of those who ἐνδημοῦσι πρὸς τὸν κύριον, the continuance of their being well-pleased is a self-evident moral fact. On this account, and because quite an illogical order of the two clauses would be the result (et tunc et nunc!), the whole of Chrysostom's explanation, and even its mode of connection, is erroneous. The right explanation depends on our completing ἐνδημοῦντες by ἐν τῷ σώματι, and ἐκδημοῦντες by ἐκ τοῦ σώματος; for that τὸ σῶμα is still the idea which continues operative from vv. 6, 8, is shown by τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος in ver. 10, an expression occasioned by the very reference to the body, which is before the mind in ver. 9. Further, we must clearly maintain that ἐκδημοῦντες, in contrast to ἐνδημοῦντες, does not mean: migrating, i.e. dying, but: peregre absentes, being from home (comp. Soph. Oed. R. 114: θεωρὸς ἐκδημῶν, a pilgrim from home), just as in ver. 6

ἐκδημοῦμεν was peregre absumus, and in ver. 8 ἐκδημησάι peregre abesse.¹ Hence we must reject all explanations which give the meaning: living or dying (Calovius, Bengel, Ewald, Osiander, who find the totality of life expressed with a bringing into prominence of the last moment of life), or even: “sive diutius corpori immanendum, sive eo exeundum sit” (Erasmus, Paraphr., Emmerling), to which Rückert ultimately comes, introducing Paul's alleged illness; while de Wette thinks that Paul includes mention of the departure from life only to show that he is prepared for everything. We should rather keep strictly to the meaning of ἐκδημ., peregre absentes ex corpore (comp. Vulgate: absentes), and explain it: We exert ourselves to be well-pleasing to the Lord, whether we (at His Parousia) are still at-home in the body, or are already from-home out of it, consequently, according to the other figure used before, already ἐκδυσάμενοι, i.e. already dead, so that we come to be judged before Him (more precisely: before His judgment-seat, ver. 10), not through the being changed, like the ἐνδημοῦντες, but through the being raised up. It is thus self-evident that εἴτε ἐνδημοῦντες κ.τ.λ. must be attached not to φιλοτιμούμεθα, but to εὐάρεστοι αὐτῷ εἶναι, as was done by Chrysostom, although with an erroneous explanation.

Ver. 10. Objective motive of this striving. — τοὺς γὰρ πάντας ἡμᾶς] no one excepted. It applies to all Christians; comp. Rom. xiv. 10. — δεῖ] a divine appointment, which is not to be evaded. — φανερωθῆναι] This does not imply “the concealment hitherto of the dead” (de Wette), for the living also are judged, but means: manifestos fieri cum occultis nostris (Bengel, comp. Beza). Comp. 1 Cor. iv. 5; Rom. ii. 16. Thus it is distinguished from the mere παραστῆναι, iv. 14, Rom. xiv. 10, for which Grotius takes it; and it is arbitrary to declare this distinction unnecessary (Rückert), since that conception corresponds alike with the word (comp. ver. 11) and the fact. Comp. Chrysostom and Theodoret. — κομίσσεται] Moral actions are, according to the idea of adequate requital, conceived as something deposited, which at the last judg-

Eph. vi. 8; Col. iii. 25; Gal. vi. 7; Matt. vi. 20; Rev. xiv. 13. — τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος] sc. ὄντα, that which is brought about through the body, that which has been done by means of the activity of the bodily life (τὸ σῶμα as organic instrument of the Ego in its moral activity generally; hence not: τῆς σαρκός). Comp., on διὰ τοῦ σώματος, expressions like τῶν ἡδονῶν αἱ διὰ τοῦ σώματος εἰσιν, Plat. Phaed. p. 65 A; αἰσθήσεις αἱ διὰ τοῦ σώματος, Phaedr. p. 250 D, al.; Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. iv. 5. 3.¹ Instead of Luther's: in the life of the body (so also de Wette and many others), through the life of the body would be better. There is no reason for taking the διὰ merely of the state (iii. 11). The thought of the resurrection-body, with which the recompense is to be received (to which view Osiander, following the Fathers and some older commentators, is inclined), is alien to the context (vv. 6, 8, 9); besides, merely διὰ τοῦ σώμ. would be used without τά. — The πρὸς ᾧ ἔπραξεν contains the standard of righteousness, in accordance with which every one κομίζεται τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος: corresponding to what he has done. — εἴτε ἀγαθόν, εἴτε κακόν] sc. ἔπραξε. The recompense of the wicked may take place as well by the assigning of a lower degree of the Messianic salvation (1 Cor. iii. 15; 2 Cor. ix. 6) as by exclusion from the Messianic kingdom (1 Cor. vi. 9 f.; Gal. v. 21; Eph. v. 5).

REMARK.—Our passage does not, as Flatt thought, refer to a special judgment which awaits every man immediately after death (a conception quite foreign to the apostle), but to the last judgment conceived as near; and it results from it that, according to Paul, the atonement made through the death of Jesus, in virtue of which the pre-Christian guilt of those who had become believers was blotted out, does not do away with the requital of the moral relation established in the Christian state. Comp. Rom. xiv. 10, 12; 1 Cor. iv. 5. They come in reality not simply before the judgment (to receive their graduated reward of grace, as Osiander thinks), but

into the judgment; in John iii. 18, the last judgment is not spoken of, and as to 1 Cor. vi. 2 f., see on that passage. Paul, however, does not thereby say that, if the Christian has fallen and turns back again to faith, the atonement through Christ does not benefit him; on the contrary, the μετάνοια of the Christian is a repetition of his passing over to faith, and the effect of the atonement (of the ἰλαστήριον) is repeated, or rather continues for the Christian individual, so that even the Christian sins are blotted out, when one returns from the life of sin into that of faith. But the immoral conduct of Christians, continuing without this μετάνοια, is liable to the punishment of the judgment, because they in such an event have frustrated as to themselves the aim of the plan of redemption. Comp. Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 379. This in opposition to Rückert's opinion, that Paul knows nothing of a continuing effect of the merit of Christ. This continuing effect is implied not only in the general Pauline doctrine that eternal life is God's gift of grace (Rom. vi. 23), and in the idea of Christ's intercession (Rom. viii. 34; comp. Heb. vii. 25, ix. 24; 1 John ii. 1, 2), but also in passages like 2 Cor. vii. 10, compared with Rom. v. 9, 10, 17. We may add the apt remark of Lücke on 1 John, p. 147: "As a single past and concluded fact, it (Christ's atoning work) would be just a mere symbol; it has full truth only in its continuing efficacy."

Vv. 11–21. Since we thus fear Christ, we persuade men, but we are manifest to God, and, it is to be hoped, also to you (ver. 11), by which we nevertheless do not wish to praise ourselves, but to give you occasion to boast of us against our opponents (ver. 12). For for this you have cause, whether we may be now mad (as our opponents say) or in possession of reason (ver. 13). Proof of the latter (vv. 14, 15), from which Paul then infers that he no longer knows any one after the flesh, as formerly, when he had so known Christ, and that hence the Christian is a new creature (vv. 16, 17). And this new creation is the work of God (vv. 18, 19), whence results the exalted standpoint of the apostolic preaching, which proclaims reconciliation (vv. 20, 21).

Ver. 11. Οὖν] in pursuance of what has just been said, that we all before the judgment-seat of Christ, etc., ver. 10.—τ. φόβου τ. κυρίου] The genitive is not genitivus subjecti (equivalent to τὸ φοβερόν τ. κυρ.), as Emmerling, Flatt, Billroth, Osiander, and others hold, following Chrysostom and most of the older commentators (comp. Lobeck, Paralip. p. 513; Klausen, ad Aesch. Choeph. 31); for the use of the expression with the genitive taken objectively is the standing and habitual one in the LXX., the Apocrypha, and the N. T., according to the analogy of יִרְאָה יְהוָה (vii 1; Eph. v. 21; comp. Acts ix. 31; Rom. iii. 18); and the context does not warrant us in departing from this. Hence: since we know accordingly the fear of Christ (as judge); since holy awe before Him is by no means to us a strange and unknown feeling, but, on the contrary, we know how much and in what way He is to be feared. The Vulgate renders rightly: timorem Domini; Beza wrongly: "terrorem illum Domini, i.e. formidabile illud iudicium." — ἀνθρώπους πείθομεν] we persuade men, but God we do not need to persuade, like men; to Him we are manifest. The ἀνθρ. πείθ. has been interpreted of the gaining over to Christianity (Beza, Grotius, Er. Schmid, Calovius, Emmerling, and others); or of the apostolic working in general (Ewald); or of the correction of erroneous and offensive opinions regarding Paul (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact); or of the striving to make themselves pleasing to men (Erasmus, Luther, Elsner, Wolf, Hammond, Flatt, and others);¹ or of the persuadere hominibus nostram integritatem (Estius, Bengel, Semler, Olshausen, de Wette, Osiander, Neander). Billroth also, with quite arbitrary importation of the idea, thinks that πείθομεν is meant of illegitimate, deceitful persuasion: "I can indeed deceive men, but to God withal I am manifest." Raphel takes it similarly, but with an interrogative turn. But this assumed meaning of πείθω must of necessity have been given by the context (which is not the case even in Gal. iv. 10); and the idea of being able would in this view of the meaning be so essential, that it could not be conveyed in the mere indicative, which, on the contrary, expresses the actually existing state of things, as well as the following πεφάσεν. Olshausen erroneously attempts to correct this explanation to the effect of our understanding the expression in reference to the accusations of the opponents: "As our opponents say, we deceitfully persuade men, but before God we are manifest in our purity." The "as our opponents say" is as arbitrarily invented,² as is the conception of deceit in πείθομεν. In defining the object of πείθομεν, the only course warranted by the context is to go back to the immediately preceding self-witness in ver. 9, φιλοτιμ. εὐάρεστοι αὐτῷ εἶναι. Of this we bring men to the conviction through our teaching and working, not: of the fact, that we fear the Lord (Zachariae, Rückert), since εἰδότες τ. φόβ. τ. κυρ. is only of the nature of a motive and a subsidiary thought; hence also not: "eundem hunc timorem hominibus suademus" (Cornelius a Lapide, Clericus, and others). Comp. Pelagius: "ut caveant;" and again Hofmann: we convince others of the duty and the right mode of fearing the Lord. After ἀνθρώπους there is no omission of μέν (Rückert); but the putting of the clause ἀνθρ. πείθ. without indicating its relation makes the following contrast appear surprising and thereby rhetorically more emphatic. — ἐν ταῖς συνειδ. ὑμῶν] Calvin aptly says: "Conscientia enim longius penetrat, quam carnis iudicium." In the syllogism of the conscience (law of God—act of man—moral judgment on the same) the action of a third party is here the minor premiss. The individualizing plural of συνείδ. is not elsewhere found; yet comp. iv. 2. — πεφανερωσθαι] The perfect infinitive after ἐλπίζω, which elsewhere in the N. T. has only the aorist infinitive coupled with it, is here logically necessary in the connection. For Paul hopes, i.e. holds the opinion under the hope of its being confirmed, that he has become and is manifest in the conscience of the readers (present of the completed action). Comp. Hom. Il. xv. 110: ἤδη γὰρ νῦν ἔλπομ' Ἀργί' γε πῆμα τετύχθαι, Od. vi. 297; Eurip. Suppl. 790.

¹ Luther: "We deal softly with the people, i.e. we do not tyrannize over nor drive the people with excommunications and other wanton injunctions, for we fear God; but we teach them gently, so that we disgust no one."

Ver. 12. Οὐ πάλιν ἑαυτ. συνιστ.] See on iii. 1. The ἑαυτούς (not again self-praise do we practise) does not stand in contrast with the ὑμῖν following after διδ. (Fritzsche, Osiander), because otherwise ὑμῖν must have stood immediately after ἀλλά. — ἀλλὰ ἀφορμ. διδόντες κ.τ.λ.] We should not, with Beza and Platt, supply ἐσμέν, but λέγομεν ταῦτα, which flows from the previous ἑαυτ. συνιστ. See Matthiae, p. 1534; Kühner, II. p. 604; Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 336 [E. T. 393]. — καυχήματος ὑπὲρ ἡμ.] Here also καύχημα is not (comp. Rom. iv. 2; 1 Cor. v. 6, ix. 15 f.; 2 Cor. i. 14) equivalent to καύχησης (de Wette and many others), but is materies gloriandi. The thought of the apostle is, that he gives the readers occasion for finding matter to make their boast to his advantage (ὑπέρ, comp. ix. 3, vii. 4, viii. 24, vii. 14, ix. 2, xii. 5). The whole phrase ἀλλὰ ἀφορμὴν κ.τ.λ. combines with all the strength of apostolic self-confidence a tender delicacy, in which, nevertheless, we cannot help seeing a touch of irony (for Paul presents the cold and adverse disposition towards him, into which a part of the church had allowed itself to be brought by the hostile teachers, as lack of occasion to make their boast on his account!). — After ἔχητε there is supplied either τί (Acts xxiv. 19): in order that you may have somewhat to oppose to those who, etc. (so Calvin and the most), or τί λέγειν (Theodoret, de Wette, Osiander), or καύχημα (rather καύχ. ὑπὲρ ἡμ., for these words go together). So Camerarius, Zeger, and others, including Rückert and Ewald. But since give and have are evidently correlative, the context leads us (comp. Hofmann also) to supply ἀφορμὴν καυχήματος ὑπὲρ ἡμ.: in order that ye may have this occasion, have it in readiness (comp. 1 Cor. xiv. 26) to make use of it, against those who, etc. πρὸς, according to the context, denotes the direction contra, Matthiae, p. 1390. — πρὸς τοὺς ἐν προσώπῳ καυχ., κ. οὐ καρδίᾳ] against those, who make their boast for the sake of countenance and not of heart. A very striking description of the opponents as hypocritical boasters, not of the making a parade of their being immediate disciples of Christ (Hilgenfeld). The object of their self-boasting is the countenance, the holiness, the zeal, the love, etc., which present themselves on their countenance, but of the heart they make no boast; for of that of which they boast, their heart is empty.¹ “Ubi autem inanis est ostentatio, illic nulla sinceritas, nulla animi rectitudo,” Calvin. It is self-evident withal to the reader that this whole description is expressed according to the true state of the case, and not according to the design of the persons described themselves; for these wished, of course, to pass at all events for persons who with their self-boasting exhibited the virtues of their hearts, and not the semblance of their faces. Comp. Theophylact (following Chrysostom): τοιοῦτοι γὰρ ἦσαν εὐλαβείας μὲν ἔχοντες προσωπεῖον (mask), ἐν δὲ καρδίᾳ οὐδὲν φέροντες ἀγαθόν. Usually (also by Emmerling, Flatt, Schrader, Rückert, Rübiger, Neander) ἐν προσώπῳ is taken in the wider sense: de rebus externis, to which is then opposed in καρδίᾳ the purity of the disposition. Learning, eloquence, Jewish lineage, acquaintance with the older apostles, and the like, are held to be included in ἐν προσώπῳ; comp. Holsten, who recalls the Ἑβραῖοι εἰσιν κ.τ.λ. in xi. 22. But with what warrant from linguistic usage? Even in passages like 1 Sam. xvi. 17, Matt. xxii. 16, πρόσωπον means nothing else than countenance. Paul must have chosen some such contrast as ἐν σαρκὶ καὶ οὐ πνεύματι, in order to be understood. Ewald explains it: "who doubtless boast me before the face, when they see myself present, but not in the heart." But καυχωμένους cannot mean: who boast me, but only: who boast themselves. In the N. T., too, ἐν with καυχᾶσθαι always denotes the object,¹ of which one makes boast, even in Jas. iv. 16. Comp. Ecclus. xxxix. 8, l. 20. This, at the same time, in opposition to Hofmann's view: "they make their boast only in presence of others, and not inwardly before themselves." Neither προσώπῳ (see Winer, p. 116 [E. T. 152]) nor καρδίᾳ (1 Thess. ii. 17; Rom. vi. 17, x. 10; 2 Cor. ii. 4, al.) needed the article; and there was just as little need for the self-evident αὐτῶν to be inserted (1 Thess. l.c.). Indeed, if Paul had meant what Hofmann thinks, he could not but, in order to be intelligible, have added the different genitival definitions (ἄλλων—ἐαυτῶν). Bengel subtly and aptly remarks on καρδίᾳ: "Haec Pauli vena erat: ab ejus corde fulgebat veritas ad conscientias Corinthiorum."

Ver. 13. And you have reason for making your boast on our behalf over against the adversaries!—That Paul is here dealing, and that not without irony, with an odious accusation of his opponents (perhaps of an overseer of the church, according to Ewald), is evident, since otherwise the peculiar mode of expression used by him would appear quite uncalled for. It must have been asserted that he had gone out of his senses, that he had become mad (observe the aorist),—an assertion for which narrow-mindedness as well as malice might find cause enough, or seize pretext, in the extraordinary heroism and divine zeal of his working in general, and especially in his sudden and wonderful conversion, in the ecstasies and visions¹ which he had had, in his anti-Judaism at times unsparing, in his ideal demands on the Christian life, in the prominence given to his consciousness of apostleship, to his sufferings, and the like. In reference to this accusation he now says: "For be it, that we have become mad (as our enemies venture to assert), it is a madness standing at the service of God (a holy mania, which deserves respect, not blame!); or be it, that we are of sound understanding, we are so for your service (which can only be found by you praiseworthy)." Comp. Aretius, Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, Hilgenfeld (in his Zeitschr. 1864, p. 170), who, however, abides only by the apostle's assertion, that he had seen Christ and was a full apostle, as the ground for this opinion of his opponents. As early as the time of Chrysostom (he quotes an explanation: εἰ μὲν μάλισθαι τις ἡμᾶς νομίζει κ.τ.λ.) it was recognised that a glance at a hostile accusation was contained in ἑξέστημεν, and this is remarked by most of the older and the modern commentators; but there should have been the less hesitation at taking the word in its full sense (see on Mark iii. 21; comp. Acts xxvi. 24), whereas it was often weakened into: ultra modum agere,² or into: to be foolish (Chrysostom, Morus, Billroth), to seem to act foolishly (Flatt), and the like, in spite of the following σωφρονοῦμεν, which is the exact opposite of having become mad (Plato, Phaedr. p. 244 A). Comp. Acts xxvi. 25. As regards the subject-matter, ἑξέστ. was mostly (as by Chrysostom and Theodoret) referred to the self-praise,³ in which case θεῶ was taken as: to the honour of God, and then ὑμῖν was referred either to the salutary example (ἵνα μάθῃτε ταπεινοφρονεῖν, Chrysostom, Flatt) or to the salutary condescension. So Erasmus,⁴ Vatablus,

¹ Grotius limits the reference of ἑξέστ. to the trances alone; but the word in itself does not justify this.

² So Bengel; and earlier Luther, who gives as gloss: "If we do too much, i.e. if we deal at once sharply with the people, we still serve God by it; but if we act gently and moderately with them, we do so for the people's good, so that in every way we do rightly and well."

Menochius, Estius, Bengel, Emmerling, Olshausen. Billroth takes it differently: "If, however, you put a rational construction on it (this boasting), in my case, I wish to have myself boasted of only for your advantage; I do it only in order that you may not be deceived by my opponents regarding me." But the whole reference to the self-praise is after ver. 12, where Paul has absolutely negated the ἐαυτοῦς συνιστάνομεν ὑμῖν, contrary to the context; and those references of ὑμῖν to the example shown, or to the apostolic condescension, or to a deception of the readers to be prevented, are not in keeping with the parallel θεῶ; and there is no reason in the context for sacrificing the uniformity in compass of meaning of the two datives, so that ὑμῖν is not to be taken otherwise than with Grotius in the comprehensive sense of in vestros usus. According to Hofmann, ἐξέστ. is to be referred to the self-testimony expressed loftily and in the most exalted tone at ii. 14 ff.: "If it might there be said that he had gone out of himself, on the other hand, the succeeding explanation (begun in iii. 1) could only produce the impression of sober rationality." But in this way there is in fact assumed a retrospective reference for ἐξέστ., which no reader and, excepting Hofmann, no expositor could have conjectured, and this all the less that from iii. 1 to the present passage Paul has been speaking of himself in a tone to a great extent lofty and exalted (e.g. iii. 2 f., 12 ff., the whole of chap. iv., particularly after ver. 7; also v. 1 ff.); so that we do not see on what so great a difference of judgment is to be based, as would be yielded by ἐξέστ. and σωφρον. It remains far from clear, we may add, what more precise conception Hofmann has of "gone out of himself" (whether as insanity or merely as extravagance of emotion). — εἴτε . . . εἴτε] does not here mark off two different conditions (Baur in the theol. Jahrb. 1850, p. 182 ff.) and times, nor the actual change of moods and modes of behaviour (Osiander) which Paul would scarcely have designated according to different references of aim (comp. rather τὰ πάντα δι' ὑμᾶς, iv. 15), but two different modes of appearance of the same state, which are both assumed as possibly right, but the latter of which is in ver. 14 proved to be right and the former excluded.

loquitur, id tribuit infirmioribus, quorum affectibus et capacitati se accommodat." Rückert also, who in other respects takes ἰζίστ. and σωφρ. rightly in their pure and full sense, refers ὑμῖν to accommodation.

Ver. 14 f. Paul now proves what was implied in ver. 13, that his whole working was done not in his own interest (comp. μηκέτι ἑαυτοῖς, ver. 15), but for God and the brethren; the love of Christ holds him in bounds, so that he cannot proceed or do otherwise. According to Rückert, Paul wishes to give a reason for the εἰ ἐξέστημεν θεῷ. But he thus arbitrarily overleaps the second half of ver. 13, though this expresses the same thing as the first half. — ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Χριστοῦ] not: the love to Christ (Oecumenius, Beza, Grotius, Mosheim, Heumann, Hofmann, Maier), but: the love of Christ to men (so Chrysostom and most others); for the death of Christ floating before the apostle's mind is to him the highest act of love (Rom. v. 6, 7; Gal. ii. 20; Eph. iii. 19; Rom. viii. 35, 37); and with Paul generally (not so with John) the genitive of a person with ἀγάπη is always the genitivus subjecti (Rom. v. 5, 8, viii. 35, 39; 2 Cor. viii. 24, xiii. 13; Eph. ii. 4; Phil. i. 9; also 2 Thess. iii. 5; 1 Thess. i. 3 is not here relevant), while, when the person is the object of love, he expresses this by εἰς (Col. i. 4; 1 Thess. iii. 12), and denotes by the genitive only an abstract as object (2 Thess. ii. 10); in Rom. xv. 30, τοῦ πνεύμ. is the genitivus originis. — συνέχει ἡμᾶς] cohibet nos, holds us in bounds, so as not to go beyond the limits marked by θεῷ and ἡμῖν, and to follow, possibly, affections and interests of our own. Comp. Calvin (constringere affectus nostros), Loesner, Billroth, Hofmann, Castalio: "tenet nos." Most, however, follow the Vulgate (urget nos): it urges and drives us.¹ So Emmerling, Vater, Flatt, Schrader, Rückert, Olshausen, Osiander, Neander, and others; also Chrysostom (οὐκ ἀφίησι ἡσυχάζειν με) and Theodoret (πυρπολούμεθα). But contrary to the usage of the word, for συνέχειν always expresses that which holds together, confines, and the like, and so may mean press hard, but not urge and drive (Luke xix. 43, viii. 37, al.; Phil. i. 23; also Acts xviii. 5). Comp. Plato, Polit. p. 311 C; Pind. Pyth. i. 37, al.; Philo, Leg. ad Caj. p. 1016 E; also LXX. in Biel and Schleusner, Thes. Ewald: it harasses us, "so that we have no rest except we do everything in it." Thus συνέχει would revert to the notion of pressing hard, which may be a harassing (Luke xii. 50; Wisd. xvii. 11, and Grimm's Handb. in loc.). But this is not given here by the context, as, indeed, that further development of the meaning does not flow from the connection. — κρίναντας τοῦτο] after we have come to be of the judgment, namely, after our conversion,¹ Gal. i. 16. This judgment contains that, in consequence of which that restraining influence of the love of Christ takes place—the subjective condition of this influence. — ὅτι εἰς ὑπὲρ πάντων κ.τ.λ.] that one for all, etc. Who is meant by εἰς, is clear from ἡ ἀγάπη τ. Χριστοῦ, and was known to all the hearts of the readers; hence there is the less ground for breaking up the simple sentence, and taking εἰς ὑπὲρ πάντων as in apposition: “because He, one for all, died” (Hofmann). As for ὅτι, it is simplest, although εἰ after ὅτι is not genuine (see the critical remarks), to take it, not as because, but as that, corresponding, according to the usage elsewhere, to the preparatory τοῦτο (Rom. ii. 3, vi. 6; 2 Cor. x. 7, 11; Eph. v. 5, al.); in such a way, however, that ἄρα κ.τ.λ. is likewise included in the dependence on ὅτι, and does not form an independent clause (in opposition to Rückert). For the contents of the judgment as such must lie in ἄρα οἱ πάντες ἀπέθανον, of which the historical fact, εἰς ὑπὲρ πάντ. ἀπέθ., is only the actual presupposition serving as its ground. The way in which the two clauses are marshalled side by side (without εἰ or because) makes the expression more lively, comp. 1 Cor. x. 17. Hence it is to be translated: that one died for all, consequently they all died, i.e. consequently in this death of the one the death of all was accomplished, the ethical death, namely, in so far as in the case of all the ceasing of the fleshly life, of the life in sin (which ethical dying sets in subjectively through fellowship of faith with the death of Christ), is objectively, as a matter of fact, contained in the death of the Lord. When Christ died the redeeming death for all (comp. v. 21), all died, in respect of their fleshly life, with Him (Χριστῷ συνεσταύρωμαι, Gal. ii. 19; ἀπεθάνετε, Col. iii. 3); this objective matter of fact which Paul here affirms has its subjective realization in the faith of the individuals, through which they have entered into that death-fellowship with Christ given through His death for all, so that they have now, by means of baptism, become συνταφέντες αὐτῷ (Col. ii. 12). Comp. Rom. vi. 4. Here¹ also, as in all passages where ὑπέρ is used of the atoning death (see on Rom. v. 6; Gal. iii. 13), it is not equivalent to ἀντί (comp. on ver. 21), for which it is taken by most commentators, including Flatt, Emmerling, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Usteri, Osiander, Gess, Baur, Maier, but: for the sake of all, for their benefit, to expiate their sins (ver. 19; Rom. iii. 25). Since One has died the redeeming death for the good of all, so that the death of this One as ἱλαστήριον has come to benefit all, all are dead, because otherwise the εἰς ὑπὲρ πάντων would not be correctly put. The dying of Christ for the reconciliation of all necessarily presupposes that death-fellowship of all, for Christ could not have died effectively for one who would not have died with Christ; unbelieving, such a one, in spite of the sacrificial death made for all, would still be in his sins.² That ὑπέρ here cannot be equivalent to ἀντί is shown particularly by ver. 15: τῷ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἀποθανόντι καὶ ἐγερθέντι; for according to this the resurrection of Jesus also (since it would be quite arbitrary to refer ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν merely to ἀποθανόντι) must have been substitutionary, which is nowhere taught, since it is rather the actual proof and confirmation of the atonement (see 1 Cor. xv. 17; Rom. iv. 25, ix. 34; Acts xiii. 37 f.; 1 Pet. i. 3 f.). — ὑπὲρ πάντων] for all men in general, so that no one is excluded from the effect of his ἱλαστήριον, and every one, so soon as he becomes a believer, attains subjectively to the enjoyment of this effect. This subjective realization, although in the case of those who refuse belief it is frustrated by their guilt, is, in the divine plan of salvation, destined for all, and has already taken place in the case of believers; hence Paul, who himself belonged to the latter, might justly from this his own standpoint in the οἱ πάντες ἀπέθανον, without meaning by πάντες only believers (in opposition to my previous explanation), prove the restraining influence of the love of Christ, which he had himself experienced. — οἱ πάντες] with the article; for it applies to all those of whom ὑπὲρ π. ἀπέθ. was just said. — ἀπέθανον] not: they are to die (Thomas, Grotius, Estius, Nösselt, and others); not: they were subjected to death (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Erasmus, Beza, and others; Vatablus: "morte digni"); nor: they must have died (Ewald); nor: "it is just as good as if they had died" (Calovius, Flatt, and others); but: "mors facta in morte Christi" (Bengel), they died, which is to be considered as a real fact, objectively contained in the fact of the death of Jesus, and subjectively accomplished in the consciousness of individuals through faith.

¹ Comp. Schweizer in the Stud. u. Krit. 1858, p. 462 f.; Hofmann, Schriftbew. II. 1, p. 324 f. What Baur remarks, on the other hand, in Hilgenfeld's Zeitschr. f. wiss. Theol. 1859, p. 241 (comp. his neut. Theol. p. 158 f.), that ὑπὲρ denotes the ideal substitution, i.e. the most intimate, immediate entering into the other and putting oneself in his place, is not the contents of the idea of the preposition, but that of the idea of sacrifice, under which the death of Jesus is ranked, in the consciousness of the apostle and his readers, as an ἱλαστήριον, offered for the salvation of all (ὑπὲρ πάντων).

Ver. 15. Continuation or second part of the judgment, in consequence of which the love of Christ συνέχει ἡμᾶς. — ὑπὲρ has the emphasis, whereas in ver. 14 the stress lay on εἰς and πάντων. "And (that) He died for the benefit of all (with the purpose) that (because otherwise this ὑπὲρ would be frustrated) the living should no more (as before the death they had died with Christ) live to themselves, i.e. dedicate their life to selfish ends, but," etc. Comp. Rom. xiv. 7 ff. — οἱ ζῶντες] Paul might also have said οἱ πάντες; but οἱ ζῶντες is purposely chosen with retrospective reference to οἱ πάντες ἀπέθανον, and that as subject (the living), not as apposition (as the living, Hofmann), in which view the life meant is held to be the earthly one, which Jesus left when He died; but this would only furnish a superfluous and unmeaning addition (it is otherwise at iv. 11), and so also with de Wette's interpretation: so long as we live. No; it is the life, which has followed on the ἀπέθανον. He, namely, who has died with Christ is alive from death, as Christ Himself has died and become alive (Rom. xiv. 9); He who has become σύμφυτος with His death, is so also with His resurrection (Rom. vi. 5). Thus the dead are necessarily the ζῶντες, by sharing ethically the same fate with Christ, Gal. ii. 19 f. Their ζωή is, consequently, doubtless in substance the life of regeneration (Erasmus.

Béza, Flatt, and others) ; it is not, however, regarded under this form of conception, but as καινότης ζωῆς (Rom. vi. 4), out of death. Comp. Rom. vi. 8–11. Rückert, in accordance with his incorrect taking of ὑπέρ in the sense of ἀντί (see on ver. 14), explains : “those, for whom He has died, on whom, therefore, death has no more claims.” — καὶ ἐγερθέντι] is correlative to the οἱ ζῶντες, in so far as these are just the living out of death, whose life is to belong to the Living One ; and ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν belongs also to ἐγερθ., since Christ is raised διὰ τὴν δικαίωσιν ἡμῶν (Rom. iv. 25). Comp. on Phil. iii. 10 ; 1 Cor. xv. 17.—Note, further, that Paul in ver. 15 writes in the third person (he does not say we), because he lays down the whole judgment beginning with ὅτι as the great, universally valid and fundamental doctrine for the collective Christian life, that he may then in ver. 16 let himself emerge in the ἡμεῖς. He would not have written differently even if he had meant by ἀγάπη τ. Χριστοῦ his love to the Lord (in opposition to Hofmann). Much that is significant is implied in this doctrinal, objective form of confession.

Ver. 16. Inference from vv. 14 and 15 opposed to the hostile way of judging of his opponents (comp. ver. 13). Hence it is with us quite otherwise than with our opponents, who judge regarding others κατὰ σάρκα : we know henceforth no one according to flesh-standard. Since all, namely, have (ethically) died, and every one is destined to live only to Christ, not to himself, our knowing of others must be wholly independent of what they are κατὰ σάρκα. Accordingly, the connection of thought between ver. 16 and vv. 14 and 15 demands that we take κατὰ σάρκα here not as subjective standard of the οἶδαμεν, so that we should have to explain it : according to merely human knowledge, without the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit (comp. i. 17 ; 1 Cor. i. 26) : “as one might know Him in a way natural to man” (Hofmann, Osiander, and, earlier, Lyra, Calovius, and others ; comp. also Ernesti, Urspr. d. Sünde, I. p. 69), but as objective standard (comp. xi. 18 ; John viii. 15 ; Phil. iii. 4), so that εἰδέναι τινὰ κατὰ σάρκα means : to know any one according to merely human appearance, to know him in such a way, that he is judged by what he is in virtue of his natural, material form of existence, and not by what he is κατὰ πνεῦμα, as a Christian, as καινὴ κτίσις (ver. 17). He who knows no one κατὰ σάρκα has entirely left out of account, e.g. in the Jew, his Jewish origin; in the rich man, his riches; in the scholar, his learning; in the slave, his bondage; and so forth (comp. Gal. iii. 28). Comp. Bengel: "secundum carnem: secundum statum veterem ex nobilitate, divitiis, opibus, sapientia." It is inaccurate to say that this interpretation requires the article before σάρκα (Osiander). It might be used, but was not necessary, any more than at Phil. iii. 3 ff., Rom. i. 3, ix. 5, al., where σάρξ everywhere, without the article, denotes the objective relation. — ἡμεῖς] i.e. we on our part, as opposed to the adversaries who judge κατὰ σάρκα. The taking the plural as general embracing others (Billroth, by way of suggestion, Schenkel, de Wette), has against it the evidently antithetic emphasis of the pronoun; it is only with the further inference in ver. 17 that the discourse becomes general. — ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν] after the present time, i.e. after our present (Christian) relation, and with it also the κρίναντας κ.τ.λ., has begun. Paul has ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν only here. Beyond this Luke alone in the N. T. has it. — οἶδαμεν] not aestimamus (Grotius, Estius, and others, including Emmerling and Flatt), but novimus; no one is to us known κατὰ σάρκα; we know nothing of him according to such a standard. Comp. on εἰδέναι οὐδένα or οὐδέν in the sense of complete separation, 1 Cor. ii. 2. οἶδα is related to ἐγνώκα, cognovi, as its lasting sequel: scio, quis et qualis sit. — εἰ καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν κ. σ. Χριστόν κ.τ.λ.] apologetic application of the assertion just made, ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν οὐδένα οἶδαμεν κ. σ. This remark is added without δέ (see the critical remarks), which is accounted for by the impetuous liveliness of the representation. If even (as I herewith grant to my opponents, see Hermann, ad Viger. p. 832) the case has occurred that we have known Christ according to flesh-standard, this knowing of Him now exists with us no longer. The emphasis of this concessive clause lies on the praeterite ἐγνώκαμεν, which opposes the past to the present relation (οἶδαμεν, and see the following γινώσκουμεν). Therefore Χριστόν is not placed immediately after εἰ καί, for Paul wishes to express that in the past it has been otherwise than now; that formerly the γινώσκειν κ. σάρκα had certainly occurred in his case, and that in reference to Christ. This in opposition to the usual interpretation, according to which Χριστόν is invested with the chief emphasis. So e.g. Billroth: "if we once regarded even Christ Himself in a fleshly manner, if we quite misjudged Him and His kingdom ; " Beyschlag similarly : " even with Christ I make no exception," etc. Rückert, without any reason whatever, conjectures that Paul erroneously inserted Χριστόν, or perhaps did not write it at all. The right interpretation is found in Osiander, Ewald, Kling, also substantially in Hofmann, who, however, would attach εἰ καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν κ.τ.λ. to ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν . . . σάρκα, and thus separate it only by a comma,— a course by which, owing to the following contrast ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ., the sentence is without sufficient ground made more disjointed. — Paul had known Christ κατὰ σάρκα, so long as the merely human individuality of Christ, His lower, earthly appearance (comp. Chrysostom and Theodoret), was the limit of his knowledge of Him. At the time when he himself was still a zealot against Christ, and His persecutor, he knew Him as a mere man, as a common Jew, not as Messiah, not as the Son of God ; as one justly persecuted and crucified, not as the sinless Reconciler and the transfigured Lord of glory, etc. It was quite different, however, since God had revealed His Son in Paul (Gal. i. 16), whereby he had learned to know Christ according to His true, higher, spiritual nature (κατὰ πνεῦμα, Rom. i. 4).¹ Comp. also Holsten, z. Ev. d. Paul. und Petr. p. 429, who, however, refers the Χριστόν, which denotes the entire historical person of the God-man, only to the heavenly, purely pneumatic personality of the Lord, which had been pre-existent and in this sense was re-established by the resurrection. Klöpper, p. 66, has substantially the right view : the earthly, human appearance of Christ according to its national, legal, and particular limitation. The Judaistic conception of the Messianic idea was the subjective ground of the former erroneous knowledge of Christ, but it is not on that account to be explained with many (Luther, see his gloss, Bengel, Rückert, and others): according to Jewish ideas of the Messiah; for, according to what precedes, κ. σ. must be the objective standard of the ἐγνώκαμεν. In that case Χριστόν cannot be appellative, the Messiah (especially Baur, I. p. 304, ed. 2, and Neander, I. p. 142 f.), but only nomen proprium, as the following εἴ τις ἐν Χριστῷ shows. Olshausen, who rightly, as to substance, refers κ. σ. to the life of Christ before His resurrection, deduces, however, from εἰ καὶ ἐγνώκ. that Paul even before his conversion had seen Christ in his visits to Jerusalem, which Beyschlag also, in the Stud. u. Krit. 1864, p. 248, and 1865, p. 266, gathers from our passage and explains it accordingly, and Ewald, Gesch. d. apost. Zeitalt. p. 368, ed. 3, thinks credible. This is in itself possible (though nowhere testified), but does not follow from our passage; for ἐγνώκ., in fact, by no means presupposes the having seen, but refers to the knowledge of Christ obtained by colloquial intercourse, and determined by the Pharisaic fundamental point of view,—a knowledge which Paul before his conversion had derived from his historical acquaintance with Christ's earthly station, influence as a teacher, and fate, as known to all.¹ Besides, the interpretation of a personal acquaintance with Christ would be quite unsuitable to the following ἀλλὰ νῦν κ.τ.λ. It would be at variance with the context. See also Klöpper, p. 55 ff. According to de Wette, the sense is: "not yet to have so known Christ as, with a renouncing of one's own fleshly selfishness, to live to Him alone," ver. 15. But in this way there would result for κατὰ σάρκα the sense of the subjective standard (against which see above); further, the signification of κατὰ σ. would not be the same for the two parts of the verse, since in the second part it would affirm more (namely, according to fleshly selfishness, without living to Him alone); lastly, this having known Christ would not suit the time before the conversion of the apostle, to which it nevertheless applies, because at this time he was even persecutor of Christ. And this he was, just because he knew him κατὰ σάρκα (taken in our sense), which erroneous form of having known ceased only when God ἀπεκάλυψε τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ (Gal. i. 16). While various expositors fail to give to it a clear and definite interpretation,¹ others have explained it in the linguistically erroneous sense of a merely hypothetical possibility. Thus Erasmus: "Nec est, quod nos posteriores apostolos quisquam hoc nomine minoris faciat, quod Christum mortali corpore in terris versantem non novimus, quando etiam, si contigisset novisse, nunc eam notitiam, quae obstabat spiritui, deposuissimus, et spiritualem factum spiritualiter amaremus;" so in the main also Grotius, Rosenmüller, Flatt. For a synopsis of the various old explanations, from Faustus the Manichæan (who proved from our passage that Christ had no fleshly body) downward, see Calovius, Bibl. ill. p. 463 ff. — ἀλλά] in the apodosis, see on iv. 16. — γινώσκωμεν] sc. κατὰ σάρκα Χριστόν.

¹ According to Estius, the meaning is taken to be : " If we once held it as something great to be fellow-countrymen and kinsmen of Christ." But the words do not convey this. Similarly also Wetstein, who makes the apostle, in opposition to the (alleged) boasting of the false apostles that they were kinsmen and hearers of Christ, maintain, "cognitionem solam nihil prodesse ;" et Christum non humilem esse, as on earth, sed exaltatum super omnes. Comp. Hammond, and also Storr, Opusc. II. p. 252, according to whom Paul refers to such, "qui præter externa ornamenta et Judaicam originem et pristinam illam suam cum apostolis Christo familiaribus conjunctionem nihil haberent, quo magnifice gloriari possent." An allusion to the alleged spiritualism of the Christine party, who had reproached the apostle with a fleshly conception of Christ (Schenkel, Goldhorn), is arbitrarily assumed.

Ver. 17. Inference from ver. 16. If, namely, the state of matters is such as is stated in ver. 16, that now we no longer know any one as respects his human appearance, and even a knowledge of Christ of that nature, once cherished, no longer exists with us, it follows that the adherents of Christ, who are raised above such a knowledge of Christ after a mere sensuous standard, are quite other than they were before; the Christian is a new creature, to whom the standard κατὰ σάρκα is no longer suitable. The apostle might have continued with γάρ instead of ὥστε; in which case he would have assigned as ground of the changed knowledge the changed quality of the objects of knowledge. He might also, with just as much logical accuracy, infer, from the fact of the knowledge being no longer κατὰ σάρκα, that the objects of knowledge could no longer be the old ones, to which the old way of knowing them would still be applicable, but that they must be found in a quality wholly new. He argues not ex causa, but ad causam. The former he would have done with γάρ, the latter he does with ὥστε (in opposition to Hofmann's objection). — ἐν Χριστῷ] a Christian; for through faith Christ is the element in which we live and move. — καινὴ κτίσις] for the pre-Christian condition, spiritual and moral, is abolished and done away by God through the union of man with Christ (ver. 18; Eph. ii. 10, iv. 21; Col. iii. 9, 10; Rom. vi. 6), and the spiritual nature and life of the believer are constituted quite anew (comp.

vv. 14, 15), so that Christ Himself lives in him (Gal. ii. 20) through His Spirit (Rom. viii. 9 f.). See on Gal. vi. 15. The form of the expression (its idea is not different from the παλιγγενεσία, Tit. iii. 5; John iii. 3; Jas. i. 18) is Rabbinical; for the Rabbins also regarded the man converted to Judaism as בריה חדשה. See Schoettgen, Hor. I. pp. 328, 704 f., and Wetstein. — τὰ ἀρχαῖα παρῆλθεν κ.τ.λ.] Epexegetis of καινὴ κτίσις; the old, the pre-Christian nature and life, the pre-Christian spiritual constitution of man, is passed away; behold the whole—the whole state of man's personal life—has become new.¹ There is too slight a resemblance for us to assume for certain a reminiscence of Isa. xliii. 18 f., or Isa. lxxv. 17; as even Chrysostom and his followers give no hint of such an echo. By the ἰδοῦ of vivid realization, and introduced without connecting particle ("demonstrativum rei presentis," Bengel; comp. vi. 9), as well as by the emphatically prefixed γέγονε (comp. xii. 11), a certain element of triumph is brought into the representation. — The division, according to which the protasis is made to go on to κτίσις (Vulgate: "si qua ergo in Christo nova creatura;" or τίς is taken as masculine: "si quis ergo mecum est in Christo regeneratus," Cornelius a Lapide), has against it the fact, that in that case the apodosis would contain nothing else than was in the protasis; besides, the prefixing of ἐν Χ. would not be adequately accounted for.

Ver. 18. On vv. 18–21, see appropriate remarks in Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 279 f. — τὰ δὲ πάντα] leading on from the γέγονε καινὰ τὰ π. to the supreme source of this change; hence, contextually, τὰ πάντα is nothing else than: the whole that has become new. Everything, in which the new state of the Christian consists, proceeds from God; and now by τοῦ καταλλάξαντος . . . καταλλαγῆς is specified the mode in which God has set it into operation, namely, by His having reconciled us with Himself through Christ, and entrusted to the apostle and his fellow-labourers the ministry of reconciliation. The reconciliation has taken place with reference to all humanity (hence κόσμον, ver. 19); but Paul uses ἡμᾶς in the person of believers, as those who have experienced the reconciliation of the world in its subjective realization. This in opposition to Leun, Ewald, Rückert, Hofmann, who refer it to the apostle and his fellow-workers, Hofmann, indeed, finding nothing else affirmed than the conversion, in so far as it was "a change of his relation, and not of his conduct, towards God." And that ἡμῖν does not apply to men in general (Olshausen), but to Paul and the rest of the apostolic teachers, is clear from ἐν ἡμῖν, ver. 19, which is evidently (seeing that Paul has not written ἐν αὐτοῖς) distinguished by a special reference from κόσμος; besides, the inference, ver. 20, ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ οὖν πρεσβ., manifestly presupposes the special reference of ἡμῖν and ἐν ἡμῖν in vv. 18, 19. This also in opposition to Höfling. Kirchenverf. p. 225, ed. 3. — τοῦ καταλλάξαντος κ.τ.λ.] who has reconciled us with Himself through Christ. For men were, by means of their uneffaced sin, burdened with God's holy wrath, ἐχθροὶ θεοῦ (Rom v. 10, xi. 28; Eph. ii. 16; comp. Col. i. 20 f.), Deo innisi; but through God's causing Christ to die as ἱλαστήριον,¹ He accomplished the effacing of their sins, and by this, therefore, God's wrath ceased. The same thought is contained in Rom v. 10, only expressed in a passive form. Tittmann's distinction between διαλλ. and καταλλ. (Synon. p. 102) is of no value; see on Rom. v. 10, and Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 276 ff. — τὴν διακον. τῆς καταλλ.] the ministry, which is devoted to reconciliation, which is the means of reconciliation for men, inasmuch as through this ministry reconciliation is preached to them, and they are brought unto faith on the ἱλαστήριον Jesus, which faith is the causa apprehendens of the reconciliation, Rom. iii. 25; comp. διακονία τῆς δικαιοσύνης, iii. 9. The opposite: διακ. τῆς κατακρίσεως, iii. 9.

REMARK.—Rückert erroneously explains the reconciliation from the active enmity of men against God. God, according to his view, caused Christ to die for men, that He might, no doubt, on the one hand, be able to accomplish the μὴ λογίζεσθαι of their sins; but through this manifest proof of His love He filled men with thankfulness, and gave them encouragement to accomplish the reconciliation on their side also, and so (as was Baur's opinion also) to give up their enmity towards God. And thus strictly regarded, the death of Jesus, according to Paul, has not so much reconciled humanity with God, as it has removed the obstacles to the reconciliation, and given a stimulus to the heart to enter into the only right and friendly relation with God.—No, the death of Jesus operated as ἰλαστήριον (Rom. iii. 25; Gal. iii. 13), consequently as effacing God's holy enmity (Rom. xi. 28), the ὀργή θεοῦ, so that He now did not impute to men their sins (ver. 19), and in this way, actu forensi, reconciled them with Himself (ver. 21), while simple faith is the subjective condition of appropriation on the part of men. Comp. on Col. i. 21. The thankfulness, the new courage, the holy life, etc., are only a consequence of the reconciliation appropriated in faith, not a part of it. Comp. Rom. v. 1 ff., vi. 1 ff., viii. 3, 4, al. This, at the same time, in opposition to the doctrine of reconciliation set forth by Hofmann (see on Rom. iii. 25), who at our passage calls in question the view that τοῦ καταλλάξαντος κ.τ.λ. expresses an act of God, which takes place once for all in and with the history of Christ, and defines the notion of καταλλ. (in which ἡμᾶς is held to apply to Paul, in whom God had wrought faith), as amounting to this, that God through Christ, "whom He Himself gives and ordains for the purpose, makes sin cease for Him to be the cause of wrath against the sinner." Comp. on the clear and correct notion of reconciliation, according to our passage, Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 325.

Ver. 19. Confirmatory elucidation of the previous ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, τοῦ καταλλάξαντος . . . καταλλαγῆς. "I have reason for saying, from God, who has reconciled us, etc., because, indeed, God in Christ reconciled the world with Himself," etc. The recurrence of the same leading expressions, which were used in ver. 18, gives to this elucidation a solemn emphasis. The θεός emphatically prefixed, however, looking back to ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ in ver. 18, shows that the point is not a description of the καταλλαγῆ (Camerarius, Wolf, Estius, Billroth, and others), or of the διακονία τῆς καταλλαγῆς (Grotius, Rückert), but the divine self-activity in Christ's reconciling work and in the bestowal of the office of reconciliation. The two participial clauses, μὴ λογιζόμενος κ.τ.λ. and καὶ θέμενος κ.τ.λ., stand related to θεὸς ἦν ἐν Χ. κόσμ. καταλλ. ἑαυτ. argumentatively, so that the words καὶ θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ., which serve to elucidate καὶ δόντος ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ., ver. 18, are not co-ordinated to the καταλλάσσων (as one might expect from ver. 18), but are subordinated to it,—a change in the form of connecting the conceptions, which cannot surprise us in the case of Paul when we consider his free and lively variety in the mode of linking together his thoughts. — ὥς ὅτι θεὸς ἦν ἐν Χ. κόσμ. καταλλ. ἑαυτῷ] because, indeed, God in Christ was reconciling the world with Himself. On ὥς ὅτι,¹ utpote quod (to be analyzed: as it is the case, because), see Winer, p. 574 [E. T. 771]. The ἦν καταλλάσσων should go together (see already Chrysostom), and is more emphatic than the simple imperfect. Paul wishes, namely, to affirm of God, not simply what He did (κατήλλασσε), but in what activity He was; in the person and work of Christ (ἐν Χριστῷ) God was in world-reconciling activity. The imperfect receives from the context the definite temporal reference: when Christ died the death of reconciliation, with which took place that very καταλλάξαντος, ver. 18. See, especially, Rom. iii. 24 f., v. 10. Ambrosiaster, Pelagius, Erasmus, Luther, Calvin, Beza, Calovius, Bengel, and many others, including Rückert, Osiander, Neander, connect ἦν ἐν Χριστῷ together: God was in Christ, while reconciling the world with Himself. This would only be possible in the event of the two following participial clauses expressing the mode of reconciliation, which, however, on account of the second clause (καὶ θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ.), cannot be the case; they must, on the contrary, contain the confirmation of θεὸς ἦν ἐν Χ. κόσμ. καταλλ. ἑαυτῷ. According to their contents, however, they do not at all confirm the fact that God was in Christ, but the fact that God was in Christ reconciling the world; hence it is at variance with the context to make the connection ἦν ἐν Χριστῷ. Theodoret was right in denying expressly this connection. Hofmann, after abandoning his earlier (in the Schriftbew. II. 1, p. 326) misinterpretation (see in opposition to it my fourth edition, p. 147), now explains it by referring ὥς ὅτι κ.τ.λ. merely to κ. δόντος ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ.: because He was a God, who in Christ was reconciling to Himself a world in its sinful condition without imputation of its sins, and who had laid the word of reconciliation on him the apostle." A new misinterpretation. For, first, the qualitative expression "a God," which is held to be predicative, would not only have been quite superfluous (Paul would have had to write merely ὡς ὅτι ἦν κ.τ.λ.), but also quite unsuitable, since there is no contrast with other gods; secondly, the relative tense ἦν must apply to the time in which what is said in δόντος ἡμῖν κ.τ.λ. took place (in the sense, therefore: because he was at that time a God, who was reconciling), which would furnish an absurd thought, because, when Paul became an apostle, the reconciliation of the world had been long accomplished; thirdly, θέμενος would be a participle logically incorrect, because what it affirms followed on the καταλλάσσων; lastly, μὴ λογιζόμεν. cannot be taken in the sense of "without imputation," since a reconciliation with imputation of sins is unthinkable. — κόσμον] not a world, but the world, even without the article (Winer, p. 117 [E. T. 153]), as Gal. vi. 14; Rom. iv. 13. It applies to the whole human race, not possibly (in opposition to Augustine, Lyra, Beza, Cajetan, Estius) merely to those predestinated. The reconciliation of all men took place objectively through Christ's death, although the subjective appropriation of it is conditioned by the faith of the individual.¹ — μὴ λογιζόμενος αὐτοῖς κ.τ.λ.] since He does not reckon (present) to them their sins, and has deposited (aorist) in us the word of reconciliation. The former is the altered judicial relation, into which God has entered and in which He stands to the sins of men; the latter is the measure adopted by God, by means of which the former is made known to men. From both it is evident that God in Christ reconciled the world with Himself; otherwise He would neither have left the sins of men without imputation, nor have imparted to the apostolic teachers the word of reconciliation that they might preach it. If, as is usually done, the participial definition μὴ λογιζόμενος is taken in the imperfect sense (Ewald takes it rightly in a present sense) as a more precise explanation of the modus of the reconciliation, there arises the insoluble difficulty that θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν also would have to be so viewed, and to be taken consequently as an element of the reconciliation, which is impossible, since it expresses what God has done after the work of reconciliation, in order to appropriate it to men. θέμενος, namely, cannot be connected with θεὸς ἡν, against which the aorist participle is itself decisive; and it is quite arbitrary to assume (with Billroth and Olshausen) a deviation from the construction, so that Paul should have written ἔθετο instead of θέμενος (comp. Vulgate, Calvin, and many others, who translate it without ceremony: et posuit). — ἐν ἡμῖν] The doctrine of reconciliation (comp. on the genitive, 1 Cor. i. 18; Acts xx. 32) which is to be preached, is regarded as something deposited in the souls of the preachers for further communication: “sicut interpreti committitur quid loqui debeat,” Bengel. Comp. on ἐν ἡμῖν, which is not to be taken as among us, the θεῖναι ἐν φρεσὶ, ἐν θυμῷ, ἐν στήθεσσι.

Ver. 20. For Christ, therefore, we administer the office of ambassador, just as if God exhorted through us. This double element of the dignity of the high calling follows from the previous θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν τ. λόγ. τῆς καταλλ. If, namely, it is the word of reconciliation which is committed to us, then in our embassy we conduct Christ's cause (ὑπὲρ Χ. πρεσβ.), seeing that the reconciliation has taken place through Christ; and because God has entrusted to us this work, our exhortation is to be regarded as taking place by God through us (ὡς τ. θ. παρακαλ. δι' ἡμ.). On ὑπὲρ with πρεσβ. in the sense specified, comp. Eph. vi. 20 and the passages in Wetstein and Kypke. The opposite: πρεσβ. κατὰ τινος, Dem. 400, 12. The usual interpretation, vice et loco Christi, which is rightly abandoned even by Hofmann, and is defended on the part of Baur by mere subtlety, runs counter to the context; for this sense must have followed (οὖν) from what precedes, which, however, is not the case. If the notion of representation were to be inferred from what precedes, it could only furnish us with a ὑπὲρ θεοῦ. — Observe the parallel correlation of Christ and God in the two parts of the verse. The connecting of ὡς τοῦ θεοῦ παρακ. δι' ἡμ. with δεόμεθα ὑπὲρ Χ. (Hofmann) would only disturb this symmetry without due ground. — δεόμεθα ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ κ.τ.λ.] specification of the contents of the πρεσβεΐα, and that in the form of apostolic humility and love: we pray for Christ, in His interest, in order that we may not, in your case, miss the aim of His divine work of reconciliation: be ye reconciled to God; do not, by refusing faith, frustrate the work of reconciliation in your case, but through your faith bring about that the objectively accomplished reconciliation may be accomplished subjectively in you. Rückert wrongly holds¹ that the second aorist passive cannot have a passive meaning and signifies only to reconcile oneself (see, on the contrary, Rom. v. 10; Col. i 21); that Paul demands the putting away of the φρόνημα τῆς σαρκός, and the putting on of the φρόνημα τοῦ πνεύματος; and that so man reconciles himself with God. In this view, the moral immediate consequence of the appropriation of the reconciliation through faith is confounded with this appropriation itself. The reconciliation is necessarily passive; man cannot reconcile himself, but is able only to become by means of faith a partaker of the reconciliation which has been effected on the divine side; he can only become reconciled, which on his side cannot take place without faith, but is experienced in faith. This also in opposition to Hofmann, who says that they are to make their peace with God, in which case what the person so summoned has to do is made to consist in this, that he complies with the summons and prays God to extend to him also the effect, which the mediation constituted by God Himself exercises on the relation of sinful man toward Him. — The subject of καταλλάγητε is all those, to whom the loving summons of the gospel goes forth; consequently those not yet reconciled, i.e. the unbelieving, who, however, are to be brought, through Christ's ambassadors, to appropriate the reconciliation. The quotidiana remissio which is promised to Christians (Calvin) is not meant, but the καταλλάγητε is fulfilled by those who, hitherto still standing aloof from the reconciliation, believingly accept the λόγος τ. καταλλαγῆς sent to them.²

Ver. 21. This is not the other side of the apostolic preaching (one side of it being the previous prayer), for this must logically have preceded the prayer (in opposition to Hofmann); but the inducing motive, belonging to the δεόμεθα κ.τ.λ., for complying with the καταλλ. τῷ θεῷ, by holding forth what has been done on God's side in order to justify men. This weighty motive emerges without γάρ, and is all the more urgent. — τὸν μὴ γνόντα ἁμαρτ.] description of sinlessness (τὸν αὐτοδικαιοσύνην ὄντα, Chrysostom); for sin had not become known experimentally to the moral consciousness of Jesus; it was to Him, because non-existent in Him, a thing unknown from His own experience. This was the necessary postulate for His accomplishing the work of reconciliation. — The μή with the participle gives at all events a subjective negation; yet it may be doubtful whether it means the judgment of God (Billroth, Osiander, Hofmann, Winer) or that of the Christian consciousness (so Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 279: "quem talem virum mente concipimus, qui sceleris notitiam non habuerit"). The former is to be preferred, because it makes the motive, which is given in ver. 21, appear stronger. The sinlessness of Jesus was present to the consciousness of God, when He made Him to be sin.¹ Rückert, quite without ground, gives up any explanation of the force of μή by erroneously remarking that between the article and the participle μή always appears, never οὐ. See e.g. from the N. T., Rom. ix. 25; Gal. iv. 27; 1 Pet. ii. 10; Eph. v. 4; and from profane authors, Plat. Rep. p. 427 E: τὸ οὐχ εὐρημένον, Plut. de garrul. p. 98, ed. Hutt.: πρὸς τοὺς οὐκ ἀκούοντας, Arist. Eccl. 187: ὁ δ' οὐ λαβών, Lucian, Charid. 14: διηγούμενοι τὰ οὐκ ὄντα, adv. Ind. 5, and many other passages. — ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν] for our benefit (more precise explanation: ἵνα ἡμεῖς κ.τ.λ.), is emphatically prefixed as that, in which lies mainly the motive for fulfilling the prayer in ver. 20; hence also ἡμεῖς is afterwards repeated. Regarding ὑπέρ, which no more means instead here than it does in Gal. iii. 13 (in opposition to Osiander, Lipsius, Rechtfertigungsl. p. 134, and older commentators), see on Rom. v. 6. The thought of substitution is only introduced by what follows. — ἁμαρτίαν ἐποίησε] abstractum pro concreto (comp. λῆρος, δλεθρος, and the like in the classic writers, Kühner, II. p. 26), denoting more strongly that which God made Him to be (Dissen, ad Pind. pp. 145, 476), and ἐποίησε expresses the setting up of the state, in which Christ was actually exhibited by God as the concretum of ἁμαρτία, as ἁμαρτωλός, in being subjected by Him to suffer the punishment of death;² comp. κατάρα, Gal. iii. 13. Holsten,

² It is to be noted, however, that ἁμαρτίαν, just like πατέρα, Gal. iii. 13, necessarily includes in itself the notion of guilt; further, that the guilt of which Christ, made to be sin and a curse by God, appears as bearer, was not His own (μὴ γνόντα ἁμαρτίαν), and

z. Evang. d. Paul. u. Petr. p. 437, thinks of Christ's having with His incarnation received also the principle of sin, although He remained without παράβασις. But this is not contained even in Rom. viii. 3; in the present passage it can only be imported at variance with the words (ἀμ. ἐποίησεν), and the distinction between ἁμαρτία and παράβασις is quite foreign to the passage. Even the view, that the death of Jesus has its significance essentially in the fact that it is a doing away of the definite fleshly quality (Rich. Schmidt, Paulin. Christol. p. 83 ff.), does not fully meet the sacrificial conception of the apostle, which is not to be explained away. For, taking ἁμαρτίαν as sin-offering (ἁρῆ, ἁρῆ), with Augustine, Ambrosiaster, Pelagius, Oecumenius, Erasmus, Vatablus, Cornelius a Lapide, Piscator, Hammond, Wolf, Michaelis, Rosenmüller, Ewald, and others,¹ there is no sure basis laid even in the language of the LXX. (Lev. vi. 25, 30, v. 9; Num. viii. 8); it is at variance with the constant usage of the N. T., and here, moreover, especially at variance with the previous ἁμαρτ.—γενώμεθα] aorist (see the critical remarks), without reference to the relation of time. The present of the Recepta would denote that the coming of the ἡμεῖς to be δικαιοσύνη (to be δίκαιοι) still continues with the progress of the conversions to Christ. Comp. that hence the guilt of men, who through His death were to be justified by God, was transferred to Him; consequently the justification of men is imputative. This at the same time in opposition to Hofmann, Schriftbew. II. 1, p. 329, according to whom (comp. his explanation at our passage) Paul is held merely to express that God has allowed sin to realize itself in Christ, as befalling Him, while it was not in Him as conduct. Certainly it was not in Him as conduct, but it lay upon Him as the guilt of men to be atoned for through His sacrifice, Rom. iii. 25; Col. ii. 14; Heb. ix. 28; 1 Pet. ii. 24; John i. 29, al.; for which reason His suffering finds itself scripturally regarded not under the point of view of experience befalling Him, evil, or the like, but only under that of guilt-atoning and penal suffering. Comp. 1 John ii. 2.

¹ This interpretation is preferred by Ritschl in the Jahrb. f. D. Th. 1863, p. 249. for the special reason that, according to the ordinary interpretation, there is an incongruity between the end aimed at (actual righteousness of God) and the means (appearing as a sinner). But this difficulty is obviated by observing that Christ is conceived by the apostle as in reality bearer of the divine κράτος, and His death as mors vicaria for the benefit (ὄσις) of the sinful men, to be whose ἰλαστήριον. He was accordingly made by God a sinner. As the γινώσκει δικαιοσύνην τοῦ θεοῦ took place for men imputatively, so also did the ἁμαρτίαν ἰσχυροῦς αὐτοῦ take place for Christ imputatively. In this lies the congruity.

also Hermann, ad Viger. p. 850. — δικαιοσύνη θεοῦ] i.e. justified by God. See on Rom. i. 17. Not thank-offering (Michaelis, Schulz); not an offering just before God, well-pleasing to Him, but as δωρεὰ θεοῦ (Rom. v. 17), the opposite of all ἰδία δικαιοσύνη (Rom. x. 3). They who withstand that apostolic prayer of ver. 20 are then those, who τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ τοῦ θεοῦ οὐχ ὑπετάγησαν, Rom. x. 3. — ἐν αὐτῷ] for in Christ, namely, in His death of reconciliation (Rom. iii. 25), as causa meritoria, our being made righteous has its originating ground.

CHAPTER VI.

VER. 14. ἡ εἰς] Elz.: εἰς δέ, against decisive evidence. — Ver. 15. Instead of Χριστοῦ, Lachm. and Tisch. have Χριστοῦ, following B C N, min. Vulg. Copt. Fathers. Rightly; the dative came in from the adjoining words. — Ver. 16. ὑμεῖς . . . ἐστε] Lachm.: ἡμεῖς . . . ἐσμεν, following B D* L N* min. Copt. Clar. Germ. Clem. Didym. Aug. (once). To be preferred, since the Recepta was very naturally suggested as well by the remembrance of 1 Cor. iii. 16 as by the connection (vv. 14, 17), while there was no ground for putting ἡμεῖς . . . ἐσμεν in its stead. — μοι] Lachm.: μου. Attested, no doubt, by B C N, 17, 37, but easily brought in after αὐτῶν.¹ — Ver. 17. ἐξέλθετε] The form ἐξέλθατε is to be adopted, with Lachm. Tisch. and Rück., following B C F G N, 71, al. Damasc. See Fritzsche, ad Marc. p. 639.

After Paul has, in vv. 20, 21, expressed by δεόμεθα κ.τ.λ. the first and most immediate duty of his ministry as ambassador, he now expresses also his further working as a teacher, and that in reference to the readers, vv. 1, 2. And in order to show how important and sacred is this second part of his working as a joint-labourer with Christ, and certainly at the same time by way of an example putting his opponents to shame, he thereupon sets forth (vv. 3–10), in a stream of diction swelling onward with ever increasing grandeur, his own conduct in his hortatory activity. “Maxima est innocentiae contumacia,” Quintil. ii. 4. “Verba innocenti reperire facile est,” Curtius, vi. 10. 37.

Ver. 1. Connection and meaning: “We do not, however, let the matter rest merely with that entreaty on Christ's behalf: be ye reconciled to God, but, since we are His fellow-workers, and there is thus more laid on us to do than that entreaty on Christ's behalf, we also exhort that ye lose not again the grace of God which you have received (v. 21), that ye do not frustrate it in your case by an

unchristian life." — συνεργοῦντες] The συν finds its contextual reference not in the subject of v. 21, where there is only an auxiliary clause assigning a reason, nor yet in ὡς τοῦ θεοῦ παρακαλ. δι' ἡμῶν, ver. 20, in which there was given only a modal definition of the πρεσβεύειν ὑπὲρ X., but in ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ, ver. 20: as working together with Christ. It cannot, therefore, apply to God (Oecumenius, Lyra, Beza, Calvin, Cajetan, Vorstius, Estius, Grotius, Calovius, and others, including Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, Hofmann, in accordance with 1 Cor. iii. 9), or to the fellow-apostles (Heumann, Leun), or to the Corinthian teachers (Schulz, Bolten), or to the Corinthians in general (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Pelagius, Bengel, Billroth, Olshausen¹), or to the exhortations, with which his own example co-operates (Michaelis, Emmerling, Flatt). The apostles are fellow-workers with Christ just in this, that they are ambassadors ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ, and as such have to represent His cause and prosecute His work. — μὴ εἰς κενὸν κ.τ.λ.] ἐπάγει ταῦτα τὴν περὶ τὸν βίον σπουδὴν ἀπαιτῶν, Chrysostom. For if he that is reconciled through faith leads an unchristian life, the reconciliation is in his case frustrated. See Rom. vi., viii. 12, 13, al. — εἰς κενόν] incassum, of no effect, Gal. ii. 2; Phil. ii. 16; 1 Thess. iii. 5; Diod. xix. 9; Heliod. x. 30; Jacobs, ad Anthol. VII. p. 328. — δέξασθαι] is to be explained as recipiatis. So Vulgate, Luther, and others, including Rückert, Ewald, Osiander, Hofmann. Those, namely, who, like the readers (ὑμᾶς), have become partakers of the reconciliation through compliance with the entreaty in v. 20, are placed now under the divine grace (comp. Rom. vi. 14 f.). And this they are not to reject, but to receive and accept (δέξασθαι), and that not εἰς κενόν, i.e. not without the corresponding moral results, which would be wanting if one reconciled and justified by faith were not to follow the drawing of grace and the will of the Spirit and to walk in the καινότης τῆς ζωῆς (Rom. vi. 4) as a new creature, etc. Comp. Theodoret. Pelagius also is right: "in vacuum gratiam Dei recipit, qui in novo testamento non novus est." Hence it is not (not even in Rom. xv. 9) to be taken in the sense of the praeterite, as many of the more recent commentators (even de Wette) take it, contrary to usage, following Erasmus: "ne committatis, ut, semel gratis a peccatis exempti, in pristinam vitam relabentes in vanum receperitis gratiam Dei." — ὑμᾶς] is now, after the apostolic calling has been expressed at iv. 20 in its general bearing, added and placed at the end for emphasis, because now the discourse passes into the direct exhortation to the readers, that they receive not without effect, etc. If in their case that apostolic entreaty for reconciliation had not passed without compliance, they are now also to accept and act on the grace under which they have been placed.

Ver. 2 does not assign the reason why Paul is concerned about his official action, because, namely, now is the time in which God would have the world helped (Hofmann), but gives, as the context requires by the exhortation brought in at ver. 1, a parenthetic urgent inducement for complying with this exhortation without delay. — λέγει γάρ] sc. ὁ θεός, from what precedes. The passage is Isa. xlix. 8, exactly according to the LXX. The person addressed is the עֲבַד יְהוָה, whose idea is realized in Christ. He is regarded as the head of the true people of God; He is listened to, and He is helped, when the grace of God conveyed through Him is not received without result. Such is the Messianic fulfilment of that, which in Isaiah is promised to the servant of God regarding the deliverance and salvation of the unfortunate people. — καιρῷ δεκτῷ] Thus the LXX. translate חַיִּי לְחַיִּי, at a time of favour. Paul was able to retain the expression of the LXX. all the more, that in the fulfilment of the prophetic word the acceptableness (δεκτῷ) of the καιρός for the people of God consists in this, that it is the point of time for the display of divine favour and grace. Chrysostom well says: καιρὸς . . . ὁ τῆς δωρεᾶς, ὁ τῆς χάριτος, ὅτε οὐκ ἔστιν εὐθύνas ἀπαιτηθῆναι τῶν ἁμαρτημάτων, οὔτε δίκην δοῦναι, ἀλλὰ μετὰ τῆς ἀπαλλαγῆς καὶ μυρίων ἀπολαῦσαι ἀγαθῶν, δικαιοσύνης, ἁγιασμοῦ, τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων. In substance the same thing is indicated by ἐν ἡμέρᾳ σωτηρίας, on the day of deliverance. If καιρὸς δεκτός is taken as the time pleasing to God (Hofmann),¹ it is less in keeping with the parallel "day of salvation." The aurists are neither of a future (Menochius) nor of a present character (Flatt), but the Deity speaking sees the future as having already happened. See on Luke i. 51. — In the commentary which Paul adds: ἰδοὺ, νῦν κ.τ.λ., he discloses the element of that utterance of God, which moves to the use of this welcome salvation-bringing time. Behold, now is the acceptable time, behold, now is the day of deliverance, which the prophet has foretold; now or never may you be successful in obtaining salvation through a fruitful acceptance and apprehension of the divine grace! If the νῦν is past, and you have frustrated in your case the grace received, then the hearing and help promised by the prophet are no longer possible! The duration of this νῦν was in Paul's view the brief interval before the near-approaching Parousia. The stronger εὐπρόσδεκτος (viii. 12; Rom. xv. 16, 31; Plut. Mor. p. 801 C), which he has used instead of the simple form, has proceeded involuntarily from his deep and earnest feeling on the subject.

Ver. 3. The participle is not connected with ver. 11, but (in opposition to Hofmann, see on ver. 11) with παρακαλ. in ver. 1, as a qualitative definition of the subject. Grotius aptly says: "ostendit enim, quam serio moneat qui ut aliquid proficiat nullis terreatur incommodis, nulla non commoda negligat." Luther finds here an exhortation (let us give no one any kind of offence), which, however, is not allowed either by the construction (διδόντας must have been used) or by the contents of what follows. — ἐν μηδενί] not masculine (Luther) but neuter: in no respect. Comp. ἐν παντί, ver. 4. The μή is here used, neither unsuitably to the connection with ver. 1 (Hofmann), nor instead of οὐ (Rückert), but from a subjective point of view: "we exhort . . . as those, who," etc. Comp. 1 Cor. x. 33, and see Winer, p. 451 [E. T. 608]. — προσκοπή, only here in the N. T., not found in the LXX. and Apocr. (Polyb. vi. 6. 8, al.), is equivalent to πρόσκομμα, σκάνδαλον, i.e. an occasion for unbelief and unchristian conduct. This is given by a conduct of the teachers at variance with the doctrine taught. — μωμηθῇ] be blamed; comp. vii. 20. Paul is conscious that he represents the honour of the ministry entrusted to him. It cannot be proved that μωμ. denotes only light blame (Chrysostom and others, Osiander). See even in Homer, Il. iii. 412. It depends on the context, as in Pindar, Pyth. i. 160; Lucian, Quom. hist. 33: δ οὐδεις ἀν, ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὁ Μῶμος μωμήσασθαι δύναιτο.

Ver. 4 f. Συνιστῶντες ἑαυτ.] Here ἑαυτ. is not, as in iii. 1, iv. 12, prefixed, because συνιστ. is the leading idea. — ὡς θεοῦ διάκονοι] different in sense from ὡς θ. διακόνους (Vulg.: ministros). This would mean: we commend ourselves as those (accusative), who appear as God's servants. The former means: we commend ourselves, as God's servants commend themselves. Comp. Kühner, § 830, 5. The emphasis is on θεοῦ. — ἐν ὑπομονῇ πολλῇ] This is the first thing, the passive bearing, through which that συνιστ. ἑαυτ. ὡς θ. διάκ. takes place, through much patience; the further, active side of the bearing follows in ver. 6, ἐν ἀγνότητι κ.τ.λ., so that ἐν θλίψεσιν . . . νηστείαις is that, in which (ἐν) the much patience, the much endurance is shown. — Bengel aptly classifies ἐν θλίψεσιν . . . νηστείαις: "Primus ternarius continet genera, secundus species adversorum, tertius spontanea." Comp. Theodoret. — θλίψ., ἀνάγκ., στενοχ.: climactic designation. On στενοχ., comp. iv. 8. It is impracticable, and leads to arbitrariness, to find a climax also in the three points that follow, the more especially as the very first point is worse and more disgraceful than the second. — ἐν πληγαῖς] Comp. xi. 23–25; Acts xvi. 23. — ἐν ἀκαταστασίαις] in tumults. Comp. e.g. Acts xiii. 50, xiv. 19, xvi. 19 ff., xix. 28 ff. The explanation: instabilities, i.e. banishments from one place to another (Chrysostom, Theophylact, Oecumenius, Beza, Schulz, Flatt, Olshausen), is in itself possible (comp. ἀστατοῦμεν, 1 Cor. iv. 11); but in the whole of the N. T. ἀκαταστ. only means either confusion, disorder (1 Cor. xiv. 32; 2 Cor. xii. 20; Jas. iii. 16), or in a special sense tumult (Luke xxi. 9; comp. Eccclus. xxvi. 27). See, regarding the latter signification, the profane passages in Wetstein, Schweighäuser, Lex. Polyb. p. 17. — ἐν ἀγρυπν.] in sleeplessnesses, for the sake of working with his hands, teaching, travelling, meditating, praying, through cares, etc. Comp. xi. 27; Acts xx. 31. On the plural, comp. Herod. iii. 129. — ἐν κόποις] is not, with Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, to be understood only of labour with the hands (1 Cor. iv. 11; 1 Thess. ii. 9; 2 Thess. iii. 8), which limitation is not suggested by the context, but of toilsome labours in general, which the conduct of the apostolic ministry entailed. Comp. xi. 23, 27. — ἐν νηστείαις] is generally explained of the endurance of hunger and want (1 Cor. iv. 11; Phil. iv. 12). But since νηστεία is never used of compulsory fasting, and since Paul himself (xi. 27) distinguishes ἐν νηστεύειν from ἐν λιμῷ κ. δίψει, we must, with Chrysostom, Theodoret, and Calvin (comp. also Osiander, Hofmann), explain it of voluntary fasting, which Paul, using with free spirit the time-honoured asceticism, imposed on himself. The objections, that this is at variance with the apostle's spirit, or is here irrelevant, are arbitrary. See Matt. vi. 16, ix. 15, xvii. 21; Acts xiv. 23; comp. xiii. 2, 3, ix. 9; also 1 Cor. vii. 5.

In ver. 6, the series begun with ἐν ὑπομονῇ πολλῇ goes further. — ἐν ἀγνότητι] through purity, moral sincerity in general. Comp. ἀγνός, Phil. iv. 8; 1 Tim. v. 22; 1 John iii. 3. To understand this as meaning abstinentia a venere (Grotius and others), or contempt for money (Theodoret), is a limitation without ground in the context, and presents too low a moral standard for a servant of God. — ἐν γνώσει] Of the high degree of his evangelical knowledge, in particular of the moral will of God in the gospel, there is evidence in every one of his Epistles and in every one of his speeches in the Book of Acts. Calvin and Morus arbitrarily think that what is meant is recte et scienter agendi peritia, or (comp. also Rückert and Osiander) true practical prudence. — ἐν μακροθυμίᾳ] amid offences. — ἐν χρηστότητι] through kindness (Tittmann, Synon. p. 140 ff.). The two are likewise associated in 1 Cor. xiii. 4; Gal. v. 22. — ἐν πνεύμ. ἀγίῳ] is not to be limited arbitrarily to the charismata (Grotius and others), but: through the Holy Spirit, of whom testimony is given by our whole working and conduct just as the fruit of the Spirit (comp. Gal. v. 22) and walk according to the Spirit (Gal. v. 25). The position of this and the following point is determined by the circumstance, that Paul, in addition to the points adduced (ἐν ὑπομονῇ . . . ἐν ἀγνότητι κ.τ.λ.), now further mentions their objective divine source, which he bears in himself (ἐν πνεύματι ἀγίῳ), as well as the fundamental virtue of the Christian (ἐν ἀγάπῃ ἀνυποκρ., comp. Rom. xii. 9; 1 Pet. i. 22 f., iv. 8), which springs from this source, and without which even those elements already named would fail him (1 Cor. viii. 1, xiii. 1 ff., xiv. 1). In this way he brings to completion that portion of his self-attestation which reaches to this point.

Ver. 7. The enumerations hitherto made related generally to the conduct and character of God's servants; now the stream, swelling ever more boldly, passes over to the province of the teacher's work, and pours itself forth from ver. 8 in a succession of contrasts between seeming and being, which are so many triumphs of the apostle's clear self-assurance. — ἐν λόγῳ ἀληθ.] through discourse of truth, i.e. through doctrine, the character of which is truth. Comp. ii. 17, iv. 2. It will not do to take, with Rückert, λόγ. ἀληθ. objectively, as equivalent to εὐαγγέλιον, because, as at Eph. i. 13, Col. i. 5, the article could not have been omitted. — ἐν δυνάμει θεοῦ] through power of God, which shows itself efficacious in our work of teaching, iv. 7. Comp. 1 Cor. ii. 4, iv. 20. The limitation to the miracles is arbitrary (Theophylact, comp. Emmerling and Flatt). — διὰ τῶν ὀπλῶν τῆς δικαιοσ. κ.τ.λ.] is by Grotius connected with what precedes (Dei virtute nobis arma subministrante, etc.); but seeing that other independent points are afterwards introduced by διὰ, we must suppose that Paul, who elsewhere without any special purpose varies in his use of equivalent prepositions, passes from the instrumental ἐν to the instrumental διὰ, so that we have here also a special point: through the weapons, which righteousness furnishes. The δικαιοσύνη is to be taken in the usual dogmatic sense. Comp. τὴν θώρακα τῆς δικαιοσ., Eph. vi. 15. It is the righteousness of faith which makes us strong and victorious in the way of assault or defence against all opposing powers. See the noble commentary of the apostle himself in Rom. viii. 31–39. It has been explained of moral integrity (comp. Rom. vi. 13, 19; Eph. v. 9, vi. 14), the genitive being taken either as ad justitiam implendam (Grotius), or as weapons, which the consciousness of integrity gives (Erasmus, Beza, Calvin, Billroth), or which are allowed to a moral man and are at his command (Rückert), or which minister to that which is of right (Hofmann), and the like; but the explanation has this against it, that the context contains absolutely nothing which leads us away from the habitual Pauline conception of δικαιοσύνη, as it was most definitely expressed even at v. 21, whereas the idea of δύναμις θεοῦ stands in quite a Pauline connection with that of δικαιοσύνη θεοῦ. See Rom. i. 16, 17. Hence there is no ground for uniting the two conceptions of δικαιοσύνη (Osiander), or for explaining it of righteousness as a quality of God which works through Paul (Kling). The explanation: arma justa, legitimate weapons (Flatt, following Heumann and Morus), is out of the question. — τῶν δεξιῶν καὶ ἀριστ.] right-hand and left-hand arms, an apportioning specification of the whole armament. The former are the weapons of attack wielded with the right hand, the latter are the weapons of defence (shield); the warrior needs both together. Hence it was unsuitable to refer the former specially to res prosperas, the latter to res adversas (Erasmus, Estius, Grotius, Bengel, and others, following the Fathers): “ne prosperis elevemur, nec frangamur adversis,” Pelagius. Comp. rather, on the subject-matter, x. 4 f.

Ver. 8. It is usually supposed that διὰ here is not again instrumental, but local: (going) through honour and shame, or in the sense of the accompanying circumstances (Hofmann): amid honour and shame, we commend ourselves, namely, as God's servants, ver. 4. This is arbitrary on the very face of it; besides, in this way of taking it there is no mode of the apostolic self-commendation at all expressed. Hence Billroth was right in trying to keep to the instrumental sense: “as well honour as shame (the latter, in so far as he bears it with courage and patience) must contribute to the apostle's commendation.” But, on the other hand, it may be urged that, according to the words, it must be the shame itself (as also the δόξα itself), and not the manner of bearing it, which commends. Hence it is rather to be taken: through glory, which we earn for ourselves among the friends of God, and through dishonour, which we draw on ourselves among opponents; through both we commend ourselves as God's servants. On the latter idea (καὶ ἀτιμίας), comp. Matt. v. 11; Luke vi. 22; 1 Pet. iv. 14; also Gal i. 10. In a corresponding way also what follows is to be taken: through evil report and good report. — ὡς πλάνοι κ. ἀληθεῖς] With this there begins a series of modal definitions, which furnish a triumphant commentary on the two previous statements, διὰ δόξης κ. ἀτιμίας, διὰ δυσφ. κ. εὐφ. In this case the order of the clauses (the injurious aspect being always put first) corresponds to the order of δυσφ. κ. εὐφ. The first clause always gives the tenor of the ἀτιμία and δυσφ. κ. εὐφ.; the second clause, on the other hand, gives the actual state of the case, and consequently also the tenor of the δόξα and εὐφ. Hence: as deceivers and true, i.e. as people who are both, the former in the opinion and in the mouth of enemies, the latter in point of fact. Accordingly, καὶ is not "and yet" (Luther and many others), but the simple and. — On the seven times repeated ὥς, Valla rightly remarks: "Paulina oratio sublimis atque urgens." Comp. Augustine, de doct. Christ. iv. 20. — On πλάνοι, which does not mean "erring" (Ewald), comp. Matt. xxvii. 63; 1 Tim. iv. 1; John vii. 12; and Wetstein.

Vv. 9, 10. Ἀγνοοούμενοι] not: mistaken or misjudged (Flatt, Hofmann, and others), nor yet: people, for whom nobody cares (Grotius), but: people, whom no one is acquainted with (Gal. i. 22); obscure men, of whom no one knows anything. Comp. ἀγνῶς and the contrasted γνώριμος, Plato, Pol. ii. p. 375 E; also Demosth. 851. 27. — ἐπιγινώσκ.] becoming well known; comp. on 1 Cor. xiii. 12; Matt. xi. 27. By whom? Rückert thinks: by God. But without ground in the text, which rather demands the reference to men, as Chrysostom rightly saw: ὥς ἀγν. κ. ἐπιγινώσκ., τοῦτο ἔστι διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀτιμίας, τοῖς μὲν γὰρ ᾗσαν γνώριμοι καὶ περισπούδαστοι, οἱ δὲ οὐδὲ εἰδέναι αὐτοὺς ἤξιουν. Hence: as people who are unknown (viz. according to the contemptuous judgment of opponents), and well known (in reality among all true believers). — ἀποθνήσκοντες] The continual sufferings and deadly perils of the apostle gave to his opponents occasion to say: he is on the point of death, he is at his last! Paul considered himself as moribundus (1 Cor. xv. 31), but from what an entirely different point of view! See 2 Cor. iv. 7-15. — καὶ ἰδοὺ ζῶμεν] and, behold, we are in life! We find a commentary on this in iv. 7 ff. Comp. i. 10. The construction often varies so, that after the use of the participle the discourse passes over to the finite verb (Buttmann, neut. Gram. p. 327 f. [E. T. 382 f.]); but here, in the variation introduced with a lively surprise by ἰδοὺ (comp. v. 17), there is implied a joyful feeling of victory. "Vides non per negligentiam veteres hoc genere uti, sed consulto, ubi quae conjuncta sunt ad vim sententiae simul tamen distinguere volunt paulo expressius," Dissen, ad Pind. Isthm. p. 527. — ὥς παιδευόμενοι κ. μὴ θανατ.] a reminiscence, perhaps, of Ps. cxviii. 18; παιδ. is not, however, to be understood of actual chastisements by scourging and the like (Cajetanus, Menochius, Estius, Flatt). This, judged by the analogy of the other clauses, would be too much a matter of detail, and it would be specially inappropriate, because in all the clauses the view of His opponents is placed side by side with the true state of the case. We must rather think of God as the παιδεύων. The sorrowful condition of the apostle gave his opponents occasion for concluding: he is a chastened man! a man who is under the divine chastening rod! — καὶ μὴ θανατ.] In his humble piety he does not deny that he stands under God's discipline (hence there is here no opposite of the first clause); but he knows that God's discipline will not proceed to extremity, as His opponents thought; therefore he adds: and not becoming killed! not sinking under this chastening.—Ver. 10. In the opinion and judgment of our enemies we are people full of sorrow, poor, and having nothing (starving and penniless wretches!); and in reality we are at all times rejoicing (through our Christian frame of mind, comp. Rom. v. 3, and the χαρὰ ἐν πνεύματι ἀγίῳ, Rom. xiv. 17; 1 Thess. iv. 6), enriching many (with spiritual benefits, 1 Cor. i. 5; 2 Cor. viii. 9), and having in possession everything (because entrusted with the store of all divine benefits in order to impart them to others). This πάντα κατέχ., like the previous πολλοὺς πλουτίζ., is by Chrysostom, Theodoret, Grotius, Estius, explained in this way, that Paul could have disposed of the property of the Christians, and have enriched many by instituting collections. But such an inferior reference is altogether out of keeping with the lofty tone of the passage, more especially at its close, where it reaches its acme. Comp. also Gemara Nedarim f. 40. 2: "Recipimus non esse pauperem nisi in scientia. In Occidente seu terra Israel dixerunt: in quo scientia est, is est ut ille, in quo omnia sunt; in quo illa deest, quid est in eo?" Rückert's opinion, that in those two clauses Paul was thinking of nothing definite at all, is unjust towards the apostle. Olshausen, followed by Neander, wishes to find the explanation of πάντα κατέχ. in 1 Cor. iii. 22. But this is less suitable to the πολλοὺς πλουτίζ., evidently referring to the spiritual gifts, to which it is related by way of climax.

Ver. 11–vii. 1. After the episode in vv. 3–10,¹ Paul turns with a conciliatory transition (vv. 11–13) to a special, and for the Corinthians necessary, form of the exhortation expressed in ver. 1 (vv. 14–18). This is followed up in vii. 1 by a general appeal, which embraces the whole moral duty of the Christian.

Ver. 11. Our mouth stands open towards you, Corinthians; our heart is enlarged. — τὸ στόμα ἡμῶν ἀνέφωγε] This expression is in itself nothing further than a picturesque representation of the thought: to begin to speak, or to speak. See, especially, Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 97, and the remark on Matt. v. 2. A qualitative definition may be added simply through the context, as is the case also here partly through the general character of the previous passage, vv. 3–10, which is a very open, unreserved utterance, partly by means of the parallel ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν πεπλάτνται. Thus in accordance with the context the opposite of reserve is here expressed. Comp. Chrysostom 1. Had Paul merely written λελάληκαμεν ὑμῖν, the same thought would, in virtue of the context, have been implied in it (we have not been reserved, but have let ourselves be openly heard towards you); but the picturesque τὸ στόμα ἡμῶν ἀνέφωγε is better fitted to convey this meaning, and is therefore purposely chosen. Comp. Ezek. xxxiii. 22; Ecclus. xxii. 22; Eph. vi. 19; Aeschylus, Prometh. 612. This at the same time in opposition to Fritzsche, who adheres to the simple haec ad vos locutus sum, as to which, we may remark, the haec is imported. Rückert (comp. Chrysostom 2) finds the sense to be: “see, I have begun to speak with you once, I have not concealed . . . from you my apostolic sentiments; I cannot yet close my mouth, I must speak with you yet further.” But the thought: I must speak with you yet further, is imported; how could the reader conjecture it from the simple perfect? Just as little is it to be assumed, with Hofmann, that Paul wishes only to state that he had not been reserved with what he had to say, so that this expression is only a resumption of the παρακαλοῦμεν μὴ εἰς κενὸν κ.τ.λ. in ver. 1. Only in an arbitrary and violent manner can we reject the reference to vv. 3–10, where such a luxuriance of holy grandiloquentia has disproportioned to that which he says in ver. 11, and which is only a brief, gentle, kindly remark. What a magnificent preparation for such a little quiet sentence without substantial contents! The examples cited by Hofmann from Greek writers and the N. T. (Acts xx. 3; Mark ix. 20) are too weak analogies. See regarding similar real anacolutha, Winer, p. 527 f. [E. T. 709 f.]. Comp. on Mark ix. 20.

issued from his mouth. — ἀνέφρα, in the sense of ἀνέφρηται, is frequent in later Greek (in Il. xvi. 221, ἀνέφρηεν is imperfect), and is rejected by Phrynichus as a solecism. See Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 157 f. — Κορίνθιοι] Regarding this particular form of address without article or adjective (it is otherwise in Gal. iii. 1) Chrysostom judges rightly: καὶ ἡ προσθήκη δὲ τοῦ ὀνόματος φιλίας πολλῆς καὶ διαθέσεως καὶ θερμότητος, καὶ γὰρ εἰώθαμεν τῶν ἀγαπωμένων συνεχῶς γυμνὰ τὰ ὀνόματα περιστρέφειν. Comp. Phil. iv. 15. Bengel: “rara et praesentissima appellatio.” — ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν πεπλάτνται] cannot here mean either: I feel myself cheered and comforted (comp. Ps. cxix. 32; Isa. lx. 5), as Luther, Estius, Kypke, Michaelis, Schleusner, Flatt, Bretschneider, Schrader, and others hold, or: I have expressed myself frankly, made a clean breast (Semler, Schulz, Morus, Rosenmüller, de Wette, comp. Beza), because vv. 12 and 13 are against both ways of taking it; but, with Chrysostom, Theodoret, Oecumenius, and the majority, it is to be taken as an expression of the love which, by being stirred up and felt, makes the heart wide, while by the want of love and by hate the heart is narrowed and contracted. The figurative expression needed no elucidation from the Hebrew, and least suitable of all is the comparison with Deut. xi. 16 (Hofmann), where the figurative meaning of הָרָחֵם is of quite another kind. See, however, the passages in Wetstein on ver. 12. — The two parts of the verse stand side by side as parallels without a connective particle (καί), in order that thus the second thought, which outweighs the first, might come into more prominent relief, — a relation which is indicated by the emphatic prefixing of τὸ στόμα and ἡ καρδία. The meaning accordingly is: We have (vv. 3–10) spoken openly to you, Corinthians; our heart has therein become right wide in love towards you — which, however, may not be interpreted of readiness to receive the readers (Hofmann), for they are already in his heart (vii. 3; comp. Phil. i. 7). The relation of the two clauses is taken differently by Emmerling, who inserts a because between them, and by Fritzsche, who says: “quod vobis dixi ejusmodi est, ut inde me vos amare appareat.” But it may be urged against both that we are not justified in taking the two perfects as different in temporal import, the one as a real praeterite, and the other with the force of a present. In πεπλάτνται it is rather implied that Paul has felt his love to the Corinthians strengthened, his heart towards them widened, during his writing of the passage vv. 3-10 (by its contents)—a result, after such an outpouring, intelligible enough, psychologically true, and turned to account in order to move his readers.

Ver. 12. A negative confirmation of the ἡ καρδία ἡμ. πεπλάτ. just said, and opposite state of matters on the part of the Corinthians. — Not straitened are ye in us, but straitened in your innermost part (σπλ., the seat of love, like καρδία, ver. 11, to which the expression stands related under the increasing emotion by way of climax). The meaning of it is: "valde vos amo, non item vos me." It is impossible, on account of the οὐ, to take it as an imperative (Aretius, Luther, Heumann, Morus, Schleusner). — οὐ στενοχ. ἐν ἡμῖν] non angusto spatio premimini in animis nostris: in this Paul retains the figure of the previous ἡ καρδ. ἡμ. πεπλάτ. Chrysostom aptly says: ὁ γὰρ φιλούμενος μετὰ πολλῆς ἔνδου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ τοῦ φιλοῦντος βαδίζει τῆς ἀδείας. Comp. vii. 3; Phil. i. 7. The negative expression is an affectionate, pathetic litotes, to be followed by an equally affectionate paternal reproof. This is explanation enough, and dispenses with the hypothesis that Paul is referring to the opinion of the church, that it had too narrow a space—a smaller place than it wished—in his heart (Hofmann). Those who interpret πλατ., ver. 11, as to cheer, take the meaning to be: not through us do ye become troubled, but through yourselves (Kypke, Flatt; comp. Elsner, Estius, Wolf, Zachariae, Schrader; comp. also Luther),—a thought, however, which is foreign to the whole connection; hence Flatt also assumes that Paul has vii. 2 ff. already in his thoughts; and Schrader explains ver. 14-vii. 1 as an interpolation.¹ — στενοχ. δὲ ἐν τ. σπλ. ὑμ.] so that there is in them no right place for us (comp. 1 John iii. 17). Chrysostom: οὐκ εἶπεν οὐ φιλεῖτε ἡμᾶς, ἀλλ' οὐ μετὰ τοῦ αὐτοῦ μέτρου. Paul did not write στενοχωρούμεθα δὲ ἡμεῖς ἐν τοῖς σπλ. ἡμ., because by this the contrast would have passed from the thing to the persons (for he had not, in fact, written οὐχ ὑμεῖς στενοχωρ. ἐν ἡμῖν), and so the passage would have lost in fitting concert and sharp force. Rückert thinks that Paul refers in ver. 12 to an utterance of the Corinthians, who had said: στενωχορούμεθα ἐν αὐτῷ! meaning, we are perplexed at him, and that now he explains to them how the matter stood with this στενοχωρεῖσθαι, but takes the word in another sense than they themselves had done. A strangely arbitrary view, since the use of the στενοχωρεῖσθαι in our passage was occasioned very naturally and completely by the previous πεπλάτ. Comp. Chrysostom, Theodoret.

Ver. 13. A demand for the opposite of the said στενοχωρεῖσθε ἐν τοῖς σπλ. ὑμ. just said.—The accusative τὴν αὐτὴν ἀντιμισθίαν is not to be supplemented either by habentes (Vulgate), nor by εἰσενέγκατε (Oecumenius, Theophylact), nor to be connected with λέγω (Chrysostom, Beza, and others); it is anacoluthic (accusative absolute), so that it emphatically sets forth an object of discourse, without grammatically attaching to it the further construction. It is otherwise in iii. 18. There is not an interruption, but a rhetorical breaking off of the construction. These accusatives, otherwise explained by κατά, are therefore the beginning of a construction which is not continued. See Schaefer, ad Dem. V. pp. 314, 482 f.; Matthiae, p. 955. Comp. Bernhardt, p. 132 f.; Dissen, ad Pind. p. 329, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 407; Winer, p. 576 [E. T. 774]. — αὐτὴν] Paul has blended by way of attraction the two conceptions τὸ αὐτό and τὴν ἀντιμισθίαν. See Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 114 ff. Rückert arbitrarily says: Paul wished to write ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ ὑμεῖς πλατύνθητε, τὴν ἐμὴν ἀντιμισθίαν, but, at two passages of the Epistle to the Ephesians. Besides, the συμφών. Χριστῷ πρὸς βίλιαν may be an echo of some apocryphal utterance known to the readers (comp. Eph. v. 14). (4) The expressions μιτοχή (comp. μιτίχαι, 1 Cor. ix. 10, al.), μίρις (comp. Col. i. 12), συμφώνησις (comp. σύμφωνος, 1 Cor. vii. 5), καθαρίζω (comp. Eph. v. 26), cannot, any more than συγκατάβησις which he does not use elsewhere, excite well-grounded suspicion in the case of one so rich in handling the language. (5) The critical evidence gives not the slightest trace of ground for assuming that the section did not originally stand in all the manuscripts. How different it is with passages really interpolated, such as Mark xvi. 9 ff.; John vii. 83 ff. Yet Holsten has also, zur Evang. d. Paul. u. Petr. p. 387, assented to the condemnation of the section.

by prefixing the latter, he brought the idea of ὡσαύτως also into the first clause, where it necessarily had now to appear as an adjective. He certainly has not only placed, but also thought τὴν ἀντιμισθίαν first, but at the same time τὸ αὐτό was also in his mind. — The parenthetic ὡς τέκνοις λέγω justifies the expression τὴν αὐτ. ἀντιμισθίαν; for it is the duty of children to recompense a father's love by love in return. Comp. 1 Tim. v. 4. Chrysostom: οὐδὲν μέγα αἰτῶ, εἰ πατὴρ ὦν βούλομαι φιλεῖσθαι παρ' ὑμῶν. The notion of children yet untrained (Ewald) would be indicated by something like νηπίοις (1 Cor. iii. 1).

Ver. 14. As a contrast to the desired πλατύν., Paul now forbids their making common cause with the heathen, and so has come to the point of stating what was said generally at ver. 1 (μὴ εἰς κενὸν τ. χ. τ. θεοῦ δέξασθαι) more precisely, in a form needful for the special circumstances of the Corinthians, in order to warn them more urgently and effectually of the danger of losing their salvation. — μὴ γίνεσθε ἑτεροζυγ.] Bengel: "ne fiat is, molliter pro: ne sit is." He does not forbid all intercourse with the heathen whatever (see 1 Cor. v. 10, x. 27, vii. 12), but the making common cause with heathen efforts and aims, the entering into the heathen element of life. There is no ground for assuming exclusively special references (such as to sacrificial banquets or to mixed marriages), any more than for excluding such references. — ἑτεροζυγοῦντες] see, in general, Wetstein. It means here: bearing another (a different kind of) yoke. Comp. ἑτερόζυγος, Lev. xix. 19; Schleusner, Thesaur. II. p. 557. Paul undoubtedly has in mind the figurative conception of two different animals (as ox and ass) which are yoked together in violation of the law (Deut. xxii. 9),—a conception, in which the heterogeneous fellowship of Christians with heathen is aptly portrayed: drawing a yoke strange to you. In this verse the dative ἀπίστοις denotes a fellowship, in which the unbelieving partner forms the standard which determines the mode of thought and action of the Christian partner. For this dative cannot mean "with unbelievers" (the usual explanation), as if συζυγοῦντες had been used; but it is not so much dativus commodi (Hofmann: for the pleasure of unbelievers), a thought which Paul would have doubtless expressed with more precision, as the dativus ethicus (Krüger, § 48. 6); so that the words mean: do not draw for unbelievers a strange yoke. The yoke meant is that drawn by unbelievers, one of a kind strange to Christians (ἐτεροῖον), and the latter are not to put themselves at the disposal of unbelievers by sharing the drawing it. The great danger of the relation against which Paul warns them, lies in this dative expression. According to Theophylact (comp. Chrysostom), the sense is: μὴ ἀδικεῖτε τὸ δίκαιον ἐπικλινόμενοι καὶ προσκείμενοι οἷς οὐ θέμις, so that the figurative expression is taken from the unequal balance (Phocylides, 13: σταθμὸν μὴ κρούειν ἑτερόζυγον, ἀλλ' ἴσον ἔλκειν). But apart from the circumstance that Paul would in that case have expressed himself at least very strangely, the reminiscence from the O. T., which the common view assumes, must still be considered as the most natural for the apostle.¹—τίς γὰρ μετοχὴ κ.τ.λ.] for how utterly incompatible is the Christian with the heathen character! Observe the impressiveness of the accumulated questions, and of the accumulated contrasts in these questions. The first four questions are joined in two pairs; the fifth, mounting to the highest designation of Christian holiness, stands alone, and to it are attached, as a forcible conclusion of the discourse, the testimony and injunction of God which confirm it.²—δικαιοσύνη κ. ἀνομία] For the Christian is justified by faith (v. 21, vi. 7), and this condition excludes immoral conduct (ἀνομία, 1 John iii. 4), which is the element of heathen life (Rom. vi. 19). The two life-elements have nothing in common with each other, Rom. viii. 1 ff.; Gal. ii. 15 ff.—In the second question the Christian life-element appears as φῶς, and the heathen as σκότος. Comp. Eph. v. 8, 11 f.; Col. i. 12 f. In the latter is implied ἡ ἄγνοια καὶ ἡ ἁμαρτία, and in φῶς: ἡ γνῶσις καὶ ὁ βίος ὁ ἔνθεος (in both, the intellectual and the ethical element are to be thought of together), Gregory Naz. Or. 36.—Regarding the two datives, of which the second is expressed in Latin by cum, see Matthiae, p. 883; and the πρός, in the second clause, is

² Hofmann brings the second and third questions, as well as the fourth and fifth, into closer relation. Neither the particles ἢ and δέ, nor the prepositions πρός and μετά, nor yet the contents of the questions, are decisive. But it is in favour of our division, which Lachmann has also, that only to the fifth question is there specially added the great and important scriptural testimony, vv. 16–18, which is quite in keeping with its isolated and distinctive position.

Ver. 15. The five different shades given to the notion of fellowship vouch for the command which the apostle had over the Greek language. — Regarding the use of δέ before a new question with the same word of interrogation, see Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 169. — Βελίαρ] Name of the devil (the Peshito has Satan), properly ܒܠܝܐܪ (wickedness, as concrete equivalent to Πονηρός); hence the reading Βελίαλ (Elzevir, Lachmann) is most probably a correction. The form βελίαρ, which also occurs frequently in the Test. XII. Patr. (see Fabricius, Pseudepigr. V. T. I. pp. 539, 587, 619, al.), in Ignatius as interpolated, in the Canon. Ap., and in the Fathers (see Wetstein, critical remarks), is to be explained from the not unfrequent interchange of λ and ρ in the common speech of the Greek Jews. In the O. T. the word does not occur as a name. See, generally, Gesenius, Thesaurus, I. p. 210. — συμφώνησις, harmony, accord, only here in the N. T., not in the LXX. The Greeks say συμφωνία and σύμφωνον (with πρὸς, Polyb. vi. 36. 5; Plat. Lach. p. 188 D); the simple form φώνησις in Pollux ii. 111. — On μερίς, share, comp. Acts viii. 21. The two have no partnership with one another, possess nothing in common with one another. The believer has, in Christ, righteousness, peace, etc., all of which the unbeliever has not, and one day will have μερίς τοῦ κλήρου τῶν ἁγίων, Col. i. 12. In strict logic ἡ τίς μερίς . . . ἀπίστου did not belong to this series of elements of proof, since it contains the proposition itself to be proved, but it has come in amidst the lively, sweeping flow of the discourse.

Ver. 16. Comp. 1 Cor. x. 20. What agreement (Polyb. ii. 58. 11, iv. 17. 8) has the temple of God with idols? how can it reconcile itself with them? Comp. on συγκατάθ.; also Ex. xxiii. 1; Luke xxiii. 51. The two are contraries, which stand negatively related to one another; if the temple of God should come into contact with idols (as was the case, e.g., under Ahaz), it would be desecrated. — ἡμεῖς γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] With this Paul proves that he was not without reason in using the words τίς δὲ συγκατάθεσις ναῦ θεοῦ κ.τ.λ. of the contradiction between the Christian and the heathen character. The emphasis is on ἡμεῖς: for we Christians are (sensu mystico) the temple of the living God.¹—ζῶντος] in contrast with the dead idols in the heathen temples.—καθὼς εἶπεν ὁ θεός] in accordance with the utterance of God: Lev. xxvi. 12, freely after the LXX., the summary of the divine covenant of promise.—ἐν αὐτοῖς] among them; see below, ἐμπεριπατήσω, walk about in (Lucian, adv. Ind. 6; Ach. Tat. i. 6; LXX.). The indwelling of God in the body of Christians as in His temple, and the intercourse of His gracious rule in it (ἐμπεριπ.), take place through the medium of the Spirit. See on 1 Cor. iii. 16; John xiv. 23.

Ver. 17. With the foregoing quotation Paul now combines another in keeping with his aim (ver. 14), containing the application which God has made of His previous promise. But this quotation is still freer than the one before, after the LXX. Isa. lii. 11, and the last words, κἀγὼ εἰσδέξομαι ὑμᾶς, are perhaps joined with it through a reminiscence of Ezek. xx. 34 (comp. Ezek. xi. 17; Zech. x. 8). Osiander and most expositors find in κἀγὼ εἰσδέξ. ὑμ. a reproduction approximately as to sense of the words in Isa. lii. 12: καὶ ὁ ἐπισυνάγων ὑμᾶς κύριος ὁ θεὸς Ἰσραὴλ; but this is, at any rate, far-fetched, and, considering Paul's usual freedom in joining different passages of the O. T., unnecessarily harsh.—αὐτῶν] applies to the heathen.—ἀκαθάρτου μὴ ἄπτεσθε] Just as ἐξέλθετε κ.τ.λ. had referred (aorist) to the separation to be accomplished from the fellowship of heathen life, so this refers, in the sense of the prophetic fulfilment, to the continuing (present) abstinence from all heathen habits (not simply from offerings to idols), and κἀγὼ εἰσδέξ. ὑμ. to their reception into sonship, see ver. 18. It is correlative to ἐξέλθατε; God wishes to receive those who have gone forth into His paternal house, i.e. into the fellowship of the true theocracy (ver. 18).

¹ So according to the reading ἡμεῖς . . . ἱερῶν. See the critical remarks. According to the Recepta ὑμεῖς . . . ἱερῶν (so also Tisch., defended by Rückert, Osiander, Hofmann) it would apply to the Corinthian church, which in the spiritual sense is the temple of God, as 1 Cor. iii. 16. Ewald has rightly upheld the reading ἡμεῖς . . . ἱερῶν, but has wrongly used it against the genuineness of the section (Jahrb. IX. p. 216). How often in a connection, where Paul is speaking of himself in the first person plural, has he thereupon expressed also in the same person the consciousness of Christians generally, as e.g. just at v. 21.

Ver. 18. Continuation of the promise begun with καὶ γὰρ εἰσδέξ. ὑμ., and holding forth the holy compensation for the enjoined severance from an unholy intercourse with the heathen. The passage is most probably a free and enlarged quotation from 2 Sam. vii. 14. It bears less resemblance to Jer. xxxi. 9, or even to Isa. xliii. 6. And Jer. xxxi. 33, xxxii. 38, are quite out of the question, because there the sonship is not mentioned. Cajetan conjectured as to a writing now lost, just as Ewald finds, from καὶ γὰρ onwards, a passage now unknown to us; according to Grotius, the words are ex hymno aliquo celebri apud Hebraeos. The freedom of the N. T. writers in using probative passages from the O. T. renders both hypotheses unnecessary; of the latter no instance can be shown in Paul, and in itself it is arbitrary. — κύριος παντοκράτωρ] “ex hac appellatione perspicitur magnitudo promissionum,” Bengel; rather, on account of the specific contents of παντοκ.: the unquestionable certainly of the fulfilment (Rom. iv. 21; 2 Cor. ix. 8, al.), which no power can hinder. Used only here by Paul (often in the Apocal.), who has, however, taken it from 2 Sam. vii. 8, LXX., where λέγει κυρ. παντοκρ. introduces the divine utterance.

CHAPTER VII.

VER. 3. For the order πρὸς κατὰ κρ. οὐ λέγω (Lachm.) even the testimony of B C \aleph is not sufficient as against all the vss. and most of the Fathers. — Ver. 8. Instead of the second εἰ καί, B has εἰ δὲ καί, and the γάρ after βλέπω is omitted by B D* Clar. Germ. (put in brackets by Lachm.); the Vulgate has read βλέπων (without γάρ), and Rückert wishes to restore the text accordingly: εἰ δὲ καὶ μετεμελόμενον βλέπων ὅτι . . . ὑμεῖς, νῦν χαίρω. But the Recepta has far preponderant attestation, and the variations are easily explained from it. It was rightly seen that with εἰ καὶ μετεμ. there starts a new portion of the discourse (whence in B δέ was inserted as an adversative conjunction), and either the apodosis was already begun at βλέπω, whence followed the omission of γάρ, or it was rightly perceived that the apodosis only began with νῦν χαίρω, and so βλέπων was substituted as a gloss for βλέπω γάρ. — Ver. 10. Instead of the first κατεργάζεται, Lachm. Rück. Tisch. have only ἐργάζεται, following B C D E \aleph * 37, Justin. Clem. Or. (thrice), Chrys. Dam. Rightly; the compound has crept in on account of the one following (comp. also ver. 11); it is (in opposition to Fritzsche, de conform. Lachm. p. 48) too rash to conclude from ver. 11 that Paul wrote κατεργ., for there, after the previous κατεργ., the compound might present itself, naturally and unsought, to the apostle, even if he had used the simple form in the first half of ver. 10. — Ver. 11. ὑμεῖς] is to be deleted as a supplementary insertion, with Lachm. and Rück., following B C F G \aleph * 17, Boern. Ambrosiast. Aug. — ἐν τῷ πράγματι] The ἐν is wanting in witnesses of importance; bracketed by Lachm. and Rück.; deleted by Tisch. An explanatory addition to the dative. — Ver. 12. οὐδέ] B \aleph  37, 73 have ἀλλ' οὐδέ, an error of the copyist. — τὴν σπουδὴν ἡμῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν] B C D E K L and many min., also Syr. Arr. Copt. Aeth. Germ. Damasc. Oec. have *τὴν σπ. ὑμῶν*¹ τ. ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν. Recommended by Griesb., adopted by Matth. Lachm. and Tisch. Rejected on account of the sense by Rück. and Hofm. But it is precisely the apparent impropriety in the sense of this reading which has given rise to the Recepta, just as πρὸς ὑμᾶς seemed also unsuitable, and is therefore wanting in Syr. Erp. Arm. Aeth. Vulg. Ambrosiast. Pel. Lachmann's reading appears, therefore, to be the correct one; it is defended also by Reiche, Comm. crit. I. p. 367. — Ver. 13. παρακεκλήμεθα ἐπὶ τῇ παρακλήσει ὑμῶν· περισσοτέρως δὲ μᾶλλον] Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. read: παρακεκλήμεθα· ἐπὶ δὲ τῇ παρακλήσει ἡμῶν περισσ. μᾶλλον, according to considerably preponderating attestation. Rightly; the ἐπί, twice taken in the same sense, caused ἐπὶ τῇ παρακλ. ἡμῶν to be attached to παρακεκλήμεθα, and hence the position of δὲ to be changed; and now the sense further demanded the change of ἡμῶν into ὑμῶν. The Recepta is defended by Reiche. — Ver. 14. ἡ καύχησις ἡμῶν ἢ ἐπὶ T.] ὑμῶν for ἡμῶν (Lachm.) is supported only by B F, with some vss. and Theoph. A mechanical repetition of ὑμῶν from what precedes. — Ver. 16. The οὖν (Elz.) after χαίρω is deleted, as a connective addition, by Griesb. and the later editors on decisive evidence.

Ver. 1 closes the previous section. — Since we accordingly (according to vi. 16–18) have these promises (namely, that God will dwell among us, receive us, be our Father, etc.), we wish not to make them null in our case by an immoral life. — ταύτας] placed at the head, bears the emphasis of the importance of the promises. — καθαρίσωμεν ἑαυτούς] denotes the morally purifying activity, which the Christian has to exert on himself, not simply the keeping himself pure (Olshausen). He who has become a Christian has by his faith doubtless attained forgiveness of his previous sins (Rom. iii. 23–25), is reconciled with God and sanctified (comp. v. 19 ff., and see on Acts xv. 9); but Paul refers here to the moral stains incurred in the Christian condition, which the state of grace of the regenerate (1 Pet. i. 22 f.) as much obliges him to do away with again in reference to himself (Rom. vi. 1 ff., viii. 12 ff.), as by the power of God (Phil. ii. 12, 13) it makes him capable of doing so (Rom. vi. 14, viii. 9). And no one forms an exception in this respect; hence Paul includes himself, with true moral feeling of this need placing himself on an equality with his readers. — σαρκὸς καὶ πνεύματος] The Christian is in the flesh, i.e. in the material-psychical part of his nature, stained by fornication, intemperance, and such transgressions and vices as directly pollute the body (which ought to be holy, 1 Cor. vi. 13 ff., vii. 34); and his spirit, i.e. the substratum of his rational and moral consciousness, the seat of the operation of the Divine Spirit in him and therewith the bearer of his higher and eternal life (1 Cor. ii. 11, v. 3; Rom. viii. 16), is stained by immoral thoughts, desires, etc., which are suggested to him by means of the power of sin in the flesh, and through which the spirit along with the νοῦς is sinfully affected, becomes weak and bound, and enslaved to sin (comp. on Rom. xii. 2; Eph. iv. 23). The two do not exclude, but include each other. Observe, further, that Paul might have used σώματος instead of σαρκός; but he puts σαρκός, because the flesh, in which the principle of sin has its seat and hence the fomes peccati lies, serves as the element to which every bodily defilement ethically attaches itself. This is based on the natural relation of the σάρξ to the power of sin, for which reason it is never demanded that the σάρξ shall be or become holy, but that the body (1 Cor. vii. 34) shall be holy through the crucifixion of the flesh, through putting off the old man, etc. (Col. ii. 11). By these means the Christian no longer lives ἐν σαρκί (Rom. viii. 8 f.) and κατὰ σάρκα, and is purified from everything wherewith the flesh is soiled; comp. 1 Thess. v. 23; Rom. viii. 13, xii. 1. The surprising character of the expression, to which Holsten especially takes objection (see z. Evang. d. Paul. u. Petr. p. 387), is disposed of by the very consideration that Paul is speaking of the regenerate; in their case the lusts of the σάρξ in fact remain, and the σάρξ is defiled, if their lusts are actually gratified. Calovius, we may add, rightly observes: “ex illatione etiam apostolica a promissionibus gratiarum ad studium novae obedientiae manifestum est, doctrinam apostolicam de gratuita nostri justificatione et in filios adoptione non labefactare pietatis et sanctitatis studium, sed ad illud excitare atque ad obedientiam Deo praestandam calcar addere.” — On μολυσμός, comp. Jer. xxiii. 15; 3 Esdr. viii. 83; 2 Macc. v. 27; Plut. Mor. p. 779 C. — ἐπιτελοῦντες ἁγιωσύνην] This is the positive activity of the καθαρίζειν ἑαυτοῦς: while we bring holiness to perfection (viii. 6) in the fear of God. To establish complete holiness in himself is the continual moral endeavour¹ and work of

Vv. 2–16. Regarding the impression made by the former Epistle and its result. A conciliatory outpouring of love and confidence serves as introduction, vv. 2–4. Then an account how Paul received through Titus the comforting and cheering news of the impression made by his Epistle, vv. 5–7. True, he had saddened the readers by his Epistle, but he regrets it no longer, but rejoices now on account of the nature and effect of this saddening, vv. 8–12. Therefore he is calmed, and his joy is still more heightened by the joy of Titus, who has returned so much cheered that Paul saw all his boasts to Titus regarding them justified. He is glad to be of good courage in everything through them, vv. 13–16.

Ver. 2. Having finished his exhortation, vi. 14–vii. 1, he now repeats the same request with which in vi. 13 he had introduced that exhortation (πλατύνθητε ὑμεῖς), using the corresponding expression χωρήσατε ἡμᾶς: take us, i.e. receive us, give us room in your heart (comp. Mark ii. 2; John ii. 6, xxi. 25; 4 Macc. vii. 6; Herod. iv. 61; Thuc. ii. 17. 3; Eurip. Hipp. 941), and then adds at once (without the medium of a γάρ) in lively emotion the reason why they had no cause whatever to refuse him this request (στενοχωρεῖσθαι ἐν τοῖς σπλάγχνοις, comp. vi. 12). Chrysostom rightly as to substance explains the figurative χωρήσατε by φιλήσατε; and Theophylact: δέξασθε ἡμᾶς πλατέως, καὶ μὴ στενοχωρώμεθα ἐν ὑμῖν. Comp. Theodoret. So also most of the later commentators, though the meaning was often limited in an arbitrary way (comp. Rosenmüller, Stolz, Flatt, and Pelagius), e.g.: give ear to us, and the like. Others take it: understand us rightly (Bengel, Storr, Bretschneider, Rückert, de Wette). Unobjectionable from a linguistic point of view (see Wetstein, ad Matt. xix. 11); but in the exhortation of ver. 1 there was nothing to be misunderstood, just as little as for the readers in the disclosure that follows (to which de Wette refers it); and if

Paul, as Rückert thinks, had had it in his mind that the measures of his first Epistle had been judged unfavourably, he could not have expected any reader to gather this from the simple χωρήσατε ἡμᾶς, especially as in what follows the idea of the effects of the first Epistle is quite kept at a distance by οὐδένα ἐπλεονεκτήσαμεν.¹—οὐδένα ἡδίκησαμεν κ.τ.λ.] This is no doubt aimed at hostile calumniations of the apostle and his companions. Some one must have said: They act wrongly towards the people! they ruin them, they enrich themselves from them! It is impossible to prove that ἐφθείραμεν applies exactly to the corruptela quae fit per falsam doctrinam (Calvin and most, following the Fathers; just as Hofmann also refers it to the inward injuring of the persons themselves, 1 Cor. iii. 17); the way in which the word is associated with ἡδικῆσ. and ἐπλεονεκτ. is rather in favour of a reference to the outward position. In how many ways not known to us more precisely may the apostle and his fellow-labourers have been accused of such a ruining of others! How easily might such slanders be based on the strictness of his moral requirements, his sternness in punishing, his zeal for collections, his lodging with members of the church, the readiness to make sacrifices which he demanded, and the like! Probably his prosecution and administration of the collections would be especially blackened by this reproach of πλεονεκτεῖν. Comp. xii. 17, 18. Rückert refers all three words to the contents of the former Epistle: "with what I wrote you, I have done no one wrong," etc.; so that ἡδικ. would refer to the severe punishment of the incestuous person, ἐφθέρ. to his delivery over to Satan, and ἐπλεονεκτ. to the control which Paul by this discipline seemed desirous to exercise over the transgressor and over the church. But if his readers were to know of this reference to his former Epistle, he must have expressed it (the reader could not guess it). Besides, the word ἐπλεονεκτ. is against this view, for in the N. T. it denotes overreaching for one's own benefit as an act of covetousness properly so called, provided the context (as in ii. 11, by ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατανᾶ) does not furnish a more general reference. And, moreover, those acts of discipline, to which Paul is supposed to refer, were acts so completely personal on the part of the apostle, that the plural expression in our passage would be quite unsuitable. — οὐδένα] in the consciousness of innocence is with great emphasis prefixed three times; but we cannot, with Rückert, infer from this that the incestuous person is concealed under it. Ver. 3. Not for the sake of condemning do I say it, namely, what was said in ver. 2. I do not wish thereby to express any condemnatory judgment, as if, although we have done wrong to no one, etc., you failed in that love to which χωρήσατε ἡμᾶς lays claim. Κατάκρισιν was taken of the reproach of covetousness (so Theodoret, and comp. Emmerling and Neander), but this is an arbitrary importation into the word. According to Rückert, πρὸς κατάκρισιν is not to be supplemented by ὑμῶν, but Paul wishes here to remove the unpleasant impression of ver. 2, in which he confirms the severity of his former Epistle, so that there is to be regarded as object of κατάκρισις primarily the incestuous person, and secondarily the whole church, in so far as it has acted towards this man with unchristian leniency. This explanation falls to the ground with Rückert's view of ver. 2; the ἐστέ that follows puts it beyond doubt that ὑμῶν is really to be supplied with πρὸς κατακρ. for its explanation. According to de Wette, οὐ π. κατάκρ. λ. applies in form, no doubt, to ver. 2, but in substance more to the censure, of which the expostulatory tone of ver. 2 had created an expectation; in other words, it applies to something not really said, which is arbitrary, since what was said was fitted sufficiently to appear as κατάκρισις. — προείρηκα γάρ] for I have said before (vi. 11 f.), antea dixi, as 3 Macc. vi. 35, 2 Macc. xiv. 8, and often in classical writers. Comp. Eph. iii. 3. This contains the proof that he οὐ πρὸς κατάκρισιν λέγει; for, if he spoke now unto condemnation, he would contradict his former words. — ὅτι ἐν ταῖς καρδ. κ.τ.λ.] Comp. Phil i. 7. In vi. 11 f. he has expressed not these words, but their sense. By his adding the definition of degree, εἰς τὸ συναποθ. κ.τ.λ., Paul becomes his own interpreter. — εἰς τὸ συναποθανεῖν καὶ συζῆν] is usually taken (see still Rückert, de Wette, Ewald, also Osiander, who, however, mixes up much that is heterogeneous) as: so that I would die and live with you, and this as "vehementissimum amoris indicium, nolle nec in vita nec in morte ab eo quem ames separari," Estius, on which Grotius finely remarks: "egregius χαρακτήρ boni pastoris, Joh. x. 12." Comparison is made with the Horatian tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam lubens (Od. iii. 9. 24), and similar passages in Wetstein. But against this may be urged not only the position of the two words, of which the συναποθανεῖν must logically have been put last, but also the perfectly plain construction, according to which the subject of ἔστε must also be the subject of συναπ. and συζῆν: you are in our hearts in order to die and to live with (us),¹ i.e. in order not to depart from our hearts (from our love) in death, if it is appointed to us to die, and in life, if it is appointed to us to remain in life. For he, whom we love, dies and lives with us, when regarded, namely, from the idea of our heartfelt love to him, and from our sympathetic point of view feeling this consciousness of love which has him always present to our heart — a consciousness according to which we, dying and living, know him in our hearts as sharing death and life with us. And how natural that Paul, beset with continual deadly perils (vi. 9), should have put the συναποθανεῖν first! in which case συζῆν is to be referred to eternal life just as little as ζῶμεν in vi. 9 (Ambrosiaster, comp. Osiander). Hence the thought can as little surprise us, and as little appear "tolerably meaningless" (de Wette), as the conception of alter ego. Hofmann, too, with his objection ("since they, nevertheless, in fact do not die with him," etc.) mistakes the psychological delicacy and thoughtfulness of the expression; and wishes to interpret it — which no reader could have hit on (expressly as προεῖρ. does not point back further than to vi. 11) — from vi. 9 and iv. 11 to the effect that the life of the apostle is a continual dying, in which he yet remains always in life, and that consequently it is his life so constituted which the readers share, when they are in his heart.

Ver. 4. A further, and that a psychological, proof for the οὐ πρ. κατάκρ. λέγω. — παρρησία is the internal frame of mind, the good joyous confidence (see on Eph. iii. 12), without which no καύχησις, no self-boasting for the sake of the readers, would outwardly take place (ὑπέρ, as in v. 12, viii. 24). To take it of the libertas loquendi (Pelagius, Beza, Luther, Vatablus, Cornelius a Lapidé, and many others, including Schrader and Ewald) is inappropriate, because by the παρρησία in this sense there would be no negation of πρὸς κατάκρ. λέγειν. And the taking the καύχσις of inward boasting before God (Osiander), ought to have been precluded by ver. 14, comp. ix. 3. — πεπληρ. κ.τ.λ.] The two clauses form a climax, so that πεπλ. is correlative with ὑπερπερ. and παρακλ. with χαρᾶ. In the use of the article with παρακλ. and χαρᾶ Paul already looks to the special comfort and joy, of which he intends to speak further (ver. 7). The dative of the instrument (as at 2 Macc. vi. 5, vii. 21; 3 Macc. iv. 10) is used with πληρ. in the N. T. also at Rom. i. 29, and in classic Greek, though seldom. See Elmsley, ad Soph. Oed. Col. 16; Blomfield, Gloss. Aesch. Agam. 163; Bernhardt, p. 168. See Winer, p. 367 [E. T. 490].

Ver. 5. In all our tribulation, I say, for even after we had come to Macedonia we had no rest.—In this καί, even, Paul refers back to what was stated in ii. 12, 13; but it does not follow that with Flatt we should regard what lies between as a digression. — ἔσχηκεν] as in ii. 13. Still B F G K (not κ), Lachmann, have the reading ἔσχευ, which appears to be original and altered into accordance with ii. 13. — ἡ σὰρξ ἡμῶν] our flesh, denotes here, according to the connection, the purely human essence as determined by its corporeo-psychical nature, in its moral impotence and sensuous excitability, apart from the divine πνεῦμα, without whose influence even the moral nature of man (the human πνεῦμα with the νοῦς) lacks the capacity for determining and governing the ethical life. Comp. on Rom. iv. 1; John iii. 6. No doubt the expression in this passage seems not to agree with the τῷ πνεύματι μου in ii. 12; but there, where, besides, Paul is speaking simply of himself, he speaks only of inward unrest, of anxious thoughts in the moral consciousness; whereas here (where he includes also Timothy) he speaks of outward (ἔξωθεν μάχαι) and inward (ἔσωθεν φόβοι) assaults, so that that which lies, as it were, in the middle and is affected on both sides is the σάρξ.¹ Rückert brings in here also his groundless hypothesis regarding an illness of the apostle. — ἀλλ' ἐν παντί θλιβόμενοι] Paul continues as if he had written previously: οὐκ ἡμεθα ἀνεσιν ἔχοντες, or οὐκ ἐν ἀνέσει ἡμεθα, or οὐχ ἡσυχοὶ ἡμεθα, or the like. Quite similar departures from the construction are found also in the classics. See Matthiæ, p. 1293; Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 49. Comp. i. 7, εἰδότες, and the remark on it. It arises from vividness of excitement as the thought proceeds. Comp. Kühner, II. p. 617. Buttmann, neut. Gram. p. 256 [E. Chrysostom, Theophylact, Pelagius, Calvin, Grotius, Bengel, Wetstein, and others, also Schrader, explain ἔξωθεν and ἔσωθεν as extra and intra ecclesiam; and of this various interpretations are given; Chrysostom holding that the former applies to unbelievers, the latter to the weak brethren; Theodoret: that the former applies to the false teachers, the latter to the weak brethren; and Grotius: that the former applies to the Jews and heathen, the latter to the false teachers. But after ἡ σὰρξ ἡμῶν (see above), and on account of φόβοι, it is more in keeping with the context to refer it to the subject: from without struggles (with opponents, who may have been Christian or non-Christian), from within (from our own minds) fears. The latter are not defined more precisely; but it is in keeping with the contrast of χαρῆναι afterwards in ver. 7 to think of fears regarding the circumstances of the Corinthians, and in particular regarding the effect of his

¹ Ernesti, Urspr. d. Sünde, I. p. 56, has wrongly objected to this interpretation that Paul would have said ἡ ψυχὴ ἡμῶν. He might have done so, but there was no need for it; the σάρξ rather corresponds with the ἔξωθεν, most naturally as that which is first affected from without.

Vv. 6, 7. Τοὺς ταπεινούς] the lowly, i.e. the bowed down. This ὁ παρακαλῶν τοὺς ταπεινούς is a general designation of God, significant in its practical bearing (comp. i. 3), so that the suffering ἡμεῖς (in παρεκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς) belong to the category of the ταπεινοί. — ὁ θεός] is brought in later by way of attraction, because ὁ παρακαλῶν . . . παρεκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς were the chief conceptions. Comp. Ewald. The usual view, that Paul meant to say: through the comfort which he brought to me, for he related to me, etc., and thus wrote with logical inaccuracy, is as arbitrary as Hofmann's way of escaping the difficulty—for which he adduces erroneously 1 Thess. iii. 10—that it must have run properly (?) in the form of παρακληθεὶς ἀνγγεῖλεν. Certainly Titus had himself been comforted by what he saw in Corinth; but psychologically it was most natural that this "being comforted" on the part of Titus should be repeated and renewed by his communicating to Paul and Timothy his cheering observations and experiences, and so they too were comforted with the comfort which was afforded to Titus himself by the report which he was able to give. This interpretation—in which there is thus not to be assumed any blending of the comfort which Titus had felt in perceiving the improved state of matters at Corinth, and then in communicating it (Osiander)—is neither unnatural (Hofmann) nor turning on punctilious reflection (de Wette), but founded necessarily on the words, which Paul has not written otherwise, just because he has not conceived them otherwise. — ἐπιπόθησιν] longing, namely, to see me again among you. — ὀδυρόμεν] lamentation, for having saddened me so by the disorders tolerated in your church.

Comp. on Gal. iii. 26 and Fritzsche. Opusc. p. 245. — ὥστε με μᾶλλον χαρῆναι] so that I was all the more glad. The emphasis is on μᾶλλον (magis in Vulgate); on its meaning, all the more, comp. Nägelsbach on the Iliad, p. 227, ed. 3. The apostle's joy was made all the greater by the information longed for and received, since from it he learned how, in consequence of his letter, the Corinthians had on their part now met him with so much longing, pain, and zeal. Observe in this the emphatic prefixing, thrice repeated, of the ὑμῶν, which gives the key to this μᾶλλον χαρῆναι. The former Epistle had had its effect. He had previously had for them longing, pain, zeal; now, on their part, such longing, etc., had set in for him. Thus the position of things had happily changed on the part of the church, which before was so indifferent, and in part even worse, in its mood towards Paul. Billroth, following Bengel, takes it: so that I rather rejoiced, i.e. so that my former pain was not merely taken away, but was changed into joy. Comp. also Hofmann.¹ In this case μᾶλλον would be potius. But the very prefixing of the μᾶλλον, and still more the similarity of ver. 13, are against this. — Theophylact, we may add, has rightly remarked that Paul could with truth write as he does in this passage, inasmuch as he wisely leaves to the readers the distingue personas.

Ver. 8 f. Information regarding this μᾶλλον χαρῆναι, explaining the ground of it. With εἰ καὶ μετεμελόμην there begins a new protasis, the apodosis of which is νῦν χαίρω κ.τ.λ., so that the βλέπω γὰρ κ.τ.λ., which stands between, assigns parenthetically the ground of the protasis. For if I have even saddened you in my Epistle, I do not regret it; if I did regret it (which I have no wish to deny) formerly (and as I now perceive, not without ground, for I learn from the accounts of Titus that that Epistle, if even for a short time, has saddened you), now I am glad, etc. Comp. Luther; Rinck, Lucubr. crit. p. 162, and the punctuation of Lachmann and Tischendorf; also Kling. Only in this way of dividing and interpreting this passage does the explanatory statement advance in a simple logical way (1, I do not regret; 2, if I did previously regret, now I am glad), and the imperfect μετεμελ stand in right correlation with the present νῦν χαίρω, so that μετεμελόμην applies to the time before the present joyful mood was reached. The common punctuation, adopted also by Osiander and Hofmann, which connects εἰ καὶ μετεμελ with the previous words, and begins a new sentence with νῦν χαίρω, breaks asunder the logical connection and the correlation of the parts, and leaves βλέπω γὰρ κ.τ.λ. (which must be the reason assigned for οὐ μεταμέλομαι, as Hofmann also correctly holds, and not for ἐλύπησα ὑμᾶς, as Olshausen, de Wette, and others would make it) without any proper reference. Bengel, indeed, wishes to take εἰ καὶ before πρ. ὧρ. elliptically: "Contristavit vos, inquit, epistola tantummodo ad tempus vel potius ne ad tempus quidem." But it is not the bare εἰ καὶ which is thus used elliptically, but εἰ καὶ ἄρα, or more often εἴπερ ἄρα, even εἰ ἄρα (see Vigerus, ed. Herm. p. 514; comp. Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 440; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 521); further, πρὸς ὧραν must have logically stood before εἰ καὶ; lastly, the thought itself would be in the highest degree unsuitable, since Paul could not cast doubt on the genuine sadness of the readers (comp. ὀδυρμόν, ver. 7, and see ver. 9 ff.). The meaning would not be, as Bengel thinks, ἡθους apostolici plenissimum, but in contradiction with the context. Billroth would (and Chrysostom in a similar way) bring out a logical grounding of οὐ μεταμέλομαι by taking βλέπω as meaning: I take into consideration; ¹ "I take into consideration that it has saddened you, though only for a short time, as I had intended; by allowing yourselves to be saddened, you have shown that you are susceptible to amendment" (ii. 2). But in this way everything, in which the probative force is supposed to lie, is imported. This is the case also with Hofmann, who makes (comp. Bengel above) εἰ καὶ form by itself alone a parenthetical elliptic sentence, but in a concessive sense, so that the import of the whole is held to be: "Although the Epistle has saddened them, it is a temporary, not a permanent, sadness with which it has filled them. This the apostle sees, and he therefore does not regret that he has saddened them by it." Paul does not write in this enigmatical fashion; he would have said intelligibly: ἡ ἐπιστ. ἐκέλευ, εἰ καὶ ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς, πρὸς ὧραν ἐλύπησεν, or, at any rate, have added to εἰ καὶ the appropriate verb (comp. ver. 12). Such an elliptic εἰ καὶ is as unexampled as that which is assumed by Bengel, and both serve only to misconstrue and distort the meaning of the words. Rückert comes nearest to our view; he proposes to read βλέπων (as also Lachmann, Praef. p. xii., would), and to make the meaning: "That I have thus saddened you I do not regret, but although I regretted it (εἰ δὲ καὶ μετεμελόμην) when I saw that that Epistle had caused you . . . sadness, still I am glad now," etc. But apart from the very weak attestation for the reading βλέπων, and apart also from the fact that εἰ δὲ καὶ would be although, however, not but although, βλέπων . . . ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς would only contain a very superfluous and cumbrous repetition of the thought already expressed in the acknowledgment εἰ καὶ ἐλύπησα ὑμᾶς, since βλέπων would not apply to the insight gained from the news brought by Titus. Ewald has the peculiar view, which is simply an uncalled for and arbitrary invention, that Paul intended to write: for I see that that Epistle, though it saddened you for a short time, has yet brought you to a right repentance; but feeling this to be unsuitable, he suddenly changed the train of thought and went on: I am now glad, etc. Neander has a view quite similar.—On πρὸς ὧραν, comp. Philem. 15; Gal. ii. 5. The clause "although for a short time" is here a delicately thoughtful addition of sympathetic love, which has in view the fact that the sadness caused by it will only last up to the receipt of the present Epistle, which is intended to assure the readers of the apostle's pardon and joy (comp. ii. 4 ff.).

The transition to the first person singular is caused simply by the fact, that Paul now has in view the rebuke and injunction of the former Epistle, chap. v.

REMARK.—Some make an alteration in the meaning of εἰ καὶ μετεμελόμην: etiamsi poenituisset (Erasmus, Castalio, Vatablus, and others, including Flatt); or hold that poenitere is here equivalent to dolorem capere (Calvin, comp. Grotius); or suggest explanations such as: "Non autem dolere potuit de eo quod scripserit cum severitate propter schismata . . .; hoc enim omne factum instinctu divino per θεοπνευστίαν; sed quod contristati fuerint epistola sua et illi, quos illa increpatio adeo non tetigit," Calovius (comp. Grotius); or the more ingenious device of Beza: "ut significet apostolus, se ex epistola illa acerbius scripta nonnullum dolorem cepisse, non quasi quod fecerat optaret esse infectum, sed quod clementis patris exemplo se ad hanc severitatem coactum esse secum gemens, eventum rei expectaret." But these are forced shifts of the conception of mechanical inspiration. The Theopneustia does not put an end to the spontaneity of the individual with his varying play of human emotions; hence Wetstein is so far right in remarking: "Interpretes, qui putant, et consilium scribendi epistolam (rather of writing in so hard a vein of chastisement), et ejus consilii poenitentiam, et poenitentiae poenitentiam ab afflatu Spir. sancti fuisse profectam, parum consentanea dicere videntur." Not as if such alternation of moods testified against the existence of inspiration; but it attests its dependence on the natural conditions of the individual in the mode of its working, which was not only different in different subjects, but was not alike even in individuals where these were differently determined by outer and inner influences; so that the divine side of the Scripture does not annul the human, or make it a mere phantom, nor can it be separated from it mechanically. It is indissolubly blended with it.

Ver. 9. Νὺν χαλρῶ] see on ver. 8. To take the νὺν not in a temporal, but in a causal sense (proinde, jam vero, with Emmerling and Billroth), is quite at variance with the context, because the thought is implied in the previous clause: I no longer regret it. — οὐχ ὅτι ἔλυπ.] not regarding the sadness caused to you in itself. — κατὰ θεόν] according to God, i.e. in a way in keeping with the divine will. See on Rom. viii. 27. Bengel aptly remarks: "Secundum hic significat sensum animi Deum spectantis et sequentis." Not: by God's operation, which (in opposition to Hofmann) Paul never expresses by κατά (nor yet is it so even in 1 Pet. iv. 6); with the Greeks, however, κατὰ θεόν means according to divine disposal. — ἵνα ἐν μηδενὶ ζημιωθ. ἐξ ἡμῶν] not: ita ut, etc. (so Rückert), but the divinely-ordained aim of the previous ἐλυπήθητε κατὰ θεόν: in order that ye in no point (comp. vi. 3; Phil. i. 28; Jas. i. 4), in no sort of way (not even in the way of severe, saddening reproof), should have hurt (injury as to the Messianic salvation) from us, from whom, in fact, only the furtherance of your true welfare ought to proceed. See ver. 10. According to Osiander, ἐν μηδενί means: in no part of the Christian life (neither in the joyfulness of faith nor in purity of morals). At variance with the context: for to the matters negatived by ἐν μηδενί must belong the λύπη itself caused by him, which, had it not occurred κατὰ θεόν, would have injured the σωτηρία of the readers (ver. 10). — The clause of purpose is to be connected with the ἐλυπ. γ. κατὰ θεόν immediately preceding, which is no parenthetical remark, but is the regulative thought controlling what follows (in vv. 10, 11); wherefore ἵνα κ.τ.λ. is not, with Hofmann, to be attached to ἐλυπ. εἰς μετάνοιαν.

Ver. 10. Ground assigned for ἵνα ἐν μηδ. ζημιωθ. ἐξ ἡμῶν: for godly sadness works repentance unto salvation unregretted, i.e. unto the Messianic salvation, the attainment of which is not regretted. The connection of ἀμεταμέλ. with σωτηρίαν is held by Augustine and other Latin Fathers, following the Vulgate, which has stabilem,¹ and among modern expositors by Fritzsche, Billroth (yet doubtfully), Schrader, de Wette, Ewald; decidedly by Castalio also, but undecidedly by Erasmus, Annot. The more common connection is with μετάνοιαν, so as to give the antanaclasis poenitentiam non poenitendam (for similar collocations see Wetstein, comp. Pliny, Ep. vii. 10); οὐδείς γὰρ ἑαυτοῦ καταγνώσεται, ἐὰν λυπηθῇ ἐφ' ἁμαρτία, ἐὰν πενθήσῃ καὶ ἑαυτὸν συντρίψῃ, Chrysostom. But for such an antanaclasis Paul would not have chosen an adjective from quite a different root, but ἀμετανόητον (Lucian, Abd. 11, comp. also Rom. ii. 5), which is also the reading² of some minor authorities. And if ἀμεταμέλ. were to belong to μετάνοιαν, it would stand immediately by its side, so as to make εἰς σωτηρίαν appear as the result throwing light upon ἀμεταμέλ. When placed after εἰς σωτηρίαν, ἀμεταμέλ. is an epithet of μετάνοιαν no longer suitable, insipid, and halting. Olshausen and Hofmann wrongly object that the epithet is not suitable to the idea of salvation, the absolute good. It expresses by way of litotes the eternal satisfaction of the σωτηρία, and is selected with a glance back to what was said in ver. 8. If the apostle, namely, has caused a sadness which works a contrition unto a salvation exposed to no regret, it is obvious how this step of his can no longer give rise to any regret in his case, but can only make him joyful. Comp. on the expression itself, Rom. xi. 29, and especially Plato, Tim. p. 59 D: ἀμεταμέλητον ἡδονὴν κτᾶται, Legg. ix. p. 866 E; Polyb. xxi. 9. 11; Plutarch, Mor. p. 137 B; Socrates in Stob. 101, p. 552; Clem. Cor. I. 2. — ἡ δὲ τοῦ κόσμου λύπη] i.e. the sadness, however, which is felt by the world, by the ungodly-minded unbelievers. This is certainly λύπη διὰ χρήματα, διὰ δόξαν, διὰ τὸν ἀπελθόντα κ.τ.λ. (Chrysostom), in so far, namely, as the loss of outward advantage in and for itself determines the sadness,¹ but the genitive τοῦ κόσμου is the genitivus subjecti, and we must retain as the characteristic of this λύπη that it is not κατὰ θεόν (because it cannot be determined by the knowledge of God and of His will); hence, instead of working repentance unto salvation, it works despondency, despair, exasperation, obduracy, etc., unto death. Even διὰ χρήματα κ.τ.λ. there may be a sadness κατὰ θεόν. — θάνατον] i.e. not generally: "all that is embraced in a state of things not founded on God" (Hofmann), but, as the opposite of that unregretted σωτηρία, eternal death, the Messianic ἀπώλεια; comp. ii. 16. Calovius says aptly: "quia mundus dolet, cum affligitur, solatii ex verbo Dei expers ac fide destitutus." The exposition of veiling oneself to death (Theodoret), or the reference made by Grotius, Rosenmüller, and others to fatal diseases and suicide, is quite at variance with the context; and Ecclus. xxxviii. 18 has no bearing here. Even the ethical view (moral ruin through despair or new sins, de Wette, comp. Neander) is not in keeping with the contrast to σωτηρία; besides, Paul never uses θάνατος of ethical death. before infinitives is very common in classic writers. See Kühner, II. p. 330 ; Breitenb. ad Xen. Oec. 14. 10. — ὑμῖν] not : among you, but : vobis. — σπουδῇ] activity, namely, to efface and make amends for the offence, as opposed to their previous negligence in regard to the incestuous person. — ἀλλά] yea rather, imo, corrective, and thereby advancing beyond the last idea (comp. 1 Cor. iii. 2 ; John xvi. 2). Paul feels that he has said too little by using σπουδῇ. The co-ordinate repetition of ἀλλά before each point lays on each a special emphasis. Comp. on 1 Cor. vi. 11. — ἀπολογίαν] πρὸς ἐμέ, Chrysostom and Theophylact rightly say ; but we must at the same time observe that they have answered for themselves in the first instance to Titus, and through him to Paul (that they were not partakers in the guilt of the incestuous person). Billroth understands the de facto exculpation by the adjudging of punishment to the transgressor. An arbitrary view, and opposed to the context (ἐκδίκησιν). Ewald, in accordance with his assumption of a letter in reply now lost, refers it to the latter. — ἀγανάκτησιν] displeasure, vexation, that such a disgraceful thing had been carried on in the church. — φόβον] “ ne cum virga venirem ” (Bengel), namely, in the event of the state of things not being amended (1 Cor. iv. 21), or even of new transgressions. Comp. Chrysostom and Theophylact. The explanation : fear of God's punishments (Pelagius, Calvin, Platt, Olshausen), is at variance with the context (ἐπιπόθησ.). — ἐπιπόθ.] as in ver. 7, longing after the apostle's coming. — ζῆλον] not as in ver. 7, where ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ is associated with it, but, as is suggested by the following ἐκδίκησιν (punishment of the transgressor) : disciplinary zeal against the incestuous person, not zeal in general for the honour of Christ, of the church, and of the apostle (Osiander). The six objects introduced by ἀλλά go logically in pairs, so that ἀπολογ. and ἀγανάκτ. relate to the disgrace of the church, φόβον and ἐπιπόθ. to the apostle, and ζῆλον and ἐκδίκησιν to the incestuous person, the latter, however, without the arbitrary distinction drawn by Bengel, that ζῆλον refers to the good of his soul, and ἐκδικ. only to his punishment for his transgression. ζῆλος is the zeal for both. — ἐν παντὶ συνεστήσατε κ.τ.λ.] a judgment on the whole matter added asyndetically, and so with the more weight (Dissen, ad Pind. Exc. II. p. 278) : in every respect you have proved that you yourselves are innocent as regards the matter in question. By this the Corinthians are acquitted from positive participation in the offence; they could not be acquitted (comp. 1 Cor. v. 6) of a negative participation (through toleration and connivance), but this is not further touched on in accordance with his purpose, which is here throughout conciliatory. — ἐαυτοῦς] you for your own person, as opposed to the evil-doer. — On συνίστημι, with the accusative and infinitive, comp. Diod. Sic. i. 96, xiv. 45. Without εἶναι (comp. Gal. ii. 18) the attribute would appear as purely objective, as the proved fact; with εἶναι the expression is subjective, denoting the relation from the standpoint of the readers. Comp. in general, Krüger, § 65, 1. 4. — The dative τῷ πράγματι is that of ethical reference, expressing the matter with respect to which what is affirmed takes place. See Matthiae, p. 876; Bernhardt, p. 84. Comp. ἐλεύθεροι . . . τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ, Rom. vi. 20; Matt. v. 8. This, at the same time, in opposition to Rückert's assertion that ἐν (see the critical remarks) cannot be dispensed with. On the term itself, Bengel rightly remarks: "indefinite loquitur de re odiosa." Comp. ii. 5 ff.

Ver. 12. Ἀρα] therefore, for how natural was it for the readers to think that Paul had written on account of the ἀδικήσαντος and on account of the ἀδικηθέντος! And yet the effect which that part of the Epistle had produced on themselves had showed them by experience that the apostle's true purpose was quite different. So at least Paul represents the matter in a delicate and conciliatory way. — εἰ καὶ ἔγραψα ὑμῖν] if I have also written to you, i.e. have not kept silence, but have expressed myself by letter regarding the affair in question. Commonly a so, so sternly, or the like, is imported quite arbitrarily. Grotius indicates the right meaning: "si quid scripsi, nempe ea de re." Comp. Osiander. Those who assume an Epistle now lost between our first and second (Bleek, Neander, Ewald, Beyschlag, Hilgenfeld) find it here alluded to. Comp. ii. 3, 9. The apodosis already begins at οὐχ ἔβλεκεν κ.τ.λ., and does not follow only at διὰ τοῦτο (as Hofmann complicates it, without sufficient ground), the more especially as in this construction, according to Hofmann, διὰ τοῦτο does not apply to ver. 12—to which it must apply (comp. 1 Thess. iii. 7)—but to ver. 11. — οὐχ . . . ἀλλ'] is not non tam . . . quam (Erasmus, Estius, Flatt, and many others), but non . . . sed. Paul denies absolutely that he has written that part of the Epistle on account of the two persons mentioned. In the nature of the case, no doubt, he had to write against the ἀδικήσας, and so indirectly in favour of the ἀδίκηθεῖς; but the destined purpose of this letter, as Paul from the true light of his apostolic standpoint is aware, lay not in this aim affecting the two persons primarily concerned, but in its higher significance as bearing on the church's relation to the apostle: ἀλλ' εἵνεκεν τοῦ φανερωθῆναι κ.τ.λ. — Regarding the form εἵνεκεν, see on Luke iv. 18, and Kühner, I. p. 229, ed. 2. The ἀδικήσας is the incestuous person, and the ἀδίκηθεῖς his father, as the party grievously injured by the son's incestuous marriage with the step-mother. Theodoret, however, is quite arbitrary in supposing from this that he was already dead (καὶ τεθνεὼς γὰρ ἡδίκητο, τῆς εὐνῆς ὑβρισθείσης). See on 1 Cor. v. 1. This explanation of the ἀδίκηθεῖς seems from the relation of the two participles active and passive to be the only natural, and, in fact, necessary one. It is no objection that, in the first Epistle, nothing was said at length regarding the father and the wrong done to him (see only v. 1), since the censure and ordaining of chastisement to the transgressor of themselves practically contained the satisfaction to the injured father. Comp. on the passive ἀδικ. in the sense of infringing marriage-rights, Plut. Anton. 9; Eurip. Med. 267, 314; and see in general on ἀδικεῖν in reference to adultery, Dorvill. ad Charit. p. 468; Abresch, ad Xen. Eph., ed. Locella, p. 222. Others (Wolf, Storr, Emmerling, Osiander, Neander, Maier) think that Paul means himself, in so far as he had been deeply injured in his office by that transgression. But this mode of designating himself, set down thus without any more precise indication, would be strangely enigmatical, as well as marked by want of delicate tact (as if the readers were not ἀδίκηθέντες, like Paul!), and no longer suiting what was already said in ii. 5. The reference of τοῦ ἀδίκηθέντος to the apostle himself would only be right on the assumption that allusion is here made to the state of things discussed by Paul in an intermediate letter now lost.¹ Others

(Bengel, comp. Wolf also) think that the Corinthians are meant, but the singular is decisive against this view, even apart from the unsuitable meaning. Others have even referred τοῦ ἀδίκησ. and τοῦ ἀδικηθ. to the adulterer and the adulteress (Theophylact: ἀμφότεροι γὰρ ἀλλήλους ἡδίκησαν); others, again, have taken τοῦ ἀδικηθ. as neuter (Heinsius, Billroth), equivalent to τοῦ ἀδικήματος. The last is at variance with linguistic usage; and what sort of delicate apostolic tact would it have been, to say that he had not written on account of the deed! — ἀλλ' εἵνεκεν κ.τ.λ.] According to Lachmann's correct reading, as translated also by Luther (see the critical remarks): but because your zeal for us was to become manifest among you before God, i.e. but because I wished to bring it about that the zealous interest which you cherish for us should be brought to light among you before God (a religious expression of uprightness and sincerity, iv. 2). Comp. on the thought, ii. 9; πρὸς ὑμᾶς is the simple with you, among you, in the midst of you, in your church-life, not exactly in public meeting of the church (Ewald), which would have been indicated more precisely. Comp. 1 Cor. xvi. 7. Rückert, without due ground, finds the meaning of πρὸς ὑμᾶς so ambiguous that he prefers the Recepta, according to which the meaning is: because our zealous interest for you was to become manifest upon you before God. Comp. ii. 4. Hofmann, who rejects both the Recepta and the reading of Lachmann, and prefers that of κ: τ. σπουδὴν ὑμῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, takes this πρὸς ὑμᾶς even in a hostile sense: "You are to show yourselves diligent for yourselves and against yourselves;" the strict procedure of the church against its adherents is on the one hand an acting for themselves (ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν), and on the other hand an acting against themselves (πρὸς ὑμᾶς). This artificial interpretation is wrong, because, if πρὸς could mean contra here, Paul must have written at least τὴν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν τε καὶ πρὸς ὑμᾶς, and because πρὸς with σπουδή (Heb. vi. 11; Herod. iv. 11. 1; Diod. xvii. 114) and with σπουδάξω (Dem. 515. 23, 617. 10) has not that arbitrarily assumed sense, in it by public accusations. Comp. Hilgenfeld in his Zeitschr. 1864, p. 160, 1865, p. 252, according to whom Paul is the ἀδικηθείς, because things had in the meanwhile come to a pronounced rejection of his apostolic repute. According to Beyschlag in the Stud. u. Krit. 1865, p. 254, Timothy is meant, who was personally insulted by a spokesman in the ranks of the opponents.

but the sense of an interest for some one, though this is more commonly expressed by περί. If the reading of κ were right, it would have to be explained simply: in order that your zeal, in which you aim at your own good, should become manifest among you before God. Had Paul wished to express the singular meaning which Hofmann imports, he would have known how to write: τὴν σπουδὴν ὑμῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν τε καὶ καθ' ὑμῶν.

See Bernhardt, p. 222; Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. vi. 5. 18.

REMARK.—According to the Recepta διὰ τοῦτο παρακεκλήμεθα ἐπὶ τῇ παρακλήσει ὑμῶν περισσοτέρως δὲ μᾶλλον κ.τ.λ., the first ἐπὶ is through, properly on account of, just as in ἐπὶ τῇ χαρᾷ Τίτου, so that the παρακλήσεις ὑμῶν is that which causes the παρακεκλήμεθα (Winer, p. 368 [E. T. 491]); but ὑμῶν is not, with Flatt, de Wette, and many others, to be explained: by the consolation, which you have afforded to me, but: “consolatione vestri” (Luther, Beza, Cornelius a Lapide, Bengel, and most), i.e. by your being comforted over the pain, which my Epistle caused to you, now by means of the happy change which it has produced among you (ver. 11). The two genitives, namely ὑμῶν and Τίτου, must be taken uniformly. On the state of the case delicately denoted by παρακλ. ὑμῶν Calvin aptly remarks: “Nam correctionis acerbitas facile dulcescit, simulatque gustare incipimus, quam nobis fuerit utilis." Michaelis, on the other hand, objects that what follows will then be discourteous; but the seeming discourtesy disappears before the reason for Titus' joy, and is amply outweighed by ver. 14. According to Reiche, Comm. crit. I. p. 370, the παράκλησις ὑμῶν means the admonitio et castigatio given in the first Epistle, for the sharpness and severity of which Paul is now consoled by the happy result. But after παρακεκλήμεθα, according to the analogy, moreover, of ἐχάρημεν ἐπὶ τῇ χαρῇ, as well as in accordance with vv. 4 and 6, παράκλησις cannot be otherwise taken than as solatium.

Ver. 14 f. Polite statement of the reason why the joy of Titus had rejoiced him so greatly. — εἴ τι αὐτῷ ὑπὲρ ὑμ. κεκαυχ.] Comp. ix. 2. See 1 Cor. i. 4 ff. He had, in fact, founded the church and laboured so long in it, and they were in his heart, vii. 3. — οὐ κατησχύνθη] This κατησχ. would have taken place, if Titus had experienced among you an opposite state of things, contradicting the truth of my καύχησις. No doubt Paul is here making a passing allusion to the attack on his veracity (comp. i. 17 ff.), and that in such a way as emphatically to confront it with, first, what was said by him (πάντα . . . ἡ καύχησις ἡμῶν), and then the persons to whom he spoke (ὑμῖν . . . ἡ ἐπὶ Τίτου). Chap. viii. and ix. The second chief division of the Epistle : regarding the collection for the poor in Jerusalem (1 Cor. xvi.), coming very fitly after the praise contained in chap. vii., and having the way appropriately paved for it in particular by the closing words, vii. 16.

Vv. 1-6. The beneficence of the Macedonians has been shown beyond all expectation ; hence we have exhorted Titus to complete among you the work already begun.

Ver. 1. The δέ is the mere μεταβατικόν, leading over to a new topic in the Epistle. Comp. 1 Cor. vii. 1, viii. 1, xii. 1, xv. 1. — τὴν χάριν τ. θεοῦ τὴν δεδομ. κ.τ.λ.] the grace of God, which is given in the churches of Macedonia, i.e. how graciously God has wrought in the churches of Macedonia, inasmuch as He (see ver. 2) called forth in them so great liberality. Comp. ix. 14. The expression rests on the idea, that such excellent dispositions and resolves are produced and nourished, not by independent spontaneity, but by the grace of God working on us (operationes gratiae). Comp. Phil. ii. 13. Paul, therefore, does not think of the grace of God as shown to himself (Origen, Erasmus, who paraphrases it: "quemadmodum adfuerit mihi Deus in ecclesiis Maced.;" comp. Zachariae, Emmerling, Billroth, Wieseler, Chronol p. 357 ff.; also Rückert, yet with hesitation),—in which case he could not but have added ἐμοί or ἡμῖν, in order to make himself understood,—but, on the contrary, as granted to the liberal churches, working in them the communicative zeal of love, so that the construction with ἐν is quite as in ver. 16 and i. 22.

Ver. 2. A more precise explanation of τὴν χάριν κ.τ.λ., so that ὅτι (that, namely) is dependent on γνωρίζομεν. This exposition consists, as was seen by Chrysostom, Theodoret, Erasmus, Luther, Grotius, and many others, of two statements, so that after τῆς χαρᾶς αὐτῶν we must mentally supply the simple ἐστὶ.¹ This scheme of the passage, which Osiander and Hofmann also follow, is indicated by ἡ περισσέλα in the one half, and ἐπερίσσευσεν in the other, whereby two parallel predicative relations are expressed, as well as by the fact that, if the whole be taken as one sentence, and consequently ἡ περισσ. τ. χαρᾶς αὐτῶν be taken along with the following καὶ ἡ κατὰ βάθους πτωχεία αὐτῶν as the subject of ἐπερίσσευσεν (so by most expositors since Beza), this subject would embrace two very diverse elements, and, besides, there would result the combination not elsewhere occurring: ἡ περισσεία ἐπερίσσευσεν. Hence it is to be explained: that, namely, in much attestation of affliction the abundance of their joyfulness is, i.e. that, while they are much put to the test by sufferings, their joy is plentifully present, and (that) their deep poverty became abundant unto the riches of their single-heartedness, i.e. that they, in their deep poverty, plentifully showed how rich their single-heartedness was. — ἐν πολλῇ δοκιμῇ θλίψεως] Instead of writing simply ἐν πολλῇ θλίψει, Paul designates this situation according to the wholesome moral aspect, in which it showed itself amongst the Macedonians to their praise. Δοκιμή, namely, is here also not: trial, but, as Paul always uses it, verification (Rom. v. 4; 2 Cor. ii. 9, ix. 13, xiii. 3; Phil. ii. 22). Chrysostom aptly says: οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀπλῶς ἐθλίβησαν, ἀλλ' οὕτως ὡς καὶ δόκιμοι γενέσθαι διὰ τῆς ὑπομονῆς. The verification of their Christian character, which the θλίψις effected in them, was just the moral element, in which the joyfulness πολλῇ καὶ ἄφατος ἐβλάστησεν ἐν αὐτοῖς (Chrysostom), and existed among them in spite of the θλίψις itself, which, moreover, would have been calculated to produce the opposite of χαρά. Regarding the θλίψις of the Macedonians, see 1 Thess. i. 6, ii. 14 ff.; Acts xvi. 20 ff., xvii. 5. The χαρά, the virtue of Christian gladness of soul, rising above all afflictions (Gal. v. 22; 2 Cor. vi. 10; Rom. xiv. 17; comp. on John xv. 11), is not yet defined here more precisely as regards its special expression, but is already brought into prominence with a view to the second part of the verse, consequently to the liberality which gladly distributes (ix. 7; Acts xx. 35). — ἡ κατὰ βάθους πτωχεία] the deep poverty,¹ literally, that which has gone down to the depth (Winer, p. 357 [E. T. 477]); comp. βάθος κακῶν, Aesch. Pers. 718, Hel. 303; ἐς κίνδυνον βαθύν, Pind. Pyth. iv. 368, and the like; Blomfield, ad Aesch. Pers. Gloss. 471. The opposite is βαθύπλουτος, Ellendt, Lex. Soph. I. p. 286. — ἐπερίσσευσεν] became abundant, i.e. developed an exceedingly great activity, and this εἰς τὸν πλοῦτον κ.τ.λ.,¹ unto the riches of their singleness of heart. This is the result (Rom. iii. 7 ; 2 Cor. ix. 8) of the ἐπερίσσω; so that their simple, upright spirit showed itself as rich, in spite of their poverty, through the abundance of kind gifts which they distributed. Note the skill and point of the antithetic correlation purposely marking the expressions in the two parts of the verse. — The ἀπλότης² is the upright simplicity of heart (Eph. vi. 5 ; Col. iii. 22) ; honestly and straightforwardly it contributes what it can to the work of love without any selfish design or arrière pensée (as e.g. the widow with her mite). Comp. on xii. 8. And so it is rich, even with deep poverty on the part of the givers. The genitive is, as in περισσειά τῆς χαρ., the genitivus subjecti, not objecti (rich in simplicity), as Hofmann, following older commentators, holds. The αὐτῶν is against this latter view, for either it would have been wanting, or it would have been added to πλοῦτον, because it would belong to that word.

Vv. 3-5. Ὅτι is not dependent on γνωρίζομεν (Hofmann), but gives the proof of what was just said : εἰς τὸν πλοῦτον τῆς ἀπλ. αὐτ. — The construction is plain ; for there is no need to supply an ἦσαν, as many wish, after αὐθαίρετοι or after δεόμενοι, but, as Bengel aptly remarks : "ἔδωκαν . . . totam periochae structuram sustinet." Comp. Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 49 ; Billroth, Ewald, Osiander, Hofmann. There are, namely (and in accordance therewith the punctuation is to be fixed), four modal definitions attached to this ἔδωκαν : They gave (1) according to and beyond their means ; (2) of their own impulse ; (3) urgently entreating us for the χάρις and κοινωνία κ.τ.λ. ; and (4) not as we hoped, but themselves, etc. This last modal definition is naturally and quite logically attached by καί (hence καὶ οὐ καθὼς ἡλπίσω) ;

² Hofmann conjectures that the prominence given to the ἀπλότης was called forth by the want of it among the Achaean Christians. In this case there would be in it a side-allusion, which is not justified in what follows. But the ἀπλότης, which had shown itself among the Macedonians in a specially high degree, was to serve them as an example, by way of stimulating emulation, not exactly of putting them to shame.

and Rückert (comp. de Wette and Neander) is arbitrary in holding this καί to prove that Paul allowed the sentence he had begun to drop, and appended a new one, so that after ἡλπίσαμεν we should have to supply an ἐγένετο or ἐποίησαν. — μαρτυρῶ] I testify it, a parenthetic assurance. Comp. the Greek use of οἶμαι and the like (Bornem. ad Xen. Conv. p. 71, 179; Stallb. ad Plat. Gorg. p. 460 A). — παρὰ δύναμιν] i.e. more amply than was accordant with their resources. See Homer, Il. xiii. 787; Thucyd. i. 70. 2; Lucian. Nigr. 28, de Dom. 10. The same, in substantial meaning, is ὑπὲρ δύναμιν, i. 8; Dem. 292. 25. It forms, with κατὰ δύναμιν, a climactic definition of ἔδωκαν, not of αὐθαίρ., to which it is not suitable. — αὐθαίρετοι] excludes human persuasion or compulsion, not the divine influence (see ver. 5, διὰ θελήματος θεοῦ); we must not, with Rückert, hold it, on account of the remark ix. 2, to be an exaggeration, since the latter notice does not deny the self-determination of the Macedonians, but, when compared with our passage, exhibits as the real state of the case this, that Paul had boasted of the readiness of the Achaeans before the Macedonians, but without exhortation to the latter, and that these thereupon, of their own accord, without urging, had resolved on making a contribution, and had given very amply. Comp. Chrysostom on ix. 2. αὐθαίρετος, free-willed, self-determined, only here and at ver. 17 in the N. T., often in the classic writers; seldom of persons (Xen. Anab. v. 7. 29; Lucian. Catapl. 4). Comp. the adverb in 2 Macc. vi. 19; 3 Macc. vi. 6. — μετὰ πολλῆς . . . εἰς τ. ἀγίους] to be taken together: with much exhortation entreating us for the kindness and the participation of the service being rendered for the saints, i.e. urgently entreating us that the kindness might be shown them of permitting them to take active part in the . . . work of collections. Οὐχ ἡμεῖς αὐτῶν ἐδεήθημεν, ἀλλ' αὐτοὶ ἡμῶν, Chrysostom; and in the κοινωνία sought they saw a kindness to be shown to themselves: they knew how to value the work of love thus highly. The χάρις, namely, here is not grace from God (Hofmann and the older commentators), since it was requested from the apostle, but τὴν χάριν κ. τ. κοινων. is a true ἐν διὰ δυνάμει (the favour, and indeed the partaking, i.e. the favour of partaking). See Fritzsche, ad Matth. p. 854, and generally, Nägelsbach on Il. iii. 100, p. 461, ed. 3. Bengel, who likewise rejects the δέξασθαι ἡμᾶς of the Recepta, connects τὴν χάριν κ. τὴν κοινωνίαν κ.τ.λ. with ἔδωκαν; but what a prolix designation of the withal quite self-evident object of ἔδωκαν would that be, while δεόμενοι ἡμῶν would remain quite open and void of definition! On δεῖσθαι, with accusative of the thing and genitive of the person, comp. Plato, Apol. p. 18 A, p. 41 E; Xen. Cyrop. i. 4. 12; Anab. vii. 3. 5; 3 Esd. viii. 53. Yet in the classics the accusative of the object is the neuter of a pronoun, like τοῦτο ὑμῶν δέομαι; ὅπερ ὑμῶν δέομαι, and the like, or of an adjective (Krüger on Thuc. i. 32. 1). — τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους] In this addition (comp. 1 Cor. xvi. 1), which would in itself be superfluous, there lies a motive of the δεόμενοι. — καὶ οὐ καθὼς ἠλπίσσαμεν] for but a little could be expected from the oppressed and poor Macedonians! Οὐ περὶ τῆς γνώμης λέγει, ἀλλὰ περὶ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν χρημάτων, Theodoret. According to Hofmann, the words are meant only to affirm that the Macedonians had joined in the contribution quite of their own resolution, which had not been expected by the apostle. But in this case the remark, which on this interpretation would be no independent element, but only the negative expression of what was already said in αὐθαίρετοι, would have had its logical position immediately behind αὐθαίρετοι; and it must have run not as it is written by Paul, but: καθὼς οὐκ ἠλπίσσαμεν. No, the apostle says: and their giving did not remain within the limits of the hope which we had formed regarding them, but far surpassed these (ἀλλ' ἑαυτοὺς κ.τ.λ.). — ἀλλ' ἑαυτοὺς κ.τ.λ.] but themselves they gave, etc. An expression of the highest Christian readiness of sacrifice and liberality, which, by giving up all individual interests, is not only a contribution of money, but a self-surrender, in the first instance, to the Lord, since in fact Christ is thereby served, and also to him who conducts the work of collection, since he is to the giver the organ of Christ. Flatt and Billroth, following Mosheim and Heumann, are wrong in making πρῶτον before in the sense: before I asked them. This reference is not in the least implied in the immediate context (οὐ καθὼς ἠλπίσ.); and if it were, πρῶτον must have had the first place:¹ ἀλλὰ πρῶτον ἑαυτοὺς ἔδωκαν κ.τ.λ. As the words stand, ἑαυτοὺς has the emphasis of the contrast with οὐ καθὼς ἡλπίς. Bengel also (comp. Schrader) is wrong in thinking that in πρώτον there is implied prae munere: the Macedonians, before they made collection, had first given themselves to the Lord, and then left it to the apostle to determine how large their contribution should be. In that case there must have been inserted καὶ τὰ χρήματα ἡμῶν, or something similar, as a correlative to ἑαυτοὺς πρώτον τῷ κυρίῳ. It is wrong to find in ἑαυτοὺς the idea merely of voluntarily,¹ without any summons, because it is object of the having given. It must have run: αὐτοὶ ἑαυτοὺς κ.τ.λ. (comp. i. 9), or without stress on the self-object, ἀφ' ἑαυτῶν. — καὶ ἡμῖν] Paul does not say ἔπειτα ἡμῖν (in opposition to the usual opinion that καί stands for ἔπειτα; so also Rückert), because the surrender to the Lord is not a præ in time, but in degree: to the Lord before all, and to us. So Rom. i. 16, ii. 9, 10. — διὰ θελήμ. θεοῦ] not exactly an expression of modesty (Billroth),—for it is only arbitrary to limit it merely to καὶ ἡμῖν (so also Bengel, Ewald),—but added quite according to the requirement of religious feeling: for God has, according to His will, so wrought on their dispositions, that they, etc. Comp. vv. 1, 16.

Ver. 6. In order that we should exhort Titus, etc. Comp. ver. 17. εἰς τό with the infinitive is here, as in all passages (see on Rom. i. 20), to be taken, not as so that (so usually, and by Winer), but as telic: in order that. Comp. Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. vii. 8. 20. Certainly the παρακαλέσαι ἡμᾶς Τίτον κ.τ.λ. was a consequence of the beyond expectation successful course of the matter in Macedonia, in accordance with which Paul might promise himself no less a success among the Corinthians; but delicately and piously he presents the state of the case, as if this further prosecution of the work of collection, amidst the self-sacrificing liberality of the Macedonians effected by the divine will, had lain in God's purpose, and was therefore a consequence that had been aimed at by God. This flows from the διὰ θελήμ. θεοῦ immediately preceding. Comp. Hofmann also. Paul sees in the fact, that the divinely-willed success of the collecting work in Macedonia has encouraged him to the continuance of it expressed in ver. 6, the fulfilment of the divine counsel and will, which he is thereby serving. — ἵνα] Design in the παρακαλέσαι, and consequently its contents. — καθὼς προενήρξατο] as he formerly has begun, without doubt during his sojourn in Corinth after our first Epistle, see Introd. § 1. The word is indeed without example elsewhere, but it is formed from ἐνάρχομαι, after the analogy of προάρχω and others. — οὕτω καὶ ἐπιτελέσῃ εἰς ὑμᾶς] so also might complete it among you. The emphasis lies, as before on προενήρξατο, so here on ἐπιτελέσῃ. With the verb of rest εἰς associates the thought of the previous arrival, so that ἐλθὼν may for clearness be supplied. See Kühner, § 622 b; Jacobs, ad Anthol. XIII. p. 71, Ellendt, Lex. Soph. I. p. 537. The correlation of ἐνάρχεσθαι and ἐπιτελεῖν is simply as in Phil. i. 6, Gal. iii. 3; we should anticipate (ix. 12) by importing the idea of sacrifice (Osiander). — καὶ τὴν χάριν ταύτην] not hanc quoque gratiam (Beza, Calvin, comp. Castalio), but: etiam gratiam istam (Vulgate). For also belongs to τὴν χάριν, not to ταύτην. He shall complete among you—in addition to whatever else he has already begun and has still to complete—also this benefit. This better suits the context, namely, the connection of the οὕτω καὶ ἐπιτελ. with καθὼς προενήρξατο, than the interpretation of Estius: “dicit etiam, ut innuat Titum alia quaedam apud ipsos jam perfecisse.” So also Flatt. It is quite superfluous to invoke, with Hofmann, an involution of two sentences in order to explain the double καί. And since καί refers to the activity of Titus, Billroth is wrong in explaining it: “they are to distinguish themselves in this good deed, as in all things.” — The work of collection is designated as χάρις, for on the side of the givers it was a showing of kindness, a work of love, an opus charitativum. Observe that here and in vv. 4, 19, θεοῦ is not added, as in ver. 1, ix. 14, according to which Hofmann and older commentators explain it here also of the divine grace, of which they are made worthy through the service rendered.

Vv 7-15. Encouragement to associate with their other Christian excellences distinction also in this work of love, which he says not in the form of a command, but to test their love—for they knew indeed the pattern of love in Christ—and by way of advice (vv. 7-9). For this is serviceable for them, inasmuch as they had already made the beginning. Now, however, they were not to fail of completing their work, namely, according to their means; for it was not intended that others should be at ease while they were in want, but that a relation of equality should be established (vv. 10-15).

Ver. 7. 'Ἄλλ'] is not equivalent to οὖν (Beza and others, also Flatt), nor to agedum (Emmerling), but is the Latin at, breaking off the preceding statement, like the German doch. Hermann, ad Viger. p. 812, aptly says: "Saepe indicat, satis argumentorum allatum esse." Comp. Baeumlein, Partik. p. 15. Olshausen has a more far-fetched idea, that it is corrective: yea rather. And Billroth imports quite arbitrarily: "When I entreated Titus, I knew beforehand that this time also you would not deceive me, but that, as you are distinguished in all that is good, so also you would zealously further this collection;" and Rückert also (similarly Calvin): "I have entreated Titus, etc.; yet let it not happen that he should need first to encourage you (?), yea rather, etc." According to Hofmann, ἄλλά forms the transition to the οὐ κατ' ἐπιταγὴν λέγω which follows in ver. 8; but this supposes a very involved construction (comp. afterwards on ἵνα κ.τ.λ.). — ὥσπερ ἐν παντὶ κ.τ.λ.] as you in every relation are abundant (excellitis) through faith (strength, fervour, and efficacy of faith), and discourse (aptitude in speaking), and knowledge (see regarding both on 1 Cor. i. 5), and every diligence ("studium ad agendas res bonas," Grotius), and your love to us, so should you abound in showing this kindness. If πιστεῖ κ.τ.λ. be taken as a specification of ἐν παντί (Luther, Grotius, and most), the meaning is more uncertain, since ἐν is not repeated. Comp. vi. 4; 1 Cor. i. 5; it comes in again only before ταύτη τ. χάρις. Grotius aptly remarks: "non ignoravit P. artem rhetoricum, movere laudando." Amidst the general praise, however, he wisely here also leaves the distingue personas to the feeling of the readers. — τῇ ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐν ὑμῖν ἀγάπῃ] Paul here conceives the active love as something issuing from the disposition of the person loving, and adhering to the person loved. Thus he felt the love of the Corinthians to him in his heart; comp. vii. 3. This view alone suits the context, inasmuch as the other points mentioned are points purely subjective, belonging to the readers, and serving to recommend them; hence we are not to understand it as the love dwelling in the apostle, but owing its origin to the readers (Hofmann). Calvin aptly remarks: "Caritatem erga se commemorat, ut personae quoque suae respectu illis addat animos." On the form of the expression, comp. Winer, p. 181 f. [E. T. 241].—ἵνα καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ χάριτι περισσ.] A periphrasis for the imperative, to be explained by supplying a verb of summoning, on which ἵνα depends in the conception of the speakers. See Buttmann, p. 208 [E. T. 241]; Fritzsche, ad Matth. p. 840, ad Marc. p. 179. In the old Greek ὅπως is used in the very same way (ἵνα late and seldom, as in Epictetus, Dissert. iv. 1. 142). See Matthiae, p. 1187; Viger. ed. Herm. pp. 435, 791 f.; Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 148. According to Grotius and Bengel, whom Hofmann follows, the connecting of ἵνα κ.τ.λ. with the following οὐ κατ' ἐπιταγὴν λέγω would yield 'no unsuitable sense (in opposition to Rückert); but the construction of the passage in vv. 7 and 8, so as to form one period, would be a construction assumed without sufficient ground, ill-arranged and ambiguous, and would not accord with the apostle's way of beginning a new sentence by οὐ . . . λέγω in order to guard against an incorrect judgment of the previous one (vii. 3; 1 Cor. iv. 14. Comp. 2 Cor. v. 12).—In καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ χάριτι, ταύτῃ has the emphasis (it was otherwise in ver. 6); also in this showing of kindness, as in other works of beneficence,—which was embraced in ἐν παντί.

Ver. 8. Prudent and yet deeply stirring caveat in reference to what was said in ver. 7. Not by way of command do I say it, but as, through the diligence of others, testing also the genuine nature of your love.—διά] "aliorum studio vobis commemorato," Bengel.—ἐτέρων] of members of extraneous churches.—τὸ γνήσιον] the genuineness. See Kühner, II. p. 122; Dissen, ad Pind. Nem. p. 452.—δοκιμάζειν] is here, too (comp. on 1 Cor. xi. 28), not probatum reddere (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Estius), but explorare; for by the result, which the setting forth of the Macedonian example would have on the Corinthians, it had to be shown whether, and how far, their brotherly love was genuine or not. The participle does not depend on ver. 10 (Bengel), but on λέγω, which is to be supplied again after ἀλλά. λέγω with the participle: I say it, inasmuch as I thereby, etc. Comp. on 1 Cor. iv. 14.

Ver. 9. Parenthesis which states what holy reason he has for speaking to them, not κατ' ἐπιταγὴν, but in the way just mentioned, that of testing their love. For you know, indeed (γινώσκετε not imperative, as Chrysostom and others think), what a high pattern of gracious kindness you have experienced in yourselves from Jesus Christ. So the testing, which I have in view among you, will only be imitation of Christ. Olshausen rejects here the conception of pattern, and finds the proof of possibility: "Since Christ by His becoming poor has made you rich, you also may communicate of your riches; He has placed you in a position to do so." The outward giving, namely, presupposes the disposition to give as an internal motive, without which it would not take place. But in this view πλουτήσητε would of necessity apply to riches in loving dispositions, which, however, is not suggested at all in the context, since in point of fact the consciousness of every believing reader led him to think of the whole fulness of the Messianic blessings as the aim of Christ's humiliation, and to place in that the riches meant by πλουτήσητε. — ὅτι δι' ὑμᾶς κ.τ.λ.] that He for your sakes, etc., epeexegetical of τὴν χάριν τ. κυρ. ἡμ. Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. The emphatic δι' ὑμᾶς brings home to the believing consciousness of the readers individually the aim, which in itself was universal. — ἐπτώχευσεν] inasmuch as He by His humiliation to become incarnate emptied Himself of the participation, which He had in His pre-existent state, of God's glory, dominion, and blessedness (πλούσιος ὢν), Phil. ii. 6. On the meaning of the word, comp. LXX. Judg. vi. 6, xiv. 15; Ps. xxxiv. 10, lxxix. 8; Prov. xxiii. 21; Tob. iv. 21; Antiphanes in Becker's Anecd. 112. 24. The aorist denotes the once-occurring entrance into the condition of being poor, and therefore certainly the having become poor (although πτωχεύειν, as also the classical πειέσθαι, does not mean to become poor, but to *be*¹ poor), and not the whole life led by Christ in poverty and lowliness, during which He was nevertheless rich in grace, rich in inward blessings; so Baur² and Köstlin, Lehrbegr. d. Joh. p. 310, also Beyschlag, Christol. p. 237. On the other hand, see Raebiger, Christol. Paul. p. 38 f.; Neander,

ed. 4, p. 801 f.; Lechler, Apost. Zeit. p. 50 f.; Weiss, Bibl. Theol. pp. 312, 318. — ὧν] is the imperfect participle: when He was rich, and does not denote the abiding possession (Estius, Rückert); for, according to the context, the apostle is not speaking of what Christ is, but of what He was,¹ before He became man, and ceased to be on His self-exinanition in becoming man (Gal. iv. 4; this also in opposition to Philippi, Glaubensl. IV. p. 447). So also ὑπάρχων, Phil. ii. 6. — ἵνα ὑμεῖς . . . πλουτήσητε] in order that you through His poverty might become rich. These riches are the reconciliation, justification, illumination, sanctification, peace, joy, certainty of eternal life, and thereafter this life itself, in short, the whole sum of spiritual and heavenly blessings (comp. Chrysostom) which Christ has obtained for believers by His humiliation even to the death of the cross. Πλουτεῖν means with the Greek writers, and in the N. T. (Rom. x. 12; Luke xii. 21), to be rich; but the aorist (1 Cor. iv. 8) is to be taken as with ἐπτώχευσε. Ἐκείνου, instead of the simple αὐτοῦ (Krüger, ad Xen. Anab. iv. 3. 30; Dissen, ad Dem. de cor. p. 276, 148), has great emphasis: “magnitudinem Domini innuit,” Bengel. — In opposition to the interpretation of our passage, by which ἐπτώχ. falls into the historical life, so that πλούσιος ὧν is taken potentialiter as denoting the power to take to Himself riches and dominion, which, however, Jesus has renounced and has subjected Himself to poverty and self-denial (so Grotius and de Wette), see on Phil. ii. 6.

Ver. 10 After the parenthesis in ver. 9, a continuation of the ἀλλὰ . . . δοκιμάζων, ver. 8: and an opinion I give in this affair. Γνώμην, opinion, has the emphasis, as contrasting with ἐπιταγήν in ver. 8. Comp. on 1 Cor. vii. 25. — τοῦτο γὰρ ὑμῖν συμφέρει] συμφέρει does not mean deceit (Vorstius, Emmerling, who appeals to LXX. Prov. xix. 10, where, however, the translation is inaccurate), but: it profits. And τοῦτο is not, with most, including Rückert, de Wette, Ewald, Neander, to be referred to the supplying of charitable gifts, in which case συμφέρει is either left without more precise definition (Rückert: “like every good deed, bringing advantage”), or is interpreted as pointing to the advantage of good repute (Grotius, comp. also Hofmann), of the divine recompense (Calovius) and the moral advantage (Flatt), or as useful for salvation (Bisping), and so on. Τοῦτο γὰρ ὑμ. συμφ. contains, in fact, the ground why Paul proceeds in this matter merely by way of advising; hence, with Billroth, Osiander, and Kling, τοῦτο is to be referred to the previous γνώμην . . . δίδωμι. It is no objection to this, that in ἐν τούτῳ immediately before the pronoun referred to the distribution. For in the previous clause γνώμην δίδωμι contained the whole thought, and ἐν τούτῳ had no stress laid on it, not even needing to be inserted. Accordingly: for this—that I do not command you, but only give my opinion in the matter—is serviceable to you, is fitted to operate in the way of moral improvement on you, as being persons who have already shown yourselves to be such as need not command, but only counsel. The emphasis lies primarily on τοῦτο and next on ὑμῖν. According to Hofmann, who does not take ver. 9 parenthetically, in καὶ γνώμην κ.τ.λ. there is meant to follow something new and further, so that both ἐν τούτῳ and subsequently τοῦτο point to the advice, which Paul intends to give (with the following . . . what follows), and this advice is expressed in the imperative clause ver. 11, to which οὔτινες κ.τ.λ. belongs as a protasis. Against this confusion it may be decisively urged, first, that the ἐν τούτῳ emphatically pointing forward must have been placed first; secondly, that after δίδωμι there would come not at all the announced γνώμη, but in the first instance an argumentative parenthetical clause, which would again begin with "what follows,"—a course which could only lead the reader astray; thirdly, that if τοῦτο γ. ὑμῖν συμφέρει does not go with οὔτινες κ.τ.λ., and find its more precise explanation therein, it would interpolate a thought altogether indefinite and isolated; fourthly, that δέ after νυνί in ver. 11 most naturally introduces a new sentence; lastly, that ver. 11 has not in the least the form of a γνώμη, of an expression of opinion, but a form purely praeceptive, as, indeed, that which the apostle has put under the considerate point of view of a testing and a γνώμη in contrast to an ἐπιταγή, was already contained in ver. 7 and has nothing more to do with the direct precept of ver. 11.—οὔτινες] ut qui, includes the specifying of the reason. See on Eph. iii. 13. οὐ μόνον τὸ ποιῆσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ θέλειν] Grotius, following the Peshito and Arabic of Erpenius, assumes here a loquendi genus inversum; but this is an irrational violence,¹ to which also the view of Emmerling (comp. Castalio in the Adnot.) ultimately comes: "vos haud mora, uno momento facere et velle coepistis." The explanation of others (Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Gregory, Erasmus, Calvin, Beza, Cornelius a Lapide, Clericus, Heumann, Bauer, Log. Paul. p. 334; Zachariae, Storr, Rosenmüller, Flatt, Billroth, Schrader, Olshausen, Rückert, Osiander, Ewald, and several others) is at least rational: not only the doing, but also the being willing, i.e. the doing willingly. But that θέλειν is not used in the sense of θέλοντας ποιεῖν (see regarding this use of θέλων, Markl. ad Lys. Reisk. p. 616), or even θέλειν ποιῆσαι (Bremi, ad Dem. Phil. i. 13, p. 121), is plain from ver. 11, where Paul, if that meaning had been in his mind, must have continued: νυνὶ δὲ καὶ ἐπιτελέσατε τὸ π. But, in the form in which he has written ver. 11, the emphasis lies not on ἐπιτελέσατε, but on τὸ ποιῆσαι, which is thereby shown to be something not contemporaneous with the θέλειν, but following upon it, something which is still to happen after that θέλειν is already present, so that we have an advance (1) from the ποιῆσαι to the θέλειν in ver. 10; and (2) from the θέλειν to the further ποιῆσαι in ver. 11. Moreover, in opposition to the former interpretation, we may urge the change of tenses in ver. 10; for, if the θέλειν in ver. 10 were to be something inherent in the previous ποιῆσαι (willingness), the aorist infinitive must likewise have been used. Lastly, there is opposed to this interpretation the ὅπως καθάπερ κ.τ.λ. in ver. 11, where evidently the (future) actual accomplishment is compared with the inclination of the (present) willing; hence, in ver. 10 also θέλειν must be conceived of as something which subsists for itself, and not simply as a willingly doing. Others conceive that τὸ ποιῆσαι denotes the collection-gathering which had already actually taken place, and τὸ θέλειν the continuing wish to do still more. This is in the main the view of Hunnius, Hammond, Wetstein,² Mosheim, Bengel, Michaelis, Fritzsche. The latter says (Dissert. II. p. 9): "hoc modo non solum τὸ θέλειν tanquam gravius τῷ ποιεῖν oppositum est (nam qui nova beneficia veteribus addere vult, plus illo agit, qui in eo quod praestitit, subsistit) sed etiam v. προενάρξασθαι utrique bene congruit, illi (τῷ ποιῆσαι), quoniam nondum tantum pecuniae erogaverant, quantum ad justam λογίαν sufficere videretur, huic (τῷ θέλειν) quoniam in hac nova voluntate huc usque acquieverant." In this way the change of tenses in ποιῆσαι and θέλειν would be quite appropriate; both would apply (this in opposition to Billroth's objection) to the same fact, to the work of collecting begun in pursuance of 1 Cor. xvi., which, however, would be viewed not according to two different sides (Billroth), objective (ποιῆσαι) and subjective (θέλειν), but according to two different stages, in respect of the first activity and of the further willing, so that now also the third stage, the execution of this further willing, must be added to complete the whole matter, ver. 11. But since there is no indication whatever of the reference of τὸ θέλειν to a further willing (following on the ποιῆσαι), and that a willing arrested as to its realization; and since, on the other hand, the προ in προενήρξ. permits for the climactic relation οὐ μόνον τὸ ποιῆσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ θέλειν only the temporal reference, that the θέλειν must have been earlier than the ποιῆσαι, and consequently οὐ μόνον . . . ἀλλὰ καὶ is a climax of time pointing not forward, but backward: the view of Fritzsche is to be given up as not accordant with the context. There remains as the only correct view, that of Cajetan and Estius, which de Wette (and after him Winer, p. 521 [E. T. 701 f.], also Wieseler, Chronol. d. apost. Zeitalt. p. 364) has defended, that προενήρξ. places the readers in comparison as to time with the Macedonians (ver. 1 ff.): not only the doing (the carrying out of the action of collecting), but also already the willing has begun earlier among you than among the Macedonians; you have anticipated them in both respects. With this view it is obvious that Paul could not but logically place ποιῆσαι before θέλειν. The offence, which this arrangement would otherwise occasion, cannot be got over by the pregnant meaning, which Hofmann puts into the present θέλειν, viz. that it denotes the steady attitude of mind sustained up to the execution (comp. Billroth). This would, in fact, be a modal definition of the willing, which Paul would doubtless have known how to designate, but could not put into the bare present.¹ And such an attitude of mind would withal have already existed before the ποιῆσαι, and would not simply have come afterwards. — ἀπὸ πέρυσι] More precise definition of the προ in προενήρξ.: since the previous year. On πέρυσι, superiore anno, see Plato, Protag. p. 327 C; Gorg. p. 473 E; Aristoph. Vesp. 1044; Acharn. 348; Lucian, Tim. 59; Soloec. 7, al. Comp. ix. 2. Whether did Paul date the beginning of the year after the Greek (rather Attic and Olympic) reckoning (so Credner, Einl. I. 2, p. 372), i.e. about the time of the summer solstice, or after the Macedonian fashion (so, on account of ix. 2, Wieseler, Chronol. d. apost. Zeitalt. p. 364), i.e. at the autumnal equinox, or from the month Nisan (Hofmann; see Grimm on 1 Macc. x. 21), or from the usual national standpoint of the Jewish reckoning, according to which the beginning of the civil year was the month Tisri (in Sept.)? The last is in itself the most natural, and also the most probable, considering the great variety as to the times of beginning the year, to which he would have had to accommodate himself in the various provinces, and considering not less the acquaintance with the Jewish calendar which he could take for granted in all his churches. Consequently there lies between the composition of our first and second Epistles the time from Easter till at least after the beginning of the new year in Tisri.

Ver. 11. The καί before τὸ ποιῆσαι can only belong to it, and not to ἐπιτελ. also (de Wette, Hofmann). It is the simple accessory also; as in ver. 10 the thought proceeded backwards from doing to willing, now it proceeds forwards from willing to doing, so that at the bottom of καὶ τὸ ποιῆσαι there lies the conception: Now, however, bring not merely the willing, but also the doing to completion. This is an analysis of the elements, which in reality coincide (for the ἐπιτελέσαι of the willing is the actual execution), occasioned, however, very naturally by the juxtaposition in ver. 10, and giving rise to no misconception here. — ὅπως καθάπερ κ.τ.λ.] in order that as the inclination of the willing, so also the completion (of that, which ye will) may be according to means, i.e. in order that the actual execution of that, which you will, may not remain out of proportion to the inclination of your will, but, like the latter, may be accordant with your means. As it is the inclination of your will to contribute according to the standard of your possessing, the execution of this willingness should take place according to the same standard. — οὕτω καὶ τὸ ἐπιτελέσαι] sc. ἡ. The supplying the subjunctive of εἶμι is not linguistically inadmissible (Rückert), and is found already in Homer (Il. i. 547, and Nägelsb. in loc.), but it is certainly rare in Greek writers. Comp. expressions like ἐκ τῶν παρόντων, ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων, and the like. Ἐκ is not to be taken in the sense of the origin, as Hofmann wishes; for it would, in fact, be an indelicate and bad compliment to the inclination of the readers, that it had “originated” from their possession. Paul himself indicates afterwards by καθό in what meaning he uses ἐκ.

Ver. 12. Confirmation of the ἐκ τοῦ ἔχειν by a general proposition. There is nothing to be supplied except the simple ἐστί after εὐπρόσδεκτος, so that ἡ προθυμία remains the subject (Vulg., Erasmus, and others, including Rückert, Osiander, Ewald). It is quite superfluous mentally to supply the non-genuine τις after ἔχῃ, and to refer εὐπρόσδ. to it (Billroth), all the more that Paul is fond of personifying abstractions (ἡ προθυμία). The correct translation is: For, if the inclination exists (presents itself as existing), *it is well-pleasing in proportion to that which it has, not in proportion to that which it has not, i.e. God measures His good pleasure according to that which the πρόθυμος (who is ready to contribute) possesses, not according to that which he does not possess.*¹ If, for example, the poor man who is ready to give little, because he has not much, were less pleasing to God than the rich man, who is willing to give much, God would then determine His good pleasure according to what the πρόθυμος does not possess. Such an unjust standard God does not apply to good will! οὐ γὰρ τὴν ποσότητα, ἀλλὰ τῆς γνώμης ὁρᾷ τὴν ποιότητα, Theodoret. On πρόκειται in the sense specified, see Kypke, II. p. 259, and from Philo, Loesner, p. 312. Comp. παράκειται, Rom. vii. 18. The interpretation prius adest, namely, tanquam boni operis fundamentum (Erasmus, Beza, Estius, and others), is not supported by linguistic usage, and there is no hint in the context of a reference to time. Flatt imports "unpleasing" into the negative half of the sentence; and Hofmann goes still further, since he finds in πρόκειται the realization of the good will, and attaches to this (not to εὐπρόσδ.) the καθὸ ἐὰν ἔχη, while he thereupon adds the supplementary words οὐ καθὸ οὐκ ἔχει so as to form the sentence: "that is not the condition of the acceptableness of the good will, that it is present as realized according to the measure of what it has not." In this way we should have mentally to add εἰ πρόκειται after οὐ; and Paul would not only have made use of a fragmentary mode of expression as unintelligibly as possible, but would withal have posited an inconceivable case, namely, that the good will is realized according to the measure of non-possession, which is tantamount to saying that the good will gives what it has not. And the assumption that πρόκειται denotes already the realization of the προθυμία by the act, is the more erroneous, that the one before whom the προθυμία is laid is here God, as is shown by εὐπρόσδεκτος. God, however, looks on the heart, and the frame of mind itself lies open before Him. — Note further the difference between the conditioned καθὸ ἐὰν ἔχη, in proportion to what he, under the respective circumstances of each case (ἐὰν = ān), may have, and the unconditioned καθὸ οὐκ ἔχει. Comp. Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 293 f.; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 143.

Ver. 13. Confirmation of the previous οὐ καθὸ οὐκ ἔχει from the aim of the present collection. — The words usually supplied after οὐ γάρ (Beza, Flatt, and others: hoc dico; Erasmus and Grotius: sic dandum est; Rosenmüller and Fritzsche, ad Rom. p. 48: volo; comp. Osiander; Rückert has γίνεται τοῦτο, comp. Ewald, and previously Luther) are superfluous, and therefore to be rejected. There is nothing to be supplied but ἡ after θλίψις and γίνεται (see ver. 14) at the end of the verse: for not in order that there may be to others refreshing, to you distress, but on a footing of equality at the present time your superfluity reaches to the lack of those, is applied to remedy their lack. The punctuation is to be corrected accordingly. Since the sentence in this way flows logically and grammatically without any obstacle, there is not to be placed after θλίψις (Beza, Elzevir, Flatt, and many others), or yet even after ισότητος (Griesbach, Lachmann, Tischendorf, Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, and others), any colon, by which, moreover, ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ would receive an emphasis not justified by any contrast, and would come in very abruptly, having no connecting particle. — ἄλλοις] means the Christians in Jerusalem. The same are afterwards meant by ἐκείνων. Probably opponents in Corinth had said: "he wishes to fleece us and bring us to want, that others may have good times or the like." — On the contrast of ἀνεσις and θλίψις, comp. 2 Thess. i. 6 f. The asyndeton: ἄλλοις ἀνεσις, ὑμῖν (δέ is not genuine) θλίψις presents the contrast more vividly. Paul, however, uses ἄλλοις, not ἑτέροις (as in ver. 8), because he has been thinking of others generally, other persons than the readers. — ἐξ ἰσότητος] ἐκ, as in ver. 11, used of the standard. The establishment of equality (between you and others) is the norm, according to which, etc. — ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ] awakens the thought of a future, where the state of the case might be reversed. See ver. 14. Hofmann thinks that Paul had here in view the definite inversion of the situation in such wise, that after Israel's conversion (iii. 16) there would be in the Holy Land a Christian church under more prosperous fortunes than the body of Gentile Christians then sorely tried. But this is not to be made good by 2 Thess. ii. 3, and it has against it Rom. xi. 25, according to which, before the conversion of Israel will ensue, the whole Gentile world must first be converted, and accordingly Paul could hardly have thought of casual collections from Judaea as then either necessary or effectual for the Gentiles (apart altogether from the expected nearness of the Parousia). — On γίνεσθαι εἰς, to come unto, reach towards, be apportioned to (Plato, Tim. p. 57 A; Luc. Caucas, 19, al.), comp. on Gal. iii. 14.

Ver. 14 f. In order that (divine purpose), if the circumstances change, the converse case may also set in, and the superfluity of those be imparted to your lack. On account of ver. 13 we must, in accordance with the context, think also here of something earthly, not (as Jerome, Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Anselm, the Catholics,¹ Bengel, Michaelis, Schrader wish) of spiritual blessings—which would be unhistorical, and quite opposed to the standpoint of the apostle to the Gentiles. According to

Paul, the participation of the Gentiles in the spiritual blessings of the Jewish Christians had already taken place through the conversion of the former, Rom. xv. 27. — ὅπως γένηται ἰσότης] in order that (according to the divine purpose) equality might set in, since, namely, then they will not have too much and you too little, if their superfluity shall come to the help of your lack. According to Hofmann, ἰσότης amounts here to the idea of the inversion of the relation, which, however, does not agree with ver. 15, and has against it the clear reference of the meaning of ἐξ ἰσότης in ver. 13. The idea of brotherly equalization, which Paul had expressed by ἐξ ἰσότης as regulative for the present case in ver. 13, he repeats also for the eventual future case in ver. 14: it is to him of so much importance. And so important was it to the primitive church generally, that it even produced at first in Jerusalem the community of goods. — καθὼς γέγραπται] A confirmation from Scripture of this idea, which is to realize itself in the two cases, ver. 13 and ver. 14. It is already typically presented in the gathering of the manna, Ex. xvi. 18 (freely quoted after the LXX.). The quotation refers therefore not simply to ver. 14, but to vv. 13 and 14, since in both there prevails the same fundamental thought. — ὁ τὸ πολὺ] he who much, namely, had gathered, as in Ex. l.c., we must supply from the context (ver. 17). Paul presupposes that his readers are aware of the reference and of the connection of the passage. — οὐκ ἐπλεόνασε] had not too much, not more than was appointed by God for his needs; τὸ γὰρ μέτρον ὃ μεγαλόδωρος τῷ δώρῳ συνέξενεξε, Theodoret. See Ex. xvi. 16 f. In the same way: οὐκ ἤλαττόνησε, he had not too little. The word, frequent in the LXX., is foreign to Greek writers. — The articles denote the two definite and well-known cases which occurred in the gathering.

which you have for the good cause," is excluded. — ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ] See on ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις, ver. 1.

Ver. 17. Proof of this σπουδή of Titus. — For the summons indeed he received; but, seeing that he was more zealous, of his own accord he set out to you. Paul has not expressed himself incorrectly, seeing that he can only have had in his mind a climax (Rückert); nor has he used μὲν . . . δέ in the sense of the climactic οὐ μόνον . . . ἀλλά (Billroth, also Flatt); but the concessive clause τὴν μὲν παράκλησιν ἐδέξαι expresses the delicate modesty and subordination of Titus, according to which he would not have it appear that he set out on the journey αὐθαίρετος; the second clause, on the other hand, sets forth the actual state of the case. The summons (ver. 6) indeed he received; he did not say as it were: there is no need of thy summons, I go of my own impulse; but in the actual state of the case he was too zealous to have needed a summons, and set out to you of his own self-determination. — ἐξηγήθη] The praeterite does not denote what was resolved on (Billroth), but is that of the epistolary style (comp. συνεπέμψ., vv. 18, 22; Xen. Anab. i. 9. 25), used to represent the point of time at which the letter is read by those receiving it. Comp. Acts xv. 27, xxiii. 30, also on Gal. vi. 11.

See Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 354. Comp. Gal. ii. 12; Acts i. 26, xxv. 12; Matt. xvii. 3. Bengel takes it incorrectly: "una misimus ego et Timotheus," which is contained in the plural, but not in the compound. — τὸν ἀδελφὸν κ.τ.λ.] is understood by Heumann and Rückert of an actual brother, viz. a brother of Titus. But ἀδελφοὶ ἡμῶν in ver. 23 shows that Paul has here and in ver. 22 f. taken ἀδελφός in the sense of Christian brotherhood. It would not have been in keeping with the prudence of the apostle to send with Titus the very brother of the latter and even his own brother (according to Rückert's view of τ. ἀδελφ. ἡμ., ver. 22). Who is meant, remains quite an open question. Some have conjectured Barnabas (τινὲς in Chrysostom, and Chrysostom himself, Theodoret, Oecumenius, Luther, Calvin, and others) or Silas (Baronius, Estius); but the rank of these was not consistent with the position of a companion subordinate to Titus;

nor is there anywhere a trace of Barnabas and Paul having ever united again for common work after their separation (Acts xv. 39). Others (comp. also the usual subscription of the Epistle) think that it was Luke. So Origen, τίτες in Chrysostom, Jerome, Ambrosiaster, Pelagius, Primasius, Anselm, Cajetan, Cornelius a Lapide, and others, including Grotius, Emmerling, Schrader, Olshausen, Köhler (Abfassungszeit, p. 85), of whom those named before Grotius referred ἐν τῷ εὐαγγ. to the Gospel of Luke (at that time not yet even in existence). But from the very brief statement of Acts xx. 1 ff. there is no proof to be drawn either for (Olshausen) or against (Rückert); and Ignatius, ad Ephes. (interpol.) 15, to which Emmerling, after Salmeron and others, has again appealed, proves nothing further than that this unknown author either referred or merely applied our passage to Luke. The conjecture which points to Erastus (Ewald, following Acts xix. 22 ; 2 Tim. iv. 20) cannot be made good. With just as little proof some have thought of Mark (Lightfoot, Chron. p. 118 ; Storr, Opusc. II. p. 339 ; Tobler, Evangelienfr. p. 12). The result remains : we do not know who it was. So much only in reference to the two persons indicated here and in ver. 22, and in opposition to the conjectures adduced, is clear from ver. 23, that they were not fellow-labourers in the apostolic work, like Titus, but other Christians of distinction.¹ See on ver. 23. Against this non liquet Rückert indeed objects, that in that case the Corinthians would not have known which of the two was meant to be here designated, since in ver. 23 both are called ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, by which all distinction is precluded. But this first companion is in ver. 19 so distinctively indicated as appointed by a special elective act of the churches concerned, and appointed just for this particular work, that he could not be unknown by name to the Corinthians, after Titus had already begun there the work of collection (ver. 6). Besides, Paul might leave all further information to Titus. — οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος κ.τ.λ.] i.e. who possesses his praise (that duly belonging to him) in the gospel (in the cause of the gospel, in confessing, furthering, preaching, defending it, and the like), spread through all the churches, throughout the whole Christian body. He was a Christian worthy of trust and praised by all.

¹ Hence also we can hardly think of Trophimus (de Wette, Wieseler), Acts xx. 4, xxi. 29 : nor, with Hofmann, of Aristarchus, Acts xix. 29, xx. 4.

How this election was conducted, we do not know. Perhaps by the presbyters as representatives of the churches, and on the proposal of the apostle. Comp. on Acts xiv. 23. — ἐν τῇ χάριτι κ.τ.λ.] a more precise definition of the συνέκδ. ἡμῶν. It does not, however, simply mean: in the bringing over (Billroth; this arbitrary limitation was produced by the reading σύν), but in general: in matters of this χάρις, i.e. in the prosecution, in the whole bringing about, of this kindness (this work of love), which is ministered by us, is effected through our ministry (comp. iii. 3). — πρὸς τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου δόξαν κ.τ.λ.] is connected by most (including Theodoret, Beza, Grotius, Estius, Billroth, de Wette, Ewald, Neander) with τῇ διακον. ὑφ. ἡμ. But since in this way πρὸς (which is not, with Ewald, to be taken as according to, comp. i. 20) would have to combine two quite different relations: "in order to promote Christ's honour and to prove our good-will;" and since, moreover, the latter element would be self-evident, tame, and superfluous,—we ought rather, with Chrysostom (who, however, reads ὑμῶν instead of ἡμῶν), to construe with χειροτονηθεὶς κ.τ.λ. : elected, etc., in order to further Christ's honour and our good-will. The election of this brother had as its object, that by his co-operation in this matter Christ should be honoured¹ and our desire and love for the work should not be lessened "ob metum reprehensionis illius, de qua mox loquitur" (Bengel), but should be maintained and advanced by freedom from such hindering anxiety, and by a fellow-worker thus authorized. The connection with χειροτονηθεὶς κ.τ.λ., which Hofmann, attaching it also to συνεκδ. ἡμῶν, declares to be impossible (why ?), places the election, which had primarily a business motive, under the higher ethical point of view.

Ver. 20. Στελλόμενοι τοῦτο] goes along with συνεπέμφαμεν in ver. 18. We have sent also the brother, who is honoured by all, and in addition has been chosen by the churches as our associate in this matter, inasmuch as we thereby avoid this, that no one, etc. Rückert (comp. de Wette) arbitrarily, because with unnecessary harshness, holds that Paul has abandoned the construction, and instead of writing στελλόμεθα γάρ, has put the participle, because he had had in his mind the thought : "I have caused him to be elected." Hofmann connects it in an abnormal construction with προθυμ. ἡμῶν, which in itself would be admissible (see on i. 7), but cannot suit here, because πρὸς τ. προθυμ. ἡμ. was a definition of the aim contemplated not by Paul, but by the χειροτονήσαντες; the connection would be illogical.—According to linguistic usage, στελλόμενοι τοῦτο (see Kypke, Obs. II. p. 259 f., 344; Schott on 2 Thess. p. 271) may mean: (1) *making this arrangement*² (so, in the main, Kypke, Rückert, Hofmann), in which case there is not brought out any significant bearing of the words, and besides, the aorist participle could not but be expected; or (2) inasmuch as we draw back from this, shrink from and avoid this (Hesychius: στέλλεσθαι φοβείσθαι); so Chrysostom, Theophylact, Luther, and most, following the Itala and Vulgate: "devitantes," Gothic: "bivandjandans." Comp. LXX. Mal. ii. 5. The latter is to be preferred as most appropriate in the connection, and agreeing with 2 Thess. iii. 6. The reading ὑποστελλόμενοι in F G is a correct gloss. Paul in his humility and practical wisdom did not deem it beneath his dignity to obviate calumnies. — τοῦτο] would in itself be superfluous, but it serves as an emphatic preparation for the following μή τις κ.τ.λ. See Winer, p. 152 [E. T. 200]. — μή τις ἡμᾶς μωμήσ.] μή after the notion of anxiety (Baeumlein, Partik. p. 288), which lies in στελλόμεν.: that no one may reproach us (as if we were embezzling, not dealing conscientiously with the distribution, and the like) in this abundance. — ἐν] in puncto of this abundance. Comp. ἐν τῷ εὐαγγ., ver. 18; ἐν τῇ χάρι., ver. 19. — ἀδρότης, from ἀδρός, dense, thick, means in Homer (Il. xxii. 263, xvi. 857, xxiv. 6): "habitus corporis firma et succulenta," Duncan, Lex., ed. Rost, p. 20. Afterwards it occurs in all relations of the adjective, as in reference to plants and fruits (Theophr., Herod. i. 17), to speech (Diog. Laert. x. 83), to tone (Athen. x. p. 415 A), to snow (Herod. iv. 31), etc. Hence what abundance is meant, is determined solely by the context. Here: abundance of charitable gifts. According to Wetstein, Zosimus has it also four times "pro ingenti largitione." Rückert's proposal to understand it of the great zeal of the contributors, which was produced through the apostle's ministry (τῇ διακ. ὑφ' ἡμῶν), would only be admissible in the event of there being anything in the context about such zeal. As it is, however, ἐν τῇ ἀδρ. ταύτῃ is in substance the same as ἐν τῇ χάριτι ταύτῃ in ver. 19. Comp. ver. 3.

¹ Rückert, though following likewise our mode of connection, holds that to the δόξα κυρίου this companionship could only have contributed negatively, in so far as it was a precaution against any suspicion falling on the apostle, which suspicion—according to a mode of view also Pauline—would have been transferred to Christ. Why, then, not positively also? The brother had in fact been chosen as a travelling associate co-operating in the work of collection, so that by his election the work might be prosecuted more extensively and more successfully. And thus the choice of this brother served positively to glorify Christ; hence also πρὸς . . . δόξαν is not to be held, with de Wette, as "rather unsuitable."

Ver. 21. Ground of this precautionary measure. For our anxiety is directed to what is good, not merely before the Lord, not merely so that we set before us God in this way (Prov. iii. 4), but also before men. Comp. on Rom. xii. 17. Were it merely the former, we should not need such precautionary measures, since to

Ver. 22. Commendatory mention of the second companion. — αὐτοῖς] with Titus and the brother already spoken of. — τὸν ἀδελφ. ἡμ.] This one, too, we do not know by name. Ἡμῶν does not point to him as in official relation to the apostle and Timothy, but denotes him as a Christian brother (see ver. 23), so that the ἡμῶν embraces also the readers. Conjecture has lighted (but see previously on ver. 18) on Eraenetus, Rom. xvi. 5 (Grotius), on Apollos (Thomas, Lyra, and mentioned already in Theodoret), on Luke (Calvin and also Estius, who, however, does not discountenance the conjecture of Zenas, Tit. iii. 13, and Sosthenes), and even on Timothy (Cajetan) and others. Wieseler (comp. on ver. 18) understands it of Tychicus, and to this Hofmann also is inclined. The very plural ἡμῶν should have precluded Rückert from thinking of an actual brother of the apostle; see also on ver. 18. — ἐν πολλοῖς πολλάκις] goes with ἐδοκ.: in many things many times. See on this collocation, Lobeck, Paral. p. 56. — νυνὶ δὲ πολὺ σπουδαιότερον πεποιθ. κ.τ.λ.] νυνὶ stands in contrast with the previous ἐδοκίμ. ἐν πολλοῖς πολλάκις: now, however, as much more zealous (than in the earlier cases) through the great confidence which he reposes in you. A high degree of good confidence in you has now increased very much his zeal. Others understand πεποιθήσει κ.τ.λ. of Paul's confidence, connecting it either with πολὺ σπουδαιότ. (Erasmus, Beza, Piscator, and others) or with συνεπέμψαμεν (Estius, Emmerling: "sperans ut bene a vobis excipiantur"). The latter is an inappropriate departure from the order of the words, depriving πολὺ σπουδαιότερον of the ground assigned for it (and how delicately is its ground assigned by this very πεποιθ. κ.τ.λ.!); and the former must necessarily have been denoted by a personal pronoun added to πεποιθ.

Ver. 23 f. Summary closing recommendation of all the three delegates. — εἴτε ὑπὲρ Τίτου] sc. λέγω or γράφω. Be it that I speak on behalf of Titus, he is my associate and (especially) in regard to you my fellow-worker, and my intercession is thus made with good reason. — εἶτε ἀδελφοὶ ἡμῶν] be it that they are brothers of ours, namely, for whom I speak, they are delegates of churches,¹ an honour to Christ, people, whose personal character and working redound to Christ's honour. The words to be supplied with εἶτε in both cases would occur of themselves to the reader of the incomplete passage. Comp. Fritzsche, ad Rom. III. p. 47 f. Observe, however, that ἀδελφοὶ ἡμῶν is predicative, and therewith qualitative; hence the absence of the article appears to be strictly regular,² denoting the category to which the subjects meant in this second half of the verse belong, and therefore neither unsuitable (Rückert) nor yet erroneous (Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 76 [E. T. 87]; comp. Hofmann). — ἡμῶν] as in ver. 22. The distinguishing of the two others from Titus, who holds a higher position, by the qualitative ἀδελφοὶ ἡμῶν, shows that ἀδελφοί are not official associates. Such a one Titus was; the two others, however, were only distinguished church-members—as it were, lay-brothers commissioned ad hoc, the one by the churches, the other by Paul.

Ver. 24. According to the Recepta, ἐνδείξασθε is here a direct exhortation, in conformity with the points adduced in ver. 23 (οὖν), to furnish towards those three (εἰς αὐτούς) the demonstration (τὴν ἐνδ.) of their love, etc., which demonstration of love is shown to the churches that were represented by them (εἰς πρόσωπ.). Since, however, the Recepta is a gloss (see the critical remarks), and ἐνδεικνύμενοι is the correct reading, we have here an indirect exhortation, which puts the matter as a point of honour, and so touches the readers the more effectively, without directly making a demand on them. “When you

² This absence of the article has led Hofmann wrongly to take all the nominatives in ver. 23 as subjects, but ἵνα Τίτου as a parenthesis (“which holds true of Titus”), and then οὖν in ver. 24 as the οὖν of the apodosis. A groundless artificial construction, in which the awkward and unprecedented parenthesis (Paul would have said something like Τίτου δι' λίγω, and that after συνεργός, comp. 1 Cor. x. 29; John vi. 71) would be simply superfluous in the highest degree, since, if κοινωνός κ. τ. λ. is the subject, the person thereby indicated would be self-evident. Just as uncalled for here after the short alleged protasis would be the epanaleptic οὖν of the apodosis. Comp. on Rom. ii. 17–24.

accordingly show towards them the demonstration of your love and of what we have boasted regarding you, you do it in presence of the churches." In this way εἰς αὐτοὺς and εἰς πρόσωπον τῶν ἐκκλ. emphatically correspond with each other, and after the participle ἐνδεικν. the second person of the present indicative of the same verb is to be supplied. Comp. Soph. O. C. 520; El. 1428 (1434): τὰ πρὶν εὖ θέμενοι τὰδ' ὥς πάλιν, sc. εὖ θῆσθε. See Schneidewin in loc., and, in general, Doederl. de brachyl. 1831, p. 10 f.; also Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. 190, p. 359. We might also simply supply the imperative ἐστέ with ἐνδεικν. (see on Rom. xii. 9), so that also with this reading there would be a direct, stern summons. But with the former interpretation the contextually appropriate emphasis of εἰς πρόσωπον τῶν ἐκκλ. comes out more strongly and more independently. — On points of detail we may further observe—(1) The οὖν does not draw the inference simply from the second half of ver. 23, but from both halves, since the exclusion of reference to Titus is not warranted by εἰς πρόσωπ. τ. ἐκκλ., which, in fact, suits all three together, and ἡμῶν καυχησέως κ.τ.λ. includes specially a glance at the apostle's relation to Titus; comp. ver. 6, vii. 14. (2) Πρόσωπον is here also not (see on i. 11) person, which would be against the usage of the N. T., and, besides, in the singular would be unsuitable here; but εἰς πρόσωπον means to the face, i.e. coram in the sense of the direction. The conception, namely, which Paul wishes to excite in the minds of his readers, is this, that in those three men they have to think of the churches themselves, whose instruments these men are in the matter of the collection, as present and as witnesses of the demonstrations of love that fall to the share of the representatives, and to measure their demeanour towards them accordingly. According to this view, every evidence of love, which is shown to these men, comes, when it takes place, before the eyes of the churches (ideally present in the case). The churches stand by and look on. (3) τῆς ἀγάπης ὑμ. is not the love to Paul (Grotius, Billroth, de Wette, Ewald, and others, following Chrysostom and Theophylact), but the Christian brotherly love, which thereupon has its definite object marked out by εἰς αὐτούς. — On τὴν ἐνδειξιν ἐνδεικνυσθαι, comp. VER. 2. ἐξ ὑμῶν] B C \aleph , min. Ambrosiast. Pelag. and several vss. have only ὑμῶν. So also Lachm. and Rück. But ἐξ was not understood and was found superfluous. Why should it be added?—Ver. 4. After ταύτη Elz. has τῆς καυχήσεως, in opposition to B C D* F G \aleph * min. and several vss. and Fathers. An addition by way of gloss from xi. 17.—Ver. 5. The readings πρὸς ὑμᾶς and προεπηγγελμένην (Lachm. Rück.; Tisch. has adopted only the latter) have preponderant, and the latter through the accession of C \aleph decisive, attestation; προεπηγγ. is also to be preferred on this account, that προκατηγγ. might very easily arise through alliteration after the previous προκαταρτισ. Reiche has unsatisfactorily defended the Recepta eis (which crept in easily from viii. 6) and προκατηγγ.—Ver. 7. προαιρείται] Lachm. Rück. read προήρρηται, following B C F G \aleph 31, Chrys. ms. Cypr. Aug. Pel. and several vss. But the sense: prout destinavit, presented itself to the not further reflecting copyists as so natural, that with the similarity of the two forms the present might drop out far more easily than come in.—Ver. 8. δυνατός] Lach. and Rück. read δυνατεῖ. It has, indeed, the attestation of B C* D* F G (?) \aleph ; but if δυνατεῖ were the original reading, the gloss would not have been δυνατός simply, but δυνατός ἐστι, as in Rom. xiv. 4, or δύναται.—Ver. 10. σπέρμα] B D* F G 80, have σπόρον. So Lachm. and Rück. Aeth. Arm. Vulg. It. Cyr. Cypr. Ambrosiast. Aug. The future was wrongly taken in the sense of wish, and accordingly, aided perhaps by the recollection of such passages as 1 Thess. iii. 11, 12, 2 Thess. ii. 17, iii. 5, was changed into the optative.¹ So also in Rom. xvi. 20, instead of συντρίψει, συντρίψαι crept into A, vss. and Fathers.—Ver. 15. δέ after χάρις is, with Lachm. and Tisch., to be deleted on preponderating evidence.

CONTENTS.—By a delicate turn in vv. 1 and 2, Paul begins once more from the work of collection, and impresses on his readers : (1) that they should make ready the bounty soon, before his arrival, vv. 3-5 ; further, (2) that they should give amply, vv. 5 and 6 ; and (3) that they should give with all willingness, ver. 7 ; whereupon (4) he points them to the blessing of God, vv. 8-11, and, finally, brings into prominence the religious consequence of the thanksgivings towards God, which their beneficence will call forth, vv. 12-14. An utterance of thanks to God forms the conclusion, ver. 15.

Ver. 1. Since the γάρ connects the verse with what precedes, not only does the opinion of Semler, that chap. ix. contains a separate Epistle, fall to the ground, but also the hypothesis, that Paul writes as if he were beginning a new topic,—on the basis of which, e.g. Emmerling (comp. Neander) thinks that between the composition of chap. viii. and that of chap. ix. a considerable time had elapsed. Against this may be urged also the fact that in new sections he does not begin with περὶ μὲν, but with περὶ δέ (1 Cor. vii. 1, viii. 1, xii. 1, xvi. 1). Estius is right in saying that the apostle specifies with γάρ the reason why he, in what goes before (viii. 24), had exhorted them not to collecting, but to affectionate receiving of the brethren. Comp. Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 21 : "Laute excipite fratres, id moneo (viii. 24) ; nam praeter rem ad liberalitatem denuo quidem provocarem ad eum jam propensos homines," ver. 2. So also Schott, Isag. p. 240 ; Billroth, Rückert, Olshausen, Osiander ; but there is no indication of a contrast with the Gentile-Christian churches (as if the ἄγιοι were the ἐκκλησία κατ' ἐξοχήν), although Hofmann imports it. — μὲν] To this the δέ in ver. 3 corresponds. See on that passage. The counter-remark of de Wette (who, with Osiander and Neander, takes the μὲν as solitarium), that δέ in ver. 3 makes a contrast with ver. 2, does not hold good, since the contrast is quite as suitable to ver. 1 (though having respect to what is said in ver. 2). Even in classic writers (often in Thucyd.) the clauses corresponding to each other with μὲν and δέ are found separated by intervening clauses. See Kühner, II. p. 428. — τῆς διακονίας τῆς εἰς τ. ἄγ.] as in viii. 4. Beza is incorrect (see ver. 2) in saying that the bringing over only is meant. The word itself corresponds to the idea of Christian fellowship in love, in which the mutual activity of love is a constant debitum ministerium (Rom. xiii. 8 ; Heb. vi. 10 ; 1 Pet. iv. 10), after the example of Christ (Matt. xx. 28 ; Luke xxii. 26 f.). Comp. Gal. v. 13. — περισσὸν μοί ἐστι] i.e. I do not need writing, namely, to effect my object. — τὸ γράφειν] with article, because the writing is regarded as actual subject.

REMARK.—Certainly Paul has written of the collection both in chap. viii. and again in what follows ; and he meant it so, otherwise he would have ended the section with chap. viii. But he delicately makes a rhetorical turn, so that, in order to spare the readers' sense of honour, he seems not to take up the subject again, but to speak only of the sending of the brethren ; and he annexes to that what he intends still to insert regarding the matter itself. Σοφῶς δὲ τοῦτο ποιεῖ, ὥστε μᾶλλον αὐτοὺς ἐπισπάσασθαι, Theophylact and Chrysostom. Probably, when he wrote viii. 24, he meant to close the section with it, but—perhaps after reading over chap. viii. again—was induced to add something, which he did in this polite fashion (τῇ τοιαύτῃ τῶν λόγων μεθόδῳ, Theodoret). Hofmann's idea—that recommendation of the collection itself was superfluous, but that there had been delay in carrying it out, etc.—is quite in accordance certainly with vv. 1–5, but from ver. 5 to the end of the chapter there again follow instructions and promises, which belong essentially to the recommendation of the collection itself.

Ver. 2. Τὴν προθυμ. ὑμῶν] Rückert infers from the whole contents of the two chapters that the inclination is only assumed as still existing, and no longer existed in reality ; but his inference is unjust, and at variance with the apostle's character. Already, ἀπὸ πέρυσι (viii. 10) have the readers begun to collect, and the work of love, in fact, needed only the carrying out, which Paul intends by chap. viii. and ix. to procure.—ἣν ὑπὲρ ὑμ. καυχ. Μακεδ.] of which I make my boast in your favour (in your recommendation) to the Macedonians ; for the Corinthians were made by Paul to favour the collection. On καυχᾶσθαι, with the accusative of the object, comp. vii. 14, x. 8, xi. 30 ; LXX. Prov. xxvii. 1 ; Lucian, Ocypr. 120 ; Athen. xiv. p. 627 C. On the present Bengel rightly remarks : “ Adhuc erat P. in Macedonia.” — ὅτι Ἀχαΐα παρεσκε. ἀπὸ πέρυσι] so ran the καυχῶμαι : that Achaia has been in readiness (to give pecuniary aid to promote it) since the previous year. Paul says Ἀχαΐα, not ὑμεῖς (comp. ver. 3), because he repeats words actually used by him. These concerned not only Corinth, but the whole province, in which, however, the Corinthian was the central church. Comp. on i. 1. — καὶ ὁ ἐξ ὑμῶν ζήλος¹ κ.τ.λ.] is, by way of attraction, an expression of the thought: your zeal wrought forth from you as stimulating to them. Comp. from the N. T. Matt. xxiv. 17; Luke xi. 13. See on Matt. l.c., and Hermann, ad Viger. p. 893; Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. i. 1. 5. — τοὺς πλείονας] the majority of the Macedonians, so that only the minority remained uninfluenced.

REMARK.—Paul might with perfect truth stimulate (1) the Macedonians by the zeal of the Corinthians, because the latter had begun the work earlier than the former, and were already ἀπὸ πέρσας in readiness; and then (2) the Corinthians, again, by the example of the Macedonians (viii. 1 ff.), since the latter, after having followed the Corinthians in the prosecution of the work, had shown such extraordinary activity as in turn to serve the Corinthians a model and a stimulus to further beneficence. Is it not possible that in the very same affair first A should be held up as a model to B, and then, according to the measure of the success, conversely B to A? Hence Theodoret and many (comp. also Chrysostom) have rightly remarked on the wisdom in the apostle's conduct; whereas Rückert declares this conduct of his to be unwise (of its morality he prefers to be silent), unjustly taking it for granted that his καυχᾶσθαι regarding the Corinthians was untrue. See vii. 14. De Wette also thinks that the apostle is not free from human error here.—That in αὐθαίρετοι, at viii. 3, there is no contradiction with ix. 2, see on viii. 3.

Ver. 3. Connection: Although in regard to the collection I do not need to write to you, and that for the reason stated in ver. 2, I have yet not been able to omit the sending of the brethren for this purpose, in order that, etc. Paul by this would direct attention not to the general object of this mission, but to the special one of having all things ready before his arrival. See what follows. On μὲν . . . δέ, which may often be translated etsi . . . tamen, comp. Xen. Anab. ii. 3. 10, and Kühner in loc. The same is more strongly expressed by μὲν . . . ὁμως δέ, Ellendt, *Lex. ὕμ.] on account of the following ἐν τῷ μέρει τούτῳ, which first adds the special reference to the general, is not to be understood of the special καυχᾶσθαι described in ver. 2, but is to be taken generally: in order that that, of which we boast on your behalf (καύχημα is here materies gloriandi, and not equivalent to καύχησις), might not become empty (1 Cor. ix. 15), i.e. might not be found without reality in this point, in the matter of the collection,—if, namely, on our arrival it should be found that your benevolent activity had come to a standstill or become retrograde. See ver. 4. In the addition ἐν τῷ μέρει τούτῳ (comp. iii. 10) there lies an “acris cum tacita laude exhortatio” (Estius); for Paul has not a similar anxiety in respect to other sides of the καύχημα (comp. vii. 4). Billroth considers ἐν τ. μέρει τ. as pointing to ver. 4, and takes τὸ καύχημα κ.τ.λ. of the special boast in ver. 2: “in this respect, namely, inasmuch as, if Macedonians come with me . . . we . . . are put to shame.” Involved, because ἵνα καθὼς . . . ἦτε lies between; and at variance with the parallel ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ of ver. 4. — ἵνα καθὼς κ.τ.λ.] forms, with the following μήπως κ.τ.λ., a positive parallel to the previous negative ἵνα μὴ τὸ καύχημα . . . τούτῳ. But because this being put to shame in the case supposed would have involved the Corinthians as its originators, Paul with tender delicacy (not serene pleasantry, as Olshausen thinks), moving the sense of honour of the readers, adds parenthetically: ἵνα μὴ λέγωμεν ὑμεῖς. — ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ] in respect of this confidence, according to which we have maintained that you were in readiness. Wetstein; Suicer, Thes. II. p. 1398. So Calvin, Beza, Erasmus Schmid, Calovius, Wolf, Bengel, Rosenmüller, and others, including de Wette, Osiander, Hofmann. But others take it as quite equivalent to ἐν τῷ μέρει τούτῳ, ver. 3: in hac materia, in hoc argumento (gloriationis). Comp. Vulgate: in hac substantia. So Chrysostom, Theophylact, Erasmus, Castalio, Estius, Kypke, Munthe, and others, including Schrader, Rückert, Olshausen, Ewald. Linguistically correct, no doubt (Polyb. iv. 2. 1; Casaubon, ad Polyb. i. 5. 3, p. 111; Diodorus, i. 3; comp. also Heb. i. 3, and Bleek, Heb. Br. II. 1, p. 61 f.), but here a point quite unnecessary to be mentioned. And why should we depart from the meaning: confidence, when this is certain in the usage of the N. T., and here, as at xi. 17, is strikingly appropriate? The insertion of ἵνα μὴ λ. ὑμεῖς forms no objection (this in opposition to Rückert), since certainly the putting to shame of the apostle in regard to his confidence would have been laid to the blame of the Corinthians, because they would have frustrated this confidence; hence there is not even ground for referring that insertion merely to καταισχ. exclusive of ἐν τ. ὑποστ. τ. (Hofmann). Lastly, the explanation of Grotius: in hoc fundamento meae jactationis, has likewise, doubtless, some support in linguistic usage (Diodor. i. 66, xiii. 82, al.; LXX. Ps. lxix. 2; Jer. xxiii. 22, al.), but falls to the ground, because τῆς καυχ. is not genuine.

Ver. 5. Οὖν] in pursuance of what was said in ver. 4. — ἵνα] comp. viii. 6. — προέλθ.] namely, before my arrival and that of the Macedonians possibly accompanying me. The thrice-repeated προ- is not used by accident, but adds point to the instigation to have everything ready before the apostle's arrival. — προ-καταρτίσ.] adjusted beforehand, put into complete order beforehand, Hippocr. p. 24, 10. 18. — τὴν προεπηγγελμένην εὐλογίαν ὑμῶν] your blessing promised beforehand (by me). See vv. 2-4. On προεπ., comp. Rom. i. 2. Erasmus, Estius, Rückert, and some others at variance with the context, take it: the blessing formerly promised by you. — εὐλογία is a characteristically conciliatory (καὶ τῇ προσηγορίᾳ αὐτοὺς ἐπεσπάσατο, Chrysostom) designation of the collection, inasmuch as it is for the receivers a practical blessing proceeding from the givers (i.e. πληθυσμὸς ἀγαθῶν ἐξ ἐκουσιότητος διδόμενος, Phavor.). Comp. on εὐλογία in the sense of good deed, LXX. Gen. xxxiii. 11; Judg. i. 15; Ezek. xxxiv. 26;

Ecclus. xxxix. 22; Wisd. xv. 19; Eph. i. 3. — ταύτην ἐτοιμήν εἶναι οὕτως ὡς κ.τ.λ.] the intended consequence of προκαταρτ. τ. προεπ. εὐλ. ὑμῶν, so that the infinitive in the sense of ὥστε (Kühner, II. p. 565, ad Xen. Mem. ii. 5. 3) and ταύτην, which attaches itself more emphatically to what has to come than to what goes before (Hofmann), are used anaphorically (Bernhardy, p. 283): that this may be in readiness thus like blessing and not like covetousness, in such manner that it may have the quality of blessing, not of covetousness; in other words, that it may be liberal, which is the character of εὐλογία, and not sparing, as covetousness shows itself in giving. Πλεονεξία does not mean here or anywhere else parsimony (Flatt, Rückert, de Wette, and many others); but Paul conceives of the sparing giver as covetous, in so far as such a man desires himself to have that which he contributes, in order to increase his own, and therefore gives but very scantily. Following Chrysostom (comp. Erasmus, Paraphr., and Beza), Billroth refers πλεονεξία to Paul and his colleagues: "Your gift is to be a free, and not an extorted, one." Against this may be urged as well the analogy of ὡς εὐλογίαν, as also ver. 6, where the meaning of ὡς πλεονεξ. is represented by φειδομένως; hence also we must not, with Rückert and others, combine the ideas of willingly and unwillingly (which are not mentioned till ver. 7) with those of giving liberally and sparingly. — On οὕτως after its adjective, see Stallb. ad Plat. Rep. p. 500 A.

Ver. 6. Allusion to the Messianic recompense. Chrysostom aptly remarks: καὶ σπόρον τὸ πρᾶγμα ἐκάλεσεν, ἵνα εὐθέως πρὸς τὴν ἀντίδοσιν ἴδῃς καὶ τὸν ἀμητὸν ἐννοήσας μάθῃς ὅτι πλείονα λαμβάνεις ἢ δίδως. — The δέ is continuative, not restrictive, as Billroth thinks ("but so much know"), since the subsequent ἐπ' εὐλογίαις proves that in ver. 6 exactly the same two kinds of giving are expressed as in ver. 5. — τοῦτο δέ] after Chrysostom and the Vulgate, is explained by the expositors supplying a λέγω or ἰστέον. But with what warrant from the context? Beza already made the admission: "quamvis haec ellipsis Graeco sermoni sit inusitata." Comp. Gal. iii. 17; 1 Thess. iv. 17; 1 Cor. vii. 29, al., where Paul adds the verb of saying. Even the comparison of Phil. iii. 14, where, in fact, to the ἐν δέ its verb is brought from the context, does not settle the question of the asyndetic τοῦτο (in opposition to Hofmann). Τοῦτο might be regarded as the object of σπείρων; but in that case there would result for τοῦτο an inappropriate emphasis (this kind of seed), seeing that a σπείρειν was not mentioned before, and the figure here comes in as new. Hence τοῦτο may be regarded as accusative absolute (see on vi. 13), taking up again with special weight what was just said, in order to attach to it something further: Now as concerns this, namely, this ὡς εὐλογίαν, κ. μὴ ὡς πλεονεξίαν, it is the case that, etc. Lachmann placed ὁ σπείρων . . . ἐπ' εὐλογ. κ. θερίσει in a parenthesis. This would require us to supply faciat after ἐκαστος, or even the more definite det (from δότην in ver. 7). But it would be unsuitable to assign to the important thought of ver. 6 merely the place of a parenthetic idea. — φειδομένως] in a sparing way (Plut. Al. 25), so that he scatters only parsimoniously, narrowly, and scantily. But in φειδομένως κ. θερίσει the one who spares and holds back is the giver of the harvest, i.e. apart from figure: Christ the bestower of the Messianic salvation, who gives to the man in question only the corresponding lesser degree of blessedness. Comp. v. 10; Rom. xiv. 10; Gal. vi. 7. — ἐπ' εὐλογίαις] denotes the relation occurring in the case (Matthiae, p. 1370 f.; Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 315): with blessings, which, namely, he, when sowing, imparts, and in turn receives when reaping, i.e. according to the context, richly. Comp. ver. 5. In the reaping Christ is likewise the distributor of blessings, bestowing on him, who has blissfully sowed, the appropriate great reward in Messianic blessedness. On the whole figure, comp. Prov. xi. 24, xxii. 8; Ps. cxii. 9; Gal. vi. 8, 9. The plural strengthens the idea of richness, denoting its manifold kinds and shapes, etc. (Maetzner, ad Lycurg. p. 144 f.). The juxtaposition also serves as strengthening: ἐπ' εὐλογ., ἐπ' εὐλογ. Comp. on 1 Cor. vi. 4. The fact that the measure of well-doing is conditioned by one's own means, is guarded already at viii. 12. Comp. in general, Matt. xxv. 20 ff. See Calovius on this passage, in opposition to the misuse of it by Roman Catholics as regards the merit of good works—the moral measure of which, however, will, according to the divine saving decree, have as its consequence merely different degrees of the blessedness won for believers through Christ. The very nature of good works, which subjectively are the fruits of faith and objectively the fruits of the divine preparation of grace (Eph. ii. 10), excludes the idea of merit.¹

Ver. 7. But Paul does not desire them to give richly against their will; hence the new exhortation: Let every one give freely and willingly! — ἕκαστος καθὼς κ.τ.λ.] as each one purposes it to himself in his heart, namely, let him give,—a supplement, which readily flows from the previous ὁ σπείρων; comp. the subsequent δότην. Let him give according to cordial, free, self-determination. On τῇ καρδ., comp. τῇ ψυχῇ, Gen. xxxiv. 8. The present is used, because the προαιρεῖσθαι is conceived as only now emerging after the foregoing teaching.¹ In προαιρέομαι (only here in the N. T., but often in the sense of resolving in Greek writers; comp. 2 Macc. vi. 9; 3 Macc. ii. 30, vi. 10; 4 Macc. ix. 1), προ has the notion of the preference, which we give to that on which we resolve, because the simple αἰρεῖσθαι has the sense of sibi eligere, where it likewise expresses a resolve or purpose (Xen. vii. 6. 37; Ages. iii. 4; Soph. Ajax, 443; Isocrates, Panath. 185). Hence μάλλον also, though in itself superfluous, may be added to προαιρεῖσθαι (Xen. Mem. ii. 1. 2, iii. 5. 16, iv. 2. 9). — ἐκ λύπης ἢ ἐξ ἀνάγκης] The opposite of καθὼς προαιρ. τ. καρδ.: out of sadness, namely, at having to lose something by the giving, or out of necessity, because one thinks himself forced by circumstances and cannot do otherwise (comp. Philem. 14). Ἐκ denotes the subjective state, out of which the action proceeds. To the ἐκ λύπης stands contrasted ἐξ εὐμενῶν στέρνων, Soph. Oed. C. 488; and to the ἐξ ἀνάγκης, the ἐκ θυμοῦ φιλέων, Hom. Il. ix. 486. — ἰλαρόν γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] Motive for complying with this precept. The emphasis is on ἰλαρόν, whereby the opposite, as the giving ἐκ λύπης and ἐξ ἀνάγκης, is excluded from the love of God. Comp. Rom. xii. 8. The saying is from LXX. Op. 353, δώτης also. See in general, Lobeck, Paralip. p. 428.

Ver. 8 ff. After Paul has aroused them to ample and willing giving, he adds further the assurance, that God can bestow

¹ The θέλειν, not yet taking definite shape, already existed ἀπὸ ἑρῶσι; but the definite determination how much each desires to give, is conceived by Paul as occurring now, after the readers have read ver. 9.

(vv. 8, 9), and will bestow (vv. 10, 11) on them the means also for such beneficence. Finally, he subjoins the religious gain, which this work of contributing brings, ver. 11, ἥτις κατεργάζεται κ.τ.λ., on to ver. 14.

Ver. 8. The δέ is continuative; δυνατός, however, is with emphasis prefixed, for the course of thought is: God has the power, and (ver. 10) He will also do it. The discourse sets out from possibility, and passes over to reality. — πᾶσαν χάριν] every showing of kindness. This refers to earthly blessing, by which we have the means for beneficence; see the sentence of aim, that follows. Chrysostom correctly says: ἐμπλῆσαι ὑμᾶς τοσούτων ὡς δύνασθαι περιττείνειν ἐν τῇ φιλοτιμίᾳ ταύτῃ. Theodoret and Wolf, at variance with the context, hold that it applies to spiritual blessings; Flatt and Osiander, to blessings of both kinds. — περισσεύσαι] transitive: efficere ut largissime redundet in vos. See on iv. 15. — ἐν παντὶ πάντοτε πᾶσαν] in all points at all times all, an energetic accumulation. Comp. on Eph. v. 20; Phil. i. 3, 4. — πᾶσαν αὐτάρκειαν ἔχοντες] having every, that is, all possible self-sufficing; for this is the subjective condition, without which we cannot, with all blessing of God, have abundance εἰς πᾶν ἔργον ἀγαθόν. Hence Paul brings out so emphatically this necessary subjective requirement for attaining the purpose, which God connects with his objective blessing: in order that you, as being in every case always quite self-contented, etc. Αὐτάρκεια is not the sufficienter habere in the sense of external position, in which no help from others is needed (as it is taken usually; also by Emmerling, Flatt, Rückert, Osiander), but rather (comp. Hofmann also) the subjective frame of mind, in which we feel ourselves so contented with what we ourselves have that we desire nothing from others,—the inward self-sufficing, to which stands opposed the προσδεὲς ἄλλων (Plato, Tim. p. 33 D) and ἐπιθυμεῖν τῶν ἀλλοτρίων. Comp. 1 Tim. vi. 6; Phil. iv. 11, and the passages in Wetstein. It is a moral quality (for which reason Paul could say so earnestly ἐν παντὶ πάντ. πᾶς, without saying too much), may subsist amidst very different external circumstances, and is not dependent on these,—which, indeed, in its very nature, as τελειότης κτήσεως ἀγαθῶν (Plato, Def. p. 412 B), it cannot be. Comp. Dem. 450. 14; Polyb. vi. 48. 7: πρὸς πᾶσαν περίστασιν αὐτάρκης. — περισσεύητε εἰς πᾶν ἔργον ἀγαθόν] that you may have abundance (comp. ἐν παντὶ πλουτιζόμενοι, ver. 11) for every good work (work of beneficence; comp. Acts ix. 36, and see Knapp, Opusc., ed. 1, p. 486 ff.). If Rückert had not taken αὐτάρκεια in an objective sense at variance with the notion, he would not have refined so much on περισσ., which he understands as referring to the growth of the Corinthians themselves: "in order that you, having at all times full sufficiency . . . may become ever more diligent unto every good work." De Wette also refines on the word, taking the participial clause of that, which in spite of the περισσεύσαι takes place in the same: "inasmuch as you have withal for yourselves quite enough," which would present a very external and selfish consideration to the reader, and that withal expressed of set purpose so strongly!

Ver. 9 connects itself with περισσ. εἰς πᾶν ἔργον ἀγαθ. This περισσεύειν is to exhibit the fulfilment of the Scripture saying in your case: *Hc scattered, He gave to the poor;*¹ His righteousness remains for ever. The quotation is Ps. cxii. 9 (exactly after the LXX.), where the subject is ἀνὴρ ὁ φοβούμενος τὸν κύριον. — ἐσκόρπισεν] figurative description of the beneficent man, who μετὰ δαφιλείας ἔδωκε, Chrysostom. Comp. Symmachus, Prov. xi. 24. Bengel well says: "Verbum generosum: spargere, plena manu, sine anxia cogitatione, quorsum singula grana cadant." But that Paul (not the original) had in his view the image of strewing seed, is already probable from ver. 6, and is confirmed by ver. 10 (in opposition to Hofmann). Regarding the use in late Greek of the originally Ionic word, see Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 218. — ἡ δικαιοσύνη] is not, with Chrysostom, Theophylact, Calvin, Grotius, Estius, Bengel, Rosenmüller, Vater, Emmerling, and others, to be taken as beneficence (Zachariae and Flatt have even: recompense), which it never means, not even in Matt. vi. 1; but it always means righteousness, which, however, may, according to the context, as here (comp. Tob. xiv. 11), be that which expresses itself by doing good. So also קָרָן, which on this account is often translated by ἐλεημοσύνη in the LXX. (see Gesen. Thes. III. p. 1151; Buxt. Lex. Talm. p. 1890). The Christian moral righteousness is beneficent through the love which comes from faith. Comp. Rom. xii. 9, x. 13–15; Gal. v. 6. — μένει εἰς τ. αἰῶνα] is, according to Paul, to be taken quite in the full sense of the words: remains for ever (comp. Diod. i. 56; Lucian, Philops. 17), never ceases, either before the Parousia, when his δικαιοσύνη continues to develop its vital activity, as in general, so specially through beneficent love, or after the Parousia, when, in itself incapable of being lost, it has its eternal subsistence in love that cannot be lost (1 Cor. xiii. 8, 13). Explanations, such as of a perpetua laus apud homines and gloriosa merces apud Deum (Estius, comp. Chrysostom, Grotius, Emmerling, and others), or that it applies merely to the earthly lifetime of the beneficent one (Beza), are at variance with the words, which affirm the μένειν of the δικαιοσύνη itself; and in the N. T. μένειν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα is always to be taken in the definite sense of eternal abiding. See John viii. 35, xii. 34; Heb. vii. 24; 1 Pet. i. 25; 1 John ii. 17. Comp. μένειν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, John vi. 27. Hence de Wette also takes it too indefinitely: “that the beneficence itself, or the means for it, has enduring subsistence.” Chrysostom and Theodoret have, moreover, inverting the matter, found the beneficence here, which Chrysostom compares to a fire consuming sins, to be the cause of the justification. It is its consequence and effect, Gal. v. 6, 22, Col. iii. 12 ff., al., as is the Christian righteousness of life itself, Rom. vi., viii. 4 ff.

Ver. 10. The progress of the discourse is this: able is God, etc., ver. 8; but He who gives seed, etc., will also do it. The description of God introduced by δέ contains the ground of this promise, which rests on a syllogism a minori ad majus. — Who supplies seed to the sower and bread for eating, is a reminiscence of Isa. lv. 10, which is very suitable to the figure prominent in the context (vv. 6, 9). On βρώσις, actus edendi, differing from βρῶμα, cibus, see on Rom. xiv. 17; 1 Cor. viii. 4; Col. ii. 16. — Chrysostom, Castalio, Beza, and others, including Hofmann, rightly connect χορηγήσει with what follows. Erasmus, Luther, Calvin, Estius, Elzevir, and others, including Ewald and Neander, think that καὶ ἄρτον εἰς βρώσιν χορηγ. should go together. This would be at variance with Isa. lv. 10, and would destroy the symmetrical relation of the two parts of the verse. — χορηγήσει¹ κ. πληθυνεῖ τὸν σπόρον ὑμῶν] i.e. dropping the figure: will give and increase the means, with which you distribute benefits. What is given away benevolently by the readers, is the seed which they scatter (ὁ σπόρος αὐτῶν); hence Rückert's idea is arbitrary and unnecessary, that here two clauses, χορηγήσει ὑμῶν σπόρον and πληθυνεῖ τὸν σπόρον ὑμῶν, are blended into one. Rückert also inappropriately thinks that Paul is not speaking at all of the present, but wholly of the future, of the blessed consequences of their beneficence now asked, and that ὁ σπόρος, therefore, does not denote what they were now to give away, but what God will further bestow on them. At variance with the entire course of the passage (see on ver. 8 ff.); and the very δι' ἡμῶν in ver. 11 ought to have prevented the excluding of the present time. Paul intends by χορηγήσει . . . ὑμῶν the means for the present work of collection, and only with καὶ αὐξήσει does he promise the blessing thence arising for the future. This κ. αὐξ. τὰ γεννήματα τῆς δικ. ὑμ. corresponds to the preceding καὶ ἄρτον εἰς βρώσιν: and will make the fruits of your righteousness grow (see on ver. 9), i.e. and will cause that the blessing, which proceeds from your δικαιοσύνη (what blessing that is, see ver. 11) may become always larger. Paul abides by the figure. Just as God causes ἄρτον εἰς βρώσιν to grow from the natural seed, so from the σπόρος, which the beneficent scatters through his gifts of love, He likewise causes fruits (blessings) to grow; but because this σπόρος had been sown by the beneficent man in virtue of his Christian righteousness, the fruits produced are the γεννήματα τῆς δικαιοσύνης αὐτοῦ, just as the bread-fruits, which the husbandman obtains from his σπόρος, are the γεννήματα of his diligence. Hence Theodoret rightly remarks: σπόρον μέντοι πάλιν τὴν εὐποΐαν ἐκάλεσε· γεννήματα δὲ δικαιοσύνης τὴν ἐκ ταύτης βλάσταςαν ὠφέλειαν. — γέννημα, in the sense of vegetable fruit, according to late Greek; not to be written γένημα. Comp. on Matt. xxvi. 29. On the figurative expression γεννήμ. τ. δικαιοσ., comp. Hos. x. 12.

or ἔσεσθε (Grotius, Rosenmüller, Flatt), nor to be attached to ver. 8, so that vv. 9 and 10 would be a parenthesis (Valla, Cornelius & Lapide, Knatchbull, Homberg, Wolf, Bengel, Schulz), which is forbidden by the portion of the discourse beginning afresh at ver. 10; but it is anacoluthic, namely, in such a way that it is attached to the mentally supplied logical subject of what is promised in ver. 10 (ὑμεῖς), and indeed of this whole promise, not merely of the portion of it contained in πληθυνεῖ τ. σπόρον ὑμῶν (Hofmann): inasmuch as you become enriched. Comp. on i. 7. The becoming rich in everything is, according to the connection (see ver. 10), an earthly enrichment, not, however, in and for itself, but with the telic ethical reference: εἰς πᾶσαν ἀπλότητα, whereby Rückert's objection disappears, that it would be unsuitable for the apostle to promise to his readers riches. Rückert understands it of a spiritual enrichment (viii. 7), and therefore attaches πλουτιζ. only to τῆς δικαιοσύνης ὑμῶν. This is as arbitrary as Hofmann's interpretation of an internal enrichment, which makes the sowing abundant, so that they with small means are able to give more liberally than otherwise with large, if their growth on all sides in the Christian life ultimately issues in an increase of entire simplicity and self-devotion. Without arbitrary restriction and separation, ἐν παντὶ πλουτ. εἰς πᾶσ. ἀπλ. can only be a modal definition of the whole promise χορηγήσει on to δικαιοσ. ὑμῶν. — εἰς πᾶσαν ἀπλότ.] ἀπλότης does not mean even here (comp. on viii. 2) bountifulness, but singleness, simplicity of heart; and εἰς expresses not the consequence of ἐν π. πλουτιζ., but the aim: for every simplicity, i.e. in order to bring it into exercise, to give it satisfaction (through the corresponding exercise of beneficence). The emphasis rests, as formerly on ἐν παντί, so here on πᾶσαν, whereby attention is directed to the present work of collection and every one that might be set on foot in future by Paul (ἥτις κατεργ. δι' ἡμῶν κ.τ.λ.). — ἥτις κατεργάζεται κ.τ.λ.] quippe quae, etc. With this the discourse makes the transition to set forth the religious side of this blessing of the collecting work, ver. 12 ff. — δι' ἡμῶν] through our means, in so far as the work of the ἀπλότης, the collection, διακονεῖται ὑφ' ἡμῶν, viii. 19, 20, and the apostle, for himself and his companions, feels so much that is elevating in this service of love, that he cannot let pass unmentioned. — The thanksgivers are the receivers of the gifts of the ἀπλότης. The paraphrase of Grotius: "quae causa est, cur nos gratias Deo agamus," is incorrect (on account of διὰ, and of vv. 12, 13). — τῷ θεῷ] might belong to κατεργάζεται, but is better, because in uniformity with ver. 12, joined to εὐχαριστίαν as an appropriating dative (Bernhardy, p. 88), which is quite warranted in keeping with the construction εὐχαριστεῖν τινι (comp. Stallb. ad Plat. Euthyphr. p. 13 D, Apol. S. p. 30 A).

Ver. 12. Confirmation of what was just said ἥτις κατεργάζεται κ.τ.λ. by the particular circumstances of the present collection.¹ — ἡ διακονία τῆς λειτουργ. ταύτης] i.e. the service, which you render by this λειτουργία. And the work of collection is called λειτουργία, in so far as it was to be regarded, according to its destined consecration to God, as a priestly bringing of offering (going to the benefit of the receivers). Comp. on Phil. ii. 17, 25; Rom. xiii. 6, xv. 16. Most others take ἡ διακονία of the service of the apostle, who took charge of the collection (τὴν λειτουργίαν ταύτην). But this is at variance with ver. 13, where τῆς διακονίας ταύτης is manifestly equivalent to τῆς διακονίας τῆς λειτ. ταύτ., and must be understood of the service rendered by the contributors. Hence the activity of those conveying it is not even to be understood as included here (Hofmann). — οὐ μόνον κ.τ.λ.] The emphasis lies on προσαναπληρ. and περισσ., in which case the expression with ἐστι denotes how the διακονία is as regards its efficacy, not simply what it effects (this would be the simple present of the verb). The service, etc., has not only the supplementing quality, in that it makes up for what the saints lack, but also an abounding, exceedingly blissful quality, in that it calls forth many thanksgivings towards God. Others, like Piscator and Flatt, connect περισσεύουσα τῷ θεῷ: "it contributes much to glorify God;" comp. Hofmann: "it makes for God a rich produce." Against linguistic usage, since περισσεύει μοί τι means: I have abundance or superfluity in something (Thuc. ii. 65. 9; Dion. Hal. iii. 11; Tob. iv. 16; John vi. 13; Luke ix. 17; comp. Luke xii. 15; Mark xii. 44). There must have been used εἰς θεόν or εἰς τὴν δόξαν τοῦ θεοῦ (Rom. v. 15; 2 Cor. iv. 15). — On προσανα-πληρώω, to fill by adding to, comp. xi. 9; Plat. Men. p. 84 D; Diod. v. 71; Athen. 14, p. 654 D; Wisd. xix. 4.

Ver. 13 is not to be placed in a parenthesis; see on ver. 14. The participle is again anacoluthic (comp. on ver. 11). As if he had said before: by the fact that many give thanks to God, Paul now continues: inasmuch as they, induced by the tried character of this service, praise God on account of the submission, etc.¹ Hofmann considers ver. 13 as co-ordinated with ver. 11, so that the δοξάζοντες τ. θ. would be the subjects themselves performing the service, who by this service prove themselves to be Christians. If so, (1) we should have to leap over ver. 12 as a merely relative appendage of ver. 11, and to eliminate it from the continuity of the chain of thought; but it does not lend itself to be so dealt with either in virtue of the position assigned to it by ὅτι, or in virtue of the important contents of its two clauses; (2) we should have to shut our eyes to the fact, that δοξάζοντες τ. θ. is obviously correlative to the previous διὰ πολλ. εὐχαριστιῶν τῷ θεῷ; finally, we should have to make the participial clause afterwards begin, in a very involved fashion, with ἐπὶ τῇ ὑποταγῇ κ.τ.λ., in spite of the fact that this ἐπὶ could not but at once present itself to, and obtrude itself upon, every reader, as the specification of the ground of the δοξάζοντες τ. θεόν (comp. ver. 15; Luke ii. 20; Acts iv. 21; Eccclus. iii. 2). — The δοκιμὴ τῆς διακον. τ. is the indoles spectata (see on viii. 2) of this work of giving, according to which it has shown itself such as might have been expected in keeping with the Christian standard (especially of love). So Theophylact: διὰ τῆς δοκίμου ταύτης καὶ μεμαρτυρημένης ἐπὶ φιλανθρωπία διακονίας. Others take the relation of the genitive as: the attestedness, in which this bounty has exhibited you. So Calvin ("erat enim specimen idoneum probandae Corinthiorum caritatis, quod erga fratres procul remotos tam liberales erant"), Estius, Rosenmüller, Flatt, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Ewald, Osiander; comp. also Hofman, who takes τῆς διακονίας as epexegetical genitive. But it is only in what follows that the ground of the praise is introduced as subsisting in the Corinthians, and that by a different preposition (ἐπί), and, besides, it is most natural to understand τῆς διακονίας τ. of that which is attested, so that the attested character of the collecting work appears as the occasion (διά, see Winer, p. 357 [E. T. 476]; Bernhardt, p. 235) of God's being praised on account of the obedience of the Corinthians, etc. Observe, withal, how the actual occasion which primarily brings about the δοξάζειν τ. θ. (διά), and the deeper ground of this δοξάζειν (ἐπί), are distinguished. We may add that Rückert arbitrarily finds here an evidence that Paul in the collection had it as his aim to break down the repugnance of the Jewish-Christians towards the Gentile-Christians by this proof of the latter's love. Comp. on 1 Cor. xvi. 1. The work of collection may have furthered this reconciliation, but this was not its aim. — ἐπὶ τῇ ὑποταγῇ . . . πάντας] contains two reasons for their praising God. The first refers to the gospel of Christ (concerning Christ, ii. 12): on account of the compliance with your confession (because you are so obedient in fact to your Christian confession of faith), they praise God in reference to the gospel of Christ, which, in fact, produces such compliance of its confessors. The second reason refers to the persons, namely, to them, the receivers themselves, and all Christians in general. and on account of the simplicity of the fellowship (because you held the Christian fellowship in such a sincere and pure manner) they praise God in reference to themselves and to all, as those whom this ἀπλότης τ. κοινωνίας goes to benefit. Paul rightly adds κ. εἰς πάντας; for by the beneficence towards the Jews the Corinthians showed, in point of fact, that they excluded no Christians from the sincere fellowship of love. The expositors connect εἰς το εὐαγγ. τ. Χ. either with τῆς ὁμολογ. ὑμῶν, so that ὁμολογ. εἰς is said, like πίστις εἰς (Erasmus Schmid, Wolf, Platt, Rückert, Ewald, Osiander, and others, including Billroth), or with τῇ ὑποταγῇ (Chrysostom, Erasmus, Calvin, Beza, Grotius, and many others), and then εἰς αὐτοὺς κ. εἰς πάντας with τῆς κοινωνίας.¹

¹ Rückert and most others interpret: "on account of the sincerity of your fellowship with them and with all;" but Billroth and Neander: "on account of the liberality of communication to them and to all,"—which, however, is quite wrong, for ἀπλότης does not mean liberality, and of the communication (which, besides, is never the meaning of κοινωνία at least in the N. T.; see on Rom. xv. 26, xii. 13, Gal. vi. 6) it could not be said that it had taken place to all.

But this view would require the connecting link of the article both before εἰς τὸ εὐαγγ. and also before εἰς αὐτούς, since neither ὑποτάσσεσθαι nor ὁμολογεῖν nor κοινωνεῖν is construed with εἰς, the last not even in Phil. i. 5 (in opposition to de Wette). The suggestion to which Hofmann has recourse, that the twice used εἰς expresses the direction in which both—the ὑποταγὴ τῆς ὁμολογίας and the ἀπλότης τῆς κοινωνίας—take place, has against it the non-insertion of the connecting article, which only may be rightly omitted when εἰς in both cases belongs to the verb (δοξάζοντες τ. θ.).¹ Rückert's appeal to the inexactness of the language in this chapter is unfounded and the more to be rejected, that no fault can be found with the meaning—by no means tame (Osiander), but rich in significant reference—which arises from the strictly grammatical construction. Observe especially the quite Pauline way of exhausting, by different prepositions, the different characteristic aspects of the subject-matter (here the δοξάζειν τὸν θεόν), which he does according to the categories of the occasion (διὰ), the ground (ἐπὶ), and the point of reference (εἰς: with a view to). Comp. i. 11, Rom. iii. 25, and many other passages. — On ὁμολογία,² confession, comp. 1 Tim. vi. 12, 13; Heb. iii. 1, iv. 14, x. 23; 3 Esr. ix. 8; not so in the Greek writers. The explanation consensus (Erasmus: "quod intelligant vos tanto consensu obedire monitis evangelicis," comp. Castalio, Vatablus, and Calvin) accords, no doubt, with the classical usage, but is at once set aside by the fact that the passage must have run: ἐπὶ τῇ ὁμολογίᾳ τῆς ὑποταγῆς.

Ver. 14. Καὶ αὐτῶν δεήσει ὑπὲρ ὑμ.] does not go with περισσεύουσα in ver. 12, so that ver. 13 would be a parenthesis (Beza, Estius, Rosenmüller, Flatt, Olshausen, de Wette), because in that case Paul would have written very enigmatically, and must at least have continued with διὰ instead of with the dative. Nor yet does it go with δοξάζοντες, in which case the dative is either made to depend on ἐπὶ (Luther, Castalio, Bengel), or is taken instrumentally (Emmerling, Billroth, Osiander, Neander; Rückert does not decide), for in the former case there would result an idea strange and destitute of all analogy from the N. T. (Bengel wrongly appeals to 2 Tim. i. 3); in the latter, καί would be superfluous, and the prefixing of the αὐτῶν would remain entirely unregarded. We must rather take καὶ αὐτῶν . . . ἐπιποθούντων together as genitive absolute (comp. the punctuation in Lachmann and Tischendorf, also Ewald and Hofmann), and καὶ αὐτοί means they too, by which is meant to be indicated the fact that, and the mode in which, on their side also the ἀπλότης τῆς κοινωνίας, which the Corinthians have shown, is returned. Thus: while they too with prayer for you long after you. The emergence of the genitive absolute without difference of the subject is a phenomenon also frequent in classical authors. See Poppo, ad Thucyd. I. p. 119 f.; Richter, de anacol. § 16; Matthiae, p. 1306; Bornemann, ad Act. xiii. 6. — δεήσει is not instrumental, but an accompanying accessory definition of the mode: with prayer, amid prayer for you.¹ Comp. Bernhardt, p. 100 f. — Regarding ἐπιποθεῖν, see on v. 2. It is the longing of pious, grateful love for personal fellowship with the brethren far distant. It is a sheer fancy that it means maximo amore complecti (Beza and many others, even Billroth). — διὰ τὴν ὑπερβάλλουσαν κ.τ.λ.] reason of this pious longing: because the grace of God is abundant towards you. How far this was shown in the present instance, see ver. 13. Chrysostom well says: ἐπιποθοῦσι γὰρ τοῦτο οὐ διὰ τὰ χρήματα, ἀλλ' ὥστε θεαταὶ γενέσθαι τῆς δεδομένης ὑμῖν χάριτος. Even in this δ. τ. ὑπερβάλλ. χάριν, Hofmann finds the contrast between the Israelitic Christians and the Gentile Christians, who before had lived beyond the pale of the church of God, and without God in the world. If Paul had meant this relation, he would have expressed it (comp. Eph. ii. 12). — ἐφ' ὑμῖν belongs to ὑπερβάλλ. Comp. Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. iv. 2. 18. ἐπί denotes the object, to which the activity has passed over. Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 290 [E. T. 337].

Ver. 15. At the close we have an exclamation of gratitude springing out of deep piety (comp. Rom. ix. 5, xi. 33 ff.; 1 Cor.

xv. 57; Gal. i. 5; 1 Tim. i. 17), without any special purpose (such as to awaken humility, Beza; comp. Chrysostom), but issuing out of the fuller craving of the heart, without being intended (as Hofmann holds) to impress the duty of willingly contributing gifts which are so small in comparison. — The δωρεά is consequence and evidence of the χάρις, ver. 14. Comp. Rom. v. 15, 17. — ἐπὶ τῇ ἀνεκδιηγ. αὐτοῦ δωρεᾷ] on account of his undescribable gift. What is meant by this is indicated to the Christian consciousness by ἀνεκδιηγ. (comp. Rom. xi. 33; Eph. iii. 18 f.), namely, the whole wonderful and inexpressibly blissful work of redemption. It is for this, and not simply for the grace imparted to the Gentiles (Hofmann), that Paul gives thanks, because it is the gracious foundation of such fellowship in love, and of its blissful working. Others¹ understand it of the previously discussed happy result of the work of collection (Calvin, Estius, Bengel, Billroth, Rückert, Osiander; comp. Ewald, who takes χάρις κ.τ.λ. as the quoted closing words of the prayer of gratitude on the part of the church at Jerusalem itself); but in that case ἀνεκδιήγητος appears to be much too strong an epithet, whereas it is quite suitable to the highest of all God's gifts, the δωρεὰ κατ' ἐξοχήν. Comp. Rom. v. 15; Heb. vi. 4. — On ἀνεκδιηγῆτω, comp. Arrian, Anab. p. 310: τὴν ἀνεκδιήγητον τόλμαν.

¹ To these belongs Grotius also, who in his acute way remarks: "Paulus in gratiarum actionem se illis in Judaea fratribus adjungit, et quasi Amen illis accinit." Chrysostom and Theophylact quote both explanations, but incline more to that which we have adopted.

CHAPTER X.

VER. 7. Instead of ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ read ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ; see the exegetical remarks. — After ἡμεῖς Elz. has χριστοῦ. An addition condemned by a great preponderance of evidence. — Ver. 8. τε] is wanting in B F G, min. Chrys. Theophyl. Bracketed by Lachm., and deleted by Rück. But how easily might the omission of the particle take place, as it might quite well be dispensed with, while there was no ground whatever for inserting it! — καί before περισσ. has against it the principal uncials and vss. An addition produced by the sense of climax. — ἡμῶν] is, on preponderating evidence, to be deleted, with Lachm. and Tisch. A supplementary insertion, instead of which μοι is also found. — Vv. 12, 13. The words οὐ συνιοῦσιν ἡμεῖς δέ, which follow after ἑαυτοὺς ἑαυτοῖς in the Recepta, and are defended by Lachm. Rück. Tisch. Reiche, are wanting in D* F G 109, codd. of the Itala, Ambrosiast. Auct. gr. de singul. cleric. (in Cyprian) Vigil. taps. Idacius, Sedul. (while in 74 Vulg. Lucif. Pel. Fulg. only οὐ συνιοῦσιν is wanting). Condemned by Mill, Bengel, Semler, Morus, Griesb. Rosenm. Flatt, Fritzsche, Billr., Rinck, Lucubr. crit. p. 165 f.; Ewald. But the very fact that we have only Occidental evidence on the side of the omission makes the latter suspicious, and the difficulty of the words (which, with the reference of αὐτοί to Paul so easily suggesting itself after ἀλλά, cannot at all be overcome), while in the event of their omission the passage runs on smoothly, makes their deletion appear an expedient critically violent and resorted to in the interest of explanation. Where οὐ συνιοῦσιν only is wanting (see above), ἡμεῖς δέ appears to be an imperfect restoration of the imperfect text. — The following καυχησόμεθα also is wanting in D* Clar. Germ., while F G, Boern. Auct. de singul. cler. read καυχώμενοι. But if the word had not been original, but added by way of gloss, the makers of the gloss after their mechanical fashion would not have used the future, but the present, in accordance with the previous τολμῶμεν, to which the comparison of ver. 15 also might induce them. Hence it is to be assumed that in the witnesses adduced above καυχησόμεθα has dropped out. By what means we do not know; perhaps it is simply due to the similar final letters in ἀμεινΑ and καυχησόμεθΑ.

The καυχῶμενοι, subsequently introduced instead of καυχῶμεθα, is to be considered as a critical restoration, made under the influence of ver. 15. — Ver. 14. οὐ γὰρ ὡς μὴ] Lachm. reads ὡς γὰρ μὴ, on the authority of B and two min. only, so that he puts a note of interrogation after αὐτοῦς. Too weakly attested.

Ch. x.-xiii. contain the third chief section of the Epistle, the apostle's polemic vindication of his apostolic dignity and efficiency, and then the conclusion.

Ch. x. 1-18. After the introduction of vv. 1, 2, which plunges at once in mediam rem, Paul, in the first place, makes good against his opponents the power of his genuinely apostolic, working (vv. 1-8), in order to repel the malicious attack that he was strong only in letters (vv. 9-11). This leads him to set forth in contradistinction the very different modes of self-judgment, which are followed by him and his arrogant opponents (vv. 12-16), after which there is further held up to the latter the Christian standard of self-boasting (vv. 17, 18).

REMARK.—The difference of the subject-matter—with the importance of that which had now to be decided—and the emotion excited in the high and pure self-consciousness of the grievously injured Paul, so sufficiently explain the change of tone which at once sets in, and this tone, calculated for the entire discomfiture of his enemies, is just in the last part of the Epistle—after the church as such (as a whole) had been lovingly won over—so suited to its object, that there is no ground at all for the hypothesis of ch. x.-xiii. 10 having formed a separate Epistle (see Intro. § 2).

Ver. 1. Δέ leads over to a new section, and its position lays the emphasis on αὐτός; comp. on Rom. vii. 25: ipse autem ego, I, however, for my own self, independently and without bias from the action of others among you. See what follows. With this αὐτὸς ἐγώ, Paul, in the feeling of his elevation above such action, boldly casts into the scales of his readers the weight of his own personality over against his calumniators. The expression has something in it nobly proud and defiant; but the ἐμφασις τῆς ἀποστολικῆς ἀξίας (Theodoret, comp. Chrysostom, Theophylact, Oecumenius, and others, including Billroth) lies not in αὐτός, but in ἐγὼ Παῦλος simply. While many, as Beza and Olshausen, have left the reference of αὐτός quite unnoticed, and others have arbitrarily imported what the context does not suggest, such as

Erasmus, Bengel, and also Hofmann;¹ Einmerling and Rückert assume that Paul wrote from x. 1 onward with his own hand, so that the αὐτός was explained to the readers by the altered handwriting. Comp. Ewald, according to whom Paul meant only to add a short word of conclusion with his own hand and therewith to end the letter, but on beginning this concluding word, felt himself urged to enter on a detailed discussion of the matter itself in its personal relations. But, seeing that Paul has not added anything like τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ (1 Cor. xvi. 21; Col. iv. 18), or at least written γράφω ὑμῖν instead of παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς, there is no sufficiently certain hint of this explanation in the words themselves, the more especially as the αὐτός ἐγώ is frequently used by him elsewhere (xii. 13; Rom. vii. 25, ix. 3, xv. 14). Rückert finds a confirmation of that hypothesis in the fact that this Epistle does not, like the First, contain some concluding lines in his own hand. But most of the apostle's letters contain nothing of the sort; and this Epistle in particular, on account of its whole character and on account also of its bearer, stood so little in need of any authentication, if there was to be such a thing, from his own hand, that his enemies would have made themselves ridiculous by doubting the authenticity of the composition. Apart from this, it remains very probable that Paul himself wrote the conclusion of the Epistle, possibly from xiii. 11 onward, without mentioning the fact expressly. — διὰ τῆς πραότητος καὶ ἐπιεικείας τοῦ Χριστοῦ, by means of the meekness and gentleness of Christ; i.e. assigning a motive for compliance with my exhortation by pointing to the fact, that Christ, whose example I have to imitate, is so gentle and meek (Matt. xi. 29, 30; Isa. xlii. 2, 8, lii. 4-7). Comp. Rom. xii. 1; 1 Cor. i. 10. The gentleness and meekness of Christ belong to the divine love manifested in Him (Rom. viii. 39 ; Tit. iii. 4 ff.), and are continually shown by Him in His heavenly government, in the working of His grace, in His intercession, etc. Estius designates rightly the ground of the motive assigned : “ quia cupiebat non provocari ad severitatem vindictae ” (which would not be in harmony with Christ’s meekness and gentleness). On ἐπιείκεια, clementia (Acts xxiv. 4), which is often found in connection with πραότης (as Plut. Pericl. 39, Caes. 57 ; Philo, de Vita Mos. p. 112), comp. Wetstein. It is attributed even to God (2 Macc. x. 4 ; Bar. ii. 27) and to Wisdom (Wisd. xii. 18). Bengel gives the distinction of the two words : “ πραότης virtus magis absoluta ; ἐπιείκεια magis refertur ad alios.” It is the opposite of standing on one’s full rights, Plato, Def. p. 412 B : δικαίων κ. συμφερόντων ἐλάττωσις. — ὃς κατὰ πρόσωπον μὲν κ.τ.λ.] I who, to the face, am indeed humble, of a subdued, unassuming character among you, but in absence have courage towards you—a malicious opinion of his opponents, designed to counteract the influence of the apostle’s letters, which he here appropriates to himself μιμητικῶς. Comp. ver. 10. Κατὰ πρόσωπον, coram, is not a Hebraism, but see Wetstein on the passage ; Hermann, ad Soph. Trach. 102 ; Jacobs, ad Ach. Tat. p. 612. There is no need to supply anything after ταπεινός, neither εἰμί nor ὢν. On ταπεινός, comp. Xen. Mem. iii. 10. 5, where it is connected with ἀνελεύθερος ; Dem. 1312. 2.

REMARK.—Rückert is wrongly of opinion that the assertion of the opponents had been true, and just on that account had been so ill taken by Paul ; that he belonged to those in whom natural impetuosity is not united with personal courage. Against this there is the testimony of his whole working from Damascus to Rome ; and outpourings like vi. 4 ff. al. do not lack internal truth. Comp. besides, passages like Acts xx. 22 ff., xxi. 13, xxiv. 25 ; 2 Cor. xi. 23 ff. al. That assertion of his opponents may be explained from the fact that, though there were not wanting disturbing phenomena even at his second arrival in Corinth (ii. 1, xii. 21), it was only subsequently that the evils had become so magnified and multiplied as to necessitate his now writing (in our first Epistle) far more severely than he had spoken in Corinth.

Ver. 2. After the previous relative clause, the παρακαλῶ is in substance resumed by means of δέομαι δέ, and that in such a way that δέ has its adversative reference in the contents of the relative clause (Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 174; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 377), and the δέομαι now substituted for παρακαλῶ betrays the increasing earnestness softened by the mention of Christ's gentleness and meekness. Emmerling and Rückert refer δέομαι not to the Corinthians, but to God: "but I pray God that I when present may not be obliged to act with the confidence and boldness," etc. So also Ewald and Hofmann. But how strangely Paul would have written, if he had left his παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς to stand quite abruptly at the very beginning of the new address! It is all the more arbitrary not to refer δέομαι also to the readers, and not to be willing to supply a ὑμῶν with δέομαι from the previous παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς. Chrysostom and most expositors rightly give it this reference. And how little does what is attached to δέομαι δέ (observe especially ἡ λογίζομαι κ.τ.λ.) sound like the contents of prayer! — τὸ μὴ παρὼν θαρρῆσαι κ.τ.λ.] I entreat the not being courageous in presence, i.e. that I may not when present (this παρὼν has the emphasis) be of brave courage with the confidence, etc. The meaning is: that you may not let it come to this, that I, etc. Comp. Chrysostom: μή με ἀναγκάσητε κ.τ.λ. On the infinitive with the article, see Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 225 [E. T. 261]. The nominative παρὼν with the infinitive is quite according to Greek usage. See Kühner, II. p. 344; Matthiae, p. 1248. The πεποίθησις is not specially fiducia in Deum (Grotius, against the context), but generally the official confidentia, assurance. — ἡ λογίζομαι τολμῆσαι] with which I reckon (am minded) to be bold towards certain people, etc. On λογίζομαι, comp. Herod. vii. 176; Xen. Anab. ii. 2. 13; 1 Macc. iv. 35, vi. 19; LXX. 1 Sam. xviii. 25; Jer. xxvi. 3; and on τολμῆσαι, xi. 21; Hom. Il. x. 232; Maetzner, ad Antiph. p. 173. Others, such as the Vulgate, Anselm, Luther, Beza, Piscator, Estius, Er. Schmid, Calovius, Bengel, Semler, Schulz, take λογίζομαι passively (qua efferrī ducor, Emmerling). In that case we should have had an ἀπὼν with τολμῆσαι, because in this lay the most essential point of the hostile criticism; besides, the boldness of the expression, which lies in the correlation of λογίζομαι τοὺς λογιζομένους, would be obliterated. — ἐπὶ τινὰς τοὺς λογιζομ.] against certain, who reckon us, etc., is to be connected with τολμῆσαι, since only by the erroneous course of taking the previous λογίζομαι as passive would the connection with θαρρῆσαι be required (Luther, Beza, Estius, Emmerling, also Billroth). — τινάς denotes quosdam, quos nominare nolo. See on 1 Cor. xv. 12. These are then characterized in their definite quality by τοὺς λογιζομ. See on Luke xviii. 9, and Doederl. ad Oed. Col. p. 296. — ὡς κατὰ σάρκα περιπατοῦντας] as people who walk according to the standard of the flesh. ὡς with the participle as the object of a verb of believing or saying. See Kühner, II. p. 375. Comp. Rom. viii. 36; 1 Cor. iv. 1; LXX. Gen. xxxi. 15, al. The περιπατεῖν κατὰ σάρκα is not an expression of weakness,¹ since περιπατεῖν denotes the moral conduct. Hence the meaning is: as those, whose way of thinking and of acting follows, not the influence of the Holy Spirit, but the lusts opposed to God, which have their seat in the materio-psychical nature of man. Comp. on Rom. viii. 4. This general interpretation is not at variance with the context, since, in fact, a κατὰ σάρκα περιπατεῖν would have shown such a demeanour in the apostle's position as his opponents blamed him for, — bold at a distance, timid when near, full of the fear of men and of the desire to please men. In that special accusation there was therefore expressed this general one of the κατὰ σάρκα περιπατεῖν; διέβαλλον γὰρ αὐτὸν ὡς ὑποκριτὴν, ὡς πονηρὸν, ὡς ἀλαζόνα, Chrysostom. Thus the expression is to be explained from the immediate context, and not of the reproach made to him by the representatives of a false spirituality, that he acted on too free principles (Ewald).

Ver. 3 does not introduce the refutation of the previous accusation (so that, with Estius and Billroth, we should have to supply a quod falsum est), since γάρ may quite naturally find its logical reference in what was expressed before. Nor does it assign the reason for τῇ πεποιθ. ἢ λογιζομαι τολμήσαι, since there is nothing whatever against the reference, which first and most naturally suggests itself, to the chief thought of the previous verse. Hence it assigns the reason of the δεόμαι δὲ κ.τ.λ.: "I entreat, let me not become bold, etc.; for the position of matters with us is quite different from what the opponents believe: we do not march to the field κατὰ σάρκα," etc. Do not therefore run the risk of this! — ἐν σαρκὶ γὰρ περιπ.] Paul wishes to express the thought: for it by no means stands with us so as those think, and hence says: For, though we walk in the flesh, for although the existent form of the sinful bodily human nature is the organ, in which our conduct of life has its course (σάρκα μὲν γὰρ περικείμεθα, Chrysostom), still we do not take the field according to the flesh, the σάρξ is not the standard, according to which our official working, which resembles a campaigning, is carried on. Observe that even in ἐν σαρκί the notion of the σάρξ is not indifferent, expressing the mere life of the body (comp. Gal. ii. 20; Phil. i. 22): this is forbidden by what goes before and follows. If taken in this way, ἐν σαρκὶ περιπ. would contain something very insignificant, because self-evident, and would form no adequate contrast to κατὰ σάρκα—a contrast, which only results when the notion of σάρξ is alike in both clauses. For the stress of this contrast lies in ἐν and κατὰ (in the flesh, not according to the flesh); instead of περιπατοῦμεν, however, there comes in στρατευόμεθα, because it was highly appropriate to the context (vv. 1, 2) to give thus a military character to the apostle's περιπατεῖν in presence of his enemies (comp. vi. 7). On the idea, comp. 1 Tim. i. 18.

Ver. 4. Reason assigned for the assertion just made οὐ κ. σ. στρατευόμεθα, but not a parenthesis (Griesbach, Lachmann), since ver. 5 is manifestly a further explanation of the preceding πρὸς καθαίρ. ὄχλῳ, so that the participles in ver. 5 f. are to be referred to the logical subject of the verse before (ἡμεῖς). Comp. ix. 11, 13.—That the στρατεῦσθαι is not κατὰ σάρκα, is shown from the fact that the weapons of warfare are not σαρκικά; for, if the former were the case, so must the latter also. By the weapons (comp. vi. 7; Rom. vi. 13, xiii. 12) are to be understood the means, which the apostolic activity makes use of in the strife with the hostile powers.—σαρκικά] which belong to the life-sphere of the σάρξ, so that the σάρξ, the sinfully inclined human nature, is their principium essendi, and they do not proceed from the Holy Spirit,¹ as e.g. σοφία σαρκική, i. 12, the νοῦς τῆς σαρκός, Col. ii. 18, the whole ἔργα τῆς σαρκ., Gal. v. 19. Now, since fleshly weapons as such are weak (Matt. xxvi. 41; Rom. vi. 19), and not in keeping with the aims of the apostolic work, the weapons opposed to them are not designated according to their nature (for it is self-evident that they are ὄπλα πνευματικά), but at once according to their specific potency (comp. 2 Cor. ii. 4), as δυνατὰ τῷ θεῷ. By this the passage only gains in pith, since by virtue of the contrast so expressed in σαρκικά the quality of weakness, and in δυνατὰ τῷ θεῷ the pneumatic nature, are understood ex adjuncto. Hence the inference frequently drawn from δυνατὰ τῷ θεῷ, that σαρκικός here must mean weak, is too hasty. — δυνατὰ τῷ θεῷ] mighty for God, i.e. passing with God as mighty, which denotes the true reality of the being mighty, without, however, being a Hebraistic periphrasis for the superlative (Vorstius, Glass, Emmerling, Vater, Flatt). See on ἀστέιος τῷ θεῷ, Acts vii. 20; Bernhardt, p. 83 f. Others, not following this current genuinely Greek usage (for the corresponding Hebrew usage, see Gesenius, Thesaur. I. p. 98), have explained it as: through God (Beza, Grotius, Cornelius a Lapide, Estius, Er. Schmid, Wolf, Bengel, and others; Erasmus has afflatu Dei), or for God, i.e. so that they are to God a means of showing His power (Billroth; comp. Chrysostom and Hofmann). But the former would be superfluous, since it is self-evident in the case of spiritual weapons, and the latter would import something into the words, especially as not God, but Christ (ver. 5), is conceived as the general; comp. 2 Tim. ii. 3. For the mighty πανοπλία of the Christian, which, along with the special apostolic gifts, is also that of the apostles, see Eph. vi. 14 ff. — πρὸς καθαίρειν ὀχυρωμάτων] that, for which the weapons are mighty: to the pulling down of strongholds (Xen. Hell. iii. 2. 3; very frequent in the books of the Maccabees; comp. ὀχυρὸς πύργος, τόπος, ὀχυρὰ πόλις, φρουρά, and the like). The τύφος Ἑλληνικός and the ἰσχύς τῶν σοφισμάτων καὶ τῶν διαλογισμῶν (Chrysostom) are included in the phrase. It does not, however, mean these alone, nor the "old walls of the Jewish legal system" (Klöpper), but generally everything, which may be included as belonging to the category of humanly strong and mighty means of resistance to the gospel. Examples of this figurative use may be seen in Wetstein and Kypke, and from Philo in Loesner, p. 317. The pulling down depicts the making quite powerless and reducing to nought—the καταργεῖν, 1 Cor. i. 28, and καταισχύνειν, 1 Cor. i. 27.

Ver. 5. How the πρὸς καθαίρ. ὀχυρωμ. is executed by the ἡμεῖς (the logical subject in ver. 4): inasmuch as we pull down thoughts (Rom. ii. 15), i.e. bring to nothing hostile deliberations, resolutions, plans, calculations, and the like, raising themselves like fortresses against Christ. More precise definitions (Grotius and many others: "rationationes philosophorum," comp. Ewald; "subtleties," Hofmann; "thoughts of their own," behind which men screen themselves from the urgent knowledge of God) are not warranted by the context, nor yet by the contrast of γνώσις τ. θ., since this is meant objectively (in opposition to de Wette, who understands thoughts of self-conceited wisdom). Also against Olshausen's opinion, that Paul is censuring specially the pretended wisdom of the Christ-party, it is to be observed that he is speaking, not simply of the working against Corinthian opponents, but against enemies in general. The figurative expression of destruction by war, καθαριούντες, was very naturally suggested by the image which had just gone before, and which is immediately afterwards taken up again by ὑψωμα (ἐπέμεινε τῇ τροπῇ, ἵνα πλείονα ποιήσῃ τὴν ἔμφασιν, Chrysostom); and the subsequent ἐπαιρόμ. emphatically corresponds to it. — καὶ πᾶν ὑψωμα κ.τ.λ.] and every exalted thing (rampart, castle, tower, and the like, comp. Aq. Ps. xviii. 34, and see in general, Schleusner, Thes. V. p. 427), which is lifted up against the (evangelical) knowledge of God (the knowledge of God κατ' ἐξοχήν), that this may not become diffused and prevailing. The real meaning of the figurative ὑψωμα is equivalent to that of ὀχύρωμα, ver. 4; the relation to λογισμούς is, however, correctly defined by Bengel: "cogitationes species, altitudo genus." — The enemy, who is thus vanquished by the destruction of his high places, is πᾶν νόημα, i.e. not all reason (Luther; comp. Vulgate: "omnem intellectum"), as if πάντα νοῦν were used, but (comp. on iii. 14, iv. 4) every creation of thought, every product of the human thinking faculty. The λογισμοί before named belong to this, but Paul here goes on to the whole general category of that, which as product of the νοῦς takes the field against Christianity. All this is by Paul and his companions brought into captivity, and thereby into subordination to Christ, after the bulwarks are destroyed, etc. Thus the holy war comes to the goal of complete victory. — εἰς τὴν ἱπακοὴν τοῦ Χ.] so that this πᾶν νόημα, which previously was hostile to Christ, now becomes obedient and subject to Christ. By this is expressed the conversion to Christ, which is attained through the apostolic working, consequently a leading captive ἀπὸ δουλείας εἰς ἐλευθερίαν, ἀπὸ θανάτου πρὸς ζωὴν, ἐξ ἀπωλείας πρὸς σωτηρίαν, Chrysostom. The condition ὑπακοῇ τοῦ Χριστοῦ is conceived of as a local sphere, into which the enemy is led captive. Comp. Luke xxi. 24; Tob. i. 10; 1 Kings viii. 46; 3 Esdr. vi. 16; Judith v. 18. Apart from this conception, Paul would have written τῇ ὑπακοῇ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, or simply τῷ Χριστῷ. Comp. Rom. vii. 23. Kypke, Zachariae, Flatt, Emmerling, Bretschneider, connect εἰς τ. ὑπακ. τ. Χ. with πᾶν νόημα, and take εἰς as contra. But in that case Paul would have written very unintelligibly, and by the change of the preposition (previously κατὰ) would have simply led the reader astray; besides, the αἰχμαλωτίζοντες, without εἰς τ. ὑπακ. τ. Χ., would remain open and incomplete; finally, ver. 6 shows that he conceived the ὑπακοῇ Χριστοῦ as the goal of the working, consequently as belonging to αἰχμαλ. Comp. also Rom. i. 5, xvi. 26.

Ver. 6. The reverse side of the αἰχμαλωτίζοντες κ.τ.λ. just expressed. Although, namely, the αἰχμαλ. πᾶν νόημα εἰς τ. ὑπακ. τοῦ Χριστοῦ is the result of the apostolic warfare on the whole and in general, yet there remain exceptions—persons, who do not surrender themselves captive to Christ's dominion; there remains παρακοή in contradistinction to the ὑπακοή of others. Hence it is a part also of the complete work of victory to punish every παρακοή. And this, says Paul, we are in readiness to execute, so soon as, etc. Bengel well says: "Zelus jam adest; prometur, cum tempus erit." Paul does not speak of the action of war-captives at variance with the duty of obedience, to which they are taken bound (Hofmann). For this the threat, which would amount, in fact, to the avenging of every sin, would be too strong, and the following ὅταν κ.τ.λ. would not be suitable. The παρακουντες must still be enemies who, after the victory, do not submit to the victor. — ἐν ἐτοίμῳ ἔχοντες] in promptu habentes, also in Polyb. ii. 34. 2, and Philo, Leg. ad. Caj. p. 1011, 1029. See, in general, Wetstein. — ὅταν πληρωθῇ ὑμῶν ἡ ὑπακοή] With this he turns to apply what was previously said of a general tenor (ἐκδικ. πᾶσαν παρακ.) specially to the circumstances of the Corinthians, so that the conduct of the Judaistic teachers, who had intruded into Corinth and directed their doings against Paul, appears especially to be included in πᾶσα παρακοή; and the Corinthian church, a part of which had been led astray by those persons, is represented as not yet completely obedient, but as in the course of developing this complete obedience. When this development shall be completed (which till then makes a claim on my patience, "ne laedantur imbecilliores," Bengel), that ἐκδίκησις of every disobedience shall—even as respects the situation of things at Corinth—ensue.¹ Thus the apostle separates the interest of the church from that of the intruding seducers, and presents his relation to the church as one of forbearance and confidence, while his relation to his opponents is one of vengeance delaying its execution only for the sake of the church, which has not yet attained to full obedience—a wise manipulation of the Divide et impera!—How he means to execute the ἐκδικεῖν (Rom. xii. 19), he does not say; he might do so by ordaining excommunication, by giving them over to Satan (1 Cor. v. 5), or by other exercise of his miraculous apostolic power. — ὑμῶν] is placed first with emphasis, to distinguish the church from those whose παρακοή was to be punished. Hofmann, without ground, denies this emphasis, because ὑμῶν does not stand before πληρωθῇ. The emphasis certainly falls, in the first instance, on πληρ., and next not on ἡ ὑπακ., but on ὑμῶν.

Ver. 7. Paul feels that the ἐξουσία, just described in vv. 3–6, is not conceded to him by his opponents and those misled by them in the church; they judge that he is evidently no right servant of Christ, and that he must come to shame with his boasting (comp. ver. 8). He at once breaks into the midst of this course of thought on the part of his opponents with the disapproving question: Do you look on that which lies before the eyes? do you judge according to the appearance? by which he means this, that they profess to have seen him weak and cowardly, when he was in Corinth personally (comp. ver. 1). This does not involve any admission of the charge in ver. 1, but, on the contrary, discloses the error, in accordance with which the charge was based on the apostle's outward appearance, which did not make a display of his boldness. The answer to the question is: If any one is confident that he belongs to Christ, let him judge this again of himself, that just as he belongs to Christ, so do we. The opposing teachers had certainly boasted: How utterly different people are we from this Paul, who is bold only at a distance, and makes a boast of belonging as an apostle to Christ! We are right servants of Christ! — τὰ κατὰ πρόσωπον βλέπετε] is taken interrogatively by Theodoret, Erasmus, Luther, Castalio, Cajetan, Beza, Grotius, Calovius, Wolf, Hammond, Bengel, Heumann, Rosenmüller, Emmerling, Rübiger, Osiander, Klöpfer, and others; along with which, however, many import into κατὰ πρόσωπον elements at variance with the text (see vv. 1 and 10), such as intercourse with Jesus when on earth and other matters. It is taken as not interrogative (Lachmann and Tischendorf), but also with βλέπετε as indicative, and the sentence, consequently, as a judgment of censure, by Chrysostom, Gennadius, Oecumenius, Theophylact, Calvin, Schulz, Flatt. Calvin says: "Magni facitis alios, qui magnis ampullis turgent; me, quia ostentatione et jactantia careo, despicitis;" while Flatt, following Storr, in spite of vv. 1 and 10, refers κατὰ πρόσωπον to the kinship of James with Christ, on which the Christine party had relied. In any case, however, it is more lively and forcible, and therefore more suitable, to take it as interrogative. Others, again, take βλέπετε as an imperative (Vulgate, Ambrosiaster, Anselm, Cornelius a Lapide, Billroth, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Bisping, Hofmann): observe withal what lies so clearly before the eyes! In this view we should not have to explain it with Ewald: "regard personal matters;" so that Paul begins to point to the personal element which is now to be taken into consideration; but with Hofmann: the readers only needed to have their eyes open to what lay before them, in order to judge rightly. But against this it may be urged that κατὰ πρόσωπον could not but most naturally explain itself from ver. 1, and that the meaning itself would have something tame and more calmly argumentative, than would be suited to the lively emotion of the passage. Besides, it is Paul's custom elsewhere to put βλέπετε first, when he summons to an intuemini. See 1 Cor. i. 26, x. 18; Phil. iii. 2. — εἴ τις πέποιθεν ἐαυτῷ Χριστοῦ εἶναι] In this way is designated the confidence which his opponents (not a single peculiar false teacher, as Michaelis thinks) arrogantly cherished for themselves, but denied to Paul, that they were genuine Christ-people, genuine servants of Christ. The addition of δοῦλος to Χριστοῦ in D* E* F G, It. Ambrosiaster, is a correct gloss (comp. xi. 23). For it is not the confiteor of the Christine party (1 Cor. i. 12) that is meant here (Mosheim, Stolz, Flatt, comp. also Olshausen, Dähne, de Wette, Schenkel, Beyschlag, Hilgenfeld, Klöpfer, and others; see against this, Neander, I. p. 393 ff., and also Hofmann), but the assertion—to the exaltation of themselves and the exclusion of Paul—of a true apostolic connection (through calling, gifts, etc.) with Christ¹ on the part of Judaistic pseudo-apostles (xi. 5, xiii. 22, 23). Observe that the teachers here meant were not a party of the church, like the adherents of Christ designated in 1 Cor. i. 12. The very οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς, compared with ver. 8,—to say nothing of the fact that there is no hint of any such special reference,—precludes our explaining it of the continued immediate connection with Christ through visions and the like, of which the heads of the Christine party had probably boasted (de Wette, Dähne, Goldhorn, and others, following Schenkel). — πάλιν] not: on the contrary, or on the other hand, which it never means in the N. T. (see on Matt. iv. 7, and Fritzsche, ad Matt. p. 167), but again, denuo. It refers to ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ, which is correlative to the previous ἐαυτῶ. He is confident to himself; let him then consider once more for himself. In this view there was no need of the shift to which Fritzsche has recourse, that πεποιθέναι and λογίζεσθαι “communem continent mente volvendi notionem.” The verbs might be quite heterogeneous in point of the notion conveyed, since πάλιν is logically defined by the relation of ἐαυτῶ and ἑαυτοῦ. — The Recepta ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, instead of which, however, ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ is to be read,² would mean proprio motu, Luke xii. 57, xxi. 30, 2 Cor. iii. 5, i.e. without any need for one first to say it to him. The text gives no warrant for ironical interpretation (from his own high estimate, Rückert). — οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς] is a litotes from the apostle's point of view. Οὐ γὰρ βούλεται ἐκ προοιμίων σφοδρὸς γίνεσθαι ἀλλὰ κατὰ μικρὸν αὖξεται καὶ κορυφούται, Chrysostom.

¹ Not with His disciples, and in particular with Peter, as Baue insinuates. See his Paulus, I. p. 306, ed. 2. It was in his view the original apostles as immediate disciples of the Lord (see also Holsten, z. Evang. des Paul. u. Petr. p. 24 ff.), from whose position the anti-Pauline party in Corinth had borrowed their watchword Χριστοῦ εἶναι. And in these his opponents Paul was at the same time combating the original apostles.

² The reading ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ (Lachm. ed. min.), supported by B L & 21, is not meaningless (Ewald), but is to be taken: with himself, in quietness for himself—a classic usage since Homer (Il. vii. 195, xix. 255; see Faesi on these passages) of very frequent occurrence; see Kühner, II. p. 296. The translation apud se in the Vulg. and It. also rests on this reading, which might easily enough be supplanted by the better known ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, and hence deserves to be preferred. There lies in this ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ (secum solo reputet) a reproof putting more delicately to shame than in ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ.

Ver. 8. Proof of the οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς from his apostolic authority, which was yet greater than he had already represented it. — τὲ γάρ] etenim, as in Rom. i. 26, vii. 7. See on these passages, and Hermann, ad Soph. Trach. 1015; regarding the independent usage frequent in the later Attic, see Klotz, ad Devar. p. 750 f. — ἐάν] is not used concessively (Rückert; not even 1 Cor. iv. 15, xiii. 1 ff.), but puts a case as a conception of the speaker, in which the realization remains left to experience: for, in case that I shall have boasted myself yet something more (than has been already done by me in vv. 3–6) of the authority, etc., I shall not be put to shame, it will be apparent that I have not been practising empty boasting of which I should have to be ashamed. περισσότης is accusative of object, like τί, vii. 11. See on ix. 2. The reference of the comparative to what was said in ver. 7 (Osiander, Hofmann, following older commentators) has against it the fact that Paul, in ver. 7, has not spoken of an ἐξουσία; and to take περὶ τ. ἐξουσ. ἡμ. as an element added only by way of supplement, would be all the more arbitrary, since, in fact, what follows is attached to it significantly. It is taken too generally by Grotius and others: “plus quam alii possent,” or as: “somewhat more amply” (Ewald; comp. Billroth and Olshausen). On τ. ἐξουσίας κ.τ.λ., comp. xiii. 10. — ἧς ἔδωκεν ὁ κύριος εἰς οἰκοδομὴν κ.τ.λ.] significant more precise definition of the previous ἡμῶν, with a double side-glance at the false apostles, whose power neither was from Christ nor redounded to edification (perfection of the Christian life), but rather to the destruction of the church. Paul conceives of the church as a temple of God, which the apostolic teachers are building (1 Cor. iii. 16; comp. on Rom. xiv. 19); and he is conscious that he will, in the event of his making a still greater boast of that, not be put to shame, but see himself justified by the result of his work. Observe the interchange of plural (ἐξουσ. ἡμ.) and singular. Olshausen, in an arbitrary and involved way, connects εἰς οἰκοδ. with καυχῆσθαι, holding that there is an anticipation of the thought, so that, according to the meaning, it ought to have run: οὐκ αἰσχυνθήσομαι, ἐγένετο γὰρ εἰς κ.τ.λ. — οὐκ αἰσχυνθ.] when? in every case of the future generally. There is no indication in the text of a limitation to the last day (Ewald). Even on his arrival at Corinth he expected that he should experience no cause for shame.

Ver. 9 is taken by Chrysostom, Calvin, Schulz, Morus, Zachariae, Emmerling, Vater, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Ewald, Maier, Hofmann, as the protasis of ver. 11, so that ver. 10 becomes a parenthesis. But by Erasmus, Luther, Castalio, Beza, Grotius, Bengel, and others, also Billroth and Schrader, it is attached to ver. 8, in which case, however, some (Beza, Bengel, comp. Billroth) supply before ἵνα a "quod ego idcirco dico," others (Grotius, comp. Erasmus): "non addam plura ea de re." The latter is pure invention; and from the supplement of Beza there would not at all logically result what is said in ver. 9. No; let ἵνα μὴ δόξω κ.τ.λ. be joined immediately, without assuming any intervening thought, to οὐκ αἰσχυνθήσομαι: I shall not be put to shame (now comes the definition, in a negative form, of the divine aim with reference to the charge in question), in order that I may not appear, etc., that the matter may not remain on the footing of the mere word, but it may be apparent in point of fact that I am something quite other than the man who wishes to frighten you by his letters. If in this way the passage proceeds simply and correctly without logical difficulty, the less simple connection of Chrysostom et al. (see above) is superfluous, and is, moreover, not to be accepted, because the new part of the passage would begin, in a very palpably abrupt way, with ἵνα without any connecting particle,¹ and because what Paul says in ver. 11 could not destroy the appearance indicated in ver. 9, to which belonged matter of fact. — ὡς ἂν ἐκφοβεῖν ὑμᾶς] The Vulgate rightly has: "tanquam terrere vos," and Beza: "ceu perterrefacere vos." The ὡς ἂν modestly takes away from the harsh and strong ἐκφοβεῖν the offensiveness, which in the feeling of the apostle it would have had, if taken by itself and in its full sense. It is not modal ("in any way," Hofmann), but comparative, corresponding quite to our modifying as [German wie]: that I may not appear

Stud.* 1846, p. 61; Buttmann, neut. Gram. p. 189 [E. T. 219]. To resolve it into ὥς ἂν ἐκφοβοῖμι ὑμᾶς (Olshausen) is arbitrary, as if it were oratio directa. The classical ὥς ἄν with optative and subjunctive (Klotz, ad Devar. p. 767), as in 1 Thess. ii. 7, is not to be brought into comparison here. — διὰ τῶν ἐπιστ.] namely, which I write to you (article); he had already written two. The plural does not justify the hypothesis of a third letter already written (Bleek). — The compound ἐκφοβεῖν (comp. ἔκφοβος, Mark ix. 6; Heb. xii. 21) is stronger than the simple form, Plato, Gorg. p. 483 C; Ep. 3, p. 318 B; Thuc. iii. 42. 4; Polyb. xiv. 10. 3; Wisd. xvii. 9, 19; 1 Macc. xiv. 17.

Comp. ver. 1. For the apostle's own commentary on the second part of this assertion of his opponents, see 1 Cor. ii. 3, 4. Quite at variance with the context, some have found here also bodily weakness (Witsius in Wolf; recently, in particular, Holsten, zum Ev. d. Paul. u. Petr. p. 85), and a weak utterance (Er. Schmid). Besides, the tradition is very uncertain and late, which pronounces Paul to have been μικρὸν καὶ συνεσταλμένον τὸ τοῦ σώματος μέγεθος (Niceph. Call. ii. 37). Ver. 11. After ver. 10 a full stop is to be put (see on ver. 9), so that now, without any connecting particle, but with the more striking force, there follows what is suggested for the consideration of the person judging in such wise. — τοιοῦτοι καὶ παρόντες τῇ ἔργῳ] sc. ἐσμέν. In οὐ τολμῶμεν is implied an irony which shows the want of humility in those people. Comp. Loesner, Obs. p. 273. ¹ This passage is most thoroughly discussed by Fritzsche, Dissert. II. p. 93 ff. (whom Billroth has entirely followed), and by Reiche, Commentar. crit. I. p. 375 ff. Theodoret remarks: ἀσαφῶς απαντῶν τὸ χάρημα τοῦτο γίγραφιν, and for this he advances as a reason: ἵνα γὰρ ἰλίγξαι τοὺς αἰτίους οὐ βουλόμενος.

² This emphasized they (αὐτοί, they on their part) is fully justified in contrast to the following ἡμεῖς; hence it is not, with Osiander, to be taken in the sense of solī, in its limitation to themselves.

etc., but between them and us there subsists the contrast, which does away with that ἐγκρίναι ἢ συγκρίναι κ.τ.λ., that they, etc., whereas we, etc. — αὐτοί down to οὐ συνιούσιν applies to the hostile τινές, and on this point one half of the expositors are agreed. But συνιούσιν, which is therefore not to be accented συνίουσιν (comp. on Rom. iii. 11), is not a participle (Chrysostom), so that it would be definition of quality to ἐαυτοῖς, which would quite unnecessarily make an anacoluthon, but it is the third person plural (Matt. xiii. 13) for the Attic συνιᾶσιν, which is read by Lachmann, following B N — so that ἐν ἐαυτοῖς ἐαυτοὺς μετροῦντες κ. συγκρ. ἐαυτ. ἐαυτοῖς is the point, in which the opponents show their irrationality (inasmuch as they measure themselves by themselves . . . they are irrational), and not the object of οὐ συνιούσιν (they do not know that they measure themselves by themselves), as Erasmus, Castalio, Beza, Estius, Grotius, Er. Schmid, Wolf, and several have held. To this last view, indeed, there is no grammatical objection (Valckenaer, ad Herod. III. 1, and on the distinction from the infinitive construction, Kühner, II. p. 357), but it would yield an inappropriate meaning; for the contrast ἡμεῖς δὲ κ.τ.λ. shows that Paul did not mean to bring into prominence the blindness of his opponents towards their foolish conduct, but the folly of this procedure itself, whereas he proceeds quite otherwise. When those people measure themselves by themselves, judge themselves by their own personality, and compare themselves with this instead of with persons working more and better,¹ they are in this presumption of theirs (comp. Chrysostom 1) irrational, ineptiunt, οὐ συνιούσι. This, however, is not to be defined more precisely by arbitrary additions, such as: they do not know how ridiculous they make themselves (Chrysostom 2, Theophylact), or how arrogant they are (Oecumenius), or what they are talking about

(Augustine). Comp. rather Rom. iii. 11; Matt. xiii. 13, al. Hofmann prefers the reading of \aleph^* 93: $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\sigma\alpha\sigma\iota\nu$ (comp. on this Attic form, Acts xxvi. 4, and see Buttmann, Ausf. Sprachl. p. 548 ff.), and attaches $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$ to it: they are not conscious of this, that they only measure themselves and compare themselves, i.e. that only within their own selves they form their judgment respecting themselves, how far they are capable of apprehending, and to whom they are entitled to rank themselves equal. But the reading $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\sigma\alpha\sigma\iota\nu$ can only be regarded as a copyist's error, through which, instead of $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\hat{\alpha}\sigma\iota\nu$ (Lachmann), there crept in the word $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\sigma\alpha\sigma\iota\nu$ well known from the Attic writers (e.g. Soph. El. 93; Xen. Cyrop. iii. 1. 9), and this in turn was at once amended by the corrector A. And in no case can $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$ be separated from $\sigma\upsilon\gamma\kappa\rho\acute{\iota}\nu\omicron\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$, since $\sigma\upsilon\gamma\kappa\rho\acute{\iota}\nu\epsilon\iota\nu$ in itself is an incomplete notion, which necessarily requires a specification of that with which comparison is made. Hofmann's view is at once uncritical and illogical, apart from the fact that it very much disturbs the purposely chosen symmetry of the two participial definitions; hence it is also formally unsuitable. — The second half of the expositors (Chrysostom hesitates between the two views) refer $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$. . . $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$ to Paul, and consider $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$ (to be written $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$) as a participle, so that the measuring self by self, etc. appears to be the right kind of judgment.¹ Comp. Horace, Ep. i. 7. 98: "Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est." In this case either (a) $\omicron\upsilon$ $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$ is considered as in contrast with $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$: with ourselves, not with wise people, by which the conceited opponents would be ironically meant (Bos, Homberg, Schrader). Or (b) $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\acute{\alpha}$. . . $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$ is taken as parenthesis, and $\omicron\upsilon$ $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota$ as one conception in apposition to $\tau\iota\sigma\acute{\iota}$ $\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$ $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau.$ $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\sigma\tau.$ (Schulz). Or (c) $\omicron\upsilon$ $\sigma\upsilon\nu\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu$ is taken as apposition to the preceding $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$: "neque existimo ex me, homine, ut istis placet, insipido," Emmerling, whom Olshausen follows. All these views take the participles for the finite tenses (or rather as anacoluthic); but against them all the following $\acute{\eta}\mu\epsilon\acute{\iota}\varsigma$ $\delta\acute{\epsilon}$ is decisive, which makes it logically necessary to refer αὐτοί to the opponents; for it cannot, as Emmerling and Olshausen think, form a logical contrast to the charge which is alleged to be implied in οὐ συνιοῦσιν, since ἡμεῖς δέ would require to be put in antithesis to the accusers, and not to the accusation (which, besides, would only be expressed quite cursorily and indirectly by οὐ συνιοῦσιν). Further, there may be urged against (a), that it would require οὐ τοῖς συνιοῦσιν with the article; against (b), that this interpretation is involved; against (c), not so much the want of the article—for οὐ συνιοῦσιν need not be in apposition, but might also be an accompanying definition of ἐαυτοῖς—as the fact that there is no hint in the context of any ironical adducing of such a charge, and hence it is not to be compared with xi. 1, 16, 19, xii. 11.

REMARK 1.—Against our explanation (which is found in substance also in Augustine, Chrysostom 1, Theodoret, Theophylact, Luther, Calvin, Hammond, Wetstein, Zachariae, and others, including Rückert, Reiche, Neander, Osiander, Kling, partly also in Hofmann), it has been objected (see especially Fritzsche and Billroth) that ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ κ.τ.λ. cannot apply to the opponents, because manifestly different modes of dealing, and not different persons, would be opposed to each other, in which case Paul could not but have written: ἡμεῖς γὰρ οὐ . . . ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ κ.τ.λ. But by this very contrast of persons first introduced by ἀλλὰ (ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ . . . ἡμεῖς δέ) the opposite of the mode of action previously negated is exhibited in a truly concrete and vivid way, and by no means illogically, seeing that in fact by the previous ἐαυτοὺς τισί the contrast of persons introduced with ἀλλὰ was very naturally suggested. On the other hand, it would not have been logical, if Paul had written ἡμεῖς γὰρ οὐ τολμῶμεν . . . ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ κ.τ.λ., since then doubtless the persons, but not that which is asserted of the persons, would stand in logical contrast with one another; for what is asserted would need to be substantially in both clauses one and the same thing, which would be denied of the ἡμεῖς, and affirmed of the αὐτοί. It has been objected to our explanation of οὐ συνιοῦσιν that it is against the context; but it is, in point of fact, to be observed, that on the one hand it gives a very delicate explanation concerning the ironical οὐ τολμῶμεν, and that on the other hand the following ἡμεῖς δέ κ.τ.λ. with logical accuracy opposes to the previous ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ κ.τ.λ. the thought: we, however, abide by the measure which God has imparted to us, so that in κατὰ τὸ μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος, οὐ ἡμέρ. ἡμ. ὁ θεὸς μέτρον there lies the contrast to the irrational procedure of the opponents measuring themselves by themselves. He who measures himself by himself, seeing that in fact he lacks an objective standard, falls with his boasting εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα, like those opponents; but not he, who knows himself determined by a limit set by God. Finally, the objection, that by our interpretation οὐ συνιοῦσιν gets a thought imported into it which its literal tenor does not actually present (Hofmann), is quite groundless, since οὐ, by a quite common usage, turns the συνιοῦσιν into its opposite, consequently οὐ συν. expresses the ἀσυνεσία, the irrationality and folly of those men in their procedure.

REMARK 2.—By leaving out οὐ συνιοῦσιν ἡμεῖς δέ, but retaining καυχησόμεθα, ver. 13 (see the critical remarks), the meaning results: "sed me ex meo modulo metiens mihi me conferens, non praeter modum, sed ad modum ita mihi praefiniti spatii, ut ad vos quoque pervenirem, gloriabor" (Fritzsche).¹ But if καυχησόμεθα also is left out, as Fritzsche and Billroth approve, Paul in ver. 15 turns back to οὐκ εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα in ver. 13, and then adds the still necessary verb anacoluthically in the participle: "sed me ipse mihi conferens, non praeter modum . . . ver. 15, non praeter modum inquam me efferens" (Fritzsche). The suitableness of the meaning and of the antithetic character in the several parts, as well as the unexceptionable warrant of the anacoluthon, have been aptly shown by Fritzsche, pp. 41, 43 f. But the rejected words cannot thereby be deprived of their critical title to exist.

Ver. 13. Εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα] so that we with our καυχᾶσθαι go beyond measure, go into limitless extravagance. This is what is done by the man who measures himself by himself, because in that case no check external to himself is put on his imagination and self-exaltation. Such a man certainly has an object of the καυχᾶσθαι, and is not simply aiming at the having one (Hofmann), which would yield an absurd idea; but he has no bounds in the manner and degree of his καυχᾶσθαι; he is wanting in μετριότης. Regarding the use of εἰς with an adjective of degree and the article, see Viger. ed. Herm. p. 596; Matthiae, p. 1349. On the expression itself, comp. Homer, Il. ii. 212, where Thersites is called ἄμετροεπής. — καυχησόμεθα] The future asserts that this case will not occur. Comp. Rom. x. 14, al.; Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 369. — ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸ μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος, οὐ κ.τ.λ.] sc. καυχησόμεθα: but according to the measure of the boundary-line, which God (not our own choice) has assigned to us as measure, to reach even unto you, i.e. but our boasting will restrict and measure itself according to the limit which God has drawn for us, and by which He has measured off the sphere of our activity, in order that we should reach even to you with our working. By this Paul is manifestly aiming at the vaingloriousness of the false apostles, who decked themselves with extraneous feathers, inasmuch as they intruded into the provinces of others, into spheres which had not been assigned to them by God as the measure of their activity: as, indeed, in particular they had come also to Corinth, which lay within the boundary-line of Paul's apostolic action, and were now boasting as if the church-life in Corinth were chiefly their work. For, although they could not give themselves out to be the founders of the church (Baur, Tüb. Zeitschr. 1832, 4, p. 101), they could still put forward as their merit the rapid growth of the church and many points of detail, and thereby presume to put the apostle in the shade. Olshausen thinks that the false apostles had appropriated to themselves Corinth as their province, because they had already been at work there before Paul; but that the latter had still felt himself at liberty to preach in Corinth, because no apostle had been there before him. This is an hypothesis quite as superfluous as it is unhistorical, since neither in the Book of Acts is there found any trace of Christianity at Corinth before Paul's arrival, nor in the Epistles, in which, on the contrary, he states expressly that he was the first to preach there (1 Cor. iii. 6, 10), and that all other teachers had entered later into the work (1 Cor. iv. 15). — κατὰ τὸ μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος] Here τὸ μέτρον is the measure defined for the καυχᾶσθαι, as is clear from the previous οὐχὶ εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα καυχ., — and τοῦ κανόνος is the genitivus subjecti: the measure given by the drawn measuring-line. And the subsequent μετροῦ¹ is an apposition to τοῦ κανόνος not at all unnatural (as

¹ Comp. Ewald: "but modestly and cautiously measuring ourselves by ourselves and our abilities, and comparing ourselves with ourselves and our labours already achieved and clear before the world and before God, we will not (like those intruders) boast without measure, but at most will boast according to the measure of the standard which God imparted to us as measure, and which accordingly among other things authorized and strengthened us, that we attained even unto you and founded you."

Hofmann declares it), but attracted by the relative clause according to a very frequent Greek usage (see Bernhardt, p. 302; Pflugk, ad Eur. Hec. 771; Stallbaum, ad Plat. Phaed. p. 66 E; Rep. p. 402 C; Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 246 [E. T. 286]); consequently not again the measure of the boasting, but, as appears from the definition of the object aimed at ἐφικέσθαι ἄχρι κ. ὑμῶν, the spatial measure, namely, how far one is to reach (see what follows), or, dropping the figure: the measure of extent of the destined working. Paul, namely, conceives of the local extension assigned to his official working as a space marked out by God with a measuring-line, in which he takes his stand and is able to reach to all points of it without unduly stretching or straining himself, ver. 14. Hence: ἐφικέσθαι ἄχρι καὶ ὑμῶν, which is not simply exegetical (Hofmann), nor does it express the consequence (Rückert, de Wette), but is, in accordance with the notion of ἐμέρ., to be taken as infinitive of definition of οὗ ἐμέρ. ἡμ. ὁ θεὸς μέτρον. — κανὼν does not mean sphere of vocation (Flatt and many others), but measuring-rod, measuring-line. The ἐφικνεῖσθαι is, in keeping with the figurative representation of the state of the matter (see especially ver. 14), not to arrive at (Hofmann), which is only expressed by ἐφθάσαμεν, but to reach to, pertingere, as the Vulgate aptly renders it. The word is found nowhere else in the N. T., and is here selected for the sense indicated. Comp. Ver. 14. A parenthetical (see on ver. 15) confirmation of ἐφικέσθαι ἄχρι καὶ ὑμῶν: for not, as though we were such as do not reach to you, do we overstretch ourselves, i.e., dropping the figure:

(altogether different from such appellations as: the God of glory, of peace, of love, of hope, and the like) were even possible without the article before μέτρον! In Wisd. ix. 1, πατέρα required no article, according to the well-known anarthrous usage of πατήρ in the singular and plural; and in Ecclus. xxxiii. 1, πάντων without the article is quite according to rule.

for we do not usurp for ourselves any extension of our working at variance with its destined limit, as would be the case, if you lay beyond the measured-off province which is divinely assigned to us. Paul abides by his figure: for if he were not destined to extend his official working even to Corinth, and yet wished to do so, he would resemble a man who stretches himself beyond the boundary-line drawn for him, in order to reach to a point that lies beyond the limits which he is forbidden to overpass. — ὥς μὴ ἐφικν. εἰς ὑμᾶς] ἐφικν. is to be taken in no other sense than the previous ἐφικέσθαι. The present, however, denotes: as though we were persons, in whose case the reaching to you does not occur, i.e. whose position within their measured local district implies that you are not capable of being reached by them, because, forsooth, you lie beyond the limits of this district. Luther, Beza, and many others, overlooking this continuation of the figure, and taking ἐφικνούμενοι, in spite of the present (and in spite of the present ὑπερεκτείνομεν), historically, have explained it: ut si non pervenissemus, from which error there has sprung the participle of the second aorist, supported by very weak evidence, and yet preferred by Billroth. Regarding μὴ, Winer, p. 442 [E. T. 595], very correctly remarks: “a mere conception; in point of fact, the state of the case is otherwise; compare, on the other hand, 1 Cor. ix. 26.” — ἄχρι γὰρ καὶ ὑμῶν κ.τ.λ.] This is now the historical position of the case, in confirmation of what was just figuratively expressed by οὐ γὰρ . . . ἑαυτοῦς. How fraught with shame must the sum of recollections, which this simple historical fact embraced, have been for the misled portion of the church! ἐφθάσαμεν is simply: we have arrived at (Rom. ix. 31; Phil. iii. 16; Matt. xii. 28; 1 Thess. ii. 16), not: we have arrived before (sooner than the opponents, Osiander, comp. Ewald). This important point Paul must have denoted by some such expression as ἐφθάσ. ἐκείνους (comp. 1 Thess. iv. 15). — ἐν τῷ εὐαγγ. τ. X.] The gospel of Christ is conceived as the official element in which the ἐφθάσαμεν took place: in the matter of the gospel, i.e. in functione evangelica (Bengel). Comp. Rom. i. 9; 2 Cor. viii. 18; Phil. iv. 3; 1 Thess. iii. 2.

Ver. 15. As οὐκ εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα κανχ. is evidently intended to resume the οὐχὶ εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα κανχ. in ver. 13, and as ver. 14 is merely a confirmatory statement occasioned by ἐφικέσθαι ἄχρι κ.

ὑμῶν, it is most natural and logically most suitable, with Lachmann, Osiander, Ewald, to place the whole of ver. 14 in a parenthesis (not the second half of the verse merely, as is done by Griesbach, Scholz, de Wette, Hofmann), so that καυχόμενοι depends on the καυχησόμεθα to be supplied in the second clause of ver. 13, not on οὐ γὰρ . . . ὑπερεκτείν. ἐαυτούς (de Wette, Hofmann). To attach it, with Rückert (comp. Tischendorf), to ἐφθάσαμεν is quite unsuitable, because the latter contains an historical remark,—only made, moreover, in passing,—and thus heterogeneous elements would be combined. — ἐν ἀλλοτρίοις κόποις] object of the negated εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα καυχᾶσθαι. With his opponents it was the case that their unmeasured boasting referred to labours which were done by others, but were boasted of by them as their work. — ἐλπίδα δὲ ἔχοντες] but having doubtless hope, when your faith increases, to become large among you according to our rule abundantly, i.e. but doubtless hoping, with the growth of your faith, to attain among you this, that starting from you we may be able still further abundantly to extend our working according to the measure of our destination. This meaning Paul expresses figuratively, and that with faithful adherence to the figure used in vv. 13, 14. He, namely, who can work far off, is a man of great stature, who without overstretching himself reaches afar; hence μεγαλυνθῆναι.¹ Further: because Paul still thinks of working forth to distances indefinitely remote, he hopes to become

large εἰς περισσεῖαν (comp. Prov. xxi. 5). Still he knows that this wide working, on which he cherishes the hope of being able to enter, will be in keeping with the line drawn for him by God—i.e. the spatial limit divinely appointed for him—and thus will be no ὑπερεκτείνειν ἑαυτ.; hence κατὰ τὸν κανόνα ἡμῶν,¹ which Beza ought not to have taken for ἐν τῷ κανόνι ἡμ. (comp. ver. 13). Further: the possibility of this wider working will not set in, if the faith of the Corinthians does not grow, namely, intensively, by becoming always purer, firmer, and more living than now, because Paul will not sooner be able to leave Corinth and travel onward; hence αὐξανομ. τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν,² so that thus—and what a wholesome impulse ought this to be to them—it is the Corinthians themselves, among whom he will see himself brought to the point of being able to extend his working further; hence ἐν ὑμῖν³ μεγαλυνθ.: among you to become large in order to further abundant working. — εἰς περισσεῖαν] for Paul knew that he was destined to preach the gospel among all nations (Rom. i. 14, 15, and see on Rom. xv. 23, 34; Acts xix. 21); hence beyond doubt he had already at that time the intention of proceeding by way of Rome to Spain. Thus in μεγαλυνθῆναι . . . εἰς περισσεῖαν the whole grand feeling of his apostolic destiny finds earnest and true expression. Rückert, on the contrary, sees a touch of irony, as if Paul would say: if the Corinthians would become a church as perfect as he wishes and expects, there will thence accrue a gain

² Bengel rightly remarks on the present participle: "Paulus Corinthios neque ante tempus omittere voluit, neque alios diutius differre." Olshausen erroneously thinks that Paul was waiting for the completion of faith among the Corinthians. The apostle rather means the proportionate increase of the faith of the readers, which hitherto had not attained such a degree of development as to make it possible for him to withdraw his working from them and extend the sphere of his activity further. This delicate reference of αὐξανομ. τ. πίστ. ὑμῶν, which appeals to the whole sense of honour in the readers, and according to which Paul makes his further working at a distance depend on their Christian progress, is missed by Hofmann, who explains αὐξανομ. κ. τ. λ. merely in the sense of coincidence in time (while faith grows). This is bound up with his incorrect joining of ἐν ὑμῖν with αὐξανομ. See the following note.

also for him; he, too, will then grow with them, and become capable not only of doing in the midst of them what is necessary, but also of doing yet something more, of growing, as it were, beyond the proper stature, etc. But both κατὰ τὸν κανόνα ἡμῶν and εἰς περισσείαν are at variance with the character of irony. If Paul had wished to express himself ironically, he would have written possibly ἐν ὑμῖν μεγαλυνθῆναι ὀλίγον or the like, which would have expressed something different from what he properly meant.

Ver. 16. Infinitive without a connecting καί, and all the less therefore dependent in its turn on ἐλπίδα δὲ ἔχοντες, but rather infinitive of the aim: we hope to become exceedingly large among you, in order to preach the gospel unto the lands lying beyond you,¹ not within the boundary-line of another to boast of what is already done. This negative part is a side-glance at the opponents who in Corinth, which lay within the range of the line drawn for Paul, and so ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ κανόνι, had boasted in regard to the circumstances of the church there, which they had, in fact, found already shaped before they came, consequently εἰς τὰ ἔτοιμα. Comp. Calvin: "quum Paulus militasset, illi triumphum agebant." Beza and Billroth, also de Wette and Hofmann (who thinks all three infinitives dependent on ἐλπ. ἔχ.), take the infinitive as exegesis of μεγαλυνθ. by adding an id est; but this is precluded by the correct connection of ἐν ὑμῖν with μεγαλυνθ. For, if Paul hopes to become large among the Corinthians, this cannot mean the same thing as to preach away beyond Corinth (εἰς τὰ ὑπερέκεινα ὑμ. εὐαγγ.). No; that μεγαλυνθ. denotes the becoming capable for further extended working, the being put into a position for it, and accordingly the aim of this is: εἰς τὰ ὑπερέκεινα ὑμῶν εὐαγγ. Ewald would make the infinitives εὐαγγ. and καυχ. dependent on κατὰ τ. κανόνα ἡμ., so that they would explain in what more precisely this rule consists; but this is forbidden by the fact that εἰς περισσ. is not placed before κατὰ τ. κ. ἡμ.—The adverb ὑπερέκεινα, ultra, is bad Greek. See Thomas Magister, p. 336: ἐπέκεινα ῥήτορες λέγουσι . . . ὑπερέκεινα δὲ μόνοι οἱ σύρφακες (the rabble). Comp. Bos, Ellips., ed. Schaef. pp. 288, 290.—εἰς before ὑπερέκ. does stand for ἐν (Flatt and others), but comp. 1 Pet. i. 25; John viii. 26

1 Thess. ii. 9. — οὐκ ἐν ἄλλοτρ. κανόνι] οὐκ, not μή, is here used quite according to rule (in opposition to Rückert), since the οὐκ ἐν ἄλλ. καν. is correlative to the εἰς τὰ ὑπερέκεινα ὑμῶν as contrast (Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 125 f.). And this correlation demands that ἐν be understood not of the object of καυχᾶσθαι (Hofmann), but locally, to which also the very notion of κανών (ver. 13) points: within the measuring-line drawn for another, i.e. as to substance: in the field of activity divinely destined for another. — On εἰς with καυχ., in reference to, comp. Arist. Pol. v. 10.

Ver. 17 f. The ἐν ἄλλ. καν. εἰς τὰ ἔτοιμα καυχ. was the way of the opponents, whose self-glorying was selfish ostentation. Therefore Paul now lays down the law of the right καυχᾶσθαι, and establishes it in a way (ver. 18), the application of which to the perversity of the opponents' boasting could not but be obvious. — δέ] leading over from the previous καυχῆσθαι to the law of the καυχᾶσθαι. "But as regards self-glorying, the maxim applies: Let him that glories glory (not otherwise than) in the Lord," let him have God as the object of his καυχᾶσθαι, inasmuch as it is God, by whose grace and power he has and does everything. Paul himself gives a glorious example of the ἐν κυρίῳ καυχᾶσθαι in 1 Cor. xv. 10. Comp. 2 Cor. xii. 9, 10. — As ὁ καυχ. ἐν κυρ. καυχ. is an O. T. maxim well known to the reader (Jer. ix. 23 f.; comp. 1 Cor. i. 31), and the context contains nothing at all which would be at variance with the original reference of the ἐν κυρίῳ to God, viewed as object of the καυχᾶσθαι, in which this is grounded (see on Rom. ii. 17), it is not to be understood of Christ (Erasmus, Estius, Platt, Rückert, and others), nor is ἐν to be taken in the sense of communion (Calvin, Bengel, Osiander). Observe, moreover, what a moral difference there is between this Christian καυχᾶσθαι ἐν θεῷ (comp. Rom. v. 11) and that of the Jewish particularism, Rom. ii. 17. — Ver. 18. For not he who acts in the opposite way, not he who, instead of glorying ἐν κυρίῳ, makes himself the object which he commends to others, is approved, is in the position of attested Christian character, but he, whom the Lord commends. The latter is—and that in contrast with the opponents extolling themselves—the practical commendation, which God bestows on those concerned by His whole gracious aid, by the success and blessing attending their work, by their rescue from dangers, etc. In this de facto θεῶν ψήφος (Theodoret), which is made known before the eyes of the world, they have at the same time the right de facto self-commendation, vi. 3 ff., without being αὐτεπαίνετοι (αὐτεπαινέτους γὰρ μισεῖ ὁ θεός, Clem. 1 Cor. 30). — Observe, further, the emphatic ἐκεῖνος as well as the unrestricted δόκιμος, the notion of which is not to be referred merely to human recognition (Hofmann), as in Rom. xiv. 18, where τοῖς ἀνθρώπ. stands beside it; comp. rather 1 Cor. xi. 19; Rom. xvi. 10; Jas. i. 12.

CHAPTER XI

VER. 1. ἀνείχεσθε] Elz.: ἡνείχεσθε, following min. Chrys. Theophyl. But the former is decisively attested by B D E G L M (Σ has ἀνάσχεσθε) and many min., also Chrys. ms. Damasc. Theoph. mss. Matth. Griesb. Scholz, Reiche, following K L and many min. Copt. Chrys. Theodoret, Damasc. Oec. Theophylact, ms. But there is far more support for the reading of Lachm. Rück. and Tisch.: τὶ ἀφροσύνης, following B D E Σ, min. (Elz. has τὶ τῆς ἀφρ., following F G, min. vss. Fathers). This τὶ ἀφροσύνης is to be held as the original, not, however, as if Griesbach's reading had arisen only from a copyist's error of itacism (τῇ for τὶ, as Rinck holds, Lucubr. crit. p. 167, and Rück.), but on account of the relatively preponderant attestation, and because the following ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνείχεσθέ μου most naturally suggested to the copyists to regard μου as the object of ἀνείχεσθε, to which then the genitive ἀφροσύνης was no longer suitable. Τῇ ἀφροσύνῃ had to be made out of it (in regard to folly), and thereupon the superfluous τὶ easily disappeared through the following τῇ. The reading μικρὸν τῆς ἀφροσύνης μου (F G, It. Vulg.) is explained partly from imperfect critical restoration (of the genitive), partly as an indication of the right construction. — Ver. 3. οὕτω] is wanting in B D* F G Σ, It. Copt. Goth. Arm. After ver. 2 (ἀγνήν) ἀγνότητος was written alongside as a gloss on ἀπλότητος, and was already at an early date incorporated in the text, partly behind, partly before ἀπλότ. — Ver. 4. ἀνείχεσθε] The form ἡνείχεσθε (Elz.) is condemned here also by decisive evidence. Comp. ver. 1. Lachm. reads ἀνέχεσθε, but only supported by B, where it has arisen from the apparent grammatical necessity of the present. Fritzsche also, on account of this necessity, declares for the present; but see the exegetical remarks. — Ver. 6. φανερωθέντες]

Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. read φανερῶσαντες, supported by B F G⁸* 17. φανερῶθέντες was explained by the gloss φανερῶσαντες ἑαυτοὺς, as is actually the reading in M, 108 Arm., and thus the active participle came into the text, where it was the more easily retained, as it could be referred without difficulty to τὴν γνῶσιν. — Ver. 14. θαυμαστόν] B D* F G⁸ 17, 39, 67 74, Or. have θαῦμα. So Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. The former is a gloss. — Ver. 16. The word ἐπισύστασις has crept in from Acts xxiv. 12, because ἐπίστασις was not understood, and μου is a hasty correction. — Ver. 32. θέλων] is wanting in important witnesses, deleted by Lachm. Rück. and Tisch. An exegetical addition.

CONTENTS.—The apostle's self-glorying against his opponents.

(1) Introduction, vv. 1–4. (2) Theme of the self-praise, ver. 5 f. (3) Vindication of the special boast that he had preached to his readers gratuitously (vv. 7–9), a practice which he will continue to observe on account of his opponents (vv. 10–15). Then, (4) after a repeated entreaty for patience towards the folly of his self-glorying, which entreaty he accompanies with bitter remarks (vv. 16–20), he compares himself with his enemies (a) in general, ver. 21; (b) specially as a Jew, ver. 22; (c) as a servant of Christ, ver. 23 ff., in which latter relation he vindicates his sufferings, toils, and dangers, as things of which he will glory (vv. 23–30). Lastly, (5) after a solemn assurance that he does not lie, he begins an account of his experiences of suffering (vv. 31–33), which, however, is not continued.

Ver. 1. Would that ye would bear from me a little bit of folly! The connection of thought is this: after the principle just expressed in x. 18, I am indeed acting foolishly when I boast of myself; but would that you became not angry on that account! Irony; the apostle's περιαιτιολογία was not, like that of his opponents, idle self-exaltation, but a vindication enjoined by the circumstances and accordant with his duty, in order to drive the refractory boasters at length quite out of the field.

Flatt and Baur would insert an also (from me also as from mine enemies), but quite arbitrarily. — ἔφελον] see on 1 Cor. iv. 8. — ἀνέχεσθε] Hellenistic form with the simple augment (Piers. ad Moer. p. 176) instead of the common ἡνείχ. in the older writers (Buttmann, Ausführl. Sprachl. II. p. 189 f.; Blomfield, ad Aesch. Choeph. 735). The imperfect is not: have borne (Erasmus, Calvin, and others), but: ferretis, would bear. Comp. εἴθε with imperfect: “ubi optamus eam rerum conditionem quam non esse sentimus,” Klotz, ad Devar. p. 516; Ellendt, Lex. Soph. I. p. 499; Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 185 [E. T. 215]. — μου] does not belong to ἀφροσύνης (Hofmann), so that its position standing apart and prefixed would be emphatic,—which, however, does not at all suit the enclitic form,—but, as genitivus subjecti, to μικρόν τι ἀφροσ., so that μικρ. τι has two genitives with it. Comp. LXX. Job vi. 26: οὐδὲ γὰρ ὑμῶν φθέγμα ῥήματος ἀνέξομαι. See in general, Kühner, § 542. 3; Lobeck, ad Aj. 309; Stallbaum, ad Plat. Rep. p. 329 B. With the reading μικρόν τῇ ἀφροσύνῃ (see the critical remarks) it would have to be attached to ἀνείχ. (would that ye endured me a little as to folly), not to τῇ ἀφροσύνῃ, as Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 53 f., contrary to the simple order of the words, prefers, and μικρόν would have to be taken either of time, or, with Reiche, of degree: paulisper, “non nimio fastidio.” — ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνέχεσθέ μου] corrective: yet this wish is not needed, ye really bear patiently with me. The imperative interpretation of ἀνέχεσθε (Vulgate, Pelagius, Castalio, Beza, Calvin, Grotius, Estius, Bengel, Hofmann), according to which Paul would proceed from wish to entreaty, would be quite tame on account of the preceding wish, and in the corrective form unsuitable. — καί] also, i.e. in reality. See Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 132. — μου] ἀνέχεσθε governs either the accusative, as in the case of μικρόν τι before (and this is the more common construction in Greek authors), or, as here, the genitive (so usually in the N. T.), which is also found in Greek authors when the object is a thing (Hom. Od. xxii. 423, and later authors, such as Herodian, viii. 5. 9, i. 17. 10), but very seldom with persons (Plat. Protag. p. 323 A), without a participle standing alongside, as Xen. Anab. ii. 2. 1; Plat. Pol. ii. p. 367 D, or without a simple participle, as Plat. Pol. viii. p. 564 D, Apol. p. 31 B; Herod. v. 89, vii. 159.

Ver. 2. Ground of the ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνέχεσθέ μου: My jealousy for you is, in fact, a divine jealousy; how can you then refuse to me the ἀνέχεσθαι! Rückert refers γάρ to ὀφείλον . . . ἀφροσύνης, but in this way ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνέχεσθέ μου is overleaped all the more violently, seeing that it is a correction of what goes before. Calvin (comp. Chrysostom and Bengel): "en cur desipiat, nam hominem zelotypia quasi transversum rapit." Against this may be urged the emphatic θεοῦ, in which lies the very point of the reason assigned. — ζηλῶ γὰρ ὑμᾶς κ.τ.λ.] As Paul, in what follows, represents himself as a marriage-friend (comp. John iii. 29) who has betrothed the bride to the bridegroom, and is now anxious that she may not let herself be led astray by another, ζηλῶ is to be taken in the narrowest sense as equivalent to ζηλοτυπῶ: I am jealous concerning you (comp. Num. v. 14; Ecclus. ix. 1), for the marriage-friend very naturally takes the bridegroom's part. The more indefinite interpretation: I am zealous concerning you (Flatt and others), is therefore, according to the context, too general, and the explanation: vehementer amo vos (Rosenmüller, comp. Fritzsche), is at variance with the context. — θεοῦ ζηλῶ] with a jealousy, which God has; which is no human passion, but an emotion belonging to God, which I therefore have in common with Him. Paul consequently conceives of God as likewise jealous concerning the Corinthian church (ὑμᾶς), that she might not, as the bride of Christ, suffer herself to be led astray. God appears in the O. T. as the spouse of His people, and therefore jealous regarding it (Isa. liv. 5, lxii. 5; Jer. iii. 1 ff.; Ezek. xvi. 8 ff., xxiii.; Hos. ii. 18, 19). Now, as the representative of God in the theocracy of the N. T. is Christ, with whom, therefore, the church appears connected, partly as spouse (see on Rom. vii. 4), partly as betrothed (with reference to the completion of the marriage at the Parousia), as here (comp. Eph. v. 25 ff.); the falling away from Christ must therefore be the object of divine jealousy, and so Paul knows his ζῆλος, the ζῆλος of the marriage-friend, as the ζῆλος of God. θεοῦ has been taken as genitivus auctoris (Wolf and others, comp. Flatt, de Wette), or as: zeal for God (Rom. x. 2, so Calvin, Grotius, Estius, Semler, Schulz), or as: zeal pleasing to God (Billroth, comp. Flatt), or as: zeal extraordinarily great (Emmerling, so also Fritzsche; comp. Bengel: "zelo sancto et magno") ; but all these interpretations lie beyond the necessary definite reference to what follows, in which a reason is given for the very predicate θεοῦ. — ἡρμοσάμην γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] for I have betrothed you . . . but I fear, etc., ver. 3, so that, with Lachmann, only a comma is to be put after ver. 2. ἀρμόζειν, adaptare, then specially in the sense of betroth; see Wetstein. The more Attic form is ἀρμόττειν. See Gregor. p. 154, Schaef.; Lobeck, ad Phrygn. p. 241. That Paul has expressed himself contrary to the Greek usage (according to which ἀρμόζεσθαι τινα means: to betroth oneself to a woman, Herod. v. 32, 47, vi. 65), is only to be said, in so far as a classical writer would certainly have used the active (Herod. ix. 108; Pind. Pyth. ix. 207), although in late writers the middle also occurs in the active sense (see the passages from Philo in Loesner, p. 320, e.g. de Abr. p. 364 B: γάμος δν ἀρμόζεται ἡδονῇ), and here the following ἐνὶ ἀνδρί leaves no doubt of the reference: I have joined (i.e. according to the context, betrothed) you to one husband. Paul regards himself as a marriage-friend (προμνήστωρ ὑμῶν ἐγενόμην καὶ τοῦ γάμου μεσίτης, Theodore), by whose intervention the betrothal of the Corinthians with Christ was brought to pass. Chrysostom aptly says on the figurative representation of the matter: μνηστείας γάρ ἐστι καιρὸς ὁ παρὼν καιρὸς· ὁ δὲ τῶν παστᾶδων ἕτερος, ὅταν λέγωσιν· ἀνέστη ὁ νυμφίος . . . Ὁ μάλιστα τούτοις (to the readers) ἔφερεν ἀξίωμα, τοῦτο τίθησιν, εαυτὸν μὲν ἐν χώρᾳ τῆς προμνηστρίας, ἐκείνους δὲ ἐν τάξει τῆς νύμφης στήσας. Pelagius, Elsner, Mosheim, Emmerling wrongly hold that he conceives himself as father of the Corinthians; their father (but this figure is here quite out of place) he has, in fact, only come to be through their conversion to Christ (1 Cor. iv. 17; 2 Cor. xii. 14; comp. Tit. i. 4); he had not been so already before. Regarding the marriage-friend of the Jews, מוֹדֵב, παρὰνυμφίος, who not only wooed the bride for the bridegroom, but who was the constant medium between the two, and at the wedding itself was regulator of the feast, see Schöttgen, Hor. ad Joh. iii. 29. With the Rabbins, Moses is represented as such a marriage-friend. See Rab. Sal. ad Exod. xxxiv. 1, al. — ἐνὶ ἀνδρί] to one husband, to belong to no one further. — παρθένον ἀγνήν κ.τ.λ.] Aim, with which he had betrothed the Corinthians to a single husband: in order to present a pure virgin to Christ (παραστ., comp. iv. 14), namely, at the Parousia, when Christ appears as bridegroom, to fetch home the bride, Matt. xxv. 1 ff.; Eph. v. 27; Rev. xix. 7-9.

The church in its entirety, as a moral person, is this virgin. On ἀγνήν, comp. Dem. 1371. 23; Plut. Mor. p. 268 E, 438 C; Plat. Legg. viii. p. 840 D. The whole emphasis is on παρθένον ἀγνήν. When this is attended to, there disappears the semblance of εἰς ἀνὴρ and ὁ Χριστός being different persons,—a semblance for which Rückert blames the apostle. Fritzsche regards τῷ Χριστῷ as apposition to ἐνὶ ἀνδρί (in which Rückert agrees with him), and encloses παραστήσαι between two commas; but this is an unnecessary and enfeebling breaking up of the passage. Beza and Bengel connect ἐνὶ ἀνδρί with παραστ., and take τῷ Χριστῷ likewise epexegetically. But the absolute ἡρμοσάμην ὑμᾶς would in fact mean: I have betrothed myself to you! In order that it may not mean this, it must necessarily be joined to ἐνὶ ἀνδρί.

Ver. 3. The point of comparison is the leading astray by the devil, which took place in the case of Eve (through the serpent), and was to be feared in that of the Corinthians (through the false apostles, Satan's servants, ver. 15). For Paul presupposes it as well known to his readers, that Satan had led astray Eve by means of the serpent. To him and to them the serpent was by no means either a symbol or a mystical figure of the cosmical principle (Martensen). Comp. Wisd. ii. 23 f.; 4 Macc. xviii. 8; 1 John iii. 8; Rev. xii. 9, 14 f., xx. 2; and see on John viii. 44, and Grimm on Wisd. l.c. For the monstrous inventions of the later Rabbins, see Eisenmenger, Entdecktes Judenth. I. p. 830 ff. — Paul's mention (comp. 1 Tim. ii. 15) of Eve (not Adam) is alike in keeping with the narrative (Gen. iii.) and with the comparison, since the church is represented as feminine (comp. Ignat. Eph. interpol. 17). In Rom. v. 12 and 1 Cor. xv. 22, the connection demanded the mention of Adam. — ὁ ὄφεις] the well-known serpent. — ἐν τῇ πανουργ. αὐτοῦ] instrumental. Comp. Eph. iv. 14; Aq. Gen. iii. 1: ὁ ὄφεις ἦν πανούργος, Ignat. Phil. 11 interpol.: ὁ σκολιὸς ὄφεις κ.τ.λ. — φθαρῇ] become corrupted, not be corrupt (Ewald). Paul expresses himself with tender forbearance; the corruption of the church by anti-Pauline doctrine (ver. 4) he sees as a danger. — ἀπὸ τῆς ἀπλότη. κ.τ.λ.] a pregnant phrase: lest your thoughts (comp. iii. 14, iv. 4, x. 5) become corrupted and led away from the simplicity towards Christ (εἰς Χ. is not equivalent to ἐν Χ., as the Vulgate, Beza, Calvin, and others have it). See Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 63 f.; Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 277 [E. T. 322]. The ἀπλότης ἢ εἰς X. is the quality of simple, honest fidelity in the παρθένος ἀγνή, who shares her heart with no other than with her betrothed.

Ver. 4. An ironical (and therefore not conflicting with Gal. i. 18) reason assigned for that anxiety. For if, indeed, my opponents teach and work something so entirely new among you, one would not be able to blame you for being pleased with it. — Regarding εἰ μὲν, if indeed, see Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 414 f.; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 522. — ὁ ἐρχόμενος] does not refer to ὁ ὄψις, ver. 3 (Kniewel). It might doubtless mean the first comer, as Emmerling and Billroth hold (Bernhardy, p. 318), comp. Gal. v. 10; but, since Paul manifestly has in view the conduct of the whole fraternity of opposing teachers (see immediately, ver. 5), it is rather this totum genus that is denoted by ὁ ἐρχόμενος, and that concretely, and in such a fashion that their emergence is vividly illustrated by reference to one definitely thought of, of whom, however, the point is left undetermined who he is: is qui venit. Comp. Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 65; Kühner, ad Xen. Anab. v. 8. 22. The word exhibits the persons meant in the light of outsiders, who come to Corinth and there pursue their courses in opposition to the apostle. They are intruders (comp. iii. 1), and by the present tenses their coming and practices are denoted as still presently prevailing, just as this corrupting intercourse had been already going on for a considerable time. Ewald thinks here, too, of a special individual among the counter-apostles. — ἄλλον Ἰησοῦν κηρύσσει] i.e. so preaches of Jesus, that the Jesus now preached appears not to be the same as was previously preached,¹ consequently as if a second Jesus. Hence, to explain it more precisely, there is added: ὃν οὐκ ἐκηρύξαμεν: who was not the subject-matter of our preaching, of whom we have known nothing and preached nothing, therefore not the crucified Saviour (1 Cor. ii. 2) through whom men are justified without the law, etc. ἄλλος negatives simply the identity, ἕτερος at the same time the similarity of nature: an other Jesus . . . a different spirit. Comp. Acts iv. 12; Gal. i. 6, 7; 1 Cor. xii. 9, xv. 40. — ἡ πνεῦμα ἕτερον κ.τ.λ.]

ἤ, or, in order to describe this reformatory working from another side, another kind of Spirit, etc. As the false apostles might have boasted that only through them had the right Jesus been preached to the Corinthians,¹ they might also have added that only through their preaching had the readers received the true Holy Spirit, whom they had not before received, namely, when Paul had taught them (ὁ οὐκ ἐλάβετε). Moreover, it is decidedly clear from ἡ πνεῦμα ἕτερον κ.τ.λ. that it cannot have been (this in opposition to Beyschlag) a more exact historical information and communication regarding Jesus, by means of which the persons concerned attempted to supplant Paul among the Corinthians. It was by means of Judaistic false doctrines; comp. ver. 13 ff. See also Klöpper, p. 79 f. — ὁ οὐκ ἐδέξασθε] for the Pauline gospel was accepted by the readers at their conversion: the gospel brought by the false apostles was of another kind (ἕτερον), which was not before accepted by them. Rückert arbitrarily says that ἐδέξασθε is equivalent to ἐλάβετε, and that the former is used only to avoid the repetition of the latter. How fine and accurate, on the other hand, is Bengel's remark: "Verba diversa, rei apta; non concurrat voluntas hominis in accipiendo Spiritu, ut in recipiendo evangelio." Comp. on the distinction between the two words, Theile, ad Jacob. p. 68. — καλῶς ἀνείχεσθε] καλῶς, like praeclare in the ironical sense of with full right. See on Mark vii 9; Fritzsche, ad Marc. p. 271 ff.; Diss. II. p. 72 f.; and regarding the ironical use of the adjective καλός, Stallb. ad Rep. p. 595 C, 607 E. According to Hofmann, καλῶς is an expression of an earnest approval, which, however, is cancelled of itself by the impossibility of the case which is put. But in the protasis the case, in fact, is just simply put, not put as impossible (comp. Gal. i 8, 9); hence in the apodosis an ἀνάθεμα on the seducers, or a severe censure of those who did not withstand them, would have had its place in the mind of the apostle rather than a καλῶς ἀνείχεσθε earnestly meant. The imperfect ἀνείχεσθε does not, indeed, in strict logic suit κηρύσσει and λαμβάνετε in the protasis, and we should expect ἀνέχεσθε, as is actually the reading of B. But it is not on that account to be explained as if εἰ ἐκήρυσσεν κ.τ.λ. stood in the protasis (if the comer was preaching . . . ye would, etc.), as Chrysostom, Luther, Castalio, Cornelius a Lapide, and many others, including Baur, l.c. p. 102, explained it, which is wrong in grammar; nor is—along with an otherwise correct view of the protasis—καλῶς ἀνείχεσθε to be taken in the historical sense, as has been attempted by some, as interrogatively (have you with right tolerated it?), such as Heumann, by others, such as Semler,¹ in the form of an indignant exclamation (you have truly well tolerated it!), both of which meanings are logically impossible on account of the difference of tenses in the protasis and apodosis. No; we have here the transition from one construction to the other. When Paul wrote the protasis, he meant to put ἀνέχεσθε in the apodosis; but when he came to the apodosis, the conception of the utter non-reality of what was posited in the protasis as the preaching of another Jesus, etc., induced him to modify the expression of the apodosis in such a way, that now there is implied in it a negatived reality,² as if in the protasis there had stood εἰ ἐκήρυσσεν κ.τ.λ. For there is not another Jesus; comp. Gal. ii. 6. Several instances of this variation in the mode of expression are found in classical writers. See Kühner, II. p. 549; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 489. Comp. on Luke xvii. 6. The reason for the absence of ἄν in the apodosis is, that the contents of the apodosis is represented as sure and certain. See Krüger, § 65, 5; Stallb. *ad Plat. ² Here, too, the delicate and acute glance of Bengel saw the correct view: "Ponit conditionem, ex parte rei impossibilem; ideo dicit in imperfecto toleraretis; sed pro conatu pseudapostolorum non modo possibilem, sed plane presentem; ideo dicit in praesenti praedicat. Conf. plane Gal. i. 6 f." Comp. also 1 Cor. iii. 11. Rückert refines and imports a development of thought, which is arbitrarily assumed, and rests on the presupposition that there is no irony in the passage. With the same presupposition Hofmann assumes the intermingling of two thoughts, one referring to the present, the other to the past,—which would amount to a confusion of ideas without motive. This also in opposition to Klöpfer, p. 84, who thinks that Paul does not wish to charge the readers with the ἐνίστασθαι for the immediate present, but had been distinctly aware that they had tolerated, etc. In that case we should have here a singular forbearance and a singular form of its expression, the former as undeserved as the latter is unlogical. There was as little need for the alleged forbearance toward the readers as in ver. 19 f.

himself feel that he did not mean it so, that the meaning at his heart was rather: then you would be very far wrong in tolerating such novelties; that he thus in the way of ironical censure makes it palpable to his readers that their complaisance towards the false apostles was the ground of his anxiety expressed in ver. 3. Hence he now by γάρ¹ at once gives a reason for the censure of that complaisance so disparaging to his own position as an apostle, which is conveyed in the ironical καλῶς ἀνείχεσθε. This γάρ does not refer therefore to ver. 1, but to what immediately precedes, in so far, namely, as it was not meant approvingly (Hofmann), but in exactly the opposite sense. Hofmann groundlessly and dogmatically replies that the reason assigned for an ironical praise must necessarily be itself ironical.² — λογίζομαι] censeo, I am of opinion. Rom. ii. 3, iii. 28, vii. 18, al. — μηδὲν ὑστερηκέμαι] in no respect have I remained behind. Comp. on Matt. xix. 20. Rückert without reason adds: "i.e. in my action." The μηδὲν, in no respect a stronger negation than the simple μή (Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. iv. 4. 10), excludes any restriction to some mere partial aspect of his official character. The perfect exhibits the state of the case as at present continuing to subsist (Bernhardy, p. 378): to stand behind. In xii. 11 the conception is different. — τῶν ὑπερλίαν ἀποστόλων] The genitive with a verb of comparison. Comp. Plat. Pol. 7, p. 539 E. See Matthiae, p. 836. Comp. Kypke, II. p. 265. ὑπερλίαν, overmuch, supra quam valde, is not preserved elsewhere in old Greek, but is found again, nevertheless, in Eustath. Od. i p. 27, 35: ἐστὶ γάρ ποτε καὶ τῷ Ἰαν κατὰ τὴν τραγωδίαν χρᾶσθαι καλῶς, καθ' ὃ σημαίνοντες λέγομεν τινὰ ὑπερλίαν σόφον. Similarly we have ὑπεράγαν (2 Macc. viii. 35, x. 34; Strabo, iii. p. 147), ὑπέρεν (Kypke, Obs. II. p. 267), ὑπεράνω, etc., as well as generally Paul's frequent application of compounds with ὑπέρ (Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 351). But whom does he mean by τῶν ὑπερλίαν ἀποστόλων? According

² Without conceding this arbitrary assertion, observe, moreover, that ver. 5 also has a sufficiently ironic tinge. Comp. iv. 8, 9. See also Klöpper.

to Chrysostom, Theodoret, Grotius, Bengel, and most of the older commentators, also Emmerling, Flatt, Schrader, Baur, Hilgenfeld, Holsten, Holtzmann (Judenth. und Christenth. p. 764), the actual summos apostolos, namely, Peter, James, and John (comp. Gal. ii. 9). But Paul is not contending against these, but against the false apostles (ver. 13); hence the expression: "the over-great apostles," which is manifestly selected not μετ' ἐγκωμίων (Chrysostom), but with a certain bitterness, would be very unsuitable here (comp. on the other hand, 1 Cor. xv. 9, ix. 5) if the old apostles should be simply incidentally mentioned, because they were possibly placed high above Paul by his opponents.¹ Rightly, therefore, Richard Simon, Alethius, Heumann, Semler, Michaelis, Schulz, Stolz, Rosenmüller, Fritzsche, Billroth, Rückert, Olshausen, de Wette, Ewald, Osiander, Neander, Hofmann, Weiss, Beyschlag, and others have followed Beza's suggestion (comp. Erasmus in the Annot.), and understood the Judaistic anti-Pauline teachers to be the pseudo-apostles (vv. 13, 22), whose inflated arrogance in exalting themselves over Paul is caricatured. Nevertheless they are not to be considered as the heads of the Christ-party (comp. on x. 7).

REMARK.—The reference of our passage to Peter, James, and John was supported among the earlier Protestants from polemical considerations, for the comparison in itself and the plural expression were urged against the primacy of Peter. See Calovius, Bibl. ill. p. 505. In defence of this primacy, it was maintained by the older Catholic writers that the equality referred to preaching and gifts, not to power and jurisdiction. See Cornelius a Lapide.

Ver. 6. A more precise explanation of this μηδὲν ὑστερηκέναι τῶν ὑπερλ. ἀποστόλων, starting from a concession, so that δέ introduces something apparently opposed. Although, however, I am untrained in speech, yet I am not so in knowledge, but in everything we have become manifest among all in reference to you. The view of Hofmann, that that concession bears on the preference of the opponents for Apollon, finds no confirmation in the discussion that follows. Comp. on the contrary, x. 10. — Φανερωθέντες does not apply to the γνῶσις (Bengel, Zachariae, and others), for how inappropriate ver. 7 would then be! But Paul proceeds from the

γνώσεις, which he has attributed to himself in opposition to the reproach of want of training in discourse, to his having become manifest in every respect, so that τῇ γνώσει and ἐν παντί are related to one another as species and genus.¹ It is arbitrary to supply a definite reference for φανερωθ. (Rosenmüller: "tanquam verum apostolum et doctorem;"; Rückert: "as apostle and honest man"); in every respect, says Paul, we have become manifest as to how we are constituted; and what kind of manifestation that was—its qualitative aspect—he leaves entirely to the judgment of his readers. Rückert (following Flatt) regards εἰ δὲ καὶ . . . γνώσει as a parenthesis, and places ἀλλ' ἐν παντί κ.τ.λ. in connection with ver. 5, so that Paul, instead of keeping to the infinitive construction, would pass over into the participial; but after what has been said above, this is a quite superfluous expedient, according to which, moreover, εἰ δὲ καὶ . . . γνώσει would only stand as a strangely isolated, as it were forlorn thought, out of all connection. Olshausen, too (comp. Beza), breaks up the passage by taking the second ἀλλά as corrective: "Yet ye know in fact my whole conduct, why should I still describe it to you?" And yet ἀλλ' ἐν παντί stands in so natural relation and connection with the previous οὐ τῇ γνώσει, that it more readily occurs to us to take ἀλλά as: but on the contrary, than, with de Wette, to take it as co-ordinate with the first ἀλλά (introducing a second apodosis), as in 1 Cor. vi. 11. — ιδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ] Paul therefore did not reckon a scholastically-trained eloquence (and he is thinking here specially of the Hellenic type, of which in fact Corinth was a principal seat) as among the requisites for his office.² Comp. 1 Cor. i. 17, ii. 1 ff. But his opponents (comp. x. 10) disparaged him for the want of it. Regarding ιδιώτης, see on Acts iv. 13; 1 Cor. xiv. 16. —

¹ Billroth follows the reading φανερώσαντες: "If I, however, am unskilled in an artistic discourse of human wisdom, I am not so in the true, deep knowledge of Christianity; yea rather, I have made it (the knowledge) in every point known to you in all things." Ewald, following the same reading: "but people, who in everything (in every position) have spoken clearly regarding all kinds of matters (ἐν ᾧ ᾧ) towards you."

² How Paul, with the great eloquence to which all his Epistles and speeches in the Book of Acts bear testimony, could yet with truth call himself ιδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ, Augustine, de doct. Christ. iv. 7, has rightly discerned: "Sicut apostolum praecepta eloquentiae secutum fuisse non dicimus: ita quod ejus sapientiam secuta sit eloquentia, non negamus." Comp. also how Xenophon (de venat. 14, 8) designates and describes himself as idiotes, in contradistinction to the sophists.

τῇ γνώσει] “quae prima dos apostoli,” Bengel; Matt. xii. 11; Eph. iii. 34; Gal. i. 12, 15.—ἐν παντί] not: at every time (Emmerling, Flatt), nor ubique (Erasmus), but, as it always means with Paul: in every point, in every respect, iv. 8, vi. 4, vii. 16, viii. 7, ix. 8; see Bengel. Particularly frequent in this Epistle.—After φανερωθέντες, ἐσμέν is to be supplied from what goes before. The aorist contains the conception: have not remained hidden, but have become manifest. The perfect is different in v. 11. The device of Hofmann, that after φανερωθ. we should supply an ἐφανερώθημεν to be connected with ἐν πᾶσι εἰς ὑμᾶς, yields a thought weak in meaning (“after that we . . . had been made manifest we have . . . been made manifest in presence of you”) and is utterly groundless. How altogether different it is at viii. 24! The transition to the plural form inclusive of others (by which Paul means himself and his fellow-teachers) cannot surprise any one, since often in his case the purely personal consciousness and that of fellowship in a common office present themselves side by side. Comp. i. 23 f., v. 11; 1 Thess. iii. 4 f.; Philem. 7 f., al.—ἐν πᾶσι] being separated from ἐν παντί cannot (as in Phil. iv. 2) be taken as neuter (in all things, Billroth, Neander; in all possible points, Hofmann: ἐν πᾶσι οἷς ποιοῦμεν κ. λέγομεν, Theophylact), but only as masculine: among all we have been made manifest in reference to you, that is, among all (i.e. coram omnibus) there has been clearly displayed, and has remained unknown to none, the relation in which we stand to you; every one has become aware what we are to you. Comp. Erasmus (“quales simus erga vos”).

Ver. 7. That Paul meant by his ἐν παντί φανερωθ. an advantageous manifestation, was obvious of itself; comp. v. 11. Hence, in order now to make good a distinctive peculiar point of his φανέρωσις, he continues with a question of bitter pain, such as the sense of being maliciously misunderstood brought to his lips: Or have I committed sin—abasing myself in order that ye might be exalted—that I gratuitously preached to you the gospel of God? No doubt the opponents had turned this noble sacrifice on his part, by way of reproach, into un-apostolic meanness.—ἐμὰν τὸν ταπεινῶν] namely, by my renouncing, in order to teach gratuitously, my apostolic ἐξουσία, 1 Cor. ix., and contenting myself with very scanty and mean support (comp. Acts xviii. 3, xx. 34). Chrysostom and others exaggerate it. ἐν στενοχωρίᾳ διήγαγον, for καὶ ὑπερηθείς, ver. 8, is only a temporary increased degree of the ταπείνωσις. — ἵνα ὑμεῖς ὑψωθῇτε] viz. from the lowness of the dark and lost pre-Christian condition through conversion, instruction, and pastoral care to the height of the Christian salvation. It is much too vague to take it of prosperity in general (Schulz, Rosenmüller, Flatt); and when Zachariae explains it: "in order to prefer you to other churches," or when others think of the riches not lessened by the gratuitous preaching (Mosheim, Heumann, Morus, Emmerling), they quite fail to see the apostle's delicate way of significantly varying the relations. Comp. viii. 9. Chrysostom already saw the right meaning: μᾶλλον ὑποδομοῦντο καὶ οὐκ ἐσκανδαλίζοντο. — ὅτι] that, belongs to ἀμαρτ. ἐποίησα (to which ἐμὰντ. ταπεινῶν is an accompanying modal definition), inserted for the sake of disclosing the contrast of the case as it stood to the question. Acts xxi. 13; Mark xi. 5 (so Luther, Beza, and many others, also Osiander). But our view interweaves more skilfully into one the question with its contradictory contents. — δωρεάν] has the emphasis. — τοῦ θεοῦ] Genitivus auctoris. Paul had therefore destined the pay taken from other churches to the purpose of rendering (gratuitously) his official service to the Corinthians, to whom he travelled from Macedonia (Acts xvii. 13 f., xviii. 1) in order to preach to them the gospel. — καὶ παρὰ κ.τ.λ.]

and during my presence with you I have, even when want had set in with me, burdened no one. He thus brought with him to Corinth the money received from other churches, and subsisted on it (earning more, withal, by working with his hands); and when, during his residence there, this provision was gradually exhausted, so that even want set in (καὶ ὑστερηθείς), he nevertheless importuned no one, but (ver. 9) continued to help himself on by Macedonian pecuniary aid (in addition to the earnings of his handicraft). Comp. on Phil. iv. 15. Rückert thinks that Paul only sought to relieve his want by the manual labour entered on with Aquila, when the money brought with him from Corinth had been exhausted and new contributions had not yet arrived. But, according to Acts xviii. 3, his working at a handicraft—of which, moreover, he makes no mention in this passage—is to be conceived as continuing from the beginning of his residence at Corinth; how conceivable, nevertheless, is it that, occupied as he was so greatly with other matters, he could not earn his whole livelihood, but still stood in need of supplies! On πρὸς ὑμᾶς, which is not to be taken “after my coming to you” (Hofmann), comp. 1 Cor. xvi. 6; Matt. xiii. 56. — κατενάρκησα] Hesychius: ἐβάρυννα, I have lain as a burden on no one. Gen. xxxii. 32; Job xxxiii. 19; hence καταναρκᾶν τινος: to press down heavily and stiffly on any one (on the genitive, see Matthiae, p. 860). Except in Hippocrates, p. 816 C, 1194 H, in the passive (to be stiffened), the word does not occur elsewhere in Greek; and by Jerome, Aglas. 10, it is declared to be a Cilician expression equivalent to non gravavi vos. Vulgate: “nulli onerosus fui.” Another explanation, quoted in addition to the above by Theophylact (comp. Oecumenius): “I have not become indolent in my office” (so Beza, who takes κατὰ . . . οὐδενός, cum cujusquam incommodo), would be at variance with the context. See ver. 9. Comp. also xii. 13, 14. Besides, this sense would not be demonstrable for καταναρκ. but for ἀποναρκ. (Plutarch, Educ. p. 8 F).

καὶ ἐν παντὶ κ.τ.λ. is structurally and logically (as consequence) connected with it: for what was wanting to me the brethren (known to you) supplied, after they had come from Macedonia, and, etc. — προσανεπλήρωσαν] addendo suppleverunt (comp. ix. 12). But we are not, with Grotius (who in ver. 8 and here thinks of the means for supporting the poor) and Bengel, to seek the reference of πρὸς in the addition to the earnings of his labour, for of this the whole context contains nothing; but the brethren added the support brought by them to the apostle's still very small provision, and so supplemented his ὑστέρημα. This aid is later than that mentioned in Phil. iv. 15 (see in loc.). the names of the brethren (were they Silas and Timothy? Acts xviii. 5) are unknown to us. — καὶ ἐν παντὶ κ.τ.λ.] and in every point (comp. ver. 6) I have kept and will keep myself non-burdensome to you; I have occasioned you no burden in mine own person, and will occasion you none in the future ("tantum abest, ut poeniteat," Bengel). — ἀβαρής only here in the N. T., but see Arist. de coel. 4; Chrysipp. in Plut. Mor. p. 1053 E; Luc. D. M. x. 5.

Ver. 10. Not in form an oath, but a very solemn assurance of the καὶ τηρήσω: there is truth of Christ in me, that, etc. That is to say: By the indwelling truth of Christ in me I assure you that, etc. The apostle is certain that as generally Christ lives in him (Gal. ii. 20), Christ's mind is in him (see on 1 Cor. ii. 16), Christ's heart beats in him (Phil. i. 8), Christ speaks in him (xiii. 3), all, namely, through the Spirit of Christ, which dwells in him (Rom. viii. 9 ff.); so, in particular, also truth of Christ is in him, and therefore all untruthfulness, lying, hypocrisy, etc., must be as foreign to him as to Christ Himself, who bears sway in him. The ὅτι is the simple that, dependent on the idea of assurance, which lies at the bottom of the clause ἔστιν ἀλήθ. X. ἐν ἐμοί, and has its specific expression in this clause. Comp. ζῶ ἐγὼ, ὅτι, Rom. xiv. 11. See Fritzsche, ad Rom. II. p. 242 f. Rückert's view is more far-fetched: that ὅτι κ.τ.λ. is the subject, of which Paul asserts that it is ἀλήθεια Χριστοῦ in him, i.e. what he says is a proposition, which just as certainly contains truth, as if Christ Himself said it. Olshausen attenuates the sense at variance with its literal tenor into: "as true as I am a Christian." The thought is really the same in substance as that in Rom. ix. 1: ἀλήθειαν λέγω ἐν Χριστῷ, οὐ ψεύδομαι, but the form of the conception is different. — ἡ καύχῃσις αὕτη οὐ φραγ. εἰς ἐμέ] this self-boasting will not be stopped in reference to me. The gloriatio spoken of, namely as to preaching gratuitously, is personified; its mouth is not, as to what concerns the apostle, to be stopped, so that it must keep silence. Hofmann, not appreciating this personification, takes offence at the fact that the καύχῃσις is supposed to have a mouth, while Rückert resorts to an odd artificial interpretation of φραγ. εἰς ἐμέ (will not be cooped up in me). Just because the καυχᾶσθαι is an action of the mouth, the personified καύχῃσις has a mouth, which can be stopped. Comp. Theodoret. — φραγήσεται] Comp. Rom. iii. 19; Heb. xi. 33; LXX. Ps. cvii. 42; Job v. 16; 2 Macc. xiv. 36; Wetstein, ad Rom. l.c.; Jacobs, ad Anthol. XII. p. 297. It cannot surprise us that τὸ στόμα is not expressly subjoined, since this is obvious of itself, seeing that the καύχῃσις is conceived as speaking. There is nothing in the context to justify the derivation of the expression from the damming up of running water, as Chrysostom and Theophylact, also Luther (see his gloss), and again Hofmann take it. There is just as little ground for de Wette's suggestion, that φραγήσεται is meant of hedging in a way (Hos. ii. 6). — εἰς ἐμέ] For, if Paul should so conduct himself that he could no longer boast of preaching gratuitously, the mouth of this καύχῃσις would, in reference to him, be stopped. In this εἰς ἐμέ, as concerns me, there is implied a tacit comparison with others, who conducted themselves differently, and in regard to whom, therefore, the mouth of καύχῃσις αὕτη would be stopped. — ἐν τοῖς κλίμασι τῆς Ἀχ.] is more weighty, and at the same time more tenderly forbearing, than the direct ἐν ὑμῖν, which would be πληκτικώτερον (Chrysostom).

Ver. 11. Negative specification of the reason for his continuing to preach gratuitously in Achaia. — How easily, since he had accepted something from the poorer Macedonians, might his conduct appear or be represented to the Corinthians as the result of a cold, disdainful, distrustful disposition towards them! Love willingly accepts from the beloved one what is due to it. — ὁ θεὸς οἶδεν] namely, that the reason is not want of love to you. — Observe the lively interrogative form (Dissen, ad Dem. de cor. pp. 186, 347).

Ver. 12.¹ Positive specification of the reason, after brief repetition of the matter which calls for it (ὁ δὲ ποιῶ, καὶ ποιήσω). —

Since Paul, in accordance with ver. 10, wishes to specify the aim inducing the future continuance of his conduct, καὶ ποιήσω must be apodosis (comp. Erasmus, Annot., Beza, Bengel, Lachmann, Tischendorf), and must not be attached to the protasis, so as to make it necessary to supply before ἵνα a διὰ τοῦτο ποιῶ (Erasmus, Paraphr., Luther, Castalio, Emmerling), or τοῦτο ποιῶ κ. ποιήσω (Rückert, but undecidedly), or simply γίνεται (Osiander, Ewald). — ἵνα ἐκκόψω κ.τ.λ.] in order that I may cut off the opportunity of those, who wish (exoptant, Beza) opportunity, namely, to degrade and to slander me. Τὴν ἀφορμὴν, having the article, denotes the definite occasion, arising from the subject in question, for bringing the apostle into evil repute. Had he caused himself to be remunerated by the Corinthians, his enemies, who in general were looking out for opportunity (ἀφορμ. without the article), would have taken thence the opportunity of slandering him as selfish and greedy; this was their ἀφορμή, which he wished to cut off (ἀναιρεῖν, Chrysostom) by his gratuitous working. Others understand by τὴν ἀφορμὴν the occasion of exalting and magnifying themselves above him (Calvin, Grotius, Platt). But according to this, we should have to assume that the false apostles had taken no pay, on which point, after the precedent of Chrysostom, Theophylact, Calvin, Grotius, Billroth, and others, Rückert especially insists. This assumption, however, which Neander also supports (comp. against it, Beza), has against it a priori the fact that Paul lays so earnest stress on his gratuitous preaching—which would not be appropriate to his apologetico-polemic train of argument, if on this point he had stood on the same footing with his opponents. Further, xi. 20 and 1 Cor. ix. 12 are expressly opposed to it; and the objection of Rückert, that the apostle's testimony to the baseness of his opponents loses much of its force owing to his passionate temperament, is an exaggerated opinion, to which we can concede only this much, that his testimony regarding his opponents is strongly expressed (comp. ver. 20), but not that it contains anything untrue. If they had worked against him from honest prejudice, it would have been at once indiscreet and un-Christian in him to work against them. Rückert's further objection, that the adversaries, if they had taken payment where Paul took none, would have coupled folly with selfishness, is unfounded, seeing that in fact, even with that recommendation in which Paul had the advantage of them by his unpaid teaching, very many other ways were left to them of exalting themselves and of lowering his repute, and hence they might be all the more prudent and cunning. Comp. on ver. 6. — ἵνα ἐν ᾧ καυχῶνται κ.τ.λ.] may be parallel to the previous clause of purpose (Düsterdieck). Yet it is more in keeping with the logical relation—that here something positive, and previously only something negative, is asserted as intended—and thereby with the climactic course of the passage, to assume that ἵνα ἐν ᾧ καυχ. κ.τ.λ. is the aim of ἐκκόψω τὴν ἀφορμὴν τ. θ. ἀφ., and thus the final aim of the ὁ δὲ ποιῶ, καὶ ποιήσω in regard to the opponents: in order that they, in the point of which they boast, may be found even as we. This is what I purpose to bring about among them. If, namely, the enemies did not find in Paul the opportunity of disparaging him as selfish, now there was to be given to them withal the necessity (according to his purpose) of showing themselves to be just such as Paul¹ in that, in which they boasted, i.e. according to the context, in the point of unselfishness. Hitherto, forsooth, the credit of unselfishness, which they assigned to themselves, was idle ostentation, see ver. 20. De Wette makes objection, on the other hand, that they could not have boasted of unselfishness, if they had shown themselves selfish. But this was the very point of his enemies' untruthfulness (ver. 13, comp. v. 12), that they vaingloriously displayed the semblance of unselfishness, while in fact they knew how to enrich themselves by the Christians. Theodoret aptly says: ἔδειξε δὲ αὐτοὺς λόγῳ κομπάζοντας, λάθρα δὲ χρηματιζομένους. Düsterdieck, too, can find no ground in the context for saying either that the opponents had reproached the apostle with selfishness, or had given themselves out for unselfish. But the former is not implied in our explanation (they only sought the occasion for that charge), while the latter is sufficiently implied in ver. 20. The expositors who consider the opponents as labouring gratuitously understand ἐν ᾧ καυχῶνται of this unpaid working, of which they had boasted, so that Paul in this view would say : in order that they, in this point of which they boast, may be found not better than we. See Oecumenius, Erasmus, Calvin, comp. Billroth and Rückert ; Billroth and others (comp. Düsterdieck above) taking withal the second ἵνα as parallel to the first, which Rückert also admits. But against the hypothesis that the opponents had taught gratuitously, see above. And the not better than we arbitrarily changes the positive expression καθὼς ἡμεῖς into the negative. Lastly, this explanation stands in no logical connection with what follows. See on ver. 13. Following Augustine, de serm. Dom. in monte, ii. 16, Cajetan and Estius regard ἵνα . . . ἡμεῖς as an exposition of ἀφορμὴν : occasion, in order to be found as we, and ἐν ᾧ καυχ. as parenthetical : in quo, sc. in eo quod est inveniri sicut et nos, gloriantur. Comp. also Bengel. But the opponents did not, in fact, boast of being like Paul, but of being more than he was (ver. 5), and wished to hold him or to have him held as not at all a true apostle, ver. 4. This also in opposition to Hofmann, who, attaching the second ἵνα to ἀφορμὴν, and referring¹ ἐν ᾧ καυχῶνται to the apostleship of which the opponents boasted, finds Paul's meaning to be this : maintaining in its integrity the gratuitous character of his working, he takes away from those, who would fain find ways and means of making their pretended apostleship appear equal to his genuine one, the possibility of effecting their purpose. But in the connection of the text, ἐν ᾧ καυχῶνται on the one side and καθὼς καὶ ἡμεῖς on the other can only denote one and the same quality, namely, the unselfishness, of which the opponents untruly boasted, while Paul had it in truth and verified it. Olshausen has been led farthest astray by taking the second ἵνα as the wish of the opponents ; he imagines that they had been annoyed at Paul's occupying a position of strictness which put them so much to shame, and hence they had wished to bring him away from it, in order that he might have no advantage, but that he should be found even as they. And the ἐν ᾧ καυχ. is to be taken, as if they had put forward the authority to take money as an object of glorying, as an apostolic prerogative (1 Cor. ix. 7 ff.); so that the whole passage has therefore the ironical meaning: "Much as they are opposed to me, they still wish an opportunity of letting me take a share of their credit, that I may allow myself to be supported as an apostle by the churches; but with this they wish only to hide their shame and rob me of my true credit: in this they shall not succeed!" But that the opponents had put forward the warrant to take money as an apostolic prerogative, is not to be inferred from 1 Cor. ix. 7 ff., where Paul, in fact, speaks only of the right of the teacher to take pay. Further, there is no ground in the context for the assumed reference of ἐν ᾧ καυχ.; and lastly, in keeping with the alleged ironical meaning, Paul must have written: εὐρεθᾶμεν καθὼς καὶ αὐτοί, which Olshausen doubtless felt himself, when he wrote: "in order that he might have no advantage, but that he should be found such as they."—On ἐκκόπτειν, in the ethical sense of bringing to nought, comp. Ver. 13. Justification of the aforesaid ἵνα ἐν ᾧ καυχῶνται, εὐρεθ. καθὼς κ. ἡμεῖς. "Not without ground do I intend that they shall, in that of which they boast, be found to be as we; for the part, which these men play, is lying and deceit."—Those who take καθὼς κ. ἡμεῖς in ver. 12: not better than we, must forcibly procure a connection by arbitrarily supplying something; as e.g. Rückert: that in the heart of the apostle not better than we had the meaning: but rather worse, and that this is now illustrated. Hofmann, in consequence of his view of ἵνα ἐν ᾧ καυχ. κ.τ.λ. ver. 12, interpolates the thought: "for the rest" they have understood how to demean themselves as Christ's messengers.—οἱ γὰρ τοιοῦτοι κ.τ.λ.] for people of that kind are false apostles, etc., so that ψευδαπόστολοι is the predicate.¹ So also de Wette and Ewald. Usually, after the Vulgate (also Flatt, Billroth, Rückert, Hofmann), ψευδαπόστολοι is made the subject: "for such false apostles are," etc. But it should, in fact, be rather put: "for the false apostles of that kind (in distinction from other false apostles; comp. xii. 3; Soph. O. R. 674; Polyb. viii. 2, 5, xvi. 11, 2) are," etc.,—which would be quite appropriate. Besides, the ψευδαπόστολοι, disclosing entirely at length the character of the enemies, would lose its emphasis. For the opposite of an ἐργάτης δόλιος, see 2 Tim. ii. 15. — μετασχηματιζ. εἰς ἀποστ. X.] transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. Their essential form is not that of apostles of Christ, for they are servants of Satan; in order to appear as the former, they thus assume another form than they really have, present themselves otherwise than they really are. In working against Paul in doctrine and act, they hypocritically assumed the mask of apostle, though they were the opposite of a true apostle (Gal. i. 1; Rom. xv. 18 ff.; 2 Cor. xii. 12).

xxi. 23, 24) and His dwelling-place (1 Tim. vi. 16; 1 John i. 7) is light, a glory of light, a δόξα beaming with light, which corresponds to the most perfect holy purity, so also His servants, the good angels, are natures of light with bodies of light (1 Cor. xv. 40); hence, where they appear, light beams forth from them (Matt. xxviii. 3, al.; Acts xii. 7, al.; see Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. I. p. 274 f.; Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 460). Regarding Satan, on the other hand, comp. Eph. vi. 12; Acts xxvi. 18; Col. i. 13. He is ὁ κληρονόμος τοῦ σκότους, Ev. Nic. 20. — There is no trace in the narratives concerned to justify the assumption¹ that ver. 15 points to the fall of man (Bengel, Semler, Hengstenberg, Christol. I. p. 11), or even to the temptation of Christ, Matt. iv. 8, in which the devil appeared as the angel to whom God had entrusted the rule of Palestine (Michaelis); but, at any rate, it is the apostle's thought, and is also presupposed as known to the readers, that devilish temptations in angelic form assail man. In the O. T. this idea is not found; it recurs later, however, in the Rabbins, who, with an eccentric application of the thought, maintained that the angel who wrestled with Jacob (Gen. xxxii. 34; Hos. xii. 4, 5) was the devil. See Eisenmenger, entdeckt. Judenth. I. p. 845. For conceptions regarding the demons analogous to our passage from Porphyry and Jamblichus, see Grotius and Elsner, Obs. p. 160.

Ver. 15. It is not a great matter, therefore, not strange and extraordinary, if, etc. Comp. 1 Cor. ix. 11; Plato, Hipp. maj. p. 287 A, Menex. p. 235 D; Herod. vii. 38. — καί] if, as he does himself, his servants also transform themselves, namely, as servants of righteousness, i.e. as people who are appointed for, and active in, furthering the righteousness by faith. Comp. on iii. 9. The δικαιοσύνη, the opposite of ἀνομία, but in a specifically Christian and especially Pauline sense (comp. on vi. 14) as the condition of the kingdom of God, is naturally that which Satan and his servants seek to counteract. When the latter, however, demean themselves as ἀπόστολοι Χριστοῦ, the δικαιοσύνη, which they pretend to serve, must have the semblance of the righteousness of faith, although it is not so in reality. This view is therefore not "out of the way" (Klöpfer, p. 90), but contextual; and the δικαιοσύνη cannot be the righteousness of the law, the preaching of which is not the mark of the ἀπόστολοι Χριστοῦ. As to ὡς (transform themselves and become as), comp. on Rom. ix. 29. — αὖ τὸ τέλος κ.τ.λ.] of whom—the servants of Satan—the end, final fate, will be in accordance with their works. Comp. Ver. 16. I repeat it: let no one hold me for irrational; but if not, receive me at least as one irrational (do not reject me), in order that I too (like my opponents) may boast a little. Thus Paul, after having ended the outpouring of his heart begun in ver. 7 regarding his gratuitous labours, and after the warning characterization of his opponents thereby occasioned (vv. 13–15), now turns back to what he had said in ver. 1, in order to begin a new self-comparison with his enemies, which he, however, merely introduces—and that once more with irony, at first calm, then growing bitter—down to ver. 21, and only really begins with ἐν ᾧ δ' αὖ τις τολμᾷ κ.τ.λ. at ver. 21. — That, which is by πάλιν λέγω designated as already said once (ver. 1), is μή τίς με δόξη ἄφρ. εἶναι and εἰ δὲ μή γε . . . καυχῆσθαι, both together, not the latter alone (Hofmann). The former, namely, lay implicite in the ironical character of ver. 1, and the latter explicite in the words of that verse. — εἰ δὲ μή γε] sed nisi quidem. Regarding the legitimacy of the γε in Greek (Plato, Pol. iv. p. 425 E), see Bremi, ad Aesch. de fals. leg. 47; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 527; Dindorf, ad Dem. I. p. v. f. praef. After negative clauses εἰ δὲ μή follows even in classical writers (Thuc. i. 28. 1, 131. 1; Xen. Anab. iv. 3. 6, vii. 1. 8), although we should expect εἰ δέ. But εἰ δὲ μή presupposes in the author the conception of a positive form of what is negatively expressed. Here something like this: I wish that no one should hold me as foolish; if, however, you do not grant what I wish, etc. See in general, Heindorf, ad Plat. Parm. p. 208; Buttmann, ad Plat. Crit. p. 106; Hartung, Partik. II. p. 213; and in reference to the N. Ver. 17. More precise information as to the κἂν ὡς ἄφρονα. — ὁ λαλῶ] namely, in the boastful speech now introduced and regarded thereby as already begun. — κατὰ κύριον] according to the Lord (comp. Rom. xv. 5, viii. 27), i.e. so that I am determined in this case by the guiding impulse of Christ. A speaking according to Christ cannot be boasting; Matt. xi. 29; Luke xvii. 10. Now as Paul knew that the κατὰ κύριον λαλεῖν was brought about by the πνεῦμα working in him (comp. 1 Cor. vii. 10, xxv. 40), οὐ λαλῶ κατὰ κύριον certainly denies the theopneustic character of the utterance in the stricter sense, without, however, the apostle laying aside the consciousness of the Spirit's guidance, under which he, for his purpose, allows the human emotion temporarily to speak. It is similar when he expresses his own opinion, while yet he is conscious withal of having the Spirit (1 Cor. vii. 12, 25, 40). Regarding the express remark, that he does not speak κατὰ κύριον κ.τ.λ., Bengel aptly says: "quin etiam hunc locum et propriam huic loco exceptionem sic perscripsit ex regula decori divini, a Domino instructus." — ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν ἀφροσύνῃ] but as one speaks in the state of irrationality. — ἐν ταύτ. τ. ὑποστ. τ. κ.] belongs to οὐ λαλῶ κατὰ κύριον, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν ἀφροσ. taken together: not according to the Lord, but as a fool do I speak it, with this confidence of boasting. ὑπόστασις is here interpreted as differently as in ix. 4. According to Chrysostom, Rückert, Ewald, Hofmann, and many others: in this subject-matter of boasting (comp. Luther, Billroth, and de Wette: "since it has once come to boasting"). But what little meaning this would have! and how scant justice is thus done to the ταύτῃ prefixed so emphatically (with this so great confidence)! The boasting is indeed not yet actually begun (as de Wette objects), but the apostle is already occupied with it in thought; comp. previously λαλῶ. According to Hofmann, ἐν ταύτ. τ. ὑπ. τ. κ. is to be attached to the following protasis ἐπεὶ πολλοὶ κ.τ.λ. But apart from the uncalled-for inversion thus assumed, as well as from the fact that the ὑπόστασις τ. κ. is held to be specially the apostleship, the τῆς καυχήσεως would be a quite superfluous addition; on the other hand, with the reference to the general λαλῶ as modal definition of ὑπόστασις it is quite appropriate.

Ver. 18. That which carries him away to such foolishness, ver. 16: ἵνα καὶ γὰρ μικρ. τι καυχῇσ. — Seeing that many boast according to their flesh, so will I boast too, namely, κατὰ τ. σάρκα. — Since κατὰ τὴν σάρκα is opposed to the κατὰ κύριον in ver. 17, and is parallel to the ὡς ἐν ἀφροσύνῃ, it cannot express the objective norm (comp. v. 16), or the object of the boasting (comp. Phil. iii. 3 ff.; Gal. vi. 13), as Chrysostom and most expositors, including Emmerling, Flatt, and Osiander, explain it: on account of external advantages,¹ but it must denote the subjective manner of the καυχᾶσθαι, namely: so that the καυχᾶσθαι is not guided by the Holy Spirit, but proceeds according to the standard of their natural condition as material, psychically determined, and striving against the Divine Spirit, whence they are urged on to conceit, pride, ambition, etc.² Comp. Rückert: "according to the impulse of self-seeking personality;" also de Wette, Ewald, Neander. Billroth, in accordance with his philosophy, takes it: "as individual, according to what one is as a single human being." κατὰ ἄνθρωπον in 1 Cor. ix. 8 is not parallel. See on that passage. — Rückert denies that Paul after καὶ γὰρ καυχῇσομαι has again supplied in thought κατὰ τ. σάρκα, and thinks that he has prudently put it only in the protasis and not said it of his own glorying. But it necessarily follows, as well from the previous

² Osiander is quite wrong in objecting to this interpretation that the article is against it, since Paul, when he means σάρξ in this sense, never puts the article after κατὰ. Paul, in fact, has the article only in this single passage, and elsewhere writes always κατὰ σάρκα (i.e. conformably to flesh) whether he uses σάρξ in the subjective or objective sense; hence, so far as the article is concerned, there is no means at all of comparison. Besides, τῇ here is very doubtful critically, because it is wanting in D* F G K* min. Chrys. Dam., and is at variance with the Pauline usage. Osiander's further objection, that κατὰ τὴν σάρκα, as understood by us, is in the apostle's mouth unworthy of him for the apodosis, is likewise incorrect, for he is speaking ironically; he wishes, in fact, to deal in boasting like a fool! As to the distinction between κατὰ σάρκα and κατὰ τὴν σάρκα, we may add that the one means: "after the manner of natural humanity," the other, "after the manner of their natural humanity." Comp. on Phil. i. 24, 22. In substance they are equivalent; the latter only individualizes more concretely.

οἱ λαλῶ κατὰ κύριον, in which the κατὰ τ. σάρκα is already expressed implicite, as also from the following τῶν ἀφρόνων, among whom Paul is included as κατὰ τὴν σάρκα κανχόμενος. It is otherwise in John viii. 15.

Ver. 19. Not the motive inducing, but an ironical ground encouraging, the just said κἀγὼ κανχήσομαι: For willingly you are patient with the irrational (to whom I with my κανχᾶσθαι belong), since ye are rational people! The more rational person is on that account the more tolerant toward fools. Hence not: although you are rational (Ewald and the older commentators).

Ver. 20. Argumentum a majori for what is said in ver. 19, bitterly sarcastic against the complaisance of the Corinthians towards the imperious (καταδουλοῖ), covetous (κατεσθίει), slyly capturing (λαμβάνει), arrogant (ἐπαίρεται), and audaciously violent (εἰς πρόσωπον δέρει) conduct of the false apostles. — καταδουλοῖ] enslaves. Comp. on Gal. ii. 4; Dem. 249. 2, and the passages in Wetstein. Paul has used the active, not the middle, as he leaves quite out of view the authority, whose lordship was aimed at; beyond doubt, however (see the following points), the pseudo-apostles wished to make themselves lords of the church, partly in religious, i.e. Judaistic effort (comp. i. 24), partly also in a material respect (see what follows). — κατεσθίει] swallows up, devours, sc. ὑμᾶς, a figurative way of denoting not the depriving them of independence in a Christian point of view (Hofmann), which the reader could the less guess, since it was already said in καταδουλ., but the course of greedily gathering to themselves all their property. Comp. Ps. liii. 5; Matt. xxiii. 13; Luke xv. 30; Add. to Esth. i. 11; Hom. Od. iii. 315: μή τοι κατὰ πάντα φάγωσι κτήματα, Dem. 992. 25; Aesch. c. Tim. 96. So also the Latin devorare (Quintil. viii. 6). Comp. also Jacobs, ad Anthol. X. pp. 217, 230. Rückert, who will not concede the avarice of the opponents (see on ver. 12), explains it of rending the church into parties. Quite against the meaning of the word; for in Gal. v. 15 ἀλλήλους stands alongside. And would it not be wonderful, if in such a company of worthlessness avarice were wanting? — λαμβάνει] sc. ὑμᾶς, captures you. Comp. xii. 16. The figure is taken from hunting, and denotes the getting of somebody into one's power (Dem. 115. 10, 239. 17) in a secret way, by machinations, etc. (hence different from καταδουλοῦ). Comp. Reiske, Ind. Dem., ed. Schaef. p. 322 : "devincire sibi mentes hominum deditas et veluti captas aut fascino quodam obstrictas." This meaning is held by Wolf, Emmerling, Flatt, Billroth, Rückert, de Wette, Osiander, and others. The usual older interpretation: if any one takes your goods from you (so also Ewald), is to be set aside, because ὑμᾶς would necessarily have to be supplied, and because already the far stronger κατεσθίει has preceded. The same is the case with Hofmann's interpretation: if any one seizes hold on you ("treats you as a thing"), which after the two previous points would be nothing distinctive. — ἐπαίρεται] exalts himself (proudly). See the passages in Wetstein. As in this clause ὑμᾶς cannot be again supplied, and thus the supplying of it is interrupted, ὑμᾶς is again added in the following clause. — εἰς πρόσωπ. δέρει] represents an extraordinary, very disgraceful and insolent maltreatment. Comp. 1 Kings xxii. 24; Matt. v. 39; Luke xxii. 64; Acts xxiii. 2; Philostr. vit. Apoll. vii. 23. On the impetuous fivefold repetition of εἰ, comp. 1 Tim. v. 10.

Ver. 21. In a disgraceful way (for me) I say, that we have been weak! Ironical comparison of himself with the false apostles, who, according to ver. 20, had shown such energetic bravery in Corinth. For such things we, I confess it to my shame, were too weak! — κατὰ ἀτιμίαν] is the generally current paraphrase of the adverb (ἀτίμως), to be explained from the notion of measure (Bernhardy, p. 241). See Matthiae, p. 1359 f. — ὡς ὅτι] as that (see in general, Bast, ad Gregor. Cor. p. 52), introduces the contents of the shameful confession, not, however, in an absolutely objective way, but as a fact conceived of (ὡς). The confession acquires by ὡς ὅτι something of hesitancy, which strengthens the touch of irony. — ἡμεῖς] is with great emphasis opposed to the men of power mentioned in ver. 20. — ἡσθενήσαμεν] namely, when we were there; hence the aorist. On the subject-matter, comp. 1 Cor. ii. 2. — There agree, on the whole, with our view of the passage Bengel, Zachariae, Storr, Flatt, Schrader, de Wette, Neander, Osiander, and others. The main point in it is, that κατ' ἀτιμίαν denotes something shameful for the apostle, and λέγω has a prospective reference. Rückert also gives λέγω a prospective reference, but he diverges in regard to κατ' ἀτιμίαν, and supplies μέν: "in the point, indeed, to bring disgrace upon you, I must acknowledge that I have been weak." But in that case how unintelligibly would Paul have expressed himself! For, apart from the arbitrary supplying of μέν, the definite ἀτιμίαν would be quite unsuitable. Paul, to be understood, must have written κατὰ τὴν ἀτιμίαν ὑμῶν (as regards your disgrace), or at least, with reference to ver. 20, κατὰ τὴν ἀτιμίαν (as regards the disgrace under consideration). Ewald and Hofmann take κατὰ ἀτιμ. rightly, but give λέγω a retrospective reference. In their view of ὡς ὅτι they diverge from one another, Ewald explaining it: as if I from paternal weakness could not have chastised you myself; Hofmann, on the other hand, taking ὡς ὅτι as specifying the reason for saying such a thing (comp. v. 19). Against Ewald it may be urged that ὡς ὅτι does not mean as if, and that the five points previously mentioned are not brought under the general notion of chastisement; and against both expositors, it may be urged that if κατὰ ἀτιμίαν were in reference to what precedes to mean a dishonour of the apostle himself, ἡμῶν must of necessity (in Phil. iv. 11, κατά is different) have been appended in order to be understood, because the previous points were a shame of the readers; consequently the fine point would have lain just in an emphatically added ἡμῶν (such as κατὰ τὴν ἡμῶν ἀτιμίαν). In our interpretation, on the other hand, κατὰ ἀτιμίαν receives its definite reference through ὡς ὅτι ἡμεῖς (that we), and a ἡμῶν with ἀτιμίαν would have been quite superfluous. Most of the older commentators, too, though with many variations in detail, refer κατὰ ἀτιμ. λέγω to what precedes, but explain κατὰ ἀτιμ. of the shame of the readers. So Chrysostom,¹ Theophylact, Theodoret, Pelagius, Erasmus, Beza, Calvin, Hunnius, and others: to your shame I say this (ver. 20), as if [rather: as because] we had been weak, and could not have done the same thing, although we could do it but would not. Similarly also Billroth (followed by Olshausen): "In a disgraceful way, I maintain, you put up with that injustice from the alleged reason that we are weak" (rather: had been). But since κατὰ ἀτιμ. is not more precisely defined by a ὑμῶν, we have no right to give to it another definition than it has already received from Paul by the emphatic ἡμεῖς ἡσθενήσ. Against the retrospective reference of λέγω, see above. Finally, in that view the passage would lose its ironical character, which however still continues, as is shown at once by the following ἐν ἀφροσύνῃ λέγω. — ἐν ᾧ δ' ἂν τις τολμᾷ κ.τ.λ.] Contrast with the ironical ἡσθενήσαμεν: wherein, however, any one is bold—I say it irrationally—I too am bold; in whatever respect (quocunque nomine) any one possesses boldness, I too have boldness. In ἐν ᾧ lies the real ground, in which the τολμᾶν has its causal basis. As to τολμᾷ, comp. on x. 2. ἂν contains the conception: should the case occur. See Fritzsche, Conject. p. 35. — ἐν ἀφροσύνῃ λέγω] Irony; for μή τις με δόξῃ ἄφρονα εἶναι, ver. 16. But Paul knew that the τολμῶ καγὼ would appear to the enemies to be a foolish assertion.

Ver. 22. Now comes the specializing elucidation of that ἐν ᾧ δ' ἂν τις τολμᾷ, τολμῶ καγὼ, presented so as directly to confront his enemies. Comp. Phil. iii. 5. Observe, however, that the opponents in Corinth must have still left circumcision out of the dispute. — The three names of honour, in which they boasted from their Judaistic point of view, are arranged in a climax, so that Ἑβραῖοι, which is not here in contrast to the Jews of the Diaspora, points to the hallowed nationality, Ἰσραηλῖται to the theocracy (Rom. ix. 4 f.), and σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ to the Messianic privilege (Rom. xi. 1, ix. 7, al.), without, however, these references excluding one another. The interrogative interpretation of the three points corresponds to the animation of the passage far more than the affirmative (Erasmus, Luther, Castalio, Estius, Flatt, and others).

Ver. 23. In the case of those three Jewish predicates the aim was reached and the emotion appeased by the brief and pointed καγὼ. Now, however, he comes to the main point, to the relation towards Christ; here καγὼ cannot again suffice, but a ὑπὲρ ἐγώ must come in (comp. Theodoret), and the holy self-confidence of this ὑπὲρ ἐγώ gushes forth like a stream (comp. vi. 4 ff.) over his opponents, to tear down their fancies of apostolic dignity. — παραφρονῶν λαλῶ] also ironical, but stronger than ἐν ἀφροσ. λέγω:

in madness (Herod. iii. 24; Dem. 1183. 1; Soph. Phil. 804) I speak! For Paul, in the consciousness of his own humility as of the hateful arrogance of his foes, conceives to himself a: παραφρονεῖ! as the judgment which will be pronounced by the opponents upon his ὑπὲρ ἐγώ; they will call it a παραφρον ἔπος (Eur. Hipp. 232)! — ὑπὲρ ἐγώ] He thus concedes to his opponents the predicate διάκονοι Χριστοῦ only apparently (as he in fact could not really do so according to vv. 13–15); for in ὑπὲρ ἐγώ there lies the cancelling of the apparent concession, because, if he had granted them to be actually Christ's servants, it would have been absurd to say: I am more! Such, however, is the thought: "servants of Christ are they? Well, if they are such, still more am I!" The meaning of ὑπὲρ ἐγώ is not, as most (even Osiander and Hofmann) assume: "I am a servant of Christ in a higher degree than they" (1 Cor. xv. 10), but: I am more than servant of Christ; for, as in καὶ γώ there lay the meaning: I am the same (not in reference to the degree, but to the fact), so must there be in ὑπὲρ ἐγώ the meaning: I am something more. Thus, too, the meaning, in accordance with the strong παραφρονῶν λαλῶ, appears far more forcible and more telling against the opponents.¹ ὑπέρ is used adverbially (Winer, p. 394 [E. T. 526]); but other undoubted Greek examples of this use of ὑπέρ are not found, as that in Soph. Ant. 514 (ὁ δ' ἀντιστάς ὑπέρ) is of doubtful explanation. — ἐν κόποις περισσοτέρως κ.τ.λ.] Paul now exchanging sarcasm for deep earnest, under the impulse of a noble μεγαληγορία (Xen. Apol. i. 2) and "argumentis quae vere testentur pectus apostolicum" (Erasmus), begins his justification of the ὑπὲρ ἐγώ, so that ἐν is to be taken instrumentally: through more exertions, etc. The comparative is to be explained from the comparison with the κόποι of the opponents. The adverb, however, as often also in classic writers, is attached adjectivally (sc. οὔσι) to the substantive. So also de Wette.² Comp. Luke xxiv. 1; 1 Cor. xii. 31; Phil. i. 26; Gal. i. 13; see Ast, ad Plat. Polit. p. 371 f.; Bernhardt, p. 338. Billroth, Osiander, Hofmann, and the older commentators incor-

² In the Vulgate this view has found distinct expression at least in the first clause: "in laboribus plurimis."

rectly hold that εἰμί is to be supplied: "I am so in a yet much more extraordinary way in labours." Apart from the erroneous explanation of ὑπὲρ ἐγώ, which is herein assumed, the subsequent πολλάκις is against it, for this with εἰμί supplied would be absurd. Hofmann would make a new series begin with ἐν θανάτ. πολλάκις; but this is just a mere makeshift, which is at variance with the symmetrical onward flow of the passage with ἐν. Beza, Flatt, and many others supply ἦν or γέγονα; but this is forbidden by ver. 26, where (after the parenthesis of vv. 24, 25) the passage is continued without ἐν, so that it would be impossible to supply ἦν or γέγονα further. — ἐν πληγ. ὑπερβαλλ.] by strokes endured beyond measure. — ἐν φυλακ. περισσοτ.] by more imprisonments. Clement, ad Cor. i. 5: ὁ Παῦλος ὑπομονῆς βραβεῖον ἀπέσχευ ἐπτάκις δεσμὰ φορέσας, in which reckoning, however, the later imprisonments (in Jerusalem, Caesarea, Rome) are included. — ἐν θανάτοις πολλάκις] πολλάκις γὰρ εἰς κινδύνους παρεδόθην θάνατον ἔχοντας, Chrysostom. In order, therefore, not to exceed the law by possible miscounting, only nine and thirty strokes were commonly given under the later administration of Jewish law.¹ See Joseph. Antt. iv. 8. 21, 23,

and the Rabbinical passages (especially from the treatise Maccoth in Surenhusius, IV. p. 269 ff.); in Wetstein, Schoettgen, Hor. p. 714 ff.; and generally, Saalschütz, M. R. p. 469. Paul rightly adduces his five scourgings (not mentioned in Acts) as proof of his ἐν θανάτοις πολλάκις, for this punishment was so cruel that not unfrequently the recipients died under it; hence there is no occasion for taking into account bodily weakness in the case of Paul. See Lund, Jüd. Heiligh. ed. Wolf, p. 539 f. — τρις ἐρραβδίσθην] One such scourging with rods by the Romans is reported in Acts xvi. 22; the two others are unknown to us. — ἅπαξ ἐλιθάσθ.] See Acts xiv. 19; Clem. 1 Cor. v. — τρις ἐνανάγ.] There is nothing of this in Acts, for the last shipwreck, Acts xxvii., was much later. How many voyages of the apostle may have remained quite unknown to us! and how strongly does all this list of sufferings show the incompleteness of the Book of Acts! — νυχθήμερον ἐν τῷ βυθῷ πεποίηκα] Lyra, Estius, Calovius, and others explain this of a miracle, as if Paul, actually sunk in the deep, had spent twenty-four hours without injury; but this view is at variance with the context. It is most naturally regarded as the sequel of one of these shipwrecks, namely, that he had, with the help of some floating wreck, tossed about on the sea for a day and a night, often overwhelmed by the waves, before he was rescued. On βυθός, the depth of the sea, comp. LXX. Ex. xv. 5; Ps. lxvii. 14, cvii. 24, al.; Bergl. ad Alciophr. i. 5, p. 10; and Wetstein in loc. — ποιεῖν of time: to spend, as in Acts xv. 33; Jas. iv. 13; Jacobs, ad Anthol. IX. p. 449. The perfect is used because Paul, after he has simply related the previous points, looks back on this last from the present time (comp. Kühner, § 439, 1a); there lies in this change of tenses a climactic vividness of representation.

Ver. 26 f. After the parenthesis of vv. 24, 25, the series begun in ver. 23 is now continued, dropping, however, the instrumental ἐν, which is not to be supplied, and running on merely with the instrumental dative—through frequent journeys, through dangers from rivers, etc. The expression ὁδοιπορ. πολλάκις is not to be taken as saying too little, for Paul was not constantly engaged breast, the right and the left shoulder, received each thirteen of the thirty-nine strokes. But it cannot be proved from the Rabbins that it was on this account that the fortieth was not added, as Bengel, Wetstein, and others assume.

in journeys (comp. his somewhat lengthy sojourns at Ephesus and at Corinth); wherefore he had the less occasion here to put another expression in place of the πολλάκις which belonged, as it were, to the symmetry of the context (vv. 23, 27). Hofmann wrongly joins πολλάκις with κινδύνους, and takes πολλάκ. κινδύνους as in apposition to ὁδοιπορίας: "journeys, which were often dangers." As if Paul were under the necessity of expressing (if he wished to express at all) the quite simple thought: ὁδοιπορίας πολλάκις ἐπικινδύνους (journeys which were often dangerous), in a way so singularly enigmatical as that which Hofmann imputes to him. Besides, if the following elements are meant to specify the dangers of travel, the two points ἐκ γένους and ἐξ ἐθνῶν at least are not at all specific perils incident to travel. And how much, in consequence of this erroneous connection of ὁδοιπορ. πολλάκ. κινδυν., does Hofmann mar the further flow of the passage, which he subdivides as ποταμῶν κινδύνους, ληστῶν κινδύνους, ἐκ γένους κινδύνους κ.τ.λ. down to ἐν θαλάσσῃ κινδύνους, but thereafter punctuates: *ἐν ψευδαδέλφοις κόπῳ κ. μόχθῳ ἐν ἀγρυπνίαις, πολλάκις ἐν λιμῷ κ. δίψει, ἐν νηστείαις, πολλάκις ἐν ψυχ. κ. γυμν.*¹ In this way is lost the whole beautiful and swelling symmetry of this outburst, and particularly the essential feature of the weighty anaphora, in which the emphatic word (and that is in ver. 26 κινδύνους) is placed first (comp. c.g. Hom. Il. x. 228 ff., i. 436 ff., ii. 382 ff., v. 740 f.; Arrian, Diss. i. 25; Quintil. ix. 3. ¹ So that πολλάκ. ἐν λιμῷ κ. δίψει would belong to ἀγρυπνίαις, and πολλάκ. ἐν ψυχῇ κ. γυμνότητι to νηστείαις, each as a circumstance of aggravation; while both ἐν ἀγρυπνίαις and ἐν νηστείαις belong to πίσῳ κ. μόχθῳ.

Why should not these, with their hostile and often vehement opposition to the Pauline Christianity (comp. Phil. iii. 2), have actually prepared dangers for him? Rückert, without reason, finds this inconceivable, and believes that Paul here means an occasion on which non-Christians, under cover of the Christian name, had sought to entice the apostle into some danger (? κινδύνους). — Ver. 27. κόπῳ κ. μόχθῳ] by trouble and toil; comp. 1 Thess. ii. 9; 2 Thess. iii. 8.¹ Then with ἐν ἀγρυπν. there again appears the instrumental ἐν. Here precisely, where ἐν λιμῷ κ. δίψει, and so involuntary fasting, precedes, the reference of νηστ. to voluntary fasting is perfectly clear (in opposition to Rückert, de Wette, Ewald). Ver. 28. Apart from that which occurs beside (beside what had been mentioned hitherto), *for me the daily attention is the care for all the churches.*² He will not adduce more particulars than he has brought forward down to γυμνότητι, but will simply mention further a general fact, that he has daily to bear anxiety for all the churches. On χωρὶς with the genitive: apart from, see Stallbaum, ad Plat. Apol. S. p. 35 C. The emphasis is on πασῶν. Theodoret: πάσης γὰρ τῆς οἰκουμένης ἐν ἐμαυτῷ περιφέρω τὴν μέριμναν. Nevertheless, this πασῶν is not, with Bellarmine and other Roman Catholic writers, as well as Ewald et al., to be limited merely to Pauline churches, nor is it to be pressed in its full generality, but rather to be taken as a popular expression for his unmeasured task. He has to care for all. Chrysostom, Theophy-

² Accordingly the comma after ἡμέραν is to be deleted. If μέριμνα κ.τ.λ. be (as is the usual view) taken as a clause by itself, the ἵστί to be supplied is not a copula, but: exists. But according to the right reading and interpretation, ἡ ἵστίσθαι μοι, as an independent point, would thus be too general.

lact, and others attach χωρ. τ. παρ. to what precedes, and separate it from what follows by a full stop; but this only makes the latter unnecessarily abrupt. Luther, Castalio, Bengel, and many others, including Flatt, Billroth (but uncertainly), and Olshausen, consider ἡ ἐπίστασις κ.τ.λ. (or, according to their reading: ἡ ἐπισύστασις κ.τ.λ.) as an abnormal apposition to τῶν παρεκτός: not to mention what still occurs besides, namely, etc. This is unnecessarily harsh, and χωρὶς τῶν παρεκτός would withal only be an empty formula. — τὰ παρεκτός is: quae praeterea eveniunt,¹ not, as Beza and Bengel, following the Vulgate, hold: “quae extrinsecus eum adoriebantur” (Beza), so that either what follows is held to be in apposition (Bengel: previously he has described the proprios labores, now he names the alienos secum communicatos), or τῶν παρεκτός is referred to what precedes, and what follows now expresses the inward cares and toils (Beza, comp. Erasmus). Linguistic usage is against this, for παρεκτός never means extrinsecus, but always beside, in the sense of exception. See Matt. v. 32; Acts xxvi. 29; Aq. Deut. i. 36; Test. XII. Patr. p. 631; Geopon. xiii. 15. 7; Etym. M. p. 652, 18. This also in opposition to Ewald: “without the unusual things,” with which what is daily is then put in contrast (comp. Calvin). Hofmann, following the reading ἡ ἐπισύστασις μου, would, instead of τῶν παρεκτός, write τῶν παρ’ ἐκτός, which is, in his view, masculine, and denotes those coming on to the apostle from without (the Christian body), whose attacks on his doctrine he must continually withstand. With this burden he associates the care of all the many churches, which lie continually on his soul. These two points are introduced by χωρὶς, which is the adverbial besides. This new interpretation (even apart from the reading ἐπισύστασις, which is to be rejected on critical grounds) cannot be accepted, (1) because οἱ παρ’ ἐκτός, for which Paul would have written οἱ ἔξω (1 Cor. v. 12; Col. iv. 5; 1 Thess. iv. 12) or οἱ ἔξωθεν (1 Tim. iii. 7), is an expression without demonstrable precedent, since even Greek writers, while doubtless using οἱ ἐκτός, extranei (Polyb. ii. 47. 10, v. 37. 6; comp. Eccclus. Praef. I.), do not use οἱ παρ’ ἐκτός; (2) because the two parts of the verse, notwithstanding their quite different contents, stand abruptly (without καί, or μὲν . . . δέ, or other link of connection) side by side, so that we have not even ἡ δὲ μέριμνά μου (overagainst the ἐπισύστασις μου) instead of the bare ἡ μέριμνα; and (3) because the adverbial χωρίς in the sense assumed is foreign to the N. T., and even in the classical passages in question (see from Thucydides, Krüger on i. 61. 3) it does not mean praelerea generally, but more strictly scorsim, separatim, specially and taken by itself.¹ See Ellendt, Lex. Soph. II. p. 974. But the two very general categories, which it is to introduce, would not suit this sense. — ἡ ἐπίστασις] may mean either: the daily halting (comp. Xen. Anab. ii. 4. 26; Polyb. xiv. 8. 10; Soph. Ant. 225: πολλὰς γὰρ ἔσχον φροντίδων ἐπιστάσεις, multas moras deliberationibus effectas), or: the daily attention.² See Lobeck, ad Phryn. p. 527; Schweigh. Lex. Polyb. p. 265. This signification is most accordant with the context on account of the following ἡ μέριμνα κ.τ.λ. Rückert, without any sanction of linguistic usage, makes it: the throng towards me, the concourse resorting to me on official business.³ So also Osiander and most older and more recent expositors explain the Recepta ἐπισύστασις μου or ἐπισύστ. μοι. But likewise at variance with usage, since ἐπισύστασις is always (even in Num. xxvi. 9) used in the hostile sense: hostilis concursio, tumultus, as it has also been taken here by Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Beza,⁴ Bengel, and others. See Acts xxiv. 12, and the passages in Wetstein and Loesner, p. 230.—The μοί, which, in

² Gregory of Nazianzus has ἐπιστάσις, which is to be regarded as a good gloss. See Lobeck, l.c.; Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. i. 5. 2, var.

³ ἐπιστάσις does not once mean the pressing on (active), the crowding. In 2 Macc. vi. 8 (in opposition to Grimm in loc.), ἡ ἐπιστάσις τῆς κακίας is the setting in, the coming on, i.e. the beginning of misfortune (Polyb. i. 12. 6, ii. 40. 5, al.). In Dion. Halicarn. vi. 31, the reading is to be changed into ἐπίθισιν. In Polyb. i. 26. 12, it means the position. Nevertheless, Buttm. neul. Gr. p. 156 [E. T. 180], agrees with Rückert.

⁴ Chrys.: οἱ θόρυβοι, αἱ παραχαῖ, αἱ πολιορκίαι τῶν δέμων καὶ τῶν πόνων ἰφοδοί. Beza renders the whole verse: "Absque iis, quae extrinsecus eveniunt, urget agmen illud in me quotidie consurgens, i.e. sollicitudo de omnibus ecclesiis." Comp. Ewald: "the daily onset of a thousand troubles and difficulties on him." Bengel: "obturbatio illorum, qui doctrinae vitaeque perversitate Pauli molestiam exhibebant, v. gr. Gal. vi. 17."

the interpretation of ἐπιστ. as concourse, would have to be taken as appropriating dative (Bernhardy, p. 89), is, according to our view of ἐπίστ., to be conceived as dependent on the ἐστι to be supplied.

Ver. 29. Two characteristic traits for illustrating the μέριμνα πασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν. Chrysostom aptly says: ἐπήγαγε καὶ τὴν ἐπίτασιν τῆς φροντίδος, and that for the individual members (Acts xx. 31). — As ἀσθενεῖ with σκανδαλίζεται, so also ἀσθενῶ with πυροῦμαι forms a climax—and in a way highly appropriate to the subject! For in point of fact he could not in the second clause say: καὶ οὐ σκανδαλίζομαι. — The meaning of the verse is to express the most cordial and most lively sympathy (comp. 1 Cor. xii. 26) of his care amidst the dangers, to which the Christian character and life of the brethren are exposed: “Who is weak as regards his faith, conscience, or his Christian morality, and I am not weak, do not feel myself, by means of the sympathy of my care, transplanted into the same position? Who is offended, led astray to unbelief and sin, and I do not burn, do not feel myself seized by burning pain of soul?” Semler and Billroth, also de Wette (comp. Luther’s gloss), mix up what is foreign to the passage, when they make ἀσθενῶ apply to the condescension of the apostle, who would give no offence to the weak, 1 Cor. ix. 22. And Emmerling (followed by Olshausen) quite erroneously takes it: “quem afflictum dicas, si me non dicas? quem calamitatem oppetere, si me non iis premi, quin uri memores?” In that case it must have run καὶ οὐκ ἐγὼ ἀσθενῶ; besides, σκανδαλίζεσθαι never means calamitatibus affici, but constantly denotes religious or moral offence; and lastly, σκανδαλίζεται and πυροῦμαι would yield a quite inappropriate climax (Paul must have repeated σκανδαλίζομαι). — ἀσθενεῖ] comp. Rom. iv. 19, xiv. 1, 2, 21; 1 Cor. viii. 9, 11; 1 Thess. v. 14; Acts xx. 35. The correspondence of σκανδαλίζεται in the climax forbids us to understand it of suffering (Chrysostom, Beza, Platt). — πυροῦμαι] What emotion is denoted by verbs of burning, is decided on each occasion by the context (comp. 1 Cor. vii. 9; see in general on Luke xxiv. 32), which here presents a climax to ἀσθενῶ, therefore suggests far more naturally the idea of violent pain (comp. Chrys.: καθ’ ἑκαστον ὠδυνᾷτο μέλος) than that of anger (Luther: “it galled him hard;” comp. Bengel, Rückert). Augustine says aply: "quanto major caritas, tanto majores plagae de peccatis alienis." Comp. on the expression, the Latin ardere doloribus, faces doloris, and the like (Kühner, ad Cic. Tusc. ii. 25. 61); also 3 Macc. iv. 2, and Abresch, ad Aesch. Sept. 519.— Lastly, we have to note the change in the form of the antitheses, which emerges with the increasing vividness of feeling in the two halves of the verse: οὐκ ἀσθενῶ and οὐκ ἐγὼ πυροῦμαι. In the former case the negation attaches itself to the verb, in the latter to the person. Who is weak without weakness likewise occurring in me? who is offended without its being I, who is burning? Of the offence which another takes, I on my part have the pain.

Ver. 30. Result of the previous passage—from ver. 23 onward¹ in proof of that ὑπὲρ ἐγὼ in ver. 23—put, however, asyndetically (without οὖν), as is often the case with the result after a lengthened chain of thoughts (Dissen, ad Pind. Exc. II. de asynd. p. 278); an asyndeton summing up (Nägelsbach on the Iliad, p. 284, ed. 3). If I must boast (as is the given case in confronting my enemies), I will boast in that which concerns my weakness (my sufferings, conflicts, and endurances, which exhibit my weakness), and thus practise quite another *καυχᾶσθαι*² than that of my opponents, who boast in their power and strength. In this τὰ τ. ἀσθ. μ. καυχ. there lies a holy oxymoron. To refer it to the ἀσθενεῖν in ver. 29 either alone (Rückert) or inclusively (de Wette), is inadmissible, partly because that ἀσθενεῖν was a partaking in the weakness of others, partly because the future is to be referred to what is meant only to follow. And it does actually follow; hence we must not, with Wieseler (on Gal. p. 596), generalize the future into the expression of a maxim, whereby a reference to the past is facilitated. So also in the main Hofmann. — καυχᾶσθαι, with accusative, as ix. 2.

Ver. 31. He is now about to illustrate (see vv. 32, 33) the just announced τὰ τῆς ἀσθενείας μου καυχῆσομαι by an historical enumeration of his sufferings from the beginning, but he first prefaces this detailed illustration ("rem quasi difficilem dicturus," Pelagius) by the assurance, in God's name, that he narrates nothing false. The objections taken against referring this assurance to what follows (see Estius and Rückert)—that the incident adduced in ver. 32 stands, as regards importance, out of all proportion to so solemn an assurance, and the like—lose their weight, when we reflect that Paul has afterwards again broken off (see xii. 1) the narrative begun in vv. 32, 33, and therefore, when writing his assurance, referred it not merely to this single incident, but also to all which he had in his mind still to subjoin (which, however, was left undone owing to the interruption). Others refer the oath to what precedes, and that either to everything said from ver. 23 onward (Estius, Calovius, Flatt, Olshausen), or to ver. 30 alone (Morus, Rückert, Hofmann; Billroth gives a choice between the two). But in the former case logically we could not but have expected ver. 31 after ver. 29, and in the latter case the assurance would appear as quite irrelevant, since Paul at once begins actually to give the details of his τὰ τῆς ἀσθεν. μου καυχῆσθαι (ver. 31 f.). — ὁ θεὸς κ. πατὴρ τ. κυρ. ἡμ. 'I. X.] Union of the general and of the specifically Christian idea of God. Ἡμῶν γὰρ θεὸς τοῦ δὲ κυρίου πατὴρ, Theodoret. Comp. on 1 Cor. xv. 24 and Eph. i. 3. — ὁ ὦν εὐλογητὸς κ.τ.λ.] appended by the apostle's pious feeling, in order to strengthen the sacredness of the assurance. "Absit ut abutar ejus testimonio, cui omnis laus et honor debetur in omnem aeternitatem," Calovius.

Vv 32, 33. Paul now actually begins his καυχᾶσθαι τὰ τῆς ἀσθενείας αὐτοῦ, and that by relating the peril and flight which took place at the very commencement of his work. Unfortunately, however (for how historically important for us would have been a further continuation of this tale of suffering!), yet upon the emergence of a proper feeling that the continuation of this glorying in suffering would not be in keeping with his apostolic position, he renounces the project, breaks off again at once after this first incident (xii. 1), and passes on to something far higher and more peculiar—to the revelations made to him. The expositors, overlooking this breaking off (noted also by Hilgenfeld), have suggested many arbitrary explanations as to why Paul narrates this incident in particular (he had, in fact, been in much worse perils !),¹ and that with so solemn asseveration and at such length. Billroth, e.g. (comp. Flatt), says that he wished to direct attention to the first danger pre-eminently by way of evidence that everything said from ver. 23 onward was true (ver. 31). In that case he would doubtless have written something like ἡδη γὰρ ἐν Δαμασκῷ, or in such other way as to be so understood. Olshausen contents himself with the remark that Paul has only made a supplementary mention of the event as the first persecution; and Rückert even conjectures that it was by pure accident that Paul noted by way of supplement and treated in detail this story occurring to his recollection! Osiander thinks that he singled it out thus on account of its connection (?) in subject-matter and time with the following revelation, and, as it were, by way of further consecration of his official career. Comp. also Wieseler on Gal. p. 595, who likewise considers the narrative as simply a suitable historical introduction to the revelation that follows. But we do not see the purpose served by this detailed introduction,—which, withal, as such, would have no independent object whatever,—nor yet, again, the purpose served by the interruption in xii. 1. According to Hofmann, the mention of this means of rescue, of which he had made use, and which many a one with merely natural courage would on the score of honour not have consented to employ, is intended to imply a confession of his weakness. The idea of weakness, however, is not at all here the opposite of the natural courage of honour, but rather that of the passive undergoing of all the παθήματα of Christ, the long chain of which, in Paul's case, had its first link historically in that flight from Damascus. Calvin correctly names this flight the "tirocinium Pauli." — ἐν Δαμασκῷ] stands as an anacoluthon. When Paul wrote it, having already in view a further specification of place for an incident to follow, he had purposed to write, instead of the unsuitable τὴν Δαμασκηνῶν πόλιν, something else (such as τὰς πύλας), but then left out of account the ἐν Δαμασκῷ already written. It is a strange fancy to which Hofmann has recourse, that τ. Δαμασκ. πόλιν is meant to be a narrower conception than ἐν Δαμασκῷ. — ἐθνάρχης] prefect (Josephus, Antt.

¹ Arbitrary explanations are already given by Chrysostom (comp. Bengel, Ewald, and others): because the incident was older and less known; and by Pelagius: because in Damascus the Jews had stirred up etiam principes gentium against Paul.

Gottlob Heyne, de ethnarcha Aretae, Witeb. 1755, p. 3 ff. The incident itself described is identical with that narrated in Acts ix. 24 f. No doubt in Acts the watching of the gates is ascribed to the Jews, and here, to the ethnarch ; but the reconciliation of the two narratives is itself very naturally effected through the assumption that the ethnarch caused the gates to be watched by the Jews themselves at their suggestion (comp. Heyne, l.c. p. 39). "Jewish gold had perhaps also some effect with the Emir," Michaelis. — τὴν Δαμασκ. πόλιν] namely, by occupying the gates so that Paul might not get out. Regarding the temporary dominion over Damascus held at that time by Aretas, the Arabian king, and father-in-law of Herod Antipas, see on Acts, Introd. § 4, and observe that Paul would have had no reason for adding Ἀρέτα τοῦ βασιλέως, if at the very time of the flight the Roman city had not been exceptionally (and temporarily) subject to Aretas—a state of foreign rule for the time being, which was to be brought under the notice of the reader. Hofmann thinks that the chief of the Arabian inhabitants in the Roman city was meant ; but with the less ground, since Paul was a Jew and had come from Jerusalem, and consequently would not have belonged at all to the jurisdiction of such a tribal chief (if there had been one). He went to Arabia (Gal. i. 17) only in consequence of this incident. — διὰ θυρίδος] by means of a little door (Plato, Pol. ii. p. 359 D ; Lucian, Asin. 45). VER. 1. καυχᾶσθαι δὴ] So also Tisch., following K M and most min. Arm. and the Greek Fathers. But B D E F G I, and many min., also Syr. utr. Arr. Vulg. It. Ambrosiast. have the reading καυχᾶσθαι δεῖ, which Griesb. has recommended, and Scholz, Lachm. Rück. have adopted. D* N* 114, Copt. Slav. codd. Lat. Theophyl. have καυχᾶσθαι δέ, which Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 122 f., prefers. The testimonies for καυχᾶσθαι δεῖ preponderate so decidedly that we are not entitled to derive δεῖ from xi. 30. On the other hand, the apparent want of connection in καυχ. δεῖ οὐ συμφ. was sufficient occasion, partly for changing δεῖ into δέ, or by means of itacism into δὴ (the latter Reiche defends and Ewald follows, also Hofm.), partly for prefixing an εἰ to the καυχ. from xi. 30 (N 39, Lect. 17, Vulg. Pel.). — οὐ συμφέρει μοι, ἐλεύσομαι γάρ] Lachm. and Rück. read οὐ συμφέρον μὲν, ἐλεύσομεν δέ (Lachm.: δε καί, after B), supported by B F G N, and in part by some min. vss. and Fathers. But μὲν . . . δέ betrays itself as a correction by way of gloss of the difficult γάρ, in which μοί was supplanted by μὲν, and γάρ by δέ. The question whether συμφέρον is original instead of συμφέρει, is decided by the circumstance that, according to the codd., the reading συμφέρον is connected with the reading μὲν . . . δέ, and hence falls with it. — Ver. 3. ἐκτός] B D* E* N, Method. in Epiph. have χωρίς. So Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. Rightly; ἐκτός is from ver. 2. The subsequent οὐκ οἶδα is deleted by Lachm., but only on the authority of B, Method. — Ver. 6. τῇ] is doubtless wanting in B D E F G N* 37, 67 Arm. Boern. Tol. Harl. codd. Lat. But how easily it was left out, being regarded as utterly superfluous, and even as confusing! — Ver. 7. Before the first ἵνα Lachm. has διό, following A B F G N 17, Boern. An insertion for the sake of connection, occasioned by the not recognising the inverted order of the words, so that καὶ τῇ ὑπερβ. τῶν ἀποκαλ. was attached in some way to what goes before (with some such meaning as this: in order that no one may get a higher opinion of me . . . even through the abundance of the revelations). — The second ἵνα μὴ ὑπεραίρωμαι is wanting in A D E F G N* 17, and several vss. and Fathers (bracketed by Lachm.); but the emphasis of the repetition being overlooked, the words have been passed over as having been used already. — Ver. 9. δύναμις μου] μου is wanting in A* B D* F G N*, and several vss. and Fathers. Deleted by Bengel, Lachm. Tisch. Considering, however, the no small weight of the testimonies for μου (A D E K L N and almost all min. vss. Or. Chrys. Theodoret), and seeing that the syllable μου might easily be passed over after the syllable μις, the Recepta is to be preserved, its sense also being necessary according to the whole context. — τελειοῦται] A B D* F G N* have τελεῖται. So Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. Rightly; the former is an interpretation. — Ver. 11. After ἄφρων Elz. has καυχώμενος, against decisive evidence. An exegetical addition. — Ver. 12. ἐν σημείοις] ἐν is wanting in A B D* N 17, 39, 71, al. Vulg. ms. Clar. Germ. Tol. and Fathers; while F G, Boern. Syr. Chrys. Tisch. and Rück. is to be deleted. — Ver. 13. ἡττήθητε] B D* N* 17 have ἡσώθητε (so Lachm.), which is nothing but a copyist's error, and in D and N is rightly corrected; F G have ἐλαττώθητε, which is a gloss. — Ver. 14. After τρίτον Griesb. Scholz, Lachm. Rück. Tisch. read τοῦτο, following doubtless a preponderance of authorities, among which, however, D E 93, Copt. Syr. ? put it before τρίτον. An addition from xiii. 1. — ὑμῶν] is wanting after καταναρκ. in A B N 17, 71, al. Aeth. Damasc., while D* F G have ὑμῶς. Both have been supplied, and are rightly deleted by Lachm. Tisch. — Ver. 15. εἰ καί] καί is wanting in A B F G N* Copt. Sahid. Deleted by Lachm. An addition from misunderstanding; see the exegetical remarks. — Ver. 19. πάλιν] Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. read πάλαι on preponderating evidence. Rightly; the πάλαι not understood was erroneously glossed. — In what follows κατέναντι is to be adopted instead of κατενώπιον, with Lachm. and Rück., on preponderating evidence. Comp. ii. 17. — Ver. 20. Instead of ἔρις, Lachm. and Rück. read ἔρις, but against preponderating evidence. The latter might easily originate through itacism. Instead of ζῆλοι, Lachm. Tisch. and Rück. read ζήλος, following A B D* F G, Goth. Syr. Arm. Dam. Rightly; the plural crept in from the surrounding forms. — Ver. 21. ἐλθόντα με] Lachm. Rück. and Tisch. read ἐλθόντος μου, following A B F G N* 39, 93. Rightly; the Recepta is a grammatical emendation, which brought with it the omission of the subsequent με. — ταπεινώσῃ] Lachm. and Tisch. read ταπεινώσει, following B D E F G L, min. Oec. The subjunctive is a mechanical alteration in accordance with the preceding and usual form.

CONTENTS.—Breaking off from what precedes, Paul passes over to the revelations which he has had, narrates one of them, and says: Of this he would boast, not of himself, except only of his weaknesses; for he will perpetrate no folly by self-glorying, but abstains from it, in order not to awaken too high an opinion of himself (vv. 1-6). And in order that he might not plume himself over those revelations, there was given to him a painful affliction, on account of which after a thrice-repeated invocation he had been referred by Christ to His grace; hence he preferred to glory in his weaknesses, in order that he might experience the power of Christ, for which reason he had pleasure in his weaknesses (vv. 7-10). — He had become a fool, compelled thereto by them; for he ought to have been commended by them, since in no respect did he stand behind the fancied apostles, but, on the contrary, had wrought amongst them the proofs of his apostolic dignity (vv. 11, 12). This leads him, amidst bitter irony, again to his gratuitous working, which he will continue also on his third arrival (vv. 13-15). But not only had he not by himself and immediately taken advantage of them, but not even through others mediately (vv. 16-18). Now begins the conclusion of the whole section: Not before them, but before God, does he vindicate himself, yet for their edification. For he fears that he may find them not in the frame of mind which he wishes, and that he may be found by them in a fashion not wished for (vv. 19-21).

Ver. 1.¹ Scarcely has Paul, in xi. 32 f., begun his καυχᾶσθαι τὰ τῆς ἀσθενείας with the incident in Damascus, when he breaks off again with the thought which, in the instantaneous, true tact of his consciousness (comp. on xi. 32 f.), as it were bars his way: καυχᾶσθαι δεῖ, οὐ συμφέρει μοι (see the critical remarks): to boast of myself is necessary, not beneficial for me. Let it be observed that οὐ συμφ. is the antithesis of δεῖ (neccesse, non utile est), and that a comma only must therefore stand after δεῖ; further, that μοι belongs not merely to συμφ., but also to δεῖ (Tob. v. 14; Kühner, ad Xen. Mem. iii. 3. 10, Anab. iii. 4. 35; Mätzner, ad Antiph. p. 257);²

² Reiche (Comment. crit. I. p. 404) objects that Paul must have written "soleniter et perspicue:" καυχᾶσθαι ἰμὶ διῷ, οὐ δὲ συμφέρει μοι. But if μοι were not to be referred jointly to διῷ, seeing that διῷ with the dative and infinitive certainly is found in classical writers seldom (see also Ellendt, Lex. Soph. I. p. 399 f.), and never in the N. T., an ἰμὶ would not be necessary; but καυχ. διῷ may be taken lastly, that συμφ. means the moral benefit as opposed to the ethical disadvantage of the self-exaltation (comp. ver. 7, and see Theophyl.): "saluberrimum animo ἢ τῆς οἰήσεως συστολή," Grotius. Comp. Ignat. Trall. 4: πολλὰ φρονῶ ἐν θεῷ, ἀλλ' ἐμαυτὸν μετρῶ, ἵνα μὴ ἐν καυχῇσιν ἀπόλωμαι. The δεῖ arose out of the existing circumstances of the Corinthians, by which Paul had seen himself necessitated to the καυχᾶσθαι; but the οὐ συμφέρει prevails with him to pass on to something else and far higher, as that in which there lay no self-glory (ver. 5). With the reading δή (see the critical remarks) the δή would only make the notion of καυχᾶσθαι more significantly¹ prominent, like the German eben or ja [certainly, or indeed] (see Krüger, § 69, 19. 2; Klotz, ad Devar. p. 392; Bäumllein, Partikell. p. 98), but could not, as Hofmann (with an inappropriate appeal to Hartung) assumes, denote glorying "simply and absolutely," in contrast with a καυχᾶσθαι τὰ τῆς ἀσθενείας. This Paul would have known how to express by something like ἀπλῶς δὴ καυχᾶσθαι. — ἐλεύσομαι] not: I would (to which Hofmann practically comes), but: I will (now) come to speak. See Wolf, Curæ; Dissen, ad Pind. Ol. ix. 83, p. 119. — γάρ] He might also have said οὖν, but his conception is, that by his passing over to something else the οὐ συμφέρει μοι is illustrated and confirmed. See Klotz, ad Devar. p. 235; Bäumllein, Partik. p. 86. — εἰς ὀπτασίας καὶ ἀποκαλ. κυρίου] i.e. to facts, in which Christ imparted to me visions and revelations.² The genitivus subjecti κυρίου is the characteristic definition, which both words need (not simply the absolutely: boasting is necessary (under the circumstances given), not advantageous is it to me. The non-use of δέ or ἀλλὰ is in keeping with the very common asyndetic juxtaposition of contrasted statements, 1 Cor. vii. 6; Rom. ii. 29; 2 Cor. v. 3, et al. Reiche himself, defending the Recepta, lays the whole emphasis on μοι: my boasting takes place not for my own advantage, but for yours (in order to correct your judgment regarding me, etc.). He explains it, therefore, as if Paul had written: οὐκ ἰμοί or οὐκ ἑμαυτῷ συμφέρει. Theodoret had already taken it erroneously, quite like Reiche.

² As is well known, from this passage arose the apocryphal Ἀποκάλυψις Παύλου, and (or ?) the Ἀναβατικὸν Παύλου. See Lücke, Einl. in d. Offenb. Joh. I. p. 244 ff. ed. 2. Theophylact finds the proof that this treatise is not genuine in ἄρρητα, ver. 4.

second, to which Hofmann limits it). Theophylact remarks that in ἀποκαλ. there is added to ὅπτασ. something more, ἡ μὲν γὰρ μόνον βλέπειν δίδωσιν, αὕτη δὲ καὶ τι βαθύτερον τοῦ ὁρωμένου ἀπογυμνοῖ. This distinction, however, keeps the two ideas apart contrary to their nature, as if the apocalyptic element were not given with the ὅπτασία. Ὅπτασία ("species visibiles objecta vigilantibus aut somniantibus," Grotius) is rather a special form of receiving the ἀποκάλυψις (comp. Lücke, Einl. in d. Offenb. Joh. I. p. 27, ed. 2), which latter may take place by means of such a miraculous vision (Dan. ix. 23, x. 1, 16); see also Luke i. 22; Acts xxvi. 19. This is the meaning of ὅπτασία here, and ἀποκαλ. is a wider idea, inasmuch as revelations occur also otherwise than in the way of visions beheld, although here ensuing in that way; comp. ver. 7, where ἀποκαλ. stands alone.—That Paul by what follows wishes to prove, with a polemic object against the Christine party, that external acquaintance with Christ was superfluous (so Baur; see also Oecumenius), is not to be assumed, just because otherwise the mention of his having had a vision of Christ would be necessary for its bearing on the sequel. Nor can we from this passage infer it as the distinctive feature of the Christines, that they had claimed to stand by visions and revelations in a mystical connection with Christ (Schenkel, Dähne, de Wette, Goldhorn; comp. also Ewald, Beyschlag), since Paul is contending against specifically Judaistic opponents, against whom he pursues his general purpose of elucidating his apostolic dignity, which enemies obscured in Corinth,¹ from the special distinctions which he, and not his opponents, had to show (comp. Rübiger, p. 210; Klöpfer, p. 99 ff.).

Ver. 2. He now quotes instar omnium a single event of such a nature, specially memorable to him and probably unique in his experience, vv. 2–4. — οἶδα ἄνθρωπον κ.τ.λ.] I know a man . . . who was snatched away. Paul speaks of himself as of a third person, because he wishes to adduce something in which no part of the glory at all falls on the Ego proper. And how suitable in reality was the nature of such an event to the modest mode of representation, excluding all self-glory! In that ecstasy the Ego had indeed really ceased to be the subject of its own activity, and had become quite the object of the activity of others, so that Paul in his usual condition came before himself as other than he had been in the ecstasy, and his I, considered from the standpoint of that ecstasy, appeared as a he. — ἐν Χριστῷ] a man to be found in Christ (as the element of life), 1 Cor. i. 30; a Christian; not: "quod in Christo dico, i.e. quod sine ambitione dictum velim," Beza, connecting it with οἶδα (comp. Emmerling). — πρὸ ἐτῶν δεκατεσσάρων] belongs to ἀρπαγέντα, from which it is separated by the parenthesis. We may add that this note of time is already decisive against those, who either find in this incident the conversion of the apostle (or at least something connected therewith), as Damasus, Thomas, Lyra, L. Capellus, Grotius, Oeder, Keil, Opusc. p. 318 ff.; Matthaei, Religionsgl. I. p. 610 ff., and others, including Bretschneider and Reiche, and quite recently Stölting, Beitr. z. Exeg. d. Paul. Br. 1869, p. 173 — or identify it with the appearance in the temple, Acts xxii. 17 ff., as Calvin (but uncertainly), Spanheim, Lightfoot, J. Capellus, Rinck, Schrader, and others; comp. also Schott, Erört. p. 100 ff.; Wurm in the Tüb. Zeitschr. 1833, 1, p. 41 ff.; Wieseler, p. 165, and on Gal. p. 591 ff.; Osiander. The conversion was upwards of twenty years earlier than this Epistle (see on Acts, Introd. § 4). See, besides, Estius and Fritzsche, Diss. I. p. 58 ff.; Anger, rat. temp. p. 164 ff. In fact, even if the definition of the time of this event could be reconciled with that of the appearance in the temple, Acts xxii. 17 ff., still the narrative of this passage (see especially ver. 4: ἤκουσεν ἄρρητα κ.τ.λ.) is at any rate so essentially different from that in Acts xxii., that the identity is not to be assumed.¹ The connection which Wieseler assumes with the Damascene history does not exist in reality (comp. on xi. 32 f.), but with xii. 1 there begins something new. The event here mentioned, which falls in point of time to the stay at Antioch or to the end of the stay at Tarsus (Acts xi. 25), is to us quite unknown otherwise. The reason, however, why Paul added the definition of time is, according to Chrysostom, Pelagius, Theodoret, and others, given thus: "videmus Paulum ipsum per annos quatuordecim tacuisse, nec verbum fuisse facturum, nisi importunitas malignorum coëgisset," Calvin. But how purely arbitrary! And whence is it known that he had been so long silent regarding the ecstasy? No; the specification of time flowed without special design just as naturally from the pre-eminently remarkable character which the event had for Paul, as from the mode of the representation, according to which he speaks of himself as of a third person, in whose case the notice of an already long past suggested itself spontaneously; for "longo tempore alius a se ipso quisque factus videtur" (Bengel). — εἴτε ἐν σώματι] sc. ἡπ' αὐτῇ from what follows. Regarding εἴτε . . . εἴτε, whether . . . or, see Hartung, Partikell. II. p. 202 f., also Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 224. He puts the two cases as quite equal as respects possibility, not the first as more probable; hence with the second εἴτε no καί is added; see Dissen. In that ecstasy his lower consciousness had so utterly fallen into abeyance, that he could not afterwards tell (according to Athan. c. Ar. Sermon 4: dared not tell) whether this had taken place by means of a temporary withdrawal of his spirit out of the body, or whether his whole person, the body included (ἐν σώματι), had been snatched away. By this alternative he expresses simply the utter incomprehensibleness for him of the manner of the occurrence. It is to him as if either the one or the other had taken place, but he knows neither the former nor the latter; hence he is not to be made responsible for the possibility or eventual mode of the one or other. "Ignoratio modi non tollit certam rei scientiam," Bengel. Following Augustine, Genes. ad lit. xii. 5, Thomas and Estius explained ἐν σώματι: anima in corpore manente, so that Paul would say that he does not know whether it took place in a vision (ἐν σώματι) or by an actual snatching away of the spirit (ἐκτὸς τοῦ σ.). But if he had been uncertain, and had wished to represent himself as uncertain, whether the matter were only a seeing and perceiving by means of the spiritual senses or a real snatching away, it would not have had at all the great importance which it is held to have in the context, and he would only have exposed to his rivals a weak point, seeing that inward visions of the supernatural, although in the form of divinely presented apparitions, had not the quite extraordinary character which Paul manifestly wishes to ascribe to the event described. This also in opposition to Beyschlag, 1864, p. 207, who explains the alternative εἴτε ἐν σώματι only as the bestowal of a marvellous "range" and "reach" of the inward senses—in spite of the ἀρπαγέντα. Moreover, we must not ascribe to the apostle the Rabbinical opinion (in Schoettgen, Hor. p. 697) that he who is caught into paradise puts off his body and is clothed with an ethereal body; because otherwise he could not have put the case εἴτε ἐν σώματι.¹ So much, however, is clear, that for such a divine purpose he held as possible a temporary miraculous withdrawal of the spirit from the body without death.² The *mode*³ in which this conceived possibility was to take place must be left undetermined, and is not to be brought under the point of view of the separability of the bare πνεῦμα (without the ψυχή) from the body (Osiander); for spirit and soul form inseparably the Ego even in the trichotomistic expression of 1 Thess. v. 23, as likewise Heb. iv. 12 (see Lünemann in loc.). Comp. also Calovius against Cameron. Hence also it is not to be said with Lactantius: "abit animus, manet anima." — The anarthrous ἐν σώματι means bodily, and that his own body was meant by it, and τοῦ σώματος with the article is not anything different, was obvious of itself to the reader; σῶμα did not need the article, Stallbaum, *ad Plat. ¹ Just as little is the case put to be made conceivable as a momentary transfiguration of the body (Osiander). The bodily transfiguration is simply an eschatological event (1 Cor. xv. 51 ff.; 1 Thess. iv. 17), and a transformation of such a nature, that after it the return to the previous condition is quite inconceivable.

τρίτου οὐρ.] thus, through the first and second heaven into the third.¹ As the conception of several heavens pervades the whole of the O. and N. T. (see especially, Eph. iv. 10; Heb. iv. 14); as the Rabbins almost unanimously (Rabbi Juda assumed only two) reckon seven heavens (see the many passages in Wetstein, Schoettgen, Hor. p. 718 ff.; comp. also Eisenmenger, Entdeckt. Judenth. I. p. 460; Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. I. p. 247); and as Paul here names a definite number, without the doctrine of only three heavens occurring elsewhere; as he also in ver. 4 specifies yet a higher locality situated beyond the third heaven: it is quite arbitrary to deny that he had the conception of seven heavens, as was done by Origen, contra Celsum, vi. p. 289: ἐπτὰ δὲ οὐρανούς, ἧ ὅλως περιωρισμένον ἀριθμὸν αὐτῶν, αἱ φερόμεναι ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησιαίαις οὐκ ἀπαγγέλλουσι γραφαί. The rationalistic explanations of more recent expositors, such as that of Billroth (following Schoettgen): that he only meant by this figurative (?) expression to express the nearness in which his spirit found itself to God, have as little exegetical warrant as the explanation of Calvin, Calovius, and others, that the holy number three stands κατ' ἐξοχήν pro summo et perfectissimo, so that τρίτου denotes "the highest and most perfect sphere of the higher world" (Osiander);² or as the assertion of others (Estius, Clericus, Bengel, and others), that it is a doctrine of Scripture that there are only three heavens (the heaven of clouds, the heaven of stars, and the empyrean; according to Damascenus, Thomas, Cornelius a Lapide, and others, "coelum sidereum, crystallinum, empyreum;" according to Grotius: "regio nubifera, reg. astrifera, reg. angelifera"), or the fiction of Grotius and Emmerling, that the Jews at that time had assumed only these three heavens. It is true that, according to the Rabbins, the third heaven was still no very exalted region.³ But we do not know at all what conception of the difference of the seven heavens Paul followed (see below), and are therefore not at all justified in conjecturing, with Rückert, in opposition to the number seven, that Paul was not following the usual hypothesis, but another, according to which the third heaven was at least one of the higher;¹ but see on ver. 4, where a still further ascent from the third heaven into paradise is mentioned. Even de Wette finds the usual view most probable, that by the third heaven is meant the highest; "in such things belonging to pious fancy nothing was established until the Rabbinical tradition became fixed." But the third heaven must have been to the readers a well-known and already established conception; hence we are the less entitled to depart from the historically attested number seven, and to adopt the number three (nowhere attested among the Jews) which became current in the church only on the basis of this passage (Suicer, Thes. II. p. 251), while still in the Test. XII. Patr. (belonging to the second century) p. 546 f., the number seven holds its ground, and the seven heavens are exactly described, as also the Ascensio Jesaiae (belonging to the third century) has still this conception of Jewish gnosis (see Lücke, Einl. in d. Offenb. Joh. I. p. 287 f., ed. 2). How Paul conceived to himself the several heavens as differing, we cannot determine, especially as in those Apocryphal books and among the Rabbins the statements on the point are very divergent. Erroneously, because the conception of several heavens is an historical one, Hofmann (comp. also his Schriftbeweis, II. 1, p. 535) has regarded ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ as belonging to the vision, not to the conception (in connection with which he lays stress on the absence of the article), and spiritualizes the definite concrete utterance to this effect, that Paul in the vision, which made visible to him in a spiritual manner the invisible, "saw himself caught away beyond the lower domains of the supermundane and up into a higher region." This is to depart from the clear literal meaning and to lose oneself in generalities. It is quite unwarranted to adduce the absence of the article with τρίτου, since with ordinal numbers the article is not at all required, Matt. xx. 3; Mark xv. 25; Acts ii. 15,

Vv. 3, 4. And I know such a man . . . that he, namely, was caught away, etc. The expression is here the well-known attraction οἰδά σε τίς ἐστι. Most expositors consider the matter itself as not different from what is mentioned in ver. 2, so that τρίτος οὐρανός and ὁ παράδεισος would be one and the same. But it is decisive against this view, that ὁ τρίτος οὐρανός cannot without arbitrariness be taken otherwise than of a region of heaven comparatively low (see on ver. 2). Besides, the whole circumstantial repetition, only with a change in designating the place, would not be solemn language, but battology. This also in opposition to Hofmann, who imports the modification: "The one time emphasis is laid only on the surroundings, into which he found himself transported away from the earth; the other time on the contrast of the fellowship of God, into which he was transported away from the church of God here below." Clemens Alexandrinus, Irenaeus, Origen, Athanasius, and several Fathers and schoolmen (see Estius and Bengel on the passage), also Erasmus¹ and Bengel,² have rightly distinguished paradise from the third heaven. Comp. also Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. I. p. 246; Osiander, Hilgenfeld, and others. Still we are not, with Bengel (comp. de Wette), to regard (see on ver. 2) paradise as interius quiddam in coelo tertio, quam ipsum coelum tertium (comp. Cornelius a Lapide); but Paul relates first how he was caught up into the third heaven, and then adds, as a further point in the experience, that he was transported further, higher up into paradise, so that the ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ was a break, as it were, a resting-point of the raptus. Thus, too, the repetition of the same words, as well as the repetition of the parenthesis, obtains its solemn character; for the incident is reported step by step, i.e. in two stages. — The paradise is here not the lower, i.e. the place in Sheol, in which the spirits of the departed righteous are until the resurrection

This distinction is one given historically, and necessary for the understanding of the passage, and is rightly maintained also by Osiander, Hahn, and others. That ἄρρητα here does not mean quae dici nequeunt (Plato, Soph. p. 238 C), as Beza, Estius, Calovius, Wolf, and many others, including Billroth and Olshausen, hold (Rückert is not decided), is shown by the solemn epexegetical ἀ οὐκ ἐξὸν ἀνθρώπῳ λαλῆσαι, in which ἐξὸν means licet, fas est, and is not — as Luther and many older and later commentators, including Billroth and Olshausen, wish to take it, quite at variance with the signification of the word — equivalent to δύνατον. Ver. 5. On behalf of the one so constituted I will boast, but on behalf of myself, etc. Paul abides by his representation begun in ver. 2, according to which he speaks of himself as of a third person. The reader understood him! to the effect, namely, that apart from that difference of persons underlying the mere representation, the essential meaning of ὑπὲρ τοῦ τοιοῦτου καυχῆσομαι was the same as if Paul had written: τὸ τοιοῦτο (or ἐν τῷ τοιοῦτῳ) καυχῆσομαι. But this may not mislead us, with Luther, Mosheim, Zachariae, Heumann, Schulz, Rosenmüller, Rückert, to take τούτου as neuter; for in favour of the view that it is masculine (so after Chrysostom, most expositors including Flatt, Fritzsche, Billroth, Olshausen, de Wette, Ewald, Osiander, Hofmann) we may decisively urge not merely τὸν τοιοῦτον, vv. 2 and 3, as well as the personal contrast in ἐμαντοῦ, and the otherwise unaltered symmetry of the whole mode of representation (see Fritzsche, Diss. II. 124), but also ὑπέρ, which with καυχᾶσθαι denotes the person for whose advantage (see on v. 12), not simply in regard to whom (Hofmann), the boast is made; the thing is afterwards by ἐν expressly distinguished from the person. The objection of Rückert, that Paul might not push the conception so far! is quite invalid, since, in fact, the readers, if they once knew that from ver. 2 onward he meant himself, could not at all misunderstand him. —εἰ μὴ is not for ἐὰν μὴ (Rückert), but it introduces an actually existing exception to that principle² ὑπὲρ ἐμαντοῦ οὐ καυχῆσομαι. It is, however, neither necessary nor justifiable to supply with ὑπ. ἐμ. οὐ καυχ.: “of the visions and revelations which I have had,” so that εἰ μὴ would form an inexact contrast

² Καυχῆσθαι, namely, expresses a principle to be followed, not as Grotius and others would take it: “Futurum pro potentiali . . . gaudere et exultare possem.”

(de Wette), since Paul, quite in harmony with xi. 30, absolutely denies that he wishes to boast on behalf of his own self otherwise than only of his weaknesses (comp. xi. 30). Self-glorying otherwise is only then to take place on his part, when his own Ego (his work, toil, merit, etc.) does not come at all into consideration, but he is merely the dependent, receptive instrument of the Lord, and appears as a third person, on behalf of whom the καυχᾶσθαι takes place. The plural ἀσθεν. denotes the various situations and manifestations, in which his feebleness presents itself.

Ver. 6. Γάρ] is not indeed or however (Flatt and others), nor are we, with Rückert, to supply a μέν after ἐάν; but the thought, for which γάρ assigns the reason, is — by a frequent usage very natural with the lively train of thought (see especially, Hartung, Partikell. I. p. 464 ff.; Baeumlein, Partik. p. 83 f.) — as resulting of itself, not expressly set forth; it is implied in the οὐ καυχῆσομαι εἰ μὴ κ.τ.λ., in so far as these words presuppose that Paul could boast, if he would. In reference to this he continues: for in case I possibly shall have wished, etc. Comp. Winer, p. 422 [E. T. 568]. Osiander wrongly refers γάρ to the first half of ver. 5; for the second half contains the leading thought and the progressive point of the passage. According to Ewald, Paul means the time of judgment, when he shall wish really to glory, whereas now he refrains. In this case he must have subsequently at least written νῦν δὲ φείδομαι in order to be understood, and even then the reference of the θελήσω to the day of judgment, in the absence of any express designation of the latter, would only be very indirectly indicated. — ἐάν] does not stand for κἂν any more than at x. 8 (in opposition to Rückert). — οὐκ ἔσομαι ἄφρων] glancing back to xi. 1, 16 ff., but spoken now in entire seriousness, expressing the folly of the vaunting which injures the truth. — φείδομαι δέ] sc. τοῦ καυχᾶσθαι, i.e. but I keep it back, make no use of it. being eye-witness of my actions, or by his being, it may be, an ear-witness of my oral ministry. Many in Corinth found his action powerless and his speech contemptible (x. 10); but he wished still to call forth no higher judgment of himself than one consonant to experience, which could not but spontaneously form itself; hence he abstains from the καυχᾶσθαι, although he would speak the truth with it. On λογίζονται, comp. xi. 5; Phil. iii. 13; 1 Cor. iv. 1, al. Ewald takes it: in order that no one may put to my account. This, however, would be expressed by μή τις ἐμοὶ λογίσ.—The τί (possibly) is to be explained as a condensed expression: si quid quando audit. See Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 124; Schaefer, ad Dem. IV. p. 232; Bremi, ad Aesch. II. p. 122 f. On ἐξ ἐμοῦ, comp. Herod. iii. 62, and the Latin audio ex or de aliquo. See Madvig, ad Cic. Fin. p. 865.

Ver. 7. καί] is the simple copula, not even (Fritzsche). The course of thought, namely, is: For this reason I abstain from καυχᾶσθαι (ver. 6), and—to return now to what I said in vv. 1–5—as concerns those revelations which I, though without self-glorifying, leave not unmentioned (ver. 5), care is taken of this, that I do not vaunt myself on this distinction.—τῇ ὑπερβολῇ τῶν ἀποκαλ.] Dativus instrumenti: because the revelations imparted to me have a character so exceeding,—a nature transcending so utterly all the bounds of what is ordinary. The order of the words is inverted, in order to make the whole attention of the reader dwell on τῇ ὑπερβ. τ. ἀποκαλ., to which the discourse here returns.¹ Comp. ii. 4; Gal. ii.

10, al. See on Rom. xi. 31. — ἐδόθη μοι σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκὶ κ.τ.λ.] “Ex alto habuit revelationem, ex profundo castigationem,” Bengel. It is not to be connected so as also to take in ἵνα ἄγγελος Σατ. με κολαφ. (Knapp), nor is σκόλοψ to be considered as a prefixed apposition, and ἄγγελος Σατ. as subject (Tertullian, and probably also Chrysostom, see Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 127). For it may be urged against the former, that an inappropriate relation of meaning would result from it; and against the latter, which Hofmann has again preferred, that there is no reason whatever for departing from the usual order of the words, since even with it the ἵνα με κολαφ. applies to the angel of Satan. The ordinary construction is to be retained as the simplest and most natural; according to this, ἄγγελος Σατ. appears as an appositional more precise definition of σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκί: there was given to me a thorn for my flesh, an angel of Satan. — ἐδόθη] by whom? The usual answer, given also by Rückert, Olshausen (“the educating grace of God”), Ewald, is: by God. See especially, Augustine, de nat. et grat. 27: “Neque enim diabolus agebat, ne magnitudine revelationum Paulus extolleretur, et ut virtus ejus proficeretur, sed Deus. Ab illo igitur traditus erat justus colaphizandus angelo Satanae, qui per eum tradebat et injustos ipsi Satanae.” Certainly ἵνα μὴ ὑπερβῶμαι is the purpose not of the devil, but of the divine will, without which the suffering in question inflicted by the devil on the apostle could not affect him; but just because the latter has thought of the devil as the one from whom that suffering proceeded, he must have conceived him also as the giver, because otherwise his mode of representation would be self-contradictory. Doubtless Satan is only the mediate giver,¹ who thereby is to serve the divine final aim ἵνα μὴ ὑπαιρ.; but the explanation, that Paul had wished to say (?) that God had permitted (so also Chrysostom and Theophylact) Satan to torment him (Billroth) is a quite arbitrary alteration of what Paul actually says. His meaning is rather, and that expressed in an active form: Satan has given to me a thorn for the flesh, in order to torment me with it—which has the moral aim ordained in the divine counsel, that I should not vaunt myself. — σκόλοψ] only here in the N. Hos. ii. 6; Ezek. xxviii. 24; Num. xxxiii. 55; Ecclus. xliii. 19, and Fritzsche in loc., Dioscor. in Wetstein), as, indeed, it may also denote anything pointed, splinters, ridges, etc. The Vulgate has stimulus. It is here commonly taken as stake, many, like Luther, thinking of a penal stake.¹ Comp. σκολοπίζω, impale, ἀνασκολοπιζω, Herod. i. 128. But as the conception of a stake fixed in his flesh has something exaggerated and out of keeping about it, and as the figurative conception of a thorn pressed into the flesh with acute pain might very naturally occur to him from the LXX. (Num. xxxiii. 55; Ezek. xxviii. 24), the latter signification is to be preferred. Comp. Artem. iii. 33: ἄκανθαι καὶ σκόλοpes ὀδύνας σημαίνουσι διὰ τὸ ὀξύ. — τῇ σαρκί] is most naturally attached to σκόλοψ as an appropriating dative (comp. Castalio): a thorn for the flesh, which is destined to torment that sensuous part of my nature which lusts to sin (in specie, to self-exaltation). Fritzsche, who, with Winer, Osiander, and Buttmann, takes τῇ σαρκί as defining more precisely the part of μοι (see as to the σχῆμα καθ' ὅλον καὶ μέρος, more used by the poets, Nägelsbach on the Il. ii. 171, iii. 438; Reisig, ad Oed. Col. 266; Jacobs, Delect. Epigr. p. 162, 509; Kühner, II. p. 145), objects that τῇ σαρκί seems inappropriate, because it is inconceivable that a σκόλοψ should torment the soul, and not the body. But this objection would apply, in fact, to Fritzsche's own explanation, and cannot at all hold good, partly because it is certainly possible to think figuratively of a σκόλοψ tormenting the soul (see Artemid. l.c., where, among the figurative references of ἄκανθαι κ. σκόλοpes, he also adduces: καὶ φρόντιδας καὶ λύπας διὰ τὸ τραχύ), partly because σάρξ does not denote the body absolutely, or only according to its susceptibility (Hofmann), but according to its sinful quality which is bound up with the σάρξ. The objection, on the other hand, that salutary torment is not the business of an angel of Satan (Hofmann), leaves out of consideration the divine teleology in the case; comp. on 1 Cor. v. 5. — ἄγγελος Σατάν] Paul considers his evil, denoted by σκόλοψ τ. σ., as inflicted on him by Satan, the enemy of the Messiah, as in the N. T. generally the devil appears as the originator of all wickedness and all evil, especially also of bodily evil (Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. I. p. 372 f.; Weiss, bibl. Theol. p. 462). By the addition of ἄγγελος Σατ. in apposition to σκόλοψ τ. σ. the σκόλοψ is personified, and what is an ἔργον of Satan appears now, under the apostle's vivid, concrete mode of view, an angel of Satan. The interpretation which takes the indeclinable Σατᾶν,¹ occurring only here in the N. T. (see, however, LXX. 1 Kings xi. 14, 23, 25; Aq. Job i. 6), as the genitive, is the usual and right one. For if Σατᾶν be taken as a nominative, it must either be a nomen proprium: the angel Satan (Billroth), or it would have to be taken adjectivally: a hostile angel (Cajetanus and others, including Flatt). But the latter is against the standing usage of the N. T., into which ὁῦς has passed only as a nomen proprium. Against the former no doubt Fritzsche's reason is not decisive: "sic neminem relinqui, qui ablegare Satanam potuerit" (comp. Rückert), since Satan in his original nature was an angel, and might retain that appellation without the point of view of the sending coming further into consideration; nor can we, with Olshausen, urge the absence of the article, since ἄγγ. Σατ. might have assumed the nature of a proper name; but the actual usage is against it, for Satan, so often as he occurs in the N. T., is never named ἄγγελος (Rev. ix. 11 is not to the point here, see Düsterdieck in loc.), which was a very natural result of the altered position of the devil, who, from being an ἄγγελος before, had become the prince (Eph. ii. 2) of his kingdom, and now had angels of his own (Matt. xxv. 41, comp. Barnab. 18). — ἵνα με κολαφίσῃ] design of the giver in ἐδόθη μοι κ.τ.λ.: in order that he may buffet me (Matt. xxvi. 67; 1 Cor. iv. 11; 1 Pet. ii. 20). The present denotes the still subsisting continuance of the suffering. See Theophyl.: οὐχ ἵνα ἀπαξ με κολαφίσῃ, ἀλλ' αἰεί. Comp. Chrysostom. The subject is ἄγγελος Σατᾶν, as indeed often the continuation of the discourse attaches itself to the apposition, not to the subject proper. See Fritzsche, Diss. II. p. 143 f. Fritzsche himself, indeed, regards σκόλοψ as the subject,² and assumes that the vivid conception of the apostle has transferred to the subject what properly belongs only to the apposition, to which view he had been moved by the similar sound of σκόλοψ and κολαφίζη, as well as by the personification of σκόλοψ. But how easily might he have found a word which would have suited the conception of the personified σκόλοψ, and would not have been inappropriate to the apposition ἄγγ. Σατ. ! But in fact he has chosen a word which does not suit σκόλοψ at all, and suits ἄγγ. Σατ. exclusively, and hence we are not warranted in denying that the word belongs to ἄγγ. Σατ. Besides, this connection is most naturally suggested by the relations of the sense ; for only by ἵνα με κολαφ. does ἄγγ. Σατ. come to be a complete apposition to σκόλοψ τ. σ., inasmuch as the element of pain in the case expressed in σκόλοψ τ. σ. is not yet implied in the mere ἄγγ. Σατᾶν, but is only added by ἵνα με κολαφ. — ἵνα μὴ ὑπεραίρωμαι] paedagogic aim of God's guidance in this κολαφίζειν. See above. The devil and his angels serve, against their intention, the intention of God. See Hahn, Theol. d. N. T. I. p. 382 f. In the repetition of the same words there is expressed the deeply felt importance of this telic destination. See Heindorf, ad Phaed. p. 51 ff.; Matthiae, p. 1541. Comp. also Bornemann, Schol. in Luc. p. xxxix. — Lastly, as concerning the thing itself, which Paul denotes by σκόλοψ τ. σ. κ.τ.λ., it was certainly known by the Corinthians from their personal acquaintance with Paul without any more precise indication ; to us at least any special indication has been denied. For a great host of attempts at explanation, some of them very odd, see Poole's Synopsis ; Calovius, Bibl. ill. p. 518 ff.; Wolf, Cur. The opinions are in the main of three kinds: (1) that Paul means spiritual assaults of the devil (what are called injectiones Satanae), who suggested to him blasphemous thoughts (Gerson, Luther, Calovius), stings of conscience over his earlier life (Luc. Osiander, Mosheim ; also Osiander, who includes also a bodily suffering), and the like. The Catholics, however, to whom such an exposition, favouring forms of monastic temptation, could not but be welcome, thought usually of enticements of Satan (awakened, according to Cardinal Hugo, by association with the beautiful Thecla !) ¹ to unchastity (Thomas, Lyra, Bellarmine, Estius, Cornelius a Lapide, and many others, and still Bisping), for which Augustine and

Theophylact are often wrongly quoted as vouchers. (2) That Paul means the *temptations on the part of his opponents*¹ engaged in the service of Satan (xi. 13, 15), or the temptations and troubles of his apostolic office in general (Theodoret, Pelagius, Erasmus, Beza, Calvin, and many others, including Fritzsche, Schrader, Reiche, Comm. crit. p. 401). (3) That Paul means a very severe bodily suffering (Augustine and many others, including Delitzsch and Hofmann), in connection with which conjecture has lighted on a variety of ailments, such as hypochondriac melancholy (Bartholinus, Wedel, and others), pain in the head (τῖνες already in Chrysostom, Theophylact, Pelagius, Oecumenius, and Jerome, ad Gal. iv. 14, mention it; so also Teller), hæmorrhoids (Bertholdt), "falling sickness or something similar" (Ewald, Hofmann), epileptic attacks of cramp (Ziegler, Holsten), and several others. — Against No. 1 we cannot urge τῇ σαρκί, since the devil's influence would have, in operating on the moral consciousness, to start certainly from the σάρξ, where the principle of sin has its seat (Rom. vii.), but we may urge σκόλονψ and ἵνα με κολαφ., figurative expressions which evidently portray an acute and severe pain. Besides, under such a constant spiritual influence of the devil, Paul would not appear in a manner in keeping with his nature wholly filled by Christ (see especially, Gal. ii. 20), and with his pneumatic heroism. Enticements to unchastity are not even to be remotely thought of on account of 1 Cor. vii. 7; it would be an outrage on the great apostle. Against No. 2 it is to be remarked that here a suffering quite peculiar must be meant, as a counterpoise to the quite peculiar distinction which had accrued to him by the ὑπερβολή τῶν ἀποκαλύψεων. Besides, adversaries and official troubles belonged necessarily to his calling (see especially, iv. 7 ff., vi. 4 ff.), as, indeed, he had these in common with all true preachers of Christ, and knew how to find an honour in them (comp. Gal. vi. 17); hence he would certainly not have besought the taking away of these sufferings, ver. 8. It is believed, no doubt, that this explanation may be shown to

¹ So Chrysostom and others. Many among these, because of the singular, think specially of one pre-eminently hostile antagonist. suit the context by ver. 9 compared with ver. 10 (see especially, Fritzsche, p. 152 f.), but ἀσθένεια in vv. 9 and 10 expresses only the category, to which also that special suffering belonged. Accordingly No. 3 remains at all events as the most probable, namely, the hypothesis that Paul bore in his person some kind of painful, chronic bodily evil, which seemed to him as inflicted by Satan.¹ Only this evil cannot at all be specified more precisely than that it made itself felt in its paroxysms by shocks of pain, which might be compared to blows; but in what part of the body it had its seat (possibly proceeding from the head) cannot with certainty be inferred from κολαφίζειν, since this word, like the more correct Greek κονδυλίζειν, denotes buffeting with the fist. More specific conjectures are mere fancies, are liable to be enlisted in the service of tendency-criticism (Holsten, who attaches to this suffering the disposition to visionary conditions), and come to some extent into sharp collision with the fact of the apostle's extraordinary activity and perseverance amid bodily hardships. The hypothesis of a bodily suffering, with the renunciation of any attempt to specify it more precisely, is rightly adhered to, after older expositors, by Emmerling, Olshausen, Rückert, de Wette, Beyschlag, et al. (though Rückert here also appeals to the alleged traces of sickness in our Epistles, such as 1 Cor. ii. 2, 2 Cor. iv. 12, as well as to Gal. iv. 13–15); while others, as Neander and Billroth, content themselves with an utter non liquet, although the former is inclined to think of inward temptations.²

Vv. 8, 9. Ὑπὲρ τούτου] in reference to whom, namely, to this angel of Satan. That τούτου is masculine (comp. ver. 3), not neuter (Vulgate, Luther, Flatt, Osiander, and others), is evident from the fact that ἵνα ἀποστῇ ἀπ' ἐμοῦ follows without any other subject. On the latter, comp. Luke iv. 13; Acts v. 38, xxii. 29. — τρίς] is taken since Chrysostom's time by many as equivalent to πολλάκις; but quite arbitrarily, and not at all in keeping with the small number! No; Paul relates historically, as it really happened, leaving it withal undetermined what intervals had elapsed between these invocations. At his first and second appeal to the Lord no answer was made; but when he had made a third appeal, the answer came. And that he thereupon did not entreat again, was understood of itself from his faithful devotion to Him, whose utterance he had now received. According to Billroth, τρίς is intended to intimate a thrice-repeated succumbing to that pain, a thrice-repeated utter dejection, which, however, is sheer fancy. — τὸν κύριον] not God (Calvin, Neander, and others), but Christ (see ver. 9), who is, in fact, the heavenly advancer of His kingdom and mighty vanquisher of Satan.¹ — εἰρηκέ μοι] The perfect, which Rückert finds surprising, is what is quite commonly used of the continued subsistence of what has been done: he has spoken, and I have now this utterance abidingly valid. Accordingly the evil itself is to be regarded as still adhering to the apostle. How he received the answer, the χρηματισμός (Matt. ii. 12; Luke ii. 6; Acts x. 22), from Christ (by some kind of inward speaking, or by means of a vision, as Holsten holds), is entirely unknown to us. — ἀρκεῖ σοι ἡ χάρις μου] there suffices for thee my grace, more thou needest not from me than that I am gracious to thee. In this is implied the refusal of the prayer, but at the same time what a comforting affirmation! “Gratia esse potest, etiam ubi maximus doloris sensus est,” Bengel. Rückert (comp. Grotius) takes χάρις quite generally as good-will; but the good-will of the exalted Christ is, in fact, always grace (comp. xiii. 13; Acts xv. 11; Rom. v. 15), and made itself known especially in the apostle's consciousness as grace, 1 Cor. xv. 8, 9, and often. A special gift of grace, however (Chrysostom: the gift of miracles), is arbitrarily imported. — ἡ γὰρ δύναμις μου κ.τ.λ.] for my strength is in weakness perfected. The emphasis lies on δύναμις: “Thou hast enough in my grace; for I am not weak and powerless, when there is suffering weakness on the part of the man to whom I am gracious,

¹ In this respect, too, we find a parallel in the history and mode of view of Luther, who, as is well known, suffered from violent attacks of stone (which visited him with especial severity on the Convention at Schmalkald), and likewise ascribed this suffering to the devil as its author.—Chrysostom exclaims against the view of a bodily evil (κίβηλαλγία): μὴ γίνουτο· οὐ γὰρ αὖν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Παύλου ταῖς τοῦ διαβόλου χερσὶν ἐξιδόθη, ὅπου γι αὐτὸς ὁ διάβολος ἰσχυράτα μόνον εἶπεν αὐτῷ Παύλῳ. An argument nimum probans!

² The most strange interpretation of the passage is given by Redslob in the Progr. d. Hamb. Gymnas. 1860, who goes so far as to make out of it a jesting designation of Silvanus (ῥῥο, Ezek. xxviii. 24)!

but exactly under these circumstances are my power and strength brought to perfection, i.e. effective in full measure." Then, namely, the divine δύναμις of Christ has unhindered scope, not disturbed or limited by any admixture of selfish striving and working. The relation is similar in 1 Cor. ii. 4 f. Comp. 2 Cor. iv. 7. With the reading without μου (see the critical remarks), which Hofmann too prefers, there would result the quite general proposition: "for power there attains to its full efficacy, where weakness serves it as the means of its self-exertion" (as Hofmann puts it)—a proposition, which is only true when the δύναμις is different from the ability of the weak subject, and can work with all the less hindrance amidst the powerlessness of the latter. Hence, for the truth of the proposition and in keeping with the context (comp. ver. 9), the specification of the subject for ἡ δύναμις cannot at all be dispensed with. — ἡδιστα οὖν μᾶλλον καυχῆσθαι κ.τ.λ.] the altered tone proceeding from that answer of Christ. Grotius¹ and others, including Emmerling, join μᾶλλον with ἡδιστα, although μᾶλλον is used to heighten the comparative, but not the superlative (see on vii. 13). Estius (comp. previously, Erasmus) finds in μᾶλλον: "magis ac potius, quam in ulla alia re, qua videar excellere;" Bengel and Billroth: ἡ ἐν ταῖς ἀποκαλύψεσιν; Rückert: more than of what I can (my talents and performances); comp. also Ewald. But against all this is the consideration that Paul must have written: μᾶλλον ἐν ταῖς ἀσθενείαις μου καυχῆσθαι. As the text stands, μᾶλλον belongs necessarily to καυχῆσθαι (comp. vii. 7), not to its object. And the reference of μᾶλλον is furnished by the context. Previously, namely, Paul had stated how he had prayed the Lord to take away his suffering. Now, however, after mentioning the answer received, he says: With the utmost willingness (maxima cum voluptate, comp. ver. 15) therefore will I, encouraged by the word of the Lord which I have, only all the more (comp. on vii. 7) glory in my weaknesses; all the more boldly will I now triumph in my states of suffering, which exhibit me in my weakness; comp. Rom. v. 3, viii. 35 ff. More than would have been otherwise the case, is the courage of the καυχᾶσθαι ἐν ταῖς ἀσθενείαις increased in him by that utterance of the Lord. — ἵνα ἐπισκηνώσῃ κ.τ.λ.] Aim of the μᾶλλον καυχῆσομαι κ.τ.λ. And the Lord's answer itself has, in fact, placed this goal before his eyes, and assured him of his reaching it. The ἐπ' ἐμέ is conceived of as: may take its abode on me, i.e. may come down before me and unite itself with me for abiding protection, comfort, strengthening, etc.¹ The choice of the word ἐπισκην. leads us to conclude that he has conceived of the case as analogous to the Shechinah (comp. on John i. 14, xiv. 23). The direction from above downward is not withal implied in ἐπί by itself, which rather indicates direction in general (comp. Polyb. iv. 18. 8: ἐπισκηνοῦν ἐπὶ τὰς οἰκίας, to go into quarters in the houses), but is given in the context. Comp. Ps. civ. 12.

Ver. 11. Paul now comes to a stand, and surveys how much he has said in commendation of himself from chap. xi. onward. This retrospect extorts from him the admission: γέγονα ἄφρων, but as respects its contents he at once proceeds to justify himself, and to impute the blame to the readers. It is not to be taken either as a question or in the sense of a hypothetical protasis (Hofmann gives a choice between the two). The ὑμεῖς κ.τ.λ., asyndetic, but all the more striking, gives no ground for such a weakening of the meaning. — γέγονα ἄφρων] ironical exclamation; for it is clear from xi. 16, xii. 6, that Paul did not really regard his apologetic καυχᾶσθαι hitherto as a work of folly. But the opponents took it so! In the emphatically prefixed γέγονα (comp. v. 17) there is implied: it has come to pass that I am a fool! This now subsists as accomplished fact! “Receptui canit,” Bengel. — ὑμεῖς με ἠναγκάσατε ἐγὼ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] This justifies him and blames the Corinthians for that γέγονα ἄφρ. The emphatic ὑμεῖς, and afterwards the ἐγώ, the emphasis of which Rückert failed to perceive, correspond to each other significantly: you have compelled me; for I had a claim to be commended by you, instead of commending myself. The stress is on ὑφ’ ὑμῶν, next to the ἐγώ, in which there is a side-glance at the pseudo-apostles, boastful themselves, and boasted of by their partisans. — οὐδὲν γὰρ ὑστέρησα κ.τ.λ.] Reason assigned for ἐγὼ ὄφελον. See, moreover, on xi. 5. The aorist refers to the time of his working at Corinth. The negative form of expression is a pointed litotes. — εἰ καὶ οὐδὲν εἰμι] although I am quite without value and without importance. The same humility as in 1 Cor. xv. 8-10. But how fraught with shame for the opposing party, with which those false apostles were of so great account! And in this way the significant weight of this closing concessive clause is stronger and more telling than if it were attached as protasis to what follows (Hofmann). It is more striking.—In regard to οὐδὲν εἶναι, see on 1 Cor. xiii. 2; Gal. vi. 3.

Ver. 12. Proof of the previous οὐδὲν ὑστέρησα τῶν ὑπερλ. ἀποστ: The signs, indeed (yet without producing among you the due recognition), of the apostle were wrought among you. The μέν solitarium leaves it to the reader to supply for himself the corresponding contrast, so that it may be translated by our truly

The contrast to be supplied here is put beyond doubt by the idea of the σημεῖα which is placed emphatically and significantly at the head ; hence we must reject what Billroth (followed by Olshausen) supplies ; but even otherwise you can make no complaint about anything. — τὰ σημεῖα τοῦ ἀποστ. is that which divinely evinces the apostle to be such, that by which one discerns the apostle. Ὁ ἀπόστολος with the article does not denote the ideal of an apostle (Billroth), which would be at variance with his humility, but the apostle in abstracto. Bengel says aptly : “ ejus, qui sit apostolus.” — κατεργάσθη ἐν ὑμῖν] namely, which I was with you. The I, however, retreats modestly behind the passive expression. The view followed by many older expositors since Chrysostom : “ primum signum nominat patientiam,” is erroneous, since the ὑπομονή is not a specifically apostolic σημεῖον.¹ — σημεῖοις κ. τέρασι καὶ δυνάμεσι] whereby those signs of an apostle were accomplished, so that σημεῖοις is here meant in a narrower sense (miraculous signs) than the previous τὰ σημεῖα. Comp. 2 Thess. ii. 9 ; Heb. ii. 4 ; Acts ii. 22. The notions of σημεῖα and τέρατα are equivalent. Ver. 13. Τί γάρ ἐστὶν . . . ὑμῶν] Bitterly ironical justification of what was said in ver. 12. For what is there, in which you were placed at a disadvantage towards the other churches (in which I wrought), except, etc.? that is to say: for in nothing have you come behind, as compared with the other churches, except, etc. Quite arbitrarily Grotius limits this question, which embraces the whole blissful apostolic working, to the communication of gifts by the laying on of hands. — ὑπέρ] means nothing else than beyond, but in the direction downward (reference to the minus) which ἡττήθητε specifies. Comp. Winer, p. 376 [E. T. 502]. Rückert, overlooking the comparative sense of ἡττήθητε, says: there is here an ironical confession that all churches had disadvantage from Paul, and it is only denied that the disadvantage of the Corinthian was greater than that of the other churches. This would not suit at all as assigning a reason for ver. 12. In assigning a reason, Paul could not but say: ye have in nothing come off worse; but to say, for your disadvantage has not been greater, would, with all its irony, be inappropriate. On the accusative of more precise definition with ἡττήθητε, comp. Xen. Cyr. i. 4. 5: ἃ ἡττώτο. The more usual construction is ᾧ or ἐν ᾧ. — εἰ μὴ ὅτι κ.τ.λ.] In this exception (“specie exceptionis firmat quod dicit,” Grotius) lies the painful bitterness of the passage, which in the request that follows χαρίσασθε κ.τ.λ. becomes still sharper. It is the love, deeply hurt in its pure consciousness, that speaks. — αὐτὸς ἐγώ] I myself; this places his own person over against the apostolic services indicated in τί . . . ἡττήθητε. Comp. in general on Rom. ix. 3. Rückert (so also Bengel) holds that Paul has already had in his mind what he subjoins in vv. 16–18. Such an arbitrary prolepsis of the reference is the more untenable, seeing that with vv. 14, 15 another train of ideas intervenes. — οὐ κατενάρκησα ὑμῶν] See on xi. 8. Only by the fact that he has not been burdensome to them in accepting payment and the like, has Paul asserted himself as an apostle less among them than among the other churches! For this injustice they are to pardon him!

Ver. 14. After that cutting irony comes the language of paternal earnestness, inasmuch as Paul once more (comp. xi. 9–12) assures them that even on his impending third arrival among them he will remain true to his principle of not burdening them, and explains why he will do so. — ἰδοὺ] vivid realizing of the posi-

The negative part of this confirmation corresponds to οὐ ζητῶ τὰ ὑμῶν, and the positive to the ὑμᾶς; for, while Paul ζητεῖ αὐτούς (not τὰ αὐτῶν), he is the father, who gathers for his children treasures, namely, the blessings of the Messianic kingdom. — οἱ γονεῖς] sc. ὀφείλουσι θησαυρίζειν, not as Beza holds: θησαυρίζουσι; for ὀφείλει is not impersonal. That by the first half of the verse, moreover, the duty of children in love to support and provide for their parents is not excluded, is clear from the very θησαυρίζειν, and is just as obvious of itself as that in the second part the θησαυρίζειν is not to be urged as a duty of parents (1 Tim. v. 8), but always has merely its relative obligation, subordinate to the higher spiritual care (Matt. vi. 33, vv. 19–21; Eph. vi. 4; Mark viii. 36).

Ver. 15. Paul applies what was said generally in ver. 14: οὐ γὰρ ὀφείλει κ.τ.λ., to himself (ἐγώ, I on my part): I, however, will very willingly spend and be spent for the good of your souls, in order, namely, to prepare them for the salvation of eternal life

Theodoret rightly says : ἐγὼ δὲ τῶν φύσει πατέρων καὶ πλέον τι ποιεῖν ἐπαγγέλλομαι. — For examples of δαπανᾶν (ἐκ strengthens, Polyb. xxv. 8. 4, xxi. 8. 9, xvii. 11. 10) used of the life, see Kypke, II. p. 272. On the subject-matter, comp. Horace, Od. i. 12. 38 f. : “animaeque magnae prodigum Paullum.” — εἰ περισσοτ. ὑμᾶς ἀγαπῶν ἥττον ἀγαπῶμαι] εἰ does not stand for εἰ καί (which is read by Elzevir and Tischendorf), for which Rückert takes it, but is the simple if, and that not even in the sense of ἐπεὶ or ὅτι, as it is used “ne quid confidentius, directius affirmetur” (Dissen, ad Dem. de Cor. p. 195), but, as is here most in keeping with tender delicacy in the expression of a harsh thought, in the purely hypothetical sense : if, which I leave undecided, etc. In view of the possible case, that he finds the less love among his readers, the more he loves them (this is implied in the mutual reference of the two comparatives, see Matthiae, § 455, Rem. 7),¹ the apostle will most gladly sacrifice his own (what he has from others, or even by his own work) and himself (comp. Rom. ix. 3 ; Phil. ii. 17) for their souls, in order that thus he may do his utmost to overcome this supposed—and possibly existing—disproportion between his loving and being loved by stimulating and increasing the latter (Rom. xii. 21 ; 1 Cor. xiii. 4-7). Hofmann, not observing the clever turn of the hypothetical expression of the thought, without reason finds this view absurd, and with sufficient crudeness and clumsiness takes εἰ to ἀγαπῶμαι as an independent question, to which Paul himself makes answer with ἔστω δέ (in the sense : be it so withal, I will let it rest there). To this interrogative view Hofmann ought all the less to have resorted, seeing that interrogation in such an indirect form (Winer, p. 474 [E. T. 639], and see on Matt. xii. 10 ; Luke xiii. 23) is wholly without example in Paul, often as he has had an opportunity for using it. It is found often in Luke, more rarely in Matthew and Mark. Except in the writings of these three, the N. T. does not present that independent use of the indirectly interrogative εἰ.

Vv. 16-18. Refutation of the possible slander, which assuredly was also actually ventured on the part of his adversaries, that, if he had not himself directly burdened the Corinthians, he had still done so in a cunning way indirectly by means of his emissaries. — In ver. 16 Paul does not, indeed, speak in the person of his opponents, for otherwise, instead of ἐγώ, he must have expressed himself in the third person; but he clothes his speech in the words of his adversaries.¹ — ἔστω δέ] concessive: but be it so, it may, however, be the case that I have not oppressed you. The construction is anacoluthic, inasmuch as Paul, for emphasis, prefixes absolutely the τινα ὧν ἀπέσταλκα πρὸς ὑμᾶς as the object of what he wishes to say, and then subjoins the further statement independently of it, so that the accusative remains the more emphatically pendent—a usage found also in classical writers. Rom. xv. 18. — In ver. 18 he now mentions, by way of example, Titus, whom he had encouraged to travel to Corinth, and his fellow-envoy, and he asks, significantly repeating ἐπλεονέκτ. and prefixing it: Has Titus overreached you? This journey of Titus to Corinth is not, as is otherwise usually supposed, the one mentioned in chap. viii., which had yet to be made, and in which Titus had two companions (viii. 18, 22), but the one made soon after our first Epistle, and mentioned in chap. vii. The fact that Titus only is here mentioned, and not also Timothy (1 Cor. iv. 17, xvi. 10), is made use of to support the opinion that Timothy had not come to Corinth at all (see the Introd.). Comp. Rück. pp. 380, 409. But how groundlessly! From the long and close connection of the apostle with the Corinthians it may be even a priori concluded, that he had sent various persons to Corinth beside Titus; and he himself testifies this by the plural ὧν ἀπέσταλκα. But here he names only Titus instar omnium as the one last sent. Besides, it would not have been even proper to say: I have sent Timothy to you, since Timothy, in fact, was joint-sender of the letter (i. 1). — τὸν ἀδελφόν] the brother (fellow-Christian) well known to them (but unknown to us).¹ That in that mission he was quite subordinate to Titus is clear from συναπέστ., and from the fact that in what follows the conduct of Titus alone is spoken of. — τῷ αὐτῷ πνευμ.] with the same Spirit, namely, with the Holy Spirit determining our walk and excluding all πλεονεξία. We cannot decide the point. If the inward agreement is denoted by τῷ αὐτῷ πνευμ., the likeness of outward procedure is expressed by τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἵχνεσι (comp. Plat. Phaed. p. 276 D: τῷ ταύτων ἵχνος μετίοντι). But here the dative is local, as in Acts xiv. 16; Jude 11 (comp. Fritzsche, ad Rom. I. p. 225 f.). So Pind. Pyth. x. 20: ἐμβέβακεν ἵχνεσιν πατρός, comp. with Nem. vi. 27: ἵχνεσιν ἐν Πραξιδάμαντος ἐὸν πόδα νέμων. Whose are the footsteps, in which the two walked? The footsteps of Paul, in which Titus followed his predecessor (comp. Lucian, Herm. 73), so that they thereby became the same, in which both walked — said with reference to the unselfishness maintained by both. The context does not yield any reference to Christ (1 Pet. ii. 21).

Ver. 19. His vindication itself is now concluded. But in order that he may not appear, by thus answering for himself, to install the readers as judges over him, he further guards his apostolic dignity against this risk. Carrying them in mediam rem, he says: For long you have been thinking that we are answering for ourselves to you! Comp. 1 Cor. iv. 3. Correction of this opinion: Before God we speak in Christ; it is God in presence of whom (as Judge) we speak in Christ's fellowship (as the element in which we subsist and live). ἐν Χ. gives to λαλοῦμεν its definite Christian character (which, with Paul, was at the same time the apostolic one). Comp. ii. 17. But, that he may not suppress the proper relation of his apology to the readers, he adds lovingly: but the whole, beloved, (we speak) for your edification, for the perfecting of your Christian life. — πάλαι δοκεῖτε ὅτι ὑμῶν ἀπολογ.] After adopting the reading πάλαι (see the critical remarks) this sentence is no longer to be taken interrogatively, because otherwise an unsuitable emphasis would be laid on πάλαι. Lachmann, Tischendorf, and Rückert have also deleted the mark of interrogation. πάλαι means nothing else than for a long time, in which, however, the past to be thought of may be very short according to the relative nature of the notion of time, as e.g. Hom. Od. xx. 293 f.: μοῖραν μὲν δὴ ξείνος ἔχει πάλαι, ὥς ἐπέοικεν, ἴσσην, Plat. Gorg. p. 456 A; Phaed. p. 63 D, al.; see Stallbaum, ad Plat. Apol. p. 18 B; Xen. Anab. iv. 8. 14, iv. 5. 5; Ellendt, Lex. Soph. II. p. 481. So also the Latin dudum, jamdudum. Here the meaning is, that the readers are already for long, during the continuation of this apology, remaining of opinion, etc. As respects the connection with the present, see further, Plato, Phaedr. p. 273 C; Xen. Anab. vii. 6. 37. There exists no reason for attaching πάλαι to ver. 18 (Hofmann, then taking δοκεῖτε interrogatively), and it would, standing after ἔχνεσι, come in after a tame and dragging fashion, while it would have had its fitting position between οὐ and τῷ αὐτῷ. — ὑμῶν] Dative of destination. Comp. Acts xix. 33; Plato, Protag. p. 359 D; Pol. x. p. 607 B. Vobis, i.e. vobis judicibus, has here the chief emphasis, which Rückert has aptly vindicated. The earlier expositors, not recognising this, have accordingly not hit on the purpose and meaning of the passage; as still Billroth: "It might seem that he wished to recommend himself" (comp. iii. 1, v. 12). To this his answer is: "I speak before God in Christ, i.e. my sentiments in what I say are not selfish, but upright and pure." Comp. Chrysostom, Erasmus, Beza, Calvin, Grotius and others, including Griesbach, Scholz, Olshausen, and Ewald, read τάδε as one word, and connect it with the previous λαλοῦμεν. But for what end? The mode of expression in the usual way of writing it is quite Pauline, and makes the important thought more emphatically prominent; ὅδε never occurs with Paul, and the reference of τάδε to what goes before would at least not be in accordance with the common usage (comp. on Luke x. 39).

Ver. 20 f.² Subjective justification of what was just said, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν οἰκοδομῆς. For I fear to find you on my arrival such as have very great need of οἰκοδομή. — The sharp lesson which he now gives his readers down to xiii. 10, although introducing it not without tenderness to their feelings (φοβοῦμαι, and then the negative form of expression), could not but wholly cancel the thought: ἡμῖν ἀπολογεῖται, and make them feel his apostolic position afresh in all its ascendancy. It is in this way that the victor speaks who has reconquered his domain, and this language at the end of the letter completes the mastery shown in its well-calculated arrangement. — καὶ γὰρ εὐρεθῶ ὑμῖν κ.τ.λ.] and that I shall be found such an one as you do not wish, namely, as τιμωρὸς καὶ κολαστὴς, Theophylact; 1 Cor. iv. 21. Rom. vii. 10; 2 Pet. iii. 14. This is more delicate and expressive than the meaning of the common interpretation: by you (dative with the passive), Rom. x. 20. — What follows is not, with Rückert, to be regarded as if μήπως down to ἀκαταστασίαι were a more precise explanation regarding the condition of the Corinthians (consequently regarding that μήπως ἐλθὼν οὐχ οἷους θέλω εὗρω ὑμᾶς), and, ver. 21, a more precise explanation regarding the apostle's duty to punish (consequently regarding that καὶ γὰρ . . . θέλετε). cisively urged that ver. 21 brings forward quite a different category of sinful states from ver. 20, and that ver. 21, rightly understood, does not yet express any threat of punishment. No; the arrangement of the passage is this: After Paul has said that he is afraid of not finding them such as he wishes them, and of being found by them such as they would not wish him, he now gives the more precise explanation of that first apprehension (μήπως . . . εὕρω ὑμᾶς), by adducing two kinds of sins, which he fears to find among them, namely, (1) the mischiefs occasioned by partisan feeling; and (2) the sins of impurity, which would bow him down and make him sad. The further explanation regarding the second apprehension expressed, καὶ γὰρ εὕρεθῶ ὑμῶν ὅλον οὐ θέλετε, thereupon follows only at xiii. 1 ff. — μήπως ἔρεις κ.τ.λ.] sc. εὕρεθῶσιν ἐν ὑμῖν. — ἔρεις, ζῆλος] contentions,¹ jealousy. Ver. 21. The interrogative interpretation (Lachmann, Lücke) is, viewed in itself, compatible not only with the reading ταπεινώσει (Lachmann), but also with the deliberative subjunctive of the Recepta (Lücke). But the usual non-interrogative explanation, which makes μή still dependent on φοβούμαι, not only makes the passage appear more emphatic (by the three parallels, μήπως — μήπως — μή), but is also the only interpretation suited to the context, since, in fact, after the apprehension quite definitely expressed in ver. 20, the negative

For the second part of the word no proper derivation has yet been found. This second half is not simply the ending ος, but ιος, since in ἔρι the iota is short, whereas in ἔριος it is long. question, in the case of which a No is to be conceived as the answer (comp. vv. 17, 18), would be inappropriate. — In μή compared with the previous μήπως there lies a climax as regards the definiteness of the conception. — πάλιν] goes along with ἐλθόντος μου ταπεινώση με ὁ θ. μ. πρὸς ὑμ. (comp. on ii. 1), so that Paul reminds them how already at his second visit (comp. 1 Cor. v. 9) he had experienced such humiliation. Connected merely with ἐλθόντος μου (Beza, Grotius, Flatt, de Wette, Wieseler, and many others), it would be without important bearing. — ἐλθόντος μου τάπ. με] a construction also of frequent occurrence in classical writers. Comp. on ix. 14, and see Buttmann, neut. Gr. p. 270 [E. T. 315]. — ταπεινώσει με, not of bodily (Hofmann), but of mental bending, as in dejection. Comp. Comp. Chrysostom. The future ταπεινώσει (see the critical remarks), which expresses the apprehension that the sad case of this humiliation will withal actually still occur (see on Col. ii. 8), stands in a climactic relation to the previous subjunctives; the apprehension increases. — ὁ θεός μου] as Rom. i. 8 ; 1 Cor. i. 4. In the humbling experiences of his office Paul sees paedagogic decrees of his God. — πρὸς ὑμᾶς] not among you, for how superfluous that would be! but: in reference to you, in my relation to you. So also Rückert, who, however (comp. Chrysostom, Osiander, and several), explains ταπεινώσις of Paul’s seeing himself compelled “to appear before them not with the joyful pride of a father over his good children, but with the punitive earnestness of a judge.” But the punitive earnestness of the judge is in fact no ταπεινώσις, but an act of the apostolic authority, and only follows subsequently, after the ταπεινώσις has taken place by the observation of the punishment-deserving state, which has made him feel that his efforts have been without result. — πολλοὺς τῶν προσημαρτηκότων καὶ μὴ μετανοησάντων] On προσημαρτ., comp. Herodian, iii. 14. 8 : ἀπολογεῖσθαι πρὸς τὰ προσημαρτημένα. According to Rückert, Paul has written thus inexactly, instead of πολλοὺς τῶν προσημαρτ. τοὺς μὴ μετανοήσαντας. How arbitrary! In that case he would have expressed himself with downright inaccuracy.

Lücke, l.c. p. 20, explains it more ingeniously: "Cogitavit rem ita, ut primum poneret Christianorum ex ethnicis potissimum τῶν προημαρτηκότων καὶ μὴ μετανοησάντων genus univ-sum, cujus generis homines essent ubique ecclesiarum, deinde vero ex isto hominum genere multos eos, qui Corinthi essent, designaret definiretque." But the reference to the unconverted sinners, who ubique ecclesiarum essent, is quite foreign to the context, since Paul had simply to do with the Corinthians (comp. previously πρὸς ὑμᾶς), and hence these could not seek the genus of the προημαρτηκότων κ.τ.λ. here meant elsewhere than just in their own church. The right interpretation results undoubtedly from the order of the thoughts specified at ver. 20, according to which ἐπὶ τῇ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ κ.τ.λ. cannot belong to μετανοησ. (comp. Lucian, de salt. 84: μετανοήσαι ἐφ' οἷς ἐποίησεν), as it is usually taken, but only to πενθήσω: and that I will lament¹ many of those, who have previously sinned and shall not have repented, on account of the uncleanness, etc.

Thus Paul passes over from the sinful states named in ver. 20 to quite another category of sins, and the course of thought accordingly is: "I fear that I shall not only meet with contentions, etc., among you, but that I shall have also to bewail many of the then still unconverted sinners among you on account of the sins of impurity which they have committed (Eph. iv. 30; Heb. xiii. 17)." Not all προσημαρτηκότες καὶ μὴ μετανοήσαντες in Corinth were impure sinners, but Paul fears that he will encounter many of them as such; hence he could not write at all otherwise than: πολλοὺς τῶν προσημαρτηκόντων καὶ μὴ μετανοήσαντων.¹ This explanation is adopted by Winer, p. 590 [E. T. 792], Bisping, and Kling. — The perfect participle προσημαρτ. denotes the continuance of the condition from earlier times; and καὶ μὴ μετανοήσαντων has the sense of the futurum exactum: and who shall not have repented at my arrival. The προ in προσημαρτ. expresses the sinning that had taken place in earlier times, which Lücke (comp. Olshausen) refers to the time before conversion (comp. the passages of Justin, Apolog. i. 61 ; Clement, Strom. iv. 12 in Lücke, p. 18 f.). But as the evils adduced in ver. 20 only set in after the conversion, we are not warranted (see the plan of the passage specified at ver. 20) to assume for the sins named in ver. 21 the time before conversion, as, indeed, 1 Cor. v. 1 also points to the time after conversion. But if we ask how far Paul with his προ looks back into the past of the Corinthians that had elapsed since their conversion, it might, if we regard vv. 20 and 21 by themselves, appear as if he referred not further back than to that time, in which the contentions (ver. 20) and the sins of impurity censured in 1 Cor. v. 1 (ver. 21) emerged. But as this happened only after his second visit, and as he says in xiii. 2 that he had foretold (comp. ii. 1) punishment to the προσημαρτηκόσι already at his second visit, it follows that with his προ he glances back from the present to the time before his second visit. After his first visit there had already emerged in Corinth evils, which humbled him at his second visit (ver. 21), and on account of which he at that time threatened (see on xiii. 2) these προσημαρτηκότες with punishment ; after his second presence there had now broken out, in addition, the contentions and sins of impurity which we know from his Epistles ; and to all this, consequently to the whole time till after his first and before his second visit, he looks back, inasmuch as he says not merely ἡμαρτηκόντων, but προσημαρτηκόντων. Consequently Billroth is wrong in restricting the word merely to those “ whom I already, through my second sojourn among you, know as sinners ; ” and Estius says too indefinitely, and also quite arbitrarily, as regards προ, not starting from the present time : ante scriptam priorem epistolam, while many others, like Rückert, do not enter on the question at all. — ἐπὶ τῇ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ κ.τ.λ.] if connected with μετανοησάντων, would be in respect or on account of. But, apart from the fact that μετανοεῖν (which, we may add, Paul has only here) is in the N. T. never connected with ἐπὶ (as Joel ii. 13 ; Amos vii. 3, LXX.), but with ἀπό (Acts viii. 22 ; Heb. vi. 1) or ἐκ (Rev. ii. 21 f., xvi. 11), in this particular case the necessary and correct connection (see previously on πολλ. τ. προημ. κ. μὴ μετανοησ.) is with πενθήσω, the ground of which it specifies : over. CONTENTS.—Continuation of the close of the section as begun at xii. 19. At his impending third coming he will decide with judicial severity and not spare, seeing that they wished to have for once a proof of the Christ speaking in him (vv. 1-4). They ought to prove themselves; he hopes, however, that they will recognise his proved character, and asks God that he may not need to show them its verification (vv. 5-9). Therefore he writes this when absent, in order that he may not be under the necessity of being stern when present (ver. 10). Concluding exhortation with promise (ver. 11); concluding salutation (ver. 12); concluding benediction (ver. 13).

¹ The objections of de Wette against my explanation will not bear examination. For (1) from the fact that Paul, in order to express his alarm and anxiety regarding the unchaste, mentions withal the category of sinners in general, there does not arise the appearance as if he would not have to mourn over the latter; but out of the collective wickedness in Corinth he singles out the unchastity which was prevalent there as specially grievous. This species of sinners appears under the genus of Corinthian sinners as one of the two chief stains on the church (the other was the party-spirit, ver. 20). Further, (2) the προσημαρτηκότες in xiii. 2 are not any more than here a species, but likewise the category, to which the kinds denoted in vv. 20 and 21 belonged. (3) The connection of ἰσὶ κ.τ.λ. with πειθήσω is not unnatural, but natural, since πολλοὺς τῶν προσημ. κ. μὴ μεταν., taken together, is the object of πειθ., so that Paul has observed the sequence which is simplest of all and most usual (verb—object—ground). The objections of Osiander and Hofmann are not more valid. Those of the latter especially amount in the long run to subtleties, for which there is no ground. For Paul certainly fears that he will have to lament the non-repentance of the persons concerned, and the sins which they are still committing at the time. This is clearly enough contained in καὶ μὴ μετανοήσαντων; and as to ἢ ἔπραξαν, Paul very naturally writes the aorist, and not ἢ πράσσουσιν, because he transplants himself, as in μὴ μετανοήσ., to the point of time when he arrives and will then judge what they have done up to that time. He might also have written ἢ πράσσουσιν, but would thereby have deviated from the conformity of his conception of time introduced with κ. μ. μετανοήσ. (which is that of the futurum exactum), for which he had no occasion. It is incorrect, with Hofmann, to say that μετανοήσαντων refers to the time when Paul was writing this, and that, because there was still space for them to repent up to the time of his arrival, he has not spoken generally of the impenitent, but of many (who, namely, would remain hardened). According to the context, μετανοήσαντων can only apply to the time of his impending ἰδεῖν, when he will have to lament many of the old and still at that time non-repentant sinners, on account of their impurity, etc.

Ver. 1. As Paul has expressed himself by μήπως ἔρις κ.τ.λ. in xii. 20, and in ver. 21 has explained himself more precisely merely as regards that μήπως ἐλθὼν οὐχ οἷους θέλω εὐρῶ ὑμᾶς (see on xii. 20), he still owes to his readers a more precise explanation regarding the κἀγὼ εὔρεθῶ ὑμῖν οἶον οὐ θέλετε, and this he now gives to them. Observe the asyndetic, sternly-measured form of his sentences in vv. 1 and 2. — τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς] The elaborate shifts of the expositors, who do not understand this of a third actual coming thither, inasmuch as they assume that Paul had been but once in Corinth,¹ may be seen in Poole's Synopsis and Wolf's Curæ. According to Lange, apost. Zeitalt. I. p. 202 f. (comp. also Märcker, Stellung der Pastoralbr. p. 14), τρίτον τοῦτο is intended to apply to the third project of a journey, and ἔρχομαι to its decided execution: "This third time in the series of projects laid before you above I come." Linguistically incorrect, since τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχ. cannot mean anything else than: for the third time I come this time, so that it does not refer to previous projects, but to two journeys that had taken place before. On τρίτον τοῦτο, this third time (accusative absolute), that is, this time for a third time, comp. Herod. v. 76: τέταρτον δὲ τοῦτο . . . ἀπικόμενοι, LXX. Judg. xvi. 15: τοῦτο τρίτον ἐπλάνησάς με, Num. xxii. 28; John xxi. 14. Bengel correctly remarks on the present: "jam sum in procinctu." — ἐπὶ στόματος δύο μαρτύρων κ.τ.λ.] On this my third arrival there is to be no further sparing (as at my second visit), but summary procedure.

Comp. Matt. xviii. 16, where, however, the words of the law are used with another turn to the meaning. Paul announces with the words of the law well known to his readers, Deut. xix. 15, which he adopts as his own, that he, arrived for this third time, will, without further indulgence, institute a legal hearing of witnesses (comp. 1 Tim. v. 19), and that on the basis of the affirmation of two and three witnesses every point of complaint will be decided. Not as if he wished to set himself up as disciplinary judge (this power was vested ordinarily in the church, Matt. xviii. 16, 1 Cor. v. 12, 13, and was, even in extraordinary cases of punishment, not exercised alone on the part of the apostle, 1 Cor. v. 3-5), but he would set agoing and arrange the summary procedure in the way of discipline, which he had threatened. Nor did the notoriety of the transgressions render the latter unnecessary, seeing that, on the one hand, they might not all be notorious, and, on the other, even those that were so needed a definite form of treatment. Following Chrysostom and Ambrosiaster, Calvin, Estius, and others, including recently Neander, Olshausen, Raebiger, Ewald, Osiander, Maier, have understood the two or three witnesses of Paul himself, who takes the various occasions of his presence among the Corinthians as testimonies, by which the truth of the matters is made good,¹ or the execution of his threats (Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, comp. Bleek, Billroth, Ewald, Hofmann) is to be decided (Theophylact: ἐπὶ τῶν τριῶν μου παρουσιῶν πᾶν ῥῆμα ἀπειλητικὸν κατασταθήσεται καθ' ἑμῶν καὶ κυρωθήσεται, ἐὰν μὴ μετανοήσατε· ἀντὶ μαρτύρων γὰρ τὰς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ τίθησι). But if Paul regarded himself, under the point of view of his different visits to Corinth respectively, as the witnesses, he could make himself pass for three witnesses only in respect of those evils which he had already perceived at his first visit (and then again on his second and third), and for two witnesses only in respect of those evils which he had lighted upon in his second visit for the first time, and would on his third visit encounter a second time. But in this view precisely all those evils and sins would be left out of account, which had only come into prominence after his second visit; for as regards these, because he was only to become acquainted with them for the first time at his third visit, he would only pass as one witness. Consequently this explanation, Pauline though it looks, is inappropriate; nor is the difficulty got over by the admission that the relations in question are not to be dealt with too exactly (Osiander), as, indeed, the objection, that the threat is directed against the προημαρτηκότες, avails nothing on the correct view of xii. 21, and the continued validity of the legal ordinance itself (it holds, in fact, even at the present day in the common law) should not after 1 Tim. v. 10 have been doubted. Nor does the refining of Hofmann dispose of the matter. He thinks, forsooth, that besides the προημαρτηκότες, all the rest also, whom such a threat may concern, are now twice warned, orally (at the second visit of the apostle) and in writing (by this letter), and his arrival will be to them the third and last admonition to reflect. This is not appropriate either to the words (see on ver. 2) or to the necessary unity and equality of the idea of witnesses, with which, in fact, Paul—and, moreover, in application of so solemn a passage of the law—would have dealt very oddly, if not only he himself was to represent the three witnesses, but one of them was even to be his letter. — καί] not in the sense of ἤ, as, following the Vulgate, many earlier and modern expositors (including Flatt and Emmerling) would take it, but: and, if, namely, there are so many.¹ Paul might have put ἤ, as in Matt. xviii. 16, but, following the LXX., he has thought on and, and therefore put it. — πάν ῥῆμα] everything that comes to be spoken of, to be discussed. Comp. on Matt. iv. 4. — σταθίσεται] will be established (צִבֵּר), namely, for judicial decision. This is more in keeping with the original text than (comp. on Matt. xxvi. 25): will be weighed (Ewald).

Ver. 2. Ὡς παρὼν . . . νῦν is not to be put in a parenthesis, since it is a definition to προλέγω, which interrupts neither the construction nor the sense. I have said before, and say beforehand, as at my second visit ("sicut feci, cum secundo vobiscum essem," Er. Schmid), so also in my present absence, to those who have formerly sinned, and to all the rest, that, when I shall have come again, I will not spare. Accordingly ὡς παρὼν τὸ δεύτερον leaves no doubt as to the temporal reference of προεῖρηκα. Moreover, from ver. 2 alone the presence of the apostle, which had already twice taken place, could not be proved. For, if we knew that he had been only once, προεῖρηκα would certainly refer to the first epistle, and ὡς παρὼν κ.τ.λ. would have to be explained: as if I were present for the second time, although I am now absent (comp. Grotius, Estius, Bengel, Rosenmüller, Flatt, Baur, and others).¹ But, as it is clear from other passages that Paul had already been twice in Corinth, and as here in particular τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι immediately goes before, that view, in which also the νῦν would simply be superfluous and cumbrous, is impossible. Beza, who is followed by Zachariae and Märcker, connects awkwardly (seeing that τὸ δεύτερον and νῦν must correspond to each other) τὸ δεύτερον with προλέγω. Hofmann also misses the correct view, when he makes ὡς serve merely to annex the quality ("as one having been there a second time, and now absent"), in which the apostle has said and says beforehand. In this way ὡς would be the quippe qui from the conception of the speaker, as in 1 Cor. vii. 25, and παρὼν would be imperfect. The two clauses of the sentence, however, contain in fact not qualities subjectively conceived, but two objective relations of time; and hence ὡς, if it is to have the sense given above, would simply be irrelevant (comp. 1 Cor. v. 3a; 2 Cor. x. 11; Phil. i. 27) and confusing. Paul would have simply written: προεῖρηκα παρὼν τὸ δεύτερον καὶ προλέγω ἂπὼν νῦν. — τοῖς προσημαρτηκόσι.] See on xii. 21. It is self-evident, we may add, that the προ in προσημαρτ. has from the standpoint of the προλέγω a greater period of the past behind it than from the standpoint of the προείρηκα, and that the προσημαρτηκότες, whom the present προλέγω threatens, were more, and in part other, than those to whom at the second visit the προείρηκα had applied. The category, however, is the same; and hence it is not to be said, with Lücke, that from our passage it is clear: "quibus nunc, tanquam προσημαρτηκόσι, severiorem castigationem minatur apostolus, eosdem jam tunc, quum olim (προείρηκα) minitatus esset, προσημαρτηκότας fuisse." Paul had at his second presence threatened the προσημαρτηκότες, and he threatens them also now. On the two occasions the threat referred to the same genus hominum, to those who had sinned before the time at which Paul discoursed to the Corinthians, and were still sinners; but the individuals were not on the two occasions quite the same. Certainly at least there were now (προλέγω) not a few among them, who had not been included on the previous occasion (see 1 Cor. i. 11, v. 1, comp. with 2 Cor. xii. 20, 21). — καὶ τοῖς λοιποῖς πᾶσιν] Thus τοῖς μὴ προσημαρτηκόσι. To these he then said it before, and he says it so now, by way of warning, of deterring. It is the whole other members of the church that are meant, and Paul mentions them, not as witnesses, but in order that they may make the threatening serve according to the respective requirements of their moral condition to stimulate reflection and discipline; hence τοῖς λοιποῖς, even according to our view of προσημαρτ., is not without suitable meaning (in opposition to de Wette). — εἰς τὸ πάλιν] On the πάλιν used substantivally, see Bernhardt, p. 328, and on εἰς in the specification of a term of time, Matthiae, p. 1345. Comp. εἰς αὐθις, εἰς ὄψέ, ἐς τ' ἄλος, and the like. — οὐ φείσομαι] The reasons why Paul spared them in his second, certainly but very short, visit, are as little known to us, as the reason why Luke, who has in fact passed over so much, has made no mention of this second visit in the Book of Acts.

Ver. 3. I will not spare you; for ye in fact will not have it otherwise! Ye challenge, in fact, by your demeanour, an experimental proof of the Christ that speaks in me. Thus ἐπεί, before which we are to conceive a pause, annexes the cause serving as motive of the οὐ φείσομαι, that was under the prevailing circumstances at work. Emmerling begins a protasis with ἐπεί, parenthesizes ὅς εἰς ὑμᾶς κ.τ.λ., and the whole fourth verse, and regards ἐαυτοὺς πειράζετε in ver. 5 as apodosis. So, too, Lachmann, Olshausen, Ewald, who, however, treat as a parenthesis merely ver. 4. This division as a whole would not yield as its result any illogical connection, for, because the readers wish to put Christ to the proof, it was the more advisable for them to prove themselves. But the passage is rendered, quite unnecessarily, more complicated and cumbrous. — ἐπεὶ δοκιμὴν ζητεῖτε κ.τ.λ.] That is, since you make it your aim that the Christ speaking in me shall verify Himself, shall give you a proof of His judicial working. To take τοῦ . . . Χριστοῦ as genitive of the subject (comp. ix. 13; Phil. ii. 22) better suits the following ὅς καὶ ὑμᾶς κ.τ.λ., than the objective rendering (Billroth and Rückert, following older expositors): a proof of the fact that Christ speaks in me. — ὅς εἰς ὑμᾶς οὐκ ἀσθενεῖ κ.τ.λ.] who in reference to you is not impotent, but mighty among you. By this the readers are made to feel how critical and dangerous is their challenge of Christ practically implied in the evil circumstances of the church (xii. 20 f.), for the Christ speaking in the apostle is not weak towards them, but provided with power and authority among them, as they would feel, if He should give them a practical attestation of Himself. A special reference of δυνατεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν to the miracles, spiritual gifts, and the like, such as Erasmus, Grotius,¹ Fritzsche,² de Wette, and others assume, is not implied in the connection (see especially ver. 4); and just as little a retrospective reference to x. 10 (Hofmann). — Of the use of the verb δυνατεῖν no examples from other writers are found, common as was ἀδυνατεῖν. Its use in this particular place by Paul was involuntarily suggested to him by the similar sound of the opposite ἀσθενεῖ. Yet he has it also in Rom. xiv. 4; as regards 2 Cor. ix. 8, see the critical remarks on that passage. — ἐν ὑμῖν] not of the internal indwelling and pervading (Hofmann), which is at variance with the context, since the latter has the penal retribution as its main point; but the Christ speaking in Paul has the power of asserting Himself de facto as the vindex of His word and work in the church, so far as it is disobedient to Him and impenitent.

Ver. 4. Καὶ γὰρ ἔσταυρ. ἐξ ἀσθ., ἀλλὰ ζῇ ἐκ δυνάμ. θεοῦ] Reason assigned for the previous ὅς εἰς ὑμᾶς οὐκ ἀσθενεῖ, ἀλλὰ δυνατεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν: *for even crucified was He from weakness, but He is living from the power of God.*¹ Without μέν after ἔσταυρ. the contrast comes in with the more striking effect. ἐξ ἀσθενείας denotes the causal origin of the ἔσταυρώθη, and is not, with Chrysostom (who complains of the difficulty of this passage), to be interpreted of apparent weakness, but finds its explanation in viii. 9; Phil. ii. 7 f. Jesus, namely, had, in the state of His exinanition and humiliation, obedient to the Father, entered in such wise into the condition of powerless endurance as man, 'hat He yielded to the violence of the most ignominious execution, to which He had, according to the Father's will, submitted Himself; and accordingly it came ἐξ ἀσθενείας, that He was crucified. But since His resurrection He lives (Rom. v. 10, vi. 9, xiv. 9, al.), and that from the power of God, for God has, by His power, raised Him up (see on Rom. vi. 4) and exalted Him to glory (Acts ii. 33; Eph. i. 20 ff.; Phil. ii. 9). To make the θεοῦ refer to ἀσθενείας also (Hofmann, who inappropriately compares 1 Cor. i. 25) would yield a thought quite abnormal and impossible for the apostle, which the very οὐκ ἀσθενεῖ, ver. 3, ought to have precluded. — καὶ γὰρ ἡμεῖς κ.τ.λ.] Confirmation of the immediately preceding καὶ γὰρ . . . θεοῦ, and that in respect of the two points ἐξ ἀσθενείας and ζῆ ἐκ δυνάμεως θεοῦ. "That the case stands so with Christ as has just been said, is confirmed from the fact, that these two relations, on the one hand of weakness, and on the other of being alive ἐκ δυνάμ. θεοῦ, are found also in us in virtue of our fellowship with Him." It is an argumentum ab effectu ad causam issuing from the lofty sense of this fellowship, a bold experiential certainty, the argumentative stress of which, contained in ἐν αὐτῷ and σὺν αὐτῷ, bears the triumphant character of strength in weakness. Hofmann wrongly, in opposition to the clear and simple connection, desires to take καὶ γὰρ ἡμεῖς ἀσθ. ἐν αὐτῷ, which he separates from the following ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ., as a proof for the clause ὃς εἰς ὑμᾶς οὐκ ἀσθενεῖ, ἀλλὰ δυνατεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν, for which reason he imports into ἐν αὐτῷ the contrast: not a weakness of the natural man. This contrast, although in substance of itself correct, is not here, any more than afterwards in σὺν αὐτῷ, intentionally present to the mind of the apostle. — ἀσθενοῦμεν ἐν αὐτῷ] Paul represents his sparing hitherto observed towards the Corinthians (for it is quite at variance with the context to refer ἀσθ., with Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Grotius, Estius, and others, to sufferings and persecutions) as a powerlessness based on his fellowship with Christ, inasmuch as Christ also had been weak and ἐσταυρώθη ἐξ ἀσθενείας.¹ But that is only a transient powerlessness; we shall be alive with Him through the power of God in reference to you. As he is conscious, namely, of that impotence as having its ground in Christ, he is conscious also of this being alive in union with Christ as fellowship with His life (σὺν αὐτῷ), and hence proceeding ἐκ δυνάμεως θεοῦ, as Christ's being alive also flowed from this source, Rom. i. 4, vi. 4, al. — Εἰς ὑμᾶς, lastly, gives to the ζήσομεν (which is not, with Theodoret, Anselm, and Grotius, to be referred to the future life) its concrete direction and special reference of its meaning:² we shall be alive (vigere, comp. 1 Thess. iii. 8) in reference to you, namely, through the effective assertion of the power divinely conferred on us, especially through apostolic judging and punishing (see vv. 1, 2). "Non est vivere, sed valere vita," Martial, vi. 70. Comp. for the pregnant reference of ζῶ, Xen. Mem. iii. 3. 11; Plato, Legg. vii. p. 809 D; Dio Cass. lxi. 19. Calvin well observes: "Vitam opponit infirmitati, ideoque hoc nomine florentem et plenum dignitatis statum intelligit."

² Hence εἰς ὑμᾶς is not, with Castalio and Rückert, to be joined to δυνάμ. θεοῦ.

Ver. 5. Now he brings the readers to themselves. Instead of wishing to put to the proof Christ (in Paul), they should try themselves (πειράζειν, to put to the test, and that by comparison of their Christian state with what they ought to be), prove themselves (δοκιμάζειν). Oecumenius and Theophylact correctly estimate the force of the twice emphatically prefixed ἐαυτούς; δοκιμάζειν, however, is not, any more than in 1 Cor. xi. 8, equivalent to δόκιμον ποιεῖν (Rückert); but what Paul had previously said by πειράζετε, εἰ ἔστέ ἐν τ. π., he once more sums up, and that with a glance back to ver. 3, emphatically by the one word δοκιμάζετε. — εἰ ἔστέ ἐν τῇ πίστει] dependent on πειράζετε, not on δοκιμάζετε: whether ye are in the faith, whether ye find yourselves in the fides salvifica (not to be taken of faith in miracles, as Chrysostom would have it), which is the fundamental condition of all Christian character and life. The εἶναι ἐν τῇ πίστει stands opposed to mere nominal Christianity. — ἥ οὐκ ἐπιγινώσκετε κ.τ.λ.] not ground of the obligation to prove themselves the more strictly ("si id sentitis, bene tractate tantum hospitem," Grotius, comp. Oslander, Maier, and others); for the ἐπιγινώσκειν already presupposes the self-trial, not the converse (Hofmann). On the contrary, Paul lays hold of the readers by their Christian sense of honour, that they should not be afraid of this trial of themselves. Or does not this proving of yourselves lead you to the knowledge of yourselves, that Christ is in you? Are you then so totally devoid of the Christian character, that that self-trial has not the holy result of your discerning in yourselves what is withal the necessary consequence¹ of the εἶναι ἐν τῇ πίστει: that Christ is in you (by means of the Holy Spirit) present and active? Comp. Gal. ii. 20; Eph. iii. 17. The construction ἐαυτοὺς ὅτι Ἰ. Χ. ἐν ὑμῖν ἔστιν is not a case of attraction, since in ὅτι κ.τ.λ., ὑμεῖς is not the subject (see on Gal. iv. 11), but ὅτι defines more precisely (that, namely). And the full name Ἰησοῦς Χριστός has solemn emphasis. — εἰ μὴτι ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε] After this a mark of interrogation is not to be repeated, but a period to be placed. That Christ is in you, you will perceive, if you are not perchance (εἰ μὴτι, comp. 1 Cor. vii. 5) spurious Christians. In such, no doubt, Christ is not! Rom. viii. 9 f. To attach it merely to the predicated clause itself (I. X. ἐν ὑμ. ἐ.) as a limitation (Hofmann), is at variance with the very γνώσεσθε, ὅτι that follows in ver. 6, in keeping with which that exception εἰ μὴτι κ.τ.λ. is to be included under the ὅτι κ.τ.λ. attached to ἐπιγινώσκ. ἑαυτοῦς. In εἰ μὴτι the τι serves (like forte) “incertius pronuntiandae rei,” Ellendt, Lev. Soph. I. p. 496. According to Ewald, εἰ μὴτι ἀδ. ἐστε depends on δοκιμάζετε, and ἡ οὐ ἐπιγινώσκ. . . ἐν ὑμῖν ἐστιν is to be a parenthesis—a construction which is harsh and the less necessary, seeing that, according to the usual connection, the thoughtful glance in the ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε back to ἑαυτοῦς δοκιμάζετε is retained.

Ver. 6. The case of the ἀδόκιμον εἶναι, however, which he has just laid down as possible perhaps in respect of the readers, shall not, he hopes, occur with him: you shall discern (in pursuance of experience) that we are not unattested, ungenuine, that is, “non deesse nobis experimenta et argumenta potestatis et virtutis, qua in refractarios uti possimus,” Wolf. Comp. vv. 7, 9. Not without bitterness is this said. But the object of the hoping is not the desert of punishment on the part of the readers, but the δοκιμή of the apostolic authority in the event of their deserving punishment. Ἀπειλητικῶς τοῦτο τέθεικεν, ὡς μέλλων αὐτοῖς τῆς πνευματικῆς δυνάμεως παρέχειν ἀπόδειξιν, Theodoret. According to others (Beza, Calvin, Balduin, Calovius, Bengel), Paul expresses the hope that they would amend themselves and thereby evince the power of his apostolic influence. This, as well as the blending of the two views (Flatt, Osiander), is opposed to the context in vv. 3 f., 7, 9. Not till ver. 7 does Paul turn to the expression of gentle, pious love.

Ver. 7. Yet we pray to God that this, my apostolic attestation, which I hope to give you means of discerning, may not be made necessary on your part. On εὐχόμεθα (see the critical remarks), compared with the ἐλπίζω used just before, observe that, as often in Paul and especially in this Epistle of vivid emotion, the interchange of the singular and the plural forms of expressing himself has by no means always special grounds by which it is determined. — μὴ ποιῆσαι ὑμᾶς κακὸν μηδέν] that ye may do nothing evil, which, in fact, would only keep up and increase your guilt. Others incorrectly take it,¹ “that I be not compelled to do something evil to you.” How could Paul have so designated his chastisement? For that ποιεῖν κακόν stands here, not in the sense: to do something to one’s harm, but in the ethical sense, is shown by the contrast τὸ καλὸν ποιῆτε in what follows. But even apart from this, in fact, because εὐχόμεθα receives through πρὸς τὸν θεόν (comp. Xen. Mem. i. 3. 2; 2 Macc. ix. 13, xv. 27; Num. xxi. 8, al.) the meaning we pray, the words, in the event of ποιῆσαι ὑμᾶς not being held to be accusative with infinitive, would have to be explained: we pray to God that He may do nothing evil to you—which would be absurd. But the accusative with the infinitive occurs as in Acts xxvi. 19. — οὐχ ἵνα ἡμεῖς κ.τ.λ.] Statement of the object, for which he makes this entreaty to God, first negatively and then positively; not in a selfish design, not in order that we may appear through your moral conduct as attested (in so far, namely, as the excellence of the disciple is the attestation of the teacher, comp. iii. 2 f., Phil. iv. 1, 1 Thess. ii. 20, al.), but on your account, in order that ye may do what is good, and thus the attestation may be on your side and we may be as unattested, in so far, namely, as we cannot in that case show ourselves in our apostolic authority (by sternness and execution of punishment). That he should with δόκιμοι and ἀδόκιμοι refer to two different modes of his δοκιμή, is quite a Pauline trait. Through the moral walk of the readers he was manifested on the one hand as δόκιμος, on the other as ἀδόκιμος; what he intended in his εὐχόμεθα πρὸς τὸν θεόν κ.τ.λ. was not the former, for it was not about himself that he was concerned, but the latter, because it was simply the attestation of the readers by the ποιεῖν τὸ καλόν that he had at heart. According to Olshausen, there is meant to be conveyed in οὐχ ἵνα ἡμεῖς δόκ. φανῶμ.: not in order that the fulfilment of this prayer may appear as an effect of my powerful intercession. But Paul must have said this, if he had meant it. Others¹ hold that after οὐχ there is to be supplied εὔχομαι, or the idea of wish implied in it, and ἵνα expresses its contents; "I do not wish that I should show myself as standing the test (that is, stern), but rather that ye may do what is good and I be as not standing the test (that is, may appear not standing the test, and so not stern)," Billroth. Certainly the contents of εὔχεσθαι might be conceived as its aim, and hence be expressed by ἵνα (Jas. v. 16; Col. i. 9; 2 Thess. i. 11); but in this particular case the previous infinitive construction, expressing the contents of the prayer, teaches us that Paul has not so conceived it. Had he conceived it so, he would have simply led the readers astray by ἵνα. The explanation is forced, and simply for the reason that the fine point of a double aspect of the δοκιμή was not appreciated. From this point of view Paul might have said in a connection like vi. 8 f.: ὡς ἀδόκιμοι καὶ δόκιμοι. — ὡς ἀδόκιμοι] Beza aptly says: hominum videlicet judicio. By way of appearance. Comp. already Chrysostom.

Ver. 8. Reason assigned for the relation just expressed as aimed at by ἵνα ὑμεῖς τὸ καλὸν ποιήτε, ἡμεῖς δὲ ὡς ἀδόκιμοι ὦμεν. That we really have this design, is based on the fact that we are not in a position to do anything against the truth, but for the truth. The ἀλήθεια is to be taken in the habitual sense of the N. T.: the truth κατ' ἐξοχήν, the divine truth, i.e. the gospel; comp. iv. 2, vi. 7. If Paul, forsooth, had not had the design that the readers should do what is good, and he himself appear without punitive power and consequently as unattested, he would have counteracted the gospel, in so far as it aims at establishing Christian morality, requires penitence, announces forgiveness to the penitent, etc.; but he is not in a position to do so. To take ἀλήθεια, with Flatt and older expositors,² as moral truth (see on 1 Cor. v. 8), uprightness, is a limitation of it, which the context all the less suggests, seeing that ἀλήθεια in the above sense embraces in it the moral element. The taking it in the judicial sense would be accordant with the context (ἵνα ἀληθῇ φέρωμεν τὴν ψῆφον, Theophylact, so Chrysostom, Theodoret, Grotius: "quod rectum justumque est;" Cornelius a Lapide, Bengel, de Wette: "the true state in which the matter finds itself;" so, too, Rübiger); yet, in that case, there would result an inappropriate contrast, since ὑπὲρ τ. ἀλ. can only mean "for the benefit of the truth," which presupposes a more comprehensive idea of ἀλθ. (de Wette: "to further the truth"). — ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τ. ἀλ.] sc. δυνάμεθά τι, we are able to do something.

² So Photius in Oecumenius, p. 709 D: ἀλήθειαν τὴν εὐσέβειαν καλῶ ὡς νόθου ὄντος τοῦ λυσιτελοῦς βίου, and previously Pelagius: "Innocentiae enim nostra sententia obesa non poterit;" as also Erasmus, Mosheim, and others.

Ver. 9. Not reason assigned for ver. 7 (Hofmann), but confirmation of what is said in ver. 8 from the subjective relation of the apostle to the readers, in which χαίρομεν has the emphasis. This joy is as the living seal of the heart to that axiom. — ἀσθενῶμεν] according to the connection, quite the same as ἀδόκιμοι ὦμεν in ver. 7, of the state in which the apostle is not in a position to exercise punitive authority on account of the Christian conduct of his readers. Comp. ver. 4. — δυνατοί] correlative to the ἀσθενῶμεν, consequently: such as (on account of their Christian excellence) one can do nothing to with the power of punishment. The latter is powerless in presence of such a moral disposition. The context does not yield more than this contrast; even the thought, that the δυνατοί guard themselves against all that would call forth the punitive authority (Hofmann), is here foreign to it. — τοῦτο καὶ εὐχόμεθα] this, namely, that ye may be strong, we also pray; it is not merely the object of our joy, but also of our prayers. On the absolute εὐχέσθαι used of praying (for after ver. 7 it is not here merely wishing), comp. Jas. v 16; often in classic writers. There is no reason for taking the τοῦτο adverbially: thereupon, on that account (Ewald). — τὴν ὑμῶν κατάρτισιν] epexegesis of τοῦτο: namely, your full preparation, complete furnishing, perfection in Christian morality. Comp. καταρτισμός, Eph. iv. 12. Beza and Bengel think of the readjustment of the members of the body of the church that had been dislocated by the disputes (see on 1 Cor. i 10, and Kypke, II. p. 290)—a special reference, which is not suggested in the context. See ver. 7.

Ver. 10. This, namely, that I wish to have you δυνατοὺς or κατηρτισμένους and pray accordingly, this is the reason why I write this when absent, in order not to proceed sharply when present, etc.

He wishes that he may be spared from the οὐ φείσομαι threatened in ver. 2, and that he may see the earnest anxiety, which he had already expressed at xii. 20 f., dispelled. In virtue of this view of its practical bearing, ταῦτα is to be referred, not to the whole Epistle, but (comp. Osiander and Hofmann) to the current section from xii. 20 onward. — ἀποτόμως] literally, curtly,—that is, with thoroughgoing sternness,—the same figurative conception as in our schroff, scharf [English, sharply]. Esth. i. 19, ix. 27, ix. 12; 2 Macc. xii. 14; Polyb. xii. 7. 3. — ἦν ὁ Κύριος ἔδωκέ μοι εἰς οἶκοδ. κ.τ.λ.] contains a reason why he might not proceed ἀποτόμως, as thereby he could not but act at variance with the destined purpose for which Christ had given to him his apostolic authority, or at least could serve it only indirectly (in the way of sharp chastening with a view to amendment). Comp. x. 8. If we connect the whole κατὰ τ ἐξουσίαν κ.τ.λ. with γράφω (Hofmann), the ἵνα παρὼν μὴ ἀποτόμ χρῆσθωμαι is made merely a parenthetical thought, which is not in keeping with its importance according to the context (ver. 7 ff.), and is forbidden by the emphasized correspondence of ἀπὼν and παρὼν (comp. ver. 2). This emphasis is all the stronger, seeing that ἀπὼν in itself would be quite superfluous.

Ver. 11 Closing exhortation. Bengel aptly observes: "Severius scripserat Paulus in tractatione, nunc benignius, re tamen ipsa non dimissa." — λοιπόν] See on Eph. vi. 10. What I otherwise have still to impress on you is, etc.: "Verbum est properantis sermonem absolvere," Grotius. — χαίρετε] not: valet (for the apostolic valet follows only at ver. 13), as Valla, Erasmus, and Beza have it, but gaudete (Vulgate). Encouragement to Christian joy of soul, Phil. iii. 1, iv. 4. And the salvation in Christ is great enough to call upon even a church so much injured and reproached to rejoice. Comp. i. 24. — καταρτίζεσθε] let yourselves be brought right, put into the right Christian frame; τέλειοι γίνεσθε, ἀναπληροῦτε τὰ λειπόμενα, Chrysostom. Comp. 1 Cor. i. 10; and see Suicer, Thes. II. p. 60. — παρακαλεῖσθε] is by most, including Billroth, Schrader, Osiander, correctly understood of consolation; become comforted over everything that assails and makes you to need comfort, consolationem admittite! ἐπεὶ γὰρ πολλοὶ ἦσαν οἱ πειρασμοὶ καὶ μεγάλοι οἱ κίνδυνοι, Chrysostom. Rückert no doubt thinks that there was nothing to be comforted; but the summons has, just like what was said at i. 7, its good warrant, since at that time every church was placed in circumstances needing comfort. Rückert's own explanation: care for your spiritual elevation, is an arbitrary extension of the definite sense of the word to an indefinite domain. Others, following the Vulgate (exhortamini), such as Rosenmüller, Flatt, Ewald, Hofmann, render: accept exhortations to what is good, which, however, in the connection is too vague and insipid; while de Wette, following Pelagius, Cornelius a Lapide, and others (exhort ye one another), imports an essential element, which Paul would have expressed by παρακαλεῖτε ἀλλήλους (1 Thess. iv. 18, v. 11) or ἑαυτούς (Heb. iii. 13). — τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖτε] demands the being harmonious as identity of sentiment. See on Phil. ii. 2. — εἰρηνεύετε] have peace (one with another), Rom. xii. 18; 1 Thess. v. 13; Mark ix. 50; Plat. Theæt. p. 180 A; Polyb. v. 8. 7; Ecclus. xxviii. 9, 13. It is the happy consequence of the τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν; with the δίχα φρονεῖν it could not take place. — καὶ ὁ θεὸς κ.τ.λ.] This encouraging promise refers, as is clear from τῆς ἀγάπης καὶ εἰρήνης, merely to the two last points especially needful in Corinth—to the harmony and the keeping of peace; hence a colon is to be put after παρακαλεῖσθε. And then, if ye do that (καί, with future after imperatives, see Winer, p. 293 [E. T. 392]), will God, who works the love and the peace (Rom. xv. 13, xvi. 20; Phil. iv. 9; 1 Thess. v. 23; Heb. xiii. 20), help you with His presence of grace. The characteristic genitival definition of God is argumentative, exhibiting the certainty of the promise as based on the moral nature of God.

Ver. 12. As to the saluting by the holy kiss, see on 1 Cor. xvi. 20. — οἱ ἅγιοι πάντες] namely, at the place and in the vicinity, where Paul was writing, in Macedonia. It was obvious of itself to the readers that they were not saluted by all Christians generally (Theodoret). It by no means follows from this salutation that the Epistle had been publicly read at the place of its composition (possibly Philippi) in the church (Calovius, Osiander), but simply that they knew of the composition of the Epistle.

Nor is any special set purpose to be sought as underlying the current designation of Christian ἀγιοι ("utpote sanguine Christi lotos et Dei Spiritu regenitos et sanctificatos," Calovius). According to Osiander, the higher value and blessing of the brotherly greeting is meant to be indicated; but comp. 1 Cor. xv. 20, οἱ ἀδελφοὶ πάντες. — Paul does not add salutations to individuals by name; these Titus might orally convey, and the apostle himself came, in fact, soon after (Acts xx. 2).

Ver. 13. Concluding wish of blessing—whether written by his own hand (Hofmann) is an open question—full and solemn as in no other Epistle, tripartite in accordance with the divine Trinity,¹ from which the three highest blessings of eternal salvation come to believers. — The grace of Christ (comp. Rom. v. 15, i. 7; 1 Cor. i. 3; 2 Cor. i. 2, viii. 9; Gal. vi. 18; Eph. i. 2; Phil. i. 2; 2 Thess. i. 2; Philem. 25), which is continuously active in favour of His own (Rom. viii. 34; 2 Cor. xii. 8), is first adduced, because it is the medians, Rom. v. 1, viii. 34, between believers and the love of God, that causa principalis of the grace of Christ (Rom. v. 8), as it also forms the presupposition of the efficacy of the Spirit, Rom. viii. 1, 2. The fellowship of the Holy Spirit—that is, the participation in the gracious efficacy of the Holy Spirit²—is named last, because it is the consequence of the two former (Rom. viii. 9; Gal. iv. 6), and continues (Rom. vii. 6, viii. 4 ff., 26 f.) and brings to perfection (Rom. viii. 11; Gal. vi. 8) their work in men. — μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν] sc. εἴη. Seal of holy apostolic love after so much severe censure, one thing for all.

² Estius, Calovius, and Hammond understand κοινωνία of the communicatio activa of the Holy Spirit, which, doubtless, as τοῦ πνιυμ. ἀγ. would be genitivus subjecti, is in accordance with the preceding clauses, and not at variance with the linguistic usage of κοινωνία in itself (Fritzsche, ad Rom. III. pp. 81, 287), but is in opposition to the usage throughout in the N. T. (see on Rom. xv. 26; 1 Cor. x. 16), and not in keeping with passages like Phil. ii. 1; 1 Cor. i. 9; 2 Pet. i. 4,—passages which have as their basis the habitually employed conception of the participation in the divine, which takes place in the case of the Christian. Hence also not: familiaris consuetudo with the Holy Spirit (Ch. F. Fritzsche, Opusc. p. 276). Theophylact well remarks: τὴν κοινωνίαν τοῦ ἁγίου πνύματος, τουτίστι τὴν μετοχὴν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν μετέληψιν, καθ' ἣν ἁγιαζόμεθα, τῇ ἰφ' ἡμᾶς ἰσχυροῦσθαι τοῦ παρακλήτου κοινωνοὶ αὐτοῦ γινόμενοι καὶ αὐτοί, οὐκ οὐσίς, ἀλλὰ μεμίξις ὄντες.
